pauper to Mr. D. W. Harvey, who had the exclusive occupation of them for three weeks, for which he paid 8*l*. Lord Denman, "This is in truth a question whether Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester (p. 835), was well decided: for the attempt which has been made to distinguish that case from the present appears to me to fail. Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, was decided after full argument, and upon great consideration, by my brothers and myself. At the same time, if there had been anything like a reasonable doubt raised as to the law having been improperly applied on that occasion, I am quite sure every one of us would have been willing to give the greatest attention to every argument that could be brought to show us that we were wrong. I recollect that upon the former occasion every judge who gave an opinion felt that the consequences were such as the legislature had not contemplated, and such as might involve some inconveniences. But we found the words of the statute too strong to grapple with. I am ready to declare that where I find the words of a statute perfectly clear I shall adhere to those words, and shall not allow myself to be diverted from the application of them by any supposed consequences of one kind or the other, as to which courts of justice are very often much deceived. The words of the statute (which came into operation on the 30th of March) are these: 'that from and after the passing of this act no person shall acquire a settlement in any parish or township maintaining its own poor, by or by reason of such yearly hiring of a dwelling-house or building, or of land, or of both, as in the said (recited) act expressed, unless such house or building or land shall be actually occupied under such yearly hiring in the same parish or township, by the person hiring the same, for the term of one whole year at the least.' The fact is found in this case, that during the year commencing at Lady-day, 1831, and expiring at Lady-day, 1832, several rooms were underlet by the pauper to Mr. Harvey, who had the exclusive occupation of them for three weeks, for which he had paid 8*l*. I find that this very case was contemplated by one of my brothers in the decision of Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester; and it was admitted that if for any period another person had the exclusive occupation of any part of the house, that would defeat the settlement; and it seems to me we should frustrate the object of the act if we said that under such circumstances the pauper would gain a settlement. Some difficulty is supposed to be raised by the case of innkeepers. I cannot say that I feel the difficulty, for there is no analogy between the occupation of a room by a guest, and the letting out to a person the exclusive occupation of a part of the house. The occupation in the former case is that of the innkeeper, who has a general control over the whole house, and who, in fact, occupies by means of his guest. I do not think that any doubt can be raised on that subject; nor do I think that any great inconvenience can result from any of the consequences which have been suggested. Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, however, having been fully considered, and the words of the act completely warranting that decision, I think we are bound to say that in this case also no settlement was gained." Littledale, J. "I see no reason to depart from the opinion I gave in Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester; and I think that we are bound by that decision, and that this is not such an occupation as falls within the meaning of the act of parliament. Then the only question is, whether the year having commenced prior to the passing of the act, the inchoate settlement can be affected by it? Now it appears to me that the words of the act being 'that no settlement shall be gained from and after the passing of the act,' which was the 30th of March, it clearly does apply to this case." Williams, J. "I am of the same opinion. One of the reasons which induces me to abide by the decision in Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, is, that I am quite satisfied of the truth of that which has been often said by learned judges, who have very well understood this subject, that it is as important, especially in cases of this sort, to abide by the rule of law when ascertained, as it is to determine the rule originally. Unless, therefore, I saw the clearest ground for doubting the correctness of the decision in Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, I should certainly give my assent to that decision. It appears to me that it is perfectly consistent with the principles and objects of the acts which have been passed upon this subject. The 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, was introduced in consequence of the very expensive litigation occasioned by the then state of the law; and, in order to remedy this evil, that act confined the legal settlement by renting a tenement, by enacting that no person should acquire a settlement in any parish, &c. by or by reason of settling upon, renting, or paying parochial rates for any tenement not being his own property, unless such tenement should consist of a separate and distinct dwelling-house or building, or of land, or of both, bonâ fide rented by such person in such parish, &c. at 10*l.* a year for one whole year; nor unless such house, &c. should be occupied under such yearly hiring, and the rent for the same to the amount of 10*l.* actually paid, for one whole year at the least. That at once got rid of much of the vexatious litigation which arose on the subject. After that act came the one upon which this question depends, (1 Will. IV. c. 18,) which is expressly stated to be 'An Act to explain and amend an Act of the Sixth of his late Majesty, as far as regards the Settlement of the Poor by the Renting and Occupation of Tenements.' Now in what respect does it explain and amend it? It explains and amends it by still further abridging and curtailing the power of gaining settlements by renting a tenement, in conformity with the principles of the former act; and it acco dingly says, that 'no settlement shall be gained unless the house, &c. shall be actually occupied under such yearly hiring by the person hiring the same for the term of one whole year at the least.' It appears to me that the construction which was put upon those words by the court in Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, is the true and right construction. It has been said, that this act ought not to have a retrospective operation. It is observable that the act does not affect the contract, but relates expressly to the occupation. It declares that after the passing of that act no settlement sha l be gained unless an occupation of a particular sort shall take place. If the act had required a contract of a specific nature, an inchoate settlement, by reason of an occupation under a contract valid at the time when it was made, would not have been affected by this. This case is, however, totally different. I therefore am of opinion, that those words 'actually occupied,' &c. which are studiously introduced into this statute, must point to an entire exclusive occupation; and, if it does, we cannot enter into the question of degree—whether the underletting be of 10*l.* a year, or 5*l.*, or 50*s.* If there be a clear underletting by the party of any portion of the house, for however short a period of time, and for however small a sum, it seems to me that it cannot be said that there was an actual occupation of a separate and distinct dwelling-house by the party hiring the same. I should not have said so much upon this case if I had belonged to the court at the time of the former decision." Order of sessions quashed.

15. Occupation.

A tenant, who took in persons to sleep in some rooms, generally by the night only, but occasionally by the week, such persons having no right to the rooms during the day, and he retaining the keys of all the rooms and having constant access to and control over the whole house, actually occupies the whole.

Rex v. St. Giles in the Fields, 6 N. & M. 5; 4 A. & E. 495. T. Barron was removed from St. Giles in the Fields to St. Mary-le-bone. Order quashed. Case:—In 1831, the pauper became the tenant of a house in the appellant parish, at the yearly rent of 24*l.* He held the house for three years, paid the rent, and complied with all the requisites of 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, and 1 Will. IV. c. 18, if under the following circumstances he was sufficiently in the occupation of the house. The pauper resided in the house with his family. The furniture in all the rooms was his, and he was in the habit of taking in labouring people to sleep in some of the rooms,—sometimes letting a bed, sometimes half a bed; the letting being generally by the night, but in some rare instances a bed having been let for the period of a week. The persons who thus slept in the house had no right to the rooms during the day, the pauper and his family having constant access to and control over the whole of the house, and the pauper always retaining the keys of all the rooms in his own possession. In the instances of letting for a week, which were of rare occurrence, the pauper let the bed only, reserving to himself the right of putting another bed in the same room at any time, if he thought proper. The question was, whether the pauper actually occupied the house within the meaning of the statute. Lord Denman. "It is clear that this was an actual occupation within the statute, although there was something which the pauper did not actually hold at all times, and although the parties, whom he took in, could not have been turned out in the dead of the night. The case of an innkeeper is a very strong illustration of the case, and nearly the same. A person who lives in a house, and merely lets out parts of it in the manner stated here, does not cease to be the actual occupier." Littledale, J. "The facts of this case completely distinguish it from Rex v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, where the tenant let a part of the house, and it was actually occupied by another person." Williams, J. "I am of the same opinion. It is true, as has been urged, that it is desirable not to fritter down plain rules, but we must deal with a case according to the facts, and here they put an end to all question." Order of sessions quashed.

15. Occupation.

Under 1 Will. IV. c. 18, the whole subject-matter of the renting must be occupied. Part of it equal to 10*l.* not sufficient.

Rex v. Berkswell, 1 N. & P. 423; 6 A. & E. 282. J. Wilday and family were removed from Berkswell to Ballsall. Order quashed. Case:—Before Lady-day, 1832, the pauper hired two cottages, being separate and distinct dwelling-houses, but adjoining to each other, and under one continuous roof, together with three acres of land, situate in the respondent parish, for a year from Lady-day, 1832, at the yearly rent of 14*l.* At Lady-day, 1832, the pauper entered into possession of one of the cottages and the land, and occupied the same, under the said hiring, till Lady-day, 1833. The other cottage he laid out money upon, and converted into a beer-shop, and underlet to J. Stoney at a yearly rent of 4*l.*, and Stoney occupied the same till near Lady-day, 1833, and paid the pauper the rent for it. The year's rent of 14*l.*, reserved by the agreement for the whole property, was paid by the pauper to the landlord. The cottage and land occupied by the pauper were worth more than 10*l.* of the remainder of 14*l.* paid by him for the whole premises. Lord Denman. "We think this statute (1 Will. IV. c. 18) cannot receive the construction contended for. Undoubtedly a great number of speculative questions may arise from that construction of the act which I think is the only true one, namely, that the subject-matter which forms the tenement should be occupied entirely by the party." Williams, J. "I am entirely of the same opinion. Before the passing of this act complaints used to be made of the equitable construction which had been put upon the statutes on this subject; now that we have to construe a recent set of acts of parliament, at least we ought to avoid that error. Each of these acts has been in restriction of the right of gaining a settlement. It seems to me the fair and obvious meaning of 1 Will. IV. c. 18, is, that the whole subject-matter of the taking should be occupied; and from the plain and obvious meaning I think we ought not to depart." Coleridge, J. "I am quite of the same opinion, and I decide this case precisely on the same principle too; that is, desiring to give the full meaning to the plain words of the statute, and not allowing myself to speculate on what may be equivalent to it, or what may be within the spirit of it. I construe the statute simply according to its expressions. Looking at those expressions, I cannot doubt that it is necessary to say that the whole tenement, under the words of this statute, must be occupied by the person taking it—the whole tenement. And when we are pressed with the inconvenience or absurdity which may result from that, I cannot but recollect that exactly the same argument was used with regard to the whole rent. It was said, 'suppose a man rents 1000*l.* a year, will you say he is not to gain a settlement, under the 6 Geo. IV. if he does not pay every farthing of that 1000*l.* a year rent, when 10*l.* would be enough.' The court, however, then determined they would act on the words of the statute. If the decision leads to inconvenience, it will be easy for another act to be passed to remedy it. That seems the better course than for us to mould the words of the act."

A tenant assigning his crops gains no settlement, the assignee taking possession.

In Rex v. Pakefield, p. 822, the pauper was a tenant of a farm, and during the year assigned his stock and crops, and the assignee took possession. The pauper or his family continued in the house. This is not an occupation within 1 Will. IV. c. 18.

15. Occupation.

What a holding under the hiring.

Rex v. Kibworth Harcourt. (See the case, p. 824). Bayley, J. "I also think that the pauper occupied the premises for one whole year under that hiring, for nothing that was done by Waterfield could have the effect of altering the original tenancy created between the pauper and the owner of the premises. The pauper remained tenant under the original taking, and the landlord ought to have distrained on him for the 10*l.* if it had been in arrear."

Keeping key and a few articles in the house, is an occupation.

So also a tenant who retained the key of the house, and left some trifling articles of furniture in it, and took another house, is an occupier within 1 Will. IV. c. 18. Reg. v. St. Mary, Kalendar, post, "Settlement by Rates."

During the year the pauper, but not his family, was removed by an order. He returned the same day: Held, sufficient occupation under 59 Geo. III.

Rex v. Barham, 8 B. & C. 99. Welch was removed from Barham to Dover. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper, on the 6th April, 1823, hired a house in Dover for a year, of the value and rent of 12*l.* per annum, payable monthly. In January, 1824, the pauper became chargeable, and was by an order directed, with his family, to be removed to Barham. He alone was removed, and an overseer of Barham received him, gave him money, and directed him to return to Dover. He returned the same day to his house, and occupied it under the original contract till Michaelmas, 1824; when, in consequence of threats by the overseer of Dover to send him to gaol for coming back, he agreed with his landlord to take the house by the week. At Michaelmas, 1824, the paper owed some rent. No final settlement took place till June, 1825, when a distress having been put in, the pauper paid the rent, and left the house which he had occupied first under the yearly and then under the weekly hiring uninterruptedly since April, 1823. The pauper paid his rent on account as it suited him, part in meat (being a butcher) and part in money, but had no regular settlement till he left the house. Barham did not appeal against the order in January, 1824. Cur. adv. vult. Judgment by Lord Tenterden. "The question depends on the 59 Geo. III. c. 50. [He then read it.] The language of this enactment is very peculiar. No person is to acquire a settlement by reason of dwelling forty days in any tenement, unless such tenement shall consist of a house (as it does in the present case) bonâ fide hired by such person at 10*l.* a year, for the term of one whole year; nor unless such house shall be held and the rent for the same paid for the term of one whole year at the least. It should seem, therefore, that if a pauper resides for forty days upon a tenement, and the other requisites of the act have been complied with, he gains a settlement. Now here the pauper resided in the house more than forty days, both before and after the removal, and all that the act requires in other respects was complied with; the house was taken for a year, held upwards of that period, and the rent paid. It has been contended, that the effect of the order of removal was to prevent the settlement only; all that the act requires has been complied with after that order was made. If the effect of the order had been to compel the pauper to abandon his tenement, it would make a difference. But he was absent from his home not even a day, and his family were never removed at all. It is admitted that Rex v. Fillongley (p. 797) has decided that the removal did not put an end to the contract between the landlord and tenant; and under all the circumstances we think it safer to say that a settlement was gained under 59 Geo. III. by the residence before and after the removal. [His lordship then adverted to the supposed offence of the pauper in returning after removal, for which see post, and concluded.] Our decision may, perhaps, in this particular case, operate to defeat the object of 59 Geo. III.; but it is better to abide by the consequence than to put upon it a construction not warranted by the words of the act, in order to give effect to what we may suppose to have been the intention of the legislature." Order of sessions quashed.

16. The whole Tenement need not be in one Parish.

16. The whole Tenement need not be in one Parish, under 13 & 14 Car. II.

As the renting of a tenement of the prescribed annual value was all that was required, the courts held, that if a person rented several different tenements, making together the required amount, it followed, that if these several tenements were situated in different parishes, that would not defeat the settlement, which would in such case be acquired in that parish in which the person resided.

An entire tenement lying part in one parish and part in another will gain a settlement.

South Sydenham v. Lamerton, 1 Stra. 57. A person rented a tenement of 10*l.* a year, being one entire tenement, but lying in two parishes. The question was, whether this gained a settlement. Parker, C. J. "The quantity of rent is not material, but the value of the land. A tenant often pays a fine, and thereby lowers the rent, and yet the land is of equal value. And if a man should out of kindness settle another in a tenement of 10*l.* per annum value, reserving no rent, that will not alter the case. The only difficulty is that there is not in this case 10*l.* per annum in one single parish. As to that, I am of opinion, that if such a person as this should take a tenement of 8*l.* per annum in one parish, and another of 3*l.* per annum in a different parish, that would not gain him a settlement in either; but if the tenement be entire, and the house in one parish, as this case is, and part of the land in another, yet this may properly be called a tenement of 10*l.* per annum in that parish where the house is. Two distinct tenements, in two parishes, making together 10*l.* per annum, will give no settlement; but it seems to me to be otherwise where the tenement is entire." Eyre and Pratt, Js. accordant.

Same point.

Elsted v. Hollibourne, 2 Sess. Ca. 130; 2 Stra. 849. A person rented a farm-house and lands at 12*l.* 10*s.* a year, which house and land lay contiguous and had been usually letten together and occupied by the same person; but the house and part of the land, together amounting to 9*l.* a year, lay in one parish, and 3*l.* 10*s.* in another parish. This was held to be a settlement, on the authority of South Sydenham v. Lamerton, supra.

Different tenements, lying in different parishes, held under different takings, would formerly confer a settlement.

Rex v. Sandwich, Burr. S. C. 44; 2 Bott, 107. A person rented a house in Studland at 30*s.* a year. After he had lived in it about two years he took lands in Langton of 12*l.* a year, on which there was no house, and occupied the lands two years; all which time he inhabited in and rented also the house in Studland. By the Court: "It hath been a question, whether two distinct tenements taken at different times (where neither of them alone amounted to 10*l.* a year in value) should make a settlement? But it is now settled that it does: and it is the same thing, whether the takings were distinct or entire, or in one parish or two parishes. The settlement is in the parish where he lives (Rex v. Fritwell, p. 795). The ground of these resolutions is the ability to rent a tenement of such a value; which excludes the presumption of his being likely to become chargeable to the parish.

Same point.

St. Lawrence v. St. Maurice, Winchester, Burr. S. C. 588; 2 Bott, 169. R. Gradidge rented a tenement of H. Warne, in Hursley, for a year from Lady-day, at 3*l.* 10*s.* a year, but resided therein five or six weeks only and then quitted it, and tendered the key to Warne, which Warne refused to accept, whereupon Gradidge left it with a neighbour before Midsummer-day then next, for Warne to take it when he thought proper. On Midsummer-day, Gradidge took a tenement in St. Maurice at 9*l.* a year; and on the same day entered into possession, and resided thereon above forty days, before the key in Hursley was received by Warne, who did not accept it till the 16th of August following. But by the Court: "Here is a contract for a year in Hursley not dissolved; nor could it be dissolved; the landlord refused to accept the key; and he did not receive it at last till the middle of August, which was more than forty days after hiring the second tenement."

17. In what Parish the Tenement must be.

17. In what Parish the Tenement must be, under 59 Geo. III. c. 50; 6 Geo. IV. c. 57; and 1 Will. IV. c. 18.

Under these statutes, the whole must be in the parish.

Under these statutes a person can no longer acquire a settlement by renting several small tenements in different parishes, making together a total of sufficient annual value. This settlement can now only be acquired in respect of the renting in the same parish in which the settlement is claimed.

The 59 Geo. III. requires that the whole of such land shall be situate within the same parish or township as the house, wherein the person hiring such land shall dwell and inhabit. The 6 Geo. IV. requires that the tenement shall consist of a dwelling-house or land, or both, rented by such person in such parish or township. The 1 Will. IV. c. 18, requires that the tenement "shall be actually occupied in the same parish or township." But it is not necessary that the whole of the tenement should be taken at one time.

---

18. Who may acquire this Settlement.

18. Who may acquire this Settlement.

It would probably be difficult to say who may not gain this kind of settlement; of course, every person capable of entering into a contract for the renting of a house or land, is competent to acquire this right by such means; and even where, from the peculiar condition of the individual, it may be doubtful whether he is of ability to contract, yet if he actually hire a house or land, and continue in the enjoyment of the property the requisite length of time, it will be sufficient.

A foreigner may gain a settlement by renting a tenement.

Rex v. Eastbourne, 4 East, 103. Ann Borchert and her children were removed from Seaford to Eastbourne. Order confirmed. Case:—Ann B.'s maiden settlement was in Eastbourne; she married J. B., a German, by whom she had the children mentioned in the order. J. B. was, at the time of the removal, resident in a house at Seaford of above the value of 10*l.*, exercising therein the trade of a baker. His trade declined at Seaford, and he thereupon thought he could exercise it with more advantage at Eastbourne. The wife and children thereupon became chargeable, and were removed as above. The husband acquiesced in everything which took place with regard to the removal; accompanied them to Eastbourne, and afterwards continued to reside there with them. Lord Ellenborough, C.J. "This man was not an alien enemy, but a German by birth; an alien amy; and as such, though he may not take a lease of a dwelling-house or shop, yet he may occupy a tenement of 10*l.* a year, and carry on his trade there like any other person (a). Then he has that interest which may enable him to gain a settlement by the provision of the legislature." Order quashed.

(a) 1 Saun. R. I.

So a soldier, whilst on duty, may gain this settlement.

Rex v. Brighthelmstone, 1 B. & Ald. 270. W. Lancaster was removed from Gloucester to Brighthelmstone. The pauper had been serjeant in the militia, which lay in barracks at Brighthelmstone, and performed all the duties of his situation as serjeant, and during that time had taken a tenement there of the value of 10*l.* a year or more, in which he had resided with his family for more than forty days. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "In this case, it seems to me, that the sessions have drawn the right conclusion. It is contended that the party here had no intention of coming to settle at Brighthelmstone; that is not correct; certainly he had the intention of settling there, subject, however, to the power of those who directed his movements. The case states that he himself took the tenement as a lodging for himself and his family. Now suppose an action then to have been brought against him for non-payment of rent, he clearly could not set up, as a defence, that he was not the tenant of the premises; then if he, as a tenant, occupied this house of the yearly value of 10*l.* and upwards, he was, during his occupation, irremovable, and that having continued for forty days, he has gained a settlement. But it is said the mutiny act prevents a soldier from gaining a settlement; that act, however, contains no such express provision: the clause enabling every soldier to be examined as to his settlement, does not disqualify him from obtaining a new one. The case of hiring and service is quite distinguishable from this; that proceeds on the ground of a person's not being permitted to contract two relations inconsistent with each other. In order to gain a settlement by hiring and service, he must engage to serve at all events for a year; now a soldier has not the capacity to render such service, for an order from the War-office may at any time intervene and take him from his master's control. The case of taking a tenement is quite different, he does not there engage to reside in it for any definite period, and if he does actually reside for forty days it is sufficient. If not, it would equally follow, that supposing an estate to have devolved upon him by act of law, or that he had made a purchase to the amount of 30*l.*, still no settlement would be gained by him." Order of sessions confirmed.

18. Who may acquire this Settlement.

---

19. Residence, &c.

19. Residence under 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12.

Residence for forty days is sufficient; and the law in this respect is not altered by the recent statutes.

Forty days' residence upon a tenement of ten pounds yearly value is necessary.

Rex v. Dilwyn, Burr. S. C. 54. William Smith, the pauper, agreed for a farm in Eardisland, to hold from Candlemas, at 44*l.* yearly rent; and in April following he sowed about fifteen acres of the land with grain; in May following he came to live on the farm, and inhabited there about three weeks; and then the greatest part of his stock of cattle was seized for rent due to a former landlord. Smith then came to a new agreement with his landlord in Eardisland, and agreed to quit that farm, and to continue in the farm-house and garden, and to have a small parcel of pasture with it, at the rent of 3*l.* 10*s.*, and he continued thereupon in Eardisland till Michaelmas following. By Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "There was no inhabitancy for forty days in Eardisland under the lease of 44*l.*; and, therefore, there can be no settlement gained under it. And the next agreement with his landlord in Eardisland was quite a separate contract, and cannot be tacked to the former. It did not take effect till the other was finished."

Rex v. Caversham (see ante, p. 766), where the pauper rented a stall in a market, to which he had access only on two days in the week, and rented it from 1st of November, 1817, to the 4th of March, 1818, the court held that as he did not occupy it for more than thirty-eight days, he gained no settlement.

If a person be forcibly removed from his tenement, within forty days, it prevents his settlement.

Rex v. Llanbedergoch, 7 T. R. 105. Order of removal of the pauper from Llanbedergoch to Pentraeth quashed. Case:—The pauper rented a tenement in Lleckylehod, called Peurhyw, of Griffith, for the year 1795. In May, 1795, he received notice to quit at All Saints following. The pauper said he had no place to go to, and if he was compelled to quit he would take down a barn he had built upon the farm. Griffith then said, suppose we exchange, you shall go to Weyû Emâd, a tenement in Llanbedergoch that Griffith farmed of Pritchard, at the rent of 10*l.* 10*s.* a year, to which the pauper agreed, and promised not to take down the barn. It was agreed that they were not to mention the matter, lest the respondents should hear of it, and prevent the pauper getting into possession of the farm at Weyû Emâd. On the 16th November, 1795, he removed to Weyû Emâd, but did not remove his furniture there, lest the respondents should see him, he having been informed if he got into possession and slept in the house one night he could not be turned out. The pauper resided twenty-nine days on the premises, when Pritchard, aided by some of the parishioners and overseers of Llanbedergoch, forcibly removed him and his family from Weyû Emâd, and thereby prevented him residing there forty days, and he has ever since been forcibly kept out of the premises. Lord

19. Residence.

Kenyon, C. J. "In order to gain a settlement by living upon a tenement of 10*l.* a year, it is absolutely necessary that the party should reside there for forty days; with regard to the fraud, where a case is pregnant with circumstances of fraud, the court have repeatedly said they cannot infer fraud; that fraud is a fact to be expressly stated." Order of sessions quashed.

In case of fraud, it might be otherwise.

Rex v. St. George the Martyr, Southwark, 7 T. R. 466. Order for removal of Mary, wife of J. Lord, from St. George the Martyr to St. Martin in the Fields, quashed. Case:—J. Lord took the first floor of a house in St. Martin's at 15*l.* per annum, the rent to be paid quarterly; he went into possession on the 17th March, and on 22nd March he was arrested and carried to the Marshalsea prison in St. George's, but his family continued to reside in the house in St. Martin's parish until the 6th of May following, being seven weeks, the husband remaining all the time in the Marshalsea prison, when his wife and children went to him there, and he gave up possession of the house in St. Martin's, and the landlord took part of his furniture for seven weeks' rent. The question was, whether the husband gained a settlement in St. Martin's. Lord Kenyon said, "That no settlement could be gained by a residence on a tenement for a shorter period than forty days; and though in Rex v. Leeds (post), it was only decided that the justices ought not to have removed the pauper from Blackfordly during the continuance of his lease, the court added that 'if his lease at Blackfordly had been at an end, his last forty days' residence at Leeds might have borne a different consideration;' evidently intimating an opinion that forty days' residence is necessary to give a settlement." Order of sessions confirmed.

If a person be arrested and carried to prison in a parish different from that in which his tenement is, before he has completed a residence of forty days, he gains no settlement, though his family reside for seven weeks.

Rex v. Ditcheat, p. 832. Bayley, J., said, "With respect to the residence for forty days, the case ought to go to the sessions again, in order that it might be stated more distinctly what the nature of the residence was, or whether the whole forty days' residence required was actually by the husband himself. The cause of the husband's absence, whether it arose from his own free will or compulsion, or from other circumstances, may possibly be material. In Rex v. St. George's, Southwark (supra), the husband was incapacitated by law from residing in his own house, for he was in prison during the whole time, and had not the power of residing on his own property for forty days." Littledale, J. "There is some doubt whether there has been forty days' residence by the pauper's husband. That certainly is essential, for the legislature did not intend by 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, to alter the law in that respect. Upon the finding in this case, I rather collect that the pauper's husband had abandoned his wife and gone to pursue his own course of living in some other place. If he had merely gone away for the purpose of business, with the intention of returning, the residence would be there still, though he was temporarily absent." Parke, J., agreed that the case must be sent back, and added, "if it be found that there was no residence by the husband for forty days, then no settlement will be gained."

Absence on business, but family continuing, may constitute residence.

Rex v. South Lynn, 5 T. R. 664. Order of removal of the children of Ann Howard, widow, from South Lynn to East Bilney, quashed. Case:—C. Howard, the father of the paupers, on the 23rd October, 1792, being then and some time before in possession of a cottage and land in Wiggenhall, at the yearly rent of 2*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, hired a house in South Lynn at the yearly rent of 9*l.*, and paid 10*s.* 6*d.* in part of the rent, and on the following day he and his wife and children entered into possession, and resided thereon till his death on the 8th November, 1792, still keeping possession of the cottage and land in Wiggenhall. C. Howard died intestate, and no letters of administration have been granted to any person, but the widow kept possession of and occupied the house and cottage in South Lynn and Wiggenhall, but she and her children resided in South Lynn until 11th December, 1792, and on her quitting the house at South Lynn, she paid the landlord 12*s.*, which, with the money paid him before by her husband, was for half a quarter's rent. After this she remained in Residence for thirty-three days by a widow, on a tenement of twenty pounds a year, cannot be coupled with a residence on the same tenement with her husband for sixteen days preceding, so as to gain her a settlement.

19. Residence. possession of the cottage in Wiggenhall. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "If we were to decide on the express words of the act of parliament, we should overturn ninety-nine cases out of a hundred that have been determined on this statute. If a mere residence on a tenement for forty days irremovable were sufficient to give a settlement, every lodger and every servant residing for that length of time would then acquire a settlement; but in order to gain a settlement by residing on a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, the party must stand in the relation of tenant to the property for forty days. Here there was an inchoate right in the husband, and afterwards in the widow, which, if completed by a full residence of forty days, in either case would have been sufficient; but that one necessary act, residence for forty days, by the same tenant to the property, was wanting. The husband, after residing sixteen days on this estate, died, and then the wife resided on it; but what privity was there between husband and wife as to this property? It appears that she did not take out letters of administration, so as to give her a settlement by residing on her own for forty days, nor did she reside on the estate for that time as tenant of the premises; and, indeed, she was not solely entitled to administration. Rex v. Netherseal (p. 793) is different from the present, because there the estate was bequeathed to the widow, whose second husband lived forty days upon it; but here there was no privity of contract or of interest whatever between the pauper and her late husband, and we cannot connect the residence of the husband as tenant with the residence of the widow as tenant, so as to complete the forty days' residence by both. Though this case is new in specie, it is not new in principle; and upon the principles established in former cases, I am of opinion that the widow did not acquire any settlement in South Lynn." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

Where the tenant is in the rules of the Fleet, and he has in the same parish a tenement he rents, he paying the rent, he gains a settlement.

St. Margaret's, Westminster, v. Ludgate, 2 Barnard, 76; 2 Bott, 127. Removal of Elizabeth Conyers from St. Margaret's to Ludgate. Case:—J. Conyers, father of Elizabeth, rented a house in Ludgate of 25*l.* a year, and paid to the rates of the church and poor; but he was a prisoner in the Fleet at the time he did so. In this case he was in the custody of the law, and in no capacity of gaining a settlement elsewhere; though occasionally absent, yet he might be looked upon as virtually resident in Ludgate, which was the place where he came to settle. (a)

The residence must be in the parish where some part of the tenement lies.

Rex v. Topcroft, Cald. 478; 2 Bott, 221. The pauper rented a farm in Kempnell at 30*l.* a year, and resided on it from Lady-day, 1779, till Christmas, 1781, when he went with his wife to reside with his son-in-law at Topcroft, taking with him all his furniture and the stock remaining on his farm at Kempnell; he resided with his son-in-law at Topcroft upwards of forty days before he delivered up the possession of the farm in Kempnell, but he did not hire or occupy any land or tenement whatever in Topcroft. Rex v. Llanverras, p. 826, was cited to show that the residence must be in the parish where the tenement or some part of it lies; and of this opinion was the court. And Lord Mansfield, C. J., said, "Even if residence in one parish and occupation in another were sufficient, here is no such occupation, for he had run away and left his tenement." Both orders quashed.

Same point.

Rex v. Knighton, 2 T. R. 48. Robert Hardy was removed from Knighton to St. Margaret. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper took a windmill in St. Margaret's of ten guineas a year, at Lady-day, 1778, and occupied it for one year. On the 30th of April following he married Anne, the daughter of Samuel Ward of Knighton. Before the marriage Ward said he would give him house-room till he could provide himself; and on his marriage he went accordingly to reside with his father-in-law at Knighton, whose house was about a quarter of a mile distant from the mill; and he continued there until the death of Ward, in 1786. During the time he occupied the mill, or afterwards, he neither rented nor occupied any land in Knighton. During the last half year he rented the mill he kept a servant, who resided with him in Ward's house as part of his (the pauper's) family. The pauper believed it was known to Knighton that he rented the mill, because he served some of the inhabitants there with grist, and they knew him to be a miller. Ashhurst, J., delivered the opinion of the court. "The question of this case is, whether the pauper gained a settlement in the parish where he rented a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, or in the parish where he resided, occupying at the same time a tenement in another parish? And we are all of opinion that he did not gain a settlement in Knighton, because, in order to gain a settlement by renting 10*l. per annum, there must be a residence either on the premises, or at least in the parish where some part of the premises lies. Rex* v. Topcroft (p. 846) is decisive of the question; and there are two or three other cases, Rex v. Butley (p. 785), which confirm this doctrine, where it has been taken for granted that there must be a residence." Order of sessions quashed.

(a) See however the several statutes, p. 406, relating to residence in prisons, &c.

19. Residence.

But not necessarily upon any part of the tenement.

Rex v. Kenardington, 6 Bar. & Cress. 70; 9 D. & R. 72. W. Knight was removed from Kenardington to Ulcomb. Order quashed. Case:— The pauper, when about sixteen years of age, hired himself for a year to T. Knight, at the wages of four guineas: he served the year in the parish of Ulcomb, dwelling in his master's house there, and received his wages. He afterwards, and about twenty-two years ago, married Sarah his wife; and having, about four years after his marriage, removed to Kenardington, he entered into a contract with Joseph Stead, a farmer there, to serve him as a labourer upon his farm, at the wages of 16*s.* a week, to have his wheat at 6*s.* a bushel, butter at 1*s.* a pound, and a small house of his master's situate in his master's farm, rent-free to live in. He entered into the service, and continued in it under these terms for three years; and between Christmas and Lady-tide, in the third year of his service with Stead, the pauper, with two other persons, hired of Joseph Boon seven acres and a quarter of land in the parish of Kenardington, at the price and of the value of 25*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, being 3*l.* 10*s.* per acre; and at the same time he, on his own account, took an acre of land in the same parish of Joseph Boon, at the price and of the value of 50*s.* The seven acre piece was cultivated and cropped with potatoes, and the expenses and the rent for the same were paid equally by the pauper and his two partners; but the one acre piece was cultivated and cropped with potatoes by and at the sole expense of, and rent for the same was paid by the pauper alone; thereby making his renting in the parish of Kenardington at one time 10*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*; and these two parcels of land were held together by the pauper, and by the pauper and his partner six months. The pauper at no time resided on any part of the land taken of Joseph Boon, but resided in the small house of his master's on his master's farm, as his servant. At the end of the three years he quitted Stead's employment, and at the same time left his house. Bayley, J. "I am of opinion that the order of sessions was right; a settlement having been gained in Kenardington. The argument against the settlement is, that although the pauper rented a tenement of more than 10*l.* annual value, yet as he did not reside upon any part of it, but with a master, no settlement was gained. In Rex v. Bardwell (p. 778) expressions were certainly used by Best, J. and me, giving a larger meaning to the words coming to settle in the 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, than we ought to have done, and Rex v. Shipdam (p. 778) was decided on the same ground. In Rex v. Benneworth (p. 763), the court took time to consider the question; because they were pressed with the former decisions, and re-considered them. The point is not mentioned in the judgment pronounced in Rex v. Benneworth; but that judgment could not have been given if the court had been of opinion that Rex v. Bardwell, and Rex v. Shipdam, were well decided. In Rex v. Sutton St. Edmunds (p. 759), it appeared that the pauper entered into a service where he was to have 18*l.* a year wages, and the keep of two cows. He lived in a cottage on his master's farm;

19. Residence. but it was found that the occupation of the cottage was incidental to his service. The court held that he did not gain a settlement; because there was no bargain that the cows should be pasture-fed. If the court had then thought residence upon the tenement necessary, the case would not have admitted of an argument, and the other point would not have been made the ground of the decision. In Rex v. All Saints, Derby (p. 748) there could not be any residence on the tenement, and yet a settlement was gained. In Rex v. Benneworth also there was no residence on the tenement, and the renting of the tenement was during the service. It can make no difference, whether the bargain for the tenement is connected with the contract for service, or whether, as in this case, it is a separate contract made with a third person." Littledale, J., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

Where a residence is in different parishes, and in one of them for forty days at different intervals, and the pauper sleeps there the last night, the settlement is gained there.

Rex v. St. Mary, Lambeth, 8 T. R. 240, 241. John Taylor was removed from St. Olave to St. Mary, Lambeth. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper, about four years ago, took a tenement at the yearly rent of twelve guineas, in St. Mary, Lambeth, and continued tenant thereof until 29th September, 1797. He resided in that tenement from the time of taking it, until 24th June, 1797, when he took a lodging for the convenience of his business, at the rent of 8*l.* 10*s.* a year, in St. Mary-le-bone, where he occasionally slept, leaving his family at Lambeth: both tenancies expired on 29th September, 1797. The pauper slept sometimes in Lambeth and sometimes at his lodgings in St. Mary-le-bone, and for above forty days in the whole upon the tenement in St. Mary-le-bone, and he slept there the last thirty nights of that tenancy. His family never accompanied him, or slept in St. Mary-le-bone, but remained at the house in Lambeth until about three weeks previous to Michaelmas-day, 1797, when she went away, and took the furniture away with her. The court said "there could be no doubt but that the pauper's settlement was in St. Mary-le-bone, where he had a tenement of above the annual value of 10*l.* when joined to the other in Lambeth, and in which former tenement he had resided on the whole above forty days, and where he had slept the last night. The question was too plain for argument." Both orders quashed.

Place of sleeping.

Rex v. Ringwood, 1 M. & S. 381. Lord Ellenborough in the course of the argument said, "The court will not enter into minute inquiries whether the pauper slept, in the literal sense of the word, during the last night of his residence,—what will satisfy pernoctavit is sufficient."

---

20. Residence, &c. 20. Residence and other Requisites under 59 Geo. III. c. 50; 6 Geo. IV. c. 57; 1 Will. IV. c. 18.

59 Geo. III. c. 50, no settlement shall be acquired by renting any tenement except a house or land in the parish bonâ fide hired at and for ten pounds a year, &c.

The 59 Geo. III. requires that the whole of such land shall be situate within the same parish as the house wherein the person hiring such land shall dwell and inhabit. There are no similar words in the 6 Geo. IV. or 1 Will. IV., but we have seen that the land or buildings, by renting which a settlement is to be gained, must all be in the same parish, and although the statutes require that the tenement shall be occupied, yet it does not follow that a longer residence is necessary than heretofore.

A residence therefore for forty days, and although not on the tenement, if it is in the parish, is sufficient under these statutes, as it was before they were passed.

In Rex v. Ditcheat, p. 816, it was assumed that if the pauper himself had resided for forty days, he would have acquired a settlement. Littledale, J., said, that the legislature did not, by 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, intend to alter the law in that respect.

Residence for forty days sufficient since 59 Geo. III. c. 50.

Rex v. Wainfleet, p. 799. Bayley, J. "Another objection is, that the pauper did not reside on the land, though he resided in the parish; and, secondly, that he did not reside in the parish for a year. Before the 59 Geo. III. c. 50, actual residence in the parish for forty days upon a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.* conferred a settlement, although the party did not pay any rent for the forty days. But the 59 Geo. III. altered the law in that respect, and the language of that statute must be abided by as nearly as possible. It enacts, that no person shall acquire a settlement in any parish by reason of dwelling for forty days in any tenement rented by such person, unless certain conditions mentioned be complied with.

20. Residence.

The residence must be within the year of occupation, but at what period of such year is immaterial. (Reg. v. Willoughby, p. 818.)

Such forty days must be within the year of occupation.

---

21. The Occupier must be assessed to and pay Poor Rate under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66.

21. The Occupier assessed to and paid Poor Rate under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66.

We have seen that the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, enacts that from and after the passing of this act (14th August, 1834), no settlement shall be acquired or completed by occupying a tenement, unless the person occupying the same shall have been assessed to the poor-rate, and shall have paid the same in respect of such tenement for one year.

No settlement shall be acquired unless occupier has been rated and paid poor rate for one year.

It has been decided, Reg. v. St. Mary Kalendar (post), that this section does not apply to settlements by rating; the section therefore is inapplicable where the pauper is assessed to and has paid any rate.

---

22. Of the Evidence of Settlement by Renting, &c.

22. Of the Evidence of Settlement by Renting, &c.

Rex v. Castle Morton, 3 B. & Ald. 588. Removal from Tewkesbury to Castle Morton. Order confirmed. Case:—James Bedward, the husband of the pauper, took a tenement in Longdon of Miss Poole; the terms of the taking were contained in a written agreement, unstamped, which was lost. J. B., after residing on the tenement about half a year, gave Miss Poole 3*l.* to be off the bargain, and entered into a fresh agreement with Mr. Pencent, the landlord of Miss Poole, who accepted him as tenant in her stead. Parol evidence of the contents of the unstamped agreement was offered, in order to prove the amount of rent agreed for between Bedward and Miss Poole, and refused. Dover v. Maester (5 Esp. 92,) was cited. Abbott, C. J. "The promissory note was there admitted in evidence, on the ground that the defendant, who had been in that case guilty of a crime, should not be allowed to relieve himself from the consequences of it by such an objection. And so in the case of forgery, a prisoner cannot object that the forged instrument, when produced, cannot be given in evidence for want of a proper stamp. But this case is very different; for the parties here seek to show the value of a tenement by the proof of a contract previously entered into respecting it. The contract was not therefore in this case collateral, but of the very essence of the case. Nor can it be introduced as a declaration; for it is a declaration made under such circumstances as prevent its being admitted in evidence." Order affirmed. (a)

An agreement in writing, unstamped, for the letting a tenement at a certain rent, having been lost: Held, that parol evidence of its contents was not admissible for the sake of proving thereby the value of the tenement.

Rex v. Kingston-upon-Hull, 7 B. & C. 611; 1 M. & R. 444. Removal from Eccleshall to Hull, confirmed. Case:—On cross-examination of the pauper, who proved a settlement in the appellant parish, the appellants were proceeding to show that he had acquired a subsequent settlement by the occupation of a tenement, and to prove the rent paid, but the respondents interposed, and asked if the contract for the tenement was not in writing, and he admitted it was. The appellants contended that they might prove the fact of occupation, and the value of the tenement, without reference to the agreement, but the sessions refused it. Bayley, J. "The general rule is, that the contents of a written instrument cannot be proved without producing it. But although there may be a written instrument between a landlord and tenant, defining the terms of the tenancy, the fact of the tenancy may be proved by parol, without proving the terms of it.

A tenancy under a written contract may be proved by the payment of rent.

(a) Upon counsel alluding to this case in Rex v. Hull, Bayley, J., said "There the court only held that they could not receive parol evidence of a written agreement which was void."

22. Evidence. It was unnecessary in this case to prove by the written instrument either the fact of tenancy or the value of the premises." Littledale, J. "Payment of rent as rent is evidence of a tenancy, and may be proved without producing the written instrument." Case sent back to the sessions, to hear the evidence. (a)

Devise of land and right of cutting browse, requires an ad valorem stamp.

An instrument not under seal, devising land and other interests, (some of which are incorporeal,) at one fixed rent, requires only an ad valorem stamp. (Reg. v. Hockworthy, p. 813.)

The agreement if in writing must be produced, to show a tenancy under 6 Geo. IV.

Rex v. Merthyr Tidvill, 1 B. & Ad. 29. E. Davies was removed from Cadoxton to Merthyr Tidvill. Order confirmed. Case:—The respondents called the pauper, who deposed that he rented and held possession of a house in Merthyr Tidvill from May, 1827, to June, 1828. The rent was 25*l.* per annum, payable quarterly. He paid the first three quarters as they became due, and had a receipt for the last, which was not paid in money, but for which, as he alleged, the landlord accepted an equivalent in fixtures. On cross-examination, he at first said that the contract between him and Rock, the landlord, for the premises, was merely verbal; but Rock, who was in court, handed the agreement in writing to the advocate for the appellants, and the witness, on the paper being held up to him, admitted that the contract was a written one. The respondents then objected to any parol evidence of the agreement, but the sessions received it. The appellants called Rock to show that the transaction respecting fixtures was not a satisfaction of the rent and that the receipt was unfairly obtained. The questions were, whether the parol testimony was properly received, and whether the payment of rent was sufficient. Bayley, J. "This case is clearly distinguishable from Rex v. Hull, the facts of which took place before the 59 Geo. III. c. 50 and 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, and when the proofs necessary for establishing this kind of settlement were that a tenancy subsisted, and that the value of the tenement was 10*l.* a year. At that time the terms of the agreement were immaterial, except as a test of value, and when proved, they did not preclude the sessions from determining for or against the settlement. Rex v. Hull decided this, only that where the terms of the tenancy were not material, the fact of tenancy might be proved without the terms, but under 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, they are essential. This act requires the tenement to be bona fide rented for the term of a year, at 10*l.* a year; and it is therefore necessary to know what was the rent contracted for, which cannot be proved without reference to the agreement itself: that having been in writing, the general rule of evidence prevails, and the order is therefore bad. The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

A presumption of tenancy, arising from occupation, cannot be negatived without proving the written agreement.

Rex v. Rawden, 8 B. & C. 708; 3 Man. & R. 426. Removal from Idle to Rawden, confirmed. Case:—The pauper occupied a tenement for a year, and paid rent for it. In answer to this it was insisted, that the pauper was a joint tenant with two others, and to prove this the steward of the landlord was called, who said he did not know who occupied the tenement. He was then asked to whom he had let it, and who were the tenants, but being asked if there was not an agreement in writing, he admitted there was. The sessions received the parol evidence. Bayley, J. "The question in this case is, whether the evidence of the steward was sufficient to rebut a primâ facie case of tenancy made out by the appellants? In Rex v. Hull the question at the sessions was, whether the pauper came to settle on a tenement in the character of tenant? The proof was that he occupied and paid rent. The court thought that was primâ facie evidence that he came to settle in the character of tenant;

(a) In a case precisely similar in its circumstances (though it was an action for an injury to the reversion), the judges of the Court of Common Pleas were divided in opinion. Best, C. J., and Burrough, J., being of the opposite opinion to that given in the above case upon the point; and Park, J., and Gaselee, J., concurring in the opinion of the Court of King's Bench. (See Strother v. Barr, 5 Bing. 136; 2 M. & P. 207.)

there can be no doubt that a party may, by keeping out of view a written instrument, make out by parol testimony a primâ facie case of a tenancy, and it then lies on the opposite party to rebut it. Here the appellants made out a primâ facie case. The respondents attempted to vary it, by proving that the premises were let to the pauper jointly with others; but that letting was by a written instrument. It is quite clear it could be proved only by the production of a written instrument." Littledale, J. "This case is perfectly different from Rex v. Hull. There the tenancy was proved by occupation and payment of rent. That was primâ facie evidence of tenancy. Here the parol evidence was adduced to negative the presumption of tenancy arising from occupation and payment of rent." Parke, J. "A general hiring of land is presumed to be a yearly hiring." (Rex v. Wainfleet, p. 720).

22. Evidence.

If the occupier of the tenement is dead, the fact of his possession being first proved, any declarations which he may have made when in possession, tending to show in what manner or on what terms he occupied, may be given in evidence. A primâ facie case being thus made out, may be met by proof that the occupation was against the consent of the landlord, or that the party occupied in the capacity of bailiff or servant to the owner of the property, or only a privilege allowed him in respect of something else, which was the principal thing. Doe v. Pettet, 5 B. & A. 223.

If the occupier is dead, proof of his occupation, and evidence of his declarations as to the terms on which he held, will suffice.

---

23. Effect of Fraud.

23. Effect of Fraud.

If the renting is colourable between the parties to the contract, or in any way fraudulent, the settlement will be defeated. (As to the effect of fraud, see Rex v. St. Michael's, Bath, post; Rex v. Edington, post.)

Rex v. Woodland, 1 T. R. 261. The pauper went to Ashburton, where he rented a cot-house at 1*l.* 12*s.* per annum, in which he resided; during which time he took a meadow in Woodland, at the rent of ten guineas, of one M. N., who resided in the same parish. The pauper did not stock it at all, but at Christmas he let the grass for 3*l.* 3*s.* to Edward Barter till Lady-day following, who stocked it and paid the rent to him. Several persons offered to take the grass of the pauper before he let it to Barter. The pauper laid up the ground for mowing, and then let the mow to M. N. for five guineas, and the after-grass for two guineas. At the end of the year, when the pauper settled accounts with M. N., he received two guineas on balance of accounts, after allowing five guineas to M. N. for the half year's rent then due; M. N. had frequently made a practice to take ground and let it again in parcels (it was the case now); three years before this transaction, the pauper had received relief from Woodland, and half a year after the expiration of the term, his wife received relief from Woodland. The sessions were of opinion that the said taking was fraudulent. The Court of King's Bench said they were of opinion that it was a fraudulent taking, and they would give no opinion upon the right of the court to examine into the propriety of such conclusion by the sessions.

Taking land, without stocking it, held to be fraudulent.

In Rex v. Fillongley, (see case, p. 797,) Lord Kenyon said, "There is no rule better established than that fraud is never to be presumed, and I believe in a case sent for the opinion of this court, which was pregnant with fraud, they would not presume fraud, because it was not so stated. (See Rex v. Llanbedergoch, p. 844).

The court of K. B. will not presume fraud.

Rex v. St. Sepulchre, Cambridge (p. 825), it was held that no settlement was gained under 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, where the case stated that the rent had been paid by the parish officers for the occupiers, fraudulently for the purpose of gaining the settlement.

Fraudulent payment of rent.

Rex v. Tillingham, 1 Bar. & Adol. 180. J. Spells was removed from Bradwell to Tillingham. Order confirmed. Case:—About Michaelmas, 1827, the pauper hired a house, garden, and bakehouse in Bradwell, of Mr. John Willis, under an agreement, by which Spells agreed to take the

A Pauper settled in B., applied to the overseers for relief, and they gave him money, which enabled him to pay a year's rent for a tenement in A., whereby he would become settled in A. If the money was paid solely to enable the pauper to gain a settlement in A., the sessions ought to find fraud; but if it was paid to relieve him, they ought to negative fraud.

23. Effect of Fraud.

house and shop late in the occupation of Stoker, situate in Bradwell, at the yearly rent of 10*l.* for the first two years, to commence at Christmas, 1827, clear of all rates and taxes, landlord's excepted, half-yearly payments. The pauper took possession of the premises at Christmas, 1827, and occupied them a whole year. He paid a year's rent for them, under the following circumstances: Soon after Midsummer, 1828, Mr. Willis applied to the pauper for a half-year's rent then due, which he was unable to pay. Shortly after Michaelmas, 1828, a similar application was made for three quarters of a year's rent then due, but no money was paid. The pauper being then distressed, his business of a baker failing, and his family in want, applied to Mr. Stowers, an overseer of Tillingham, for relief, and also for money to enable him to pay his half-year's rent, and to carry on his business. Mr. Stowers gave the pauper 1*l.* for relief, and directed him to call again two or three days afterwards. The pauper did call again accordingly, when he received from Mr. Stowers the sum of 12*l.* 10*s.*; 7*l.* 10*s.* of which he paid to his landlord for the three quarters of a year's rent due at Michaelmas, and the remaining 5*l.* he applied in carrying on his business and supporting his family. Shortly after Christmas, 1828, Mr. Robert Willis, an overseer of Tillingham, (but not the acting one), who was the nephew of the proprietor of the house in which the pauper resided, and acted as agent to his uncle, applied to the pauper for one quarter of a year's rent then due. The pauper said he was unable to pay it, and that he must apply to Mr. Stowers for relief for himself and his family. Mr. Willis said that if the rent was not paid the next day, he should put in a distress, to which the pauper replied he did not consider there was any rent due until the following Michaelmas, 1829. The pauper afterwards again applied to Mr. Stowers for relief; Mr. Willis was present, and asked the pauper if he would object to pay the rent if he had the money in his pocket; to which the pauper replied no, but repeated that he did not consider there was any rent due. Mr. Stowers then desired the pauper to withdraw for a few minutes, that he and Mr. Willis might consult upon the business. The pauper did withdraw accordingly, and in a few minutes was called in again, when Mr. Stowers gave him 3*l.* Mr. Willis then demanded of the pauper payment of the one quarter's rent, and the pauper accordingly paid him 2*l.* 10*s.* reserving only the remaining 10*s.* for himself; as he was going away, the pauper asked Mr. Stowers where he was to apply for relief when the 10*s.* were gone, saying that he supposed as he had paid a year's rent for his house he was in future to apply to the parish of Bradwell, to which Mr. Stowers replied that he was. Previously to his advancing the sums of 7*l.* 10*s.* and 3*l.* to the pauper, Mr. Stowers consulted the other parish officers of Tillingham upon the propriety of making such advances, and both those advances were made with their knowledge and approbation. He also took the opinion of two magistrates of the district upon a supposed case, and was advised by them that he might safely and properly make such advances, and that his so doing would not prejudice the pauper's right to acquire a settlement in Bradwell. The sessions did not assign fraud as the ground for determining that no settlement had been acquired in Bradwell, but stated, that as the facts of the case were novel, they were desirous of having the opinion of the Court of King's Bench whether the payment of rent under such circumstances was a legal payment. Bayley, J. "It is not for this court to draw the conclusion of fraud from the facts stated. It was a question for the justices at sessions whether there was fraud or not. If the money was paid by the overseer to the pauper when he was actually under pressure, as for the purpose of relief, that would be no fraud; but if it was paid not with a view to relief, but only to get rid of the pauper and to throw the burden of maintaining him on another parish, that would be fraudulent. I think that this case should go back to the sessions, in order that they may state that there was fraud, or that there was none. If upon this evidence they shall be of opinion that the money or any considerable portion of it was paid by the overseer for the sole purpose of fixing the pauper on one parish, and enabling the other to get rid of him, they ought to find fraud; but if they shall be of opinion that the money was paid bona fide with the sole view of relieving the pauper, they ought to negative fraud." Case sent back to the sessions.

23. Effect of Fraud.

8. Of Settlement by Estate.

8. Of Settlement by Estate.

General observations.

The favour with which the ownership of real property, as indicative of individual respectability, has always been regarded, is corroborated, among many other of our civil institutions, by the law of parish settlements.

It has been seen under the last title, that the credit and confidence reposed in a man who has been trusted as tenant with the occupancy and temporary possession of a 10*l.* a year tenement, was sufficient to exonerate him from the condition of legal vagrancy, and to confer upon him the privilege of a settlement, although he in fact remained in the place where he was thus located not more than forty days. The law on this subject has certainly in more recent times been limited and restrained by various statutory regulations; but little alteration has been made as to settlements by estate; one condition added to the acquisition of this settlement is, that if the estate be acquired by the party's own act, that is, by pecuniary purchase, it must be of the value of, or rather that the price paid must be 30*l.* at the least. With this exception, where an individual is owner in fee, copyholder, mortgagee, or leaseholder, executor, or administrator, or comes to the possession in any other way by operation of law, his title to the land is sufficient to give him a settlement, although he may not have the beneficial ownership. It is also settled, that an equitable estate is sufficient for this purpose, though a mere equitable interest, which a court of equity might probably sustain and enforce, is not. The case of Rex v. Stone proves that the nature of the tenure or quantity of interest is immaterial, and that even an executor, by residing on a leasehold estate belonging to him in that character, may acquire a settlement.

The principle upon which these settlements are founded is, that the party ought not to be removed from his own, but is entitled to the superintendence and care of his property, however small the annual value. Having land in a parish will not of itself make a settlement, but living in a parish where one has land, will gain a settlement without notice; for the act (13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12,) never meant to banish men from the enjoyment of their own lands. (a) No one can be removed from the parish in which his freehold is situated within the first forty days of residence: but if he quits it voluntarily before he has been resident forty days, and becomes indigent, he cannot be removed thither. In order therefore to acquire a perfect settlement by estate, the party must have resided forty days in the parish in which his estate lies, and while his interest continued. (b)

Such a settlement, however, cannot now be retained if the party acquiring it ceases to reside within ten miles thereof.

This head of settlement admits of the following general arrangement and subdivisions.

I. Of the Statutes relating to Settlement by Estate, and the Continuance of such Settlement.

II. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase for pecuniary Considerations.

First, The Nature of the Property.
Secondly, The Tenure.

(a) Per Holt, C. J. in Ryslip v. Harrow, 2 Salk. 524.

(b) Rex v. West Sheffield, Burr. S. C. 307; Wookey v. Hinton Blewett, 1 Stra. 576; Harrow v. Edgeware, p. 862.

8. Of Settlement by Estate.

Thirdly, The Annual Value.
Fourthly, The Interest in the Estate, and who may acquire a Settlement.
1. Of Infants.
2. Executors, Administrators, and the Next of Kin.
3. Trustee and Cestui que Trust.
4. In Remainder.
5. Dower.
6. Wife's Interest in Trust.
7. Guardian of Ward's Estate.
8. Estate in Mortgage.
9. Estate acquired by Possession without a perfect Title.

III. Of Estates by Purchase, for pecuniary Consideration, under 9 Geo. I. c. 7.

First, What is a Purchase within the Statute.
Secondly, Of the Consideration paid.
Thirdly, Money laid out on Estate after Purchase.
Fourthly, Equitable Interest in purchased Estate.

IV. Of the requisite Residence.

---

1. Of the Statutes relating to Settlement by Estate.

1. Of the Statutes relating to Settlement by Estate, and Continuance of such Settlement.

No statute expressly creates any settlement by estate. The statutes relating to this subject are the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 1, and the 9 Geo. I. c. 7. The first directs the sending a pauper to the place where he was last settled for the space of forty days. The last prevents a person who has not bona fide paid 30*l.* for a purchased estate, from acquiring a settlement by such estate, any longer than he shall inhabit in such estate.

13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, does not mention residence as owner.

By 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12. s. 1, within forty days after any person has come to settle in any tenement under the yearly value of 10*l.*, any two justices, if such person was likely to be chargeable, might remove him to the parish where he was last legally settled, "either as a native householder, sojourner, apprentice, or servant, for the space of forty days at the least."

Per Lee, C. J. in Rex v. St. Nyotts, Burr. S. C. 132. "The statute, 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, does not expressly mention residence as owner of an estate. This species of settlement must therefore either depend upon being an exception to the modes of acquiring settlement specified in the act, or upon applying the term 'sojourner' to persons lawfully inhabiting a parish and who cannot be removed from it."

9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5, No settlement to be acquired by purchase, if consideration of purchase-money is under 30*l.*

The 9 Geo. I. c. 7, intituled "An Act for amending the laws relating to the Settlement, Employment, and Relief of the Poor," section 5, enacts, "That from and after the twenty-fifth day of March, which shall be in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and twenty-three, no person or persons shall be deemed, adjudged, or taken, to acquire or gain any settlement in any parish or place for or by virtue of any purchase of any estate or interest in such parish or place whereof the consideration for such purchase doth not amount to the sum of thirty pounds, bona fide paid, for any longer or further time than such person or persons shall inhabit in such estate, and shall then be liable to be removed to such parish or place where such person or persons were last legally settled before the said purchase and inhabitancy therein."

This act is confined to cases of estates acquired by purchase in the common acceptation of that term, for which a consideration amounting to 30*l.* must be bona fide paid. It does not create or enable persons to acquire a settlement, but prohibits them from gaining one, except under certain circumstances.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 68. No settlement by possession of es-

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 68, it is enacted, "that no person shall be deemed, adjudged, or taken to retain any settlement, gained by virtue of any possession of any estate or interest in any parish for any longer or further time than such person shall inhabit within ten miles thereof; (a) and in case such person shall cease to inhabit within such distance, and thereafter become chargeable, such person shall be liable to be removed to the parish wherein previously to such inhabitancy he may have been legally settled; or in case he may have subsequently to such inhabitancy gained a legal settlement in some other parish, then to such other parish."

1. Statutes relating to Settlement by Estate.

tate shall be retained longer than the person shall inhabit within ten miles thereof.

Such a settlement is not merely suspended, it is extinguished.

Rex v. St. Giles-in-the-Fields, 1 G. & D. 557; 2 Q. B. 446. H. Walton was removed from St. Giles-in-the-Fields to St. James, Westminster. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper, on the 6th September, 1826, purchased for 1575*l.* certain leasehold premises, called the Turk's Head, situate in the appellant parish. The leasehold interest was for an unexpired term of 94 years, subject to the reserved annual rent of 150 guineas; and on the day above mentioned he paid the purchase-money, and a conveyance of the premises was duly executed to him. The pauper and his family occupied the premises from the time of the purchase until June, 1827, when an execution was put into the house, under which the pauper's goods were sold. The house was then shut up until the 25th day of October in the same year, when the pauper assigned the lease to another party, who thereupon entered into possession of the premises, and the pauper never returned to them. The pauper paid the reserved rent for the whole period that he held the lease. In 1830, the pauper removed to and resided at a place more than ten miles distant from the appellant parish. It was urged that the Act suspended only, and did not destroy, a settlement. Lord Denman asked, "Can you make that construction consistent with the language of the statute? It says, 'in case such person shall cease to inhabit within the prescribed distance, and hereafter become chargeable,' he shall be liable to be removed." After further argument Lord Denman said, "I think the settlement set up in this case by settling on the tenement of the pauper, can be considered as claimed only 'by virtue of the possession of an estate,' and that therefore it is put an end to by the statute, on the pauper ceasing to reside within ten miles of it." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

A settlement claimed under 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 1, by "coming to settle" on a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, in right of the pauper's own estate in it, is a settlement within the act.

Reg. v. Whissendine, 1 G. & D. 568; 2 Q. B. 450. This was an order of justices, calling upon the parish of Whissendine to pay 12*s.* per week towards the support of a lunatic, named Edward Peach, then being in the Leicester County Lunatic Asylum, and adjudging his settlement to be in Whissendine. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was entitled under the will of his father, R. Peach, to one-seventh share of his real estate, situated in Whissendine. He was born in that parish in 1810, and resided there with his mother until he was about fourteen years old (in 1824). He was apprenticed to J. Hind, an ironmonger, in St. Martin's, Leicester. He served three years in that parish, when he ran away from his master and went home to his mother at Whissendine. Shortly afterwards, and in 1827, the indentures were duly cancelled by mutual consent. From this period until the beginning of 1837, he continued to live with his mother in a house, part of the estate, in Whissendine, devised to him and his brothers and sisters by his father's

A person inherited a real estate, and acquired a settlement, by living in a house, part of the estate. He became insane and was removed by his relations to the county asylum, which was more than ten miles from the parish in which the estate was. Within the above statute "ceases to inhabit" and loses his settlement by estate.

(a) "Within ten miles thereof." This it is presumed, refers to the parish and not to the estate. The word "thereof" signifies "of that;" and the parish is the last antecedent. This is a more convenient conclusion than referring it to the "estate or interest," as the estate or interest may not have a local "habitation;" for the possession of an incorporeal tenement, e. g. fishery, or common in gross, may confer a settlement, and distance could not be calculated from them.

The statute has not defined the mode of measurement. It is not clear whether the measurement would be by the nearest way of access, by the straight line, or by the map. Similar words in the Reform Bill created much difference of opinion, and it was therefore declared by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, that the distance should be measured in a straight line, on a horizontal plane. This may be considered as a legislative interpretation of such words. In Leigh v. Hind, 9 B. & C. 774, where a person had agreed not to carry on a business within a limited distance, the nearest available approach was taken as the proper mode of ascertaining it.

1. Statutes relating to Settlement by Estate.

will, and thereby gained a settlement by estate in Whissendine. In 1837, having become quite insane, he was removed to the Leicester County Lunatic Asylum, where he remained until April, 1841, being maintained partly by his relations and partly by his proportion of the rents of his estate, the latter alone being insufficient for his support. In April, his relations declining to contribute any longer to his support, he was taken from the asylum and brought to Whissendine, and remained there one night, but on the parish officers of Whissendine declining to acknowledge him as their pauper, he was taken back to Leicester, and the necessary warrant and order of two justices of the borough of Leicester, for his removal to the same asylum, and his maintenance there, at the expense of the parish of Whissendine, as a pauper lunatic, were duly obtained, made, and served on the parish officers of Whissendine, and he was accordingly removed. It was contended that the settlement gained in Whissendine, by estate, was destroyed by his removal into the asylum at Leicester, more than ten miles therefrom, and that the settlement of the pauper was in the parish in which he was apprentice. Lord Denman, "It appears to me, if the legislature had been called upon to make provision for this case, they could not have made use of stronger language. The words are not 'go' or 'depart,' but 'cease to inhabit.' It is certainly very possible that all the consequences of this enactment were not before the legislature in framing this statute; but that consideration will not authorise us to refuse to give effect to language which is clear and unambiguous." Patteson, J. "It is quite clear that, in order to satisfy this section of the statute, it is not necessary for the pauper to have resided, in the legal sense of the word, elsewhere. It certainly did appear to me, at first, very strange, that a parish might remove a lunatic pauper, and so rid themselves of the burden of his maintenance, but such is not the case here, the pauper was in the first instance removed by his relations. I have no doubt that he then 'ceased to inhabit.'" Coleridge, J. "I still entertain some doubts whether this case was in the contemplation of the framers of the statute, but, upon the whole, I think this pauper ceased to inhabit within the meaning of it." Wightman, J. "There may in some cases be difficulties in the application of this law, but they do not exist in this instance. The words are too strong to be overcome." Order quashed.

It does not deprive the emancipated child of such settlement.

Rex v. Hendon, 2 G. & D. 394; 2 Q. B. 455. J. Davies was removed from Hendon to Enstone. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper was the son of T. Davies. In 1814, the father married S. Gregory, who at the time of the marriage was the yearly tenant and occupier of the Crown public-house in Enstone, at the annual rent of 9*l.* The father resided in the house, and occupied it for several years after his marriage, and he continued to reside in the same parish until the pauper became of age, and was emancipated. After the emancipation of the pauper, and after the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 76, the father and the pauper removed to a greater distance than ten miles from Enstone, and continued beyond that distance till the pauper became chargeable, and was removed by the present order. Lord Denman, "The case is quite clear. The settlement put an end to by section 68, is a settlement gained by the party's own possession of property in the parish." Coleridge, J. "The settlement of an emancipated child cannot be affected by anything that happens to the father; and an unemancipated child of a person removing ten miles from his parish would lose his settlement, not by virtue of this clause, but of the general law." Williams and Wightman, Js. concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

2 Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase or for Pecuniary Consideration.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, or for Pecuniary Consideration.

First. Of the Nature of the Property.

1. Nature of property. Generally land or houses.

The nature of the thing or property out of which the interest which is to confer a settlement must arise, has not been expressly defined. The reported cases generally respect settlements by estate in land or houses, and it is nowhere directly considered, whether a settlement can be acquired by an estate in a "tenement," as that word has been explained under the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, or in the more extensive denomination of property called an "hereditament." The principle upon which these settlements are founded, before adverted to, seems to extend this right to all interest in things immovable, situate within a town or parish, which, as the party cannot take them with him to the place of his settlement, he must be allowed to remain where they are for the purpose of superintending them.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Must be some realty.

It is clear, however, that the interest must issue out of the realty locally situated in the parish where the settlement is sought; and it should seem it must be such an interest as would entitle the party to take possession of such realty, and therefore an annuity charged by will on personalty or chattel real, or even a rent-charge out of freehold, would not constitute a settlement.

Not a mere rent-charge.

Deed of conveyance does not estop the overseers from showing in what parish the property is.

The overseers of a parish are not estopped by the deed conveying the estate to the pauper, from shewing that the premises described in the deed as in the parish of A. are in reality in the parish of B. Rex v. Wickham, 2 A. & E. 567.

Living upon a leasehold estate out of which and other personal property the person has a rent-charge only, gains no settlement.

Rex v. Stockley Pomroy, Burr. S. C. 762. E., being possessed of an estate in C. for a term of years determinable on the death of S. W. (the mother of J. W., the pauper, in and by her last will devised to her grandson, J. W., the pauper,) the sum of 10*l. a year, to be paid* by her executors in trust therein named, out of her estate, during the said J. W.'s mother's life; and if her grandson J. W. should happen to die before his mother, that then his brother and sister, W. and M., should have and enjoy the aforesaid 10*l.* a year of like lawful money, to be paid by her executors in trust therein named, yearly and every year during the life of her daughter, S. W., aforesaid; and in case W. W. and M. W., her grandchildren aforesaid, should either of them happen to die before their mother, S. W., that then her will and pleasure was that the survivor of them should have and enjoy the aforesaid legacy of 10*l.* a year in manner and form aforesaid payable; the testatrix soon afterwards died, without altering or revoking her will, and left at the time of her decease the leasehold estate above-mentioned, and effects to the amount of 32*l.* only and no more. The pauper, J. W., being settled in S. and considerably in debt, in order to avoid his creditors went to reside in Cheriton Fitzpayne, and there resided with his mother on the leasehold estate, and did carry on the business of a jobber in cattle during the continuance of the annuity and while the same was due and payable for the space of forty days and upwards, between Midsummer, 1770, and Midsummer, 1771: it did not appear that the annuity was rated to any of the public levies. Lord Mansfield said, "There was no colour for adjudging the pauper to have gained a settlement in Cheriton Fitzpayne. He did not go thither to reside upon his own: he absconded there to avoid his creditors. This was no specific legacy: it is payable out of her whole personal estate. But if it were a specific legacy, has a specific legatee any right to go and live upon the estate? If it had been a rent-charge out of a freehold, it would not give a right to live upon such freehold. But this man had only a pecuniary demand. There was no colour for his going to live upon this leasehold estate as his own." The other three judges concurred. Order affirmed.

S. P. as to a rent charge on a freehold.

An annuity charged on real estates to a charity school to be paid to the vicar, is not an interest to the person officiating as schoolmaster which gives a settlement.

Rex v. Milborne, 1 Wilson, 87; Burr. S. C. 244. T. Membury, a certificate man, came from the parish of Sheepshead to the parish of Milborne, by a certificate dated November, 1733; was a schoolmaster and taught the charity-school there until his death, in 1743; but in what manner he was admitted to the school it does not appear, but only in general that he officiated till his death. The Lady Ann Hastings had by deed conveyed to trustees 10*l.* per annum in trust to be paid to the vicar of Milborne for the time being for the charity-school; and this 10*l.* per annum had not been appropriated to any other use than paying it to the schoolmaster; and whether Thomas Membury had gained a settlement at Milborne, either by serving an office or having a freehold in the school of 10*l.* a year, was the question; and the sessions were of opinion and declared he gained a settlement there as having had a freehold in the school. But per curiam (absente Foster, J.) "A schoolmaster is not an office but only an employment; and what interest Thomas Membury had in the school, whether for life, or how otherwise, or how he was admitted to or came into this employment, does not appear; and that the vicar is the person entitled to the 10*l.* per annum, and not choosing to teach the school himself, paid it to this poor man as his deputy, which could not gain a settlement for any person whatever. Order quashed (a).

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

In an award for the division of common field lands, an allotment was made for the shepherd of the common sheep flock: Held, that the shepherd being hired by the year had no such interest in the land as would give him a settlement by estate.

Rex v. South Newton, 10 Bar. & Cres. 838. Removal of T. Brown and family from Woodford to South Newton, both in the county of Wilts. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper in 1823, while single, was hired as shepherd by the tenantry farmers of the manor of Lower Woodford for eleven months at 14*s.* per week, and was to have a piece of land called the Shepherd's Croft, which was to make up money as good as 16*s.* a week, to keep certain sheep belonging to them called the tenantry flock. Payment of his monied wages was made quarterly by the tenantry farmers. The pauper, after serving eleven months, was hired again for one month. Before the end of the month the pauper was hired "to go on again upon the same terms." He served a year under this last hiring, and slept the last forty nights at South Newton, the appellant parish, having married in the course of that year. The tenantry farmers above mentioned are leaseholders and copyholders of the manor of Lower Woodford. By an agreement under seal, made June the 12th, 1799, the parties to which were the Bishop of Salisbury, Lord of the manor of Lower Woodford, the leaseholders and copyholders of that manor, and William Beckford, of Fonthill Gifford, Esq., who then held the manor under the bishop for three lives, reciting among other things that the leaseholders and copyholders were entitled to divers lands within the manor by virtue of the several leases and copies to them thereof granted, arbitrators were duly appointed for dividing and allotting the open and common fields and common downs within the said manor. The powers of these arbitrators were, "to set out, ascertain, and allot the said open and common fields and common downs so intended to be divided and allotted as aforesaid, unto and amongst the said W. Beckford in respect of such lands as he had in hand or at rack-rent, and the several leaseholders and copyholders, entitled to or interested in the same, in proportion to their several and respective shares, interest, and properties in and over the said open or common fields or downs." They were also empowered to set out ways, and in some respects to direct the course of husbandry. And it was agreed that the persons to whom allotments should be made should be possessed of them for the same estates, terms, and interests, and subject to the same rents and services as the several lands in lieu whereof such allotments should be made were then subject to. Neither the shepherd of the tenantry farmers at that time, nor the pauper Thomas Brown, was a party to the agreement. The arbitrators appointed by the agreement made an award dated the 10th of October, 1818, which has been acted on ever since. By the award, among other allotments, they allotted to W. Beckford, Esq., lord or farmer of the manor of Lower Woodford, in trust for the shepherd or keeper of the common sheep flock of Lower Woodford for the time being, in lieu of lands in the common fields held by custom by the said shepherd, "two allotments of land (that is to say) one piece of inclosed pasture marked V. containing thirty perches, and one piece of inclosed arable land marked V. containing three roods and twenty-four perches, the shepherd for the time being keeping the fences of the same in repair." This was the land which the

(a) The pauper resided under a certificate. See 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11. But if the schoolmaster is in effect the cestui que trust, residing upon what is substantially his own, he acquires a settlement. (See Rex v. Owersby le Moor, post.) pauper took when he was hired as shepherd as above, and which had been possessed by former shepherds since the time of the award. The pauper let part of the land to a tenant from year to year for about 5*l.*, and received the rent; a part he always occupied himself, but never paid rates. He is still shepherd, and at the time of his removal was resident in Woodford, and had been so more than forty days. Becoming chargeable he was removed by order of two justices to South Newton, without any objection on the part of his masters, or any interruption to his service, or his possession of the said Shepherd's Croft, both of which he still retains. Lord Tenterden. "I am of opinion that the pauper took no interest in the land by virtue of the award or allotment. The award itself was void for many reasons. The shepherd therefore could derive no legal interest from it. All the interest which he had, he took in his character of servant from year to year. He was tenant to those with whom he made the bargain, and his enjoyment of the land was in lieu of wages, which would otherwise have been paid him for his service." Bayley, J. "I am of opinion that the pauper was settled in South Newton by virtue of the hiring and service for a year. It appears that he was hired for eleven months and afterwards for a month, and then he was hired to go on again on the same terms: that was an indefinite hiring, and therefore a hiring for a year; and as he resided in South Newton the last forty days, he was settled in that parish. The agreement made the 12th of June, 1799, was binding upon those persons who were parties to it. The effect of it was that whenever a shepherd should be appointed he should have an allotment for his own use; it did not operate as a conveyance, but merely as an agreement between the several parties who signed it. As soon as the shepherd was appointed he took the land, not by virtue of the articles of agreement, but by virtue of the contract of hiring. He was hired upon terms and conditions which were pointed out to him: one of them was that he should have Shepherd's Croft, which with the wages of 14*s.* a week was to make it as good as 16*s.* per week. The persons who hired him therefore did confer upon him the right to occupy the land for such period of time as he should faithfully perform the office of shepherd. This right to hold the land was founded on his contract with them. The settlement therefore was in South Newton." Littledale, J. "It appears there was a custom to appoint a shepherd to attend the flocks, and that person was usually allowed the use of some land. By the agreement of 1799, arbitrators were appointed to divide the waste land, and the allottees were to hold their allotments for the same estates and interests as the lands in respect of which the allotment should be made; but as the lord of the manor, his lessee, and the copyholder and leaseholder, were in the habit of allowing the shepherd a piece of land, I think the pauper did not acquire in this case an interest sufficient to confer a settlement. Suppose there had been an agreement in writing to take care of flocks, and that in lieu of wages, the exclusive use of the land should be given to the shepherd, his interest in the land would be co-extensive with the time during which he was to remain shepherd. During one year therefore (the period for which he was hired) he would be entitled to the exclusive use of the land; but that was not such an interest as would give him a settlement by estate. For that purpose he must be the substantial owner of the property." Parke, J. "The sessions have come to the right conclusion. It is said that the pauper took either a legal or equitable estate by virtue of the award. He took neither. The parties to the submission were the Bishop of Salisbury, the lord of the manor, and his lessees of the manor, the leaseholders and copyholders. Now the shepherd was not a leaseholder or copyholder of the manor, nor lessee of the manor. The arbitrators therefore had no power whatever to allot to him, and pro tanto therefore the award is bad. He had a right to occupy the land for part of the year; that was not a settlement by estate, but a coming to settle on a tenement under 10*l.* a year, and therefore no settlement was gained." Order of sessions confirmed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Rex v. Warkworth, 1 M. & Sel. 473. Order for removing William Forster from Alnwick to Warkworth, confirmed. Case:—The pauper was a freeman by descent, and had been admitted to his freedom twenty-five years. The pasturage of Alnwick Moor is of considerable value, and the freemen of Alnwick, and no others, are entitled to common of pasture thereon, each freeman being entitled when resident, but not otherwise, to the pasturage of five stints of his own cattle, that is five cows, or twenty-five sheep: the freemen have also a right to dig and cut peats, furzes, turves, and bushes; and to get limestone, slates, and free-stones in the open quarries upon that moor: they have the privilege also of setting up their stalls in the market-place without paying stallage to the lord, and of having their children educated free of expense at the town school, at which school two of the children named in the order were placed at the time of the removal. The question was, whether the rights of the pauper as a freeman of the borough of Alnwick amounted to an estate from which he was not legally removable. Grose, J. "There is no doubt whatever in this case. The question is, whether the pauper was irremovable from his own estate? In order to determine that, we must first inquire what estate he had. Now it appears that he had neither land nor house; it is said, however, that he had a right of common; but supposing he had, it does not appear that he was ever in the enjoyment of or had any cattle wherewith to exercise that right. The profit à prendre, or easement, as it has been called, never existed in him; how, then, can he be said to have been resident on his own? It cannot be considered as a residence on his own, when in truth he never had it. It would be absurd so to consider it." Le Blanc, J. "The case made in argument to show that he was residing on his own is this, that he was a freeman of the town, and as such entitled to a right of common on Alnwick Moor, and this common right is said to be a tenement. But I think this is not in strictness a right of common, nor can it properly be said to be a tenement, it is a mere franchise. The argument, however, has been carried this length, viz., that supposing it to be only a franchise, still the pauper was irremovable from it. But to this I cannot accede. In the case, for instance, of a freeman of a corporation, who has a right of suffrage for the election of a mayor, or any other of the officers belonging to the corporate body, has it ever been decided that such a franchise made the person entitled to it irremovable? Here the pauper, as a freeman of the town, was entitled, if he had any cattle, to turn them on the moor. This, however, was a mere personal privilege, wholly unalienable, and not falling within the legal definition of a right of common. A privilege of this sort, I believe, has never yet been holden to be such an estate as to make the person entitled to it irremovable. It is a strong circumstance, that notwithstanding the existence of such rights in different parts of the kingdom, no attempt like the present has hitherto been made. It appears to me, therefore, that this does not fall within the purview of those cases which have decided that a party is not removable from his own; and which doctrine, I admit, has been extended to cases where a party was merely residing in the parish in which his estate was situate, and not upon the estate itself." Bayley, J. "The case does not find that the pauper had any house in which he was entitled to reside, and as a freeman he had no right of residence; but that must be acquired by other means. When he can obtain a residence, then as freeman he is entitled during such residence to turn cattle on the common. But when he removes he loses this privilege. I am not aware of any case in which a privilege of this description has been holden to be sufficient to confer a settlement. It is a mere local privilege, and attached to the person so long only as he is resident. From the frequency of these rights, which exist in many corporations in the kingdom, settlements must have been claimed in respect of them had they been deemed sufficient for that purpose. This case is very different from the cases of removals from landed property." Order of sessions confirmed.

Right to a stinted common of pasture for cattle, and to cut peat, and to get limestone, &c. never exercised, is not such an estate as renders the party irremovable.

This is a mere franchise.

Residence on the estate is not necessary.

Rex v. Belford, 10 B. & C. 54. Grace, wife of John M'Queen, then a prisoner in Berwick gaol, was removed from Berwick to Belford. Order

The burgesses were entitled to receive such share of the rent of the corporate estates as the corporation allowed it. The estates were let by and rent reserved to the corporation: Held, a burgess taking such a share is not irremovable.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

confirmed. Case:—M'Queen is a burgess of the borough of Berwick, and in 1807 came to reside in Berwick, where he resided to the date of the order, at which time he was a prisoner. For the last three years he enjoyed as burgess certain pecuniary benefits arising out of the estates of the corporation lying in the parish. The mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the borough of Berwick, by virtue of a charter granted by James I. and confirmed by statute, hold, to the only proper use of them and their successors, a large estate in land in the parish of Berwick, which is co-extensive with the borough. This estate is chargeable, in the first instance, with the payment of salaries of officers and other corporation expenses imposed by the charter; but has from an early period after the grant of the charter, and from thence hitherto, been distributed into three portions, each applied to distinct purposes. The first consists of farms demised to tenants by the mayor, bailiff, and burgesses, the rent being reserved to them, or their treasurer for the time being, and collected by him. This rent, with the proceeds of other property, called the town's ancient revenue, now forms a separate fund, out of which the salaries of the officers and other corporate expenses authorised by the charter are paid; these farms are called Treasurer's Farms. The second portion is subdivided into quantities from one-and-a-half acre to two-and-a-half acres, and in value from 4*l.* to 9*l.* per annum; these are called Meadows; and at an annual meeting, called the Meadow Guild, are distributed, as they become vacant by the death or non-residence of the last occupiers, among the senior resident burgesses and widows of burgesses, who succeed to the rights of their husbands as to meadows and stents, though the charter has no provision in behalf of the widows; the oldest resident burgess being entitled to choose the most valuable vacant meadow, and so on down to the junior; the burgesses may occupy or let the meadows, reserving the rent to themselves. The lands forming the third portion were, up to 1761, open fields, upon which each burgess was entitled to a certain right of depasturing. At that period they were inclosed, and have ever since been let in guild, as farms, to tenants for various terms, and are now leased under the corporation seal; and the rent has, since 1810, been reserved to the mayor, bailiff, and burgesses (the name of incorporation), and successors, or to their treasurer. Previous to that, several instances occur of cases of stent land, wherein the rent was reserved to the mayor, &c., or treasurer, or to the several respective burgesses or burgesses' widows, who should from time to time during the term have shares in the farmhold, in equal portions; the rent of each farm is divided into equal portions, generally eleven, but in a few instances twenty-two. At another annual meeting, called a Stent Guild, a portion is allotted, as a specific farm, to each resident burgess or burgess's widow, or to as many as there are vacant portions; these are called stents, and vary in value from 2*l.* to 9*l.* per annum: the senior burgess is entitled to preference, as the more valuable become vacant. The portion of the rents called stents are paid annually by the treasurer to the burgesses entitled to them; but until the last fourteen or sixteen years the burgesses in many instances received their stent-money immediately from the farmer or lessee of the specific farms upon which their several stents were assigned. The burgesses in guild have, by their charter, a power of making bye-laws for the better preserving, disposing, and letting their lands, and they have made bye-laws to regulate the enjoyment of the meadows and stents, and prescribed the condition of husbandry under which these lands may be tilled, and the terms for which the meadows may be let, by the individual burgesses. They decide on the title of those who claim to enjoy meadows and stents according to such bye-laws, and instances of forfeitures are recorded. Unless there is such a forfeiture, or the party becomes non-resident, or relinquish his stent or meadow by choosing one of more value, he may enjoy the first allotted to him for life. Some enjoy one stent, others two, and others one and a meadow. Those who enjoy two stents hold one in lieu of a meadow. M'Queen for three years previous to his removal has been, and now is, in the enjoyment of one stent, assigned upon a farm within the parish, and annually receives from the treasurer for his portion of the rent 3*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* He also enjoys another portion assigned on the outfields, under the description of stent, for a meadow, his share of which is 3*l.* 1*s.* 9*d.* The rents of these two farms, during the entire period of the pauper's share, is reserved to the mayor, &c., or treasurer, and paid to the treasurer, and by him to the pauper. The pauper is not at present entitled to a meadow, but he may claim one when there is a vacancy. The pauper, as burgess, is a member of the guilds, and entitled to vote in the meadow and stent guilds as well as others. The question is, whether the pauper was irremovable, so as to acquire a settlement? Lord Tenterden, C. J. "I am of opinion that M'Queen was not seised of any equitable estate, that being in the corporation. He was only entitled to such a portion of the rents as the body corporate might think fit to allow him. Whether they allowed him a portion of those rents, first throwing the whole together, and then dividing them among the freemen; or whether they assigned to each freeman the rent of a particular portion of land, seems to me immaterial. The freeman had no right to enter on the land: and in Rex v. Warkworth (p. 860) his lordship observed, 'In that case the pauper simply as a freeman had a right to exercise a right of common. Here the burgesses have no right to occupy the land, the corporation let it." Bayley, J. "Rex v. Warkworth shows that a burgess entitled to a right of common is not settled by residing in the borough. Being a freeman, and as such entitled to certain local privileges, did not give M'Queen any estate, legal or equitable; and if he had no estate in the land, he had no right to occupy. The estate was in the corporation." Parke, J. "The pauper had nothing but a privilege of taking a portion of the profits of the land, at the will of the corporation." Order confirmed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

2. The Tenure and Duration of Interest.

Secondly.—The Tenure and Duration of Interest.

The nature of the tenure is not material, as far as respects the law of parochial settlement. It may be acquired by an estate in lands held in frank tenure, or freehold, (a) or by copyhold. (b) The duration of the estate is also immaterial, if it were sufficient to insure a residence of forty days. (c) It may be either a freehold or copyhold estate, in fee or for life, (d) or a leasehold interest, determinate on lives (e) or years. (f) The right of a widow to continue forty days upon her husband's lands, until she is assigned her dower, (g) has been held to be an interest sufficiently permanent to confer a settlement.

3. Of the Value of the Estate.

The purchaser of a copyhold estate for life, under the value of 10*l.*, did acquire a settlement.

Thirdly.—Of the Value of the Estate..

Harrow v. Edgware, (h) Fol. 257; 2 Bott, 608; E. T. 11 Anne. C. having gained a legal settlement in the parish of H., afterwards purchased a copyhold estate for his own life, worth 1*l.* 5*s.* a year, in the parish of E., to which estate he was regularly admitted. He removed from H. to E., and lived on this copyhold estate near five years. His wife was afterwards admitted to the estate, and lived thereon till she died, leaving three children, who became chargeable to the parish, from whence they were removed to the parish of H., and the sessions confirmed the order. Parker, C. J. "A parochial settlement is nothing more than the privilege of living irremovable in the parish. (i) A man who has an estate for life,

(a) Rex v. Charlton, 2 Bott, 493; Cald. 416; Rex v. Farringdon, 6 T. R. 520.

(b) Harrow v. Edgeware, 2 Bott, 465: Rex v. Burclear, 1 Stra. 163.

(c) 2 Nolan, 71.

(d) Id. Ibid.

(e) Rex v. Tharwood, Burr. S. C. 386; Rex v. Cold Ashton, Id. 444, pauper certificated.

(f) Mursley v. Grandborough, 1 Stra. 97; Rex v. Uttoxeter, p. 863.

(g) Rex v. Painswick, Burr. S. C. 783; Rex v. Long Wikenham, Cald. 474; where the widow was certificated.

(h) This was before 9 Geo. I.

(i) This definition is not correct, as a person may be irremovable, and yet not gain a settlement.

or an estate of inheritance, of his own, cannot be removed from it, although in value it is under 10*l.* a year. It therefore follows that where a man does so live, he gains a settlement for himself and for the children in his family." Powell, J. "If this had been the grant of a copyhold for years, it might, as it is under the value of 10*l.* a year, have been within the reason of the statute, but as it is an estate for life, it certainly is not. The father clearly gained a settlement in E. by residing forty days on this copyhold, and the children must of necessity be settled in the parish in which their parents are settled, until they have acquired settlements for themselves, which in the present case they were not of an age to do. The argument respecting the possible inconveniences parishes may suffer from such estates being held to confer settlements, loses its weight, when it is recollected that lords of manors cannot create new copyholds, nor by 31 Eliz. c. 7, erect new cottages, without laying four acres of land to each, and it is not much to be feared that lords will give away merely from spleen such quantities of land, especially as the land itself would defeat the intended effect of such grants, by preventing the possessors from requiring parochial relief." Eyre, J. "The distinction attempted to be made between being settled and not being removable is imaginary, for a settlement is nothing but the privilege of living irremovable." And accordingly both orders were quashed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Fourthly.—The Interest in the Estate, and Who may acquire this Settlement.

4. The Interest in the Estate, and who may acquire this Settlement.

It seems that any person may acquire this description of settlement, and even an alien, though he cannot acquire a descendible interest, may yet hold till inquest found, (ante.) So an infant, and other persons under legal incapacity, may acquire the same.

1. Of Infants.

1. Of Infants.

Rex v. Hasfield, 2 Stra. 1131. The mother of the children removed had an estate of 4*l.* a year in Tirley, where she and her husband lived and had these children. She dying, the husband became tenant by the courtesy; and whilst such took 30*l.* a year at Hasfield and lived one year there with his two children and then died. The Court of King's Bench confirmed the order removing them to Hasfield as to the girl, but quashed it as to the boy; for as to the boy, who was eight years old, he was tenant in fee of the 4*l.* a year. And though it was not stated that he was actually upon that spot, yet it was enough that he had such an estate in the parish, from which he could not be removed. But as to the daughter, it was otherwise; she could demand no maintenance out of her brother's estate; as it was never yet determined that children should go to a grandmother for nurture. She may, indeed, be charged to contribute to their relief in the parish where they are settled.

An infant eight years of age residing in the parish in which it has an estate of its own of only the annual value of 4*l.* gains a settlement.

2. Executors, Administrators, and the next of Kin.

2. Executors, Administrators, and the next of Kin.

Rex v. Sundrish, 1 Sess. Ca. 200; 2 Stra. 983. T. Perch, by indenture, demised to T. Gates, the father, a cottage at 5*s.* a year, which was the full value, for ninety-nine years. The lessee held it till his death, and devised it to T. Gates, his son. And the question was, whether the son, as executor, being entitled to the term, shall gain a settlement by inhabiting in such cottage? The court were unanimously of opinion that this estate, though a leasehold, was his own estate; that he had come into it under his father's will; that it is, together with other things, charged with 20*l.*, payable to his mother for her maintenance, and that in Mursley v. Grandborough, a leasehold estate, although it was not a beneficial lease of the whole, had been held sufficient to confer a settlement.

An executor gains a settlement by residence as such upon leasehold.

Rex v. Uttoxeter, Burr. S. C. 538; 2 Bott, 620. The pauper, W. Gilbert, was settled at Uttoxeter. His mother rented and resided upon a farm of 22*l.* a year at Marchington Woodlands; which she devised to her five children, and made the pauper and her three other sons executors, and Coming to a tenement by executorship, although under 10*l.* a year, gains a settlement.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

died. The pauper alone proved the will, and entered as her executor and resided upon the farm twelve or thirteen weeks. He afterwards returned to Uttoxeter, but continued to go over to Marchington Woodlands, to give directions from time to time, and had a servant upon the farm till the Lady-day following. The question was, whether he thereby gained a settlement at Marchington Woodlands? By the Court: "It is very true that a share not amounting to 10*l.* a year, of a tenement of above 10*l.* a year in value, will not do. But here he has a right as executor. The value thereof is totally immaterial; because, by common law, no person can be removed from his own. And one who has a right to reside irremovably doth thereby gain a settlement, if he reside forty days.

Value immaterial.

The executor to a tenant of an estate under 10*l.* a year gains a settlement by forty days' residence, although he do not prove the will.

Rex v. Stone, 6 T. R. 295. E. Symns removed from Salt and Enson to Stone. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper went to live with his father-in-law, E. Bentley, in Salt and Enson, who rented from year to year a cottage and about six acres of land, under the yearly value of 10*l.* Bentley died, and by his will gave all his personal estate to the pauper in trust, that he would allow the testator's wife a sufficient maintenance thereout during her life; and at her decease his personal estate should be divided amongst his five children, the pauper's wife being one: and he appointed the pauper sole executor of his will. Upon the testator's decease, the pauper possessed himself of all his personal estate and continued in possession of the cottage and lands, without coming to any agreement with the landlord, buying and selling everything, paying the rent, and maintaining the widow until his removal, which was upwards of three years; but he did not prove the will till three days previous to his removal. Lord Kenyon. "I cannot distinguish this case from Mursley v. Grandborough (post,) and the other cases in which it has been held that an executor or devisee of a leasehold estate, of less value than 10*l.* a year, gains a settlement by residing upon it for forty days. It is said, however, that this pauper was a mere trustee: but no one had a right to take the estate from him; he took it liable to all the testator's debts, and the creditors would have had a right to call on him for payment of their debts before he made any distribution of the testator's property under the will. In fact, the pauper resided on this estate for more than forty days; and the established rule, which we ought to preserve with anxiety, is, that though a person cannot acquire a settlement by a purchase for less than 30*l.* paid, yet if he take such estate by devise, he may: so, though he cannot gain a settlement by renting a tenement of less value than 10*l.* a year, yet, if such an estate devolve on him by operation of law, he may gain a settlement by forty days' residence on it. The distinction taken between a tenant from year to year, and a tenant for a term of years, is rather a distinction in words than in substance. A tenant from year to year is entitled to estovers, and the same advantages as a tenant for a term of years. In truth, he is a tenant from year to year as long as both parties please. And, considering how many large estates are held by this tenure, it would be dangerous to say that the term ceased at the end of the year, because then the landlord might lose his right of distress. Although, on my first reading this case, it struck me as a very minute interest to confer a settlement, on consideration I am satisfied that we cannot, without overturning a variety of cases, determine that the pauper did not gain a settlement by residing on it for forty days." Ashhurst, J. "It is perfectly immaterial whether the pauper had a beneficial interest in the estate, it being sufficient that he resided there forty days for a necessary purpose, and could not have been removed from it." Grose, J. "It certainly seems strange, at first, that an executor should gain a settlement by a residence on the testator's estate, when such a residence by the testator would not have conferred a settlement upon him. But we must consider the difference of the situation of the two persons; the one comes in by his own contract, the other by act of law. This distinction was taken in Rex v. Uttoxeter" (p. 863). Lawrence, J. "It was settled in Doe d. Shore v. Porter (3 T. R. 13), that if a tenant from year to year died intestate, his administrator has the same interest in the land that the intestate had; then what was the interest of the pauper's testator? He had a right to continue on the estate another year, unless six months' notice to quit were given, and, of course, the pauper (his executor) had the same right. With regard to the want of probate, there is a case in 3 Dyer, 367 a, that gives a decisive answer to this: a termor devised his term to another, whom he made his executor, and died; the devisee entered and died without any probate, and it was held that the term was legally in the executor by his entry, and an execution of the devise without any probate. So that if there had been no probate of the will in this case, still the term was vested in the pauper, the executor."

Tenant from year to year same as tenant for a term.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Letters of administration are essential.

South Sydenham v. Lamerton, 1 Stra. 57. Held that next of kin of lessee acquires no settlement until he has taken out letters of administration. Where the pauper was sole next of kin, secus. (Rex v. Horsley, p. 869.)

A father, possessed of the residue of a term, dies intestate, leaving two sons. After order of removal made for one of the sons, he takes out letters of administration, he cannot acquire a settlement by virtue thereof.

The pauper took the lease as his share, and resided on the land.

Rex v. Widworthy, Andr. 4; Burr. S. C. 109; 2 Bott, 612. The pauper removed to Widworthy, and lived there with his father in a cottage-house of 30*s.* a year, working as day-labourer. The father died intestate, possessed of the cottage for the residue of a term, determinable on lives, leaving the pauper and another son. The pauper's brother took his distributive share of his father's estate in goods, and the pauper, after the father's death, continued in the cottage for five or six years until the lease was determined; after which, and since the making out the order for his removal, he took out administration to his father. Page, J. "At the time of making the order he had gained no settlement in W.; because nothing vested in him before administration was granted to him. If so, then the order for removing him to F. was a good order when made, and the sessions ought not to have quashed it; though administration had been afterwards taken out; for they could not quash a good order upon a matter which happened ex post facto; and if this administration really gained him a settlement, there ought to have been a new order of two justices to remove him back to W. When he was first removed from thence he had nothing to do with the cottage; for nothing vested in him till he took out letters of administration; consequently, if he gained a settlement at W. at all, it was gained subsequent to the making of the original order. But secondly, he had it not at all in his own right, even after administration; nor does it seem to be such a sort of estate as would gain him a settlement. This is a cot-house of so small a value as 1*l.* 10*s.* a year only, holden upon the residue of a term of years determinable upon lives. In the case of Ashbrittle v. Weyley (p. 896), there was a continuance of the quiet possession for thirty years and a descent cast. The pauper had a title against all the world except the lord of the waste; and it would be a good bar, even against the lord, in an ejectment. There the pauper clearly had such a possession as to be irremovable from it. But I apprehend that the pauper in the present case was removable even during the term; but afterwards he certainly was." Probyn, J. "The whole depends upon this single question, whether the pauper was removable during the five or six years that he lived in this cottage? for I take the rule now settled and established to be, 'that if the pauper come to an estate by inheritance, or as executor or administrator, be it of ever so small value, he is irremovable; and if he remain forty days in possession and inhabitancy, he gains a settlement.' Now I take it, that the pauper in the present case was removable. His possession rested only upon a private agreement between him and his brother. If he had taken out administration during the interest, he had had a vested right; but taking out administration after the term expired could never give him an interest in the expired term, in which he had none during its subsistence. He was in possession merely as a tenant at will; he was removable by the parish, and his right would have been without foundation if administration had been granted to any one else. Therefore he had no right at all till administration was granted. The case of Wyley was a strong case. That was a descent to the pauper after a possession of thirty years; which is a good title in an ejectment and a presumption of an inheritance. It was primâ facie a good title as heir-at-law: none but

The general rule.

Tenant at will of an estate less than 10*l.* can gain no settlement as such.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

the lord could contest the right. And if a pauper live forty days under a right which makes him irremovable, it gains him a settlement." Chapple, J. was of the same opinion. "For there was no time during the continuance of this lease when the pauper was irremovable, and without remaining forty days irremovable, a settlement could not be gained by him." And he observed, "that there was no agreement at all between the brothers, that the pauper should take this lease as his distributive share; or, at least, no such agreement appeared. It is only stated that the other brother did take his share in goods; and John did live in the cottage; but it does not appear that this happened in pursuance of any preceding agreement that it should be so." (See Rex v. Cold Ashton, post.)

Where a wife and two children survive the intestate, the wife cannot gain a settlement by letters of administration taken out after assignment by her of the intestate's term, which was a lease for years determinable on lives.

Rex v. North Curry, Cald. 137; 2 Bott, 631. Betty Winter and children removed from North Curry to Ruishton. Order quashed. Case:—John Winter, late husband of the pauper, purchased a cottage and garden in North Curry of the yearly value of 20*s.* for fourteen guineas, which was demised to him, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for ninety-nine years, or three lives, at the yearly rent of 2*s.* He and his wife resided in the cottage for several years until his death; his widow and their children soon after became chargeable to North Curry; but were refused relief unless they would go into the workhouse, which they did, and quitted possession of the cottage and garden, where they were relieved until they were removed to Ruishton in February, 1781. Ruishton appealed at the Easter sessions, 24th April 1781, which sessions was adjourned, and Betty soon after returned to the cottage and resided there till 28th April, 1781, when she sold the cottage and garden for six guineas for the residue of the term, and by indenture dated 28th April, 1781, assigned the term. On 11th July 1781, being the day after the first day of the present session, Betty sued out letters of administration of her late husband's effects. It was argued that there was a difference between the sole next of kin, and where several persons in equal degree have an equal right; here the widow had before administration a specific right in the thing, and only a ceremony necessary to make the assignment by her indefeasible. Lord Mansfield, C. J. said, "That this case did not materially differ from Rex v. Widworthy (p. 865); as the children were entitled to two-thirds of the effects, the widow is not properly and in the sense of the cases the sole next of kin." (a) Order of sessions quashed.

Residence by the daughter of a deceased tenant of leasehold property does not confer a settlement, letters of administration having been granted to the widow.

Rex v. Berkswell, 1 B. & C. 542; 3 D. & R. 9. Order of removal of J. Matthews, wife, &c., from Berkswell to Holy Trinity, Coventry, quashed. Case:—In 1808 a lease for thirty-one years was granted by the lady of the manor, under an inclosure act, to one Hands, of a cottage situate in Berkswell, at the annual rent of one shilling. Hands was residing in the cottage at the time of the lease, and continued to do so afterwards for upwards of a year, when he died intestate, leaving a widow and three daughters, one of whom was married to the pauper. Letters of administration were granted to the widow, but no distribution was made of the intestate's effects. After the death of Hands his widow lived in the cottage for about two years. One of the other daughters, with her husband, resided there for two or three years more, and then the pauper and his wife came and resided there for some years, and until the period of their removal, with the permission of the widow, she occasionally helping them, and always paying the annual rent of one shilling reserved by the lease. The pauper never paid any rent either to the widow or the lady of the manor. Abbott, C. J. "I am clearly of opinion there was not an equitable interest in this case, which would have entitled the pauper to say to the administratrix, 'I shall come and live in this place, and if you do not allow me so

(a) Can the widow be ever sole next of kin in such a sense as to be entitled to letters of administration? By 21 Hen. VIII. c. 5, administration is to be granted "to the widow or next of kin as by the discretion of the ordinary is good." The court, it is true, prefers a sole to a joint administrator. (4 Burn. Ec. L. 277, 278.) See Patteson, J., p. 887.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

to do, a court of equity will enforce my title.' The pauper had no such right. He was entitled indeed, in right of his wife, to call upon the administratrix to give an account of the estate and effects of the intestate, but it might have turned out that she had paid much more than the value of this tenement in discharging her husband's debts, and in that case he would have had nothing." Bayley, J. "In Rex v. Toddington (p. 889), which is the latest case upon this head of settlement, the beginning of Lord Ellenborough's opinion is, I think, decisive upon this subject. His lordship says, 'This is not an estate so clearly equitable, that a court of law can presume that a court of equity would, if applied to, clothe the party with the legal right to it.' That paragraph shows in what case an equitable interest shall give the party a right to be considered as gaining a settlement in right of it; and my brother Holroyd, in giving his judgment in that case, says, 'An equitable estate is very different from an equitable right to have a conveyance of the legal estate.' In this case it seems to me, that the pauper had no right at all to go into a court of equity to have a specific portion of this estate decreed to him, or to be admitted to reside upon the premises." Holroyd, J. "I am of opinion that the pauper in this case had not any equitable right to enjoy the property in question. He was entitled to his wife's share, assuming that the testator's effects were sufficient to pay it, but I think he had no right to enter and take possession of the cottage without the assent of the administratrix, nor even then, if she disposed of the possession, without reserving the powers given to the ordinary under the statute of distributions." Order of sessions quashed.

The husband of the pauper rented a house from year to year, and on his death the pauper told the landlord that she wished to pay the rent weekly, which she continued to do for nine months. The respondent parish had relieved her in the meantime, and the attorney of that parish suggested her taking out letters of administration, and did so for her: Held, that as the widow was bound by law to take out administration, it was not to be considered a fraudulent transaction, although the sessions had so found it. But it was referred back to the sessions to say whether after administration granted she continued a weekly tenant, or was tenant from year to year in her husband's right. See Rex v. Barnard Castle, p. 885.

Rex v. Great Glenn, 2 Nev. & M. 91; 5 B. & Ad. 188. Removal of M. Stevens and children from Great Glenn to Leir, both in the county of Leicester. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper Stevens was married to John Stevens in April, 1827; and on their marriage she and her husband went to live in a house in the appellant parish, which her husband had taken of Thomas Eaglefield as tenant from year to year, at the rent of 3*l.* per annum, which was a rack-rent. They continued to live in this house until the 14th of May, 1831, when the husband died. The widow (the pauper) continued the possession from thence for about a fortnight or three weeks. She then went to the respondent parish for a few days, viz. from Monday till Saturday, when she returned to Leir, having left her sister in possession of the house during her absence. She was relieved there by the respondents until the 3rd of December following. On the next 2nd of June after her husband's death the pauper had an interview with the landlord, and told him she wished to pay the rent weekly; he assented, and it was agreed that the pauper should pay 1*s.* 2*d.* per week, which she paid accordingly until the 5th of March, when she quitted in consequence of having received a week's notice to quit. Some time in August after her husband's death, the pauper took out letters of administration to the effects of her husband under the following circumstances:—The attorney for the respondent parish, accompanied by a clergyman, in that month called upon the pauper and administered the oath, saying, "We shall be obliged to get you to take out letters of administration: I dare say you don't understand it. You have a right to take out letters of administration if you like, and if you will leave it to me I will do whatever is necessary." This explanation was not understood by the pauper. However, she said she had no objection, but hoped they would not take her goods, which she believed the respondent parish were going to lay claim to. The pauper was ignorant of administering any further than she understood her oath was to declare that what she had was not worth 20*l.*; and she never heard until the 6th of December following that letters of administration had been taken out, when the attorney for the respondent parish having laid some papers on a table before her, said, "Those are your letters of administration." The pauper's goods at the decease of her husband were not worth more than 5*l.*, 3*l.* of which were due for rent, and 2*l.* for other debts. The letters of administration were taken out by the direction and at the expense of the respondent parish for the purpose of settling the pauper in the appellant parish. The pauper resided forty days and upwards in the house late her husband's in the appellant parish after the grant of the above-mentioned letters of administration, whereupon the order of removal appealed against was obtained. The sessions found that there was fraud in taking out the letters of administration, and discharged the order. Denman, C. J. "The pauper, as administratrix of a tenant from year to year, though at a less rent than 10*l.*, would gain a settlement by forty days' residence, because the interest vested in her by act and operation of law. The only question as to this point is whether the settlement is altogether void, because the sessions have found that there was fraud in taking out the letters of administration. They have stated the facts on which that finding was grounded; and I am of opinion that there was not in this case any fraud sufficient to prevent the estate of the intestate from vesting in his widow. She not only had a right, but was bound to take out letters of administration; and she consented that they should be obtained. There is no ground for saying that they should not have their full legal operation of vesting in her the property of the intestate. Another question is, whether she resided in the parish forty days while the leasehold estate (formerly her husband's) was vested in her. There are premises from which the sessions might have inferred an agreement by her, after administration granted, to become a weekly instead of a yearly tenant. They have not drawn any such inference; but have left it doubtful whether she resided forty days in the parish of Leir, while the leasehold estate which formerly belonged to the husband was vested in her. If that be really a matter of doubt, the case must go back to the sessions in order that they may determine it." Littledale, J. "I think that under the circumstances stated in this case the leasehold interest of the husband was not prevented from vesting in his widow, on the ground that the letters of administration were fraudulently obtained. She was not only entitled but bound by law to take them out; and was merely told by the solicitor to the parish of Leir that she was so entitled, and assented to administration being obtained. There was no misrepresentation or suppression of any fact. The only other question is, whether she resided forty days in the parish of Leir after her husband's interest as tenant from year to year had vested in her as administratrix. If within that period she held as a weekly tenant, and continued to do so ever afterwards, she was not irremovable. It is stated that on the 2nd of June she told the landlord she wished to pay the rent weekly, and that he assented; but whether she then actually took the premises from week to week, or only gave notice to the landlord that she wished to do so, is not very clear. I should rather think she then became a weekly tenant. It is true she could not surrender her husband's interest before taking out administration, but as the facts are left doubtful the case must be sent back to the sessions, in order that they may say whether after taking out administration she was a weekly tenant in her own right, or a tenant from year to year in right of her husband." Parke, J. "I should be satisfied to dispose of this case on the ground that the sessions had found (as I think they would) that the pauper, before the letters of administration were taken out, had become a weekly tenant in her own right and continued so afterwards, and consequently that she did not reside forty days in Leir while she was irremovable by reason of the estate which had vested in her by operation of law. She paid the rent weekly from the 2nd of June, 1831, to March, 1832, and quitted on a week's notice. As soon as she obtained the letters of administration she might have disaffirmed the weekly tenancy and claimed to hold as tenant from year to year in right of her husband; but I think there is abundant evidence of her having confirmed the weekly tenancy, for she afterwards always paid the rent weekly, and quitted on a week's notice. Then as to the other question, there were no sufficient premises to warrant the sessions in finding such fraud as would avoid the letters of administration and prevent the leasehold estate of the husband from vesting in his widow. The pauper had a right to take out letters of administration, and a consenting mind that it should be done. She was only induced by the solicitor for Great Glenn to exercise that right, but there was no deceit practised by him; if there had, the case would have been different." Patteson, J. "In order to acquire a settlement by estate the pauper must have resided forty days in the parish where the estate lay, and where her interest in that estate by operation of the law still continued. If before that time elapsed she acquired an interest in her own right as weekly tenant, and resided in the parish in respect of that interest, she was not irremovable, and acquired no settlement. The sessions will probably find on the evidence that she had become a weekly tenant. The letters of administration are not void on the ground that they were obtained by fraud, because the widow had the right, and, indeed, was under a legal obligation to take them out, and consented that they should be taken out." Case to go back to the sessions in order to ascertain whether the pauper became a weekly tenant within forty days after the letters of administration were taken out.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Decision of sessions as to fraud reversed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

A sole next of kin has such an equitable interest in a leasehold tenement of the intestate, that she gains a settlement by residing forty days in the same parish after the intestate's death, before administration granted to her.

It matters not that the widow of the intestate survived him, if she died afterwards without having taken out administration, leaving the other sole next of kin to the intestate.

But letters of administration have no retrospective effect.

Rex v. Horsley, 8 East, 405. Removal from Horsley to Avening, quashed. Case:—The pauper, S. B., was the widow of J. B., who died in 1801. W. P., the father of S. B., died about Christmas, 1802, intestate, possessed of a leasehold house in Horsley, of 40*s*. per annum, for a term of years, leaving a widow and the pauper his only child, whom he had by a former wife. W. P.'s widow died about a month after her husband. Upon the death of W. P., the pauper, who had previously occupied the leasehold house by permission of her father, continued to reside in it till the death of her mother-in-law, when she left the house, and let it to a tenant, who occupied it for three years from that time, and paid the rent for it to the pauper. The pauper during this time, and until the date of the order of removal, resided with her family in Horsley. On the 11th of January, 1806, the pauper obtained letters of administration to her father, and on the 29th sold her interest to W. D., who ever after continued in possession. The court said, the grant of administration could not operate by relation to make a person irremovable for a time past, who during that time was removable. On the other point, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. delivered judgment as follows, on a subsequent day. "This is the case of a sole next of kin exclusively entitled, after the death of her mother-in-law, to administration of the personal estate of the intestate, her father; and the question is, whether the pauper, having, after she became such sole next of kin to the intestate, resided more than forty days in the parish, in which a leasehold tenement of 40*s*. per annum belonging to the intestate lay, thereby gained a settlement in that parish. The grant of letters of administration cannot operate for the purpose of rendering her not removable at a time past, when, as far as the letters of administration are concerned, she was removable for want of them; and when any order which might have happened to be made for her removal (as no letters of administration then existed), could not, as was held in Rex v. Widworthy (p. 865), be quashed afterwards upon the subsequent grant of them. Can then a person for this purpose become the owner of a chattel real, which had belonged to the intestate before the actual grant of administration to such person? Upon the death of her mother-in-law the pauper became sole next of kin to the intestate; it was in her power, therefore, at any moment afterwards, to have clothed herself exclusively with the legal character and rights of an administratrix. Lord Mansfield, in Rex v. Cold Ashton (post), observes that there is 'a great difference between a sole next of kin, and where several persons in equal degree have all of them (as in that case they had) an equal right.' In Rex v. North Curry (p. 866), Lord Mansfield again observed, that the widow (the pauper in that case) 'was not properly, and in the sense of the cases, the sole next of kin.' The effect, however, of a forty days' residence by a sole next of kin has never yet received a judicial opinion. South Sydenham v. Lamerton (p. 865), was argued and decided on another ground. Adverting to the intimation given by other judges, of what would be their opinion upon such a case as the present, if it should come before them, and to the reason of the thing, according to which the exclusive right to enforce the proper means of acquiring a legal title to the property, coupled with the actual enjoyment of it in the meantime, through the occupation of a tenant, gives so much colour of right to reside without being removed within the parish in which the property is situate, as to exempt such residence from being considered as a vagrant intrusion into a parish, in which the party has nothing of his own, within the purview and scope of the poor-laws, and to the determinations thereupon; we are of opinion that in a case in which the language of no statute upon the subject precludes us from so determining, and where no principle of convenience, nor any decided case, is contravened by such a determination, we are well warranted in considering that a settlement was gained by a residence of forty days within the parish, in which a pauper thus circumstanced in respect to the real property there situate, resided; and of course that the order of sessions must be affirmed."

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

The widow, daughter, and son-in-law, occupied a leasehold house of the husband for more than thirty years, no administration taken out: neither of them gained a settlement.

Rex v. Canford Magna, 6 M. & Sel. 355. Order of removal of R. Poulden, from Canford Magna to Corfe Mullen, quashed. Case:—Richard, the father of the pauper, about thirty-nine years ago, lived in a house of John White, at Corfe Mullen, whose daughter, Ann, he married. The house was held by White, under a lease for years determinable on lives, one of which is still subsisting. Its yearly value is 40*s*. White died about thirty-six years ago, leaving a widow, and Thomas and Ann, his children. It did not appear that any administration had been taken out. The widow and Richard and his wife were all living in the house when White died, and continued there afterwards—the widow, until her decease, about six years ago, and Richard and his wife to the present time, they being, after her decease, in the sole occupation. The house is one tenement. No rent was ever demanded or paid but the quit-rent, and that by Richard. Thomas White lived close to the house. Lord Ellenborough. "The presumption raised in Rex v. Cold Ashton, post, was, that the pauper and his wife had agreed with the other children for their shares: no such presumption has been drawn here; nor do I think the case admits of it. There is not any circumstance from which to infer an abandonment by any of the parties to the others of their right. According to the facts, there was neither exclusive right nor exclusive possession. Had there been a sole occupation, I am not prepared to say it would have been enough in the present case, although it may be in the case of a sole next of kin." Abbott, J., said, "In order to determine in favour of a settlement, it must be presumed either that administration was granted to Richard, his wife, or the widow. Are we at liberty to make such a presumption? The sessions are judges of the fact and law. They have not done it, and, in my opinion, they have done right; for the acts and conduct of the parties must be taken together before any presumption can be raised; and we find from these (so stated in the case), so far from a presumption arising that the father was settled in Corfe, that about fourteen or fifteen years ago he received relief from Canford, being resident in Corfe. The sessions therefore could not do otherwise than conclude that at that time Richard had not acquired a settlement in Corfe."

Pauper resided for many years in the same house with his father-in-law, who had a lease for 99 years, determinable on three lives. Pauper added to his part of the house, and by agreement paid the rent (7*s*.). After his father-in-law's death, who left

Rex v. Okeford Fitzpaine. Removal of W. Brown from Bere Regis to Okeford Fitzpaine. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was born in the parish of Okeford Fitzpaine. In 1761, W. Phelps took a lease of a tenement in Bere Regis for ninety-nine years, determinable upon three lives,—his own, that of his wife, and that of a son named Henry,—at a rent of 7*s*. a year. The tenement consisted, at that time, of two cottages, with outhouses, garden, and other appurtenances. W. Phelps entered and continued in possession, except as hereinafter mentioned, till the time of his death. About fifty years ago the pauper, who had married Priscilla, daughter of W. Phelps, was invited by his father-in-law to reside on the premises; and upon that invitation went to reside there with his wife.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

also three sons, the pauper and his wife and two of the sons resided on the premises, and the pauper resided there till the end of the term, which was above thirty years from his death; but there was no will, and no administration was taken out: Held, that no settlement was gained, there being no legal estate in pauper, nor adverse possession.

The part of the premises inhabited by the pauper and his wife had been a fuel-house under the same roof with the dwelling of W. Phelps, and having the same outer door. They had also a portion of the garden allotted to them. The pauper, at his own expense, converted the fuel-house into a habitation, and two or three years afterwards pulled down the front of that part of the building which he occupied, and built it up again a few feet in advance of its former position, carrying on the side walls to the new front, throwing out a new door in the latter, and building up the old interior communication with the other part of the dwelling. He also built a carpenter's shop on a part of the garden which was allotted to him. By an arrangement between the pauper and his father-in-law, the former, both before and after the alteration of the building, paid the whole of the annual rent, and continued to pay it until the death of W. Phelps. W. Phelps died in 1791, leaving a widow, and three sons, Henry, John, and another son, and a daughter Priscilla, the wife of the pauper. After the death of W. Phelps, the pauper and his wife continued in the occupation of the same part of the premises, the pauper and John and Henry Phelps each paying a third of the annual rent. About ten or eleven years ago, a part of the premises occupied as a separate dwelling by John Phelps, having fallen into decay, John Phelps went away, and from that time the pauper had possession of that part, and paid two-thirds of the rent. And under these circumstances he continued to occupy until the last of the three lives dropped, in 1823, when the lease determined. Since 1823 he has continued in possession of the same premises by permission of the landlord, paying the same annual rent. The pauper, during the whole time of his occupation, repaired the part of the premises occupied by him, and once before the death of his father-in-law paid the highway rate. W. Phelps died intestate. No letters of administration were ever taken out. Nothing in writing passed between W. Phelps and the pauper. The question was, whether by possession for more than twenty years, the pauper had not such an estate in the premises as gave him a settlement in Bere Regis? Bayley, J. "In order to acquire a settlement in Bere Regis the pauper must have an estate; but neither he nor his wife had any estate. The father of the wife, William Phelps, had an estate for ninety-nine years, determinable on three lives. Upon his death that estate, being a chattel interest, would pass to his personal representative. Nothing was done to vest it in the pauper or his wife. No letters of administration were taken out by them. The estate would not vest in the widow, or in any of the next of kin, until letters of administration had been granted; and it belonged to the ordinary, according to his discretion, to grant administration to the widow or any of the next of kin. In Rex v. Cold Ashton it was said, that some agreement ought to be presumed between the pauper and the other next of kin; but I think we are not at liberty to make any such presumption in this case. Rex v. Canford Magna (p. 870) bears upon this case in all its points. There the father of the pauper went to live in the house of John White, in Corfe Mullen, and married White's daughter. The house was held by White, determinable on a lease of ninety-nine years (as in this case). White died, leaving a widow and Thomas and Ann, his only children, surviving him. It did not appear that letters of administration were taken out. The widow, the father of the pauper, and his wife, were all living in White's house at the time of his death, and continued to live there afterwards; the widow, until after her decease, about six years before the order of removal was made, and the father of the pauper and his wife down to that time, they being, after her decease, in the sole occupation. The occupation was by the widow, and the father of the pauper and his wife, about thirty years altogether. It was insisted that the court might presume that the father of the pauper and his wife had agreed with the other parties interested for their shares; but the court were of opinion that no such presumption could be drawn. I think that case is not distinguishable from the present, and, consequently, that the pauper did not gain any settlement by estate, and that the order of sessions is right." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion. It appears that W. Phelps died possessed of an estate for ninety-nine years, determinable on three lives, and letters of administration might have been granted to the widow or any of the next of kin; but they never were granted. The actual property in the leasehold estate would not, after the death of W. Phelps, vest in the widow or any of the next of kin till administration. But then, it is said, that the pauper gained an estate by adverse possession. It appeared that he married the daughter of W. Phelps, and during his life resided on a part of the premises; that Phelps died in 1791; that the pauper and his wife, and two of his wife's brothers, then occupied the property, the pauper and his wife taking a third. Three out of the four children of W. Phelps, after his death, therefore, continued in possession of part of the estate till one of them quitted the portion occupied by him, and then the other two (one being the wife of the pauper) had possession of that part, and the pauper afterwards paid two-thirds of the rent. The lease expired in 1823. There was nothing like adverse possession. Against whom could it be adverse? Only against the widow and the other sons. But neither of them had any legal interest in the property; and the possession, to confer a right, must be adverse against a person having title." Parke, J. "This case is not distinguishable from Rex v. Canford Magna. In Rex v. Cold Ashton, there was an exclusive possession by the pauper and his wife after the death of the father. But here, after the death of W. Phelps, there was no such exclusive possession by the pauper and his wife. The leasehold premises were occupied by them jointly with others, each of the occupiers paying an equal proportion of rent. In Rex v. Canford Magna the widow, the pauper and his wife, and after the death of the widow the pauper and his wife, lived on the property, to the exclusion of others; but it was there held, that there had been no exclusive possession on which a right could be founded. Here the pauper's occupation at first was a tenancy at will. After the death of the intestate, there was no person against whom there could be any adverse possession. As to drawing presumption of any agreement, there is nothing to presume, because, before there could be any legal title to convey, letters of administration must have been granted. Order of sessions confirmed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

3. Trustee and Cestui que Trust.

estator devised his real estate to trustees, to sell and divide the proceeds among his nine children, the share of such of his daughters as should be married at his decease to be to their separate use. The pauper, before testator's death, married one of the daughters, and resided with her in a house, part of the above estate, paying rent weekly to the testator. He resided also two years after testator's death, and before the real estate was sold, paying the rent to the trustees: Held, that he gained no settlement.

3. Trustee and Cestui que Trust. (a)

Reg. v. St. Margaret, Leicester, 1 G. & D. 625; 2 Q. B. 559. J. Inge was removed from St. Margaret, Leicester. Order quashed. Case:—John Norton, of Leicester, being seised of fourteen freehold houses, situate in the parish of St. Margaret, in the borough of Leicester, by his will, bearing date on or about the 24th of October, 1832, and duly executed and attested to pass real estates, after directing the payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, and certain pecuniary legacies, which he thereinafter bequeathed, out of his personal estate gave, subject thereto, all his personal estate, and also gave, devised, and bequeathed all his lands, messuages, tenements, hereditaments, and real estate whatsoever and wheresoever, unto R. Rawson and T. Cooper, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever, upon trust, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, to sell and dispose thereof, either by public auction or by private contract, for the best price that could be obtained for the same, and stand possessed of the monies arising from such sale, after payment of the costs and expenses attendant thereon, upon trust to pay and divide the same equally between and amongst the testator's nine children, being five daughters and four sons, respectively enumerated in the will. And as to the shares of such of the testator's daughters as should be married at the time of his decease, the testator gave and bequeathed the same to and for their own, sole, separate, and absolute use and benefit and advantage; and he directed that their respective receipts alone should be sufficient discharges for the same. The trustees were authorised to reimburse themselves, out of the trust monies, the expenses of executing the trusts of the will; and their conveyances of the devised premises to the purchasers, and their receipts for the purchase-money were declared to be effectual and sufficient. J. Norton died about the 23rd of November, 1832. The real estate consisted of the freehold houses above-mentioned. The pauper married Ann Norton, one of the testator's nine children, mentioned in his will, in 1823. Some time prior and up to the testator's death, the pauper, with his wife and family, occupied one of the said houses, in St. Margaret, as his tenant, at the rent, first of 2*s*., and afterwards at 1*s*. 10*d*. per week. After the testator's death, the pauper continued to occupy the same house, and paid the same weekly rent of 1*s*. 10*d*., as tenant to the trustees, to a collector employed by them to collect the rents for the fourteen houses. The trustees every month divided the whole sum so collected equally amongst the nine children of the testator, and the share received by the pauper, on such division, was generally 8*s*. or 10*s*. per week. The pauper resided more than forty days after the death of the testator in the house, so occupied by him as tenant as aforesaid. The pauper continued to reside, and the trustees to receive and divide the rents in the manner above-mentioned, for nearly two years after the death of the testator. The testator's real estates were sold by the trustees in 1834, and the proceeds of the sale, after payment of the expenses attendant thereon, were equally divided amongst the testator's nine children. The pauper received his wife's share, amounting to 54*l*. 19*s*. Lord Denman, C. J. "Rex v. Natland (a) is not a very good ground to rest the settlement in this case upon. Gould, J. decided that case as an arbitrator, and the facts on which he decided do not seem to be very clearly ascertained." Patteson, J. "It is doubtful whether the statement of facts is correct in Rex v. Natland. In most of these cases where the settlement has been allowed, there has either been only one person entitled, or there has been an agreement between the several persons entitled. It appears too here that the pauper resided on the property as tenant." Coleridge, J. "This case may be decided on two

(a) As to the equity of redemption, see Rex v. Cregrina, p. 893.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

(a) Rex v. Natland, Burr. S. C. 793. T. Gibson and his wife were removed from Natland to Stainton. Order quashed. Case for the opinion of the judge of assize, and agreed to be determined by his opinion. Allan Court, by his will, devised his estate at Natland to his wife during her widowhood, and after the determination thereof to trustees to sell, and divide the money equally among his children, of whom the wife of the pauper was one. The testator died, the widow entered and let part of the estate to farm, reserving to herself a dwelling-house, which was worth about 30*s*. a year. The pauper, being reduced in his circumstances, came with his wife to live with her mother, the widow, in part of the dwelling-house: the widow died in June, 1769, the pauper and his wife continuing in possession of that part of the dwelling-house. In about a month after the death of the widow the trustees contracted for the sale of the estate, and in February following a conveyance was executed, the children of the devisor being no parties thereto. The pauper paid no rent to the widow; but, from her death, he paid rent to the purchaser until May-day following, when he quitted the premises. Upon this it was insisted that as the pauper and his wife inhabited in Natland in part of the house devised as aforesaid, from her mother's death, in June, till the same was conveyed in February following, and she being entitled to a distributive share of the money to be raised by sale of the said devised premises, the pauper was not removable during that time, and, consequently, gained a settlement in Natland. The opinion of the judge was given in writing in these words: "I have heard counsel on both sides, and am of opinion the settlement is in Natland. H. Gould." Afterwards a rule was obtained in K. B. to quash the order. But it was objected against the court's entering at all into the matter, for the judge having heard counsel and given his opinion in writing, this ought to be final, otherwise no judge of assize will ever hereafter accept a reference of this kind. The court saw it in the same light; and Lord Mansfield, C. J., observed, that here was a manifest consent of the parties to this reference to the judge, and therefore it was, like all other references, by consent. He intimated that, as at present advised, he was of opinion with the judge; however, after this consent, he thought it very improper to take the matter up again.

Where an estate was devised to a wife during her widowhood, and then to be sold for the benefit of the children; one of them, after the death of the widow, continued to live therein, and gained a settlement.

Reference to judge of assize.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

grounds. First, the pauper appears to have resided as tenant. Secondly, it is at all times a delicate matter for us to take cognisance of equitable rights, but we have one broad rule that we will notice nothing but a clear right, and will not go into doubtful cases of equity. Here there were nine persons interested in the devised property, and nothing has been done by agreement between them to turn it into real estate. I would rather not put our decision upon Rex v. Geddington, which is of doubtful authority, and it is not necessary to do so." Wightman, J. "I think there was not such an equitable right here as to bring the case within the rule laid down in Rex v. Toddington (p. 889), and Rex v. Berkswell (p. 866). There were nine persons interested, and the concurrence of all would have been necessary to induce a court of equity to convert the devised property: the power of sale would be much prejudiced if the whole could not be sold." Order of sessions quashed.

Where an estate was devised for sale, but one of the devisees took by agreement with the others, he gains a settlement.

Rex v. Wivelingham, Doug. 767. Robert Bittany, late husband of the pauper, Mary Bittany, came with a certificate from Haddenham to Wivelingham. Elizabeth Bittany, by her will, devised her estate at Wivelingham to trustees to be sold, and the money arising from the sale to be divided between Robert and three daughters of William Bittany. They agreed among themselves that Robert should have the real estate, and the three daughters the personalty amongst them; whereupon the trustees conveyed the real estate to Robert, (a) who entered and resided thereupon several years. It was insisted, that Robert had taken no interest of any kind in the lands by the will, neither legal nor equitable. He had only a right to call upon the trustees to sell the estate, and distribute the money arising from the sale. On the other hand, it was argued that Robert had clearly an equitable title under the will: all the parties had agreed that the trustees should not sell; and that it was clearly settled that a residence on one's own estate, coming either by descent or devise, whether the legal interest be coupled with the equitable or not, and whatever the value is, will gain a settlement, and discharge a certificate. Lord Mansfield, C. J. mentioned Roper v. Radcliffe, (9 Mod. 167, 181,) to show that a devisee of the surplus arising from the sale of lands, after payment of debts and legacies, has an equitable interest in the lands themselves, it being in his option to pay the debts and legacies, and keep the land. Willes, J. said, "The same question in this case had occurred in Rex v. Natland (p. 873, n.), which was referred to Mr. J. Gould, who decided that a settlement was gained: and that his opinion had been recognised by the court, and in the present case the court were unanimous, that Robert hereby vacated the certificate, and consequently gained a settlement."

The devisee of an equity of redemption has such an estate as will give her a settlement by residence in the parish.

The solvency of the estate immaterial.

Rex v. Aslackby, 6 N. & M. 582; 5 A. & E. 200. Elizabeth Hanson, widow of William Hanson, was removed from Aslackby to Pointon. Order quashed. Case:—In 1825, William Hanson, who had acquired a settlement in Pointon, purchased land in Aslackby for 670*l.*, which land was conveyed to him for life, with trustees to bar dower, remainder to him in fee, in 1828, and was immediately mortgaged to Mr. B. Smith for 450*l.* In May, 1830, W. Hanson died seised of the land, the said mortgage debt, with a considerable arrear of interest, being still a charge thereon. By will, dated 24th May, 1830, and legally executed for passing real estates, W. Hanson devised all his real and personal estate to Caswell and Wilkinson, in trust to sell and to apply the proceeds in payment of his debts, due on mortgage or specialty or simple contract, and the interest of debts carrying interest, and also his funeral expenses, and to pay the residue to his wife (the pauper) for her own use and benefit; to which words he added, "and I give and bequeath the same moneys and premises accordingly." And he appointed Caswell and Wilkinson his executors. W. Hanson died soon after the date of his will, which was duly proved by the executors.

(a) This was not considered as a purchase of the estate by Robert; for as he resided at W. under a certificate, he could not, by the purchase of lands, &c., acquire a settlement.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

After his death, his trustees and executors possessed themselves of all his personal estate, consisting of household goods and furniture, cows, horses, waggons, and stock in trade. They have occupied all his real estate, but have rendered no account to his widow, who, with her children, has resided for the last three years with her father in Aslackby. Upwards of a year after her husband's death, and whilst the pauper was so resident in Aslackby, Caswell, on her application for assistance, paid to her 30*s.* by two payments, on account. The respondents called the attorney for the executors, who proved that the estate had been put up for sale, but that no offer had been made for it, and that a large arrear of interest had become due since the decease of W. Hanson, and that the executors and devisees would be glad to sell the estate for the amount of principal and interest. The respondents then called Caswell, who was interrogated as to the solvency of W. Hanson's real and personal estate; but the appellants objected to the inquiry on the ground that the sessions was not the proper tribunal for such an inquiry, and that as the pauper, who was alone interested in the matter, never had been apprized of the state of her husband's affairs, or furnished with the particulars or any account thereof, the court could not enter upon the subject either of accounts or of the present value of the estate remaining unsold and in the occupation of the executors, as these were matters to be adjusted either by the parties themselves or by the Court of Chancery. The sessions concurred in this objection, and quashed the order, subject to question as to the admissibility of the evidence, and whether the pauper took under the will a sufficient estate to confer a settlement, in the absence of any adjustment of her husband's affairs. Littledale, J. "I think that the pauper had an equitable estate sufficient to confer a settlement. Her husband, being indebted by mortgage and otherwise to a considerable amount, devises in trust to sell and to apply the proceeds in payment of all his debts, and also of his funeral and testamentary expenses, and to pay the residue to his wife (the pauper) for her own use and benefit; to which words he added, that he gave and bequeathed the same moneys and premises accordingly. It appears that the estate is still in mortgage, and that the devisees and executors would be glad to sell the estate for the amount of principal and interest. But they have also the personal estate: it does not appear to what extent. Non constat, but it may be sufficient to pay off the amount due to the mortgagee, and also the other debts; in which case the pauper would be entitled to a conveyance of the estate. If she is so entitled, she has an equitable estate. Then it is said that the pauper did not reside upon the estate. She did not: but she resided in the parish. The devisees held, but they did not hold adversely. It appears to me to be the same thing as if she had resided upon the estate herself. It is said that the widow would have no right to go into a court of equity until the debts were paid. That is very true; but she has, nevertheless, an equitable estate. The cases cited against her settlement are cases of purchasers, which are very different. The only case that seems to bear upon the point is Rex v. Berkswell (p. 866). There, a lease for thirty years, of a cottage, had been granted to Hands, who resided in it above a year, and died, leaving a widow and three daughters. Administration was granted to the widow, but no distribution of the estate was made. The widow, and, by her permission, one of the daughters, with her husband, afterwards resided in the cottage for some years. It was held that the daughter, or her husband in her right, had not any equitable estate in the cottage, and that no settlement was gained by their residence in it. Abbott, C. J., says, 'I am clearly of opinion that the pauper (the daughter's husband) had not any such interest as would have enabled him to say, 'I will come and reside on this property.' If the widow of Hands had refused to let him do so, a court of equity would not have assisted him. The next of kin had not even an equitable interest, but had a mere right to an account, and perhaps upon that it might have turned out that the widow had paid debts to a greater amount than the value of the leasehold property in question.' Here the residue, after payment of debts, is all

Party may have an equitable estate and yet no right to go into a court of equity.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

devised to the pauper. She might have filed a bill to compel the devisees and executors to pay the debts, and, if there was sufficient without selling the estate, might have demanded a conveyance of it to her. Until sale, I think she certainly had an equitable estate. The sessions were an incompetent tribunal to try whether a man's estate is solvent or not. Besides, it is quite immaterial. The widow might have had money of her own sufficient to pay off the debts." Patteson, J. "This is in truth a devise by a mortgagor in possession of the equity of redemption. The trustees are to pay the debts, and the residue is for the sole benefit of the wife; and the question is, whether she took any equitable estate. It is immaterial what the value of the equitable estate may be. This is not a case under 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5, of a purchase,—but of an estate coming to the pauper by operation of law. Roper v. Ratcliffe, 9 Mod. 167, and Rex v. Natland (p. 873, n.), are in point. The question is, not whether the pauper had any beneficial interest, but whether she had any equitable estate. The situation of the pauper in this case comes most precisely within the decision in Roper v. Ratcliffe, as stated by Lord Mansfield in Rex v. Wivelingham; and Rex v. Natland, which is quoted by Gould, J., in the same case, is also much the same. The pauper did not reside upon the premises, and it is argued that she had no right to reside. I do not know whether, under this will, she would have the right to reside or not. That might be a question. The devisees and executors, however, in fact resided as trustees. This is, I think, a clear case of trustees and cestui que trust. Rex v. Geddington is a case of a purchaser, and depending upon the act of 9 Geo. I.; and Holroyd, J., there says, 'If you show that the vendor and vendee stood merely in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust, then the latter would have an equitable estate and gain a settlement.' This comes exactly within that position. In that case it was held, that no settlement was gained, because the parties did not stand in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust. The only remaining question is, whether the position of the pauper could be altered by going into the question of assets. I think that quite immaterial. The question is merely whether any equitable estate passed. In Rex v. Darlington, infra, which is a different case, I would just mention that no question was raised, but that if there had been a clear devise of the surplus, the pauper would have gained a settlement; but it was held that, looking at the will, it was clear that the pauper was only one of several persons to whom the trustees might, at their discretion, have given the rents, if there had been any to dispose of." Williams, J. "It is too late to raise the question whether a person, having an equitable estate, can gain a settlement in respect of such estate. That has long been entirely settled. The only question is, whether this was an equitable estate. The argument against the settlement is based upon the assumption, that if the estate had been sold the pauper would have got nothing. But that is immaterial. The question is, what is the nature of the interest which she takes under this will. The devisees are trustees for the pauper, who is the person equitably entitled. That in a great degree disposes of the other question. Letting alone the question whether the sessions is a proper tribunal for an inquiry of the nature proposed,—I think it was immaterial, because any inquiry of that sort could not change the nature of the interest. It is not necessary to reside actually on the estate. It is sufficient if the party have an equitable estate in the parish in which he resides. The possession of the devisees in this case was not adverse, but as trustees for the pauper." Order of sessions confirmed.

A devise to the use of trustees in fee, in trust (after payment of debts) to receive the rents for the benefit of her brother, M. S., his wife and children, all or any of them,

Rex v. Darlington, 5 M. & Sel. 493. Order for removal of Elizabeth, widow of Meriton Sedgwick, from Brompton to Darlington, confirmed. Case:—Mary Sedgwick devised a dwelling-house, with appurtenances, in Brompton, to the use of G. Jackson and W. Marwood, in trust for her niece, M. A., daughter of her brother, Meriton Sedgwick, with remainder to three of his children. She also devised her other messuages and real estate, situate in Brompton, and all her personal estate, after payment of her just debts and funeral expenses, to the trustees, in trust, to receive and pay the yearly proceeds thereof, for the benefit of her brother, his wife and children, all or any of them, during his life, as they should think proper; and she appointed the trustees her executors. The testatrix died on the 20th of June, 1815, and upon her death, Meriton and his family went to reside at Brompton. Meriton S. did not occupy any part of the premises devised in trust for him, but he occupied, by permission of the trustees, another cottage, worth 3*l.* or 4*l.* per annum, part of the property of the testatrix, devised in trust for M. A. Sedgwick, and resided therein from June, 1815, until his death on the 28th of December following. Meriton S., at the time of the testatrix's death, and also at his decease, was an uncertificated bankrupt. The personal estate of the estate, and the rents and profits of the premises, were insufficient for the payment of her debts, and the trustees did not pay or appropriate any part of the rents or profits for the benefit of Meriton S. or his wife, or any of their children, during the life of Meriton, the same being applied to the discharge of the testatrix's debts; and a considerable portion of debt remained undischarged at the time of Meriton's decease. The question was, whether Meriton took under the devise such an interest as enabled him to gain a settlement by his residence at Brompton. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "It was evidently the purpose of the testatrix, knowing probably that her brother, Meriton, was an uncertificated bankrupt, to abstain from giving him any vested interest, and therefore she leaves this matter entirely in the control of the trustees. After hearing the argument, I am clearly of opinion that there is not a scintilla of interest in Meriton, either legal or equitable, which entitled him to reside irremovably in the parish. He was only one of several persons to whom the trustees might, in their discretion, have given the rents, if there had been any to dispose of." Bayley, J. "The only question submitted to our consideration is respecting the interest of Meriton, as to which, it seems to me, that it is only by losing sight of the real question that any doubt can be raised. The foundation of this head of settlement is, that a man is not to be removed from his own. But here the trustees had the estate; first, for the payment of debts, which they were unable to pay in the life-time of Meriton, and consequently were not in a condition to empower him to take any thing." Abbott, J. "If Meriton had taken an equitable interest the intention of the testatrix would have been defeated; because whatever he took, being an uncertificated bankrupt, it would have passed to his assignees." Order confirmed.

during his life, as they should think proper, and, after his decease, in trust for her nephew, &c.: Held, that M. S., who, after the death of testatrix, by permission of the trustees, occupied until his death a cottage in the township where the lands devised were situate, did not acquire a settlement thereby; the rents and profits of the lands having been insufficient to pay testatrix's debts; and M. S., at the testatrix's decease, and from that time until his own decease, being an uncertificated bankrupt.

Rex v. Woburn, Burr. S. C. 680; 2 Bott, 528. The paupers (two sisters) resided at E. under a certificate from Woburn. A person entitled to a long term of years in a cottage in Eversholt, after having devised it to Andrew Powell, son of their father William Powell, adds, "it is also my will and pleasure that William Powell (their father), his wife and children, shall have free liberty and power during their life to dwell in it." And accordingly, W. P. and his wife, and their son A. P., and the two daughters, (the paupers), resided in it till W. P.'s death. The court held clearly that the settlement of the two paupers was in Eversholt.

A leasehold cottage is devised to A. P., with liberty to the paupers to dwell therein during their lives; by residence under the will they gain a settlement.

Rex v. Owersby-le-Moor, 15 East, 356. Mary, wife of W. Saltfleet, deceased, schoolmaster, was removed from Maltby to Owersby-le-Moor. Order confirmed. Case:—In 1705 Mrs. Bolle devised a farm in Maltby-le-Marsh to certain persons and their heirs, in trust, to employ the rents yearly to the poor of the town 40*s.*, and the rest yearly to a fit person, to be nominated and elected by the trustees, who should be a schoolmaster, to teach the poor children of Maltby to read the Bible. On June 13, 1807, the following agreement was entered into between W. Saltfleet and James Digby and Catherine Digby his wife (the heir-at-law of the only surviving trustee appointed by the will). "Memorandum of an agreement made 13th of June, 1807, between J. D. and C. D. his wife, of the one part, and W. S. schoolmaster of the other part; Whereas J. D. in right of his wife is entitled to a school-house, &c. situated at Maltby, which they have agreed to let unto W. S.: W. S. shall have the possession and the use and occupation of the school-house, yard, garden, and premises, for the purpose

W. S., a schoolmaster, occupied a school house, yard, &c., under trustees, appointed by will, and directed to appoint such master: Held, that the appointment gave W. S. a life interest therein, and a settlement by forty days' residence.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

of teaching the poor children of M. to read in the Bible, pursuant to the will of Mrs. B.; and in consideration of W. S. agreeing to teach children, &c., he is to reside upon the premises rent free, and to be paid by J. D. and C. his wife, a salary for the first year that he shall so teach, of 10*l.*, such year to commence from the 1st August next, and 15*l.* for every year after. [Then a covenant by D. to pay as aforesaid. Then further agreement, that in case any reasonable complaint shall be made to J. D. and C., &c., it shall be lawful for him, &c., to suspend the salary of W. S. for two years, and apply the same to such purposes as J. and C. D., &c., shall think proper, without being liable to make any remuneration to W. S. In case of the death of W. S., it shall be lawful for J. D. and C. his wife, to turn out from the premises the executors of W. S., and to appoint another person to the situation of schoolmaster thereto, in such manner as he, &c., may think proper.] W. S. (June 13, 1807,) entered upon the school-house, &c., being part of the farm so devised in trust, and resided upon those premises till his death, about three years and a half afterwards. He taught the children to read during that time, and received from J. D., for the first year, a salary of 10*l.*, and afterwards a salary of 15*l.* per annum. The annual value of the school-house, yard, and garden, is about 5*l.* The remainder of the devised premises, consisting of a farm-house and twenty acres of land, was occupied by C. Barton, the tenant of J. D., at the rent of 52*l.* 10*s.* per annum. The court of sessions thought the above appointment fraudulent, and in no respect consistent with the will. Per Curiam: "We are of opinion that a settlement was obtained in Maltby-le-Marsh. The agreement of the 13th June, 1807, was we think in substance an appointment of Saltfleet to the situation of schoolmaster, to teach the poor children of Maltby to read the Bible: and though the sessions have stated that that appointment was fraudulent, and in no respect consistent with the will of Mrs. Bolle, it is clear that their meaning is not that it was a colourable appointment, under which he was not to discharge the duties of a schoolmaster, but that it was an appointment upon such terms as tended to deprive him of a great part of the emoluments attached to the situation. There was no fraud in him: he was to discharge every duty the situation of schoolmaster required; but the fraud was in those who appointed him, in attempting to withhold from him what Mrs. Bolle's will entitled him to receive. By that will the schoolmaster was to have all the profits of a farm at Maltby, except the yearly sum of 40*s.*, which was to be paid to the poor of the parish. The schoolmaster therefore for the time being was, to a considerable extent, to the extent of all but 40*s.* a year, the cestui que trust of the farm; and had the trustees kept in their own hands sufficient to raise the 40*s.* a year, and put the rest into the possession of the schoolmaster, they could not have dispossessed him whilst he continued schoolmaster, unless he had misused the property, or unless what they retained to raise the 40*s.* a-year had proved insufficient for that purpose. In this case the trustees allowed Saltfleet to have the possession of a house, yard, and garden, which were part of this farm, and they retained what was greatly more than sufficient to answer the 40*s.* a-year. He had this possession therefore not by purchase, so as to be within the statute 9 Geo. I. c. 7; not by renting, so as to be within the statute 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12; but in the character of a cestui que trust, residing upon what was for the time substantially his own; and as the trustees could not have removed him, we are of opinion that this residence for more than forty days gave him a settlement in this parish." Orders quashed.

An appointment inconsistent with the trust is not fraudulent.

The rent must be appropriated to the schoolmaster, and not generally to the school.

Rex v. Melborne, Burr. S. C. 244; 2 Bott, 239. The pauper's husband, during his residence at Melborne, officiated as schoolmaster there. During his continuance in the school, certain lands were by deed indented and inrolled conveyed in trust to permit certain persons, being vicars of certain parishes and the succeeding vicars, to take the profits thereof, to employ the same for certain purposes: one of which was as follows: "Also the yearly sum of 10*l.* to the charity school of Melborne, to be paid to the vicar for the time being." This sum was yearly received by the pauper's husband from the vicar of Melborne. It was held that this annuity of 10*l.* per annum did not appear to be appropriated to the schoolmaster, and that he had no freehold in it, and could therefore gain no settlement by receiving it.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Rex v. Holm East Waver Quarter, 16 East, 127. Removal of Jane Anderson, single woman, and her child, aged five years, from Holm E. W. Quarter to Aicton, confirmed as to the child, but quashed as to the mother. Case :—Jane Anderson's father, Daniel Anderson, purchased an estate for less than 30*l.* in Holm and died, having devised it to a trustee in trust to let the same to farm during the life of his daughter, and to pay her the rent; and after her death to his right heirs. The pauper J. A. continued to reside upon the premises for more than forty days after the death of her father, the trustee never having interfered. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "This species of settlement does not depend upon any term in a statute, but is an excepted case in the law, standing upon the rule, that a man shall not be removed from his own while his trustee permits him to occupy it, and from which nobody else had a right to remove him. Here the pauper did not reside in the character of a tenant: and whether the estate here were legal or equitable, it was still the pauper's own, and she could not be removed from it." Order confirmed.

A father devised a cottage and land purchased for less than 30*l.* in trust to be let to farm during the life of his daughter, and to pay her the rents after deducting expenses: Held, that by forty days' residence thereon by permission of the trustee, the daughter gained a settlement.

Rex v. Thruscross, 3 Nev. & M. 284; 1 Ad. & E. 126. Removal of J. Fryer from Thruscross to High and Low Bishopside, both in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Order discharged. Case :—The pauper's grandfather was the devisee of a copyhold estate in High and Low Bishopside, under the will of one Furniss. On the death of the devisor in 1780, the grandfather took possession of the estate under the devise; and the pauper's father, then about sixteen years of age, lived with him there as a member of his family till 1789, when he married; but the grandfather was not admitted tenant of the property in question before the year 1790. To prove a surrender of the copyhold to the use of Furniss's will, the steward of the manor was called, who produced the book of the records of the manor, and read from it a record of the admittance, reciting a surrender of the property in question, made in 1774, to the use of the will. He also stated that he had not been able to find the surrender itself upon the roll or elsewhere, except as recited in the admittance: that the old surrenders appeared to have been kept in a very loose and irregular manner; that the originals were very often not to be found; and further, that there were many surrenders to the use of wills on the records, the originals of which were not to be found; but that he had not been able to discover any other instance in which there was not either the original surrender itself, or a record of a surrender on the court rolls. The questions for the opinion of the court were stated to be, whether, under these circumstances, the entry in the book of the records of the manor was evidence of a surrender to the use of the will? whether the admittance of the pauper's grandfather in 1790 had relation back to his possession in 1780? and whether the residence of the grandfather for more than forty days, he having the right of admittance, was sufficient to confer a settlement by estate? Lord Denman, C. J. "I think this case is clear of doubt. The principle is, that a man is not to be removed from that which he has a right to enjoy. Here the pauper's grandfather had a right to enjoy the copyhold without being removed by the parish officers. I think the overseers, if they had presumed to remove him, would have been liable to an action. In several cases an interest as feeble as this has been held sufficient for a settlement." Littledale, J. "I think that the admission relates back to the time of the devisor's death for this purpose as well as others. I agree that the grandfather had not an actual estate at the time of the emancipation; he could not then have devised it at law or equity. He was a mere occupier. Still he was an occupier who, by doing an act which he might at any time do, could have obtained the legal estate. The lord could have ejected him, but only for a short time; for he might immediately have claimed admittance. He had the substantial power over the land. And although the lord or the heir-at-law might have removed him for a time, the officers of the Devisee of copyhold was admitted after he had resided forty days thereon, and his son who had previously lived with him, became emancipated after the expiration of the forty days, and before the admittance: Held, that the father by such residence gained a settlement, which was communicated to the son. Parke, J. diss.

A record in the record book of a manor of an admittance to a copyhold, reciting the surrender of the same to the use of a will, is admissible evidence of such surrender, the original surrender being lost.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

parish had no right to do so; and if so, he became settled by forty days' residence under such circumstances." Parke, J. "I am not prepared to concur with the Lord Chief Justice and my brother Littledale, and should have wished for more time to consider the case. As at present advised, I think there was no settlement in the appellant parish. The question of evidence is disposed of: we must take it that a surrender to the use of the will is found by the sessions. The question then is, whether a settlement was gained by the grandfather before the pauper's father became emancipated. In the first place, there can be no doubt that admittance has relation back for some purposes, as to enable the devisee to avoid mesne incumbrances by another party. That relation, however, will not, in my opinion, operate so as to make the possessor irremovable in the mean time; he must have an interest before the admittance sufficient to make him irremovable. Then was the pauper's grandfather in this case removable in the meanwhile? He ought to have had a legal or an equitable estate; but that is not the condition of a copyholder before admittance. The law enables him to enforce a devise made in his favour; but he is not even obliged to accept such a devise. No case has yet gone so far as to allow a settlement to be created by that which is neither a legal nor an equitable estate." Patteson, J. "It appears to me that a settlement was gained by the pauper's father. It is true that he had no legal or equitable estate. That is, however, not absolutely necessary, according to Rex v. Holm East Waver Quarter (p. 879). Where a party can enforce the conveyance of a legal estate, and is in the occupation of it, that is sufficient to confer a settlement. Here the devisee had that right, and no one else had. He might have taken legal proceedings to compel the lord to admit him; and after he had enforced the admittance, he might have ousted the heir. Though I cannot find any case in which the court has professed to go the full length of this case, I think we may collect the principle that such an interest is sufficient. In Rex v. Holm East Waver Quarter there was neither legal nor equitable estate, though it is true that by the language of the court the decision seems to have turned on the notion that there was an equitable estate. It was held that an occupation, not as tenant, by permission of the trustee, as if the property had been the occupier's own, was sufficient to give a settlement. There the property was not the occupiers, nor could she have compelled a conveyance by any proceeding in equity. The facts of that case go further than those of the present. As to the first point, there can be no question but that the evidence was admissible." Order of sessions quashed.

4. Estate in Remainder or Reversion.

Tenant in remainder as such can acquire no settlement, there must be an immediate estate in possession.

Rex v. Eatington, 4 T. R. 177. Order of removal of John Harris from Eatington to Hooke Norton quashed. Case:—The pauper married the daughter of G. Malings. After the marriage, to induce the pauper and his wife to reside with and take care of him, by lease and release Malings granted a cottage to the pauper in fee, with this proviso, "that Malings was to live in and occupy the cottage as he had done, and then did for his life." The pauper paid nothing for it. The premises were then worth 30*l.* The pauper resided with Malings up to the time of the order. Lord Kenyon. "The material question is, whether an immediate estate in possession was vested in the pauper? for it is admitted, that unless an estate of present interest was conveyed, the pauper gained no settlement. If this had depended on the first words of the proviso, I should have thought that they would have been satisfied by determining that only a liberty to inhabit the cottage was reserved to the father; but the word 'occupy' carries it further, and shews that the whole estate was to be reserved to him. If such be the construction, the estate in remainder was not come into possession when the order was made, and consequently the pauper had not that which confers a settlement, viz. a present interest." Ashhurst, J. "The word 'occupy' shews that it is a reservation of the thing itself, of the whole estate; for a licence to occupy an estate for a particular time is a lease of the whole estate for that time."

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase. &c.

Rex v. Willoughby-with-Sloothby, 10 B. & C. 62; 5 M. & R. 32. Order of removal of W. Stokes, &c. from Huttoft to Willoughby confirmed. Case: —J. Neal, by lease and release dated 19th and 20th May, 1825, in consideration of 105*l.*, conveyed a parcel of land and two unfurnished dwelling-houses in Huttoft, to the use of Elizabeth Stokes for life, or during widowhood, remainder to the pauper in fee. The 105*l.* had been bequeathed by the father of the pauper to him, and the interest of which the pauper had subsequently by deed settled upon his mother for life or her widowhood; the principal after her death to be paid to himself; 50*l.* was expended by the pauper after the conveyance in furnishing the dwelling-houses, which sum his father had bequeathed in trust to pay the interest to the widow for life or widowhood, and the principal afterwards to the pauper. The pauper paid the interest of the 105*l.* to the trustees, who paid it over to the mother. The pauper entered upon one of the houses and part of the land at the time of the conveyance. The mother let the other house and remainder of the land for one year after the execution of the conveyance, at the expiration of which the mother told pauper she would deliver up all the premises to him, and he might do as he liked with them. The pauper then entered into possession of the other house and land, let it, received the rent, and never accounted for it to his mother; and continued to occupy the same house he had previously occupied until both were sold in May, 1828, and conveyed by deed, to which his mother, still a widow, was a party. The pauper received the whole of the purchase-money, and did not account for it to his mother. They both joined in the receipt to the purchaser. Bayley, J. "Ever since Rex v. Eatington (p. 880), it has been an established principle, that a party cannot gain a settlement by residence on an estate in which he has not a freehold vested in possession. Here the pauper had a freehold estate in expectancy only, viz. a remainder, which implies a preceding estate of freehold in some other person. The Rex v. Houghton-le-Spring (p. 882), and Rex v. Staplegrove (post), only shew that where a present estate of freehold is vested, the premises need not be in the owner's occupation. In the first of these cases the present freehold interest was vested in the pauper. In Rex v. Staplegrove, the estate of freehold in possession was in the pauper's wife, a chattel interest only having been granted by her father to the parish officers. In this case the pauper never had any other estate of freehold in the premises than one in remainder. His mother had the estate of freehold in possession." Littledale, J. concurred. Parke, J. "This question was expressly decided in Rex v. Eatington, and considered by the court as settled law in Rex v. Ringstead (p. 881)." Lord Tenterden, C. J. "I entirely concur in the judgment given by my learned brothers." Order confirmed.

A remainder man during the life of the tenant for life has not such an estate as to gain a settlement.

Rex v. Ringstead, 9 B. & C. 218; 4 M. & R. 67. The question in this case was, whether the pauper took an immediate estate in land devised by his grandfather; the devise was "to his daughter, widow of T. M., all that messuage, &c., for her life, if so long she continued a widow, and from and after her decease or day of marriage, he devised the messuage and all other real property unto the four children of T. M. and their heirs for ever, as tenants in common." The pauper was one of those children. Between 1817 and 1819, when the property was sold, he resided in Ringstead forty days; his mother being then a widow. Neither of the children was heir at law to the testator, and there was a devise of other property to him. It was urged that the pauper took an estate in fee expectant on the death or marriage of his mother, and had as much right to reside in the parish as if he had a reversion for a term of years. Contrà. It is a clear principle of settlement law that a party cannot gain a settlement by estate, unless he has a freehold in possession. He must have an estate of which he may be disseised. Bayley, J. "Upon that point the court do not feel any doubt. It was then urged that the pauper took an immediate interest in all that was not devised to his mother;" and judgment was given by Bayley, J.

A pauper entitled to a reversion in fee after the death of tenant for life, gains no settlement by residence in the parish.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

If the estate be leased, and the owner reside forty days upon it by leave of the lessee, for the purpose of making repairs, he is settled there.

who said, "We are of opinion that the pauper did not take an immediate estate, and that he is entitled to no estate until the tenant for life died." Rex v. Houghton-le-Spring, 1 East, 247. Removal from South Shields to Houghton-le-Spring confirmed. Case:—The pauper became entitled as heir to three copyhold houses, let at 6*l.* per annum, and to one freehold house at Sedgefield. Upon becoming so entitled, he let to R. W. the freehold house at 3*l.* per annum, the paupér undertaking to sink a cellar, and make some repairs in the premises. W. entered and occupied. The pauper, in pursuance of such agreement, went, after W. had possession, from Houghton to Sedgefield, for the sole purpose of sinking the cellar, and making the repairs. He was occupied upon the work for forty days, during the whole of which time he resided as a lodger in W.'s house. After finishing the work he returned to Houghton to his father, with whom he lodged. During the whole of the pauper's residence at S. the copyhold houses were in mortgage to R. W. for 40*l.* Rex v. Dunchurch (post) was cited to shew that where the property was leased to another, a residence upon it will not gain a settlement. (But per Lord Kenyon, C. J. That was the case of a purchase, and a distinction has always been taken between cases where the party came to his property by his own act, or by operation of law.) It was also said that the general expression which runs through all this class of cases, that a party shall not be removed from his own estate, seemed to imply that he must be in possession of it though he need not actually reside in it. On the other side it was argued, that in Rex v. Catherington (p. 891) the mortgagee was in possession, and there did not appear any surplus on which the interest of the mortgagor could attach; that in Rex v. St. Michael's, Bath (p. 890), the insolvent had conveyed all his interest to trustees, and no probability of a surplus; and the possession of it was afterwards fraudulently obtained by him. Here the pauper had a substantial freehold interest in the parish where he resided, and an undisputed residue in the copyhold premises. In Rex v. Sowton he resided not on his estate, but at an ale-house; yet he gained a settlement. Further, 1st, A man cannot be removed from his estate devolved on him by operation of law, whatsoever the value may be. 2d, A residence for forty days irremovable will gain a settlement, except in case of a purchase under 30*l.* 3d, It is enough to reside in the same parish. Ryslip v. Harrow (p. 853), Rex v. Sowton, Rex v. St. Nyott's (p. 854), Rex v. Hasfield (post). 4th, The party need not actually occupy his estate. It is sufficient to reside in the parish where he has a freehold. Lord Kenyon, C. J., was clear that a settlement was gained at Sedgefield, and said "That he was decided by the case of Hasfield, where the child, residing with his grandmother, could not be taken to have been in actual occupation of the property; nor did the judgment of the court proceed upon any such ground." (a) Grose, J., agreed, "That a mere residence in the parish where the estate was, was sufficient." Lawrence and Le Blanc, Js., doubted; but afterwards the court were all agreed that here was a settlement gained in Sedgefield. See also Rex v. Staplegrove, post.

5. By Widow's Right of Dower.

A widow before assignment of dower, does not gain a settlement unless in right of her quarantine.

5. By Widow's Right of Dower.

Rex v. Painswicke, 2 Bott, 627; Burr. S. C. 783. The widow of a man who died seised of a house and orchard in South Stoke, entered and resided therein for seven years, without any assignment of dower, and then married a second husband, who resided in this house with her about two years, and then died. The second husband was settled in Painswicke. The court were of opinion that the mere right of dower was not sufficient to gain a settlement in South Stoke for her second husband, the children by him, but that by Magna Charta she was entitled to remain forty days, and to have estovers; she might by residence for that time have a claim for a settlement.

(a) It is to be collected from a MS. note of the late Mr. Masterman that the boy in Rex v. Hasfield was not living on his estate. It also appears that the settlement of the same pauper came in question again in Ryslip v. Hendon, 5 Mod. 416, where Holt, C. J., incidentally said, "Let a man be settled where he will, we are all of opinion he may go and live where he has an estate, and therefore that he might have gone to the place where he had a freehold." 1 East, 258.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Rex v. Northweald Bassett, 2 B. & C. 724; 4 D. & R. 276. Millicent Reynolds, widow, and children, were removed from Northweald Bassett to Magdalen Laver. Order quashed. Case:—Richard Reynold's, the pauper's husband, died in May, 1822, seised of a freehold estate liable to dower in Northweald Bassett. Dower was not barred, but it had not been assigned, nor had any steps been taken for that purpose. The heir at law has been from the time of his birth an idiot, and at Richard's death was twenty-one years of age. In 1820, long after the marriage of Richard and Millicent, the estate was mortgaged for a term of 1000 years by Richard, to secure the payment of 100*l.* The mortgagee received from the tenant the full half year's rent which accrued after the death of Richard at Michaelmas last, out of which he paid the sum of 3*l.* to the pauper, and took from her the following receipt: "The 7th December, 1822, received of the heir at law of my late husband R. Reynolds, deceased, the sum of 3*l.*, by the payment of Richard Hauchin (the tenant), being my third share, as his widow, of the half year's rent of the freehold part of his estate at Thornwood Common, in Northweald Bassett, due Michaelmas last." R. R. lived in Magdalen Laver, and after his death the pauper, his widow, resided in that parish for some months, and then hired and lived in a cottage in Northweald Bassett, which was not on the husband's estate. Before her residence of forty days had been completed in that parish, she became chargeable, and was removed. It was urged that the payment of rent was equivalent to assignment. But Abbott, C. J. said, "The payment was made by the mortgagee, who had no power to bind the heir;" and he added, "Rex v. Painswicke is stronger in favour of the settlement claimed than the present case, for there the pauper had actually resided upon the property out of which the claim to a settlement arose. I think it is our safest course to abide by that decision. If we consider the nature of the widow's right to dower before assignment, it will be seen that she had not any right, either legal or equitable, to the land. Her legal right was to have dower assigned, her equitable right to have an account of the rents and profits. But in Rex v. Berkswell (p. 866) a right of that nature was held insufficient to confer a settlement. Upon the authority of those two cases, but particularly the former, that being a case of dower, I am of opinion that the widow of Richard Reynolds had not any right to reside in the parish of Northweald Bassett, and that the order of sessions must be quashed." (a)

A widow, before assignment of dower, has not such an interest in the land of which she is dowable, as to be irremovable from the parish in which the land lies.

Rex v. Long Wittenham, 4 Doug. 193. A certificate man purchased a freehold cottage in the township to which he was certificated, and died, leaving a widow and three children residing in the cottage at the time of his death, and who continued to reside there for ten weeks. The widow thereby acquired a settlement in right of her quarantine.

A widow may gain a settlement by residence in right of her quarantine.

6. By Wife's Estate in Trust.

6. By Wife's Estate in Trust.

Rex v. Offchurch, 3 T. R. 114. Henry West and his wife were removed from Thurlaston to Offchurch. Order affirmed. Case:—J. West was the father of the pauper. In January, 1767, his wife, who was mother of the pauper, died, and in June, 1767, J. West married Jane Lockley, with whom he lived in Offchurch until 1770, when they went to Southam. In 1773 they removed to Ladbroke, to a house there held under the following title [the case then stated that his house was vested by a settlement in trustees, to the separate use of the wife, with the usual clause that her receipt should be a discharge to the trustees for the rents and profits, and that the rents should not be subject to the husband's debts, &c.] West and his wife lived in the house ever since 1773. Lord Kenyon, C. J. said, "The question had some novelty in it; where a person resides on his own property, he gains a settlement by it, it having been considered as an excepted case out of the acts of parliament. Lord Macclesfield first held, that as a man cannot be disseised of his freehold he is irremovable from it, and residing forty days on an estate of his own irremovable, and gaining a settlement, are synonymous terms. That indeed does not hold in all cases now; for by 9 Geo. I. c. 7, a purchaser of an estate for less than 30*l.* shall not acquire a settlement for any longer time than he resides upon it. Then here, if this had been the father's own estate, the settlement would clearly have devolved on the son. But it is said that this is only the equitable estate of the wife. Now supposing it had been the wife's legal estate, the husband would have been seised jure uxoris, and by residing upon it would have gained a settlement. Then must it be a legal estate in order to confer a settlement? Certainly not. This was not doubted in South Sydenham v. Lamerton (p. 865), or in any of the other cases. The question in that case was, whether the next of kin, without administration, had any estate whatever? and it was, held that he had not. In Rex v. Cold Ashton, a doubt was made whether a next of kin having the sole right of administration could not gain a settlement without taking out letters of administration. That shows an equitable estate is sufficient to gain a settlement; and indeed this position is confirmed by many other cases, and there are none in opposition to it. (a) Then it is said that this is going still further, because this is only the equitable estate of the wife, and that even the wife herself had no right to reside upon it without the consent of the trustees. But she might, beyond all doubt, if she had chosen, have elected to take the esplees with her own hands, and that the trustees could not have prevented. The objection then against the husband's gaining a settlement here is too refined; for the wife had a right to reside on her property, and to communicate it to the husband. And although there is no case directly like the present, yet the principles of the decided cases go the length of determining this." The other judges assented, and both orders were quashed.

Where an estate is vested in trustees for the separate use of the wife, the husband may gain a settlement by residence upon it.

(a) As the widow did not reside in husband's death, she gained no settlement N. B. for the forty days next after her by her quarantine.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

A legal estate not necessary.

The husband of an administratrix entitled to the trust of a term only, gains a settlement by residence there for forty days.

Mursley v. Grandborough, 1 Stra. 97. Sir John Fortescue demised a cottage of 20*s.* a year to Eden for ninety-years, reserving 12*d.* rent: Eden assigns the term to Gadden in trust for his wife for life, and then in trust for his son, during the remainder of the term. The wife dies. Afterwards the son dies, leaving a wife, who, as administratrix to her husband, becomes entitled to this term; and she grants this cottage for twenty-four years, excepting two rooms (in which two rooms she lives), and marries John Chappel. The question was, whether Chappel, as husband of an administratrix, who was entitled to the trust of a term only, and as being entitled to a chattel in another's right only, was removable by 13 & 14 Car. II.? And by the court: "He is not: this is not a taking of a tenement under 10*l.*, for the 12*d.* is not reserved as a rent, but only an acknowledgment usually paid on long leases. The case of a copyhold is stronger than this, for that is but an estate at will. To strip the man of his own is the way to make him chargeable, for he may not be able to let it." Therefore the orders which adjudged this to be no settlement were quashed.

A woman, before marriage, purchases a tenement under 30*l.*, her husband, after marriage, resides on the premises, he thereby gains a settlement, and the settlement so gained will be communicated to her.

Rex v. Ilmington, Burr. S. C. 566; 1 Bla. Rep. 598. Elizabeth Stanley purchased a leasehold tenement in M. for 6*l.* for the remainder of a term of 1000 years. She resided upon it about nine years, and then married T. E., who resided with her upon the same tenement about sixteen years; then he died, and after his decease she continued upon the premises for several years, and at last sold the same for 6*l.*; and after such sale was removed to Ilmington, the place of her husband's settlement before their marriage. Order confirmed. It was urged, that this woman had an estate vested in her when Evans married her, which upon the marriage vested in him. The husband gained a settlement in Mickleton by forty days' residence upon his estate; and his settlement communicated itself to the wife. And of this opinion was the court. Orders quashed.

(a) Rex v. Geddington (post), and Rex v. Llantilio (post). The relation of trustee and cestui que trust must exist. It must be an equitable estate, and not an equitable right.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Rex v. Ynyscynhaiarn, 7 B. & C. 233; 1 M. & R. Mag. Ca. 77. Order of removal of Hugh Hughes, Elizabeth, his wife, and children, from Aberdaron to Ynyscynhaiarn confirmed. Case:—H. Williams, the father of Elizabeth Hughes, resided as tenant of a small farm, called Peny Cwin, in Aberdaron, and which he held at the rent of 3*l.* 5*s.* per annum, and died thereon the 9th of June, 1782. Williams made a will the 23d of May, 1782, bequeathing all his personal estate and effects, subject to the payment of legacies, to his daughter Elizabeth, and appointed her sole executrix. Elizabeth continued to reside at Peny Cwin from the time of her father's death until the time of her marriage. On the 27th of July, 1782, Hugh married Elizabeth, and went to reside at Peny Cwin, where they continued many years. Elizabeth proved her father's will on the 23d of May, 1783. Williams never paid any taxes in Aberdaron, nor did Elizabeth while sole, nor Hugh after his marriage (except county bridge rate), until 1795. Bayley, J. "The wife in this case was executrix of a tenant from year to year, and by forty days' residence as such would gain a settlement. If, therefore, the wife took the interest as executrix, and in that character became tenant from year to year, and married, a settlement would be gained by her husband. If she took the land as tenant for a year, she became tenant from year to year, and the term would vest by marriage in the husband. Rex v. Ilmington (p. 884) shows that a man will acquire by marriage the same right to a settlement which an executor does by the death of the person whom he represents. The executor of a tenant from year to year of an estate under the value of 10*l.* may gain a settlement by residing on it forty days, because the interest vests in him by operation of law. And upon the same principle a husband may gain a settlement by residing forty days upon an estate vesting in him by marriage, although it be of less annual value than 10*l.* A settlement, therefore, was gained in Aberdaron." Orders quashed.

The pauper married the executrix of a tenant from year to year of an estate under 10*l.* a year, and he acquired a settlement by forty days' residence upon the estate.

Rex v. North Cerney, 3 Bar. & Ad. 463. Appeal against an order of removal of John Lovesey and Elizabeth his wife from Winchcomb to North Cerney. Order confirmed. Case:—About five years ago the pauper's wife Elizabeth, being at that time a widow, took a house and garden, situate in the parish of Winchcomb, of one Greening, from Michaelmas to Michaelmas, at the rent of 3*l.* per annum. She went into the house immediately after taking it, and continued to reside therein until the 23d of July, 1828, on which day she married the pauper, John Lovesey, who immediately went to reside in the said house with his wife, and continued to live there from that time till the order of removal was made. Before the marriage the rent was paid by the said Elizabeth, and after that time by the pauper. Lord Tenterden. "I am not able to distinguish this case in principle from Rex v. Ilmington (p. 884), and Rex v. Ynyscynhaiarn (supra). In the last-mentioned case it was expressly decided that a man by marrying a woman who was a yearly tenant of premises of less than the annual value of 10*l.* gained a settlement. So here upon the same principle the pauper gained a settlement in the parish of Winchcomb, his wife having before her marriage become the yearly tenant of a house and garden at the rent of 3*l.*, and that interest having on the marriage vested in him by operation of law." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

A man marrying a woman who after the passing of 59 Geo. III. c. 50, has become a yearly tenant of premises at a rent of less than 10*l.* per annum, gains a settlement by forty days' residence thereon. (a)

Rex v. Barnard Castle, 4 Nev. & M. 128; 2 Ad. & E. 108. Removal of H. Siddle and family from Barnard Castle to New Forest. Order quashed. Case:—The appellants contended the pauper was settled in Marrick by residence on the property of his wife. The pauper in 1827 married his present wife, then a widow. Her former husband rented a cottage in Marrick at 50*s.* a year, payable on the 21st of June and the 21st of December in every year; and was residing in it at the time of his death, in September, 1826. The widow did not take out administration, but continued to live in the house with her five children from the period of her husband's death till her marriage with the pauper, and paid the Tenant from year to year at the rent of fifty shillings died in 1826, and his widow continued to reside on the premises, and paid rent for two half years, without taking out administration, she then married again, and with her husband continued to pay the rent for several years.

(a) By marrying a mortgagor in possession, Rex v. Edington, p. 891.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

If she became the tenant, her second husband acquired no settlement.
Secus, if she occupied as the representative of her first husband.
The court were equally divided as to the proper inference, and therefore the judgment of the sessions affirmed.

rent due in December, 1826, and June, 1827. The pauper, on his marriage with the widow in September, 1827, went to reside with her on the premises, and paid the half year's rent due on the 21st of December, 1827. He continued to occupy and pay rent for the tenement for several years: first, the old rent of 50*s.*, and afterwards 4*l.* Lord Denman. "I think the proof in this case was sufficient to establish the pauper's settlement in Marrick by residence on his wife's estate. It is stated that the widow on her first husband's death did not take out administration, but continued to live in the house with her children from her husband's death till her second marriage, and paid the rent due in December, 1826, and June, 1827. The question is, whether that statement raises such a presumption of her having assumed a representative character as makes her holding necessarily a holding by wrong. It seems to me that it ought to be shown by the case, and not assumed, that she was acting in a right which she did not possess; and the statement before us as to her holding, and the subsequent payment of rent, makes out, to my mind, that she was upon the premises as tenant in her own right, and not as a person entitled, but omitting to take out administration. Certainly there is some doubt upon the subject, and it would have been more satisfactory if the sessions had stated the case more particularly; probably, however, they have found all the facts that came before them, and I think those facts present to us matter from which we ought to infer that the holding by the widow was by such a title as she might lawfully claim, and not otherwise. With deference, therefore, to my brothers who are of a different opinion, I think the sessions have decided rightly." Taunton, J. "I am sorry that on so insignificant a subject there should be any serious difference of opinion on the bench; and I do not give my judgment without distrust on that account; but still the case is one upon which I cannot entertain what appears to me a reasonable doubt. We must proceed upon the facts as stated, and not upon any ingenious supposition of other circumstances. The first husband died in September, 1826; the widow continued in the occupation of the premises, and paid the rent up to December, 1826, and for the following half year. The question is, whether it is necessary to infer that those sums were not paid on her own account, so as to make her the tenant, but are referable to a prolongation of her late husband's interest, and consequently not made in her own right. The sessions, having found in favour of the settlement in Marrick, must be taken to have expressed their opinion that the payments were made on her own account. And with all respect to my brothers who are of a different opinion, I think it is putting a forced construction on the facts to suppose that she should have paid the rent as representative of her husband (being under no obligation to do so), and not on her own behalf. It is true that the landlord never having given any notice to quit, might, if he thought proper, have considered the tenancy of the husband as still subsisting; it does not, however, appear that he did so, but rather that she paid the rent, and he accepted it, as due from her. No dissent appears on his part to its being so paid; nor is there anything to show, on behalf of the respondents, that it was received (as they must contend) in contemplation of a prolonged interest in the widow as representative of the deceased. If then the landlord received the rent from her personally, in her own right, there is an end of the question; she became tenant from year to year, and on her marriage with the pauper, the estate vesting in him by operation of law, conferred a settlement on him, though the rent was below 10*l.* a year. Under all the circumstances, I think there is enough to satisfy us that she became tenant in her own right; the sessions might, indeed, have stated the case more distinctly, and it would have been desirable to send it back in order that they might say in what light they considered this point; but it would be attended with expense, and I do not think the doubt sufficient to warrant it." Patteson, J. "There is no doubt or difference of opinion as to the law of this case. It is clear, that if the widow became tenant in her own right, though she was not thereby settled in Marrick, the husband she married was; and there is no doubt, that if she continued on the premises only as a person having a right to take out administration, she could not acquire a settlement in her own right, nor the second husband through her, she not being the representative of the deceased. The only difference of opinion is on the facts of the case; and I think it would have been more satisfactory to send it back. The sessions are supposed to have inferred that the widow became tenant in her own right, because their order is in favour of the settlement in Marrick. But they ought to have drawn that inference expressly, and the danger of leaving it to the court is shown by what has taken place: one part of the court drawing one inference, and another the contrary. The question, however, is not of sufficient importance to warrant sending the case back. It appears to me that some evidence ought to have been given of an actual change of the tenancy, and of some new contract entered into between the widow and the landlord. Where the original tenant had his family living with him in the house during his life, and upon his death his widow (a), who is entitled to take out administration, remains with the children in the house, I think it is too much to say that a mere payment of rent by her is the commencement of a new tenancy, especially when a part of the rent she pays is rent which accrued during the tenancy of the husband. It appears to me, that she only continued on the premises in the situation of a next of kin, neglecting to take out administration. Suppose she had ultimately taken it out, could it have been said that she was in, not as personal representative, but as tenant, because she had previously paid rent? The want of any interposition by the landlord is relied upon as showing that her continued holding was in her own right; but I think that this fact tells the other way, and that an interposition of the landlord was requisite to make it appear that she became tenant." Williams, J. "I am sorry there should be a difference of opinion in this case; but the sole question is, upon the facts found, whether or not the widow became occupier of the premises in her own right. As to that I only say, it does not satisfactorily appear to me that the sessions meant to find a payment of rent by her, and acceptance of it by the landlord, on her own account, so as to make her his tenant. The fact is a simple one, and might have been expressly stated. As it is, I am not satisfied that the widow became tenant in her own right; if she did, it would have been better found by the sessions than left to be inferred by us." The court being equally divided in opinion. The order of sessions is not disturbed (b).

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

(a) See p. 866, n.

A. granted by lease a cottage to the eldest son of his only daughter and died. The daughter married and died, but never had reduced the estate into possession: Held, forty days' residence by the son after the death of his mother gives him a settlement.

Rex v. Great Farringdon, 6 T. R. 679. Order of removal of William Herbert from Stanford to Great Farringdon confirmed. Case:—The pauper on his marriage in 1782 went to reside in a cottage belonging to his grandfather, who had agreed to give it to him. The agreement was in writing, but not stamped. The pauper fitted up the cottage, and resided upon it as his own till 1795; no rent was ever paid, or claimed. The grandfather died in 1783. The pauper's mother was his only child, married to Herbert, the pauper's father. The pauper's mother died in 1786, leaving her husband and the pauper, her eldest son. The husband is now living. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "No interest passed by the agreement. Then, on the death of the grandfather, the estate descended to his daughter, who might have reduced it into possession, but did not; and in order to make the husband tenant by courtesy, there must be a seisin in fact in the wife. Then, as she did not reduce it into possession, it descended to the pauper, who is seised in fee." Orders quashed.

7. Guardian by residence on Ward's Estate.

7. Guardian by residence on Ward's Estate.

A feme covert as guardian in socage, residing on the ward's estate for forty days, cannot be removed from it.

Rex v. Oakley, 10 East, 491. Removal of John King and Mary his wife from Brill to Oakley confirmed. Case:—Thomas Hawes, about thirty-eight years ago, inclosed a piece of waste land in Brill, and built a cottage thereon, which he occupied till his death. By indenture, dated the 3d November, 1795, he and his son Thomas demised the cottage to James (b) The unsuccessful party at the sessions brings up his case by a certiorari, and obtains a rule to show cause why the order of sessions should not be quashed: and when he does not convince a majority of the judges, the rule, "Semper praesumitur pro negante," applies, and his rule is discharged.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Hawes for five hundred years, by way of mortgage, for securing 20*l.* and interest, which yet remains unsatisfied. (a) Thomas, the son, afterwards married the pauper, Mary, and resided in the cottage with his father until June, 1801, when Thomas, the father, died intestate, leaving his son his heir at law, who continued to reside on the estate till November in the same year, when he died intestate, leaving the pauper, Mary, his widow, and four infant daughters, three of whom at the time of the removal were under fourteen years of age. The widow continued with her daughters to reside on the said estate for more than forty days after the death of her husband, before her eldest daughter attained the age of fourteen, and in October, 1806, the widow intermarried with the pauper, John King, whose settlement was in Oakley, and who, with his wife and her children, resided on the estate from the time of the marriage to the time of the removal. The estate at the time of the removal was of a less annual value than 10*l.* It was admitted that Mary gained no settlement by any right of dower. The only question was, whether either John or Mary King gained a settlement by their respective residence on the estate? Lord Ellenborough. "There is no doubt in this case but that the mother, who was guardian in socage to her daughters, had a right to elect whether she would let the estate or occupy it for their benefit, and unless she let it, the law which imposes the duty of a guardian upon her, would necessarily protect her in the personal occupation and superintendence of it. The only difference which can be pointed out between the cases of an executor or administrator and of a guardian in socage, in this respect, is that the one is accountable for the profits by statute, and the other at common law. The law considers a guardian in socage as entitled to the possession of a ward's property, and incapable of being removed from it by any person; such a guardian has not the mere office or authority, but an interest in the ward's estate. It is laid down in Wade v. Baker (1 Lord Raym. 131), that he may maintain trespass and ejectment, avow for damage feasant, make admittance to copyhold, and lease in his own name. He cannot, indeed, convey the property absolutely as an executor or administrator, because the nature of the trust does not require it in the one case as it does in the other; but he may dispose of it during his guardianship, though accountable afterwards to the heir. The widow, therefore, had such an interest in the estate as rendered her irremovable from it." Grose, J. "The question is, whether the widow was irremovable from this property for forty days? She had a right during her guardianship either to lease or occupy the estate, and if she chose to occupy it, she was irremovable from it as from her own, though liable to answer afterwards to the ward for the profits." Le Blanc, J. "The case, though new in circumstance, is not new in principle. It is governed by the decisions which have taken place, that in order to make persons irremovable on account of having property in the parish, it is not necessary to have a beneficial interest in it for themselves, but it is sufficient that they reside there for some beneficial purpose to another. Now a guardian in socage has a right to the possession, and until she leases it, it is for the interest of the wards that she should occupy the estate, and there can be no right to remove her from it to their prejudice, as in the case of an administrator, or of a sole next of kin, even before administration granted, who has a right to reside on the leasehold property, and such residence for forty days will give him a settlement in the parish." Bayley, J. "If a guardian in socage can maintain trespass and ejectment in his own name, and avow for damage feasant on the land, this shows that he has a right to occupy it. And this is confirmed by the old method of pleading by guardian in socage, which was, that he entered as guardian into the tenement in question, and was possessed. In like manner an administrator has a right to the possession of leasehold property, and is only accountable for the profits." Order of sessions quashed.

A guardian in socage has not a mere office, but an interest in the estate.

A personal beneficial interest is not necessary.

(a) This case was decided on the assumption that the parties had a legal estate (see Rex v. Toddington, p. 889); but in truth they had only the equity of redemption.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

A daughter by devise, and not by descent, becomes entitled to a freehold; she was above fourteen years of age. The father, therefore, being not a guardian in socage, but natural guardian only, has no interest in the land, and can gain no settlement by residing on it.

Rex v. Sherrington, 3 Bar. & Ad. 714. Appeal against an order for the removal of Mary Bailey from Olney to Sherrington. Order confirmed. Case:—Sarah Whiting, by her will, duly executed and attested, dated the 9th of October, 1821, devised her real estate unto and to the use of her niece Catherine Bailey, the pauper's sister, her heirs and assigns, and appointed John Bailey, the father of Catherine and of the pauper, executor. The testatrix at the time of the execution of her will, and thenceforward till her death, was seised in fee-simple of a real estate in the respondent parish, consisting of two cottages or tenements. On the testatrix's death Catherine was in the sixteenth year of her age, and her father immediately took possession of the two tenements, considering himself her guardian, and resided in one of them for five or six years, both his daughters living with him and forming part of his family during the whole of that time. He let the other cottage to a tenant and applied the rent to his own use, considering it a compensation for the expense of bringing up his daughter Catherine. The pauper had gained no settlement in her own right. Opinion of this court was, whether John Bailey gained a settlement in the respondent parish by residing under such circumstances on the tenement. Lord Tenterden, C. J. "The father of the pauper was not guardian in socage, because the land did not come to his daughter by descent, nor was she under fourteen years of age. Neither was he a guardian appointed by the parent of a child under the age of twenty-one years, pursuant to the statute 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 8, who as such would be entitled to take the profits of the land. Then he was only the natural guardian, and had not in that capacity any title to a control over the land belonging to his child. To give a settlement there must be an interest in the land." Littledale, J. "In Quadring v. Downs (2 Mod. 176,) it was held, that there can be no wardship without a descent. The land, therefore, having come to the daughter by devise, and not by descent, the father was not guardian in socage. Nor was he a guardian appointed pursuant to the statute. He had, therefore, no legal or beneficial interest in the land, and consequently gained no settlement by residing on it." Parke, J. "The father here was only the natural guardian, and it is clear that as such he had no interest in the land, for that guardianship extends no further than the custody of the infant's person." (Hargrave's note to Co. Litt. 88. b, note 66.) Taunton, J., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

The mother of an infant copyholder was holden to be legal guardian of the copyhold, (there being no custom of the manor for appointing one), and therefore entitled to reside irremovably on the estate.

Rex v. Wilby, 2 M. & Sel. 504. Removal from Debenham to Wilby confirmed. Case:—In 1794 John Bedwell went with a certificate to reside in Debenham. In 1807 he purchased of Smith a copyhold estate, holden of the manor of Bloodhall, in Debenham. After his decease, his widow and family continued to reside on the premises for 143 days, and until their removal by this order. No instance appeared on the rolls of any actual assignment by dower; but it was usual for femes covertes to join with their husbands in securities (surrenders by way of securities) of estates possessed by such husbands in their own right within the manor, though never expressly stated in bar of dower; and the pauper had actually joined with her husband in the before-mentioned conditional surrender of these premises. The copyhold descended to the youngest son. Cur. adv. vult. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The court had looked into the cases, particularly Egleton's case, and that it seemed to them that the mother was the guardian of the infant's copyhold, and as such was entitled to occupy the same irremovably." Orders quashed.

There can be no guardian in socage of an equitable estate.

Rex v. Toddington, 1 B. & Ald. 560. Removal of D. Evans, Susannah his wife, and children, from Flitwick to Toddington confirmed. Case:—In 1801, S. Elmer, the then husband of the pauper Susannah, agreed to purchase a cottage at Flitwick of James Evans. There was no conveyance or written contract, but S. E. entered and continued in possession till November, 1802, when he died intestate, leaving Susannah and one child three years old. The widow and child resided in the cottage till July, 1804, when she married the pauper D. Evans, who, with his wife, resided in the cottage more than forty days. On the 12th September, 1808, J. Evans duly conveyed his cottage to the pauper, and the consideration was stated to be 16*l.* paid at the making of the deed by the pauper to J. Evans; but no sum was paid; the only consideration was the money paid by S. Elmer. On the 4th October, 1808, the pauper duly conveyed the premises to W. F. for 25*l.* Lord Ellenborough. "This is not an estate so clearly equitable, that a court of law can presume that a court of equity would, if applied to, clothe the party with a legal right to it. Rex v. Oakley (p. 887) is clearly distinguishable from this; that was decided on the assumed ground of a legal estate. But this is at most a question of an equitable estate only, and we are to consider, not only whether a court of equity would order a legal estate to be conveyed, but whether in that case the conveyance would operate ab antecedenti, so as to constitute a legal estate in the father which would descend to the heir; for unless that be so, the guardianship in socage, which is one of the incidents of the legal estate descending with it, will not go to the widow. I think, therefore, that the widow in this case was not nor ever has been guardian in socage. If so, her husband could not by residence in the parish gain a settlement." Bayley, J. "A court of law generally looks at legal rights only, and not at doubtful equitable estates. There are, indeed, equitable rights recognised by statutes, of which perhaps courts of law are bound to take notice; but how can we see that the party in this case is entitled to an equitable estate? We do not know what was the original bargain between Elmer and Evans, and the case states a subsequent conveyance to a stranger, and not to the heir at law, from whence a totally different conclusion from that contended for (of procuring a conveyance to the child) would seem to arise." Holroyd, J. "Where there is a conveyance to uses not executed, or on trusts stated on the face of the deed, the one party has the equitable, the other the legal estate. In these cases, for collateral purposes, a court of law will take notice of such equitable estates. An equitable estate, however, is very different from an equitable right to have a conveyance of the legal estate. Here the party had only the latter; and if there be any doubt as to what a court of equity would do, this court will not take cognizance of the estate. But supposing there is a sufficient equitable estate here, there must also be a guardian in socage. It is to be observed, that the law only took notice of the tenant of the legal estate. It was his duty to do all the services if he was of age; and if an infant or lunatic, the burden and right were cast on the guardian in socage. The guardian in socage, therefore, was only appointed in the case of a legal estate; for otherwise there would have been this incongruity; two persons would be bound to perform the services, viz. the trustee having the legal estate and the guardian in socage, for the cestui que trust. It is said that the widow might be by a court of equity clothed with the estate; but the utmost that that court could do, would be to decree a conveyance of the legal estate to the infant, who would then take by purchase and not by descent; and there can be no guardian in socage, except where the heir takes by descent." Order confirmed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

An equitable estate different from an equitable right.

8. Estate in Mortgage.

An estate conveyed to trustees to be sold to pay mortgages and other debts, will not give to the person conveying it a settlement by a subsequent residence till actually sold.

8. Estate in Mortgage.

Rex v. St. Michael's, Bath, Doug. 630. The pauper conveyed two houses, whereof he was seised in fee, at Walcott, to trustees, in trust to sell and pay mortgages and other debts, and to pay the surplus money, if any, to the pauper. Some short time after, one of these houses becoming void, the trustees having possession thereof, employed a woman to clean and air the house, and delivered to her the key for that purpose; which having done, she placed the key among some things of her own, intending afterwards to redeliver it to the trustees: but the pauper's wife took it from thence, and took possession of the vacant house, and she and her husband went and lived there till the removal, being about a year and three quarters. The deed did not provide for the annual rents to be sold. One of the trustees seeing her conveying her goods thither gave her notice that she was doing wrong, not having the consent of either the trustees or creditors. But the house still remained unsold, and it was stated that the value of the premises was 650*l.* and the debts 880*l.* It was argued, that the beneficial interest in the estate remained in the pauper till sold; and for this was cited Rex v. Natland (p. 873, n.); and that residing upon it as his own he was not removable from it, and consequently gained a settlement. And it was likened to the case of a mortgage. By Lord Mansfield, C. J., (unto which the rest of the court assented): "If the estate on which a pauper resides is substantially his property, that is sufficient, whatever form of conveyance there may be; and therefore the mortgagor in possession gains a settlement, because the mortgagee, notwithstanding the form, has but a chattel, and the mortgage is only a security. It is an affront to common sense to say the mortgagor is not the real owner. But here, what interest had the pauper in this estate? He made an immediate conveyance to trustees, not a mortgage, to sell and pay off two mortgages and other debts; and when this conveyance was made, it was so doubtful whether there would be any surplus, that the deed says, he shall have the surplus, if any. He had only a chance of a residue, and had not a right to continue a moment in possession. A mortgagor has a right to the possession till the mortgagee brings an ejectment. After the mortgagee has got into possession, he (the mortgagee) might gain a settlement. There is still another and a stronger ground in this case; for the possession was gained by fraud." (a)

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

A mortgagor in possession may gain a settlement.

So also a mortgagee in possession.

Rex v. Catherington, 3 T. R. 771. William Booker was removed from Compton to Catherington. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper, prior to Michaelmas, 1789, was entitled to the equity of redemption of a freehold estate in Compton, consisting of several dwelling-houses of the annual value of 13*l.* 5*s.* which had been mortgaged by his father to Elizabeth Morey, which mortgage was afterwards assigned to one Ayles. In Michaelmas term, 1788, Ayles delivered declarations in ejectment to the pauper as landlord, and to the several tenants in possession of the estate in Compton, and thereupon the tenants attorned to Ayles. About Michaelmas, 1789, the pauper asked permission of Mr. Newland, the agent for Ayles, to inhabit one of the houses, part of the mortgaged estate, and which was then untenanted, for the purpose of overlooking some repairs, which he proposed to do upon the estate with an intent to sell the same and pay the mortgage money; in consequence of which he inhabited one of the houses upwards of three months, when he was removed by the present order. He did nothing towards the repair of the houses or sale of the estate. No agreement was made between him and Mr. Newland with respect to any rent to be paid for such house. Lord Kenyon, "It has been long established that an equitable title is sufficient to give a settlement; but, in the case alluded to, the mortgagor was in possession. So, by the act for regulating votes at county elections, either the mortgagor or mortgagee in possession may vote. But in this case the party had neither jus in re nor ad rem." Buller, J. "In St. Michael's, Bath (p. 890), it was said, that either a mortgagor or mortgagee might gain a settlement according to circumstances; one of these circumstances is possession; and upon possession all the questions have turned." Orders confirmed.

A mortgagor living on the premises mortgaged, but not in possession as owner, gains no settlement.

Rex v. Edington, 1 East, 288. Removal from Edington to Urchfont, quashed. Case:—M. M. being in possession of a cottage in Edington, granted to one C. W. for ninety-nine years determinable on three lives, purchased a reversionary interest in the same for a further term of ninety-nine years, to commence at the determination of the first term, but determinable with the lives of herself and her brother H. M. Having married one W. D., the premises were assigned by deed, to which she and W. D. were parties on one side, and J. P. of E. on the other, to J. P. as trustee for the parishioners of E. for the payment of 10*l.* and interest, in trust that J. P. should, by sale and mortgage of the premises, and by the receipt of the rent, or by one of those ways, raise the sum, &c., together with costs and charges; and after payment of the 10*l.*, &c., in trust to re-assign.

If a cottage be leased for years determinable on lives, and be conveyed by a woman and her husband in trust to raise money by sale or mortgage, with a clause for re-assignment, and the parties continue in possession and the husband die, and the wife marry a second time, she retaining possession, the second husband gains a settlement by forty days' residence, though the money does not appear to have been paid.

(a) In Rex v. Edington (supra), the court said, "that the main point upon which the decision in this case was made, was the fact of fraudulent possession."

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

W. D. died, leaving M. D. his widow, who afterwards married the pauper W. B., then settled in U. She and the first husband in his lifetime (and after his death and her second marriage, and also after the death of the surviving life named in the first lease, she with the pauper her second husband, for the space of four years,) occupied to the time of her death, and the pauper continued to pay the lord his quit-rent during his possession, and at different times repaired the premises: but it did not appear whether the lord had any knowledge of the assignment. Lord Kenyon. "Some points of this case are very clear. Generally speaking, in the case of a purchase, if the value be under 30*l.*, no settlement can be gained by virtue of it; that is, where it comes to the party by his own act: but if it come to him by operation of law, the value is not material. That is the case here; for the purchase was made by the wife before the coverture, and it came to the husband upon his marriage by act of law; and he might even during the coverture have sold it without the assent of his wife. But the objection now made is, that this was not such an interest in the husband as was sufficient to enable him to gain a settlement by residence on the property, on account of the antecedent conveyance to Price the trustee. But what was that conveyance? It was for the purpose of securing the re-payment of a sum of money expended by the parish for the use of the man's family. Lord Mansfield, in the case of St. Michael's, Bath (p. 190), said, 'it was an affront to common sense to say that a mortgagor has no interest in the mortgaged premises. The law recognises his interest; in the case of a freehold, he has a right to vote for members of parliament.' Now the conveyance in question is equivalent to a mortgage, and no more. Consider what in strictness is the interest of a mortgagor; after the usual time given for the payment is expired, the estate becomes absolute in the mortgagee at law; but neither the courts of law or equity lose sight of what the parties intended. In mortgage deeds there is sometimes introduced a clause that the mortgagee may repay himself by sale of the mortgaged premises, without the concurrence of the mortgagor: but a court of equity would, I believe, control the exercise of that power. I am sure they would control it in an instance like the present, upon payment of what was due. The trustee, in such a case, would be bound to execute a reconveyance: and here there is an express clause to that purpose. Virtually, therefore, this is no more than a mortgage, and must be governed by the same rules. With respect to the case of St. Michael's, Bath, principally relied on, it is very plain that the greatest stress was laid on the circumstances of the pauper's possession having been obtained by fraud. After touching upon the interest which he had in the premises conveyed, Lord Mansfield says at the end of the case, 'there is still another and a stronger ground in this case; for the possession was obtained by fraud.' Now if the other point had been clear, he would not have used such an expression. Here the possession was not fraudulent; and therefore I am of opinion that the second husband, the pauper, gained a settlement by his residence on this estate, which came to him by operation of law on his marriage." Grose, J. "I cannot distinguish this from the case of a mortgage. The purpose of the conveyance was to secure the money. The parties interested continued afterwards in possession: the pauper paid the quit-rents and repaired the premises. Now what more could a mortgagor in possession do? In the case of St. Michael's, Bath, another reason is given for the judgment than what is now relied on: the possession there was fraudulently obtained by the pauper: it was expressly found to be against the consent of the trustees who had before taken to the possession. Whereas here the pauper always continued in quiet possession of the premises." Lawrence, J. "The principal argument against the settlement set up in this case is grounded on a dictum in the case of St. Michael's, Bath, in the first part of the opinion delivered by Lord Mansfield: without which there is no pretence for the objection. For it cannot be disputed that a conveyance to a trustee in trust by sale, or mortgage, and receipt of the rents and profits, to raise 10*l.*, is merely a security for that sum: and it is plain that the parties themselves so considered it, by providing for a re-assignment of all or so much as should not be sold, applied, or otherwise disposed of. Now in that case Lord Mansfield begins by saying that which is decisive as applied to this. 'If the estate on which a pauper resides is substantially his property, that is sufficient, whatever forms of conveyance there may be:' and therefore he says that a mortgagor in possession gains a settlement, 'because the mortgagee, notwithstanding the form, has but a chattel, and the mortgage is only a security.' If then the object be merely to secure money, whether the conveyance be in the form of a trust like the present, or of a mortgage, it is in substance the same thing." Le Blanc, J. "I am of opinion that the pauper gained a settlement by residing on this estate, in which he had an equitable interest; and I consider that the assignment to the trustee was no more than a security for so much money. According to what was said by Lord Mansfield in the case of St. Michael's, Bath, the court will not look to the mere form of the conveyance, but will consider what the parties really meant by it. Then, if this were substantially a mortgage, as I think it was, it is clear that the pauper gained a settlement by residing on the premises." Order of sessions affirmed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Where one of several mortgagees agrees verbally to sell his interest for a sum which is paid him, and afterwards joins in executing a release and assignment of all his interest in the mortgaged premises: Held, that he gained no settlement by a residence in the parish where they lay, between the time of the agreement and the release.

Rex v. Cregrina, 4 Nev. & M. 455; 2 Ad. & E. 536. Septimus Lloyd was removed from Cregrina to Glascombe. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper acquired a settlement in Glascombe by renting a tenement in that parish for several years, up to 1830, at the yearly rent of 24*l.* The pauper's father John Lloyd died in 1822 intestate, possessed of a leasehold tenement situate in Cregrina, which he held for the residue of a term of 999 years at a peppercorn rent. He left a widow and four sons, John, James, Septimus (the pauper), and William. On the 4th of August, 1828, James took out letters of administration to his father's estate. By an indenture of assignment dated the 23rd of August, 1828, between the said James Lloyd, the administrator, John Lloyd, Septimus Lloyd (the pauper), and William Lloyd, and Mrs. Ann Guise, after reciting the lease, the tenement was assigned by James Lloyd the administrator, and confirmed by John, Septimus, and William Lloyd to Mrs. Ann Guise, by way of mortgage for the residue of the term of 999 years, for securing 120*l.* and interest. The four brothers divided the 120*l.* equally between them, executed the deed and signed the receipt, and covenanted for the repayment to Mrs. Guise of the 120*l.* and interest. At the time of this transaction the pauper resided in Glascombe. About a year afterwards, whilst residing in Glascombe, he agreed verbally with his brother William Lloyd to sell to William all his interest in the leasehold tenement, in consideration of his paying the share of the pauper in the 120*l.* and all interest due and to grow due, and also of the sum of 2*l.* which was allowed to the pauper by William. About a year after making this agreement, the pauper removed into a cottage in Cregrina, and continued there till his removal under this order, but did not interfere with the leasehold tenement. In September, 1832, William Lloyd, on behalf of himself and his brothers James, John, and Septimus, gave Mrs. Guise notice of paying off the principal and interest on her mortgage. By an indenture dated 29th of April, 1833, John Lloyd, James Lloyd (the administrator), and Septimus Lloyd (the pauper), in consideration of 30*l.* expressed to be paid them by William Lloyd, released and assigned to him all their interest in the leasehold tenement. No money passed to the pauper; William Lloyd claiming and retaining his, the pauper's share, under the bargain made three years before, and having received and retained the intermediate rents belonging to the pauper's fourth share. Lord Denman, C. J. "It appears to me that no interest whatever remained in the pauper after the agreement." Littledale and Williams, Js. concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

Estate purchased by the husband for less than 30*l.* and after marriage assigned as a security for money lent, and

Rex v. Tarrant Launceston, 3 East, 226. Removal from Tarrant Launceston to Tarrant Rawson quashed. Case:—J. C., the pauper, in June, 1795, made a purchase for less than 30*l.* of a leasehold tenement in T. L. for 99 years, determinable on three lives, in consideration of 10*l.* advanced to him by W. D.; he afterwards sold the estate with the after payment, in trust for the sole use of the wife: residence by her husband before payment gives no settlement.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

lease to W. D., to hold for the remainder of the term, in trust to let the premises, receive the rents, and pay himself the 10*l.* with interest; and after such repayment to receive and pay the rents and profits to the wife of the pauper during her life, to her sole use, not subject to the debts of her husband, and her receipt alone to be a discharge of the rent; and after her decease, in case the pauper survived her, in trust to pay the rents to the pauper during his life; there were other trusts after the death of the survivor. After the execution of this deed, W. D. suffered the pauper to continue residing upon the premises, which he did till he became chargeable, when he was removed. It was urged that the pauper took a new estate by act of law, either as mortgagor in possession, or by virtue of the equitable interest of his wife in it, and that as the trustee did not reject the pauper, the parish officers could not procure his removal from the property, in which he as well as his wife had a reversionary interest. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "If this had been res integra, I should apply to the plain letter of the statute [he read 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5, and said], that is for so long as there is an union of interest and occupation in the thing. We must not however contravene the authorities, but preserve uniformity of decision. This was not a residence of the pauper as mortgagor. He had parted with the absolute interest which he had in the premises. (a) For even when the 10*l.* is paid, (which non constat is ever likely to be done) the trustee is to account for the rents and profits to the wife for her separate use during her life; and I think there is much weight in the observation which was made against any claim of the husband to reside upon property so circumstanced in the right of his wife. In the first instance however, and during the time of his residence there, the trustee was entitled to the rents and profits till the 10*l.* advanced by him was paid; it was contingent whether that would ever be done, whether the wife would ever be entitled to the rents and profits; and if she became so, it was also contingent whether the pauper would survive her, so as to have any claim of his own. I should therefore be much inclined to ask with Lord Mansfield, in Rex v. St. Michael's, Bath (p. 890) 'What interest had the pauper in this estate? He made an immediate conveyance to trustees, not a mortgage to pay off debts.' Upon the whole this was such a doubtful contingent interest in the pauper, that without clashing with any of the adjudged cases, I am authorised to say that no settlement was gained by the pauper's residence on this property." The other judges agreed, and the order of sessions was quashed. (b).

A freehold estate situate in the parish where the pauper resided, descended to his wife and her sisters as coparceners; one month after, he contracted to sell his wife's share, but the conveyance was not executed for more than forty days after their title accrued: Held, that by residence in the parish (without occupation) he gained a settlement.

Rex v. Dorstone, 1 East, 296. Removal of Mansell Powell with his wife from Dorstone to Blakemere quashed. Case:—The pauper went prior to November, 1778, to reside with his wife and family in Blakemere, upon a tenement which he rented at 1*l.* 15*s.* per annum. On the 14th of the same November, and whilst the pauper resided at Blakemere, T. Matthews died intestate, seised of a freehold house and lands in Blakemere, which descended to the pauper's wife and her two sisters as coparceners, being the grandchildren and co-heirs of T. M. On the 14th December the pauper entered into an agreement to sell his wife's share of the house and lands to John Delahay, husband of one of her sisters. After the agreement was signed, the referees valued the pauper's wife's share of the premises at 28*l.* The deeds not being ready by the 2nd of February, the pauper complained, and Mr. Elliott, agent for Delahay, offered to pay him three months' rent for his wife's share of the premises if required; but the pauper did not require it; the deeds were executed and the money paid the latter end of February or beginning of March, 1779. From the 14th of November, 1778, when the grandfather died, to the execution of the deeds in the latter end of February or March following, the pauper resided in the tenement he rented at Blakemere, but did not occupy any part of the tenement which descended to his wife and her sisters; the house and gardens were in the occupation of Delahay and his wife, and the rest of the land was occupied by Mead, who had been tenant to the grandfather. A distinction was suggested between this case and Houghton-le-Spring (p. 881), that here the title accrued on the 14th of November, and within less than forty days, viz. on the 14th of December, the pauper bound himself to convey away the property. The court however said, "That the contract was executory, and the conveyance was not actually executed till long after the forty days were expired, till when the title remained in the pauper, and consequently he gained a settlement in Blakemere." Order of sessions quashed.

(a) In a note to Rex v. St. Michael's Mr. Douglas (Vol. II, p. 632,) observes, "that it is difficult to reconcile this case with Rex v. Edington, and suggests that the better foundation for the decision in Rex v. Tarrant was, that it was an indirect attempt to acquire a settlement by a purchase under 30*l.*; and he adds, 'I find from a MS. note of this case that this objection was first stated by the court during the argument, in these pointed words: 'If the original estate was insufficient in value to give the husband a settlement, can the owner, by granting away part of it, make it sufficien?'"

(b) If the equity of redemption be parted with even by parol, subsequent residence gains no settlement. (Rex v. Cregrina, p. 893.)

A pauper, tenant in fee of freehold and copyhold land, conveyed by lease and release his freehold land to trustees to sell and pay his debts, and pay the surplus, if any, to him. The release contained a covenant, on the part of the pauper, to surrender his copyhold land in D., upon the same trusts as in the release. Trustees were to manage the farm until the sale. The case did not state the value of the property or the amount of the debts. The pauper (who did not reside on the property, but in the parish) gained a settlement by a residence of forty days in the parish where the copyholds were situate, during the period between the execution of the release, and a surrender of the copyhold, which was afterwards made by the pauper to a purchaser.

Rex v. Ardleigh, 2 N. & P. 240; 7 A. & E. 70. T. Beckley was removed from Dedham to Ardleigh. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was for many years previous and up to 1832, seised and possessed of freehold and copyhold estates, situate in Ardleigh, Langham, and Dedham, which he derived as devisee in fee under the will of his father, and to which copyhold part, in Dedham, he was, in December, 1821, admitted as tenant in fee. The pauper received the rents of the premises from his father's death to January, 1832. At the time of his father's death, and from thence until the 17th April, 1832, the pauper resided at Ardleigh. On the 17th April, 1832, he went to reside at Dedham, where he continued to reside from that time down to the time of the appeal. He did not occupy the copyhold premises, but resided during the whole time in other premises in Dedham. By lease and release of 10th and 11th January, 1832, the pauper, to enable and to provide for the demands of his several creditors, released all his freehold messuages in Ardleigh, Langham, and Dedham unto trustees, to sell and receive the rents and profits until they were sold under the trusts aforesaid. And he did covenant, upon request by the trustees, to surrender the copyhold and lands as the trustees should direct, or to any purchaser. And that in the meantime, and until such surrender should be made, and the trustees or purchasers should be admitted, the said pauper, and his heirs, should stand and be seised and possessed of the copyhold premises, in trust for the trustees. The trust was to pay the creditors their respective debts. And if there should be any surplus trust, to pay the same to the pauper. The trustees were to manage the farming business, &c., of the pauper, until the sales should be completed, in such manner as they should deem most expedient for the benefit of the estate of the said pauper. By deed poll of 18th January, 1832, after reciting the said trusts, the persons, parties thereto, did covenant with the pauper, that they would accept the provision made by the release in full discharge of their demands, with a proviso that if the trustees should be prevented carrying the trusts into effect, then the creditors might proceed for recovery of their debts, as if they had not executed the deed-poll. On the 2nd October, 1832, the pauper, in consideration of 50*l.*, in the surrender stated to be paid to him by William Downes, (who had verbally agreed to purchase the premises, on the 11th May preceding,) out of court, surrendered, according to the custom of the manor of Overhall and Netherall, the copyhold cottage and piece of land, situate in Dedham, and holden of the manor of Overhall and Netherhall, to the use of Downes, who was admitted thereto on the 20th November, 1822, to hold to him, his heirs and assigns. The question was, whether, after the execution by the pauper of the release and the deed-poll, and from thence to the time of admission of William Downes to the copyhold premises in Dedham, or to the time of the surrender thereof to him, or during the period of any forty days after the 17th April, 1832, the pauper continued to have an estate or interest in the copyhold premises in Dedham, sufficient to confer a settlement upon him. Lord Denman. "The legal estate continued in the pauper, and he was therefore irremovable. It is true he did not reside upon the property, but he resided in the parish, which is sufficient. It was not certain that the pauper would ever be called upon to surrender the copyhold property. The freehold property, for any thing that appears to the contrary, may be sufficient to pay off the debts, and there is nothing to show that the pauper was divested of the real beneficial interest in this property. It is however enough for us to say, that the pauper resided for forty days in a parish where he had an estate of his own, and that he thereby gained a settlement in that parish." Littledale, J. "The pauper had the legal estate, which was sufficient to give him a settlement. It is laid down in Nolan's Poor Laws (a), that "it is immaterial whether the party has a beneficial interest in the estate; a mere trustee may acquire a settlement, for nobody can take the estate from him, and it is sufficient that he reside in the parish forty days, and cannot be removed from it. The pauper could not have been turned out by an ejectment. It is not clear that the pauper had not some equitable interest in the estate." Patteson, J. "This case, in some respects, resembles Rex v. Dorstone (p. 894). In that case, the pauper had entered into an absolute agreement to sell. In this case, the pauper had covenanted to surrender the copyholds to the trustees, for the purpose of paying his debts. In Rex v. Dorstone, it was held, that the pauper gained a settlement by residing, not upon his estate, but in the same parish in which it was situated. The clause in the deed which relates to the management of the property, only authorises the trustees to take upon themselves the business of farming the freehold land, and does not appear to apply to the copyhold. In Rex v. Cregina (p. 893), the pauper had no legal interest, and it was very questionable whether he had any equitable interest." Order of sessions quashed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

(a) Vol. II. p. 105.

9. By Estate acquired by Possession.

Living in a cottage which came to the pauper by descent gains a settlement, though the pauper's father built the cottage upon a waste, without the lord's consent. for a justice of peace cannot determine man's title.

9. By Estate acquired by Possession.

Rex v. Wyley, 2 Sess. Ca. 115; 1 Stra. 608; 2 Bott, 610. A poor man built a cottage upon the waste of Wyley, belonging to Lord Pembroke, without his licence, who never disturbed him; he lived in this cottage for thirty years, and by his will left three guineas in the hands of his executors to purchase this cottage. Upon his death, Elizabeth, his only child, entered into the cottage and married one Barrow, and lived in the cottage, and they were in quiet possession for three quarters of a year and then sold it. It was argued the cottager was a disseisor, and had no right to build upon the waste, and was at any time removable by the lord; and if he might have been removed within forty days, his long possession gave no title; for he must only be considered as a tenant at will, and consequently his continuance upon the cottage though never so long could give him no settlement; and if the cottager had no right of settlement, none claiming under him shall be in a better condition. The court held it clearly to be a settlement. And though it was objected that the cottager himself was sensible he had no right, by his devising money for the purchase of a term under the lord of the waste, yet it was over-ruled. And by all the court it was held, "that when a man hath such a possession as he cannot be removed from, and hath enjoyed that possession forty days, he thereby gains a settlement; and that is the reason why a copyholder or lessee for years gains a settlement by an inhabitancy for forty days: for in those cases the justices of the peace cannot determine his right. This present case is very strong; for the thirty years' possession of the cottager without interruption would have been a good title in an ejectment, and for that reason the justices of the peace cannot determine his title. It appears upon the face of the order that the cottager had a good title in ejectment, and in any case but in a real action." Lord C. J. Raymond said, "He had known recoveries upon a twenty years' quiet possession, and twenty years' possession is a title to a plaintiff in ejectment as well as to a defendant. After so long a possession as this it shall be presumed that the cottager had a licence to erect the cottage; but this case goes further; for besides the thirty years' quiet possession of the cottage, here is a descent cast upon the daughter, who was heir to the cottager, and primâ facie it is an inheritance in the daughter; and an estate by disseisin is in law a good estate and a fee simple till it be defeated." The Court held that the justices had no jurisdiction in this case, for they could not examine into the title to the land. And the settlement in Wyley was adjudged to be good.

Twenty years' residence in a cottage, built without the consent of the lord of the manor, confers a settlement.

Rex v. Bitton, Burr. S. C. 631; 2 Bott, 624. The pauper, G. Battman, built a cottage upon the waste without leave of the lady of the manor; was not rated nor paid any taxes; but continued nineteen years and a half in possession. About twenty years ago the pauper was turned out of possession of the cottage by an ejectment, brought by a person claiming the same under a mortgage thereof made by the pauper for 15*l.* And some time after that (which was more than twenty years ago) the pauper and the mortgagee sold the cottage to Williams for 28*l.*; and the pauper had 5*l.* of it. The Court were all of opinion that it appeared to be a possession of more than twenty years. He was himself in possession nineteen years and a half; and the mortgagee's possession must be also considered as his possession. And it was adjudged a good settlement.

Possession of a cottage for more than twenty years, though not altogether adverse, will gain a settlement.

Rex v. Garway, Burr. S. C. 632; 2 Bott, 623. The pauper, about thirty-five or thirty-six years ago, went to live with his father in a cottage built upon the waste in the parish of A., where his father had then lived about thirty years, and who, soon after the pauper went to live with him, died. The pauper (as eldest son) continued in possession of the premises, and paid an acknowledgment of 2*s.* 6*d.* to the lord of the manor for thirty years; but the pauper had no recollection of his father ever having paid an acknowledgment. The premises were of the yearly value of 50*s.* The pauper was removed from A., which order was confirmed; but K. B. quashed both orders.

Grantee of land without conveyance, built a house, and occupied it eighteen years, and gained a settlement.

Rex v. Butterton, 6 T. R. 554. R. O. purchased a piece of land, and gave part of it (but without executing a conveyance) to his son-in-law J. H., who built a house upon it at an expense exceeding 100*l.*, and resided in it without paying any rent or acknowledgment to R. O. for fourteen or fifteen years, when he removed to another house in the same parish, and let the one he had built, and received the rent to the time of his death, which happened three years after. Upon the death of J. H. the pauper (his eldest son and heir) continued to receive the rent and had mortgaged the premises. No claim had been made or rent demanded by R. O. or his heirs. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "As twenty years have nearly elapsed since the time when this land was given to the pauper's father, and as no claim has ever since been made either on the pauper or his father, Rex v. Wyley (p. 896) is an authority to show that the court ought not to permit the title to the estate to be determined on an order of removal. The strict rules to be observed on the trial of ejectment ought not to be applied to settlement cases. After such a length of time as this, perhaps a conveyance may be presumed to be executed. And in Rex v. Cold Ashton, where there had been a possession for nearly twenty years, Wilmot, J., said, 'There ought not to be a nicety of computation in a settlement case, but the court may presume a conveyance.' And even if no conveyance were executed to the pauper's father, and a claim were now made by Oakden's heir-at-law, he would perhaps be told in a court of equity that as O. stood by while the pauper's father built on this land, and treated it as his own, he could only resume the possession on certain terms." Lawrence, J. "I remember a case where Lord Mansfield would not suffer a man to recover in ejectment, who had stood by and seen the defendant build on his lands."

The court presumed a conveyance from peaceable enjoyment under twenty years.

When the settlement of the father was derived from twenty years' possession of an estate, a son emancipated

Rex v. Calow, 3 M. & Sel. 22. The removal of B. Maskery, his wife and children, from Wirksworth to Calow, confirmed. Case:—A primâ facie settlement in Calow being proved by relief given to the pauper's father about thirty years ago, it was proved in answer, that about the same period the grandfather of the pauper gave the pauper's father a piece of land in Wirksworth, upon which the father immediately built a house, and lived in it with his family for several years. He then resided in a third parish for some years, during which time he let the house and received the rent for it. Ten years ago he returned to the house, and has resided in it ever since, and never paid any rent or acknowledgment for the house or land on which it stood. The pauper was a part of his father's family at the time the house was built, and continued so for about fifteen years afterwards, when he married, left his father's family, and never returned. The pauper's grandfather resided in Wirksworth from the time when the house was built until his death, about seven years ago, within a few yards of his son, during which time he received occasional relief from Calow. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "It is true that the father, at the time when the son ceased to be a part of his family, had been in possession of the estate for fifteen years; but he was in under some title or other under which he has continued the possession for fifteen years more, and up to the present time; therefore, looking at the whole, we must infer a title in him at the former period. The subsequent possession reflects light back on the title under which he before held; and the court will presume that his possession originated under a title which would have prevented him from being dispossessed at the time when the son quitted his family." Bayley, J. "It cannot be said that the father was in without any pretence of title, for the case states that he had a gift of the land." Dampier, J. "The subsequent possession legalises the former possession, and shows that it was of right." Orders quashed.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

before they had expired, follows the settlement.

Adverse possession for less than twenty years of an estate at will, under 10*l.* a year, will not give a settlement.

Rex v. Chew Magna, 10 B. & C. 747. J. Naish was removed from Ubley to Chew Magna. Order confirmed. Case:—William Bath, about 1795, being seised in fee of a close of land in the parish of Ubley, gave a small piece thereof by parol to his nephew, the pauper, whereon to build a cottage. Naish, who had no settlement in Ubley, took possession of the spot, and built his cottage, and inhabited it with his family. In October, 1800, while he so resided in Ubley, his wife and children became ill, and he applied to the overseers of that parish for relief, and received the same, and on their complaint an order for the removal of Naish, his wife and children, to Chew Magna, was made, and Naish was under that order removed and delivered to the overseers of Chew Magna, who relieved Naish from time to time. Naish slept in that parish for one night only, and the next day returned to the cottage in Ubley, from whence neither his wife or children, on account of their illness, had been removed. Naish continued to reside there till about 1810, when Bath told him that he had sold the ground to one Carpenter, and asked Naish to give him free possession, and to sell him his right. Naish was unwilling to do so; but before Naish said any thing, Bath proposed that Naish should receive 3*l.* for giving such possession, and should take away the materials of the cottage. Naish never paid Bath any acknowledgment. Bath paid the 3*l.* to Naish, and Naish pulled down the cottage, carried away the materials, and delivered possession to Carpenter. No writing passed on the occasion. Lord Tenterden. "There is no ground for contending that Carpenter's occupation is to be considered a continuance of the estate of Naish; and if that be so, there was no more than a possession for fifteen years. The adverse possession in the cases (a) cited had continued for more than twenty years. There is no authority to show that a residence on an estate at will of a value less than 10*l.* per annum can confer a settlement." Bayley, J. "Undisturbed possession for twenty years confers an estate. It is evidence for a jury to presume a grant. Here there was only possession for fifteen years. It is said possession of Carpenter is possession of Naish. But Carpenter came into possession, not under Naish, but under his uncle Bath." Littledale, J. "I think that Naish was no more than a tenant at will to his uncle. There is no authority to show that a mere tenant at will can gain a settlement by residing upon an estate of less value than 10*l.* a year." Order of sessions confirmed.

(a) Rex v. Calow (p. 897); Rex v. Butterton (Ib.)

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

Rex v. Staplegrove, 2 B. & Ald. 527. The facts of the case are stated in the judgment delivered by Bayley, J. "In this case there were two questions, one, whether forty days' residence in a parish in which the pauper had a freehold subject to a lease for years, would be sufficient to confer a settlement by estate? and the other, whether it would be so if the residence were upon that estate and without right? Upon the first point it appeared to us to be settled, especially by Rex v. Houghton-le-Spring (p. 881), that such residence is sufficient; and it was upon the second point only we wished time to consider. Upon that point the facts are these: the father of the pauper's wife had a freehold cottage in Creech; in 1795 he let it to the parish officers for 1000 years, and they took possession. In 1813 he was placed in it by the parish officers, and the pauper's wife came to nurse him. He died there that year, and his daughter continued in the cottage, and at the end of six weeks the pauper joined his wife, and laid claim to the cottage as his wife's property. The parish officers had mislaid the conveyance to them, and therefore could not withstand his claim, and the pauper and his family resided there from 1813 to 1818, when the pauper having become chargeable, and the officers having found the conveyance, they were removed, and the point submitted to us was, whether the pauper gained a settlement by this residence? We are of opinion that he did. The sessions have found no fraud in the pauper or his wife in acquiring or retaining possession; and if we were at liberty to infer fraud, which we are not, there are no premises from which such an inference could properly be drawn. The husband comes to the cottage under a claim of right, and for anything which appears, he might really believe he had that right. The parish officers who alone can gainsay, do not gainsay it or take any steps to oppose his occupation, but acquiesce in it for more than four years. There is no decision under circumstances in any respect like the present. Rex v. St. Michael's, Bath (p. 890), and Rex v. Catherington (p. 891), were cases where the pauper had nothing which he had a colour for calling his own, and if not, we must look to the words of the statute whether this is within the mischief against which that statute meant to provide. The 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, recites, &c. [here he read the recital and enactment, and added] is then the pauper within the words, the spirit, or the mischief of the provision? He comes to Creech, not for any of the motives this statute meant to repress, but because he has a freehold in the parish; not to prey upon the parish stock, but to live upon that of which he is the freeholder, and as to which he was warranted in concluding that he was entitled to the possession. This is not a case of fraud, nor a case in which the pauper is conscious at the time that he is taking the possession wrongfully, nor a case in which the person entitled to possession takes prompt measures to displace him. Leaving such cases to be decided when they arise, it is sufficient for us to say that in this case there does not appear to have been fraud or consciousness of wrong; and where no measures were taken within the forty days, or afterwards, to dispute the occupation, we are of opinion that the residence was sufficient."

The father of a pauper's wife mortgaged a cottage to the parish officers for one thousand years: he died; the pauper claimed the cottage, and resided there undisturbed by the parish for four years: as there was no fraud in his claim, he gained a settlement.

Residence under a claim of right, without fraud, is sufficient.

Rex v. Wooburn, 10 B. & C. 846. Hannah Beal and family were removed from Wooburn to Chipping Wycombe. Order quashed. Case:— In the spring of 1800, Dennis Beal, the husband of the pauper Hannah, and the father of the other paupers, being settled in Wooburn, inclosed a small piece of waste land from a common in the adjoining parish of Chipping Wycombe, and surrounded it by a bank, on which he planted a quick fence; he held and cultivated this land, subject to such interruption as after mentioned, until Christmas, 1827, when he sold it for 10*l.*, and conveyed it by deed to the purchaser. From the year 1800 to the year 1825, Dennis Beal resided out of the parish of Chipping Wycombe. In the year 1825 he removed to a cottage in that parish, but not on the land in question. In the year 1826 he built a hut on the said land, and was provided with straw to thatch it by one of the overseers of the parish of Wooburn, and up to the time of his building the hut he continued to receive relief from the parish officers of Wooburn. He lived in the hut a year and a half. In the years 1806, 1811, and 1817, the parish officers and freeholders perambulated the parish for the purpose of marking the boundaries and asserting their rights of common by throwing open encroachments on the waste. In the first year they pulled up a large portion of the fence to the said land inclosed by Beal, dug up part of the bank and rode through the inclosure. In the two subsequent years they made a large gap in the fence, and again rode through the inclosure with the same object. In the year 1820 or 1822, but to which of those years in particular the witness could not speak positively, a similar perambulation was made by direction of the lord of the manor, when similar acts were done for the like purposes. It did not appear that Dennis Beal was present on either of these occasions, nor did it appear that any acknowledgment was paid by him to the lord of the manor or any other person during his occupation of this inclosure, nor that either the commoners or the lord of the manor commenced any action or did any other act to assert their rights, except as before mentioned. Lord Tenterden. "There has been an adverse possession for twenty years, and the husband of the pauper gained a settlement by estate in Chipping Wycombe." Order of sessions quashed.

Inclosure of waste and occupation for twenty years: Held, a settlement gained, though interrupted by parochial perambulations.

2. Of Estates acquired otherwise than by Purchase, &c.

A. inclosed a piece of the waste, and built a cottage, the parish giving him the materials; after fourteen years he gave, by parol, a part of such land to B., and B. built a cottage and took in another piece of the waste, and occupied them sixteen years; the copyholders, in the course of removing encroachments, twice broke down B.'s fences: Held, that B. gained a settlement by estate.

Rex v. Pensax, 3 B. & Ad. 815. Mary Radford and children were removed from Pensax to Martley. Order quashed. Case:—Mary Radford was the widow of John Radford, who was the illegitimate child of Hannah Radford. After his birth Hannah married William Yarnold, and they resided in Pensax, the child John Radford living with them. In the chapelry of Pensax there is much common or waste land, beneath which there is coal belonging to the lessees (under an old demise) of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester, who are the lords of the manor. Yarnold was often relieved by the officers of Pensax, and they furnished him with materials necessary for the erection of a cottage upon the common, which he accordingly erected about thirty years ago, having for the purpose inclosed an acre of land of about 10*l.* in value. Sixteen years ago he gave part of the land which he had so inclosed to John Radford upon his marriage with the pauper Mary, and Radford then built a cottage upon it. No deed was made between them. After John Radford had taken possession of the cottage and land, he inclosed a small piece of land immediately adjoining (about 5*l.* in value) from the common, and the whole was afterwards thrown together by him. The copyholders (who are accustomed to break down the fences of encroachments once in seven years, to prevent persons inclosing from establishing a right,) twice broke down the fences between the common and the new land thus inclosed by John Radford. The fence between the old and the new inclosure had been previously removed. The persons rode in at one side of the land and out at the other side, but they did not pass over that part which had been given to Radford by William Yarnold. On one occasion the lessees of the minerals under the dean and chapter sunk a coal pit on the land last inclosed by Radford. The question for the opinion of this court was, whether John Radford ever had such an estate in the land given to him by William Yarnold, or inclosed by himself from the waste, as would give him a settlement in Pensax. Lord Tenterden delivered the judgment: "We think this case is not distinguishable from Rex v. Wooburn (p. 899), and the pauper's husband consequently gained a settlement by estate in Pensax." Order of sessions confirmed.

Lessee for years during three lives held over on a false pretence that one of the lives is continuing: this is not such an adverse possession as will gain a settlement.

Rex v. Axbridge, 4 Nev. & Man. 477; 2 A. & E. 520. Richard Hooper was removed from Axbridge to Chappel Allerton. Order quashed. Case:—Lord Viscount Weymouth granted to one Martin a lease of a cottage in the parish of Cheddar for ninety years, determinable on three lives, at a rent of 4*d.*; and in 1784 the cetteux que vies in lease of 1732 being all dead, the then Lord Weymouth granted to Richard Gilling a lease of the same cottage, therein stated to have lately fallen into his lordship's hands, for a like term, determinable on three other lives, at the same rent. At that time Joseph Wolf, who was in possession under the lease of 1732, claimed to hold the cottage against Gilling, on the ground that one of the three lives in that lease was still in existence, which was not the fact; and he did so hold the same until his death, about twenty-three years ago. On his death his widow, Ann Wolf, retained possession of the cottage, and continued therein until her death in 1827. In 1826 she made a will, and told the person who made it for her she had heard the cottage was Mr. Gilling's. By the will she devised the cottage to her daughter Martha, the wife of Richard Hooper (the pauper), and her heirs, and appointed Martha Hooper her executrix and residuary legatee. The will was duly attested to pass real estate; but no probate thereof was obtained. On the death of Ann Wolf, Richard and Martha Hooper, who had been living with her in the cottage, kept possession of it, and lived there for three years; when Richard Hooper conveyed it, by feoffment and livery, to a purchaser in fee for 8*l.*, it being well worth 40*l.* with good title. No rent has ever been paid by Joseph Wolf, or those claiming under him; but Gilling and his representatives have paid the rent of 4*d.* to Lord Weymouth and his heirs to the present time. One of the cetteux que vies in the lease of 1784 is still living. Lord Denman. "The question is, whether there is any proof of adverse possession. I do not find it expressly stated, nor do I find any facts from which it can be properly inferred. A lease was granted in 1732 for three lives to Richard Martin. In 1784 it is supposed that the lives are at an end. A new lease is then granted to Gilling, and he pays the rent. Wolf claims to hold under the first lease, on the ground that one of the cetteux que vies is still living, and he does so hold; yet Gilling, who must have acquiesced in his doing so, pays the rent during all that time to Lord Weymouth. It cannot be said that Wolf held under any other claim than this—that the first lease was in existence. Then his wife held the property. What proof is there that she held it adversely? I see none; and even if she had claimed to hold adversely, there was not sufficient length of time to create a title by adverse possession. There is no case which would warrant us in holding that the circumstances which occurred here amount to an adverse possession; and therefore I think that the order of sessions must be quashed." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion. In 1784 Lord Weymouth (now the Marquess of Bath) granted a lease to Gilling. At that time Joseph Wolf was in possession. How he came in we do not know; but he claimed to hold the cottage under the first lease, on the ground that one of the cetteux que vies was alive. He did not set up any adverse claim. He must be presumed to have held under the lease to the time of his death. He left a widow, who continued the possession. It must be presumed that she continued the possession in the same way as Joseph Wolf had done before. She devises expressing that she had some doubts whether it did not belong to Gilling, (but we do not take any notice of that), and appointed her daughter executrix. If she had entered by abatement, and made a will of it, that would have been a different thing, but she does not do so. I do not consider that her daughter acquired any right to the fee simple. She appointed the daughter executrix; but the daughter took no interest in any term, for there was none actually existing, except that which was in Gilling, for the whole lease was clearly gone in 1784. She could only claim in continuation of the estate which her mother had." Williams, J., concurred. Order quashed.

III. Of Estate by Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration, affected by 9 Geo. I. c. 7.

1. What is a Purchase within the Statute.
2. Of the Consideration paid.
3. Money laid out on Estate after Purchase.
4. Equitable Interest in Purchased Estate.

1. The Statute; and what is a Purchase.

Purchase money must be at least thirty pounds

By the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5, No person or persons shall be deemed, adjudged, or taken, to acquire or gain any settlement in any parish or place, for or by virtue of any purchase of any estate or interest in such parish or place, whereof the consideration for such purchase doth not amount to the sum of 30*l.* bonâ fide paid, for any longer or further time than such person or persons shall inhabit in such estate, and shall then be liable to be removed to such parish or place where such person or persons were last legally settled before the said purchase and inhabitancy therein.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

bonâ fide paid, or party gains a settlement only while he inhabits such estate.

A convicted felon, discharged under the sign manual, may acquire a settlement by purchase.

Rex v. Haddenham, 15 East, 463. Removal of E. Hill, from Thame to Haddenham, was confirmed. Case:—E. Hill was born in Thame, in May, 1791, and at the time of her birth the settlement of her father, S. Hill, was in Thame. She had not acquired any settlement in her own right. In 1790, S. Hill was convicted of horse-stealing, and received sentence of death. An instrument, under the sign manual, was then produced, which recited that S. Hill had been convicted of horse-stealing, and had sentence of death passed upon him; and that the king was induced to grant him a free pardon; and it directed S. Hill to be forthwith discharged out of custody, and that he be inserted in the next general pardon that shall come out for the Oxford circuit, without any condition whatsoever. Given, &c. By his majesty's command, W. W. Grenville. Search had been made in the office of the clerk of assize of the Oxford circuit, and it did not appear that any general pardon including S. Hill had been made out: it did not appear, by any evidence, that any general pardon, including S. Hill, or any special pardon to him under the great seal, had been granted. Pursuant to the direction of the instrument under the sign manual (a), S. Hill was shortly after discharged, and has been since at large unmolested. In 1803, S. Hill purchased, for 100 guineas, two cottages in Haddenham, copyhold of inheritance, held of the manor of H., which were surrendered to the use of S. Hill, his heirs and assigns, and he was admitted tenant thereof, according to the custom of the said manor, and took possession of and resided on the premises so purchased by him, and still continues to reside on part thereof, and has sold and surrendered the remainder. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "The point raised is of some doubt, and of more general importance than usually arises on settlement cases. In the form of it a purchase was made, which satisfies the terms of 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5, 'that no person shall acquire any settlement in any parish for or by virtue of any purchase of any estate or interest in such parish, whereof the consideration for such purchase doth not amount to 30*l.* bonâ fide paid, for any longer time than such person shall inhabit in such estate,' &c. Now this was in its form a purchase for more than 30*l.*, and he resided on it for more than forty days, and he has not been removed from it. Who then was in a condition to remove him for the forty days? The lord, who has, by admitting, accepted him for his tenant (even if he could, after that admission, object to him), has not objected. If the lord had no notice of the objection at the time of the admission, I do not mean to say that he was afterwards precluded from making the objection; but he has not in fact objected, and the tenant has now continued for nine years in possession; and, by the statute of limitations, part of the rents, issues, and profits, can be no longer recovered from him; so that if he had a defeasible estate during the first forty days, he has held the estate undefeated for more than that period, which cannot now be impeached. And whether or not the crown could have impeached his title, he has now held the estate under a title, not defeated for above forty days." The other judges assented. Order confirmed.

As no settlement can be gained by such purchaser, except whilst he continues on the estate so purchased, he of course can communicate no settlement thereby to his children, for a derivative settlement must be founded on a perfect settlement existing in the person from whom it is derived; and the estate must be actually bought; a gift or licence to possess, is not a purchase within the statute.

(a) The effect of a pardon under a sign manual is now equivalent to one under the great seal. 6 Geo. IV. c. 25, s. 1. See also Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 8 D. & R. 399; 5 B. & C. 585.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

Children residing with their father upon a tenement purchased by him for less than thirty pounds, gain no settlement.

Rex v. Salford, Burr. S. C. 516; 1 Bla. Rep. 433. Peter White was removed from Salford to Over-Norton. Order discharged. Case:—The pauper's father, in 1726, for 29*l.* purchased a tenement in Salford. The pauper was born there in 1730, and lived with his father therein till about 1754, when he married, and left his father's family, and lived in a separate tenement at Salford, without having gained any settlement but what he derived from his father. Lord Mansfield, C. J., delivered the resolution of the court. "We are of opinion that no settlement of the father was gained in Salford by the purchase, but only during the time of his inhabiting in the purchased premises. And this would have been equally the case if the act had never been made: for he could not have been removed from his own estate, though he had no settlement in the parish where it lay. So that the father's settlement (if it may be so called) in Salford, was only temporary, and did not extinguish his settlement at Over-Norton. And the only settlement which the son could derive from his father was at Over-Norton; for there could be no derivative settlement from the father at Salford, the father himself having no settlement there, but being only irremovable from his own estate. And this may be illustrated by a supposition, that the son had not resided in Salford, but had gone to live in a third parish, and had there been likely to become chargeable: and the question had arisen, whether he ought to be removed to Salford? He could not possibly in such case have been removed to Salford, because such removal would have been conclusive upon Salford, and he would remain settled there for ever: which shows that he can have acquired no settlement in Salford by virtue of his father's purchase, even during the time of his father's residence upon it."

A conveyance from a father to his daughter, in consideration of natural affection, without any pecuniary consideration, is not a purchase within the act.

Rex v. Marwood, Burr. S. C. 386; 2 Bott, 615. Removal of T. Connibear, and Mary, his wife, from Kentisbury to Marwood, confirmed. Case:—Mary had conveyed to her by her father, in consideration of natural love and affection, a cottage, garden, and plot of ground, at Kentisbury, for the residue of a term of ninety-nine years, then determinable on the death of Joan Slocombe, the consideration of which purchase, originally, in the year 1689, amounted to 20*s.* Mary and her husband entered upon the premises, and continued thereon for several years, until the lease determined by the death of Joan, upon which they were removed from Kentisbury to Marwood. Ryder, C. J. "If I had any doubt I would not give an opinion now. This is not a 'purchase' within the meaning of the act. The word 'purchase' is not to be taken in the largest extent of it, but is confined to cases where a pecuniary consideration is paid. Otherwise, no devise, or gift, or settlement on marriage, would gain a settlement, unless there were a pecuniary consideration paid. The intention of the act was to prevent settlements by purchases for small money considerations. In the present case the husband is not to be considered as a purchaser, and therefore he acquired a settlement in Kentisbury." By the court unanimously, the orders quashed.

What is a purchase.

Same point, where the grantee was residing under a certificate. See as to this, post, Certificate.

Rex v. Ingleton, Burr. S. C. 560; 2 Bott, 621. Richard Speddy, and Rose, his wife, residing under a certificate at Astwick, the father of Rose conveyed to her, in consideration of natural love and affection, a customary cottage at Astwick to the use of herself for life, remainder in fee to her daughter. The paupers entered upon, and continued in possession of, the cottage for sixteen years, and then purchased of their daughter her remainder in fee for 5*l.*, and sold the whole for twenty guineas. On the authority of Rex v. Marwood (supra) this was held to be clearly a voluntary settlement, and not a purchase within the intent of the statute.

Rex v. Ufton, 3 T. R. 251. John Henwood removed from Ufton to Mortimer. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper came to reside with his father, about twenty-three years ago, in a cottage at Mortimer, which in 1766 the father duly conveyed to him in fee, in consideration of natural love and affection, and of 10*l.* to him paid by the pauper. About three years after, the pauper obtained a certificate from Ufton, dated 1st of January, 1770, and afterwards occasionally received relief from Ufton

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

A conveyance for natural love and ten pounds to a son, the estate being worth more, is not a purchase (b).

during his residence at Mortimer; his father lived with him on the premises until his death, about eight years ago. The pauper was his eldest son and heir at law, and continued to reside upon the premises until 1788, when he sold the same for 50*l.*, and returned to Ufton. Lord Kenyon. "In Rex v. Marwood (p. 903) it was contended that a purchase, under 9 Geo. I., was to be understood as contra-distinguished from descent, as in a former case on the subject (Rex v. Sawbridgeworth), (a). But the court exploded that idea, and said that the legislature only intended to prevent persons who made small purchases for pecuniary considerations from gaining settlements, but that donations from a father to a child did not come within the statute. Now in this case we are bound to take notice that the conveyance was in consideration of natural love as well as 10*l.*, and we cannot suppose that 10*l.* was the real value of the estate, for there are circumstances to show the contrary, it having been afterwards sold for 50*l.* This being a donation from a father to a son, is clearly not a purchase within 9 Geo. I. c. 7, notwithstanding part of the consideration was in money. And though the certificate was conclusive at the time, it was afterwards done away by the pauper's residence on his own property at Mortimer." Order of sessions reversed.

A grant by the lord of A. for lives, in consideration of the surrender of leases of the same premises by A.'s grandfather and great uncle, at a nominal fine and rent, and no money passing from A. to his relations, is not a purchase within 9 Geo. I. c. 7.

Rex v. Lydlinch, 4 B. & Ad. 150. John Tucker was removed from Hilton to Lydlinch. Order confirmed. Case:—By lease, the 22nd of December 1754, G. Pitt, lord of the manor of Hilton, demised a house and garden to John Tucker of Lydlinch, the grandfather of the pauper, in consideration of a surrender made by Arthur Corfe and E. his wife, of the said house and garden, which they claimed to hold for their lives successively, the lease having, as was recited, been consumed in a then recent fire, together with the house, which Tucker was rebuilding, and also in consideration of another lease of the same premises, granted to William Corfe, determinable on the decease of John Tucker, and in consideration of the rebuilding of the premises by Tucker, and of 1*s.* paid by him to Pitt; habendum to Tucker, his executors, &c., for fourscore and nineteen years, if Tucker and his wife, and Meliar their daughter, or either of them, should so long live, at the yearly rent of 1*s.* The lessee covenanted to pay the rent, to attend the lord's court, and do suit and service there; to finish the rebuilding of the house within two years, and to repair. John Tucker, the grandfather, was the grandson of William Corfe, and the great nephew of Arthur Corfe, the surrenderors of the leases, who were brothers. It did not appear that any pecuniary consideration passed from Tucker to either of them. He continued to inhabit the premises until his death in 1818. The premises were not of the value of 30*l.* when Tucker rebuilt the house. The question was, whether John Tucker, the grandfather, gained a settlement by estate in Hilton. If so, the pauper was derivatively settled there. Denman, C. J. "Rex v. Tarrant Launceston (p. 893) is decisive to show that this is not a purchase within the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, § 5." Parke, J. "The statute applies to purchases for money consideration only. Here it may be inferred, from the relationship of the parties, that natural love and affection formed an ingredient in the consideration. The lord was only the medium of the arrangement in the family." Taunton, J. "In order to bring a case within the statute, the consideration must consist wholly of money. Here there were several considerations, and it does not even appear that there was a pecuniary one." Patteson, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

(a) In that case (Burr. S. C. 56), the father of the pauper, being seised of a copyhold cottage in Aldbury, which let at 25*s.* a year, did, about a year and a half before the removal, surrender to the pauper and his heirs, who were admitted and lived upon it about a year and a half, and then sold for 14*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*, being the full value; it was urged that this estate was the pauper's own by a surrender from his father, and there was no difference between a surrender from a father, and a descent. But the court denied it, without so much as making a rule to show cause. For they not only thought that the surrender looked fraudulent, but they said that the intent of the statute was to prevent persons gaining settlements who were any ways likely to be chargeable, and therefore provided that they should be able to lay out 30*l.* in a purchase. And both the orders were confirmed.

(b) Love and affection will not support an equitable interest; and if the money is less than 30*l.*, no settlement can be acquired by purchase. Rex v. Piddlehinton, (p. 919).

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

Rex v. Hatfield Broad Oak, 3 B. & Ad. 566. John Greygoose was removed from Takely to Hatfield Broad Oak. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper had gained a settlement by hiring and service in Hatfield Broad Oak, but he afterwards returned to live with his father, who was then in possession of a copyhold estate and premises of inheritance in Takely, to which estate he had been admitted on the death of his father, as heir-at-law, in 1757. After the pauper's return, and about twenty-four years ago, the pauper's father told the pauper that he would give up the estate and premises to him, as they would be his afterwards by heirship, if he would pay off a debt of 15*l.* which he, the father, had borrowed upon them, and if he would permit him, the father, and his wife, the pauper's mother, to reside upon them rent-free during the rest of their lives. The pauper paid off the sum of 15*l.* for the purpose of relieving his father from that debt, and was duly admitted to the estate and premises upon surrender of his father. The father and mother continued to reside upon the premises; the father till his death, the mother till the time of the removal; and the pauper did so for eighteen years after his admittance, and gained no subsequent settlement. The admittance of the pauper on the surrender of his father, in 1807, contained no statement of any consideration except the verbal agreement between the pauper and his father, and the payment of the 15*l.* by the pauper. The sessions stated their opinion to be, that this was a purchase of an estate for less than 30*l.*, the only apparent consideration being the payment of 15*l.* by the pauper on his father's account, which payment originated in the want of the father, and therefore no settlement was gained under the 9 Geo. I. c. 7. Lord Tenterden, C. J. "I think the sessions have not come to the right conclusion. From the terms of the conveyance and the state of the family at the time, I think that natural love and affection must certainly be taken to have formed an ingredient in the consideration; and if so, this was not a pecuniary purchase for less than 30*l.* within the meaning of the statute." Littledale, J. "The 15*l.*, the debt charged on the estate, was not the only consideration for this conveyance. This is clear from the agreement that the pauper should allow his father and mother to reside upon the premises rent-free during the rest of their lives." Parke, J. "This was a conveyance of the property, in consideration of natural love and affection, and subject to a certain burden. I think the sessions came to a wrong conclusion." Patteson, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

A. surrendered to B. (his son) a copyhold estate, on condition that B. would pay off 15*l.* which A. had borrowed on the estate, and would suffer A. and his wife to reside on it rent-free for their lives: as natural love and affection formed part of the consideration, this not a purchase within 9 Geo. I. c. 7, and B. gained a settlement by residing there.

Rex v. Warblington, 1 T. R. 241. Removal from Havant to Warblington. Order confirmed. Case:—William Bridger, father of the pauper, came to Havant with a certificate from Warblington. John Moody, lord of the manor of Havant, by copy of court-roll, in 1748, granted to William and his heirs, one parcel of waste ground, called the Gravel Pit, which did not appear ever to have been granted before. William built a house thereon, and lived therein for several years as owner; he afterwards borrowed 100*l.* of Mary Roper, and surrendered the premises for securing the same; and on the money not being paid, she was admitted in 1763. She sold her interest to John Hammond, who was admitted. After the death of William, his heir-at-law sold his equity of redemption to Hammond for 20*l.* 17*s.*, and surrendered the same. It appeared by the court books that William was admitted on the lord's grant to one parcel of land, called the Gravel Land, and in the copy of his admission were these words, "fine one shilling, heriot one shilling, quit-rent one shilling." Moody's steward proved that Mr. M. was used to grant small parcels of the wastes of the manor for small pecuniary considerations, but he never knew him make such grants without. The value of the land at the time of the grant did not exceed 30*s.* or 40*s.*, and William was at that time a very poor man. It was not customary to express the consideration, if any, in the surrenders. It did not appear whether any pecuniary consideration was given for the grant, or whether it was voluntary and without any consideration: it further appeared that in the margin of all the copies was inserted, "fine 1*s*." Willes, J., said, "That the question was, whether this grant was a voluntary grant, or made for a valuable consideration? That the proof lay on the appellants to show it was a voluntary grant, for it was incumbent upon a certifying parish to get rid of the certificate: that if that could only be done by presumption, it must stand good, for that the court could not presume one way or the other. But if the court could presume either way, it must be that this was a purchase. That, however small the consideration, they would hold it to be a purchase: that this appeared to be a grant for a small pecuniary consideration, and therefore not a voluntary grant: and being a purchase under 30*l*. did not give a settlement since stat. 9 Geo. I. Supposing it true, that the fine (a) is a fee for alienation, that is no answer to the heriot and rent reserved: for if a person meant to make a free gift, he would not reserve a heriot or rent. As to the objection, that this land had never before been demised by copy, however defective the original grant might have been, there has been so long a possession that the presumption is strong that it was good." Ashhurst, J., said, "That a purchase was the acquisition of something for an equivalent: a quid pro quo. And that was so in this case."

The lord of a manor, for a fine of one shilling; heriot one shilling, and quit-rent one shilling, granted some land. This is a purchase, not a voluntary grant, and being under 30*l.*, no settlement can be gained.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

A grant by the lord of copyhold land, paying a yearly rent of two shillings and sixpence (in a subsequent part called a quit-rent), is a purchase within 9 Geo. I. c. 7, and being under 30*l*. confers no settlement.

Where there is no custom for that purpose, the lord of a manor cannot make a new grant of copyhold; and if he does, the grantee acquires thereby no settlement by estate.

Rex v. Hornchurch, 2 B. & A. 189. Removal from Hornchurch to Purleigh. Order quashed. Case:—By grant, May 13, 1799, James Thurtell, the father of the pauper, obtained from the lord of the manor a piece of the waste in Purleigh, where he built three cottages. The grant was, "To this court came J. T. and S. his wife, and prayed to be admitted tenant to all that parcel of land, being part of the waste of this manor, containing about half a rood, with the cottage thereon, lately built, paying to the lord the yearly rent of 2*s*. 6*d*., to whom the lord, with the consent of the homage, granted and delivered seisin, to hold unto J. T. and his wife, and to the heirs of the survivor, at the will of the lord, according to the custom of said manor, at the yearly quit-rent aforesaid and by suit of court; and he giveth to the lord for fine for his admission nothing, of the special favour of the lord, and so, saving all right of the lord, he is admitted tenant. Abbott, C. J. "I think that this grant was not a valid conveyance of the copyhold estate, because there is no custom stated for the lord to make a new grant of copyhold within this manor. Unless that custom exists, there can be no copyhold except where the land has been at all times demised or demisable by copy of court-roll. The lord therefore had no right to make this grant. But even if the grant were good, I should still think that this case fell within the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, for here the land was originally demised for a mere money consideration to be paid annually, and the sum stated in the case was a full consideration for all that the lord granted at the time. I cannot distinguish this case from Rex v. Warblington (p. 905), which must govern our present decision. Then if the case falls within 9 Geo. I. c. 7, it is clear that the consideration was less than 30*l*., the sum required by the act." Order confirmed.

Grant of a licence from the lord of a manor to erect a cottage, rendering an annual rent of ten shillings and sixpence as quit-rent, and also a licence to inclose a piece of ground

Rex v. Horndon-on-the-Hill, 4 M. & Sel. 562. Removal from Orsett to Horndon-on-the-Hill. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper applied to the lord of the manor for licence to erect a cottage on the waste in Orsett. In the court rolls was this entry: "Manor of Orsett, 9th November, 1805. At a general court baron, the lord of the manor granted licence to Benjamin Brad to erect a cottage on a piece of land, containing one rood, in the lane leading &c., rendering an annual rent of 10*s*. 6*d*. at Michaelmas in (a) It had been urged, that payment of a fine was proof of purchase, St. Paul's Walden v. Kempston (p. 910); and in Rex v. St. Mary, Whitechapel, Burr. S. C. 55, a pauper had a leasehold of 5*l*. a year value, for which he paid only 6*d*. per annum, the court held that he acquired a settlement. His lease was for 50 years.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

every year, as a quit-rent for the same." No other consideration was paid. The pauper erected a cottage at an expense of more than 30*l.* on the piece of ground, and some months afterwards applied to the lord for a piece of ground for a garden. As to that, this entry was made: "24th March, 1806, (reciting the former entry); at this court the lord of the manor granted licence to B. Brad to inclose a piece of ground for a garden adjoining the cottage, containing —— roods." No consideration was paid for this piece of ground, and both were parts of the waste of the manor, and their value did not exceed 5*l.* After the building of the cottage, the pauper resided on the premises about a year and a half, and then sold them to one Robinson, of which the following entry was made in the court rolls: "3rd June, 1809, (reciting the grant of the first licence and the grant of the second,) it was at this court presented that the said B. Brad had erected the cottage, and inclosed the ground, and had sold it unto Robinson for 40*l.*, whereby happened to the lord an alienation fine of one guinea, which had been paid." Robinson sold the premises to Bonham, of which the following entry was made: "7th June. 1813. At a general court baron then held, the homage presented that since the last court, Henry Bonham, Esq., purchased of Wm. Robinson a cottage erected on the waste by B. Brad, and also a garden adjoining, granted by the lord, whereby there happened to the lord an alienation fine, which has been paid." None of these entries were stamped, and this was the only evidence of title produced. There was no evidence that these two pieces of waste land, or either of them, had ever been demised by copy of court-roll, or that there was within the manor any custom to create copyholds, or to grant any part of the waste thereof to hold as in the nature of copyhold. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "A licence is not a grant, but may be recalled immediately; and so might this licence the day after it was granted. We cannot take into our consideration what it may be conjectured a court of equity would determine in this case. Perhaps a court of equity might interfere, but can we say with certainty that it would? We ought to see that the party has clearly an equitable interest, and not merely such a claim as might possibly induce a court of equity to interpose in some way or other. This was a mere personal licence, and not a grant by copy of parcel of the land, as Rex v. Warblington (p. 905). Here the pauper never had a more perfect estate than the licence gave him, that is, a permission to occupy." Bayley, J. "We cannot know how a court of equity would deal with this case; (a) probably the utmost that it would do would be to grant an injunction, if an ejectment was brought. But here is no grant of any interest in land; I cannot say that the pauper took any estate; and therefore this would be a new species of settlement." Order of sessions confirmed.

for a garden to said cottage, and building a cottage thereon and residing in it a year and a half, is a mere licence, and not a grant of any interest in land, so as to confer a settlement.

Licence by lord not a purchase.

(a) Rex v. Geddington (p. 915).

Rex v. Hagworthingham, 1 B. & C. 634; 3 D. & R. 16. Order of removal of E. Turner from Stainton to Hagworthingham confirmed. Case: —In 1798, the commissioners for the inclosure of Hagworthingham, by their award, allotted to the Earl of Manvers, as lord of the manor, an allotment, as compensation for his right in the soil of the waste lands. In 1809, Goodwyn applied to Lord Manvers for leave to build a house upon the waste in Hagworthingham. Lord Manvers gave him liberty in writing. Goodwyn built on the waste by the road side, in the same year, a blacksmith's shop, which two years afterwards he sold to Bayley, who sold it to the pauper for 30*l.* No deed of conveyance was executed to the pauper. The pauper converted the shop into a dwelling-house, where he resided during five years, and then sold it to Wright for 34*l.* The pauper continued to live therein, as tenant to Wright, for two years longer. During the five years that the pauper resided in the house as owner, he paid 1*s.* a year to Lord Manvers as lord of the manor. The surveyor of the highways once demanded this 1*s.* to be paid to him, but it was never so paid. On the pauper quitting the house, Wright went to live there, and it is let by Wright to a tenant for 2*l.* 18*s.* a year at the present time. No adverse claim has ever been made. Abbott, C. J., delivered judgment. "It was contended, that this was a settlement obtained by purchase of an estate or interest in the parish for a consideration of 30*l.* paid. Some discussion arose as to the nature of the estate or interest, by the purchase whereof a settlement may be acquired. But we think the inquiry into that point unnecessary in this case; because upon the facts stated, and on the authority of Rex v. Horndon-on-the-Hill (ante, 906), we think there has been no purchase of an estate or interest of which we can take notice. The pauper after his purchase paid 1*s.* a year to Lord Manvers, but no such payment appears to have been made either by Bayley or by Goodwyn; therefore although the pauper might in consequence of this payment have acquired the character of a tenant from year to year, yet there is nothing to give that character either to Bayley or Goodwyn, and the matter purchased by the pauper is the same as in the case referred to. It was there decided, that a licence to occupy does not operate as a grant, nor confer any legal title; and as to equitable right or title, the observations made by Lord Ellenborough are unanswerable: 'We cannot take into our consideration what it may be conjectured a court of equity would determine in this case. Perhaps a court of equity might interfere, but can we say with certainty that it would? We ought to see that the party has clearly an equitable interest, and not merely such a claim as might possibly induce a court of equity to interpose in some way or other.' Upon the ground, therefore, that this was not a purchase of any estate or interest in the land or building, we are of opinion that no settlement was gained." Order of sessions quashed.

A. built a house on the waste of a manor by licence from the lord, resided in it two years, and then sold it to B. The latter sold it to C. for 30*l*, but no conveyance was executed. C. resided in it five years, and paid one shilling per annum rent to the lord, and then sold his interest. No adverse claim was made: Held, that C. did not acquire by purchase an interest or estate sufficient to confer a settlement within the statute.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration

Where the purchase is under 30*l* the pauper is not removable from his estate.

Rex v. Martley, 5 East, 40. Removal from Doddenham to Martley confirmed. Case:—On the 25th of November, 1754, the dean and chapter of Worcester granted to H. B., the grandfather of the pauper, a lease for lives of a cottage and a garden, at the yearly rent of 2*s.* 6*d.* At his death, leaving no will, he was succeeded in possession by his son William (the pauper's father), who afterwards died leaving a will, devising the premises to his wife for life, remainder to W. B. the pauper. The pauper came at the end of two years to reside with his mother on the premises till he married (February 2, 1790), when she demised to him the premises at a yearly rent, and went to reside elsewhere, leaving the pauper in the sole occupation. On the 27th August, 1795, the second life died. On the 13th of July, 1798, the mother of the pauper, who was tenant for life under the will of the pauper's father, died. The pauper continued in possession till November 26th, when on payment of a fine of two guineas, a new lease was granted to the pauper at a new rent of 1*s.*, for three new lives, still existing. At this time the lives in the first lease were all extinct. The pauper's residence on the premises continued till the time of the removal. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "That there would be difficulty in deciding that this was a purchase under 30*l.* within the statute: but he asked how, admitting that, and presuming the third life under the first lease to be extinct (she not having been heard of for thirty years), this order removing the pauper from his own estate could be supported?" To this it was answered, that where a man applies for relief, he must be taken to consent to all things necessary to afford him that relief in the due course of law, and consequently to an order of removal to his last legal settlement. But the court held that such a person was altogether irremovable, whilst he resided on his own estate.

2. Of the Consideration paid.

2. Of the Consideration paid.

The consideration for the purchase must amount to "the sum of 30*l. bonâ fide paid.*"

Where the purchase-money mentioned in the deeds was twenty-eight pounds, but the sum bonâ fide paid was 30*l.*, a settlement is acquired.

Rex v. Scammonden, 3 T. R. 474. Removal from Scammonden to Soyland. Case:—The pauper agreed with Harrison for the purchase of an estate in Rishworth for 28*l.*, and the consideration mentioned in the deeds and in the receipt indorsed was 28*l.*, but by parol evidence it was proved, that before the deeds were executed the vendor declared that as the agreement was not in writing he was not bound by it, and having since had 30*l.* offered for the estate he would not take less, nor would he execute the deeds unless the purchase-money were made up that sum. Upon which the pauper advanced 1*l.* 15*s.* more, which, with 5*s.* owing from Harrison to the pauper, it was insisted made up the sum of 30*l.*, but the deeds were not altered, and the consideration therein mentioned was left according to the original agreement, viz. 28*l.* The sessions were of opinion that no parol evidence could be given (a) to contradict the consideration mentioned in the deeds. The estate purchased was the estate of Harrison's wife: and there was a covenant from Harrison that he and his wife would levy a fine at the cost of the pauper; towards the expense of which the pauper left in the hands of his attorney four guineas. The pauper resided above three months upon the premises, and afterwards sold them to his brother. To this conveyance Harrison and his wife were parties; and it recited the covenant to levy a fine; but as such fine had not then been levied, it was agreed that instead thereof, Harrison and his wife should acknowledge and levy a fine of the premises unto the brother in fee, which was in 1787 levied; part of the expense whereof was discharged by the four guineas so left in the hands of the attorney by the pauper, and the other part was paid by the brother. And the sessions being of opinion that the four guineas was to be considered as part of the consideration under the act, and that the pauper by such purchase gained a settlement, discharged the order. Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "It was clear that the party might prove other considerations than those expressed in the deed. It is permitted in all cases of covenants to stand seised to uses. And in Filmer v. Gott (7 Brown's Parl. Cases, 70), where the considerations mentioned in the deed were 10,000*l.* and natural love and affection, the lords commissioners of the great seal directed an issue to try whether natural love and affection formed any part of the consideration, the estates being worth near 30,000*l.* On an appeal to the House of Lords this was confirmed; and the jury on the trial of the issue finding that natural love and affection constituted no part of the consideration, the deed was afterwards set aside by the Lord Chancellor." Order of sessions confirmed.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

The parish officers are not estopped by the recital in a deed from giving parol evidence that the consideration stated in the deed was never paid or intended to be paid.

An estate voluntarily conveyed is not a purchase.

Rex v. Cheadle, 3 Bar. & Adol. 833. W. Smith and family were removed from Cheadle to Scropton and Foston. Order quashed. Case:— W. Smith, at the time of his marriage in 1808, was settled in Scropton and Foston. To establish a subsequent settlement by estate in Cheadle, the respondent proved that John James, the father of the pauper's wife, had been seised in fee of a house and some land in Cheadle, on which he resided with his family (a wife and five children), and of which he continued in possession till 1807, when he died intestate, leaving his eldest son Simon James his heir at law. It had been agreed in the lifetime of John James, by all the members of the family, including Simon James, that the four younger children (of whom the pauper's wife was one) should have a parcel of the said land allotted to each of them, in order that they might build houses thereon respectively, when they could raise the money. In pursuance of this agreement, a portion of the land was staked out for the pauper to build on a short time after his marriage, and he built a cottage thereon upwards of twenty-one years since, in which he resided sixteen or seventeen years, and then sold it for 60*l.* to one John Higgs, who still has it. The land so staked out was a small plot, about four yards by six or seven, and the full value of it in fee before the cottage was built was two guineas or two guineas and a half. When the cottage was built Simon James (the eldest son of John), who lived within a few yards, assisted the pauper in staking out the land, and in doing some of the work at the foundation. The respondents proved lease and release of the 6th and 7th of January, 1815, for the purpose of showing that this land had been purchased by the pauper for a money consideration not amounting to 30*l.* The release was between Simon James (therein described as eldest son and heir at law of John James deceased) of the first part, William Smith, the pauper, of the second part, and John Moreton (therein described as a trustee nominated by and on behalf of the said William Smith) of the third part; and after reciting, that "the said William Smith some time since agreed to purchase from the said Simon James the plot or parcel of land thereinafter mentioned, and has paid the said Simon James the sum of 2*l.* 2*s.* as consideration for the same, and lately erected a dwelling-house thereon, but no conveyance thereof had yet been made," it was witnessed, that for and in consideration of 2*l.* 2*s.* to the said Simon James in hand paid by the said William Smith at or before the sealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof Simon James did thereby acknowledge, and thereof did acquit and for ever discharge the said William Smith, his heirs, &c.; he the said Simon James did grant, bargain, &c., the said plot of land, and the said houses erected thereon, to the pauper, his heirs and assigns, &c. Each of these deeds were stamped with a 15*s.* stamp. The evidence of the pauper, and also of one Jeremiah Robinson (who was not a party to the deed), was then tendered on the part of the appellants, and objected to on the other side, but received by the court, to show that the consideration stated in the deed was not paid, nor intended by the parties to be paid; and that the deed was only made for the purpose of confirming the pauper's title to the plot of land which had been allotted to him shortly after his marriage, under the parol arrangement between John James and his children. The sessions found that the consideration mentioned in the deed was not paid, nor intended to be paid. The questions were, whether the evidence was properly admitted? and if it was, whether the pauper acquired a settlement? Lord Tenterden. "I think a settlement was gained in Cheadle. The appellants proved that John James, the father of the pauper's wife, being seised in fee of a house and land in Cheadle, and having several children, it was agreed among them in his lifetime that a part of the land should be allotted to each of them. One of the children married the pauper in 1808, and soon after, in pursuance of the agreement, a portion of the land was staked out, upon which the pauper built a house, and after residing there seventeen years he sold the house for 60*l.* There having been twenty years' possession, the case thus far showed such an estate as gave the pauper a settlement. To avoid this settlement by estate, the parish officers of Cheadle proposed to show, by the deed of 1815, that the pauper's title to it accrued by a purchase for a money consideration not amounting to 30*l.* That deed recited, that Smith had agreed to purchase the land for the consideration of two guineas. The other parish alleged in answer that the recital was not true, and that the real consideration was not a money consideration; and they gave evidence that the two guineas were not paid, nor intended to be paid, and that the only object of the parties in executing this deed was to confirm the pauper's title. The objection is, that evidence to contradict the statement of the consideration in the deed ought not to have been admitted. Now, the parties to the deed might be estopped by it from saying that this was not a purchase for a money consideration; but the parish officers, who were strangers to it, are not. If that were otherwise, the greatest inconvenience and injustice might arise, because a settlement might be acquired or not according to the language used by parties in an instrument of this nature. The evidence was, in my opinion, properly received, as showing, not that the deed was void, but that this was not a purchase for a money consideration." Littledale, J., concurred. Parke, J. "It is quite clear, that although the parties to this deed were estopped by it, strangers were not, and consequently the parish officers might show the real nature of the transaction. If this were not so, parishes might be burthened with settlements for which there was no colour. It is clear that a settlement was gained in this case by an estate voluntarily conveyed to the pauper." Taunton, J., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

(a) As to the admissibility of this evidence, see Rex v. Llangunnor (p. 670); Rex v. Skiffington (p. 729); Rex v. Wickham (p. 847); Rex v. Great Wakering (p. 789).

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

A purchase of 30*l.* part of which was paid by the parish officers of another parish, is not

St. Paul's Warden v. Kempton, Fol. 238. Case:—A person purchased a copyhold tenement in St. Paul's Warden, which, with the fine and fees paid to the court, amounted to 30*l.*; and it appeared by the same order, that the officers of the parish of Kempton had given him 40*s.* towards paying his fine and fees. It was insisted that this was fraudulent and not a good purchase. But by the whole Court: "We cannot take notice of its being fraudulent, unless the justices had adjudged it so."

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

Rex v. Cottingham, 7 B. & C. 603; 1 M. & R. Mag. Ca. 137. Order of removal of W. Hardy from Bishop Burton to Cottingham confirmed. Case:—In 1813, Hardy, the father of the pauper, agreed with E. Page for the purchase of a copyhold cottage at Bishop Burton. It was agreed that Hardy should pay 22*l.* and all the expenses attending the sale. Upon these terms the purchase was made. In 1813, the cottage was surrendered to Hardy the father; in 1814 he was duly admitted, and has ever since continued to reside in it. The amount paid was 22*l.* to the vendor; 3*l.* 10*s.* the fine to the lord of the manor; 1*l.* 13*s.* to the steward of the manor for his admission copy; and 6*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* to Hardy's attorney, for the expenses of the surrender; making a total of 33*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* Bayley, J. "This case admits of no doubt. The question is, what was the consideration for the purchase bona fide paid within the act? I think the sum given to the seller for his interest in the land, and to other persons whose concurrence was necessary to make the sale valid and effectual, was the consideration for the purchase. The fine paid to the lord and the fees paid to the steward, in my opinion, form part of the consideration. But the sums paid to the vendor, the lord, and steward, do not amount to 30*l.* The expenses of the surrender paid by the purchaser to his own attorney, were no part of the consideration for the purchase. The cases cited are distinguishable from the present. In Rex v. Scammonden (p. 908) the purchaser paid 30*l.*; for he paid the expenses of levying a fine, which it was necessary for the seller to levy to complete the title, and which he ought to have paid for, if the purchaser had not agreed to pay. In St. Paul's Warden v. Kempton (p. 910) 30*l.* was paid, including the fine to the lord and the fee to the steward." Littledale, J. "I think the consideration for the purchase was the sums paid to the seller and to the lord. The lord has an interest in the land, and the fine may be considered as paid to him for the purchase of part of his interest in it. I doubt whether the fee to the steward can be considered as part of the consideration for the purchase. The steward has no interest in the land. But it is unnecessary to decide that, because the money paid to the seller, the lord, and the steward, does not amount to 30*l.*" (a) taken to be fraudulent, unless so stated.

The expenses of the surrender of a copyhold estate, paid by the purchaser to his attorney, are not part of the consideration.

The fine to the lord is a part of the consideration.

Rex v. Tedford, Burr. S. C. 57; 2 Bott, 666. Removal from Waddingham to Tedford. Case, laid down before the judge of assize:—Francis Gill contracted with John Atkinson for a house in Waddingham for 39*l.*, which was conveyed to Gill and his heirs. Gill paid 9*l.*, and Isaac Bristol paid the remaining 30*l.* to Atkinson, by Gill's order. Conveyance, dated May 2, executed May 19, 1730. June 18, 1730, Gill mortgaged the premises to Bristol. Gill continued in possession about four years after the mortgage. Then Bristol entered, by virtue of the mortgage and release of the equity of redemption. The order of sessions recites, that whereas the judges of assize had not time to hear it, and whereas the parties agreed this to be the true state of the case; therefore, upon hearing counsel and further evidence on both sides, this court doth adjudge that the purchase made by Gill was fraudulent; but that the appellants are no ways concerned in the fraud. By Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "This case doth not appear to be within the act; for the act is confined to purchases under 30*l.* bona fide paid. Now the consideration was 39*l.* and bona fide paid to the vendor. And it would be pretty hard to say that the justices had a power upon this act to inquire whether or no the purchaser borrowed the money. It is a common case to borrow money to make up the price. And as to the fraud, it is true that Purchase for 39*l.*, though 30*l.* thereof was borrowed on mortgage of the premises, gains a settlement.

(a) In the report of this case, in 1 M. & R. M. C., Littledale, J. is reported to have said, "that the fee of the steward is part of the consideration." This is at variance with the above report, and with a MS. note of this case taken by the Editor. In the case as reported in 1 M. & R. 439, it is merely stated, "Littledale, J., concurred," Holroyd, J., was absent.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

Q. B. not concluded by the finding of fraud when the facts are stated.

the justices are the proper judges of fraud. But fraud is a fact which must be found. It must be so by a jury upon a special verdict. The residing four years is a very material circumstance in this case: it is frequent for persons to purchase, having no ready money to do so. It does not appear how much, or that any of the purchase-money was borrowed. The justices are judges of the fact; and they may judge of the fraud arising from the fact. If they had generally found the fraud, we might have been bound by such general finding; but when they state the facts particularly, the matter is as much open for our determination upon it as it was for theirs." And the whole Court was of opinion that here was no sufficient evidence of fraud. Orders quashed.

Purchase of a cottage for 60*l.*, which was then mortgaged for 50*l.* and payment afterwards of that 50*l.* by borrowing the same, will gain a settlement, though the estate be mortgaged for the 50*l.* the same day.

Rex v. Chailey, 6 T. R. 755. W. Shaw removed from Chailey to Newick. Order quashed. Case:—In November, 1786, Shaw agreed to purchase a copyhold messuage in Chailey of R. Hale, (by whom it had been mortgaged to R. Coppard to secure 50*l.*,) and to pay for Hale's interest therein 10*l.* The pauper paid Hale 10*l.*, who, on the 4th November, 1786, surrendered the premises to the pauper, subject to the conditional surrender made to Coppard, for securing 50*l.* In May, 1790, the pauper agreed with J. Heath to borrow of him 50*l.* on security of the estate, in order to pay off the mortgage to Coppard: and on the 8th of May the conditional surrender to Coppard was discharged. On the same day the pauper made a conditional surrender of the premises to Heath, for securing the re-payment of 50*l.* which Heath had advanced to discharge the mortgage to Coppard. On the 4th November, 1795, the pauper sold the estate for 80*l.*, being 30*l.* beyond the amount of the mortgage. The pauper resided in the cottage from the time of his purchase until the re-sale. By Lord Kenyon, C. J. "By 9 Geo. I. c. 7, no settlement can be gained by residing on a tenement that is purchased for less than 30*l.*; but it was decided in Rex v. Tedford (p. 911), that though the party cannot pay the money out of his own fund, if he can borrow it on credit that is sufficient to satisfy the words of the statute. It has been argued, that this was only an assignment of the original mortgage from the first to the second mortgagee, and that the mortgage interest never was in the pauper: and to be sure if that interest never were in the pauper, it would be difficult to say that it conferred a settlement on him. Then it was said, that though the mortgage interest did pass through the pauper, it was merely the mode of transferring a copyhold interest from one person to another, and that this interest did not vest in the pauper; but the latter part of the proposition is not true; the estate did not pass immediately from the first to the second mortgagee; there was an interval, though a short one, in which the estate was vested in the pauper, and he conveyed it to the second mortgagee. An attempt, however, was made to distinguish this case from Rex v. Tedford, by saying, that there the legal estate was in the pauper for a longer period than in the present case, but that cannot furnish any real ground of distinction. If this had been a freehold estate, every judgment signed against the pauper, and properly docketed, would have attached on this estate. Although when I first read this case I hesitated whether this could confer a settlement on the pauper, yet, on consideration, I think it is more safe to support the decision of Rex v. Tedford, from which I think this cannot fairly be distinguished, and which has been adopted in subsequent cases, than to introduce nice and artificial distinctions." Order of sessions affirmed.

Purchase for 39*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* the premises being then mortgaged for 32*l.* which was never paid, is a purchase only for 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* bonâ fide paid, and confers no settlement.

Rex v. Mattingley, 2 T. R. 12. Removal from Mattingley to Heckfield. Order quashed. Case:—On the 18th June, 1769, the pauper came to Mattingley with a certificate from Heckfield, and lived there till the removal. Previous to August, 1780, he contracted with John Ironmonger for the purchase of a copyhold tenement at Mattingley, which had been mortgaged to T. Bayley for 32*l.*, which money was unpaid at the time of making the contract; the pauper was to pay 39*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* for the tenement, which was inclusive of the 32*l.* due on the mortgage, and the pauper paid to Ironmonger 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, which with 32*l.* to be paid to Bailey, made the sum of 39*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* On the 3rd of August, 1780, the pauper was admitted on the surrender of

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

Ironmonger, subject to a mortgage surrender to Bailey, and the pauper entered and continued in possession for four years, during which he paid Bailey two years' interest, which was all the interest Bailey received after the purchase. He never paid off the mortgage money: and in 1784 delivered up the possession. Ashhurst, J., said, "The only question was, whether the purchase made by the pauper was in fact of the value of 30*l.*? The pauper only purchased the interest of the mortgagor subject to the mortgage. Now the estate was mortgaged for 32*l.*; therefore the mortgagor's interest subject to that was only 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, which was the whole of the pauper's purchase. The estate having been mortgaged for 32*l.*, the instant the mortgagee got into possession he might have gained a settlement upon it; if so, the mortgagee was a purchaser for 32*l.*, and the pauper only purchased subject to that charge. In the Tedford case (p. 911), it was only decided that if a man purchased an estate for 30*l.* bona fide paid, the court would not inquire how the purchaser came by the money, but here the purchaser did not bona fide pay 30*l.*; and that circumstance distinguishes this case from Rex v. Tedford. If the pauper, previous to the contract for purchase, had given the mortgagee a personal security for the mortgage money, then he would first have bought an estate for 30*l.*, though part of the purchase money would have been borrowed on mortgage; then the statute would have been satisfied, and the pauper have gained a settlement." Grose, J. "It is to be observed that the statute does not give a settlement to a man purchasing an estate of the value of 30*l.* It has been argued, that if the vendor has been satisfied with 30*l.* it is a purchase. But that is not the true construction of the act; for the question must be, whether the purchaser is able to pay, or has bona fide paid, 30*l.* I agree that if the purchase money has been bona fide paid, the court would not have inquired how the purchaser came by the money, nor whether he mortgaged the estate for the payment of it: that might be a question of fraud for the consideration of the sessions: and if fraudulent, no settlement could be gained. In order to constitute a purchase within 9 Geo. I., the sum of 30*l.* must not only be paid in point of fact, but must be also bona fide paid." Order of sessions quashed.

A purchase for 52*l.*, 40*l.* of which remained on a mortgage of the premises to the vendor, is not a payment of 30*l.* within the statute. After some years, pauper sold the messuage for 60*l.* to another, who paid the 40*l.* to the original vendor, and 20*l.* to the pauper, who quitted the messuage in less than forty days afterwards: he gains no settlement.

Rex v. Olney, 1 M. & S. 387. Order of removal of Richard Mayes from Olney to Earl's Barton, discharged. Case:—The pauper came to Olney by a certificate, dated July, 1788, directed to that parish from Earl's Barton. Whilst the pauper was residing in Olney under the certificate, about September, 1800, and some time prior to the feoffment hereinafter mentioned, he agreed with Michael Hinde to purchase a messuage of him in Olney at 52*l.*, if Hinde would allow 40*l.*, part of the 52*l.*, to remain upon mortgage, to which Hinde consented; by a deed of feoffment of the 8th of October, 1800, Hinde, in consideration of 52*l.* therein mentioned to be paid by the pauper, conveyed to him the messuage in fee; and upon the deed there was indorsed a receipt for 52*l.*, but in fact only 12*l.* were paid to Hinde, and the remaining 40*l.* was secured to him by a mortgage, bearing date the 9th of October, 1800, by which the pauper, pursuant to the agreement, demised the messuage to Hinde for 1000 years, in consideration of 40*l.* in the deed of mortgage mentioned to have been paid by Hinde to the pauper; and there was a proviso for the deed's becoming void upon payment of 40*l.*, with interest, on the 9th April then next. The feoffment and deed of mortgage were both executed at the same time, and remained together with the title deeds in the custody of Hinde. The pauper immediately entered into possession, and continued to reside there, and paid the interest upon the 40*l.* to Hinde, until the execution of the deeds hereinafter mentioned, but during such time never had the ability to pay off the principal. About a month before the 12th of June, 1812, the pauper agreed with Thomas Bowden to sell to him the messuage, in consideration of 60*l.*, and soon afterwards Bowden paid to Hinde the 40*l.* in discharge of his mortgage, and in part of his (Bowden's) purchase money, and received from Hinde the title deeds, together with the feoffment and mortgage. Afterwards, by indorsement on the indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 12th of June,

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration

1812, Hinde, in consideration of 40*l.* to him therein mentioned to be paid by the pauper, assigned the 1000 years to the pauper, and by deeds of lease and release, dated the 12th and 13th of June, 1812, the pauper conveyed the messuage to Bowden in fee for 60*l.*: and 20*l.*, being the balance of the purchase money, were then paid by Bowden to the pauper. The indorsement and indentures of lease and release were all executed at the same time. It was urged that when the mortgage was ultimately discharged on June 12, 1812, it became a bona fide payment of the whole sum. But Bayley, J., observed that "the pauper did not reside forty days after that time." Grose, J. (Lord Ellenborough, C. J. absente.) "The question is, whether this was a purchase for 30*l.* bona fide paid, so as to satisfy the stat. 9 Geo. I. where the purchase was contracted for upon security to be given for part of the purchase money, and such part never paid by the purchaser? The case in substance states that the premises were mortgaged for 40*l.* of the purchase money, and that that money was not paid. But I think that the consideration must be bona fide paid at the time of the purchase, in order to satisfy the statute. Then it is clear that this was not the purchase of an estate for 30*l.* paid at the time, the consideration money having remained upon security." Le Blanc, J. "The 9 Geo. I. enacts, that no person shall gain a settlement by virtue of any purchase of any estate whereof the consideration doth not amount to 30*l.* bona fide paid. The question arises on the purchase. The purchase money amounted to 52*l.*, of which 12*l.* only were paid at the time, the rest was left on mortgage to the vendor. That circumstance distinguishes it from the cases cited, where the party purchasing paid the whole money to the vendor by borrowing a part aliunde, so that there he had credit to borrow of others. In Rex v. Mattingley (p. 912), it was held, where the purchaser contracted for the purchase of a copyhold estate for 39*l.*, which was mortgaged for 32*l.*, and paid only 7*l.*, and was admitted subject to the mortgage, that it was not a purchase for 30*l.* bona fide paid, so as to take it out of the statute. That is a direct authority on this part of the case. But it has been argued upon a supposed difference, inasmuch as the purchase money was ultimately paid in the subsequent transaction with Bowden. But how does that stand? All that was done by Bowden, when he became the purchaser of the estate, was to pay off the incumbrance, in order to get the title deeds into his hands, which had never passed from the original seller into the hands of the pauper. That was a payment therefore made by Bowden for his own benefit, and not on behalf of the pauper." Order quashed.

A mortgagee entering as a principal creditor for above 30*l* is a purchaser for more than 30*l*.

Rex v. Stockland, 2 Stra. 1162; Burr. S. C. 169; 2 Bott, 667. John Spiller, the pauper, was a mortgagee of a term for 15*l.*; and 30*s.* were due to him for interest, and 18*l.* 10*s.* more on bond and simple contract. The mortgagor died. Spiller took out administration as principal creditor; entered and was possessed: and so continued till removed by the original order. By the court: "Spiller gained a settlement as a purchaser for a consideration of more than 30*l.* bona fide paid."

3. Money laid out on Estate after Purchase.

Laying out money afterwards upon a purchase under 30*l.* will not gain a settlement, even though the money be laid out in the erection of a shop.

3. Money laid out on Estate after Purchase.

Rex v. Dunchurch, Burr. S. C. 553; 1 Bla. Rep. 596. Edward Tansur, a certificate man from Dunchurch, with his wife, were joint purchasers of a house and garden at South Kilworth, and paid for it 19*l.* He laid out 15*l.* more in repairs, and built a shop on the premises; and was taxed after the rate of a tenement of 30*l.* value, and resided in the same till his death. After his death, his widow, the pauper, continued in possession for ten months; afterwards sold part for upwards of 30*l.*, and reserved part to herself; but removing out of the same into another house in the same parish she was removed to Dunchurch. Order confirmed. By the court:—The whole question is, whether this woman was a bona fide purchaser of an estate of 30*l.* value? She cannot be presumed to have come to it by descent, or executorship, or any such like act of law, because the contrary appears. She and her husband were joint purchasers. They took jointly and by entirety, and not by moieties." If so, she can only stand in the same situation as her husband did; which is that of a purchaser. And as to the value, the act takes it according to the purchase money actually paid; and no money afterwards laid out can make the prior purchase of a greater value than it really was at the time of making it. Therefore she gained no settlement by this purchase." Orders confirmed.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

4. Equitable Interest in Purchased Estate.

4. Equitable Interest in Purchased Estate. A written agreement was made for the purchase of an estate, to be paid for by two instalments; the first to be payable within a few days after signing the agreement, and the last at the expiration of seven months. The vendor was to make out a good title on the payment of the last instalment, and to convey the premises; but the purchaser was to be let into possession upon the payment of the first instalment. The purchaser paid the first instalment, and was let into possession, and continued in possession for a year and a half; but the last instalment was never paid, nor any conveyance executed; and the purchaser afterwards gave up the contract upon receiving back part of the first instalment: Held, that under this contract the purchaser did not acquire an equitable estate, so as to gain a settlement under the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5.

Rex v. Geddington, 2 B. & C. 29; 3 D. & R. 403. (a) Order of removal of J. Garfield from Geddington to Dunton Bassett quashed. Case:—In November, 1814, Garfield entered into a written agreement with Richard Nason, by which the latter agreed to sell to Garfield a messuage situate at Dunton Bassett, for 310*l.* to be paid as follows: 160*l.* on the 30th of November instant, and 150*l.* on the 24th June next, with interest at 5 per cent. Nason agreed at his cost to make out a good title, and to convey the same at the cost of Garfield on the 24th June next, on payment of 150*l.* with interest. Garfield agreed with Nason to pay him on the 30th November the 160*l.* and the 150*l.* with interest on the 24th June, on having the premises conveyed to him. On payment of the 160*l.* Garfield was to be let into possession; but in case default should be made by him of payment of the 160*l.*, the agreement was to be void, and Nason was to be at liberty to sell the premises on the 5th December next. The 160*l.* was paid on the day appointed, and possession then given by Nason, and the pauper resided in the house for a year and a half; but he never paid the 150*l.*, nor was any conveyance ever executed. An action at law was brought by Nason for the 150*l.*; but afterwards, by agreement, discontinued; Nason paying the costs, and returning to the pauper 30*l.* of the 160*l.*, and the pauper agreeing to give up the contract and the possession, which was accordingly done. [During the argument, Holroyd, J., said, "If you show that the vendor and vendee stood merely in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust, then the latter would have an equitable estate, and would gain a settlement. But none of the cases cited show that a court of equity would, under the circumstances of this case, consider the estate to belong to the vendee as he failed to pay the residue of the purchase money." And Bayley, J., observed, "That Rex v. Long Bennington, 6 M. & S. 408, seems to be precisely in point. There the pauper agreed by parol to buy a copyhold for 150*l.* He paid 34*l.* and entered into possession, in part performance of the contract, and continued near six months; the contract was then rescinded, because the seller would not give an indulgence he had promised for the residue of the purchase money, and the seller returned the pauper 14*l.* The question was, whether this gave a settlement? The sessions thought it did; but this court held otherwise: for the pauper had purchased no estate or interest in this land; he could have made no claim in equity without paying the remainder of the purchase money; and though an equitable estate is sufficient to confer a settlement, a questionable right to go into a court of equity is not."] After the argument was concluded, Bayley, J. "In cases relating to the law of settlement, the manner of determining any particular point is not so important, as it is that the decisions should be uniform and consistent. For as that law is administered gratuitously by a most respectable and meritorious body of magistrates, whose habits and duties are not likely to make them acquainted with the nice distinctions of the courts of equity, it is desirable that they should have cases settled upon plain grounds for their direction, rather than that they should be called upon to entertain and decide difficult questions of equitable law. The question in this case arises on the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5. There must either be an estate or interest purchased; and by the latter word I understand a definite interest, for which the party contracts at the time of making the contract. If the question raised were res integra, I should be disposed to hold that the legislature meant a legal interest only.

(a) See observations on this case in a pamphlet by A. Amos, Esq.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

It has been decided, however, that a cestui que trust has a sufficient interest in land to gain a settlement under this statute, and I feel bound to adhere to those decisions; but there may be a distinction between an equitable estate and a mere equitable right, and that is adverted to by my brother Holroyd in Rex v. Toddington, (p. 889). The Rex v. Long Bennington is expressly in point with the present, and shows that in cases of constructive trusts a settlement is not gained by the cestui que trust. The agreement there, indeed, was by parol, but that circumstance formed no ingredient in the judgment of the court. The principle of the decision was, that a court of law, perhaps in ignorance of what a court of equity would do under the circumstances, held that it was not the case of a mere naked trustee and a cestui que trust; for, until the payment of the full purchase money, the vendor had a beneficial interest, and was something more than a trustee; and therefore that no settlement was gained. There is one distinction between the two cases. In the case cited it does not appear when the residue of the purchase money was to be paid: whereas in this case part was paid on the 30th November, and the residue was to have been paid on the 24th June. And it is said, that during the interval the pauper was irremovable; but I think he was not irremovable till the 24th June, because it was not his own estate, either at law or in equity, until he paid or tendered the residue of the purchase money; and that being so, I am of opinion that there was no settlement gained in Dunton Bassett." Holroyd, J. "I am of opinion that this was not to be considered the estate of the pauper, either in law or equity, so as to give him a settlement under the contract which is stated in this case. Whether, if the vendee had paid, or offered to pay, the remainder of the purchase money, an equitable estate would have been gained, so as to give a settlement, is a very different question. The cases which have been cited show, that where the vendee has performed the contract in part, and has offered to pay the remainder of the purchase money, the vendor then becomes a trustee for the vendee, and a court of equity will compel a specific performance. Rex v. Long Bennington seems to me to have been properly decided, and to govern the present. There, indeed, the contract was by parol, and it did not appear that the vendee was to have possession for a specific period of time; but these distinctions were not relied upon. Here time is given till June, when the residue of the purchase money is to be paid; and it is agreed that the vendee should have possession till that time. The effect of which is merely this, that it might or might not amount to a demise for that time; but there is not sufficient found in the case to show that there was a renting of a tenement of 10*l.* annual value. But it is said, that at all events there was a purchase of an interest for six months; it does not, however, appear how much was to be paid for that, or that the pauper, in purchasing that, acquired an interest in land to the value of 30*l.* If the contract was rescinded by the fault of the vendor, it is questionable whether anything could be recovered for the possession during the six months. For these reasons I think that no settlement was gained in Dunton Bassett." Best, J. "It has long been settled that an equitable estate will satisfy the words, any estate or interest, in the 9 Geo. I.; but it must be a clear and absolute equitable estate; such an estate as a court of equity would put the person claiming it into the complete possession of, and protect him against any attempts to disturb his enjoyment of it. A court of equity could not give possession to a purchaser who had not paid the purchase money, or keep him in possession if he were put in against the legal claim of the vendor. Such a purchaser has only an inchoate right, which is not rendered a perfect equitable estate until he has paid all that he has stipulated to pay. Where purchasers have been ready to pay the price, and tendered it to the vendor, cases have occurred in which very nice questions have arisen, whether they are entitled to a conveyance. The business in which we are occupied in this court does not qualify us for the decision of such points. But if we are incompetent, how much more so must those be who compose the courts of sessions; and these things cannot be submitted to us until they have first been decided upon by them. I say, therefore, with my brother Bayley, in Rex v. Horndon-on-the-Hill, (p. 906,) 'we cannot know how a court of equity will deal with such a case;' and that I do not see that the pauper had any equitable estate, certainly not such a perfect one as confers a settlement." Order confirmed.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

A purchase for 40*l.* and payment of 30*l.* on account, with possession without a conveyance, is not sufficient; nor, although on a resale of the premises for 40*l.*, the original vendor was paid the 10*l.* owing upon the first purchase.

Rex v. Llantilio Grossenney, 5 B. & C. 461; 8 D. & R. 320. William Edwards was removed from St. Peter's, Hereford, to Llantilio Grossenney, confirmed. Case:—In 1816 the pauper made a parol agreement with Ann Carter for the purchase of a cottage and garden for 40*l.* Under this contract he took possession, and paid Carter 30*l.* on account. No conveyance was executed. After the pauper had for twelve months lived in the cottage with his family, he sold the property for 40*l.* to Sarah Watkins, to whom he gave possession, and afterwards paid the remaining 10*l.* to Carter. The pauper was never in possession of the premises after he had paid the whole of the purchase money. Bayley, J. "It is very desirable to adhere to the language of the statute, and to the construction put upon it by decided cases. There must be a purchase of an estate or interest; and the latter word must be understood some specific definite interest, and the party contracting must become the purchaser. Rex v. Long Bennington (p. 915), and Rex v. Geddington (p. 915), establish that although an equitable estate is sufficient to give a settlement, still the purchase must be completed; and that if it be not an estate, but an equitable right only, no settlement is gained. The principle deducible from these cases is, that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust must be created in order to give a settlement by the purchase. In Rex v. Geddington the agreement was to purchase an estate for 310*l.* of which 160*l.* was to be paid on the 30th November, and 150*l.* on the 24th June then next. The latter sum was never paid. The pauper resided a year and a half, and afterwards the contract was rescinded; there, by paying 150*l.* a perfect equitable estate would have been acquired; but it was never paid; therefore the pauper was held never to have had a perfect equitable estate. Here the pauper had paid 30*l.*, and by paying 10*l.* more he would have performed all he was bound to do, and would have acquired a perfect equitable estate. During the whole time the pauper was in possession, he might have been removed. He never was the purchaser of an estate or definite interest. It has been argued that the payment of the 10*l.* would have given the purchaser a right to demand a conveyance; and that as it might have been made at any time, the payment, when made, related back to the time when the occupation began, and therefore that the estate by relation was the estate of the purchaser from the time his occupation commenced. I think, however, for the purpose of a settlement, such a payment did not give him the estate ab initio, but only from the time the payment was actually made; the expression of my brother Holroyd in Rex v. Geddington as to the vendee having acquired a settlement by having paid or offered to pay the remainder of the purchase money must be understood in that sense." Holroyd, J. "The pauper in this case never was in possession of the estate after he had paid the 10*l.* He therefore never came to settle upon his own estate. A tender of the purchase money might perhaps have been equivalent to payment, upon the principle that an offer to perform is equivalent to actual performance; but then in that case, in order to give a settlement, the purchaser, at the time of the tender, must have had a right to continue to hold the premises. Here at the time when the payment of the residue was made, the purchaser had no right to hold possession of the premises." Order confirmed.

Payment of purchase money has no retrospective effect.

Rex v. Woolpit, 4 D. & R. 456; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 272. John Pennell was removed from Woolpit to Coombs. Order quashed. That part of the case on which judgment was given stated that the pauper, by a written contract, agreed to buy some cottages for 70*l.*, and paid 10*l.* of it "at the time." He never paid any more, nor was any conveyance executed. He built on the garden, but never lived on the premises. Bayley, J. "After Rex v. Geddington, (p. 915,) which was founded upon Rex v.

Payment of a deposit does not give an equitable estate.

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration

An equitable estate is necessary to give a settlement. An equitable right is not sufficient.

Long Bennington, it is quite idle to contend that the mere payment of a deposit upon the purchase of an estate of this description is sufficient to create such an equitable estate as will confer a settlement or render the party irremovable. Those cases have decided that an equitable right is not sufficient to confer a settlement, or make the pauper irremovable. There must be an equitable estate actually vested to produce these consequences. It is impossible to say that this pauper ever had an equitable estate. He had an equitable right; that is to say he had a right, upon the payment of the remainder of the purchase money, to go into a court of equity, and call upon the vendor for a conveyance. He had an inchoate equitable right, but clearly had not an equitable estate. It never could be predicated of him that he had a right to go into a court of equity and demand a conveyance of the estate at all events, and say that he was seised in his demesne as of fee, in equity." Holroyd, J. "I am also of opinion that, so far from the pauper having an equitable estate, he had not even a right to go into a court of equity until he had tendered or signified his consent to pay the remainder of the purchase money; and if it was refused on the other side, and he had filed a bill in equity, notwithstanding the refusal, the bill, I should presume, would be dismissed with costs. He had no right to go into equity unless he had done, or offered to do, all that was necessary on his part to perfect his title." Littledale, J. "He had no right to go into equity unless he did something else which he had not done." Order of sessions quashed.

A father, upon parol agreement, advanced money to his son, on condition of his purchasing a piece of land and building a house thereon, which the father and mother were to occupy during their joint and separate lives, but not to dispose of the same; the father, after living in the house three years rent free, died: Held, that he had no legal or equitable estate in the house, and that the occupation conferred no settlement; nor was the mother entitled to reside in it irremovably.

Rex v. Standon, 2 M. & Sel. 461. Removal from Eccleshall to Standon confirmed. Case:—Ann is the widow of Joseph Farmer, deceased. Five years ago Joseph, their eldest son, agreed to give 65*l.* for a piece of land in Eccleshall, which was offered to sale by the commissioners under an inclosure act; but not having sufficient money himself, he applied to his father, who consented to advance him 20*l.*, (which had been left to his wife, Ann,) upon the following conditions:—viz., that a house should be built by the son upon the land, which the father and mother were to have for their lives, and the life of the survivor, after whose death the same was to go to the son; but it was also agreed that the father and mother were not to sell or dispose of the place, nor to take any other family into the house. The father was at that time advanced in years, and the son wished to show his good will towards him and his mother, and to assist them all he could. This agreement was not reduced into writing, but the father having advanced the 20*l.* to the son, the whole 65*l.* were then paid by the son for the purchase, and the land was conveyed by the award of the commissioners to the son in fee. The house was built immediately afterwards at the son's expense, but the father assisted personally in building it. When finished, the father and mother took possession of it with the consent of the son, who did not think himself at liberty to turn them out, nor did he ever attempt to do so. The son lived in another house, and his father and mother paid no rent to any person; and after having resided in the house about three years, the father died, and the mother continued to live in it as before, with the son's consent, until her removal under the order to Standon. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "It appears clearly that no estate, either legal or equitable, was conveyed to the father or mother, nor any such interest probably as a court of equity would have decreed to be conveyed. They had nothing more than a conditional and qualified licence by parol to occupy, irrevocable perhaps, except on breach of the condition not to let in any other person. This is not like the case of a devise; here is no gift or grant of an interest in the land; and the parties seem to have been aware of that, for they stood by and suffered the whole to be conveyed to the son, resting merely on his parol licence that they should live there." Le Blanc, J. "The ground on which this case is rested is, that a party cannot be removed from his own estate. The cases decide that if a party has clearly an equitable estate, he shall not be removed from it. But the court must see clearly that he has an equitable estate, which would be perfected in him by the intervention of a court of equity. I think the argument here has failed in showing that these parties could, by resorting to a court of equity, have obtained a conveyance of the legal estate."

3. By Purchase for Pecuniary Consideration.

An equitable estate may be acquired by a bond from the legal owner.

Rex v. Lopen, 2 T. R. 577. A woman, on her marriage with a copyholder of a manor where the widows were entitled to free bench, gave a bond that the son of her intended husband, by a former wife, should have possession of part of the copyhold after her husband's death, on condition of his repairing the whole. At the husband's death the son took possession. It was urged that as the bond was without consideration, a court of equity would not compel performance. Buller, J. "It was not a voluntary bond, for it was executed in consideration of marriage, and the widow reserved in it a benefit to herself. But this is an instrument obligatory at law. There is another circumstance decisive in this case; the widow was so satisfied that she was bound by the bond, that on the death of her husband she actually delivered up possession according to the contract; and from that time till 1768 the pauper's father (who was the son mentioned in the bond) continued in possession under an idea that he was entitled under the bond. This man then, so in possession, had a good title against all the world but the widow; nay, the widow herself was so far bound by the bond, that she could not have recovered in ejectment. So that he not only had an equitable title, but he had also the possession, and no person could have recovered the estate from him."

A father, in consideration of natural affection and of 24*l.* which he owed his son, made over to him premises by verbal agreement only, and the son received the rents for three years: This is a purchase for less than 30*l.*

Rex v. Piddlehinton, 3 Bar. & Adol. 460. John Northover was removed from Piddlehinton to Charminster. Order quashed. Case:—On the 13th October, 1813, J. Browne and his wife, in consideration of 40*l.*, demised to William Northover, the pauper's father, a cottage in the parish of Stratton, Dorsetshire, for sixty years. The pauper, by a verbal agreement with his father, who owed him 24*l.*, was put into the possession of and received the rents of the cottage for three years, 3*l.* for the first year and 5*l.* for the two next years. At the end of which term, by indenture dated the 4th of November, 1816, between the said W. Northover of the first part, the pauper of the second part, and one Thomas Bowring of the third part, reciting the deed of October, 1813, and that the father, since the delivery and execution thereof, had, in consideration of his natural love and affection to his son (the pauper), and also in liquidation of a certain debt due to him, verbally, and without any assignment or conveyance, given to his son the said cottage, and put him in possession of the rents, and that the pauper had contracted to sell the premises to the said J. Bowring; the father, by the direction, approbation, and consent of the pauper, in consideration of 25*l.*, assigned and conveyed the said cottage to Bowring, and the pauper ratified and confirmed the conveyance. The father and the pauper joined in the usual covenants to the purchaser. The pauper received the 25*l.* purchase money from Bowring. During the three years above-mentioned, the pauper resided in the parish of Stratton; and upon this evidence the sessions were of opinion that he had gained a settlement there. It was contended, that this was not a purchase but a gift, as in Rex v. Ufton, p. 903. But per Curiam: "That is where there has been an actual conveyance. Here there was none, and the pauper could not ground an equitable interest on natural love and affection; such interest, if he had any, must have rested on the pecuniary consideration, and that was below 30*l.*" Order of sessions quashed.

IV. Of the Residence.

4. Of the Residence.

It is essential to the perfecting of a settlement in respect of estate, that the owner should have actually resided in the parish where it is situated for full forty days, and whilst his interest continued. After he has so resided for that time he has acquired a perfect settlement, and cannot be removed. Although a pauper may not by residence be able to acquire a settlement, as the purchaser of an estate for less than 30*l.*, yet he may be irremovable. Rex v. Martley, p. 908. If he quit the parish voluntarily, he cannot be removed thither, unless he has acquired a settlement.

4. Of the Residence.

The pauper however will not now retain a settlement acquired by estate in any parish for any longer time than he inhabits within ten miles thereof. See 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 68, and the cases on this statute, p. 855.

Settlement lost by non-residence within ten miles.

Residence in the parish sufficient.

Ryslip v. Harrow, 2 Salk. 524; 2 Bott, 673. By Holt, C. J. "Having land in a parish will not make a settlement, but living in a parish where one has land will gain a settlement without notice: for the act never meant to banish men from the enjoyment of their own lands."

Residence by the wife, where husband is absent, on an estate devised to wife, is not sufficient.

Berkhamstead v. St. Mary, North Church, 2 Sess. Ca. 182; 2 Bott, 51. J. Woodward, the husband, ran away, and it was not known whether he was alive or dead. In the mean time the wife had two houses devised to her in North Church, and she and her children went to live in one of them. The question was, whether by continuing therein forty days they gained a settlement. Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "As this case is stated, the mother cannot gain a settlement for her children: the father, whilst alive, is the head of the family, and the children must derive their settlements through him. As to the cases of foreigners or Scotchmen who have no settlements, they are singular cases, and the wife gains a settlement through necessity: but there never was an instance where the wife was held to acquire a settlement during the life of her husband. The husband, in right of his wife, has a title to live at N. C., but he can gain no settlement there without a residence for forty days. There must be in all cases an inhabitancy; the wife's inhabitancy at N. C. with her children is not the inhabitancy of her husband. A feme covert cannot by residence gain a settlement for her husband; the only doubt is, whether, as he is stated only to have been a clerk, we are bound to look on his appointment as for life." Page and Probyn, Js., agreed. Lee, J., seemed to think that the mother could gain a right of residence for her children at N. C., but he admitted that she could not gain a settlement for them during the father's life.

Residence for less than forty days is insufficient.

Rex v. West Shefford, Burr. S. C. 307; 2 Bott, 677. John Bird came into West Shefford with a certificate from Baydon. During his stay at West Shefford he became beneficially entitled to a leasehold estate of 14*l.* a year there, determinable upon his own life; upon which he entered on November 17th, and continued in possession till the 15th of December following, being twenty-eight days only, when he died. By the Court: "In all cases, whether of ownership of land or renting 10*l.* a year, a residence of forty days is necessary. And Mursley v. Grandborough, (p. 884,) was cited as in point, in which it was holden that any person who has an estate of his own, either freehold, copyhold, or a beneficial term for years, by act of law (as by descent, marriage, executorship, or administration,) may dwell upon it as his own, and he is not removable, and will gain a settlement if he continue forty days, though under 10*l.* a year. But he must abide forty days. And neither he nor his can be removed to it from any other place, unless he shall have resided forty days.

It is not necessary to reside on the estate or successively for forty days.

Children, part of the family, though living elsewhere, follow such settlement.

Rex v. Sowton, Andr. 345. T. Willes, the pauper, rented an estate in Sowton at 100*l.* per annum, and being distrained, left the estate, and having an estate in his own right for a term of years, of the value of 19*l.* 10*s.* per annum in Sidbury, went there and took possession of the estate. He continued at Sidbury from November to April, weeding the ground and sowing turnips therein, but paid no taxes and had no stock on the lands, nor any goods in his house at Sidbury, but lodged at a public-house there, without having a particular room assigned to him. He continued there forty days in the whole, but not successively, and went frequently to Sowton to see his wife and children, who were left behind, and remained at Sowton, where he stayed sometimes a week at a time. Afterwards, in April, he sold his estate, and went back to Sowton, from whence he was removed. Lee, C. J. "The pauper had certainly no settlement at Sowton if he obtained one at Sidbury, which is the point in question. And to determine this, it is proper to be considered whether it appears he had such an interest in the estate as was properly his own, and contra-distinguished to a rack-rented estate. The case is not stated so fully as it should have been; for it should have been shown by what title the pauper came by the estate, whether by act of law as an executor, or by devise or purchase, or in what other manner. As this is not done, we cannot intend that he was a purchaser thereof, and consequently this case does not fall within the late act. However, upon the circumstances set out in the sessions' order, the estate does seem to be of a beneficial nature, and the pauper is mentioned to have had it in his own right, and consequently the quantum of the value is not material, because the owner has a right to be where his estate lies, and so it has been determined. The next matter to be considered is the pauper's residence at Sidbury. It is rightly admitted at the bar, that it is not necessary, upon the statute of Car. II., the continuance should be for forty days successively. In Edgeware v. Harrow, (p. 862,) it was held, that a residence for forty days, where the party is irremovable for that time, gains a settlement. And upon the old law, when a man came to a place, on the first day he was regarded as a stranger; on the second as a guest; and on the third as an inhabitant: and a place of settlement (which is a modern term, and has arisen from the acts of removal,) is a place of habitation. Now in this case it is plain, from what is said under the former head, that the pauper was irremovable whilst he was at Sidbury; and though he lodged at a public-house, this is not very material, because a man may have 100*l.* a year in a parish, and no house there. And the reason of his going to Sowton and other places is mentioned to be for the purpose of seeing his family, and about his affairs. Objected: That the party's settlement at Sowton was not determined, because it does not appear he was absent from thence for forty successive days. Answer: This point depends on the question whether he was long enough at Sidbury to gain one there; for if so, then he loses his former settlement at the other place. Upon the whole, therefore, we must take the estate to be a beneficial interest, and the property of the pauper. And his residence at Sidbury was such as is sufficient to gain him a settlement there. As to the other point, there has been some diversity of opinion amongst the judges, how far the settlement of children shall be derived from that of the father. In Edgeware v. Harrow it was said by Parker, C. J., 'That a child cannot be sent to the place of the father's settlement unless the child hath been there; for that he derives a settlement from his father, not as he doth an inheritance, but by reason of his being in a place from whence he could not be removed whilst he was with his father. But in Eversley v. Blackwater, (p. 445,) where that objection was taken by Mr. Reeve, the court held that a child may be sent to the place of his father's settlement though he hath never been there, which was that case, but the child was only two years old. In East Woodhay v. West Woodhay, (p. 435,) where the child was of a considerable age, and parted from his father, it was held that he could not be sent to the place of his father's settlement: and so it was resolved in St. Michael's, Norwich, v. St. Matthew's, Ipswich, (p. 435,) where the child had been twelve years parted from his father, and emancipated from him, and also married. This therefore is the true distinction, that where a child remains in his father's house, and has gained no settlement of his own, his settlement shall attend that of his father; but otherwise it is where he has been separated from his father and has gained a settlement of his own. The consequence is, that as in this case the children have always continued in the father's family, and it is not stated that they have gained a settlement of their own, though some of them are twenty or thirty years old, they are settled where the father is. And the law is the same in the case of a mother as of a father." The rest of the court was of the same opinion with the chief justice upon both points, and for the same reasons, and therefore the order of justices was now confirmed, and the order of sessions quashed.

4. Of the Residence.

The forty days need not be successive.

Rex v St. Nyott's, Burr. S. C. 132; 2 Bott, 676. Nicholas Penquite, the pauper, was born at St. Cleere; afterwards he gained a settlement at St. Nyott's; and from thence returned to St. Cleere, and lived there with his mother on a tenement, in part of which he had an estate of freehold and inheritance, and of which he was seised in common together with his mother and sisters. He worked there as a day-labourer, and lodged sometimes on his own estate and sometimes in other places, where he worked in St. Clere, and at other times in other parishes adjoining; but did not reside on his estate in St. Cleere, or in St. Cleere, forty days together at any one time between his return to and selling his estate in St. Cleere (about three years). By the Court: "This depends on the 13 & 14 Car. II. which directs the sending a pauper to the place where he was last legally settled for the space of forty days. But this man continued off and on for more than forty days. And it is not necessary that he should have resided there forty days together. He was irremovable from St. Cleere for above forty days; and that is sufficient."

4. Of the Residence.

IX. Of Settlements by Office.

No settlement can now be acquired by serving an office. Before however the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, it was observed by Lord Ellenborough, that "a man who is of sufficient repute and station among his neighbours to be appointed to a public annual office, and who discharges the duties of such office for that period, seems peculiarly entitled to the privilege of a settlement in the parish where he has been thus known and employed. The law therefore which is to this effect, carries with it an obvious propriety, not so easily to be discerned in some of the other species of settlement." Rex v. Mersham, (post).

Though the service of an office may not gain a settlement, because it is not a public annual office, yet it may amount to an hiring and service.

1. Statutes on the Subject.
2. What Office, and what placing therein, will gain a Settlement.
3. Of the Time of Serving.
4. Of the Residence.

1. Statutes on the Subject.

1. Statutes on the Subject.

The 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, (a) enacts, "That if any person who shall come to inhabit in any town or parish, shall for himself, and on his own account, execute any public annual office or charge in the said town or parish, during one whole year, then he shall be adjudged and deemed to have a legal settlement in the same, though no such notice in writing be delivered and published as is hereby before required."

Certificated person must be legally placed in his office.

And the 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, enacts, "That no person or persons whatsoever, who shall come into any parish by any such certificate as aforesaid, shall be adjudged by any act whatsoever to have procured a legal settlement in such parish, unless he or they shall really and bona fide take a lease of a tenement of the value of ten pounds, or shall execute some annual office in such parish, being legally placed in such office."

From and after the passing of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76 (Aug. 14, 1834), no settlement shall be acquired by serving an office.

2. What Office, and what placing therein, will gain a Settlement.

2. What Office, and what placing therein, will gain a Settlement.

The nature of the office is defined by the enactment itself;—it must be an annual office or charge, and public in its nature, and the party must have been legally placed in such office. The act also requires that the person shall execute it for himself and on his own account, to entitle him to a settlement thereby: it follows that one who fills the office for another person, or a deputy, gains no settlement.

A person sworn into and serving the office of constable, as deputy to another, does not thereby gain a settlement. (19 Vin. Abr. 379.)

(a) "This statute was evidently intended to be confined to inferior annual officers, such as constables and the like known to the parish, and though the construction of the act has been extended in some cases, it ought not to be carried further." Lord Kenyon in Rex v. Wantage.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

Deputy constable gains no settlement.

Rex v. Winterbourn, Burr. S. C. 520; 1 Bla. Rep. 452 (a). The custom was for the constable to be presented by the jury at the leet. The jury presented R. Bayly, Esq., who procured the pauper to serve for him, in order to gain the pauper a settlement. The pauper accordingly was sworn into the office by a justice, and served the same for a year; but was not presented thereto at the court leet as constable in his own right. The court were clear that this was not serving an office on his own account, within the intent of the statute.

Same point.

Rex v. Allcannings, Burr. S. C. 634; 2 Bott, 242. The house occupied by Mr. Amor, being in turn to furnish a tithingman for Patney, the leet jury presented him to that office. And he, by leave of the court leet, put in his place Thomas Palmer, a common labourer and housekeeper, living in the parish, who was sworn in at the leet, and served the office for a year; Amor paid him all expenses attending the execution of it. Lord Mansfield. "The question is, whether the pauper served the office on his own account or not? The question is not how he was presented to it, but how he served it;" and after stating the facts, said, "It is clear that he executed the office for Amor, and not for himself." The rest of the court concurred, and Yates, J., said, "In the case of Winterbourn (ante), the pauper was considered as a substitute."

But a constable residing under a certificate and sworn into his office, and executing it by deputy, gains a settlement under 9 & 10 W. & M.

Rex v. Hope Mansell, E., 23 Geo. III., Cald. 252. James Davies, &c., was removed from Hope Mansell to Brampton Abbotts. Order quashed. Case:—D. Davies, being a certificate person from Ross to Brampton, resided at Brampton, where his son the pauper was born: the son lived in the parish, was chosen constable, and sworn to execute the office. After being so sworn, he declared he would not serve himself, and employed and paid another to serve for him; and the court were of opinion that the pauper having been sworn into office, and executing it by deputy, discharged the certificate and acquired a settlement.

But not under 3 & 4 W. & M.

In Rex v. St. Maurice, Winchester, Burr. S. C. 34, Lee, J., in alluding to Rex v. Burclean, said, "In that case the court unanimously held, that this act (9 & 10 Will. III.) was not to be considered as an explanatory, but a new act;" and he added, "And that is true; for it enlarges the certificate man's power of gaining a settlement: for now, if he executes such an office by deputy, he gains a settlement: whereas by 3 & 4 Will. and Mary, he was to execute it for himself, and on his own account."

Parish clerk is an annual office.

Gatton v. Milwich, Set. & Rem. 241; 2 Salk. 536; Fol. 123; 2 Bott, 157. A person being chosen parish clerk by a parson, served for several years, and received his fees and dues. By the Court: "It is a parish office, and has the care and custody of the ornaments of the church. 'Tis more than an annual office, for he is not movable and has fees: he is by common law an officer, and in for life. 'Tis true, if he is poor and has a family, they may remove him: for although he came in by the parson only, yet their not removing him implies their consent and approbation; and by this consent of theirs, the law adjudges him in by the concurrence of the parish."

The office of parish clerk is an office within the statute.

What is a legal appointment and notice to the parishioners.

Rex v. Bobbing, 5 A. & E. 682. H. Smart was removed from Barning to Bobbing. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper being settled in Bobbing went, in 1797, to Barning and resided there till removed by the present order. In 1811, the offices of parish clerk and sexton of Barning being vacant, Mr. Noble, then rector of the parish, sent for the pauper on a Sunday in that year, and requested him to perform the duty of clerk for that day. He did so, and Mr. Noble on coming out of the desk, said to him, "I shall appoint you my regular clerk and sexton, and to follow me in marriages and funerals." The pauper thereupon, without anything being further said or done, entered upon the execution of the duties of the said office, and continued to perform all the duties, and to receive the emolu-

(a) Mr. Nolan cites this case as an authority for saying that under 3 & 4 W. & M. a person must be appointed to the office; but the case as reported in Blackstone corresponds with the text.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

ments from them till 1833.' Soon after the pauper entered upon the office, two of the principal inhabitants objected to what the rector had done, inasmuch as the pauper was not settled in Barning: but the rector said, the pauper was the fittest person he could find, and that he therefore should persist in what he had done. A salary of 1*s.* per week was attached to the offices, and had been paid by the parish to the person who had previously filled them; and the pauper applied for this at the end of the first year. The overseer to whom he applied at first refused payment, assigning as a reason that the pauper was not settled in the parish; but the rector having threatened to take legal proceedings against the parish officers, the salary was paid to the pauper by the overseer, and continued to be paid by the parish to him for four or five years without any objection on their part. At the end of that period, the pauper applied to the parish for an increase of salary; and the subject having been taken into consideration at a vestry meeting, it was at such meeting agreed to raise the salary to 1*s.* 6*d.* a week, and at this rate the pauper was paid during the remainder of the time he served. The counsel against the settlement contended that there had been no formal notice of the appointment to the parishioners, upon which Patteson, J., observed: "Some parishioners understood it as an appointment, and remonstrated with the rector, who said he should persist. Then the parish pays the salary and increases it. Can you say there was not an appointment and notice of it to the parish?" After the argument, Lord Denman said: "Gatton v. Milwich, (p. 923,) shews that the office of parish clerk gives a settlement, and that case has not been overruled. And this was a distinct appointment to the office." The other judges concurred; and the order of sessions was quashed.

The pauper must have been legally placed in an annual office. A person performing the duties of a parish clerk without any appointment, legal or de facto, does not acquire a settlement, although he performs the duties for twelve years, and receives an annual salary.

Rex v. Stogursey, 1 B. & Ad. 795. Joel Leversham was removed from Stogursey, in the county of Somerset, to Kilton. Order quashed. Case:—The office of parish clerk of Kilton being vacant in October, 1818, the pauper began then to perform the duties of that office, and continued to perform them until his removal in January, 1830, and until the order appealed against, and received a yearly salary of 2*l.* 13*s.* from the parish; but neither he nor any other person was, during that period, chosen to the said office by the vicar, in whom the appointment is vested, nor was any such choice signified to the parishioners according to the canon. The pauper, when he first served the office, was resident in the parish of Kilve. On the 2nd of February, 1819, he took a lodging in the parish of Kilton, and resided there until the 25th of March following, when he went to the parish of Stogursey, where he has since continually resided. The question for the opinion of the court is, whether the pauper gained a settlement in the parish of Kilton. Lord Tenterden. "I think the order of sessions must be quashed, on the ground that there was no execution of an office. In my own opinion, there is great doubt whether this be an annual office within 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6. It is not so, strictly speaking, for it is more, it is an office for life. Gatton v. Milwich, (p. 923,) can hardly be said to have been decided on the ground that the office was annual. Powell, J., there says, 'It is more than an annual office, for he is not removable, and has fees.' And in Helsington v. Over (post), Aston, J., (a judge very well acquainted with the poor law) after observing that the employment of officiating curate under a sequestration cannot be called an annual office, when the sequestration may be determined at any time, adds, 'It is not the annual office of a constable or a tithing-man, they are appointed yearly, and to serve for the year. That of parish clerk is a freehold, and it is upon that footing that a parish clerk gains a settlement' I doubt therefore whether this be a public annual office within the statute. But assuming that an office for more than a year might be so considered, it appears to me that in this case the pauper cannot be said to have executed the office. There is indeed a difference between the statutes 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, and 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11. Under the last, it is necessary that the party, to gain a settlement by serving an office, should have been legally placed in it; under the former, if the office has actually been executed, it is not necessary to inquire whether the placing was legal. But here the party was never in any way placed in the office. The case merely states that he performed the duties from a certain time. The only proper appointment would have been by the vicar. If however he had been elected by the parishioners, and the vicar had afterwards assented, it might perhaps have been said that the service under such election was a good execution of the office. But here was not even a colourable appointment. The pauper only did the duties which a legal parish clerk, when appointed, would have done" Littledale, J. "It is not necessary to decide now whether or not the office of parish clerk be a public annual office within the statute, though I am rather inclined to think it is. But here the office was not executed. It is true the pauper served twelve years; but whether it were twelve or one makes no difference. The case merely states that the office of parish clerk being vacant in October, 1818, the pauper began then to perform the duties and continued doing so down to the time of his removal. It shows no appointment either by any person entitled by custom or otherwise. If there had even been such an appointment, as though not legal in the first instance, might ultimately have been rendered so, perhaps a settlement might have been gained. But here was no appointment whatever, and consequently no execution of the office" Taunton, J. "Whether this be an annual office or not it is unnecessary to decide, and perhaps the necessity may never arise, because a parish clerk duly appointed has at any rate a settlement by freehold. It is not pretended in this case that the pauper was legally placed in the office within the terms of 9 & 10 Will III c. 11, and it appears to me that he never was placed in it at all. He appears by the statement to have put himself into the office, and there done what would have been performed by a parish clerk if one had been legally appointed, but he himself never was appointed, elected, or nominated, he merely did the duties and received the salary I think this was not an execution of the office within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, and that no settlement was gained" Order of sessions quashed. (a)

A curate under a sequestration does not hold an annual office.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

A parish clerk acquires a settlement in respect of his freehold.

Rex v. Yalding, 3 D & R 352; 2 D & R Mag Ca 39 Order of removal of John Russell from Yalding to Marden quashed. Case —The manor of Aylesford is a manor of the ancient demesne of the crown, the court-rolls of which have been regularly kept for a long series of years, and the borough of Rugmorhill is a district within the manor, extending into seven parishes, and some part of it lying within the parish of Yalding At a court leet holden for the manor, it has been usual, from time immemorial, to appoint constables and borsholders, such officers being always expressed to be appointed to serve "for the year ensuing," and sworn to discharge the duties. A custom of appointing an ale-conner at the court-leet has also existed in the manor from time immemorial, but it does not appear that that officer was ever sworn to execute his office Since 1793 the office of weigher of weights and measures has been added to that of ale-conner. These latter, as well as the street-driver, have been appointed from time to time at the same court-leet as the constables and borsholders, although not expressed to be "for the year ensuing." At a court-leet holden in 1750 a street driver of the borough of Rugmorhill was appointed for the first time. Similar appointments took place in 1753, 1764, 1772, and 1784, and from that time to the present thirty-eight courts-leet have been held, at each of which a street-driver has been appointed, with the exception of 1798, no court having been held in that year. But in 1799 two courts-leet were held, one in January and one in November, at which the appointments

The court leet of the manor of A. appointed a person to be street-driver of the borough of R, a district within the manor, extending into seven parishes, to continue from one court to another It is not an annual office

(a) In Rex v. St Mary, Berkhamstead, 2 Sess. Ca. 182, the court seemed to be of opinion, that the executing the office of parish clerk is sufficient for a certificate person to gain a settlement, for it is an annual office and more.

In Peak v. Bourne, 2 Stra. 942, the plaintiff declared in prohibition, for that he was sued for serving the office of deputy parish clerk, without the licence of the ordinary; and the court held, that a licence was not necessary.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

were in the same form as in other instances, so that such officer, together with the constables, borsholders, &c., has been appointed on the days of holding the court-leet, which have occurred at intervals, sometimes of more, and sometimes of less, than a year; but it does not appear that he was ever sworn to discharge the duties of his office, or that there is any oath applicable to the office. In the record of the proceedings of a court-leet holden for the manor of Aylesford on the 19th of January, 1813, is the following entry:—"Also they present and appoint John Russell to be street-driver of and within the borough of Rugmorhill, within the manor." On the 8th of January, 1814, the pauper was again appointed in a similar form, and a third time on the 20th of February, 1815. The pauper never appeared at the courts at which he was nominated, and was never sworn. He discharged the duties of the office in person from the 19th of January, 1813, up to his re-appointment on the 8th of January, 1814; he also served in person for a short period after his re-appointment in 1814, but another person, to whom he paid no compensation, served at his request in his stead during the remainder of 1814, and after his appointment in 1815; including, however, his services under the first and second appointments, he served the office in person for more than a whole year. During 1813, 1814, and 1815, he resided in the respondent parish, but not in that part of it which is situate within the borough of Rugmorhill, where his duties were to be executed. He was not residing under a certificate. It was urged that St. Thomas, Winchester, v. St. Mary, Winchester, was decisive to show that the service was sufficient, though it did not extend through the whole parish. [Bayley, J. "There the pauper executed the office throughout the whole of the parish in which he resided, and therefore it was fairly to be presumed that it was notorious to every inhabitant of the parish, that he did in fact hold the office."] It was urged that the duties of the office need not extend over the whole of the parish in which the pauper resides. [Bayley, J. "Is there any case in which it has been held, that the serving an office in one part of the parish, and residence in another, affords sufficient notoriety, and is a sufficient service to confer a settlement?"] It was also urged that residence in any part of the parish is sufficient. Bayley, J. "That will hardly be enough to support this settlement; but independently of that point, can this situation be called an 'office' within the meaning of the statute? It is unnecessary to go more at large into the objections raised upon the face of this case, because it is perfectly clear that the office held by this pauper is not a public annual office or charge within the meaning of this statute. This person was appointed at one court-leet to serve till the next; the interval between the two courts did not amount to a year, and the courts were held at various intervals ad libitum. Therefore he was neither appointed for a year, nor did he serve a year; the office was neither in its nature annual, nor was the appointment to it annual; and one or the other of those characteristics is absolutely necessary. I entertain very considerable doubt whether his residence was such as to afford due notoriety of his being the person who held the office, and also whether, not being sworn, he was legally invested with the office; but it is not necessary to decide those points, because the settlement is evidently insufficient upon the ground already noticed. This is not a public annual office in its nature, and the pauper was not appointed to it for a year; and therefore it is not such an office as is necessary to confer a settlement." Best, J. "Upon the point last alluded to by my brother Bayley, it is quite clear that no settlement has been gained in this case. There must be either an appointment to an office to serve for a year, or an appointment to an office which by its nature is annual; and here there is neither the one nor the other. I am also inclined to think that the pauper's residence was insufficient. The principle upon which the courts have been accustomed to decide what is or is not good residence, is, that there shall be such a residence as necessarily renders it notorious to all the parish that the officer is within it. Now here there is no such notoriety, nor from the very nature of the residence can be. This case

Semble the residence must be in the parish where the office is served.

also comes within the very distinction laid down by Lord Kenyon in Rex v. Whittlesea, (p. 928,) namely, that an appointment by the parish at large is good, but that by individuals is not; because this pauper was clearly appointed by a portion of the parishioners only." Order quashed.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

A pauper in 1825 was sworn in as pinder before two justices, (being ordered to be sworn by a few occupiers only, and not at a public meeting,) and served as such for several years, the office being unknown in the parish previously: he gained no settlement.

Rex v. Clixby, 1 Nev. & M. 118; 4 Bar. & Ad. 153. W. Clayton and family were removed from Caistor to Clixby. Order confirmed. Case:—Clixby belongs, with the exception of about twenty acres of land, to one proprietor, Mr. Harman. There are nine occupiers of land in Clixby, including Harman, who retains some portion of his estate in his own hands; he holds no courts. The pauper (the only witness examined) stated that he had known the place thirty-three years, and had never known or heard of any pinder there before 1825. In 1825 Harman and two other occupiers of land in Clixby, of whom Mr. Lawrence, constable of Clixby, was one, ordered the pauper to go and be sworn in pinder. It did not appear in evidence that there was any public meeting of the parish, or any other meeting, to appoint him. The pauper went with Lawrence to a justice of peace, and was sworn in. He impounded cattle in Clixby in that year, and continued to do so for several years, till he was removed. In 1826 he was again sworn in before two justices of the peace. During all this time he resided in Clixby. The sessions found that this was a public annual office. Denman, C. J. "The sessions have found this to be a public annual office, subject to the opinion of this court on the evidence. We think their finding is not warranted by the facts which they have stated. The office of pinder in this parish is not proved to be ancient, for it is not known that there was any such officer before 1825. Nor was the pauper appointed by any authority known to the law. The hog-ringer is an annual officer of great public utility, appointed at the court-leet. It is not necessary to decide generally whether a pinder properly appointed be a public annual officer within the act; it is sufficient to say, that under the circumstances of this case the office was not in this parish a public annual office." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

Office of town-crier is sufficient.

The office of bellman and town-crier is an annual office within the statute, and will give a settlement in that parish wherein such officer resides, if his office extends over several parishes of which the town is composed. (See Rex v. St. Nicholas, Hereford, post.)

A sworn tithing-man for part of a parish is sufficient.

Rex v. Fittleworth, Burr. S. C. 238. A certificate man was elected and sworn a tithing-man for a tithing which did not extend through all the parish. By the Court: "It is not necessary that the office should extend throughout all the parish; the act only requires the executing some annual office in the parish."

Bailiff or ale-taster for a borough is an office.

Rex v. Whitchurch, Burr. S. C. 365; 2 Bott, 163. The pauper was nominated at the court-leet, and sworn in to the office of bailiff or ale-taster for the borough; and he executed the office for a year: the office consists in inspecting weights and measures within the borough, and in warning the jury to serve at the court-leet there: the borough is not one-sixth part of the parish, the bailiffs have never executed any authority over the parish at large, great part of the parish knew nothing of such office; new married men and new comers were frequently nominated for the sake of colt-ale. Ale-taster is an ancient and known officer, and as to the objection of the parish, Rex v. Fittleworth (supra) is in point, and this is a good settlement.

Tithing-man is an office.

Burliscomb v. Sandford Peverell, 1 Stra. 544. The sessions adjudge that the office of tithing-man is not such an office as that a man thereby shall gain a settlement. But by the Court: "The order must be quashed; for this is an annual office in the parish within the words and meaning of the act."

Whether a certificate man entering upon office immediately, but not sworn in till after

Holy Trinity v. Garsington, Fol. 123; Sett. & Rem. 95. A certificate man was appointed tithing-man by the steward of a leet. He served a year; but was not sworn in till half the year was expired. The court inclined that it was a good settlement; but being a new case, and somewhat doubtful, they ordered a second argument to this point, whether he was legally placed in the office, or not, as not having been sworn till half the year was expired? But the order was afterwards quashed for want of complaint that the pauper was actually become chargeable.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

the expiration of a year, be sufficient, ib.?

A certificate man chosen borsholder, but not sworn in, gains no settlement.

Wingham v. Sellindge, 2 Stra. 1199; Burr. S. C. 223. A certificate man was told by his wife that the borsholder had left a wooden tally at his house, as a token that he had been chosen borsholder at a court-leet of the manor; but he did not know it of his own knowledge, nor was there any evidence of a presentment by the leet jury, or of his appointment or election, nor did he ever take the oath of office; but once he executed a warrant of a justice directed to the borsholder, and for that whole year he was willing and ready to execute the office. By the Court: "When an order of sessions states the facts specially, the court must take it, that the justices have stated all the evidence that appeared to them. Now the act requires a legal placing in the office. But it is stated here negatively, that there was no presentment, no admission or swearing. So that here is no foundation for supporting a legal placing."

He must be the officer both de facto and de jure.

A settlement gained by serving the office of hog-ringer for the parish.

Rex v. Whittlesea, 4 T. R. 807. Removal from Crowland to Whittlesea. Case:—The pauper, during his residence in Crowland, was legally chosen a hog-ringer for that parish for one year, at a court-leet for the manor of Crowland: he was presented by the jury for the office, and was sworn therein, and paid 4*d.* for the oath, and he served such office two years on his own account. The duty of such office is to attend the open commons to see that all hogs turned thereupon were rung, and such hogs as were not rung to take to the pound, which he frequently did, and he always received 1*d.* for impounding, and 6*d.* for ringing, each hog. The appointment to such office is of great antiquity, and serviceable to the inhabitants of Crowland. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "It is stated in the case that this is an annual office of great antiquity, and serviceable to the parish at large, and that there is an oath of office; therefore it seems to me, that it is a public annual office within the meaning of the act. Every employment in a parish is not indeed equal to express notice, though it be a matter of notoriety to the parish. It was once made a question, whether shoeing the horses of the lord of the manor was not equal to notice? But it was determined not to be equivalent. If this person had been hog-ringer to certain individuals only, he would not have thereby gained a settlement; but he was not merely an officer of A., B., or C., but of all the inhabitants of the parish. It has been held, that a tithing-man, a borsholder, an ale-taster, or a hayward, may gain a settlement by serving either of those offices; and the latter, whose duty it is merely to take care of the fences within his district, cannot be distinguished from this case." Order of sessions confirmed.

Hayward.

That of an assistant overseer is an office within the act, but the appointment must have been duly stamped. (a)

Rex v. Lew, 8 B. & C. 655; 3 M. & R. 369. Order of removal of W. Purlrick from Charlbury to Lew confirmed. Case:—The pauper was on the 16th of October, 1820, duly elected by the inhabitants of Charlbury an assistant-overseer, pursuant to the 59 Geo. III. c. 12. The vestry determined that the pauper should perform the duties and receive the salary mentioned in the warrant of appointment. On the 18th he was appointed by a warrant under the hands and seals of two justices; it recited that the inhabitants had nominated the pauper to be the assistant-overseer, and did fix the yearly sum of 10*l.* as and for the yearly salary for the execution of the office; it then appointed him to be the assistant-overseer, and authorised him to perform the duties, and receive the salary. It was not stamped: the pauper performed the office for a year. Bayley, J. "I have no doubt that the pauper held an office within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, and that he executed that office for himself, and on his own account. It was a public office in the parish; the duties were executed throughout the parish. He was appointed by the inhabitants in vestry assembled. I think also that it was an annual office; the pauper was to receive a yearly salary for executing the duties of it; and although he might be removed within the year, he would continue in the office for a year, unless something was done to determine it during that period. He had an estate for a year in his office, defeasible on a particular event, as in the case of a lease for a year, determinable by notice within the year. In that case the lessee is in the estate for the year, though it may be determined by notice. (Rex v. Herstmonceux, p. 798). The office held by the pauper was held by him in his own right, not as deputy of the principal overseer. The great difficulty in this case arises from the want of a stamp. If I were at liberty to conjecture, I should say, the legislature did not contemplate an appointment of this description, but I am bound to give effect to the words of the statute. The 55 Geo. III. c. 184, Sched. tit. Grant, requires that any grant or appointment made by any person to any office or employment by writing, where the salary, fee, or emolument, appertaining thereto, shall not amount to 50*l.* per annum, shall have a stamp of 2*l.* Here there is an appointment in writing to an office or employment where the salary does not amount to 50*l.* It is, therefore, within the very words of the act, and requires a stamp." Littledale, J. "The appointment requires a stamp. There are some general exemptions at the end of that part of the schedule which relates to offices, but this is not among them. I have no doubt on the other point. This is called an office in the act. It is from the nature of the thing an office. If an overseer be an officer, an assistant-overseer is equally so. It is also an annual office, for there is an annual salary; and although he may be removed within the year, still he is appointed to the office for the year." Parke, J., concurred. Order confirmed.

(a) By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 86, the appointment of any paid officer engaged in the administration of the poor laws shall not be chargeable with any stamp duty.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

See p. 931.

Rex v. Hammond, 2 Bott, 157. By Pratt, C. J. "Serving the office of collector of the land-tax is a sufficient office to gain a settlement within the 3 & 4 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6, for it is not necessary that the office should be a parish office; any office is sufficient, so that by the notoriety of it, it may be presumed that the parish had notice of the person's being come into the parish."

Collector of the land-tax is a public annual office.

Bisham v. Cook, 1 Stra. 411. The pauper lived in Bisham, and executed there the office of collector of the duties given by 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 6, on births and burials. It was moved to quash it, because this was not a parish office, and it would be giving the commissioners (who are to appoint the collectors) a power to bring what charge they would upon the parish; besides, it was not stated in the order that this was an annual office, as it must be to give a settlement within the express words of the act. By the court: "The reason why the executing an office gives a settlement without notice, is because of the notoriety of the thing, of which the parliament thought it impossible but the parish should have notice; can anything be more notorious than this, which is to collect a duty from house to house? We cannot suppose a fraud in the commissioners, that they would appoint a person of no substance to be collector, only to bring a charge upon the parish. It needs not to be a parish office, but a public annual office in the parish. And as to its not being said, that this man executed it for a year, we must take it he did so, because it appears, on looking into the statute, that the power given to the commissioners is to appoint a person who shall be collector of the duties for a year, and then give in his accounts. It hath been held a settlement in the case of the land-tax, and why not in this?" Order confirmed.

So also a collector of duties on births and burials.

It need not be a parish office, but a public annual office in the parish.

Helsington v. Over, Burr. S. C. 746; 2 Bott, 243. Order of removal of Rev. John Langhorn from Helsington to Over confirmed. Case:—On the 1st day of October, 1766, the vicarage of the parish of Over was sequestered for three years, or till the bishop should release the same. On the 12th of October, 1766, the pauper was ordained deacon, in order to supply the cure of Over during the sequestration. From the 15th of October, 1766, to the 15th of June, 1768, he, by an exchange with the curate of Acton, resided and did duty in Acton, but received his salary regularly from the sequestrators of Over. From the 15th of June, 1768, to the 1st of October, 1769, he resided and did duty as curate at Over, when the sequestration ended. It did not appear that he had any licence to the curacy of Acton. Lord Mansfield, C. J. "There is no colour for considering this as an annual office; it is no office at all." And Aston, J., said, "You cannot call it an annual office, when the sequestration may be determined at any time. It is not like the annual office of a constable or a tithing-man. They are appointed generally, and to serve for a year. That of parish clerk is a freehold; and it is upon that foot that a parish clerk gains a settlement." Order quashed.

A curacy under a sequestration is not a public annual office.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

Nor an ordinary curacy.

Rex v. Wantage, 2 East, 65. R. Puzey, clerk, was nominated by the rector of East Lockinge to be curate of the same, and was duly licensed, with a yearly stipend of 45*l.* The licence authorised the party during pleasure "to perform the office of curate in the parish, &c., in reading the common prayer and performing other ecclesiastical duties belonging to the said office according to the form prescribed," &c. Puzey entered on the curacy the same year, and performed the duties for six years, during which he resided in the parsonage house in the parish. Lord Kenyon. "There is no pretence to say that this is an office the executing of which for a year will give a settlement. The 3 & 4 Will. and Mary, c. 11, s. 6, was evidently intended to be confined to inferior annual officers, such as constables and the like, known to the parish; and though in some instances the construction has been carried farther, yet I am not inclined to extend it to cases still farther from the contemplation of the legislature." Order of sessions confirmed.

Schoolmaster not a public officer.

Rex v. Milborne, 2 Stra. 1225. T. Membury was certificated from Sheepshead to Milborne, and staid there ten years, during which time Lady Elizabeth Hastings conveyed lands to trustees for several charities out of the profits; and among others the sum of 10*l.* a year to the charity school at Milborne, to be paid to the vicar there for the time being. In the special order of sessions it was stated that the certificate man officiated as schoolmaster several years, and received the 10*l.* a year from the vicar: and this the sessions held gained him a settlement in Milborne, where they declared he had a freehold estate; and so had both the requisites to obtain a settlement to a certificate person, namely, a tenement of 10*l.* a year, and executing an annual office. But by the Court: "The order must be quashed; a schoolmaster is not an office, but only an employment; and what interest T. M. had in the school, whether for life or otherwise, or how he came into this employment, doth not appear; and the legal right to receive the salary is in the vicar, who not caring to officiate himself has therefore paid it over to this man as his deputy, which could never give any person a settlement, much less a certificate man."

What is not a sufficient estate.

An appointment from one court till the steward should please to hold another confers no settlement.

Rex v. Bow, 8 T. R. 445. The pauper, at a Michaelmas court-leet, holden by adjournment for Chumleigh, November 16, 1792, was appointed to the office of ale-taster to the borough, and duly sworn, according to the custom of the manor, to execute the office for one year thence next ensuing, or until he should be lawfully discharged. He entered upon the office and served till November 1, 1793, when at a similar court holden by adjournment a new officer was appointed. No business is transacted at the original court; and there is only one original court in the year, and it is held within the month after Michaelmas at the convenience of the steward. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "This is an attempt to carry the point further than in Rex v. Newstead, (p. 505). This is not an appointment for a year, from one moveable feast to another, but from one court till it should please the steward to hold another. The statute is express, and Rex v. Fittleworth (p. 927), shows that it has been construed according to its plain meaning."

No settlement gained by serving an office to which a local statute authorised the appointment for a discretionary period.

Rex v. Middlewich, 4 Nev. & M. 682; 3 Ad. & El. 156. M. C. Yarwood was removed from Church Hulme to Middlewich. Order confirmed. Case:—Both townships support their own poor. The pauper, two years before the date of the order, being then settled in Middlewich, was duly appointed under the Cheshire Constabulary Act assistant petty constable for fourteen townships in the county of Chester, of which Church Hulme was one, and under that appointment he served the office fifteen months, during the whole of which time he resided in Church Hulme. The question was whether the pauper gained a settlement in Church Hulme by serving an office. Lord Denman. "If this office were annual in its nature we should have wished to see the appointment. But we think that it is not annual in its nature, and that it may last for such time as the justices think proper. The Rex v. Lew (p. 928,) seemed at first to present a difficulty in the way of this view. But, first, the assistant-overseer's office corresponds with that of overseer, which is annual, and by the 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 7, it is to continue till the appointment is revoked, or till the officer resign. Secondly, the salary is to be annual by the same. Thirdly, in Rex v. Lew the salary was in fact annual. The case is therefore easily distinguishable from the present, where the duration of the office depends on the discretion of the justices." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion. In Rex v. Lew the officer was an assistant-overseer, appointed under the 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 7, which directs that he shall execute all such duties of overseer of the poor as shall be expressed in the warrant of appointment, in like manner and as fully to all intents and purposes as the same may be executed by an ordinary overseer. Now the office of an ordinary overseer is annual. The person appointed assistant-overseer is to continue in office till he shall resign or till his appointment shall be revoked, it is therefore an annual office defeasible. Rex v. Lew is consequently inapplicable. By the words in the act now before us, the appointment is to be for so long as the justices think expedient, it is therefore not an annual office." Patteson, J. "In Rex v. Lew the appointment, if for less than a year, would not have been valid." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. If the office were annual in itself, we should recur to the appointment, in order to see whether it was annual, in fact for a year; there is nothing to show that it would be an annual office. I have always understood that the office must be such, that if the appointment were general, it would be assumed that the tenure of it was to be for a year." Order of sessions confirmed.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

The office of pinder for the town of F. appointed at a manor court, which manor did not comprehend the whole of the town of F., gives no settlement, as the homage of one manor cannot elect an officer for a parish which lies in several manors.

Rex v. Newmarket, St. Mary, 3 Ad. & El. 151; 4 Nev. & M. 693. John Porter was removed from Fordham to Newmarket, St. Mary. Order quashed. Case:—The appellants relied upon a settlement in the respondent parish, derived from the pauper's father, who whilst residing in that parish served there for two years the office of pinder. He was appointed at a court baron held for the manor of Fordham Biggen, on the 5th of September, 1787; the appointment being entered on the court rolls in the following words: "And lastly, the said homage did elect John Porter pinder for the town of Fordham for the year ensuing, and until another person be chosen in his stead. And the said John Porter came into court and was duly sworn to execute the said office." The first entry on the court rolls of the manor of Fordham Biggen which can be found of the appointment of any officer, is at a court baron held on the 1st of November, 1693. From that period to the year 1810, when the parish of Fordham was inclosed, there were four courts leet with courts baron, and a great majority of courts baron without a leet, at which the pinders and other officers of the manor were appointed and sworn in. In the other instances of courts leet and courts baron being held together (except one where the pinder was appointed by the homage only) the pinders and other officers of the manor were elected by the jury of the leet. From 1739 to 1794 there were eight consecutive courts baron, at which certain persons were in like manner as the pauper's father elected pinders by the homage and sworn in, and there was not one instance on the court rolls of any such appointment at a court leet held as such only. There are in all five manors in the respondent parish, of which the manor of Soham and Fordham is the most extensive; but there is no paramount manor. There were previous to the inclosure of the parish three commons in the manor of Fordham Biggen, over which the inhabitants of Fordham had common rights. There were also two pounds, one belonging to the manor of Fordham Biggen, the other to the manor of

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

Soham and Fordham. The only question for the opinion of the court was, whether the pauper's father was legally placed in the office of pinder under the above-mentioned appointment by the homage of the court baron, 1787, so as to acquire a settlement in the respondent parish. The case stated as above was argued in Easter term, 1832, when this court sent it back to the sessions to find whether the town of Fordham were co-extensive with the parish of Fordham, and more or less extensive than the manor of Fordham Biggen. At a subsequent session the justices found that the town of Fordham was co-extensive with the parish of Fordham, and was more extensive than the manor of Fordham Biggen, and it confirmed the order of removal subject as before to the opinion of this court. During the argument, Patteson, J., asked, "What business the homage had to appoint? The lord of a manor may have such a right, or the jury of a court-leet." The Court asked the counsel in support of the settlement if they were prepared to maintain the legality of this appointment, and Lord Denman said, "The office conferred is one professedly running through all the town; if such an office cannot be conferred by the homage of this manor, how can the settlement be supported?" and then per Curiam: "The rule for quashing the last order of sessions must be discharged." Order of sessions confirmed.

Master of a workhouse held not to be a public officer.

Rex v. Mersham, 7 East, 167. Removal from Boxley to Mersham confirmed. The parts of the case upon which the question was decided were, that the pauper at a vestry meeting offered his proposals to become master of the workhouse; that at a subsequent vestry meeting, at which twelve of the inhabitants were present, he was informed by the parish officers that he was appointed master of the workhouse of the parish of B. at a salary of 16*l.* per annum. No time was ever mentioned for which he was to hold his situation. No appointment was made in writing, nor any entry in the parish books. After serving for four years, he was dismissed at a quarter's notice. Lord Ellenborough. "The principle on which this mode of gaining a settlement has been given is undoubtedly notoriety to the parish, but a settlement can only be gained in this mode upon the terms of the act of parliament; viz. by executing 'a public annual office or charge in the parish:' which brings us back to the question, whether that which the pauper was appointed to execute were a public office or charge? And it appears to me that he cannot be considered as a public officer. An office must be derived either immediately or mediately from the crown, or be constituted by statute; and this is neither one nor the other, but merely arising out of a contract with the parish, which the parish officers with the consent of the parishioners are by the statute enabled to make with any person for the maintenance and employment of the poor. It might as well be said that a nurse employed to look after the pauper, or any other employed in like manner to do any part of the parish business, was an officer. The question might admit of a different consideration if any distinction had been established between an office and a charge, but I can find none either in any case or in the sense of the statute. The determination of the appointment at a quarter's notice repels the presumption that it was an annual office or charge; therefore, as far as we can collect the intended duration of the employment from the acts of the parties, it appears that the parish might put an end to it within the year if they thought proper; upon the whole therefore it appears neither to have been an office nor a public office, nor a public annual office within the statute." Lawrence, J., said, "It was clearly no office; but only an employment arising out of a contract, between which and an office there is a great distinction. (Rex v. Milborne, p. 930.) And he agreed in the definition of the word charge, that it must be taken to mean something of the same kind with office, though it may not commonly be known under the name of an office. Le Blanc, J. "If this were to be deemed a public annual office or charge within the act, it would extend to every case where a person had a duty to perform which from its nature must be known to the parish in general. But there is a difference between an employment created by the parties themselves, which they may put an end to whenever they please, and that which exists or is created by law. Now this man was in the former situation. It was in the option of the overseers and parishioners to have such a person in such an employment or not; and they could put an end to the employment altogether whenever they pleased. It was created by themselves, and depended upon their contract. I cannot therefore call this an office or charge within the meaning of the act of parliament." Both orders confirmed.

Time of determination evidence of contract.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

Governor of a workhouse is not an annual officer. Appointment to be governor for a particular parish, in a workhouse belonging to an incorporated district, is bad.

Rex v. Hambledon, 4 B. & C. 459; 6 D. & R. 554. Order of removal of Birdseye from Witney to Hambledon confirmed. Case:—In 1786 the parishes of Brumley, Chiddingfold, Dunsfold, and Hambledon, were incorporated under the 22 Geo. III. c. 83. The parishes of Haslemere, Shalford, Saint Martha, Hascomb, and Elstead, afterwards took the benefit of the same provisions; and all the parishes before mentioned became incorporated parishes for the purposes of that statute. About 1787, a very large house of industry was erected by contribution of all those parishes upon the waste of the manor in Hambledon, as the most convenient situation for the purposes of the incorporation. To this house paupers from all the united parishes were sent, and were maintained separately at the expense of the parishes to which the paupers belonged. For the management of this house, and the employment of all classes of paupers therein, a governor was from time to time appointed, under the powers of the statute. In 1820 the pauper was appointed governor of the house of industry by this order. Form:—"Surrey sessions. We, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of Surrey, acting for the hundred of Godalmin, in the said county, do hereby appoint John Birdseye, of Hambledon, to execute the office of governor of the poor for the parish of Hambledon, within the said hundred, for one year, to be computed from the week of Easter now last past, to which he has been recommended at a public meeting, holden the 29th day of March last, pursuant to the directions of the statute passed in the 22 Geo. III. for the better relief and employment of the poor. Given under our hands and seals this 6th day of April, 1822. G. W., O. J. M." Under this appointment he served the office of governor for three years in succession, upon the same terms, and during that time resided in Hambledon. Bayley, J. "The last objection is decisive of the case: (namely) the appointment for one parish is clearly bad. But it seems to me that the other objections are fatal also. It has been decided that the situation of master of a workhouse is not a public office, unless it is so constituted by an act of parliament (Rex v. Mersham, p. 932); consequently, previous to the 22 Geo. III. c. 83, no service in such a situation could have conferred a settlement. It is true, that statute calls it an office, but the 39 s. provides that nothing contained in the statute shall alter or affect the settlement of any person; therefore it leaves the office just what it was before, and a settlement cannot be gained by service under it. Upon all these grounds, therefore, it seems to me, that the order of sessions ought to be quashed." Holroyd, J., and Littledale, J., concurred.

Governor of a workhouse, if found by the sessions to be a public annual office, gains a settlement.

Rex v. Ilminster, 1 East, 83. Removal from Honiton to Ilminster confirmed. The case originally stated was, that the pauper was appointed governor of the workhouse in Ilminster, under the annual salary of 20*l.* He served for five years, and regularly received his salary: at the end of that time he was dismissed: at the time of his appointment he was put by the parish officers into possession of certain apartments in the workhouse appointed for that purpose, and which had been occupied by the former governor. Upon the first amended case these words following were added after the word officers, "(in conjunction with two of the principal people of the town, who acted as inspectors of the accounts and conduct of the overseers)." Lord Kenyon, after the case had been argued the first time, intimated a strong opinion against the settlement, considering the appointment of the pauper merely in the nature of a servant to the parish officers, by whom he might have been dismissed at any time. In the second amended case it was stated, that the said office of governor "was a public

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

A female organist at a chapel, appointed by a select vestry at an annual salary, paid half-yearly, has not an office contemplated by the statute.

annual office." And the court then said, that by this finding, "that it was a public annual office," they had precluded any further discussion (a).

Rex v. St. George, Hanover Square, 2 Nev. & M. 505; 5 B. & Ad. 571. Catherine Seaman was removed from St. George, Hanover Square, to St. Peter, Paul's Wharf. Order quashed. Case:—The parish of St. George, Hanover Square, is governed by a select vestry, consisting of 101 persons. In 1827 a chapel was erected in North Audley Street, in that parish; and on the 21st of January, 1828, the vestry of that parish took into consideration what name should be given to the chapel, then nearly finished, and resolved that it should be called St. Mark's Chapel, and that advertisements should be published, stating that the vestry would meet on the 11th of February to appoint an organist for the chapel. On the 11th of February, 1828, an election took place at the board room in Mount Street, by the select vestry, of an organist to the said chapel, on which occasion there were about forty candidates, and the election fell upon the pauper, as appears by the following minute:—"11th of February, 1828. The vestry, pursuant to their resolution of January 21st, proceeded to the election of an organist for St. Mark's Chapel, and appointed Miss Catherine Seaman to that situation, to commence when the organ was in readiness for use, at a salary of 60*l.* per annum." In May, 1828, the organ being completed, she entered upon her duty, and continued to perform it, and to reside in the respondent parish, and received her salary from the vestry through the vestry clerk half-yearly (with the exception of the first payment, which was 25*l.* only from May to Michaelmas, 1828), until the 31st of March, 1832, when she was discharged by the vestry, as appears by the following entry in their minutes: "At a meeting of the vestry held on the 31st of March, 1832, much discontent having been expressed by the pew-renters from time to time to the Rev. Allen Cooper, the minister of St. Mark's Chapel, of the total inefficiency of the present organist, resolved that she be removed; and that the Rev. Mr. Cooper be requested to look out for and recommend a competent person to succeed her, upon the same salary as is now enjoyed by her; it being understood that the person to be appointed shall continue to pay her her salary up to Midsummer next." Denman, C. J. "The principle on which this kind of settlement rests is notoriety; but that must be attained by serving an office within the meaning of the statute. The question is, whether the present be a case in which that has been done. I think it comes within the objection which prevailed in Rex v. Mersham (p. 932). According to the argument which has been urged, a settlement would be gained in every case where the party had executed an annual office which was notorious. But I think an office created by the parties themselves, who agree upon the employment, and which they may put an end to at pleasure, does not come within the meaning of the statute." Parke, J. "I am of the same opinion. If a settlement was gained in this case, it might be said that the fiddlers and bassoon players in a country church, or even the pew-openers, executed offices within the statute." Taunton, J. "The office of organist does not necessarily give notoriety; for when persons hear the organ, it does not follow that they know who plays it." Patteson, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

A tithing-man going out of office, nominated his shepherd, Miller, to serve as tithing-man the following year. Miller was chosen at a court-leet holden October 5th, 1824, and was ordered to be sworn into office within one month, under the penalty

Rex v. Corfe Mullen, 1 Bar. & Adol. 211. J. Miller was removed from Sturminster Marshall to Corfe Mullen. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper having obtained a settlement by hiring and service in the parish of Corfe Mullen, went to reside in the tithing or chapelry of West Holme, a place maintaining its own poor, as shepherd to Mr. Kemp. On the 5th of October, 1824, a court-leet for the hundred of Hasler was held, in which hundred the tithing or chapelry of West Holme is situated. At that court Kemp, the tithing-man for the preceding year, appeared, and acted in his office of tithing-man. On the same day, at the same court, Kemp nominated the pauper as a fit person to serve the office of tithing-man for the

(a) It will be observed that this position is denied in Rex v. Clixby (p. 927).

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

tithing or chapelry of West Holme, and he was appointed by the jury for one year. The entry from the books of the court-leet appeared as follows: —"October 5th, 1824. Tithing-man of West Holme. George Kemp appears, and Joseph Miller is chosen into the office for the year ensuing, and he is directed to be sworn in before a magistrate within one month, under the penalty of 5*l.*" But Miller not being present, the steward gave him notice of the appointment as follows:—"Hundred of Hasler to wit. At a court-leet held this day for the said hundred you were chosen tithing-man for the tithing of West Holme, and you are hereby required to be sworn into your office before a magistrate for the county of Dorset, within one month after the date hereof, under the penalty of 5*l.* Given under my hand and seal in the said court, the 5th day of October, 1824. E. Castleman, Steward." When this notice was shown to the pauper he refused to receive it, or to pay the usual fee to the person who served it. The pauper was never sworn into office, but executed all its duties. He was not a householder either at the time of his appointment, or at any time while serving the office; but occupied part of a house, rent-free, found for him by his master, Mr. Kemp, in West Holme, and resided there while serving the said office. On the 4th of October, 1825, another court-leet for the hundred of Hasler was held, when the pauper was present, and acted as the tithing-man of West Holme, and paid the essoign pence and lawday silver, as is customary with other persons serving the office. At this court another person was appointed tithing-man for the year ensuing. The entry of this appointment in the books of the court-leet was exactly in the same form as the entry of Miller's in the preceding year. One objection was, that the pauper did not serve the office on his own account, but as deputy to Kemp. Bayley, J. "The sessions have not found so, and we cannot infer it. In Rex v. Allcannings (p. 923), the facts expressly appeared on the case." It was urged, that the pauper here was not of the description of persons liable to serve the office. Parke, J. "That might have been an objection to the appointment, but he has been appointed and served. A similar objection was noticed in Rex v. Allcannings, but only as tending to show that the pauper served as a deputy." Bayley, J., delivered the judgment of the court: "The question in this case was, whether the pauper obtained a settlement in the tithing of West Holme, by serving the office of tithing-man for that place. He was appointed to the office on the 5th October, 1824, and we think we must infer from the special case, that he accepted the office on that day, and executed all its duties until and upon the 4th October, 1825, which, as the law does not regard the fraction of a day, constitutes one 'whole year.' There is no doubt that the pauper acted on his own account, and the objection that he was not compellable to serve the office is of no weight. The pauper was never sworn into his office; and the only remaining point in the case is, whether that circumstance was necessary to enable him to gain a settlement?" He then read the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, (p. 922): "The words of this section, in their ordinary sense, require nothing more than the execution of the office de facto during one whole year; there is nothing in the context to induce us to come to a conclusion that the legislature meant to use the words in any other than that sense; and this construction is consistent with the supposed object of the statute, which appears to have been to substitute the notoriety of the execution of the office for the notice in writing required in most other cases, as explained in the judgment of Lord Tenterden, in Rex v. Holy Cross, Westgate (p. 937). But it is said, that this statute and that of 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, are in pari materiâ, and are to be construed together; and that the latter statute may be considered as giving a parliamentary exposition of the former: and if so, that no one can be 'legally placed' in an office, unless he takes the oath under which it should be executed. We do not, however, think that the latter statute is to be deemed to alter or affect the construction of the former, as the latter relates to a particular class of persons, namely, certificated paupers alone; and it is impossible to say that the legislature did not mean to superadd, with reference to that class of 5*l.* He never was sworn in, but executed the office; while he did so he was not a householder, but lived in part of a house found for him by his employer. His successor was chosen at a court-leet, October 4th, 1825; Held, that he executed on his own account, a public annual office for one whole year. Question whether or not he was legally placed in the office, did not arise, he not having been a certificated person.

2. What Office will gain a Settlement.

of persons, another circumstance, namely, that of being legally placed in the office, as a condition of their obtaining a settlement. It becomes, therefore, in this view of the case, unnecessary to decide whether the pauper was 'legally placed' in the office, according to this latter statute, not having taken the required oath. There can be no question that he executed the office de facto, nor indeed can there be any that, for some purposes at least, he executed it de jure. Swearing in may be rendered necessary, either to enable the party to serve the office, or to impose a greater sanction on his discharge of it. We think, in this case, the latter is the object. A month is given for taking the oath; yet the year commences from the appointment. Can it then be said that the party is not in office till he is sworn? In one of the cases which have been cited, the swearing in of a tithing-man at the end of half a year was considered as taking effect ab initio. It is laid down in an anonymous case, 1 Ventr. 267, that a churchwarden (and no distinction can be drawn between his case and that of a constable) may execute his office before he is sworn, though it is convenient he should be sworn. And it may be observed, that a mandamus to swear such an officer in is referred to by the court immediately afterwards in that case; which must therefore be issued, not on the ground that the oath is essential to the due execution of the office, but because it is fit and proper for the interest of the public that the office should be executed under its sanction. But on the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary c. 11, alone, we think it clear that the pauper gained settlement in West Holme by the execution of the office de facto." Order of sessions quashed.

A person may be in office before he is sworn in.

---

3. Of the Time of Serving.

Serving a part of the year only is not sufficient.

A person executing an office is removable when chargeable.

3. Of the Time of Serving.

Rex v. Fittleworth, Burr. S. C. 238; 2 Bott, 252. A certificate man was elected and sworn a tithing-man. He executed the office a little more than five months, and then became chargeable, and was removed. Lee, C. J. "The question is, whether a person coming into a parish under a certificate, who is made a tithing-man, and exercises his office in part only of the parish, and for half a year only, gains a settlement? To this three objections have been made: 1st, that the order of removal is bad, because at the time when he was removed he was in the execution of a public office, from whence they had no power to remove him; and it has been compared to the case of a servant, whom the justices cannot remove: but for this they have not cited any authority; and if a servant should become chargeable to a parish, I think he may be removed. This act of the 8 & 9 Will. III. describes the time when a certificate man shall be removed, that is, when he becomes chargeable, without any limitation; so that the justices by this act had certainly power to remove the pauper. The second objection is, that this office did not extend to the whole parish: but it is stated in the order that he exercised it in the parish; which is complying with the very words of the act of parliament, which says that he shall execute it in such, and not through such parish. As to the third objection, which is the chief, I do not know that any case has been determined as to that purpose. That of Garsington was never determined, and besides differs essentially from the present case, as Sir John Strange has shown. The 3 & 4 Will. & Mary differs in words from this act, yet it would be odd to place him on a different footing from other paupers, who are to gain settlements by the exercises of annual offices, and that is for and during a year; which must be the construction of this act, otherwise the bare placing a certificate man in office would gain him a settlement immediately. As to the case of Mr. Lloyd about the taking of a tenement, there are no words about his living a year, and it is the credit he gets by the taking that fixes him in the parish; but in the present case he gains it by the execution of the office; and though the words of the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary have no relation by words to this act, yet I should think it ought to have the same construction." Wright and Dennison, Js., of the same opinion.

Serving office for

Cold Ashton v. Woodchester, Burr. S. C. 444; 2 Bott, 253. There was a custom to serve the office of tithing-man for half a year only at a time. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "This cannot be an annual office to gain a settlement. In this case the pauper had served the office of tithing-man in Cold Ashton for half a year, and twenty days after for another half year.

3. Of the Time of Serving.

half a year at a time only, gains no settlement.

A pauper was legally sworn in as borsholder at a court-leet, and executed the office a few days, when he was irregularly discharged from office by two magistrates, and another person appointed: but he acquiesced in this, and did not in fact execute the office: Held, that this did not confer a settlement.

Rex v. Holy Cross, Westgate, 4 B. & A. 619. Order of removal of Edward Best from Holy Cross, Westgate, in Canterbury, to Holy Cross, Westgate, in Kent, confirmed. Case:—The city of Canterbury is divided into six wards, and two of the twelve aldermen of the city are appointed for each ward; a court-leet is held annually by the two aldermen, at which a constable and borsholder for the ward are chosen. In October, 1817, and for some time previously, the pauper resided and carried on business in St. Mary Northgate, Canterbury, which is in the ward of Northgate, that ward containing the parishes of St. Mary Northgate and St. Alphage. On the 21st of October, 1817, the annual court-leet was held for the ward of Northgate, at which the pauper was duly chosen borsholder of the ward for the year ensuing, and upon being sent for, he attended at the court and was regularly sworn in; the staff of office was delivered to him by the former borsholder. A day or two afterwards a dispute arose between some persons, and he was desired to preserve the peace; in consequence of which he fetched his staff and put an end to the dispute, but he did not do any other act as borsholder than that. After he had been sworn in a few days, he was desired to attend the monthly meeting of the magistrates, and he attended with his staff; he was called into the council chamber and informed by the then mayor that as it was a question as to what parish he belonged, he must leave his staff there for the present, and that he should know further about it in a few weeks; he left his staff accordingly, and not having heard anything more, he did not act, nor was he called upon afterwards to act as borsholder. The steward of the leet notified the pauper to the magistrates as the sworn borsholder for the ward of Northgate, and he appeared so in the list of peace officers entered in their record book. The succeeding court-leet for the ward of Northgate was holden on the 20th of October, 1818, and the pauper resided during the whole of the year in St. Mary Northgate. The duties that were required to be performed by the borsholder of the ward of Northgate during the remainder of the year were performed by another person, who resided part of that time within the ward, and part in the borough of Staplegate, adjoining to the ward, but not within the jurisdiction of the city of Canterbury; but that other person was not chosen or sworn in as borsholder of the ward, nor did he attend the sessions in that character, nor was his name enrolled in the list of peace-officers. Abbott, C. J. "At the time of passing 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 6, it was possible for any individual to gain a settlement by a residence for forty days in the parish. The object of that act was to add to this the necessity of delivering to the parish officers a notice in writing, which they were required to read in the church, and to register, in order that there might be public notice to all the inhabitants that they might, in case the individual was likely to become chargeable, procure his removal from the parish. But that act contemplated two cases in which no notice in writing was to be given, viz. the serving an annual-office, and the payment of parish rates. Its object was obviously notoriety. Now this is only attained by the actual execution of the office, and not by the appointment to it. Although, therefore, it does appear that the pauper in this case was irregularly discharged from his office, and another person irregularly appointed to succeed him, yet as he did forbear to do the duties of it, I think he cannot within the statute be considered as having executed a public annual office in the parish, and that he did not thereby gain a settlement." Order confirmed.

The pauper must serve for a year.

In Rex v. Yalding (p. 925), one of the points was, that the pauper had not served for a year, which was held a good objection.

4. Residence.

4. Residence.

If a church-yard lie in two parishes, the sexton may gain a settlement in the one in which he resides, although no part of the church lies within that parish.

Rex v. Liverpool, 3 T. R. 118. Samuel Littlemore removed from Liverpool to Stourton. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper, about sixteen years ago, came to reside in Liverpool, and while he resided there was elected sexton by the proprietors of seats in the church or chapel of St. James's, at a vestry held in the presence of the churchwardens, being recommended by the then minister to that office, and executed that office six years, lodging all the while in Liverpool. The boundary between Walton and Liverpool is in the chapel-yard of St. James's; the church and part of the church-yard stands in Walton, and the other part of the church-yard is in Liverpool; but no corpse was ever buried in that part (within the parish of L.) whilst the pauper executed the office, though corpses have been buried there since. The inhabitants of Liverpool, seat-holders, and others, constantly attend the church of St. James's, in proportion of fifty to one of any other parish or place. It was admitted that the office of sexton was such as would entitle the person executing it to a settlement; but it was contended that the office must be executed in the town or place, in order to give a settlement. But here he was chosen sexton to the chapel of St. James's, which stands in Walton; and it appears that he never executed any part of the office in Liverpool. The executing of an annual office is equal to giving notice, but the execution of this office in Walton was no notice to the parish of Liverpool. The sexton is appointed to the church, and not to the church-yard; for it appears from the definition of a sexton in Burn's Eccl. Law and Chamb. Dict. that he is an officer to take care of the vessels, vestments, &c. belonging to the church, and to attend the minister and churchwardens at church; and this office is entirely distinct from that of a grave-digger. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "There is no doubt but that part of the office of sexton consists in digging graves; this is different from that of sacrist, which is an office scarcely known since the Reformation, except in some of the cathedrals, whose duty it is to take care of the sacred vestments. And it is as clear that the office of sexton is a public office within the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6. In this case the church-yard lies in two parishes, and the sexton gained a settlement in that in which he resided." Order of sessions confirmed.

Sexton is a public office.

Warden for a borough, which extends itself into several parishes, gains a settlement in the parish in which he lives.

St. Mary v. St. Lawrence in Reading, 19 Vin. Abr. 379; 2 Bott, 156. Mr. Foley says the question was, whether the being warden for the borough, and serving that office for a year in the borough, which extends itself into several parishes, is such a service of an annual office as will gain a settlement? And by the court it was held to be an office, the serving of which for one whole year was sufficient to gain him a settlement in that parish within the borough in which he lived. Foley, 121. But in this report there must probably have been some mistake. A churchwarden is a parochial officer, and his office doth not extend into several parishes. Mr. Viner, from a manuscript note which he had of this case, says, "The officer is mentioned there to be warden of the borough (which is most likely), being in nature of a tithing-man to execute the process of the justices of the borough. But he is not to execute his office in one parish only, but all over the borough. And it was doubted whether this was a settlement or not; because he was not elected into this office by the parish, neither was the exercise of his office confined to the parish; yet he is a public officer, and his office is partly exercised within the parish, so that the parishioners must take notice of him." And by the court it was held a good settlement, being within the express words of the statute of executing an office in a town or parish.

Constable of a city comprehending several parishes, gains a settlement in that parish in which he lives.

St. Maurice v. St. Mary Kallendar, in Winchester, 1 Burr. S. C. 27; 2 Bott, 158. William West, a certificate man from St. Thomas's, came into St. Mary Kallendar, in Winchester. He was afterwards chosen one of the constables for the city of Winchester, which city consists of several other parishes besides that of St. Mary Kallendar, and was legally placed in that office, and executed it in and through all parts of that city for one whole year; during which time he resided in the parish of St. Mary Kallendar. By the court, unanimously: "He avoided his certificate, and consequently gained a settlement in St. Mary Kallendar by executing this office in that parish, though chosen by the whole city, and not by the parish of St. Mary singly, and though not a mere parish office. For, in the words of the act, he executed an annual office in the parish, being legally placed in such office."

4. Residence.

If part of the duties are performed in the parish it is sufficient.

Rex v. Amlwch, 4 B. & C. 757; 3 D. & R. 303; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 304. Order of removal of John Owen from Amlwch, in the county of Anglesea, to Llanerchymedd, quashed. Case:—The market town or village of Llanerchymedd lies partly in the parish of Amlwch, the church of which is five or six miles distant, partly in two other parishes, and partly in the vill of Llanerchymedd, to which place this removal is made. The vill of Llanerchymedd lies in the middle of the village, and consists of a small plot of land, the property of the parson, on which stand the whole of the church and churchyard. There are also within it twelve or fifteen houses, and a few acres of land. It has of late maintained its own poor, and the inhabitants have been assessed to the land-tax, as in the hamlet of Bryngwallen, which is in the parish of Ceidio. No churchwardens were ever known to be appointed, and no evidence was given of the appointment of a constable, although it appeared that the pauper's father had been seen acting as one for several years. The church or chapel of Llanerchymedd is kept in repair of right, one side thereof by the family who own the Llwydiarth estate, and the other side by the family who own the Chrodden Issa estate. That part of the village which is in the parish of Amlwch is all on the Llwydiarth estate, as are also the hall, and several farms in the vicinity. The chapelry of Llanerchymedd is attached to the rectory of Llanbenlan, in the presentation of the Bishop of Bangor, the parson of which receives the rents of the glebe lands in and near the vill of Llanerchymedd, appoints the curate, and pays his salary. The emoluments of the curate arise partly from his salary, and partly from offerings and oblations, and other payments termed surplice fees. The inhabitants of the vill have no private sitting places in the church; all those on the south side belong to the Chrodden Issa estate; those on the north side belong to the Llwydiarth estate, which is in the parish of Amlwch, and the chief part of the congregation are dwellers on that estate. A proportion of the elements used at the administration of the sacrament at Llanerchymedd church is supplied by Amlwch. The clerk and sexton of Llanerchymedd appear to have been appointed by the Llwydiarth family, malgré the minister; his emoluments arise from sweeping the church and washing the surplices, which are not paid by the inhabitants of the vill, and also from offerings and other fees pertaining to his office. John Owen, the pauper, was appointed clerk and sexton of Llanerchymedd in March, 1795, and he has executed the office to the present time, dwelling altogether in that part of the village of Llanerchymedd which lies in Amlwch. The pauper's father was settled in the vill of Llanerchymedd. It had been the uniform practice of the minister of Llanerchymedd to attend with his clerk at the houses of the inhabitants of Amlwch, in the village and its vicinity, for the purpose of visiting the sick, administering private baptism, and reading a prayer prior to the removal of bodies that were about to be buried at Llanerchymedd church. No limits were assigned as to the distance from the village within which these several services had been performed by the minister and clerk of Llanerchymedd. No marriages of the inhabitants have been solemnised in Llanerchymedd. The witnesses differed in opinion, whether these services rendered to the inhabitants of Amlwch by the minister and clerk were rendered as a matter of right or of indulgence. The sessions were of opinion that the pauper had held an annual office, a part of the duties of which were performed in the parish of Amlwch, where he resided, and on that ground quashed the order. Bayley, J. "The question is, whether the pauper exercised a public annual office within the parish of Amlwch, within the 3 & 4 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6? It enacts, 'That if any person shall execute any public annual office in the parish during one whole year, then he shall be adjudged to have a legal settlement in the same, though no such notice in writing be delivered and published as is hereby before required.' The legislature considered the executing of an office within the parish to be so notorious, as to form an equivalent to the notice required in other cases. The question is, whether the pauper acquired a settlement by executing the office of clerk and sexton in a part of the parish in which he resided? Now it is not necessary in order to acquire a settlement by serving an office, that the duties of the office should be co-extensive with the parish. If it be notorious to the parish that the office is exercisable within it, that is enough. In Rex v. St. Mary, Reading (p. 938), which was the case of a constable, and in St. Maurice v. St. Mary Kallendar (p. 938), which was the case of a tithing-man, the duties of the office were performed in several parishes besides those in which the paupers resided. In Rex v. Fittleworth (p. 936), a certificate man was elected and sworn a tithing-man for a tithing which did not extend through all the parish of Fittleworth, but comprehended that part of it where he resided; and the court said it was not necessary that the office should extend throughout all the parish; the act only required executing some annual office in the parish. It is sufficient, therefore, to give a settlement in a parish, that the duties of the office served extend into that parish. Then, were the duties of any part of the office of clerk and sexton of the vill and chapelry of Llanerchymedd of right to be performed within the parish of Amlwch? Whether the vill and the chapelry are in point of fact co-extensive does not appear; they are not necessarily so; for Llanerchymedd being an extra-parochial place, the duties of the office of clerk and sexton of the chapelry may be confined and limited to the vill. The founder of a chapel may, by consent of the rector, fix the limits of the chapelry; and it was matter of evidence, therefore, whether the chapelry extended beyond the vill. Upon that point there was contradictory evidence; but altogether it seems to me that the justices have arrived at the right conclusion, that the duties of the office were of right performed in the parish of Amlwch; and if that be so, the pauper has acquired a settlement by discharging some of the duties of the office within the parish. The rectory of Llanbenlan, to which Llanerchymedd is attached, appoints the curate, and pays his salary; but the owner of the Llwydiarth estate appoints the clerk, and repairs the chapel. The chapel is appropriated part to the use of the tenants of the Llwydiarth estate, and part to the use of the tenants of another estate. The inhabitants of the vill have no seats. It has been the uniform practice of the minister of Llanerchymedd occasionally to attend with his clerk at the houses of the inhabitants of Amlwch; whether as matter of duty or of indulgence was left in doubt; but in my opinion the sessions have done right in concluding that it was done as matter of obligation. Then was not this a description of office notorious in the parish of Amlwch? The fact of the parish having supplied a portion of the sacramental elements, is a very clear circumstance to show its notoriety. Part of the charges made by the parish officers of Amlwch in their accounts must have been for bread and wine supplied to the chapel of Llanerchymedd, and that affords a strong argument that the chapel was erected for the benefit of the parish as well as of the vill." Holroyd and Littledale, Js., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed."

4. Residence.

The party must reside in the parish where the office is executed

Rex v. Woodbridge, 1 Nev. & M. 457; 4 B. & Ad. 711. Joseph Bird was removed from St. Matthew to Woodbridge. Order confirmed. Case: —The pauper was on the 29th of September, 1820, appointed by the bailiffs of Ipswich a crane porter at the common quay in that town. The business of the crane porters is to unload vessels arriving at the common quay; it is a public annual office and the pauper served it for a year. The quay where the vessels are unloaded is situated in the parish of St. Mary at the quay at Ipswich, but during the whole of the year the pauper resided in the parish of St. Matthew in the same town; and the sessions, thinking the office was executed in the parish of St. Mary at the quay, were of opinion that no settlement was gained in St. Matthew's. Denman, C. J. "The words of the statute are sufficiently explicit to show that a settlement can be gained only by serving an office in the parish where the party resides. The order of sessions must be confirmed."

4. Residence.

The office of town crier and bellman will confer a settlement under s. 6 of 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, and if the town comprises several parishes the settlement will be where the officer has last resided forty days.

Rex v. St. Nicholas, Hereford, 10 Bar. & Cres. 832. Removal of S. Hall, widow, and her children from St. Peter to St. Nicholas, Hereford. Order confirmed. Case:—T. Hall, deceased, the husband of S. Hall, the pauper, gained a settlement in the parish of St. Nicholas, Hereford, by renting a tenement. He quitted that house 23d of November, 1827, and lived in the parish of All Saints, Hereford, till the 23d of June, 1828, when he removed to St. Peter, Hereford, and resided in that parish till the time of his death, 29th of December, 1828. On Monday the 2d of October, 1826, he was appointed by the corporation of Hereford to the annual public office of town crier and bellman for the city of Hereford, and also sworn in a constable of the city of Hereford. He was reappointed and resworn on the 1st of October, 1827, and 16th of October, 1828, and he executed the office of town crier and bellman in the city of Hereford, of which the parish of St. Peter forms a part, from the time of his first appointment on the 2d of October, 1826, up to the time of his death, 29th of December, 1828; he was also liable and ready to execute the office of constable when called on, but never had acted as constable. There were other persons sworn in as constables, who acted as such in the city. T. Hall resided forty days and upwards, namely, from the 23d of June, 1828, to the 29th of December, 1828, in the parish of St. Peter's, Hereford. Lord Tenterden delivered the judgment. "We are of opinion that the pauper did gain a settlement in the parish of St. Peter's, Hereford. The question turns entirely on the 3 Will. & Mary, c 11, s. 6, which enacts, 'That if any person who shall come to inhabit in any town or parish during one whole year, shall on his own account execute any public office in the town or parish during one whole year, then he shall be judged to have a legal settlement in the same, though no such notice in writing be delivered and published as is hereby before required.' Now, the office of crier is undoubtedly an office within the meaning of the statute; it need not be confined to a particular parish; but an office in a city containing several parishes will confer a settlement. By the statute 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, a party coming into a parish to settle gained a settlement by forty days' residence. The statute 1 Jac. II. c. 17, s. 3, enacted, 'That the forty days' continuance in the parish intended by the former statute to make a settlement, should be accounted from the delivery of a notice in writing of the house of abode, &c. to the churchwarden or overseer of the poor.' The effect of that statute, therefore, was, to prevent a party gaining a settlement until forty days after the delivery of the notice required to the parish officers. Now, the statute 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, after enacting that the forty days shall be accounted from the publication in the church of the notice in writing required to be delivered to the parish officers, substitutes the executing of a public annual office for the notice required in the case of coming to settle upon a tenement; and as in that case a party would be settled in a parish by residing therein forty days after the publication of the notice, by analogy he will gain a settlement by the execution of a public annual office during a year, in any parish where he has last resided for forty days. Here the husband of the pauper did execute a public annual office in the town or parish during one whole year. He comes, therefore, within the very words of the section, and it is a safe rule of construction to adhere to the words of a statute. The seventh section throws some light on the subject. It enacts, 'That if any unmarried person, not having child or children, shall be lawfully hired into any parish or town for one year, such service shall be deemed a good settlement therein, though no notice in writing be delivered and published.' Now, although the subsequent statute 8 & 9 Will. III. requires that there shall be a service as well as a hiring for a year, yet, it is clear that a party will gain a settlement by a year's service

4. Residence. under a yearly hiring in that parish wherein he has resided for the last forty days; and it is immaterial, in that case, whether the party be hired before or after he comes into the parish. By analogy to the case of hiring and service, it appears to us that the husband of the pauper having been appointed to the office before he came to reside in the parish; and having served that office for one whole year for this as well as for the other parishes of that town, and having resided there for the last forty days during which he executed the office, gained a settlement in the parish of St. Peter's, Hereford." Order of sessions quashed.

10. Of Settlement by being Charged with and Paying Public Taxes or Levies of the Parish.

10. Of Settlement by being Charged with and Paying Public Taxes or Levies of the Parish.

By the 3 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6, a person might gain a settlement by being charged with and paying his share towards the public taxes and levies of the town or parish. But by the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 4, it was provided that the person must pay such parochial taxes or levies in respect of a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.* or upwards. The effect of which statute was that this mode of acquiring a settlement was seldom relied on, for in most instances where the tenement was of the yearly value of 10*l.* the occupier could obtain a settlement on other grounds. This was the state of the law from 1795, when the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, was passed, down to 22d June, 1819, the date of the 59 Geo. III. c. 50, by which latter statute this mode of establishing a settlement was revived, as the latter statute required that in order to gain a settlement by renting a tenement, such tenement must be bonâ fide hired for one whole year at 10*l.* a year, and the rent for a year actually paid. But this statute did not affect the right of acquiring a settlement by payment of parish taxes, &c., and consequently if a person paid parish rates, &c. in respect of a tenement of 10*l.* yearly value, whether he had complied with the provisions of 59 Geo. III. or not, was immaterial, for he was still entitled to his settlement as being charged with and paying public taxes or levies of the parish.

Such the state of the law continued until the 22d June, 1825, when the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, annexed the same conditions to the acquisition of a settlement by paying rates as it imposed upon settlements by renting a tenement. (See Rex v. Penryn, p. 945).

But the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, s. 1, applies only to settlements by renting a tenement; if therefore a person pays parochial rates, and complies with the provisions of 6 Geo. IV., he acquires a settlement, although he does not satisfy the provisions of 1 Will. IV. c. 18, (Rex v. Stoke Damerel, p. 946).

The second section, however, of 1 Will. IV. c. 18, is applicable to settlements by rating as well as by renting, as that section enacts that payment of 10*l.* shall be sufficient under the recited act by 6 Geo. IV.; and the latter act does apply to both kinds of settlement.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, has added, as a condition to the acquisition of a settlement by renting a tenement, that the occupier shall be assessed to the poor-rate, and shall have paid the same for one year.

This section also is confined to renting tenements, and is not applicable to settlements by payment of rates. (Reg. v. St. Mary, Kallendar, post.)

Before the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, the annual value of the tenement in respect of which the taxes or levies were charged and paid, was immaterial; and this statute first required that the tenement for which the person was rated should be of the value of 10*l.* a year at the least.

This head of settlement may be considered under the following titles:—

1. Enactments as to this Settlement.
2. Construction and Operation of 35 Geo. III. c. 101.
3. Of Inhabitancy.
4. What are Parochial Taxes or Levies within the Act.
5. The Person must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

1. Enactments as to this Settlement.

1. Enactments as to this Settlement.

Settlement by being charged with and paying public taxes and levies of parish.

The 3 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6, enacts, "That if any person who shall come to inhabit in any town or parish, shall be charged with and pay his share towards the public taxes or levies of the said town or parish, then he shall be adjudged to have a legal settlement in the same, though no such notice in writing be delivered and published as is hereby before required."

No settlement by payment of highway rates.

9 Geo. 1, c. 7, s. 6. No person who, from and after 25th March, 1723, shall be taxed, rated, or assessed to the scavenger or repairs of the highways, and shall duly pay the same, shall be deemed or taken to have any legal settlement in any city, parish, town, or hamlet, for or by reason of his or her paying to such scavenger's rate or repairs of the highway as aforesaid.

The charge must be in respect of a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*

By 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 4, "No person after 22nd June, 1795, who shall come into any parish, township, or place, shall gain any settlement therein by being charged with and paying his share towards the public taxes or levies of such place, for and on account or in respect of any tenement not being of the yearly value of 10*l.* (a)

Payment of duties shall not confer a settlement.

By 43 Geo. III. c. 161, s. 59, it is enacted, "That the payment of any of the duties made payable by this act (viz. the assessed taxes), by any person or persons in any parish or place, shall not entitle the person or persons so paying such duties to a settlement in such parish or place."

The tenement must have been hired and occupied for a year.

By 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 2, it is enacted, "That no person shall acquire a settlement in any parish or township maintaining its own poor, by or by reason of settling upon, renting, or paying (b) parochial rates for any tenement not being his or her own property, unless such tenement shall consist of a separate and distinct dwelling-house or building, or of land, or of both, bona fide rented by such person in such parish or township at and for the sum of 10*l.* a year at the least, for the term of one whole year; nor unless such house or building or land shall be occupied under such yearly hiring, and the rent for the same to the amount of 10*l.* actually paid for the term of one whole year at least; provided always that it shall not be necessary to prove the actual value of such tenement; anything in any act or acts, or any construction of or implication from any act or acts, or any usage or custom to the contrary, notwithstanding."

Proviso.

The 1 Will. IV. c. 18, s. 2, makes the payment of 10*l.* sufficient under 6 Geo. IV., which applies to rating, as well as renting. The first section of this act is not applicable to the payment of rates.

No settlement by renting tenement without paying poor rate.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, it is enacted, "That from and after the passing of this act no settlement shall be acquired or completed by occupying a tenement, unless the person occupying the same shall have been assessed to the poor-rate, and shall have paid the same in respect of such tenement for one year."

Operation of 35 Geo. III. c. 101.

2. Operation of 35 Geo. III. c. 101; 59 Geo. III.; 6 Geo. IV.; 1 Will. IV.; and 4 & 5 Will. IV.

A settlement may be gained by being rated and paying parochial taxes, without complying with the 59 Geo. III. c. 50.

Rex v. St. Pancras, 2 B. & C. 122; 3 D. & R. 343. Removal of Kitty, wife of William Buchan, from Lambeth to St. Pancras, Middlesex. Order confirmed. Case:—The husband occupied a house in Thornhaugh Street, in St. Pancras, and resided in the same not exceeding nine months, and subsequent to the 2nd of July, 1819, at the yearly rent and value of 80*l.*; and during such occupation her husband was regularly rated by and paid a poor-rate to the parish of St. Pancras, as occupier of the house. Bayley, J. "The question in this case is, whether the right to a settlement by being (a) In the Ilchester case, 2 Peck, 251, the committee determined that the 35 Geo. III. did not affect the case of an assessment in respect of stock in trade for which parish taxes are paid, however small the amount; but a settlement was thereby gained under 3 Will. III. c. 11.

(b) A residence of forty days previous to the passing of this act, upon a tenement worth more than 10*l.* a year, by a party charged to and having paid parochial rates, will not confer a settlement unless all the forty days are subsequent to such payment. (Rex v. Ringstead.)

2. Construction and Operation.

rated and paying taxes, was still a subsisting right at the time when the pauper was rated and paid, the tenement which he occupied being of the annual value of 10*l.* or upwards? In this case the pauper could not gain a settlement by renting it, because he had not been in the occupation of it for the period of one whole year, as required by the 59 Geo. III. c. 50. In order to decide the question, we must advert to the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 4, by which it has been contended that this head of settlement was entirely put an end to. It is material to consider what was the law upon this subject before the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, passed. A person rated and paying taxes for a tenement, whatever might be its value, acquired a settlement. The parish in such a case was considered as having adopted him as one of their parishioners. In most instances where the tenement was of the yearly value of 10*l.* the occupier would obtain a settlement upon other grounds. In the course of the argument, however, one instance was referred to, in which a party occupying such a tenement would not acquire a settlement unless on the ground of paying rates. I allude to the case of a person living in a house belonging to the king, as a servant of the public. The words of the clause to which I have referred do not in terms import an intention of the legislature to abolish this head of settlement entirely. They are qualified and apply expressly to tenements not being of the yearly value of 10*l.* And before we give a general effect to words which are not in themselves general, we ought to see clearly that such was the intention of the legislature. I think that it would be going too far to give a general effect to the words of this act, when we find that being rated and paying, as applied to a tenement of above the annual value of 10*l.*, was one medium by which a settlement in all cases might be obtained, and in some instances the only medium. Rex v. Islington and Rex v. Penryn (a) have been referred to in argument, and are certainly at variance with the opinion of the court. In the former, however, the point did not arise, and the opinion of Lord Kenyon was quite extra-judicial. The real question was, whether the operation of the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 4, was limited to persons who should thereafter come into any parish, or whether it extended to persons residing there before. In Rex v. Penryn the question was again presented to the consideration of Lord Ellenborough, who certainly gave a distinct opinion that it was the intention of the legislature to abolish entirely this head of settlement. The present lord chief justice merely said 'That it was expedient to do away settlements by paying rates for tenements of very small value.' It does not appear by the report whether my brother Holroyd or myself were present. These two authorities naturally drew the attention of the court carefully to consider the words of 35 Geo. III.,

A settlement might have been acquired under 35 Geo. III. by payment of rates.

(a) Rex v. Penryn, 5 M. & Sel. 443. Case:—The pauper occupied four rooms at the yearly rent and of the value of 4*l.*, part of a large dwelling-house of the yearly value of 18*l.* and upwards. The other parts of the dwelling-house were occupied by several other tenants, two of whom also paid 4*l.* a year each for their respective apartments. This dwelling-house had but one outer door and one staircase, and each tenant kept the key of his own apartment. For three years the pauper was rated to the church and poor-rates for the whole house, and paid the same, and they were allowed to him out of his rent, except in one instance. He had no concern with or control over the remainder of the house. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "It will be in vain for the legislature to make general enactments, if such enactments are to be explained away, and their operation defeated by nice distinctions. The 3d section was undoubtedly meant to abrogate this head of settlement, and the authorities upon it, which perhaps had been carried to some degree of absurdity. Lord Kenyon appears so to have considered the operation of the act; and I am glad that we have his authority for it. If this construction of Lord Kenyon had not been felt to be the correct one, I doubt not that we should have had some observation upon it from the learned reporter with whom the act originated, and which is generally known by his name." Abbott, J. "This act prevents the removal of any person before he is actually chargeable. This rendered it expedient to do away with settlements by notice or paying rates, for tenements of very small value." The Rex v. Islington, the other case overruled, is in 1 East, 283.

2. Construction and Operation of the Statute on each other.

and the state of the law as it existed before the passing of that act. If there had been no case before that time, in which the occupier of a tenement of 10*l.* annual value would gain a settlement by the payment of rates, and on that ground only, then perhaps the words of the statute might be construed to have a general operation, and to annihilate this head of settlement altogether. One instance, however, has been mentioned, and possibly there may be others, where, before the statute 35 Geo. III., a settlement could not be acquired at all by the occupier of such a tenement, unless by the payment of rates (a); and that being so, I think that we are not warranted in saying that these qualified words were intended by the legislature to have a general and unqualified operation, so as to abrogate entirely this head of settlement. It might perhaps be imagined when the 59 Geo. III. c. 50 passed, that this head of settlement no longer existed; and we have avoided delay in giving our opinion, that if such were the notion, the error may be remedied during the present session of parliament." Order of sessions confirmed (b). See also Rex v. Lower Heyford, p. 949.

Between the passing of 35 Geo. III. c. 101, and 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, a settlement might have been gained by being charged with and paying rates.

Rex v. Penryn, 1 Nev. & M. 74; 4 B. & Ad. 224. H. Gill was removed from Budock to Penryn. Order confirmed. Case:—In 1815, Henry Gill, the deceased husband of the pauper, took of Edgcome a tenement consisting of three rooms, in the borough of Penryn, at the rent of 6*l.* a year. These rooms originally formed part of a dwelling-house, which before 1815 had been subdivided into five distinct dwelling-houses, of which the three rooms occupied by the pauper formed one. The other houses were occupied by other tenants. It was agreed between Gill and the landlord, that Gill should pay all the rates upon the whole property, the amount to be deducted from his rent. Gill was accordingly rated to, charged with, and paid the church, poor, and highway rates, for the borough of Penryn, between 1815 and 1830, for the whole premises in one entire sum or charge. The aggregate annual value of these premises amounted to 16*l.*, being the rent which the landlord received for the same; but the value of the tene-

(a) A servant of the Crown occupying a tenement belonging to the public might gain a settlement by being rated, although he could not by occupation.

(b) "The sole object of the legislature in passing the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, was to take away the power of removing poor persons likely to become chargeable, and to make them irremovable till actually chargeable. But in doing this it became necessary to guard against certain evils which this change would produce to parishes. For instance, by the old law, a person coming into a parish, and giving a written notice to the overseers, would, if he resided forty days, gain a settlement. The reason of this being, that if likely to be chargeable, the overseers, availing themselves of the knowledge thereby communicated, might remove him. But when the law was altered, and actual substituted for probable chargeability, it would follow that a person very likely to become chargeable might, if he was desirous of doing so, come in and give notice, and in defiance of the overseers, acquire a settlement by only not demanding relief for forty days. In order to remedy this evil, settlement by notice was abolished by section 3. So again, if a person came to settle on a tenement under 10*l.*, he would by the old law be removable if likely to become chargeable: but if he was rated, and paid rates in respect of it for forty days, and was not during that time actually chargeable, he might become settled in the parish, and demand relief on the forty-first day. For this reason, such persons rated in respect of tenements under 10*l.* were prevented by section 4 from gaining settlements by paying rates. Similar reasons may be given for the two remaining enactments in the 5th and 6th sections. The whole may be thus summed up: Wherever the change of the law from probable to actual chargeability, enabled persons who were likely to become chargeable to obtain settlements by preventing the parish officers from removing them for forty days, those settlements were abolished; but where by the law, as it stood before 35 Geo. III. c. 101, such persons were irremovable, that act did not interfere with their cases. See the judgment of Holroyd, J., in Rex v. Idle, 2 B. & A. 149. Applying this principle to the case here decided, we may conclude that the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, did not prevent settlements by paying rates in respect of tenements above 10*l.*; for to such cases the inconvenience above pointed out did not apply. By 13 & 14 Car. II. persons coming to settle on tenements above 10*l.*, and consequently persons paying rates in respect of such tenements, were irremovable even though likely to become chargeable. Their situation therefore was not altered by 35 Geo. III. c. 101." 2 B. & C. 128, (note).

2. Construction and Operation of the Statutes on each other.

ment occupied by Gill was under 10*l.* a year. In pursuance of the agreement with his landlord, Gill, when he settled his rent, was allowed the amount of the rates which he had from time to time paid. Gill was not answerable for the rent of any of the other tenants, nor had he any connection or control over them. Denman, C. J. "The 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, enacts, 'that if any person who shall come to inhabit in any parish, shall be charged with and pay his share towards the public taxes or levies of the parish, then he shall be deemed to have a legal settlement in the same, though no such notice in writing be delivered as is thereby before required.' It makes no distinction as to the value of the property in respect of which he is to be charged. It would be too much to say that the intention of the legislature was to give a settlement by rating in those cases only where notice was before required to be given to the parish officers. The judgments which have been relied upon in Rex v. Islington and Rex v. Penryn (ante, 944, n.) were considered with due respect and attention, and overruled in Rex v. St. Pancras (ante, 943). The order of sessions must be confirmed." Parke, J. "I am of the same opinion. There is a time when a point even of sessions law ought to be considered as settled." Taunton and Patteson, Js., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

A settlement may be gained by the payment of parochial rates for a tenement not occupied according to the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, if the occupation satisfies the provisions of the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57.

Rex v. Stoke Damerel, 1 N. & P. 453; 6 A. & E. 308. T. Pearce was removed from Stoke Damerel to Plympton Maurice. Order quashed. Case: —It was admitted that the pauper had gained a settlement in Plympton, and that afterwards, and after the passing of 1 Will. IV. c. 18, he rented a house in Stoke Damerel at 16*l.* a year, paid the rent and was rated, and had paid the rates, but during the whole of his tenancy he let a portion of the house of the value of 4*l.* per year to one Knapman. Lord Denman. "I certainly believe that the legislature intended to get rid of the settlement by rating, in these acts of parliament; but so Lord Ellenborough thought they did by the 35 Geo. III., although in point of fact they did not carry that intention into effect, and that head of settlement re-appeared some years afterwards. When the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, passed, it cannot be doubted that a person might gain a settlement by the payment of rates, and the effect of that statute was to prevent the occupier of a tenement gaining a settlement by such means, unless the tenement were of a certain description. Then comes the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, in consequence of some decisions of this court, and that act recites the whole of the 6 Geo. IV. as to the means of gaining a settlement by paying of rates or renting a tenement, and enacts, 'that no person shall gain a settlement by renting a tenement, unless the tenement be of a certain description,' omitting in that enacting part the settlement by payment of rates, mentioned in the previous statute. How is it possible then for us to say that the legislature (supposing they had such an intention) have actually carried into effect the intention of preventing the gaining of a settlement by rating? There may be, as my brother Coleridge suggested, a reason imagined why they should not have intended it, because certainly the settlement by payment of rates is one of those least susceptible of dispute. It is easily ascertained by a public document whether or not a party was paying rates, and that would avoid all those nice questions which caused so much litigation in former times. But believing, as I certainly do, that the legislature meant to get rid of the settlement altogether by payment of rates, still I cannot see they have taken effectual means for doing so. I think therefore the settlement by the payment of rates, supposing the tenement to be such as described by 6 Geo. IV. continues, notwithstanding the 1 Will. IV." Williams, J. "I am of the same opinion. It must be admitted that there is no repeal of settlement by rating; and indeed, in the 6 Geo. IV., it is treated expressly as an existing head of settlement. Supposing the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, had not passed, there is no question but that, consistently with the decisions on 6 Geo. IV., the tenement here held would have been sufficient to have conferred a settlement by renting a tenement, and would have been sufficient also to have conferred a settlement by rating in respect of that tenement. Then the legislature, in consequence, it is presumed, of a decision not anticipated, recite the clause of 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 2, as to renting and payment of rates, and leave the latter head untouched, providing only for the former. I dare say they thought that this species of settlement was put an end to, but as they have left it untouched, while they touch the other, I must treat it as still subsisting." Coleridge, J. "I am of opinion the order of sessions is perfectly right in this case, which seems to me, I must say, a very clear one. The head of settlement by rating was given affirmatively by the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6. Passing over the intermediate statute, that head was restrained by the 6 Geo. IV., and on the passing of that act of parliament no one was to be allowed to acquire a settlement under the 3 Will. & Mary, unless he complied with the regulations of the 6 Geo. IV. It is said now that that statute must be taken to annul the head of settlement by rating altogether. That is precisely the argument that was used unsuccessfully with regard to the 35 Geo. III. And it was afterwards contended, in Rex v. Penryn, that because a renting of 10*l.* would give a settlement without the rating, that therefore the head of rating was abolished. That is precisely the argument urged to-day; that argument was then urged unsuccessfully; and so it must in common sense be held unsuccessful now. But it is said, if that be not so, still, from the intention of the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, it must be taken at all events, that no such settlement can be gained, unless the parties have complied with all the requisitions of the 1 Will. IV. That would be to make us put the same interpretation on an act of the legislature, in which they have recited both grievances, and have chosen to leave the latter wholly untouched." Order of sessions confirmed.

2. Construction and Operation of the Statutes on each other.

Reg. v. St. Mary Kalendar, 9 A. & E. 626; 1 P. & D. 497. S. Gay was removed from St. Maurice to St. Mary Kalendar. Order confirmed. Case:—The respondents called the pauper, who proved that he took a house in St. Mary Kalendar of a Mrs. Page, on the 5th of October, 1835, at the yearly rent of 16*l.*, payable quarterly, and that such tenancy might be put an end to by giving a quarter's notice at any period; that at the end of the first quarter he paid the rent then due; that he then complained of the rent being too high, and said that he should quit; that his landlady then stated that if he would remain, she would take off 10*s.* per quarter from the rent, which was agreed to, and the parties afterwards acted in accordance with such agreement; that he resided in the house till the 26th day of September, 1836, when he with his family removed into a house which he had in another parish, having locked up Mrs. Page's house, in which he left only some few of his things; that his landlady, on being applied to on the 29th of September, refused to accept the key of the house till the 5th of October, on which day he surrendered the key of the premises and paid the remainder of his rent; that he was rated to all the rates made between the 5th October, 1835, and the 5th October, 1836; that he had paid all except the last rate, which was made on the 29th September, confirmed and allowed on the 4th October, and published on the 9th. This last rate he paid no part of, though his name was inserted in it, nor was it proved to have been demanded of him. It was admitted that the pauper had not gained a settlement under 1 Will. IV. c. 18, in consequence of his having taken in lodgers during part of the year; but the respondents contended that he had gained a settlement there by payment of parochial rates; and the sessions being of that opinion, confirmed the order. It was urged that occupation was intended as well as renting, as both are specified in 6 Geo. IV. c. 57. Lord Denman. "The meaning was, that a party might rent the house but never take possession, and that should not be sufficient. Here is possession to a certain extent. The distinction that arises is not between occupation and mere holding, but between different modes of occupation." Coleridge, J. "Suppose he had gone away without any animus revertendi, but had left a person on the premises, would not that have been an occupation? and if so, may he not occupy in the same manner by his goods?" Lord Denman. "We will consider this question; but I cannot forbear saying that words which fall from the bench at different times are pressed to an unwarrantable extent. My brother Littledale's language in Rex v. Ditcheat (p. 833) had reference entirely to the circumstances of the case, though it has been cited in argument as the foundation of a general doctrine. So the time of publishing a rate is material when something is to be dated from the publication, as the notice of appeal in Reg. v. Watts, (p. 382,) but it is not therefore material, so as to assert rights as that of voting, which depend on the party being rated. We will look into the acts of parliament and the cases." Cur. adv. vult. On a subsequent day he delivered the judgment of the court. "The question in this case was, whether the pauper gained a settlement by payment of rates in respect of a tenement. The 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, would defeat the settlement unless there was an occupation for a year. We think that there was such an occupation; for Rex v. Great Bentley (p. 834) goes farther than the present case. The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, enacts, that from and after the passing of that act 'no settlement shall be acquired or completed by occupying a tenement, unless the person occupying the same shall have been assessed to the poor-rate, and shall have paid the same in respect of such tenement for one year.' It is objected, that as the pauper did not pay rates for a whole year, the above section will prevent his gaining a settlement. It seems, however, not to apply to the case, for it says that no settlement shall be acquired 'by occupying a tenement.' But the settlement now under consideration is by payment of rates, and not by occupying a tenement, so that the new poor law does not interfere with it." Order of sessions confirmed.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, does not apply to settlements by payment of rates. A pauper, therefore, who on the 5th October, 1835, took a house at 16*l.* a year, and was rated and paid his rates in respect thereof, and complied with 6 Geo. IV., acquired a settlement. Leaving some trifling property in the house, and keeping the key of it until the end of the year, when he completed payment of the year's rent, is a sufficient occupation under 6 Geo. IV. c. 57.

2. Construction and Operation of the Statutes on each other.

The 1 Will. IV. c. 18, dispenses with payment of the whole year's rent in settlements by payment of rates, as well as in settlements by renting a tenement.

Reg. v. Brighton, 1 G. & D. 54; 1 Q. B. 674. Ann Richardson was removed from Petworth to Brighton. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was the widow of Joseph Richardson. On the 27th or 28th of March, 1838, Joseph Richardson went into the occupation of a separate and distinct dwelling-house and buildings in Brighton, under a lease for a term of years, and continued with his family to occupy those premises till his death on the 27th of March following. During this time he paid the first three quarters of a year's rent for the premises, amounting to more than 10*l.* (viz. 80*l.*), but the last quarter of a year's rent was never paid. He underlet a portion of the premises, but was duly assessed in respect of the whole of them to the poor-rate made on the 17th of July, 1838, (the first rate made after his occupation,) and to another such rate made on the 1st November, 1838, and these two rates were duly paid by him, together with 1*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.* apportioned to him out of a rate made in respect of the premises, on the 5th March, 1838, and assessed upon the then occupiers of the premises previously to his occupation. No other rate was made for the parish in respect of the premises during his occupation. The sessions find as a fact that Joseph Richardson occupied the premises for one whole year. It was contended that the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, was confined to settlements by renting tenements. Lord Denman. "I do not find the intention to restrict, and I think the section was meant to apply to both kinds of settlement." Patteson, J. "The 6 Geo. IV. provides for the one mode of settlement as well as the other, and the words in the second section are, 'payment to the amount of 10*l.* shall be deemed sufficient for the purpose of gaining a settlement under the said recited act.' That would include the settlement by payment of rates." Williams, J., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

It is not necessary that the person should be rated at 10*l.* Rating in respect of a tenement of that annual value is sufficient.

Rex v. St. Dunstan's (see this case, p. 808). Abbott, C. J. "It is contended against the order that, upon the true construction of the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, we ought to hold that no person shall gain a settlement by being charged and paying rates in respect of a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, unless he is actually rated at that sum in the assessment. Whether that was the intention of the legislature may admit of some doubt, but certainly it is not for us to say that such an effect is to be given to the act of parliament, because the expressions used in the statute are, 'that no person shall gain a settlement by being charged with, and paying his share towards the public taxes of the parish, in respect of any tenement, not being of the value of 10*l.*' Then, must not the yearly value be the criterion, and not the sum at which the tenant is actually rated? In this case I think that the fixtures having made the tenement amount to the value of 10*l.*, we must say that the pauper's husband gained a settlement without any regard to the amount of rate, or the value fixed by the parish officers in their assessment. If we were to lay down a different rule of construction, it might happen that a person could gain no settlement by rating, even though it could be proved to demonstration that the tenement was of the yearly value of 20*l.* or any larger amount." Bayley, J. "I do not agree with the construction put upon the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, in argument. The legislature has said, 'not being of the value of 10*l.*,' which only shows that the tenement must be of that value. If it had been said, 'not rated to the value of 10*l.*' I should have acceded to the argument."

2. Construction and Operation of the Statutes.

It is not necessary that the party should be a tenant to acquire a settlement by rating. The clerk of an attorney occupying a tenement, rent-free, and paying rates, which the attorney reimbursed him, gains a settlement.

Rex v. Lower Heyford, 1 Bar. & Adol. 75. John Garratt and children were removed from Banbury to Lower Heyford. Order confirmed. Case:—John Garratt had been for many years previous to his death the clerk of Mr. Bignell, an attorney. In September, 1818, Mr. Bignell took certain premises in Caulcott in the appellant parish, consisting of a cottage, garden, orchard, and about thirteen acres of land, for a term of seven years, at the yearly rent of 38*l.*, and in 1819, he allowed John Garratt (who up to that time lived at Bicester) to reside at the cottage as being nearer to Middleton, his own residence, and more convenient for business. Garratt accordingly removed to Caulcott with his family, and lived in the cottage, to which three acres of land were attached, and which Garratt occupied for several years, but he never had anything to do with the remainder of the land. Mr. Bignell always paid the entire rent to his landlord, and Garratt paid no rent; neither was any reduction made in his salary; and Mr. Bignell stated as his reason for this, that Garratt had a large family, and his salary was low, and as an augmentation to it, he, Mr. Bignell, permitted him to occupy the cottage, &c., valued by Mr. Bignell at 20*l.* per annum. Garratt left the premises when required, without receiving any notice to quit. In the books of the appellant parish Garratt was rated as the occupier of the cottage and land, and he paid the rates, although Mr. Bignell was sometimes called upon to pay, and did pay, the entire rate so assessed. The rates, when paid by Garratt, were either repaid to him by Mr. Bignell, or allowed in account. The sessions determined that there was no such renting of a tenement as would confer a settlement, but confirmed the order on the ground that Garratt had been charged with and paid his share towards the public taxes of the parish. Bayley, J., now delivered the judgment of the court: "This case depended on the settlement of John Garratt, the father of the paupers. The facts were these: Garratt was clerk to Mr. Bignell, an attorney. Mr. Bignell rented a cottage and about thirteen acres of land in Lower Heyford, and he suffered Garratt to live in the cottage, to which three acres of land were attached, rent-free. For this cottage and land Garratt was rated, and he paid the rates; but Mr. Bignell either repaid him or allowed him the money in account. Whether he was rated for the whole thirteen acres, or only for the cottage and the three, does not appear very clearly upon the case; but if what he was rated for was of the yearly value of 10*l.*, which has not been disputed, it is in our view of the case sufficient. Upon these facts two questions appear to have been made at the sessions, one whether he gained a settlement by coming to settle upon a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, and the other, whether he gained one by coming to inhabit in the parish, and being charged with and paying his share towards the public taxes and levies of the parish; the sessions thought he gained a settlement by the latter mode, and we think their decision was right. It was decided in Rex v. St. Pancras (ante, p. 943), that the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 4, has not entirely abolished this head of settlement, but that it still remains in force where the premises for which the rates are imposed are of the value of 10*l.* a year. The 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, upon which this head of settlement depends, prescribes the steps where a settlement shall be obtained by notice, and, by section 6, provides that if any person who shall come to inhabit in any parish shall be charged with and pay his share towards the public taxes or levies of the said parish, he shall be adjudged to have a legal settlement therein, though no notice has been given. The questions, therefore, in this case are, did Garratt come to inhabit in this parish? and was he charged with, and did he pay, his share towards the public taxes or levies of this parish? and upon these points there is no doubt. It was never contended that he did not gain a settlement upon these grounds. The grounds upon which it is contended that he did not gain a settlement are, that he was not properly tenant of the cottage and land, though he occupied them, but that he occupied rather as servant to Mr. Bignell; that Mr. Bignell was to be considered as the person rated, though it was in Garratt's name; that there was nothing which could properly be called Garratt's share of the rates; and that, though he paid the rates in the first instance, he was either reimbursed or allowed them in account by Mr. Bignell. It is not necessary for us to decide whether Garratt was properly tenant of this cottage and land (though, as the occupation of this cottage and land was unconnected with, and wholly independent of, the service of Garratt to Bignell, there would be no difficulty in the decision), but it is not necessary to decide this question; because the settlement in this case depends, not on the coming to settle on a tenement under the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, in which case the relation of landlord and tenant is essential, but on coming to inhabit, and being charged with and paying his share of the public taxes or levies of the parish, under the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, in which case the relation of landlord and tenant is not necessary; but all that is requisite is, that the parish shall rate the party, so as to show that they are aware that he is in the parish, and that he should pay upon such rating. That the relation of landlord and tenant is not necessary in the latter case, under the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, is established by Rex v. Stapleton, Burr. S. C. 649. There the pauper lived with his mother, and was rated for a house and land she occupied. He occupied nothing in the parish himself, and yet it was decided, that by paying such rate he gained a settlement: for the parish, by rating him, had shown that they knew he was inhabiting within the parish, and had recognized him as an inhabitant, and by making the payment, he had performed that part of the condition the statute imposes upon the person charged, viz. paying his share. It was contended there, as it has been contended here, that as he was not occupier, no part of the rate could be called his share; but that argument was overruled. Now that case is much stronger than this; for there the person rated was not the occupier; here he clearly is." After alluding to the other point, (which see, post,) he added, "that Garratt gained a settlement by payment of rates, and confirmed the decision of the sessions." (a)

2. Construction and Operation of the Statutes.

Test of occupation as a tenant.

The relation of landlord and tenant not necessary for acquiring a settlement by paying rates.

3. Of Inhabitancy.

3. Of Inhabitancy.

The pauper must inhabit the parish in which he is rated.

Rex v. St. Michael-at-Thorn, in Norwich, 6 T. R. 536. The pauper resided in one, and was assessed to the land-tax in another parish. The two parishes were consolidated by statute, and the poor maintained out of one joint fund. The removal was from a third parish. Lord Kenyon. "Though they were consolidated for that purpose, as between them and strangers each parish continues a separate and distinct parish. Then the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary says, that any person who shall inhabit in any town or parish, and be charged with and pay his share towards the public taxes of the said town or parish, shall thereby obtain a settlement; but in this case the pauper's husband lived in one parish, and was assessed to the land-tax in another, therefore this does not come within the statute."

The party must reside forty days after he has been rated and paid the rates. If such forty days had not elapsed before the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, and the party had not

Rex v. Ringstead, 7 B. & C. 607. Elizabeth, wife of J. Saunders, was removed from Kimbolton to Ringstead. Order confirmed. Case:—After Lady-day, 1825, the pauper's husband hired a tenement in Ringstead, of the annual value of 10*l.* upwards, from Lady-day, 1825, to Lady-day, 1826, and went to settle on it on the 4th of May, 1825, being upwards of forty days before the passing of 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, (22 June, 1825). A poor-rate was made and allowed on the 27th of May, 1825, and was paid a few days afterwards, being less than forty days before the passing of the said statute. The requisites of the 59 Geo. III. c. 50, were not complied with, so that no settlement could be gained by renting a tenement under that statute; on the 2nd March, 1825, a church-rate was made at a parish meeting in Ringstead, and the pauper's husband coming into the parish on the 4th May, his name was inserted in the church-rate, and the rate afterwards paid by him. Bayley, J. "I think that in order to gain a settlement in this case by the payment of taxes, the pauper ought to have resided in the parish forty days after he had been rated, and paid the taxes. By the 1 Jac. II. c. 3, the forty days' countinuance of a person in a parish (intended by the 13 & 14 Car. II. to make a settlement) is to be accounted from the time of his delivery of a notice in writing of the house of his abode to one of the parish officers, and by s. 3 of 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, from the time of the publication of such notice in the manner therein mentioned. It is clear, therefore, that in order to gain a settlement, it was necessary that a party should continue in a parish forty days after the giving and publication of the notice to the parish officers. But s. 6 of the latter statute provides that, 'if any person who shall come to inhabit in any parish shall be charged with, and pay his share of towards, the public taxes of the parish, then he shall be adjudged and deemed to have a legal settlement in the same, although no such notice in writing be delivered and published, as is hereby before required.' By this clause the legislature therefore evidently consider the being charged with and paying parochial taxes equivalent to the giving and publishing the notice in writing required in other cases. As it was, therefore, necessary to reside forty days in a parish after the giving and publication of notice, it follows that, in order to gain a settlement, by reason of having been charged with and paid parochial taxes, a party ought to reside forty days after he has been so charged with and paid such taxes; and if that be so, then on the 22nd day of June, 1825, the pauper had not resided forty days after the making of the poor-rate; and it does not appear that he resided forty days after payment of the church-rate, and it is not stated when that rate was paid. It is no shown, therefore, that he had gained any settlement by having been charged with and paid parochial taxes on the 22nd June, 1825; and the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, has prevented the gaining of a settlement after that period, unless the tenement has all the qualities there described, which in this case it had not." Littledale, J. "The 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, confers a settlement on any inhabitant who has been charged with and paid his share towards the parochial taxes. The settlement, however, is not acquired until the taxes are actually paid. Before that time the parish need not take any notice of the party. The payment of the taxes with which the party is charged is by the statute made equivalent to the notice otherwise required to be given to the parish officers. Now as a person could not gain a settlement until he had continued forty days in the parish after such notice had been given and published, I think it follows, as a necessary consequence, that no settlement could be gained by the pauper in this case until he had continued in the parish forty days after he had paid the taxes with which he was charged. It does not appear that he had paid any taxes on the 22nd June, 1825, consequently it is not shown that at that time he had acquired any settlement, and the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, prevented his gaining any settlement after that period." Order of sessions confirmed. (a) complied with the requisites of the statute, he acquires no settlement.

(a) What is a sufficient assessment and payment, under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, see Reg. v. Hulme, p. 958.

---

4. What are Parochial Taxes or Levies within this Act.

Not assessed taxes.

Payment of the assessed taxes shall not entitle any person to a settlement. See 43 Geo. III. c. 161, s. 59, (ante).

Land-tax held to be a tax within the act.

Rex v. Bramley, Burr. S. C. 75. John Close, the pauper, inhabited and farmed lands at Armley, for which he was charged and paid two quarterly payments to the land-tax only. By the court: "It hath been a great doubt,

(a) So says the report, but it must have been quashed, as the sessions confirmed the settlement in Ringstead, but the Court of King's Bench thought that none had been gained there.

4. What are Parochial Taxes.

The words "parochial rates," in the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, applies to the land-tax; and is not confined to rates made for the use of the parish, but extends to all levies collected within the parish.

whether in this respect the legislature did not mean parochial taxes. But this hath been long gotten over; and the land-tax has been holden to be within the act, from the notice of inhabitancy that arises by the party's being assessed and paying it."

Rex v. East Teignmouth, 1 Bar. & Adol. 244. G. White was removed from East Teignmouth to Bishopteignton. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper, a short time before Lady-day, 1825, hired a mill and some closes of land in the parish of Bishopteignton, at the rent of 30*l.* a year, from the said Lady-day, and occupied the premises, residing thereon, with some intervals, during which he was under arrest, till shortly after Christmas, 1826, when in consequence of his rent being unpaid a negotiation took place between him and his landlord, and he gave up his possession and interest in the property. During his occupancy he was assessed to the parochial and other rates, some of which he paid, and among these one half-year's assessment to the land-tax, due on the 12th day of April, 1826, was paid by him in the month of July following. Bayley, J. "I think that the decision of the sessions was right. I quite agree that where a variety of language is found in several acts of parliament in pari materia, primâ facie the inference is that the legislature had a different meaning, but that does not of necessity follow. We must look not only at the words of the statute, but to the cause of making it, to ascertain the intent; 'qui hæret in litera hæret in cortice.' The words of the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, so far as respects this question, are 'that if any person shall be charged with and pay his share towards the public taxes or levies of the said parish, he shall be adjudged to have a legal settlement in the same.' The 35 Geo. III. c. 101, with the accuracy which might be expected from the framer of that act, adopts the words of the 3 Will. & Mary, and enacts, 'that no person who shall come into any parish shall gain a settlement in such parish by being charged with and paying his share towards the public taxes or levies of the said parish for or in respect of any tenement not being of the yearly value of 10*l.*' A question had arisen previous to Rex v. Bramley (supra), which was under the statute 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, whether the land-tax was a public tax and levy of the parish. It was said not to be a parochial tax; and it was not so in one sense, because when raised it was not applicable to a parochial purpose; but it was held to be one of the public levies and taxes of the parish, and that construction has been put on the act in several cases. Then, if a settlement might be obtained before the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, by paying public taxes of the parish, are not such taxes 'parochial?' within the meaning of that statute, taking the word in a large sense. The argument is, that the words 'parochial taxes' in the latter statute import taxes raised for parish purposes. But that is not of necessity the meaning of the words 'parochial taxes.' They may mean taxes of the parish; and if they may have two meanings, the question is, in what sense they were used in the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57? The title of the act is 'An Act for the amendment of the law respecting the settlement of the poor as far as regards renting tenements and paying parochial taxes.' Now these latter words undoubtedly mean taxes of the parish, by the payment of which a settlement might be gained by virtue of the statute 3 Will. & Mary. It then recites, 'that the settlement of the poor has been made in some instances to depend upon the annual value of tenements which they may have rented, or upon the annual value of tenements in virtue of which they had paid parochial rates.' It is conceded there is no distinction between the words 'rates' and 'taxes.' The recital therefore refers to the annual value of tenements, in respect of which settlements might have been gained by virtue of the 3 Will. & Mary, by payment of public taxes or the rates of the parish. The statute proceeds to enact, 'that no person shall acquire a settlement by paying parochial rates,' &c. There is undoubtedly a confusion of language; but we may collect from the title and preamble, that it was intended to use the words 'rates' and 'taxes' as synonymous, and the word 'parochial' in the general large sense, 'of the parish.' There is nothing to show that a different sense was intended. If this be so, it concludes the present question; because the land-tax has been decided to be a tax of the parish. I think then the words 'parochial rates' in the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, are not to be confined in construction to rates or taxes raised for the purposes of the parish, but that they are to be construed in the same sense as the words 'taxes of the parish' in the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, and 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 4, and therefore that they import taxes raised within the parish. That being so, then that statute prevents the gaining of a settlement by reason of any person being assessed to and having paid parochial taxes, unless the rent has been paid for the term of one whole year. Here that condition has not been complied with, and consequently no settlement has been gained." Littledale, J. "I am of opinion that, construing the word 'parochial' in a large sense, the land-tax is a parochial rate within the meaning of the act of parliament. In common parlance the word 'taxes' is used to denote taxes raised for the general purposes of the state; the word 'rate,' to denote taxes raised for local purposes. But generally speaking, a rate is a levy; and a parochial rate is a levy raised within the district called a 'parish,' though it be applicable to the general purposes of the state. That being the general meaning of the term, there is no ground for saying that it was intended to be used in any other sense in the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57; and if not, then no settlement was gained by the payment of the land-tax; it was the payment of a parochial rate, and the requisites of the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, had not been complied with by occupying and paying the rent of the tenement during one whole year." Parke, J. "The question turns entirely on the construction to be put on the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 2, by which it is enacted, 'that no person shall acquire a settlement by reason of settling upon, renting, or paying parochial rates for any tenement, &c. unless such tenement shall consist,' &c. If the words 'parochial rate' are to be understood of any tax levied within the parish, then a settlement was gained, because the act does not apply. But if it be understood as applicable strictly to a tax raised for the purposes of the parish, then no settlement was gained. Now it is a good rule of construction to interpret the words of an act of parliament in their ordinary grammatical sense, unless it appear clearly from the context that the legislature used them in some other. Here, by looking at the title of the act and the mischief recited, and by comparing the title and the recital with the body of the act, it is manifest that the legislature meant to use the words 'parochial rates' in the sense of rates or taxes raised within the parish. The title of the act is, 'An Act for the amendment of the law respecting the settlement of the poor, as far as regards renting tenements and paying parochial taxes. Now before this statute a settlement might be gained by the payment of taxes raised within the parish. The word 'parochial' clearly applied to that term. The mischief recited is, 'that the settlement of the poor had been made in some instances to depend upon the annual value of tenements which they may have rented, or upon the annual value of tenements in virtue of which they had paid parochial rates, and that the ascertaining such value in such respective cases had given rise to very expensive litigation.' I conclude therefore from the preamble, that the parochial rates therein mentioned were intended to include all parochial rates or taxes comprehended in the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, and that the legislature meant to prevent all discussion and litigation relating to questions of settlement depending upon the payment of such parochial taxes. The land-tax was one of those taxes; consequently, since the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, no settlement can be gained by the payment of that tax in respect of any tenement, unless all things required by that statute be done." Order of sessions confirmed.

4. What are Parochial Taxes.

Rule for construing a statute.

Payment of land-tax, in respect of salary, sufficient.

In Rex v. Axmouth (post), it was contended, that since the land-tax redemption acts, (38 Geo. III. c. 60, sed vide 42 Geo. III. c. 116, vol. iii.) which perpetuate the tax on lands as a charge upon the lands in the parish, and leave the tax on salaries as a mere personal tax, the rating in respect of the latter no longer satisfied the words of 3 Will. III. c. 11. But the court immediately overruled it, stating, that the tax was still a public tax, leviable and collected within the parish. (See 43 Geo. III. c. 161, s. 59, ante.)

Payment of a watch-rate in one of the city wards does not gain a settlement.

Rex v. Christ Church, London, 8 B. & C. 660. S. C. nom. Rex v. St. Anne's, Blackfriars, 3 Man. & R. 383. Order of removal of Sophia, wife of John Gyles (who was absent from her), from St. Anne, Blackfriars, to

4. What are Parochial Taxes.

Christ Church, confirmed. Case:—John occupied part of a house in Christ Church, of the yearly value of 20*l.*, for several months in 1821, and during that time was rated to and paid two quarters' watch-rates for the ward of Farringdon. The city is divided into twenty-six wards, and the ward of Farringdon into seventeen precincts; the house of Gyles, with regard to ward matters, is in St. Ewin's, and not in Christ Church precinct. The watch-rate is made by the alderman and common councilmen of each ward, under 10 Geo. II. c. 22, which enables the mayor, aldermen, and commons of the city to determine what sum shall be raised for watching, and directs the alderman and councilmen of each ward to make an assessment upon every person who shall inhabit or hold any land in the ward. The rate is collected by the beadle of the ward. Bayley, J. "The land-tax was holden to be within the act, from the notice of inhabitancy that arises by the party having been assessed and paid it. Payment towards a county bridge gives no settlement, because a person pays as an inhabitant of the county, and not of the parish. This watch-rate is not a parochial tax, nor is it collected by any officer belonging to the parish: the parish had no notice that the party who paid the watch-rate was an inhabitant of the parish: no settlement therefore was gained." Order of sessions quashed.

Nor of a county rate.

Nor of a highway rate.

We have seen that no person can acquire a settlement by being rated to the repairs of the highways. See Statute, ante.

County bridge rate not within the statute.

T. 9 Ann. Set. & Rem. 1. Paying to a county bridge gains no settlement, for there all the county is liable, and the payment is made as one of the county, and not as an inhabitant of the parish or town where the person resides. And see the judgment of Bayley, J., supra.

Unless altered by 12 Geo. II. c. 29.

But as the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, charges a sum certain upon every division in proportion to their poor-rate, towards the repair of bridges and other county expenses, and (with respect to bridges) is charged by the justices upon every individual, the case may be altered since that act was passed, under which it may be considered a parish rate or tax. And there is in this case the same notoriety of his inhabitancy as in the case of the poor-rate.

Church rate.

The church-rate is a parish tax. (Rex v. St. Bees, infra, and Rex v. Ringstead, p. 950.)

---

5. The Person must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Payment of the sum assessed is sufficient, though the rate be informal.

5. The Person must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Although the rate be, from the manner of making it, or from the want of authority in those who assume to make it, not strictly legal, or be void for want of form, or on any other ground, yet if the party be rated, and pay to such a rate, he shall gain a settlement: for it would be hard that one of the parish should come and say, that was a void rate, being of their own making, and acquiesced under, and the money paid accordingly. (19 Vin. Abr. 386; St. Giles's, Cripplegate, v. St. Mary Newington.)

Not so, if the name be inserted after the rate is paid.

Rex v. Edgbaston, 6 T. R. 540. A person's name was inserted in a rate after payment, and after it was so introduced, he always refused to pay. He gained no settlement.

A rate too narrowly made is good for the purposes of settlement.

Rex v. St. Bees, 9 East, 203. Removal of Sarah Tidyman from Egremont to St. Bees, confirmed. Case:—The pauper's husband occupied a house in Egremont till his death. A year after they occupied the house, a churchwarden called at the house for an assessment (generally called in the parish a couple sess, but which the pauper understood to be a church cess), and told her that her husband was assessed, and she paid 1*s.* 2*d.* as the sum assessed. Some time afterwards she paid 1*s.* more, upon a similar demand made by another churchwarden. And afterwards another shilling was paid, and the assessment was as follows:—

"1791. An assessment upon the householders in the parish of Egremont, at 1*s.* per couple, for the ornaments and repairs of the parish church;

	s.	d.
"× John Tidyman	1	0

"We whose names are hereunto subscribed (being of the church vestry), do allow of this as a regular assessment; as witness our hands, the 28th of March, 1791." (Signed by the minister and eight other persons, including the two churchwardens.)

The mark × opposite Tidyman's name denoted that he had paid the assessment. It appeared from the churchwarden's accounts of that year entered in the vestry book, that the sums received under that assessment were in part laid out in the repairs and ornaments of the church, and the rest in payment of a debt due to the preceding overseers. But that assessment being insufficient, another was made in the same year in aid of it, upon the landholders of the parish, who were never assessed but when the assessment upon the householders proved insufficient. And it was frequently the practice for the select vestry of the parish to make out these assessments in the form of a list of the names of the inhabitants liable to pay; charging the householders at 1*s.* each, and the widowers and widows, householders, at 6*d.* each; which assessments were afterwards submitted to and approved by the general parish vestry. It was contended that the rate was clearly bad, as being made upon the householders only, and not upon the parishioners at large. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The settlement is given by 3 Will. III. c. 11, to any person inhabiting any town or parish, who shall be charged and pay his share towards the public taxes or levies of the town or parish. Now if a public tax be laid too narrowly, is it less a public tax on that account? This was a tax, and it was public, and it was charged and paid within the parish. What else was required to meet the act of parliament?" Order of sessions quashed.

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Omission of the sum assessed immaterial, if the amount can be ascertained from the rate.

Rex v. Corhampton, Doug. 621. The overseers made a rate for 2*s.* in the pound in this form, "Rent 4*l.* Occupier, Richard Goodiff. Sum assessed ———." The overseers demanded 8*s.* for the rate, declaring he was assessed in that sum for the relief of the poor. Goodiff objected, alleging that he was not a parishioner. The overseers opened the rate-book, and showed him his name therein, and threatened to distrain for the 8*s.* if he did not pay it. Goodiff on this paid the money directly. In the afternoon of the same day, the overseer returned with the vestry clerk, and offered to return the money, saying he had taken it by mistake. Goodiff refused to receive it. The overseer however left it, and went away; on which Goodiff threw the money after him. It was contended that the parish never intended to rate him. The mistake of the overseer (and corrected so soon), in supposing him rated when he was not, could not be binding upon the parish. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "There is no question in the case. The title of the rate is, 2*s.* in the pound; and in the column of rent, Goodiff's rent is 4*l.* This fixes his proportion of the rate. For what purpose was his name inserted, if not to rate him? And besides he has paid it, and against his will; and the overseer shall not have it in his power to say, upon reconsidering the matter, I have thought better of it, and you shall not gain a settlement. Rex v. Warblington (Burr. S. C. 245) was different from this. The payment there was not till a year after it should have been made, and the overseer was induced to receive it by misrepresentation."

Tender of repayment.

The person paying must be the person rated.

Solon Tongham v. Worplesdon, Fol. 128. The landlord was rated to the poor for the tenement, as being in his hands, and the tenant paid part of the rate. By the court: "The tenant doth not gain a settlement, unless he be both rated and pay."

The party must be rated.

Kinfare v. Kingswinford, Fol. 129. The pauper rented a tenement and paid all parochial taxes for the same for three years in his own right, but was not rated in the parish books; but the name of Richard Coates, who rented the tenement before the pauper, was kept in the levy books. By the court: "This was no settlement."

Same point.

Rex v. Sarratt, Burr. S. C. 73. The landlord, who never occupied the house, was charged to the poor-rate; but the tenant on demand of the overseers paid it. Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "The act requires both a charge and payment; and here is only a charge without a payment. The charging is the principal act, as it infers notice to the parish; but both are necessary. The tenant must both be charged and pay."

Same point.

Rex v. Bramshaw, Burr. S. C. 98. The landlord of the house, who was also overseer of the poor, was charged to the poor rate; but the tenant on demand of the landlord paid the rate. By the court: "It is a settled point, that a person must be rated as well as pay."

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Rex v. Lower Walton, Burr. S. C. 100. The father was rated, and the son who occupied the tenement paid the rate. By the court: "He must both be rated and pay in order to gain a settlement."

Same point.

A rate continued in the name of a dead person, the overseers knowing the pauper to be tenant, held to be sufficient.

Rex v. Heckmondwicke, Doug. 564. The mother occupied a house in Batley, and was rated and paid the taxes till the time of her death; after which, her son occupied the house and paid taxes, but the parish officers continued her name in the rate, knowing at the same time that she was dead, and that the son was the tenant and occupier of the house. By Lord Mansfield. "There must be such a rating and paying, as to show manifestly that the parish had notice. Here the rate was continued in the name of a dead person, whom the parish officers knew to be dead. The rate ought to be made on the occupier, and the charge was made on him, and could be on nobody else. This was determined in Rex v. Walsall (infra), where a settlement was gained." Order of removal from Batley quashed.

It is sufficient if a person is rated as "occupier," without his name.

Rex v. Brightman, 8 Mod. 38; 2 Burr. 1062. Where a man lived in a place called Hoscoe's tenement, and paid taxes there by the name of the occupier of Hoscoe's; this was adjudged to be a sufficient designation of the party, so as to gain a settlement. (S. P. 2 Salk. 478).

Or as tenant.

Rex v. Painswick, Burr. S. C. 465. The pauper, Isaac Moorman, took a house in Cirencester, of Thomas Clifford, and agreed to pay the land-tax, and poor-taxes, and all other taxes. The rating was thus: "Thomas Clifford, or tenant." Moorman paid the taxes: and the overseers gave receipts to him in his own name. The landlord lived five miles off. It was urged, that Moorman himself was not rated: being neither expressly named nor even personally hinted at. But the court (Lord Mansfield absent) was clearly of opinion, "that the pauper was sufficiently charged, to notify to Cirencester that he was an inhabitant there, and consequently gained a settlement by payment of the rates so charged. It was not necessary that he should be expressly named."

It is enough if there be a description sufficient to charge the tenant.

Rex v. Walsall, Cald. 35. The pauper, Joseph Dean, took a farm in the borough of Walsall and paid the poor-rates in his own right, which were charged in these words, "Late Lowbridge's house, 2*l.* 6*s.* 0*d.*—1*s.* 2*d.*" Other tenements in the borough were charged in the same manner, after new inhabitants had come into them, who severally paid the rates for them: this tenement had been so charged ever since one Lowbridge left it. By Aston, J. and the court (Lord Mansfield, C. J. being absent): "It is agreed that the person must be both rated and pay; and as to the manner how he is to be rated, it is clear that his name need not be inserted in the rate. If the parish have sufficient notice of him, it is enough; paying under a rating is equivalent to notice, and the officers have received the rate of this man for two or three years, and therefore must have known him; and it is stated that he paid in his own right. He gained a settlement."

There must be a charge upon the tenant, and if the rate be made in any other way than by name, it must appear that the tenant was notoriously such.

Rex v. Llangammarch, 2 T. R. 628. The pauper was removed from Llanwslyd to Llangammarch. Removal confirmed. The pauper, in May, 1778, rented a house and land in Llangammarch, at 5*l.* per annum. No agreement was then made between the landlord and tenant about payment of the taxes. The house is called Bryn Frwst, or Waynllwyd, and the land is rated to the poor-tax by the name of Waynllwyd. The pauper lived one year in the house, but paid no taxes for it. In September, 1778, the landlord informed him that taxes were wanted for his land. The pauper desired the landlord to pay them, and he would repay him the same. In fact, no taxes were ever paid by or demanded from the tenant; but it appeared that the landlord paid the taxes, and that the pauper allowed them. The overseer who received the taxes from the landlord for this land knew nothing of the pauper; nor whether or not he resided at this farm at the time. Rex v. Painswick and Rex v. Walsall (supra) were cited. Ashhurst, J. "The circumstance that the overseer did not know the pauper, nor whether he resided at this farm, distinguishes this from the cases cited. The ground of determination in Rex v. Painswick was the notoriety of the occupancy. For when Mr. J. Dennison thought that rating the house only might be sufficient, he added, 'for the parish could not but know who was the occupier.' That, indeed, is the natural presumption; but we cannot presume against the facts of the case; and here it is expressly stated as a fact, that the overseer knew nothing of the pauper, or whether he resided at this farm. The reason why a party gains a settlement by paying taxes, is because it is an admission by the parish that he is an inhabitant. There is no foundation for the distinction which has been taken between the knowledge of the overseer, and that of the parish at large; for the overseers are the trustees for, and transact the business of, the parish, and they ought to know the state and conditions of the inhabitants. And, indeed, if we could presume either way, it would rather be, that the parish even did not know that the pauper resided in his farm." Buller, J. "The poor's-rate is a tax on the occupier; if the house be rated, it is primâ facie a rate on the occupier, but it is not conclusive. If the overseer call on the occupier for the rate, and he pays, that shows that he intended he should pay. But here the overseer did not know that he was an inhabitant, and he went to the landlord and received the rate from him." Grose, J., concurred.

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

The poor-rate is a tax on the occupation.

Rex v. Folkstone, 3 T. R. 505. The rate for the land-tax was as follows:

Where the names of landlord and tenant are on the rate, the sessions should find which was rated.

Sum assessed.	Proprietors.	Occupier.	Houses.	Quarterly payment.
10*s.* 10*d.*	H. S.	J. King.		2*s.* 6*d.*

The sessions were of opinion that the landlords were the persons intended to be rated. Lord Kenyon. "On the rate there is one column of the proprietors, and another of tenants; but the names of the tenants were only inserted in order to show for what property the landlords were rated." Buller, J. "Whether the landlord or tenant is rated, is a question of fact which should always be found by the justices: here it is stated, and we are precluded by their opinion from entering into the question." Order of sessions affirmed.

The land-tax is, prima facie on the tenant.

Rex v. St. Lawrence, Winchester, 4 Doug. 190. The pauper, Scullard, occupied a house in Eastmeon, when an assessment was made on the tithing of Eastmeon for land-tax; the rate was:—

Proprietor.	Occupier.	Sum assessed.
William Clark.	C. Scullard.	4*s.*

Scullard paid the rate, and the receipt was—"Received of C. Scullard, 2*s.* for land-tax, for Mr. Clark's house." Lord Mansfield. "The occupier is the person who, as it regards the public, ought to be rated. The remedy lies against him. The receipt here was given for the house by way of description, as Mr. Clark's house. Whether the landlord or tenant be rated, is a question of fact." Buller, J. "The rate is, primâ facie, on the tenant; and if the fact be not found to be otherwise by the justices, it must be taken to be a rate on the tenant." The court quashed the order of sessions, who had quashed the order of removal to Eastmeon.

It may be inferred from the form of rating who is the person rated; and in the case of land-tax, the presumption is (between the public and the tenant), that the occupier is the person rated.

Rex v. Mitcham, Cald. 276; 4 Doug. 226, S. C. John Heard removed from Mitcham to Moredon. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper inhabited for several years a house at Moredon, which he rented of Mr. Gasson, who was also an inhabitant there, at the yearly rent of 5*l.* clear of all taxes, parliamentary and parochial. Whilst he occupied it, an assessment for the land-tax was made on Moredon, the title of which was, "Surrey, &c., an assessment on the inhabitants of the parish of Moredon, for raising a sum by a land-tax," &c., in the following form:—

Rent.	Landlord's name.	Tenant's name.	£	s.	d.
£5 0 0	Mr. Gasson.	John Heard.	0	9	9½

Heard paid the 9*s.* 9½*d.* to the collector who demanded the same. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "The question is, whether the landlord or tenant is the person charged? The assessment does not say who is, but the names of both landlord and tenant are used. The rate alone then, in this case, is no charge upon either. The answer to this question must, therefore, be gathered from other circumstances. In the first place, who ought to be charged? Undoubtedly the occupier ought. The landlord, it is true, is the debtor, but the rate is pointed at the occupier. The parish cannot tell who is the landlord, or who has a rent-charge. It is upon the occupier that the officer of government takes his remedy; and though the landlord is directed to allow the sum levied out of the rent, the parish have nothing to do with the transactions between landlord and tenant: this is a matter between them; but for the sake of the public, the occupier, the ostensible person, is to be considered as the person first liable. The next consideration is, what does the assessment profess to be? It professes to be an assessment on the inhabitants, that is, the occupiers: the landlord may or may not be an inhabitant: the tenant must be. Then, of whom is it demanded? Of the occupier. Who pays it? The occupier. We may, therefore, supply from the circumstances that which is omitted in the rate itself; and intend here, that which was expressed in Rex v. Carshalton (Burr. S. C. 809), with which the present decision does not interfere." Willes, J. "There are two circumstances which differ this case from that of Rex v. Carshalton, viz. the title of the rate, and the manner of making it; (a) and the court were there of opinion, that the landlord was charged upon the face of it. Here, where the expressions fall short, and we cannot, from the instrument itself, collect enough to found our judgment upon, collateral circumstances point out the tenant as the person meant to be charged." Order quashed. (See Rex v. Endon, Cald. 374.)

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Where the collector gave the receipt in the name of the landlord, in the form "so much assessed on the landlord," the presumption is that the landlord was rated. (Rex v. St. James's, Bury, 4 Doug. 200.)

What is a sufficient assessment.

Reg. v. Hulme, 7 Jurist, 463. The pauper rented and occupied a house at 28*l.* a-year from June 1838 to December 1839, and paid the rent. In the poor-rate made in 1838 the house was entered, but not the name of the tenant. The entry was: Progressive number, 2; No. of assessment, 41; Name of occupier, ——; Name of owner, Trustees of O. H.; Gross estimated rental, ——; Rateable value, 25*l.*; Total amount to be collected, 1*l.* 5*s.*; Date when paid, May 4; Amount actually collected, 1*l.* 5*s.* It also appeared that 1*l.* 5*s.*, the rate charged in that entry, was demanded from the pauper, and paid to the collector of the said poor's-rate by or on behalf of said pauper on the 4th May, 1839. In the rate or assessment for the next year, which was made and allowed on the 16th July, 1839, the name of the pauper was thus inserted in the rate:—No. of assessment, 66; Name of occupier, Joseph Gray; No. of votes, ——; Name of owner, Trustees of Otho Hulme; No. of votes, ——; Description of property, house and shop; Name or situation of property, Temple street; Estimated extent, ——; Gross estimated rental, 28*l.*; Rateable value, 22*l.* 10*s.*; Rate at 1*s.* 6*d.* in the 1*l.*, 1*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*; Arrears due or if excused, ——; Total amount to be collected, 1*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*; Amount actually collected, 8*s.* 5*d.*; Present arrears, three-quarters empty; Amount not recoverable or legally excused, 1*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.* But the rate charged by the last assessment was never paid by the pauper. The question was, whether the pauper may be deemed to have been assessed for the house during the first year of the tenancy, or that, by paying the rate for the first year, and being assessed for the second year, the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, had been complied with. It was contended that the object of s. 66, of that statute, was, that the assessment and payment should relate to the same rate. Lord Denman. "There is no distinction between 'charged with' and 'assessed to;' the words in the last statute are 'assessed to,' but it does not appear that the legislature had any object in the alteration; at any rate no sufficient object is declared, though it has been assumed by counsel in argument. It appears that a person to gain a settlement must be assessed to the poor-rate for one year, and have paid the poor-rate for one year; that has been

(a) The form of the rate in that case was:—

Landlords rated.	In whose occupation.
A. B.	F. G.
C. D.	H. I.

complied with in the present case." Patteson, J. "The whole case turns upon the question whether a different sense is to be given to the words in the different statutes; it is true there has been an alteration, but the cases all support the words in the last statute as well as in the former ones." Williams, J., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Rex v. Coppull, 2 East, 25. Removal from Standish-with-Langtree to Coppull confirmed. Case:—The respondents proved by the evidence of the pauper, that his father purchased an estate in Coppull and actually paid the parish rates in respect of it; but the respondents did not produce any rates, and had not given notice for the production of any. Per Lord Kenyon, C. J. "It is impossible to argue that parol evidence may be given of rates which are not produced, nor any notice proved to produce them, nor any reasonable account given for their non-production. The best evidence was not given which the nature of the case would admit of." Both orders quashed.

The rate itself must be produced as evidence of being charged.

Payment.

Rex v. Bridgewater, 3 T. R. 550. T. Bastard was the occupier of a house, and the assessment for the land-tax was—Landlord, J. W.—Tenant, T. B.—Assessment, 6*s.* 9*d.* Bastard absconded, and the landlord requested the tax collector to go with him to take a distress for the 6*s.* 9*d.*, otherwise he should lose the money. They went and saw Bastard's daughter, who pleaded her poverty and said a friend would pay it. She then went with them to Mrs. O. who gave a guinea to the collector, who received thereout the land-tax. The court were clearly of opinion, that it was money paid for his (Bastard's) use, for which an action might be maintained against him. The money was advanced by a friend, in order to protect him from a distress, under which his goods would have otherwise been taken.

The payment by another may be equivalent to payment by himself.

Rex v. Openshaw, Burr. S. C. 522; 1 Blac. Rep. 463. James Bowden took a house and two closes at Gorton, and the landlord was to pay all taxes and levies but the window-tax. The rating was thus, "Bowden's." The landlord himself for some time paid the taxes; but in the last year the landlord having some disputes with the overseers about his assessments, directed the overseers to call upon his tenant Bowden for a poor-rate and a church-rate, and tell him that his landlord ordered him to pay and he would allow it to him out of his rent. The tenant paid the same, declaring he paid them for his landlord, and the overseer said he accepted them accordingly. But the landlord, not being asked by the tenant to allow it did not allow it out of the rent till three quarters of a year after he left the estate, (which was six days before the order of removal,) when he repaid the money. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "Pray, for whom was the landlord to pay it? Clearly, for the tenant: for it is a tenant's tax. The court has nothing to do with their private agreement." And per tot. Cur.—"The settlement is clearly good." The orders were discharged.

Landlord refunding to the tenant the amount of the tax paid, does not prevent the settlement.

Rex v. Okehampton, Burr. S. C. 5. A tide-waiter resided in Kenton, and had a salary: he was rated for this salary to the land-tax. It was paid for some time by himself, but repaid to him by the collector of the customs; and afterwards was paid by the collector. The question is, whether he paid his share towards the public taxes and levies of the parish? It was said it was not his own money, but the money of the collector. By Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "Suppose the landlord has agreed to reimburse his tenant, would not the tenant be settled? This collector did not pay it to exonerate the parish, but to better the man's salary." And by the court: "It hath been settled, that the land-tax is a parish-tax within the act; and his being taxed for his salary makes no difference."

Nor where the salary of a tide-waiter, rated to the land-tax, was paid by himself, but repaid by the collector.

Rex v. Weobley, 2 East, 68. Removal from Weobley to New Radnor quashed. The pauper resided as an officer of excise in W., and during such residence was rated to the land-tax in that parish for his salary, which was proved by the production of the land-tax assessment; but it appeared by the evidence of the pauper that he never paid such rate himself, or any rate; the same being paid by the collector of excise, and not deducted out of the pauper's salary. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "If the rate had been paid by him through the medium or by the hands of another, that would have been a payment by himself; but here he neither paid it mediately nor immediately. He was not affected by the payment at all. It was not deducted out of his salary, nor was his income diminished by it. I know that the statute in question has been extended by construction much beyond what was apparently intended by the legislature. This being a new case, where the pauper neither in fact paid the rate himself, nor constructively by the hands of his agent, it is better to abide by the letter and true spirit of the act, and to hold that he did not thereby gain a settlement." Order of sessions quashed.

An excise officer was rated for his salary, but the rate was always paid by the collector, and no deduction made from the salary: No settlement.

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

By agreement between landlord and tenant, the tenant was to pay a higher rent and the landlord was to pay the rates; the tenant, although duly rated, acquired no settlement.

Reg. v. South Kilvington, 7 Jurist, 1108; 13 L. J. 3. Thomas Gallantree was removed from South Kilvington to Newsham. Order quashed. Case:—In January, 1840, the pauper, who had previously gained a settlement in Newsham, took a cottage, being a separate and distinct dwelling-house, in South Kilvington, of a Mr. West, at the annual rent of 5*l.*; nothing was said about the rates with respect to the cottage, for which, in two poor-rates made on the 12th November, 1840, and the 22nd February, 1841, the pauper was rated at 2*s.* 9*d.*, being a rate of 1*s.* in the pound on 2*l.* 15*s.*, the amount at which the cottage was assessed, both of which rates the pauper paid. At Candlemas, 1841, Mr. West let the pauper a field, containing 3A. 3R. of land in South Kilvington, upon the terms following: the land was taken from year to year, the rent was 14*l.* 14*s.* a year, and the landlord was to pay all that came against it. The rent at which the pauper agreed to take the field was a higher rent, because the landlord was to pay the rates and all that came against it. The pauper actually occupied the field together with the cottage from Candlemas, 1841, until August, 1842, at the rent of 19*l.* 14*s.* a year, and during the period he paid the landlord the whole rent, and was rated and charged in respect of the field and cottage. The overseers called upon the pauper, and demanded 7*s.* 11½*d.*, the rate of June 1841, the pauper paid 2*s.*, being 9*d.* in the pound on 2*l.* 15*s.*, the amount for which he was assessed for the cottage before he took the land, and referred the overseer to the landlord (Mr. West) for the rest, who, thereupon, in pursuance of his agreement, paid the remaining 5*s.* 11½*d.*, being also 9*d.* in the pound on 7*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.*, the residue of 10*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.*, at which the house and land were assessed; and of the remaining rates of 8*s.* 0¾*d.* and 5*s.* 4*d.*, the tenant respectively paid 2*s.* and 1*s.* 4½*d.*, being, in one instance, a rate of 9½*d.*, and in the other instance a rate of 6*d.* in the pound on 2*l.* 15*s.*, the amount above described as that at which the cottage was assessed before he took the land, and the landlord in pursuance of his agreement paid the remainder; the overseers always, after the above-mentioned reference by the pauper to Mr. West, applying to him for the rates due in respect of that land. The pauper resided in the township during the whole period of his occupation of his land. The only question was, whether the pauper had paid the poor-rate for a year during his occupation of the land, so as to satisfy the 66th section of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, or whether he had been charged with and paid his share towards the poor-rate under the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6. The sessions held that the payment by the landlord, in consequence of the agreement between him and the pauper, was a payment by the latter, sufficient to satisfy either of the statutes. Lord Denman. "Whatever the effect may be in other cases, the decision in Rex v. Weobley makes it clear that this is not a good payment of rates by the tenant." The other Judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed. (a)

(a) In Reg. v. Bridgwater, 10 A. & E. 66, the parties were duly rated for several years, but had not paid the rate. To prevent their disfranchisement under the Municipal Corporation Act, a person paid the whole in a gross sum. This is not a payment by the party within that statute. In Hughes v. Chatham, p. 784, n., a party was rated to all poor-rates and assessed taxes, in respect of a house, in his own name, as the occupier; the rates and taxes were paid by the paymaster-general's clerk at the pay office at Chatham. Tindal, C. J. "It appears that the tenant was rated to the poor-rate; that it was paid by the paymaster-general's clerk, but that it was so paid as part remuneration for his services. The tenant, being

Rex v. Axmouth, 8 East, 383. Removal of Martha Clarke from Axmouth to Lyme Regis quashed. Case:—The pauper's husband, deceased, (J. Clarke) was an officer under the custom-house, stationed at Axmouth, with a salary of 50*l.*; he did the duty of the office there, and was charged 8*l.* per annum to the land-tax in respect of his salary of 50*l.* There had been annually an order issued from the treasury, authorising the commissioners to direct the collectors of the outports to reimburse those officers of the customs whose salaries did not exceed 60*l.* per annum the taxes assessed on such salaries, and paid by them. It most frequently happened that Clarke was unable to pay the tax assessed on him, until he had received the same from the collectors of the customs, and the tax collector of the parish was at such times in the habit of trusting Clarke with a receipt, and the collector of the customs upon having this receipt given him, paid Clarke the sum, and Clarke paid the same to the collector of the parish. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "Rex v. Okehampton (p. 959,) is not to be distinguished from the present. The land-tax being a public tax within the 3 Will. III. c. 11, the officer was both charged to it, and paid it within the parish, and nothing more was wanting to give him a settlement there. Rex v. Weobley (p. 959,) was distinguished from the other cases by Lord Kenyon, because there the officer did not pay the tax mediately or immediately; and, as he says afterwards, because the pauper neither in fact paid the rate himself, nor constructively by the hands of his agent. As to his being reimbursed afterwards, all the cases agree that that makes no difference, and that is not contradicted by Rex v. Weobley." Order of sessions confirmed.

5. Must be Charged and Pay such Tax.

Salary of a custom-house officer was rated to the land-tax, paid by the pauper, and reimbursed by the collector: This is sufficient.

And in Rex v. Lower Heyford (see facts of the case, ante, p. 949) Bayley, J., said, "The remaining objection, that Garratt had been reimbursed the rate, is sufficiently answered by Rex v. Axmouth (supra), which was cited in the argument. There a custom-house officer was rated for his salary to the land-tax, and paid the rate, but he always either got the amount from the collector beforehand, or was repaid by him afterwards; and the collector was under orders from the treasury to reimburse the officers of his description. This was adjudged to give the officer a settlement; and Lord Ellenborough, in delivering his judgment, said, "As to his being reimbursed afterwards, all the cases agree that that makes no difference. We are therefore of opinion that Garratt is to be considered as having been charged with and paid his share towards the public taxes of Lower Heyford, within the meaning of 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, and that the decision of the sessions was right."

Same point.

11. Of Settlement by Acknowledgment; as by Certificate, &c.

11. Of Settlement by Acknowledgment, &c.

A certificate is only evidence of a settlement, and not a mode of acquiring the same.

Settlements of this description are rather evidence of a previous settlement than modes of acquiring a settlement, but nevertheless are usually classed under the head of a settlement. (2 Nolan, P. L. 134.)

Parishes upon whom the burden of supporting or relieving a pauper is sought to be cast in any particular instance, and who resist the attempt of the removing parish, are regarded by the courts, and are subjected to the same rules of law, as individual litigants. If therefore the defendant parish has previously made any practical acknowledgment of the liability against which it is defending itself, such admission or acknowledgment may be given in evidence, and will in some cases be conclusive, and estop the parish from afterwards controverting the fact, either as to the party himself, rated, was, therefore, liable for the payment of the rate; it was paid by those to whom the tenant gave an equivalent by his services. We think, therefore, that it was a payment of rates by the tenant within the 27th section of the Reform Act. Whether or not it would have been sufficient within 3 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6, or under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, is another matter. We think the payment here by the hands of the landlord is effectual, for it has been made within the spirit of the enactment by which the payment of rates is required.—Decision confirmed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

or those who claim settlements through him, unless its effect can be explained away, by showing that the acts which are pressed against the parish, as amounting to an acknowledgment that the pauper was settled with them, were exercised towards him as casual poor, and not from a sense of his having the more permanent right to relief in consequence of a legal settlement in such parish.

As in all other cases, so in this, the admission of the party sought to be charged, of the justice of the claim, is the strongest proof in support of it; and hence it has happened that a notion has prevailed, that a pauper may gain a settlement by the acknowledgment of a parish that he is settled there; it is necessary, however, to bear in mind, that it is no more than evidence that the pauper was previously settled there, and is not in itself a means of acquiring this right. The parish which has placed itself in such a position is not in all cases absolutely bound thereby, if it can be clearly shown that the burden ought to be assumed by some other parish.

It is material to consider the nature of the acknowledgments which afford evidence of settlement. They are of three kinds, namely:

1. By Certificate.
2. By Relief.
3. By Non-appeal against an Order of Removal.

---

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Of granting certificates.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

The practice of granting certificates has been in a great measure put an end to by the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, which renders persons irremovable till actually chargeable, yet parish officers retain the power (though they were not nor are compellable by mandamus or otherwise to do so, Rex v. St. Ives, 2 Sess. Cas. 153) to certify as heretofore; and Abbott, C. J., in Rex v. Idle (p. 416), recognised the system of granting certificates as still existing, and seems to recommend the continued use of it, observing that "in many cases a labourer who might wish to come into a parish might not be able to obtain employment there, for fear that by so doing he might bring burdens upon the parish. But if he came with a certificate that fear would be removed." And Bayley, J., in the same case, spoke to the like effect upon this subject; and as questions may also arise upon old certificates yet existing, the law upon this head cannot properly be omitted. It may be divided as follows:

1. Of the Enactments relating to Certificates.
2. The Form of Certificate.
3. Of the Direction of the Certificate.
4. Of the Signature of the Certificate.
5. Of the Allowance and Attestation.
6. Proof of Certificate.
7. Of the Delivery of Certificate.
8. Persons Protected by Certificate from Removal.
9. To what Individuals a Certificate extends.
10. Of the Effect of the Certificate.
11. Certificate, how determined.
12. Removal of Certificated Persons.
13. Of Apprenticeship and Service to Certificated Persons.

---

1. Enactments relating to Certificates.

Persons going to work with a certificate.

1. Of the Enactments relating to Certificates.

By the 13 & 14 Car. II. s. 3, (see 1 sec. post, Removal,) it is enacted, "That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons to go into any county, parish, or place, to work in time of harvest, or at any time to work at any other work, so that he or they carry with him or them a certificate from the minister of the parish and one of the churchwardens, and one of the overseers of the poor for the said year, that he or they have a dwelling-house or place in which he or they inhabit, and hath left wife and children, or some of them there (or otherwise, as the condition of the persons shall require), and is declared an inhabitant or inhabitants there: and in such case, if the person or persons shall not return to the place aforesaid, when his or their work is finished, or shall fall sick or impotent whilst he or they are in the said work, it shall not be accounted a settlement in the cases above said, but it shall and may be lawful for two justices of the peace to convey the said person or persons to the place of his or their habitation as aforesaid, under the pains and penalties in this act prescribed: and if such person or persons shall refuse to go, or shall not remain in such parish where they ought to be settled as aforesaid, but shall return of his own accord to the parish from whence he was removed, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the city, county, or town corporate where the said offence shall be committed, to send such person or persons offending to the house of correction, there to be punished as a vagabond, or to a public workhouse in this present act hereafter mentioned, there to be employed in work or labour; and if the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish to which he or they shall be removed, refuse to receive such person or persons, and to provide work for them, as other inhabitants of the parish, any justice of peace of that division may and shall thereupon bind any such officer or officers in whom there shall be default, to the assizes or sessions, there to be indicted for his or their contempt in that behalf."

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Persons coming to inhabit in any parish, are to bring with them a certificate under the hands of the churchwardens, &c., of the parish to which they belong. Explained by 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, and 12 Anne, stat. 1, c. 18, s. 2. Such witnesses to swear to the execution of certificates, &c. by 3 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 8.

By 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 1, it is enacted, "Forasmuch as many poor persons chargeable to the parish, township, or place where they live, merely for want of work, would in any other place, where sufficient employment is to be had, maintain themselves and families, without being burdensome to any parish, township, or place, but not being able to give such security as will or may be expected and required upon their coming to settle themselves in any other place, and the certificates that have been usually given in such cases having been oftentimes construed into a notice in handwriting, they are, for the most part, confined to live in their own parishes, townships, or places, and not permitted to inhabit elsewhere, though their labour is wanted in many other places, where the increase of manufacture would employ more hands; be it therefore enacted, that if any person or persons whatsoever, from and after the 1st May, 1697, shall come into any parish or other place, there to inhabit and reside, shall at the same time procure, bring and deliver to the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish or place where any such person shall come to inhabit, or to any or either of them, a certificate under the hands and seals of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of any other parish, township, or place, or the major part of them, or under the hands and seals of the overseers of the poor of any other place, where there are no churchwardens, to be attested respectively by two or more credible witnesses, thereby owning and acknowledging the person or persons mentioned in the said certificate, to be an inhabitant or inhabitants legally settled in that parish, township, or place, every such certificate having been allowed of and subscribed by two or more of the justices of the peace of the county, city, liberty, borough, or town corporate, wherein the parish or place from whence any such certificate shall come, doth lie, shall oblige the said parish or place to receive and provide for the person mentioned in the said certificate, together with his or her family, as inhabitants of that parish, whenever he, she, or they shall happen to become chargeable to, or be forced to ask relief of the parish, township, or place, to which such certificate was given; and then, and not before, it shall and may be lawful for any such person, and his or their children, though born in that parish, not having otherwise acquired a legal settlement there, to be removed, conveyed and settled in the parish or place from whence such certificate was brought.

Not to be removed before actually chargeable. (a)

(a) In 55 Geo. III., there was a similar provision, as to certificates by a friendly society, but the statute was repealed in 10 Geo. IV., and no similar enactments made,

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

No certificated person to have a settlement in any parish unless he rent a tenement of 10*l.* per annum, or execute some parish office.

The 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, recites 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 1, and states that doubts had arisen upon construction of the said act, by what acts any person coming to inhabit or reside within any parish, by virtue of any such certificate as aforesaid, may procure a legal settlement in such parish, and whether such certificate did not amount to a notice in writing, in order to gain a settlement; for explaining thereof and of the said act, be it therefore enacted, "That no person or persons whatsoever, who shall come into any parish, by any such certificate as aforesaid, shall be adjudged by any act whatsoever to have procured a legal settlement in such parish, unless he or they shall really and bonâ fide take a lease of a tenement of the [(a) yearly] value of ten pounds, or shall execute some annual office in such parish, being legally placed in such office."

Person bound apprentice, or being a hired servant, to one who came into a parish by certificate, shall not gain a settlement.

By 12 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 2, after reciting 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, it is enacted, "That if any person whatsoever, who, upon or after 24th June, 1713, shall be an apprentice, bound by indenture to, or shall, upon or after the said 24th of June, 1713, be a hired servant to or with any person whatsoever, who did come into, or shall reside in (b), any parish, township, or place, in that part of Great Britain called England, by means or licence of such certificate, and not afterwards having gained a legal settlement in such parish, township, or place, such apprentice, by virtue of such apprenticeship, indenture, or binding, and such servant, by being hired by, or serving as a servant as aforesaid to such person, shall not gain, or be adjudged to have, any settlement in such parish, township, or place, by reason of such apprenticeship or binding, or by reason of such hiring or serving therein; but every such apprentice and servant shall have his and their settlements in such parish, township, or place, as if he or they had not been bound apprentice or apprentices, or had not been an hired servant or servants to such person as aforesaid, any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding."

Witness to certificates of settlements to swear that they saw the churchwardens, &c. sign them.

3 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 8. To prevent disputes which often happen, touching the proof of certificates given by the officers of any parish or place, acknowledging any person or persons therein named to be an inhabitant or inhabitants legally settled in such parish, town, or place, by virtue of an act of parliament made in the eighth and ninth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Third, and for making such certificates more effectual, be it enacted, "That from and after the 24th of June, 1730, the witnesses who attest the execution of such certificates by the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, signing and sealing the same, or one of the said witnesses, shall make oath before the justices of the peace, who by the said act are directed to allow the same (which oath they are hereby authorised to administer), that such witness or witnesses did see the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, whose names and seals are thereunto subscribed and set, severally sign and seal the said certificate, and that the names of such witnesses attesting the said certificate are of their own proper handwriting; which said justices of the peace shall also certify that such oath was made before them; and every such certificate so allowed, and oath of the execution thereof so certified by the said justices of the peace, shall be taken, deemed, and allowed in all courts whatsoever, as duly and fully proved, and shall be taken and received as evidence, without other proof thereof; and that all certificates given in pursuance to the said act, before the said 24th of June, 1730, shall be also taken and allowed in all courts as evidence, without other proof; provided the same are duly allowed by two justices of the peace, as by the said act is required."

Certificate sufficient proof of execution.

Certificates signed

By 51 Geo. III. c. 80, s. 1 (p. 612 title Apprentice), all certificates of (a) It is singular that this word is omitted by Cay, Pickering, Ruffhead, and Runnington, the most approved editors of the statutes. See note, Cald. 260.

(b) The word or is here to be read copulatively, per Lord Ellenborough, in Rex v. Mortlake, (post). So that residence is essential.

the settlements of poor persons, executed by two persons only, acting as churchwarden as well as overseer, shall be considered valid.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

By 54 Geo. III. c. 107 (p. 613, title Apprentice), all certificates of the settlements of poor persons by persons, who, at the time of their executing such certificate of settlement, acting as churchwarden, &c., shall be taken to be valid, as if the same had been executed by persons actually sworn into the office of churchwarden, &c.

by two persons only, acting as churchwarden and overseer, to be valid.

Certificates of settlement valid, although churchwardens, &c., not sworn in.

By sect. 2, "all certificates of the settlement of poor persons, executed by the overseers of the poor of any township, hamlet, chapelry, or place, and the churchwarden or churchwardens, acting for and appointed in respect of such township, hamlet, chapelry, or place, or the major part of them, shall be taken to be valid, as if the said certificates had been executed by such overseers and the churchwardens of the parish wherein such township, hamlet, chapelry, or place, is situate, or the major part of them."

The statute does not affect prior settlements. Sect. 3.

Certificates of settlement declared valid, when executed by one churchwarden.

By 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 32 (p. 618, Apprentice), all certificates of the settlement of poor persons which have been, previous to the passing of this act, executed by one churchwarden or chapelwarden, acting or purporting to act in the capacity of churchwarden or churchwardens for any parish or place in England, for which two had formerly been appointed, shall be taken to be good and effectual."

2. The Form of the Certificate and Allowance.

2. The Form of the Certificate and Allowance.

The form of certificate.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of in the County of

WE the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of do hereby certify, own, and acknowledge, that E. F., labourer, is an inhabitant legally settled (a) in our parish of aforesaid. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals, the day of in the year of our Lord

Attested by
N. O.
P. Q.

A. B. } Churchwardens. (L. S.)
C. D. } (L. S.)
G. H. } Overseers of the poor. (L. S.)
I. K. } (L. S.)

Justices' allowance.

WE, R. S. and T. U., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of do allow of the above written certificate. And we do also certify that N. O., one of the witnesses who attested the same, hath this day made oath before us, the said justices, that he the said N. O. did see the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, whose names and seals are thereunto subscribed and set, severally sign and seal the same; and that the names of N. O. and P. Q., who are the witnesses attesting the said certificate, are respectively of their own proper handwriting. Given under our hands this day of

3. Of the Direction of the Certificate.

3. Of the Direction of the Certificate.

Certificate need not be directed to the parish to which it is delivered.

The statute does not require any particular direction; and, therefore, if the certificate is not addressed at all, the omission will not vitiate. In Rex v. Lillington (1 East, 438), Lord Kenyon said, "A certificate need not be directed to the particular parish to which it is delivered. But," he added, "a certificate is not a transferable instrument from one parish to another; for then it would operate as a licence for vagrancy. That is, after it has performed its office in one parish, it cannot be taken to another for the same purpose; and so from parish to parish as often as the certificated person shall choose to remove himself."

But a particular parish must be intended.

Rex v. Lubbenham, (post), Lord Kenyon said, "There must be a particular parish in contemplation at the time of granting the certificate."

(a) A certificate acknowledging the pauper to be an inhabitant, without using the words "legally settled," has been held sufficient. (Rex v. Hilperton.) A certificate acknowledging the paupers to be settled, contained an undertaking to provide for the parties named when requested. This does not enable the parish to remove them before they are chargeable. Rex v. St. Mary, Westport, 3 T. R. 44.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Mistake in name.

Rex v. St. Nicholas, in Harwich, 2 Stra. 1163. The pauper came into St. Nicholas, in Harwich, with a certificate from Woolverstone, addressed to the parish of Harwich, near Dover Court. The sessions were of opinion as there was a mistake in the name of the parish in the address of the certificate, that Harwich could not be obliged to receive the pauper. But it was ruled they were, for it is not to be considered as a certificate to any particular parish, but as a general acknowledgment of his being a parishioner of Woolverstone, and is conclusive against them for all the world.

May be to parish of A., or any other parish in city and county of

A certificate was directed "To the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Holy Trinity, or any other parish in the city and county of Coventry," this certificate was held to be valid. (Rex v. Lillington, p. 965.)

4. Of the Signature and Seals of the Certificate.

A certificate must be signed by a majority of the churchwardens and overseers.

4. Of the Signature and Seals of the Certificate.

The 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, requires the certificate to be under the hands and seals of the churchwardens and overseers, or the greater part of them; but more recent statutes (see p. 964, 5) have provided for those cases in which the number of officers in the parish have been deficient.

Rex v. Tamworth, Burr. S. C. 770. A certificate must be signed by a majority of churchwardens and overseers, or it is void. Same point in Rex v. Margam (1 T. R. 775).

If signed by one churchwarden and one overseer, where there are four churchwardens and two overseers, it is void.

Rex v. Clifton, 2 East, 168. "The appointment of one overseer alone for a township is bad in law, and a certificate granted by such overseer cannot avail; for, by the statute of Elizabeth, the churchwardens and not less than two substantial householders are required to be nominated overseers. The statute of Will. III. directs that it shall be made by the churchwardens and overseers, or the major part of them; or, where there are no churchwardens, by the overseers; and a certificate, like the present, is not granted by either one or the other of those descriptions of persons. The 13 & 14 Car. II. requires, at least, two persons to be appointed overseers for a township. Therefore, this latter statute requiring two to be appointed, and the statute of Will. III. having required the certificate to be executed by the overseers, where there are no churchwardens, and there having been but one overseer appointed by the township, by whom this certificate was granted, I am of opinion this was void." Per Grose, J.

So if signed by one overseer of a township.

In Rex v. St. Margaret's, Leicester (8 East, 332), a certificate signed by two churchwardens, one of whom was sole overseer, was decided to be a nullity. To remedy which inconvenience the 51 Geo. III. c. 80, s. 1, was passed (p. 612). And see 54 Geo. III. c. 107, p. 613.

A parish certificate purporting to be granted in 1761, by A., the only churchwarden, and B., the only overseer of the parish, presumed to be good.

By custom there may be only one churchwarden.

Rex v. Catesby, 2 B. & C. 814; 4 D. & R. 434. Removal of George Cox from Badby to Catesby. Case:—The respondents produced a certificate, dated the 10th of May, in 1761, stating that W. Goodman, the only churchwarden, and E. Webb, the only overseer, of the parish of Catesby, did certify the parish of Badby, that they did acknowledge Thomas Cox to be settled in Catesby. Bayley, J. "Upon the principle established in several cases it seems to me that this is a good certificate. In Rex v. Hinckley (p. 666), Lord Ellenborough and Le Blanc, Js., both say, 'That if any intendment can by law be made to support an indenture of apprenticeship, the court must make that intendment.' In that case, the indenture was produced on one side, and there was no evidence to impeach it on the other, and Le Blanc, J., says, 'The question then is, whether by any intendment of law such an indenture can be good?' And both judges say, it might be considered good 'by intending that there was a custom in the particular parish to have only one churchwarden.' There are two acts of parliament which bear upon this question, and which contain similar language; the 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, which relates to parish apprentices, and the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, which relates to the granting of certificates. Both these acts require that there shall be the concurrence of the churchwardens and overseers, 'or the major part of them,' to give validity to the indentures and certificates respectively, and therefore decisions upon the one throw a light upon the other; and notwithstanding the 17 Geo. II.

c. 38, s. 3, which gives to the justices a power of appointing an additional overseer when one shall die in the course of the year, I think that this case is to be considered as it would have been prior to the period when that act passed. Generally speaking, there are two churchwardens in every parish; but, by custom, there may be one only (a). By law, there must be two overseers originally appointed, and an appointment of less than two is, upon the face of it, bad; but if by custom there may be only one churchwarden appointed, and if there be two overseers duly appointed, death may reduce the number to one, and then the question would be, whether prior to the statute 17 Geo. II. that churchwarden and that overseer might not do the act in question, as constituting the major part of the persons originally appointed. In Rex v. St. Margaret's, Leicester (p. 966), there was a very plain and decisive objection to the certificate, because in that case there was only one overseer originally appointed, and it was with reference to that fact, that the language of Lord Ellenborough and Lawrence, J., there is to be applied. They said that the certificate act, 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, requires that a certificate shall be granted under the hands and seals of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, or the major part of them. It has since been decided in Rex v. Hinckley and Rex v. Earl Shilton (p. 666), that though the word in the statute is 'churchwardens,' yet, by custom, if one only be appointed, that one will be sufficient to satisfy the word churchwardens; but it being clear that by law less than two overseers cannot be appointed, there must have been originally two overseers; and in the case of Rex v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, it was stated as a fact that there was one only. In Rex v. Clifton, the certificate was stated to be under the hand and seal of J. W., 'only overseer of the poor of the township,' and therefore the court decided, not upon the language of the certificate itself, but upon the fact that originally there had been an appointment of one only. Rex v. Hinckley, and Rex v. Earl Shilton, both establish this proposition, that if a certificate or the binding of a parish apprentice be by one churchwarden and one overseer, it is good, and it is only because in this case the certificate describes Edward Webb as 'the only overseer,' that we are at liberty to assume that there was originally a bad appointment. Now let us consider the law of presumption, with reference to that point. Are we to presume that it was non rite actum? The statute says, that the justices are to appoint two overseers. Are we then to presume that the justices have deviated from their duty and appointed one only, or are we not rather to presume that two overseers had been duly appointed, and that one of them had died? The law will presume that a party has conformed to the law; and if we are to make any presumption, it is ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Between these two, I say, that presumption ought to prevail which assumes that the justices have conformed to the law; and therefore I think we ought rather to support the instrument than destroy it. Upon this principle it appears to me we are at liberty to assume that in this case William Goodman was, by the custom of this parish, the only churchwarden appointed; that Edward Webb was the only surviving overseer, that he duly granted the certificate in the character in which he is described upon the face of the instrument, which he would not have done had he not been regularly and duly appointed; and that we are bound to intend, according to the language of Lord Ellenborough in Rex v. Hinckley, that there had been originally a good and valid appointment of two, there being no evidence to show what the appointment was, or to rebut the inference arising from the face of the certificate itself. For these reasons I am of opinion, that, as against the parish which has granted this certificate, we ought to hold that this overseer was duly authorised to do the act in question, and, therefore, that the order of sessions must be confirmed." Holroyd, J. "I think, upon the authorities which have been cited, and likewise upon the principles which

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Less than two overseers cannot be appointed, but the death of one may be presumed.

(a) A custom to have no churchwarden is bad. (Rex v. Wix, 2 B. & Ad. 197.)

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

ought to govern us, assuming that the authorities did not exist, that this certificate was good in point of law, or at least that the sessions might legally draw the conclusion, and intend from the circumstances which appeared in evidence, that it was a good certificate. The certificate was granted on the 17th May, 1761, by two persons who were at that time to be taken as the only existing parish officers. It is submitted to by the parish to whom the pauper is sent, as a good certificate, and now after a lapse of sixty-three years, it is for the first time called in question. If any intendment or presumption can legally be made in favour of the validity of such an instrument, it must be in a case of this description; and I think that the justices had authority in point of law to presume such facts as would make it a good certificate, assuming such facts to have had existence. That such facts might really exist, there seems no doubt, at least upon the authority of the cases cited. It is perfectly clear, that by custom there may be only one churchwarden in a parish. There must be two overseers appointed in addition to the churchwardens; and then, according to the 43 Eliz. c. 2, such persons shall be called overseers of the poor, and are to take charge of them. Now upon the face of this instrument, I think we are to take it, that the person who is called 'the only overseer' of the poor, was, in point of law, the survivor of two; for unless there had been two persons appointed, who, together with the churchwardens, were to be overseers of the poor, the statute of Elizabeth would not have been satisfied. Indeed, the description of himself as 'the only overseer' would not be correct, unless there had been two overseers originally appointed, and therefore it is a fair presumption, arising from the face of the certificate, that he was the survivor of two. Suppose an issue had been directed to try simply whether he was or was not the overseer of the parish; if it was shown that there had been only one originally, the issue must have been found that he was not the overseer of the parish, and if the onus was to be thrown upon those who are called upon to support the certificate (even assuming that it had been submitted to for an hundred years), it could not, by legal intendment, be considered a good certificate. I think, however, that the magistrates were abundantly warranted in presuming, as they have done, that there had been an appointment of two overseers originally, and that if there was by custom only one churchwarden, they had a right to presume the fact in favour of the certificate. If so, then the certificate must be considered as signed by a majority of those who would be the original existing body. Whether it is absolutely necessary for the purpose of executing their functions that the majority of the original existing body should continue to exist or not, is a question which we need not decide, because if that was necessary, the 17 Geo. II. would not have been passed, for then in case the original churchwardens and overseers had been reduced below a majority, as, for instance, if there were originally four, and they were reduced to two, all their functions must be at an end during the residue of the year, until that statute had passed. It is, however, unnecessary to decide that question. In this case the sessions have drawn, as they had a right by law to do, the proper conclusion from the presumption of facts, in holding that this was a legal certificate; and as they have done that, I think we should not be justified in reversing their order. But independently of what they have done, I am of opinion, that according to the authorities of Rex v. Hinckley, and Rex v. Earl Shilton, we are bound by law to make every intendment that can reasonably be made in favour of the certificate. Acting upon the maxim, 'res magis valeat quam pereat,' we ought to conclude that this certificate has been legally granted by persons who describe themselves as 'the only churchwarden and the only overseer,' which the latter person could not have done with propriety, unless there had been two originally appointed; and inasmuch as there might have been originally only one churchwarden by custom, we must presume, particularly after an acquiescence of sixty-three years, that the person who signed the certificate was a majority of the existing body, and consequently that this was a valid certificate." Little- dale, J. "I am of the same opinion. A certificate signed by one churchwarden and one overseer alone, would certainly not be sufficient, unless the law would intend something more. But it appears to me, that upon the face of this instrument we are at liberty to intend those circumstances which are necessary to give it validity. First, with respect to the churchwarden, I think there is no difficulty in intending that he was such a churchwarden as the custom of the parish would authorise, inasmuch as by custom there may be only one churchwarden in a parish. Then, secondly, with respect to the overseer, though a certificate signed by one overseer would be bad, still we are at liberty to assume from the language of this certificate, that there were originally two overseers appointed, but that one had died after the appointment, and before the certificate was granted. It is said, we are called upon to intend death instead of the continuance of life. So we are; and I think we are at liberty to do so, until the contrary be shown. But we are placed in the situation of choosing between two intendments, a particular, and a general intendment; first, that a party should be presumed to live, when once shown to be alive; and second, that everything shall be presumed to be right according to law. Now the question is, which of these two intendments is to prevail? Because it is impossible that both can operate. The intendment that everything is to be presumed to be right according to law, is a general intendment, and, I think, ought to prevail, especially in a case of this description, until the contrary is shown. In Rex v. Clifton, and Rex v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, the question of intendment did not arise, because the facts did not warrant it. There the appointment of one overseer was nugatory, being contrary to the statute. But here, after the lapse of sixty-three years, the description of the overseer may warrant us in presuming an original appointment of two overseers, and enable us to intend that one of them had died. Rex v. Hinckley, and Rex v. Earl Shilton, are authorities to warrant the court in saying, that everything must be presumed to be rightly done, until the contrary is proved. So in Rex v. Morris (4 T. R. 550), which was the case of an appointment by justices of one overseer for a hamlet in a particular parish, in which the question was, whether only one overseer could by law be appointed, Lord Kenyon says, 'This court has invariably made a distinction between orders of justices and convictions, and said, that everything is to be intended in support of the former;' and speaking of the objection there as to the supposed illegality of the appointment of one overseer, he said, 'we are not left to conjecture that no other person was appointed overseer of this place, for it appears on the order of sessions that this was an appeal of one of the overseers.' Now when we apply what that learned judge says to the present case, that everything should be intended in support of the order of justices, I think it will justify our opinion on the present occasion. This certificate is a public document, and though not framed by justices of the peace, yet being the act of the parish officers, the court, for the same reason that it intends everything in favour of an order of justices, will intend everything in favour of an instrument made by parish officers. On the whole, therefore, I am of opinion that this is a valid certificate." Order of sessions affirmed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Conflicting intendments.

Every intendment in favour of an order.

Rex v. Whitchurch, 7 B. & C. 573; 1 M. & R. Mag. Ca. 167. Order of removal of William Bray, &c., from Whitchurch to St. Mary's Bourne, quashed. Case:—A certificate was produced, by which J. Harbutt, W. Piper, W. Arundell and W. Phillpott, churchwardens and overseers of St. Mary's Bourne, acknowledged W. Bray, jun., and his wife, William, Mary, and Elizabeth, their children, to be inhabitants settled in St. Mary's Bourne. Signed, &c., "In witness whereof we have hereunder set our hands and seals, this 7th day of September, 1758 ——, (L. S.), W. Piper, (L. S.), churchwardens; W. Arundell, (L. S.), the mark of W. Phillpott, (L. S.), overseers. Attested by us, T. May, A. Neave." It was directed to Whitchurch, and was duly allowed on the 12th of September, 1758. William Bray, jun., the grandfather of the pauper, resided in Whitchurch till the time of his death, in 1799; William Bray his son, also named in

A certificate granted in 1758, by four persons, as churchwardens and overseers, was signed by both overseers, and by one churchwarden. The churchwarden was nominated at Easter, and sworn in September, the usual time for swearing churchwardens, and there was no proof of his having been sworn when he signed the certificate. The parish relieved the pauper and his family in another parish, at various times, from 1758 to 1827: Held, first, that the execution by two overseers and one churchwarden, was an execution by the major part of the churchwardens and overseers; and secondly, that after such a lapse of time, the court will presume that the churchwarden was sworn before he signed the certificate.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

the certificate, had resided there ever since the certificate was granted, and the pauper had resided there from the time of his birth, till the time of this order. It appeared by the visitation books, that St. Mary's Bourne is in the diocese of Winchester, and is a peculiar within the jurisdiction of the chancellor's visitation. Harbutt and Piper were not sworn churchwardens in 1758 till the 15th of September. No churchwardens appeared by the books to have been sworn at the visitation from 1751 to 1758: the visitation book for 1750 was lost. It appeared from the registrar, that it was the course of office to make an entry in the visitation books of the swearing of churchwardens at the time of swearing, whether the swearing takes place at the visitation or afterwards. If it took place afterwards, the registrar always entered it, but he had not looked over the books before his time to see whether there was any entry of such subsequent swearings. At Easter, 1750, J. Longman was nominated churchwarden. In 1757, T. Cowdey and E. Maltin were nominated churchwardens, and Harbutt signed the nomination. At Easter, in 1758, Thomas Harbutt and William Piper were nominated churchwardens. The pauper was on the 7th day of December, 1790, bound by indenture to his grandfather for seven years, which he served in Whitchurch. The father of the pauper, sixteen or seventeen years ago, received relief from the overseers of St. Mary's Bourne, he at that time residing at Whitchurch. He has also constantly for these last two years received relief from St. Mary's Bourne; and no objection was made upon his application for relief, when he required it. The pauper had been occasionally relieved by St. Mary's Bourne, nearly ever since his apprenticeship, whenever he wanted it, and has constantly received relief for the last seven or eight years. The sessions thought the certificate inadequately executed. Bayley, J. "The certificate, upon the validity of which the question in this case turns, was granted nearly seventy years ago. It contains the names of four persons, whom it describes as churchwardens and overseers of St. Mary's Bourne. It appears by the visitation book, that the churchwardens were sworn into office three days after the allowance of the certificate; therefore it has been contended, that the execution by Piper being an act done before he was sworn was done without authority, and is not binding upon the parish. Now, though the fact may be, that at the time when he executed this certificate he had not taken the oath of office, still the other parish into which the pauper went, and in which, in consequence of his having the certificate, he was suffered to reside, must have been equally imposed upon, and must have been induced to believe that the certificate was genuine, and had been executed by competent officers. If we were bound in point of law to allow this objection, we must do so, notwithstanding the grievous injustice which would result from it, and though one of the consequences would be, that no prudent person would from henceforth receive a certificate, and the object of the statute would be entirely defeated. But as it seems to me, it is by no means necessary, in order to render such an act as this binding upon the parish, that the churchwardens shall have been previously sworn. The parish may allow him to act as their officer de facto, though there may be another, who is officer de jure; and if they do hold him out as churchwarden de facto, and suffer him to act in that capacity, they cannot be permitted to practise the fraud of afterwards denying the validity of his acts. At present, therefore, I am disposed to think that the fact of the churchwardens not having been sworn until after the execution of the certificate, does not vacate it. It is clear, from the statement in the case, that the parish have all along, almost from the year 1758 down to the time when the present order of removal was made, been acting upon the certificate, as good and valid. It is not then, in my opinion, too much for us to presume that it is so: and I think cases may be put from which we may assume it to be really valid. It may have happened, for instance, that the churchwardens were first sworn at or shortly after their nomination, and were afterwards sworn again at the visitation in September. Piper, the only person respecting whom there is any dispute, may have wished to be, and may actually have been, sworn at Easter, although the administration of the oath was not recorded, and may afterwards, in September, have been required to take the oath again. We may presume this, and I think it is perfectly fair and reasonable to presume it. To the other parish these persons were held out as churchwardens duly and legally appointed; and unless some such presumption as I have suggested is admitted, we must on the other hand be driven to presume, that which a court of law never can presume, that a fraud was contemplated and practised. I am therefore of opinion, that justice requires us to presume that the churchwarden had been sworn when he executed this certificate; and then it follows that the certificate is valid, and it becomes unnecessary to decide upon the other points raised in the case." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion. If it were necessary to decide the question of law, whether the execution of a certificate is an act which a churchwarden de facto, who has not been sworn, has authority to do, I should wish for time to consider that point, upon which I at present entertain great doubts. But I think we need not decide that question, because the lapse of time is quite sufficient to justify us in presuming that everything necessary to be done to make the certificate valid and binding was done. I think that we may fairly presume that Piper, upon his nomination to the office, went before the commissary and took the oath, and that the fact of his having taken it at that time was, from some circumstance or other, omitted to be registered. We cannot presume fraud and illegality, which we must do, if we decide against the certificate upon this objection. With respect to the supposed necessity of both the churchwardens signing the certificate, the statute only requires that the major part of the aggregate body of churchwardens and overseers shall sign, and not that the major part of each of those classes of officers shall sign. Upon the whole, it seems to me that we must consider this as a valid certificate, and therefore that the order of sessions must be quashed."

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

A certificate was signed by two churchwardens and two overseers on the 16th of April, 1748. On the 27th of May, 1747, five overseers were appointed, two of whom signed the certificate. A church rate was signed on the 28th of May, 1748, by four churchwardens. Five overseers and four churchwardens were appointed in 1746. The court would not presume any facts to make this certificate valid.

Rex v. Upton Gray, 10 Bar. & Cres. 807. T. Woodman was removed from Upton Gray to Bishop's Waltham. Order quashed. Case:—A certificate was produced by the respondents from the parish chest of their parish, signed by two churchwardens and two overseers of Bishop's Waltham, dated the 16th of April, 1748, by which it was acknowledged to the former parish, that Peter Woodman, the great grandfather of the pauper, was legally settled in the latter parish. The certificate had never been discharged so far as regards the pauper. On the part of the appellants it was proved from the parish books of Bishop's Waltham, that on the 27th day of May, 1747, five overseers were appointed by the said parish; their names were Harris, Edney, Vernon, Stares, and Cowdery, of whom Harris and Cowdery signed the above certificate, dated the 16th of April, 1748. In an indenture of parish apprenticeship, dated the 24th of October, 1747, it was recited that at that time the said five persons, viz. Harris, Edney, Vernon, Stares, and Cowdery, were overseers; and that at the same time four persons named Homer, Barefoot, Hellyer, and Wateridge (of whom Homer and Wateridge signed the above certificate), were churchwardens of the parish of Bishop's Waltham. It was also proved on the part of the appellants, from the parish books, that a church rate for the said parish for the year 1747 was signed on the 8th of May, 1748, by four churchwardens, whose names were there stated to have been Horner, Barefoot, Hellyer, and Wateridge. It was also proved on the same part, from the same books, that on the 6th July, 1748, five overseers were again appointed for the same parish, whose names were there stated to have been Lacy, Parker, Trodd, Edney, and Suet. It appeared also by the said parish books, that from the year 1633 to 1829, four churchwardens had been regularly chosen every year of the said parish. By the proper visitation books for 1746, it was proved that four churchwardens were sworn in for the parish of Bishop's Waltham, for the year ensuing the date of such swearing in. The visitation books for the year 1747 were lost. By the visitation books for 1748, it was proved that on the 19th September, 1748,

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

four churchwardens were sworn in for the said parish for the year ensuing that date. By the same books it appeared, that in twelve or thirteen different years, between the years 1683 and 1829, four churchwardens had not been sworn in for the said parish, but that in those instances less than four had been sworn in. It was contended that the certificate was bad, having been signed by two out of five persons, whose appointment as overseers was void as to all (inasmuch as by the stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, not more than four overseers can be appointed), and on the ground that the majority of the parish officers had not signed it. The respondents, however, contended that after so long a period (being more than eighty years), it might be presumed, either that a new and valid appointment of Cowdery and Harris as overseers had been made in the interval between the 24th of October, 1747 (when it is recited as above that there were five overseers), and the date of the certificate, 16th of April, 1748; or that at that date there were not four churchwardens sworn in, in either of which cases the certificate would be signed by a majority of the parish officers. Bayley, J. "This is an attempt to carry the cases of Rex v. Catesby (p. 966) and Rex v. Whitchurch (p. 969) to a most unreasonable extent. In the last of those cases in the certificate, four persons were described as churchwardens and overseers of the parish, but it purported to be signed by three of them only; by one Piper as churchwarden, and by two others as overseers. It was proved by the visitation books that in the year 1758 the two churchwardens were sworn in after the date of the certificate; and it was therefore contended that Piper, the party who signed the certificate as churchwarden, was not at that time churchwarden de jure, and therefore that it was not binding on the parish. It appeared further by the visitation books that no churchwardens were sworn in from 1751 to 1758, but the parish who had granted the certificate had, from the year 1758 to the time when the order of removal was made, treated it as valid, for it had relieved the pauper while he was residing in another parish. The sessions having found in favour of this certificate, the court held that it might reasonably be presumed that Piper, after his nomination in 1758, and before he did any act as churchwarden, had gone to the commissary and had been sworn into office before him; and, under the circumstances of that case, such a presumption was not unreasonable, for it was not inconsistent with any other fact. In Rex v. Catesby, the certificate which the law required to be signed by a majority of the parish officers, purported to be signed by one churchwarden and one overseer. If, therefore, there were two churchwardens and two overseers, it was not valid. The sessions having presumed in favour of the certificate, it was for the court to say whether there could be any state of facts to make it a valid certificate, and they decided that it might be valid on two grounds. By custom there might have been only one churchwarden in the parish, and therefore the sessions might have presumed that one only was appointed; or two overseers might have been originally appointed, and one of them have died before the certificate was granted. Then what is the state of facts here? Can the court say that the justices at sessions have done wrong in refusing to make the presumption which they were called upon to make? It is conceded that the presumption is one of fact, which in an ordinary case it would be for a jury to decide; but it is said that a jury ought to draw such a presumption, whether they believe the fact really did exist or not; and a dictum of Sir W. Grant, to that effect has been cited. To that, as a general proposition, I cannot agree. I would not direct a jury to presume that which they believe to be contrary to the fact. Here the fact which we are called upon to presume is not only highly improbable in itself, but wholly inconsistent with other facts which existed about the same time. We are first to presume that the four churchwardens were not sworn in. That would be presuming that they committed a breach of duty when we ought to presume rather that they discharged their duty. It is then said, that we may presume that one of the churchwardens died. Such a presumption, if made at all, ought to have been made by the sessions, and not by us. The other ground is still more unreasonable. It is said there was a bad appointment of overseers, and that we ought to presume a new appointment of overseers before the certificate was granted. In the next year, however, it appears that five overseers were again appointed. We must, therefore, presume that the error as to the number of overseers was discovered between October, 1747, and April, 1748, although the ancient erroneous practice was again adopted in October, 1748. I think there was nothing in this case to warrant any presumption of fact necessary to give validity to this certificate, and I cannot say that the sessions ought to have drawn from the facts stated any of the conclusions which it has been insisted they ought to have drawn." Littledale, J., concurred. Parke, J. "I am of the same opinion. The doctrine attributed to the Master of the Rolls in Hillary v. Waller (a) may be true as applied to the particular subject-matter which he was then discussing. A jury would probably be directed to presume, after a lapse of time, the reconveyance of a legal estate by trustees, without any specific evidence of a deed of conveyance, provided there be no fact to rebut such presumption." Order of sessions confirmed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

(a) 112 Ves. 52.

The certificates must be under the distinct and several seal of each churchwarden and overseer.

Rex v. Austrey, 6 M. & Sel. 319. The case is fully stated in the judgment given by Lord Ellenborough. "In this case an order of removal of J. Smith from St. Margaret's, Leicester, to Austrey, was confirmed, subject to a case. The question now remaining for the opinion of the court, arose upon a certificate, duly attested and allowed by two justices, granted to the pauper, purporting to be the certificate of J. S., J. P., and J. B., churchwardens and overseers of Appleby, acknowledging the pauper to be settled at Appleby. In witness whereof (the certificate stated) we have hereunto set our hands and seals, the 4th of April, 1768. This certificate, the case states, is under the hands of S., P., and B., but there are only two seals, one opposite to the names of S. and P., styled churchwardens, and the other opposite the name of B., styled overseer. And the question is, whether this is a good certificate within the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30? If it is not a good certificate, the order of sessions must be confirmed. The certificate required by sect. 1, is a certificate under the hands and seals of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or the major part of them, or under the hands and seals of the overseers of the poor, where there is no churchwarden. The certificate in question being a certificate by the two churchwardens, and by one only of the overseers, and under two seals only, it was objected that it was not a certificate under the hands and seals of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or the major part of them. In answer to this, it was contended that if several persons seal and deliver an instrument, by putting their several seals upon one and the same piece of wax or wafer that is put upon the instrument, or using the same as their several seals, and delivering the instrument as their respective deeds, that the seal becomes the several seal of each, and that the instrument becomes the deed of all: and that this reasoning is applicable to the present case as showing that, in law, the seal opposite the names of the two churchwardens, is to be considered as the distinct seal of each, and therefore that the certificate testifying that the three had in witness thereof set their hands and seals thereto, and having been allowed by two justices, and the certificated person having been received under the same, was to be considered in law as being under the hands and seals of the three. In considering how far the cases of deeds are applicable to a case like the present, it is to be recollected that in those cases the parties alone, under whose authority the deeds were executed, are bound by them. But the present is the case of the execution of a power, which binds and operates upon other persons at their peril, and subjects them to indictments as for crimes, in case of their disobedience to the power if it be duly executed. In the execution of powers, all the circumstances required by the creators of the power (however unessential and otherwise unimportant) must be observed, and can only be satisfied by a strictly literal and precise performance. Hawkins v. Kemp (3 East, 440). It is also a general principle of law, whenever a power is given to particular persons to do any written act in a particular manner, and under certain particular circumstances,—whether it be to parish officers or magistrates to grant certificates, under which, if duly executed, other persons, especially public officers, are bound to act, or to grant warrants, or make orders,—that their authority must appear on the instrument itself. It must thereby appear, that they are the persons authorised, and that the certificate, warrant, or order, was made in the manner and under the circumstances required; otherwise it is not obligatory, but void: the mere statement that the parties, in witness thereof, have put their hands and seals to such an instrument, does not make it so, unless it really have their hands and seals put to it; nor in the execution of a power has it, as it seems to us, their hands and seals to it, so as to make it a good execution of a power requiring such execution to be under their hands and seals, unless it be apparent upon the instrument itself that it has the hand and seal of each put to it. The statute is to be construed, in a case like this, according to common parlance and understanding, and so as to be a security to persons who are bound to obey the powers given by it at their peril, and not to be construed according to what may be brought within its words by nice legal reasoning, applicable merely to deeds, and by which construction persons bound to obey the execution of the power, if it be duly granted, cannot ascertain whether it be so or not, without delay, inquiry, expense, and trouble. In Thaire v. Thaire (Palm. 109, 112), where there was a submission to arbitration, "so that the award be delivered under their hands and seals," it was made a question, whether an award sealed, but not signed, was a good award: the point argued being, whether the sealing, which was virtually a signing, was sufficient; or whether the words of the submission should be intended, in common parlance, an actual writing of their hands? The judges of C. P. were at first divided, but it was finally decided by the whole court, not that a virtual signing would do, but that there ought to be an actual signing under their hands. So, where an act is to be under the hands and seals of the three, a mere virtual sealing by any of the three appears to us not sufficient; but it ought to be under the actual distinct seal of each of the three, that is to say, under a distinct and several sealed impression adopted by each of the three. The necessity and importance of requiring this is still more striking in cases of warrants of imprisonment (where they are required to be under the hands and seals of two justices of the peace), where resistance and death might follow, and where the justification or high criminality of the officer or of the party to be apprehended would depend upon the uncertainty, and upon the subsequent establishment by extrinsic proof, whether the seal, if one sealed impression on the warrant would in any case do, was used so as to be considered in law the seal of both or one: the consequence is, we think the certificate is void, and that the order of sessions must be confirmed."

A certificate is in the nature of a power.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Persons described as officers of the parish, may be proved to have been officers of the hamlet.

Rex v. Samborn, 3 T. R. 609. The certificate stated that T. A. and R. B. of Samborn, churchwarden and overseer of the parish of Great Coughton, acknowledged the pauper to be settled at Samborn, in their said parish of Great Coughton. The hamlet of Samborn maintains its own poor separately from the parish, and has a churchwarden and overseer of their own. T. A. and R. B. were churchwardens and overseers of Samborn at the time of granting the certificate. It was objected that evidence ought to have been received, to show that the persons described in the certificate as the officers of the parish were the officers of the hamlet. Buller, J. "The evidence does not contradict, but it explains the certificate."

A parish is not compellable to grant a certificate.

Rex v. St. Ives, 2 Sess. Ca. 153. A mandamus was moved for, to compel the churchwardens and overseers to sign a certificate, acknowledging a poor person being settled in their parish, on an affidavit that he had served an apprenticeship there, and that he was capable of getting a good livelihood elsewhere; but the court rejected the motion as a very strange attempt.

5. Of Allowance and Attestation.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

5 Of Allowance and Attestation.

Certificate not signed by two justices is null.

Rex v. Wootton, St. Lawrence, Burr. S. C. 581; 2 Bott, 713. The parish officers of St. Lawrence gave to Thomas Pryor, the pauper, a common printed form of a certificate, acknowledging him to be settled in St. Lawrence. It was signed and sealed by the parish officers, and attested by two witnesses. But the blanks for the allowance of justices were not filled up, and no name of any justice signed thereto. On his return to the parish granting the certificate, they relieved him until the time of his removal. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "A certificate cannot conclude the parish unless properly signed. The certificate act specifies certain checks and guards upon certificates. The justices are not obliged ministerially to allow and sign a certificate; they are not bound at all events to allow and sign it; they have a discretion to allow it, or not to allow it, if it be liable to objection. The act requires a conclusive certificate to be under the checks and guards therein particularised. This certificate wants them; therefore it is no certificate within this act. And it it be not a certificate within the act, it cannot conclude the parish." Yates and Aston, Js., concurred.

Justices are not bound to allow a certificate.

If the certifying parish is in two counties, the justices of either may allow it.

Rex v. Austrey (see case, ante, p. 973). The certificate was allowed by two justices of Derbyshire. The certifying parish (Appleby) was situated partly in Derby and partly in Leicester. By the court: "The allowance of a certificate by two justices was not, like the removal of a pauper, strictly an act of jurisdiction, although the justices had a discretionary power to refuse or allow a certificate; yet the allowance was merely a voucher that credence was due to the acknowledgment of the churchwardens and overseers, that the pauper was settled in their parish. For this purpose, the justices of either county might be supposed to have a competent knowledge of the parties, although one end of the parish might be situate in an adjoining county; and, therefore, they might be taken to be within the meaning of the act.

The justices who allow may attest as witnesses.

Rex v. Boston, 2 Bott, 561. The justices who allow the certificate may also attest as witnesses; but it must appear upon the certificate that they took upon them to act in both capacities.

Attestation presumed from allowance.

Barleycroft v. Coleoverton, 1 Strange, 402; 2 Bott, 710. Order of removal from B. to C., reciting that the pauper had come with a certificate, allowed according to the act, from C. to B., and being now become chargeable they send him back to C. Moved to be quashed, because it is not said the certificate was attested, but only that it was allowed. Sed per curiam: "The attestation is by the statute made previous to the allowance; and, therefore, when they say it was allowed according to the act of parliament, we must intend it was attested, for otherwise it could not be so allowed." Order confirmed.

What sufficient statement of attestation.

Rex v. Ashton Keynes, Burr. S. C. 725. The certificate was signed by A. B. and P. J., and in the allowance it was certified that P. J. came before the justices, and made oath that he was present with the other witness and saw it signed by the parish officers, and that his name was his own writing. The sessions thought this no certificate, because A. B.'s signature was not proved before the justices. But the court were clear that there was sufficient proof of A. B.'s attestation, for P. J. swears that he was present with A. B. and saw the officers sign it, &c., and is above thirty years' old: and it was very unreasonable for the parish to quibble it off in this manner now.

6. Proof of Certificate.

6. Proof of Certificate.

A parish certificate of more than thirty years' date, produced by the overseer of the respondent parish, is evidence.

Rex v. Netherthong, 2 M. & Sel. 337. Order of removal from Netherthong to Honley discharged. Case:—A rated inhabitant and overseer of Netherthong produced a certificate, dated in 1756, from Honley to Netherthong, acknowledging the pauper's grandfather and father to belong to Honley. It was objected, that before such certificate could be received and read in evidence some account must be given of it, and whence it be examined as to the custody.

The witness may

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

came, which the witness was not competent to give, being a rated inhabitant of Netherthong. The sessions refused to permit the witness to give evidence. It was admitted that after Rex v. Ryton (post), the ruling of the sessions could not be sustained; but it was prayed that the case might be remitted to be heard on the merits. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "I remember upon the trial of an action for a false return to a mandamus, a corporator was called to produce some of the corporation muniments, and objection was taken to his admissibility; but Lord Kenyon said, 'that he should hold him capable, as a depositary of the muniments, of being brought forward for the purpose of producing them, and that if the party objecting wished to inquire as to the custody he might, and that he would receive the evidence.' If the parties choose to stand on such a point as this, it may be as well that they should abide by it." Order of sessions quashed. The 3 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 8 (p. 964), which directs that a certificate, after it has been allowed, and the oath of its execution certified by the justices, shall be evidence without further proof.

The respondents, to prove the delivery to them of a certificate given by the appellants, produced an old book from their own parish chest, in which was an entry of that fact in the handwriting of a former parish officer: Such evidence is inadmissible.

Rex v. Debenham, 2 B. & Ald. 185. Removal from Debenham to Kenton quashed. Case:—The pauper had gained a settlement in Debenham, unless it could be shown that his father at the time resided in that parish under a certificate from Kenton. No such certificate could be found in the custody of Debenham. The pauper's father, James Driver, proved that in 1771, having been removed from Debenham to Kenton, Debenham refused to allow him to return unless Kenton would grant him a certificate; to this Kenton consented. An order for granting this certificate was made at the quarterly meeting of the directors and guardians of the incorporated hundreds of Loes and Wilford, (in which Kenton is situated,) as appeared by an entry in the minute book of the proceedings of the hundred-house quarterly meetings, dated 20th March, 1771. And to prove that such certificate was delivered to the respondents in pursuance of such order, a book was produced from the parish chest of Debenham; on the outside of the cover was "Certs. Rec'd. Bonds do. Coppys of Orders, 1756." This book contained memorandums of orders of removal, of bonds and certificates received. The certificates were regularly numbered, and under the title of certificates received was the following entry, dated 1771, "No. 88. John Polkins from Kenton.—No. 89. James Driver do." There were a variety of other certificates subsequently entered. The sessions were of opinion that this book was not admissible in evidence. Abbott, C. J. "The principles of the law of evidence in this country are founded on the strongest sense and soundest reasoning. It is of the first importance to preserve them strictly; inasmuch as they are the great safeguards of the subject, in the administration of justice in all cases, from those involving property of the most trifling amount to those where the life of an individual is at stake. I therefore should be extremely unwilling to come to any decision which should break in upon any established principle. It is an established principle, that nothing said or done by a person having at the time an interest in the subject-matter shall be evidence either for him or persons claiming under him. Now the entry in this book is of that description; for it is made by a person having an interest to make it, inasmuch as it is produced as proof of the delivery of a certificate by which the parish, of which the party making an entry is an inhabitant, is to be relieved from the burden of maintaining the individual named in the certificate. I think, therefore, that the safest course which the court can pursue will be to hold, that the sessions were justified in rejecting this evidence. There are, however, in this case, other circumstances from which the sessions may draw the conclusion, (if they shall think fit so to do,) that the certificate was in fact delivered. I think, therefore, that the case should go back to be re-heard upon that point." Bayley, J. "I am entirely of the same opinion, that the entry in this book was not evidence, the effect of it being to advance the interest of the person who made it." Holroyd, J., concurred. Case sent back to be re-heard.

Rex v. Ryton, 5 T. R. 259. Where the respondents produced a certificate more than thirty years old, purporting to be granted to their parish by the appellant parish, the Court of King's Bench said that it was sufficient for the respondents barely to produce the certificate to the sessions, without giving any account of it.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificates.

Production of certificate sufficient.

7. Of the Delivery of Certificate.

A certificate of the master must be delivered to prevent his apprentice from acquiring a settlement. (Rex v. Wensley, post).

7. Of the Delivery of Certificate.

A certificate may be evidence, though not delivered.

Rex v. St. Nicholas, Harwich, Burr. S. C. 171. Wright, J., said, "That the neglect to deliver did not make the certificate ineffectual; the parish who gave the certificate is at all events bound by the certificate, and the certificate is therefore good as against them." (a)

A certificate from a friendly society to a member, under 33 Geo. III. c. 54, must be delivered to the parish officers. (b)

Rex v. Egremont, 14 East, 253. William Gainsford removed from Egremont to Cockermouth. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper was bound apprentice to J. Raney, April 18th, 1802, for seven years, and served more than forty days of the latter part of his apprenticeship with J. B. in Cockermouth, who came into that parish with a certificate from an amicable society, acknowledging him to be a member of that society. On the certificate was an indorsement signed by a justice, according to the act. The only question was whether the production of the certificate was sufficient evidence under the 33 Geo. III. c. 54, without proof of its having been delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of Cockermouth? It was said that this evidence was sufficient, for the 18th section of the act provided that such a certificate so attested and certified "shall be taken, deemed, and allowed in all courts whatsoever as duly and fully proved, and shall be taken and received as evidence without other proof thereof." But that if this were not sufficient, yet the sessions under the circumstances might presume that it had been delivered, as it was produced in court by the parish of Cockermouth. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "To warrant them in presuming any fact, there must be presumable matter. The mere giving of the certificate by the society to the member is not made sufficient by the act to protect his residence under it in the parish, without a delivery of it to the parish officers. The 17th section says that no members of the society who shall come to inhabit in any parish, and shall deliver to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of such parish a certificate, &c. shall be removable till actually chargeable. But if it remain in the pocket of the certificated person, that is not sufficient to prevent a settlement being gained under it. Here there is an absence of any proof of its having been delivered to the parish officers before the period when the apprentice served his master in Cockermouth, and therefore an exclusion of any presumption of the fact." Order of sessions quashed.

Such delivery not presumed.

8. Persons protected by Certificates from Removal.

8. Persons protected by Certificates from Removal.

Rex v. St. Peter and St. Paul, in Bath, Cald. 213; 1 Bott, 483. W. Hill was removed from Lyncombe and Widcombe to St. Peter and St. Paul. Order confirmed. Case:—The parishioners of St. Peter and St. Paul, with the parishioners of St. James, in Bath, purchased a piece of ground in the parish of Lyncombe and Widcombe, and built thereon a house for the reception of their poor. W. Hill, with the paupers belonging to St. Peter and St. Paul, removed to this house, where they have been maintained, without any charge to the parish of Lyncombe and Widcombe. Hill and all the other paupers carried with them regular certificates, which were delivered to one of the officers of Lyncombe and Widcombe. Notwithstanding his certificate, the pauper was removed from Lyncombe and

A certificate given to paupers going into a workhouse in a third parish is good.

(a) In this case Chappel, J., is reported to have said, "That the delivery to an inhabitant, though it did not appear that he was a parish officer, is sufficient;" but this mode would afford such an opportunity for fraudulently defeating the object of the regulation, that the courts would hardly countenance such doctrine, especially as the statute seems to require a delivery to the churchwardens or overseers.

(b) These no longer exist.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Widcombe, though he had not been chargeable to that parish. The sessions were of opinion that the pauper was not an object of the certificate act, and consequently not protected by it. Lord Mansfield, C. J., after adverting to the benefit of workhouses (ante, p. 41), said, "That the objection to the certificate is not warranted by the act. Whatever might be the leading motive in passing that act, that statute authorises the whole body of the poor, of whatever denomination and with whatever object, to leave their own and remove into any other parish, provided they can obtain the protection of a certificate. Contrary to the spirit and policy of the act, and not obliged by the letter, the court will not make an exception of a case, which the act itself has not excepted. The true policy is certainly to enlarge and not to narrow the district, within which the poor are to be maintained. As to the objection of its being an injury to property, the introduction of a numerous inhabitancy, by increasing the consumption of provisions, must unavoidably add to the value of that land, the produce of which is by such a demand consumed. As to the possibility of a few illegitimate children acquiring by birth a settlement in the parish, within which the workhouse stands, it is impossible to foresee every inconvenience; and all that can be said is, that de minimis non curat lex." Buller, J. "As to the last difficulty raised, I doubt whether the poorhouse so occupied, and become in this manner the perpetual property of the united parishes, is not, to this purpose, rather to be considered as part of those parishes to which it so belongs, than of the parish in which it is locally situated; upon the same principle, as that of many resolutions in the case of such children born in gaols." Willes and Ashurst, Js., concurring, both orders were quashed.

A workhouse in a third parish is to be considered as part of that parish whose poor reside therein.

9. To what Individuals a Certificate extends.

An unborn child is included in "family."

9. To what Individuals a Certificate extends.

Rex v. Sherborne, Burr. S. C. 182. The pauper's father came to Sherborne with a certificate including his wife and family from Thornford. About two years after, his wife died, and he married the pauper's mother, and three years after this marriage the pauper was born in Sherborne, whilst his father resided under the certificate. When the pauper was sixteen, he was hired and served for a year to an inhabitant of Sherborne. The court held that the pauper did by his birth come by certificate into Sherborne, and that he was restrained to the two modes of acquiring a settlement specified in the statute. (No argument was raised as to the second wife). (S. P. Rex v. Bray, Burr. S. C. 259; and Rex v. Buckingham, Burr. S. C. 314.)

A certificate under the friendly society act to a man will include the family.

Rex v. Idle, 2 B. & Ald. 149. The 35 Geo. III. c. 101, did not repeal the 33 Geo. III. c. 54. And therefore where an unemancipated daughter was delivered of a bastard child in the township of Idle, during her father's residence there under a certificate acknowledging him to be a member of a friendly society established under 33 Geo. III. c. 54, it was held that such certificate extended not only to him but to all members of his family; that the daughter was therefore at the time of her delivery residing in the township under the authority of 33 Geo. III. c. 54, and that by sect. 35 of that act, the settlement of the child followed that of the mother.

A certificate to a spinster "the child she now goeth with" will include the bastard.

A certificate does not extend to children after they become heads of families.

Rex v. Ipsley (ante, 418). A certificate, which acknowledged "A. C., a spinster, and the child she now goeth with," will include the child, although it is illegitimate. But in Rex v. Mathon (ante, 419), it was held that such a certificate, adding all other children she might thereafter have, will not extend to an illegitimate child born eight years after.

Rex v. Darlington, 4 T. R. 797. Sarah, widow of T. Milburn, and seven children, were removed from All Saints to Darlington. Order confirmed. Case:—The grandfather of the pauper's husband came to All Saints with a certificate from Darlington. During his residence there he had a son, Thomas, who lived with him as part of his family, except for one year, when he was a servant in All Saints; after which service he returned to his father, and married, when he had a child, the pauper's husband, who lived in All Saints till his death. The pauper's husband, at the age of fourteen, was hired and served for three years in All Saints. Some time before this service the grandfather returned with his wife to Darlington (leaving his son and son's family behind), and died there. Lord Kenyon. "By 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, the parish to which the certificate is granted is obliged to receive the certificated person, together with his or her family. Now what is the fair legal import of the word family? It is true that in construing a will, and where it is the intention of the testator that it shall extend beyond the immediate children, it may have that operation; but that is not the sense in which it is used in this act. In common parlance the family consists of those who live under the same roof with the pater-familias; those who form his fireside. But when they branch out and become the heads of new establishments, they cease to be part of the father's family. I admit that a certificate extends to the son on account of the positive words of the act of parliament, he being part of the father's family; but when he himself becomes the head of a family, then the words of the statute, public policy, and the convenience of mankind, require that he should no longer be considered as part of his father's family, or be protected by the certificate granted to his father. Giving full effect to the certificate, as far as the words of the act and the intention of the legislature go, I think it meets with its boundary line, when it has protected the family of the certificated person, that is, all those who live with the pater-familias, and consequently that this grandchild, who was the son of the head of a distinct family, was not prevented gaining a settlement by hiring and service." Grose, J. "Grandchildren are not, properly speaking, of the family of the grandfather, but of his son; for when the son becomes the head of a new branch, and has children of his own, he ceases to be a part of his father's family, and his children then form a part of his own family." Orders quashed. See Rex v. Mortlake, (p. 980).

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

The family consists of those who live under the same roof with the pater-familias, who form his fireside.

Rex v. Hampton, 5 T. R. 266. In 1755, James Duffell and his wife came to reside in Hampton, under a certificate granted by the parish of Thackham, which acknowledges James Duffell, and Mary his wife to be legally settled in Thackham. Afterwards Mary died, and James married a second wife, continuing to reside in Hampton. He died, and his widow still continued to reside in Hampton, and received the pauper as her apprentice. It was held, that the pauper acquired no settlement in Hampton, as she was, in the words of 12 Anne, s. 1, c. 18, an apprentice to a person who resided in Hampton under the licence of a certificate. Grose, J., observed, "That the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, did not mention by name the wife, but that she was included in the 'family', and that Rex v. Sherborne had determined that the certificate includes not only the persons named, but every person of the future family of the person to whom it was granted: and that the widow, therefore, of James Duffell was, at the time of his death, part of his family, and so continued till she married again, or deserted her right." Buller, J., differed from the rest of the court, as he thought that "when the husband died she was no longer part of the family." But the order of removal of the pauper to the parish who placed her out as an apprentice was confirmed.

A second wife is part of the husband's family; and an apprentice to her as a widow, acquires no settlement.

A child who was part of the "family" was put out as an apprentice in the certificated parish; after he was of age, he hired himself in the same parish; he ceased thereby to be a part of the family, and acquired a settlement. (Rex v. Morley, p. 450.)

When a child ceases to be part of the family.

Rex v. Testerton, 5 T. R. 258. Testerton gave Great Ryburgh a certificate for Thomas Wood, the father of the pauper, his wife and seven children, by name, of which the pauper was one. The pauper lived with his father at Ryburgh till he was twenty; he then lived as a servant in Ryburgh for a year, and returned to his father. He then served two years more as a servant in Ryburgh, and afterwards returned to his father and resided a year with him, and then married, and has lived in Ryburgh till this order was made, but never with his father since his marriage. His father has been dead about five years. Lord Kenyon said, "This case was not contrary to Rex v. Darlington, (p. 978), for here the pauper is mentioned

If the child is named in the certificate, his children are included.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

by name in the certificate itself, and he has never gained any settlement or lived out of the certificated parish since it was given." Order of removal to Testerton confirmed.

Same point.

Rex v. Batheaston, 8 T. R. 446. E. Gay, the grandfather of the pauper, went to Box with a certificate from Batheaston, certifying him, his wife, and "Edward and Thomas their children." Edward lived with his father till he married at Box, and had the pauper, who was hired and served as a servant in Box. The Court held that the distinction was taken in Rex v. Testerton between those cases where the certificate is granted to a person and his family generally, and those where the son is mentioned by name in the certificate; that in the former a grandson is not within the protection of the certificate; but that in the latter, where the son is named, his family, until they are emancipated, are within the protection of the certificate, not as the grandchildren of the principal person named, but as the family and children of the person who is also named, and therefore Rex v. Testerton ought to govern this case" (a).

But an unmarried person carrying on business for himself, but living with his father's widow as part of her family, still resides under the certificate (Rex v. Sowerby, p. 442). When the son of a certificated person marries and lives in a house of his own, he ceases to be under the protection of the certificate, and may gain a settlement in the certificated parish by being rated (Rex v. Heath, 5 T. R. 583).

Persons who come into a parish under a certificate must also reside there under it, for the purpose of being within the operation of it; therefore, where a son of a certificated person included as one of the father's family, marries and lives separately from the father, his apprentice may gain a settlement in the certificated parish.

Rex v. Mortlake, 6 East, 397. Removal of Mary Dormer and children from Mortlake to Great Marlow, quashed. Case:—John Dormer and Ann his wife went with a certificate from Hambleton to Great Marlow, and during their residence at Great Marlow had a son William. John and William died there; but William had left his father's family, married, and occupied a separate house at Great Marlow, and had a son named Thomas, who in 1760, several years after the death of John and Ann, was bound apprentice to his father for seven years, and served the same at Great Marlow. Thomas was afterwards married and had a son named Thomas, now deceased, who was the husband of the pauper and the father of the children removed. Lord Ellenborough. "The question is, whether William, the son of John, who was once covered by his father's certificate, ceased to be so when he married and lived separately from his father; for if he ceased to be covered by the certificate himself, there seems to be no reason why he might not communicate a settlement to another, as well as gain one himself in the certificated parish. This depends upon the meaning of the word 'family' in 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30. The meaning of the word is not to be taken in its largest sense, and has been soundly restrained by the determinations in Rex v. Darlington, and Rex v. Heath to those who constitute part of the existing household and family of the certificated person, or, as Lord Kenyon expressed it in Rex v. Darlington, those who form his fireside. That character cannot apply to William after he had married and left his father's house and had become a new stirps, having a family of his own. Rex v. Hampton was decided upon the ground that the second wife continued after her husband's death to be the root and remains of the old family, and not a substantive distinct family, as here. She still continued as the representative of her deceased husband; but here the son had started for himself at the head of a new family by marrying and taking a separate house for himself. He was then in a condition to gain a settlement for himself in the certificated parish. But the words of the statute of Anne are relied on to show that he is not such a person with whom an apprentice bound to him could gain a settlement there; and it is said that they are in the disjunctive 'come into or reside in'; but upon referring to the certificate act, the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, which speaks of persons who 'shall come into any parish, there to be, inhabit, and reside', and the 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, which speaks of doubts having arisen upon the former statute, by what acts any person coming to inhabit or reside within any parish by virtue of any such certificate may procure a settlement, and which enacts that no person who shall come into any parish (without more) by any such certificate, shall gain any settlement there except in certain ways mentioned; I say, upon comparing the words of the statute of Anne with the former provisions, I think those words must be read copulatively, and that they mean only to designate persons who may come into any parish for the purpose of residing, and actually reside there under a certificate." The other judges agreed.

(a) The principle of these cases seems to be confirmed by Rex v. Thwaites, (p. 981); and the observations of Lord Ellenborough and Bayley, J., in Rex v. Leek Wootton (p. 982), if reconcilable with these cases, must be understood in reference to derivative settlements only, and so they seem to have been construed by Mr. Nolan, vol. ii. 174.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

A certificate granted to T. C., and J., his wife, engaging to receive them, their child or children born or to be born, only extends to a son born at the time of granting the certificate, so long as he continues a part of his father's family; therefore, where the son married, and resided with his family apart from his father, in the certified parish: it was held, that his apprentice gained a settlement by serving him in the said parish.

Rex v. Thwaites, 1 M. & Sel. 669. Removal from Harrington to Thwaites confirmed. Case:—The pauper, Huddleston, was born in Thwaites, but was bound apprentice to R. Cass in Brigham, and served his whole time in that township. T. Cass, the father of R. Cass, resided at Brigham, under a certificate from Sunderland, which had been delivered to the parish of Brigham, acknowledging T. Cass and his wife to be settled within their township, and they promised to receive them, their child or children, born or to be born in their township, as persons legally settled. R. Cass was born at the time of the certificate so granted and delivered, and during the time of the pauper's serving him, was a married man, residing with his family in Brigham, apart from his father; but it did not appear that he had gained any settlement there. Lord Ellenborough. "This appears very clearly to have been a service under an indenture of apprenticeship to a person, who at the time was not protected by the certificate, and consequently, such a service as coupled with the residence will entitle the pauper to a settlement in Brigham. The certificate engages 'to receive the father and mother their child or children born, or to be born'. The parish officers perhaps did not know the name of the son, or probably they were ignorant of the fact that they had any son at the time; but it is clear that they meant only to comprehend the whole of the family with which the parents should migrate. The parents do migrate with their own son into another township, and there the son afterwards separates from them, and becomes himself the head of a distinct family, and so from that time was emancipated. This is a main feature that distinguishes this case from Rex v. Sowerby (p. 442), where the party continued to reside with his mother, and brings it within Rex v. Mortlake, (p. 980,) which is also an authority to show that the pauper, by serving the son, under these circumstances, in the certified township, will thereby gain a settlement in that township." Le Blanc, J. "It seems to be admitted, that this case falls precisely within the determination of Rex v. Mortlake, unless it can be distinguished upon the terms of the certificate. The circumstance of distinction relied on is this, that the certificate is in its terms an acknowledgment of 'the child or children born or to be born', and this, it has been argued, is the same thing as if the child had been expressly named by its christian name in the certificate. If this were so, there would be an end of the question; for it has been determined, and that determination has never been shaken, that a child named in the certificate stands precisely in the situation of the father, that is, as one of the principals mentioned in the certificate, and therefore if the son had been named in this case, it would follow that a service with him as an apprentice would not have conferred on him a settlement in the certified parish. No case, however, has been cited to show that anything less than an express mention of the person by name will have the same effect as naming him; or that describing him by the words 'child born or to be born', has ever been held to be equivalent. The current of all the authorities seems to decide this, that if a person, who is not named in the certificate, but only comes within the scope of it, as being the child of a person named, abandon the roof of his parents and become himself the parent stock of another family, such person is not only capable of gaining a settlement himself, but also of being the means of others gaining a settlement by service with him, although his father remains protected by the certificate. I am therefore of opinion, that the decision of the sessions was wrong." Bayley, J. "The provisions of the certificate act seem to place this case in a clear point of view: it enacts, 'That if any person that shall come into any parish to reside, shall deliver a certificate, acknowledging the person or persons mentioned in the said certificate to be an inhabitant or inhabitants settled in that parish, every such certificate shall oblige the said parish to receive and provide for the person mentioned in the certificate, together with his family, whenever they be chargeable. Therefore, if a certificate be granted to a person by name, the parish is bound to provide for him and his family; but if several members of a family be named in it, the parish must provide for each as distinct and separate members, unconnected with each other. Who, then, are the persons named in this certificate, whom the township acknowledge as their inhabitants legally settled? The father and mother only; for 'their child or children born, or to be born', comprehends nothing more than their family; the children are to be received back as part of the family of the father, and not because they are acknowledged as settled inhabitants of the certifying township. In the cases relied upon, the certificate not only named the parents but the children also. But where children come within the certificate, merely under the description of the family of the person named, Rex v. Darlington, Rex v. Heath, and Rex v. Mortlake, have decided, that they continue under the protection of the certificate so long only as they constitute a part of the family. That is the plain and broad line of distinction." Order of sessions quashed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

The settlement of a son coming into a parish with his father under a certificate, as part of the father's family, not having before gained any settlement of his own, shifts with the settlement of the father in the certificated parish, though such son were named in the certificate.

Rex v. Leek Wootton, 16 East, 118. Removal of Joseph Bromwich, &c., from Leek Wootton to Milverton, quashed. Case:—In April, 1790, Michael, the father of the pauper, went from Leek Wootton with his family, of which the pauper was one, to reside with his (Michael's) father, Joseph Bromwich, at Milverton, who rented a tenement there at a rent of 6*l.* a year; but the same was of the yearly value of 10*l.* He had no lease thereof, but was tenant from year to year. He made a will, and dying in May following, devised his interest in this tenement to his son Michael, and appointed him his executor. Michael continued in possession and remained in this tenement many years, and paid the last rent due from his father as his executor. In 1791, and while he was in possession of the tenement, Michael applied to Leek Wootton for, and the parish officers there granted a certificate, by which they acknowledged him, his wife, Joseph (the pauper), and several other children by name, to be inhabitants, &c., of Wootton. Joseph was then about twelve years of age, and continued to reside at Milverton with his father on this tenement, five years after the death of Joseph Bromwich the elder, but never gained any settlement in his own right." Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "Where there are conflicting decisions upon the construction of a statute, the court must refer to that which is, and ought to be, the source of all such decisions, that is, the words of the statute itself. Some cases have been cited upon this occasion which are certainly of great weight, but which are in contradiction to the prior cases of Cold Ashton (p. 990) and Deddington, (p. 992); and therefore the court are obliged to refer to the fountain-head of all, the statute, to see which of them most corresponds with the words of it; and, upon the best consideration, I think that Cold Ashton and Deddington range more strictly within the words of 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, and 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11. The second of these statutes recites the former, which empowers the granting of such certificates to provide for the person mentioned in the certificate, with his or her family; and the legislature evidently meant that the certificate should be entire to protect the pater-familias and his family, whether named or not; and the naming of any of the family is mere matter of convenience, in order the more easily to identify them, but is not directed to be done by the legislature, nor are any powers taken away from or given to such children on account of their being named or not named in the certificate. The 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, says, that when any person coming to inhabit and reside in any parish, shall at the same time bring and deliver a certificate to the parish officers, thereby owning the person or persons mentioned in the certificate to be an inhabitant or inhabitants of the parish certifying; every such certificate shall oblige the parish to provide for the person mentioned in the certificate, together with his or her family, when chargeable. Now the person to be named in the certificate is the pater-familias, with his family, if he happen to have any; and then and not before, it shall be lawful for any such person and his or her children, &c., to be removed. I am aware that the word such is not in the enacting part of the clause; but I think it must, to complete the sense, be incorporated there, being in the antecedent part of the statute. The scope and object of the act was to protect the residence of a father or mother coming with their family into another parish, without casting a burthen upon it, or enabling them to gain a settlement there except in the two ways mentioned. There is nothing in the act which requires the nomination of the constituent parts of their family, and it is mere artificial reasoning which makes the distinction between such of the children as are, and such as are not, named in the certificate; a distinction which the act itself does not make. Then as the child, though named, was still to be considered only as a constituent part of the family, it brings it to the question, whether he was ousted of his derivative settlement from the father? Upon that point I think that the language of Lord Mansfield is founded in reason, and not opposed by the act that the children of all parents must have the settlement of the father until they acquire another for themselves. I think therefore that the pauper in this case continuing part of his father's family at the time, derived the settlement from him, and was not repelled from it by the circumstance of being named in the certificate." Grose, J., agreed. Le Blanc, J. "The sessions have sent this case for the opinion of the court upon the question, whether the pauper acquired a derivative settlement from his father? We must therefore take it that the son came into the certificated parish as part of his father's family, never having gained a settlement in his own right; though that was not stated in the case. Then coming into the parish as part of his father's family, under the certificate, with only a derivative settlement from his father, the question is, whether while he continued part of his father's family, a settlement gained by his father there will not also be communicated to the son; whether the settlement of the son will not also shift with that of the father? The cases of Testerton and Batheaston have not decided that the son coming into a parish, and continuing as part of his father's family under a certificate, is not capable of having his derivative settlement shift with his father's settlement; they only decided that a child named in the certificate stood in a different situation from that of a child who was not named; and that the settlement of a son so named, who had ceased to be part of the father's family, should not shift with that of his father. Now here the son had gained no settlement of his own at the time, but was living with the father as part of his family; and the cases of Cold Ashton and Deddington have decided that the settlement of a son so circumstanced, though named in the certificate, shall vary with the subsequent settlement of the father; and that if he comes into the parish as part of the father's family, with a certificate, his being named in it does not prevent the shifting of his settlement with his father's. This case therefore is distinguishable from those of Testerton and Batheaston." Bayley, J. "The true construction of the certificate act seems to be, that a pauper having an independent settlement of his own, and not merely a derivative settlement from the father, shall not, if named in the certificate, gain a settlement in the certificated parish, except in one or other of the ways permitted to the father himself; but if the child come into the parish under the certificate with his father, having only a derivative settlement from the father, what is there to prevent his settlement shifting with that of his father, as in other cases? The act does not say it shall not; and the cases say, that though named in the certificate, he shall be treated as part of his father's family, and his settlement shift

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

No distinction between children named and those not named.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

with his father's. It is said, indeed, that by the words of the act, the settlement of a certificated person can only be acquired in the certificated parish by two modes, and that this is not one of them. But I think the fallacy of the argument is this, that the children do not come into the parish under the certificate suo jure, but only as part of the father's family, and under his protection. The cases of Cold Ashton and Deddington have decided this point. And if this were not the true construction, this inconvenience would follow, that however young the children might be, coming with their father into the parish with a certificate naming them, if the father gained a new settlement there, he would be settled in one parish and the children in another." Order of sessions quashed.

If a child be intentionally left out of the certificate, it does not extend to that child, although he may not have become the head of a family.

Rex v. Storrington, 7 T. R. 133. Order of removal of James Ceary from Storrington to Patching quashed. Case:—Soon after 1778, the pauper's father, John Ceary, returned to Storrington with a certificate, acknowledging him, his wife, and two children, by name, to be inhabitants of Patching; but the pauper, then about fourteen years of age, was neither included in a previous order of removal to Patching, nor in the certificate; the parish officers of Storrington having declared, upon the examination of the father before the magistrates, that as the pauper got his own living they had nothing to do with him. The pauper, both before and after his father's removal, supported himself entirely by daily labour, and lodged and boarded with his father, for which he paid. About two years after his father's return with the certificate, and while he continued to reside under it, the pauper being then about sixteen years of age, hired himself for a year to Mr. Brown, of Storrington, with whom he had previously served as a day-labourer, and served the year out, after which he again worked for himself as a day-labourer, and lodged and boarded with his father on the same terms as before, until he married; he continued to reside at Storrington until he was removed by the present order. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "In deciding this case I wish not to disturb any of the authorities which have been cited; but my opinion in this case proceeds upon its own particular circumstances. Consider the situation of this family; the father, mother, and two of the younger children, who had been resident at Storrington, were removed by an order of justices to Patching, who gave them a certificate, and they returned to Storrington. Now, before and at the time when this certificate was obtained, the pauper had worked as a day-labourer, and received his wages for his own use; had lodged in his father's house, and paid a weekly sum for that accommodation. The form of the certificate too is material, it was granted to the father, mother, and the two younger children; but the pauper was not included either in the order of removal, or in the certificate. If, indeed, he were under the disability of gaining a settlement by 9 & 10 Will. III., to be sure this is not one of the modes allowed by that act. But the question is, whether he is to be considered a certificated person? Generally speaking, if a certificate be granted to the head of a family, it extends to all the members of that family; but it is competent to the parties themselves to narrow the extent of a certificate; and the certificate in question seems to have been specially framed for the purpose of excluding the pauper from the operation of it. It is not conceived in general terms, but, after mentioning the father and mother, it goes on to specify the two younger children, omitting the pauper, who was the eldest; and it is a known maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Therefore, on the particular circumstances of this case, I am of opinion that the pauper was not resident at Storrington under the certificate, and consequently was not disabled from gaining a settlement there by hiring and service; but I desire to have it distinctly understood that I do not, by this decision, mean to shake the authority of any of the former cases." Grose, J. "The question is, whether the pauper's residence in Storrington were, or were not, protected by this certificate; for if it were not, he is now settled in that parish. A certificate protects only three classes of persons:—those who are named in it; those who are part of the family of the certificated person when it is granted; and his children born in the certificated parish after that time.

The parties themselves may narrow the extent of the certificate.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Now the pauper certainly does not come within either the first or the third class: nor was he part of his father's family, as far as respects the certificate; for the certificate does not mention his name, though it does mention the names of the younger children; and the parish officers declared that he was not included in the former order of removal, which was the occasion of this certificate, because he was capable of gaining a livelihood for himself. All the parties interested considered the pauper to be sui juris, when the certificate was granted, and therefore it was not meant to include him; he was not a part of his father's family for the purposes of this certificate." Lawrence, J. "As the certificate would not be conclusive of the pauper's settlement, it seems to follow that he gained a settlement in Storrington."

10. Of the Effect of a Certificate.

10. Of the Effect of a Certificate.

Imperfect certificate not evidence as an admission.

Rex v. Wootton St. Lawrence, Burr. S. C. 581; 2 Bott, 713. The certificate had not been duly allowed, still it was argued that it amounted to an admission by the parish of the pauper's then settlement; but the court held that if it was not a certificate within the act, it did not conclude the parish, and if allowed as evidence and presumption would lead to great litigation.

A certificate, acknowledging the persons to be man and wife, is conclusive, though untrue.

New Windsor v. White Waltham, 1 Stra. 186. The pauper went with a certificate from White Waltham, owning him and a woman as husband and wife, into New Windsor, where they had six children. The man died, and the woman swearing they had never been married, the justices adjudged the children to be bastards, and settled where born. But by the court: "The certificate is conclusive as to White Waltham, and they are not to be admitted to dispute the validity of the marriage; and therefore the children must be sent to White Waltham."

Same point.

Rex v. Headcorn, Burr. S. C. 253; 2 Stra. 1233. Maidstone gave a certificate to Headcorn, acknowledging Richard Burden and Mary his wife, and their four children, to be settled at Maidstone. Afterwards it appeared that Mary was not his wife, but that he had a former wife then living. Maidstone acknowledged the settlement of the real wife, but not of Mary and her children; and pleaded, that it would be hard that they should be forced to take two wives and different children. But by the court: "The parish that certifies must take care for whom they certify; and the certificate is conclusive. The parish of Maidstone have by this certificate expressly acknowledged the said Mary to be their legal inhabitant; and the parish of Headcorn were thereupon bound to receive her. Therefore, the parish of Maidstone are obliged to provide for her and her children by Burden. Maidstone say they were deceived: but it was their own fault or folly if they were so; and they deceived Headcorn; therefore they ought to suffer, and not Headcorn."

Such a certificate will be conclusive, though the first husband was alive.

Rex v. Ullesthorpe, 8 T. R. 465. Case:—The mother of the pauper married a person who enlisted soon after as a soldier, and had not been heard of by her for forty years, and was never again seen by her. Hearing he was dead, she married the pauper's father; Earl Philton gave a certificate to Ullesthorpe, including the father, Mary his wife, and their family. The original husband came home after the second marriage. The removal was of the father, mother, and pauper from U. to E. P., and the order was quashed by the sessions, which order of sessions was quashed by the court without opposition. (And see Rex v. Lubbenham, post, p. 986.)

Where a certificate included, by mistake, a bastard as a legitimate child, it is conclusive.

Rex v. Tostock, 2 Bott, 739; Burr. S. C. 737. Case:—The pauper, Edward Parkinson, was born at Tostock of Elizabeth Parkinson, spinster, an inhabitant of Tostock; E. Jerman, who was settled in Islame, but resided in Tostock, was the putative father of the pauper; soon after the birth of the pauper, E. P. was married to Jerman; a short time after the marriage the parish officers of Tostock desired Jerman to get a certificate from Islame; whereupon Jerman applied to Islame for a certificate for himself, his wife, and his son, without informing them that the pauper was born a bastard; and they knew nothing of it: Islame granted a certificate, acknowledging Jerman, his wife, and Edward their son, to be inhabitants.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

A certificate is conclusive, although not delivered till after the removal.

Lord Mansfield. "This is the case of Rex v. Headcorn (p. 985), unless you can show that the pauper desiring a certificate as to the son, and that the pauper receiving the certificate, colluded with the parish officers of Tostock, in which case the justices should have found fraud: the certificate is conclusive."

Rex v. Buckingham, Cald. 64. Mary Swift, widow, was removed from Fringford to Buckingham. The pauper and her father jointly purchased a tenement for 14*l.* or 15*l.* in Buckingham: each paying a part of the purchase-money. It was surrendered to the father during his life, with the remainder to the pauper in fee: the father was admitted: in the father's lifetime the pauper married Robert Swift, who was settled at Fringford; after the father's death the pauper alone, according to the custom of the manor, was admitted, and she and her husband came to and resided upon the premises until his death: on the 14th June, 1776, Fringford granted a certificate to the pauper, which was delivered to her and kept in her possession, and not delivered to Buckingham till after the removal: the pauper, after the granting the certificate, and before the removal, resided upon the premises upwards of forty days. The certificate was offered as conclusive evidence against Fringford, so as to prevent their setting up any settlement obtained in Buckingham, previous to the granting thereof. But the sessions were of opinion that the certificate, under these circumstances, did not prevent the pauper gaining a settlement at Buckingham by such estate and residence, and confirmed the order. It was moved to quash these orders, on the ground that the detention of the certificate by the pauper till after her removal, granted by the parish removing, and of which they could not be ignorant, would not entitle them to avoid the effect of it when produced at the trial against them, but that they were thereby concluded. No cause being shown to the contrary, both orders were quashed.

A certificate is not conclusive, excepting between the two original parties.

When a question arises between the certifying parish and a third parish, the certifying parish may inquire into the truth of the facts stated in that certificate.

Rex v. Lubbenham, 4 T. R. 251. Order of removal of Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Hutchins, (then absent,) and H. her daughter, from Lubbenham to Oxenden, quashed. Case:—The pauper, Elizabeth, was married about seventeen years ago to J. Hutchins. Two years afterwards he was convicted of a robbery, and condemned, but reprieved on his enlisting as a soldier: he went abroad, and five years after, Elizabeth (hearing that he was dead) married Ponton at Lubbenham. About a twelvemonth after, Hutchins returned. Whilst Ponton and Elizabeth were residing at Threddingworth as man and wife, they went together to Lubbenham for a certificate to Threddingworth, who granted one, acknowledging Ponton and his wife (without mentioning her christian name) to be settled in Lubbenham, and they returned with it to Threddingworth. Ponton was never married to any other person. H. was born during their cohabitation at Lubbenham, and baptised as the daughter of J. Ponton and Elizabeth. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "In the first place, without considering the effect of the certificate, there is no doubt but that the second marriage was void, and consequently that the settlement of the pauper, Elizabeth, continued where her first husband was settled. But it is stated that she afterwards contracted a marriage de facto with a person whose settlement was at Lubbenham; and that she and her second husband applied to Lubbenham for a certificate to Threddingworth, which was accordingly granted. And therefore the question is, whether that certificate be conclusive against Lubbenham as to all the world, or only as between the two contracting parishes? Now estoppels in general are not to be favoured; they are to be extended only as far as the positive rules have gone; because the tendency of them is to prevent the investigation of the truth of the case. It is reasonable that a certificate, which is a kind of estoppel, should protect the parish which acts immediately on the faith of it; by the act of the officers of Lubbenham, the parish of Threddingworth were induced to receive the parties into their parish; but there is no necessity for extending the estoppel any farther. In all the cases, except that of Honiton v. St. Mary Axe (a) the question arose between the parish granting the certificate and the parish to which it was given. That is the only case which extends the doctrine further; and there it is said that a certificate is conclusive on the parish granting it as to all the world. But the reason given by Lord C. J. Parker, 'that as all other parties are bound to receive the pauper, so the parish that certifies is concluded as to all other parishes,' is not true; for other parishes are not bound to receive the pauper; there must be a particular parish in contemplation at the time of granting the certificate. Therefore, as the reason, on which that case was decided fails, we are delivered from the authority of it. Then what reason is there why the truth of the case should not be inquired into? No injury is thereby done to the third parish; no imposition is practised upon them; neither is there any hardship in it. It would indeed be a hardship on Threddingworth parish, who acted on the faith of the certificate, and who were bound to receive the parties mentioned in it, if the certificate were not conclusive in their favour against Lubbenham: but that reason does not extend to this parish. Therefore, on that ground, and on the principle that estoppels are not to be favoured, the parish of Lubbenham ought not to be precluded from inquiring into the truth of the case: and according to the truth of the case it appears that the pauper, Elizabeth, was settled at the place of her first husband's settlement. I am therefore of opinion that the order of sessions, as far as it respects the wife, should be quashed; but affirmed as to the child, because the fair conclusion from all the facts stated is, that she was a bastard." Ashurst, Buller, and Grose, Js., delivered their opinions to the same effect.

(a) This case is reported in Salk. 535, where a certificate was compared to the recognisance of a fine, and thought to be conclusive.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

A certificate is not binding against a subsequent settlement.

Harrison v. Lewis, 3 Salk. 253. A certificate promising to receive the persons whenever they become chargeable, is not conclusive against a settlement obtained afterwards; for though it be according to the agreement between the parishes, yet a private agreement in this respect shall not alter the law.

An apprentice to a certificated man being assigned to a master in another parish, may gain a settlement in the other parish by service there.

Rex v. Petham, 2 Stra. 1147. The pauper was bound apprentice to a certificate man in Tenterden, and after living with him there two years was by him assigned over to a parishioner of Lidd, with whom he inhabited and served for the remainder of the seven years. And the court were of opinion he had gained a settlement in Lidd; for the act had not made the binding void, but has only taken away one of the consequences of such binding for the sake of the certificated parish. It never intended to meddle with the case of a legal parishioner's apprentice, and when once there is an assignment to such an one, it is the same as if it had been an original binding: the true construction of the statute is, that in respect to the certificated parish, such binding or inhabitation shall give no settlement.

Settlement prevented only in the certified parish.

Rex v. Sherbourne, Burr. S. C. 182. It was observed by Mr. J. Denison, (to which all the court agreed,) "that a certificate provides for the security of that parish only into which the certificate person came to reside by virtue of such certificate; but doth not exclude a certificate person from gaining a settlement in another parish, in the same manner as any other person may do."

A certificated person is at large as to every parish but the certificated one.

Rex v. Silton, Burr. S. C. 269; 2 Bott, 59. The father and mother of John Milbourn, the pauper, came from Silton with a certificate to Wincanton. The pauper was afterwards born in Wincanton, and at twelve years of age was bound out by Silton apprentice to a tailor at Horsington for eight years, and served him there. By the court: "The pauper in this case was a person at large as to every other parish except Wincanton, to whom the certificate was delivered; and, therefore, he gained a settlement at Horsington."

So also in the case of hiring and service in a third parish.

Rex v. Horsley, Burr. S. C. 385; 2 Bott, 646. Horsley gave a certificate to A. Cope and his family, who went with it to Hollingsclough, where his son, the pauper, was born. The pauper, at twelve years of age, was hired and served for a year at Peck; and then returned to Hollingsclough. By the court; "The Rex v. Silton (supra) is in point, only with this

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

A certificate extends no further than to the place where first delivered.

immaterial difference, that there the son's settlement was gained by apprenticeship, and here by hiring and service."

Rex v. Bishopside, Burr. S. C. 381. Jonathan Joy came from Menwith with a certificate to Bishopside, where he resided for some years. Afterwards he purchased a freehold house for 10*l.* in Dacre cum Buerly, and went to inhabit there, to which place he carried his certificate and delivered it to the proper officer there. During his residence in Dacre, John Thackrey, the pauper, was bound to and served him as an apprentice in Dacre. By the court: "The delivery of the certificate was neither necessary nor proper; it ought to have been left at Bishopside. It is not directed to the officers of Dacre; besides, the master did not go to Dacre under the certificate, but as the owner of a freehold there, to which he had a right to go and inhabit in."

---

11. Certificate how determined.

11. Certificate how determined.

There are various ways in which the operation of a certificate may be determined: as

1. By the Acquisition of a Settlement in any mode in a third Parish.
2. By a Settlement in a Certificated Parish, gained—
   - First. By taking a Lease of a Tenement of the annual value of 10*l.*
   - Secondly. By Appointment to and Execution of a Public Annual Office.
   - Thirdly. By residence of Forty Days on Estate acquired by Devise, Descent, and semble, Voluntary Gift.
   - But not a Purchase in its ordinary sense.
3. By Abandonment of the Certificate.
4. By an Order of Removal.
5. By Certificate to another Parish.

"The parish who grants must get rid of the certificate, and if that can be done only by presumption, it remains good." "The onus probandi of a fresh settlement lies on the certifying parish." (Rex v. Warblington, p. 905.)

1. It may be determined by the Acquisition of a Settlement in a third Parish.

A certificate is discharged by gaining a settlement in another parish.

Rex v. Great Torrington, Burr. S. C. 753. By a certificate from Lancrass, Mary Bray came to Bideford, and inhabited there some years. Then she was bound apprentice by the parish of Lancrass, and lived under the indenture at Great Torrington for several years. After the expiration of the apprenticeship, she hired for a year, and served that year in Bideford. The question was, whether by this hiring and service she gained a settlement at Bideford? And it was adjudged (the point being given up) that, "having served an apprenticeship in a third parish, she was become quite clear of the certificate, and therefore was as much at liberty to gain a new settlement in Bideford as any uncertificated person could be."

The like adjudged the same term, in Rex v. Keynsham, Burr. S. C. 429.

2. Determination by gaining a Settlement in the Certificated Parish.

The legislature has imposed certain restraints on the acquisition of settlements in the certificated parish: but settlements may be gained,—

First. By really and bonâ fide taking a Lease of a Tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.* 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11.

A certificate avoided by completing settlement.

Rex v. Findern, Cald. 426. A pauper obtained a certificate before he had completed forty days' residence upon a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*; by completing such residence the certificate will be avoided, and he may gain a settlement.

Tenement under 13 & 14 Car. II. is a tenement under 9 & 10 Will. III. (a)

Rex v. Croft, 3 B. & Ald. 171. Removal from Croft to Stoney Stanton. Order discharged. Case:—The pauper was bound apprentice to and served Edward Stephens in Croft. The father of Stephens came into Croft under a certificate. After he came to Croft he occupied a house in Croft and

---

(a) The principal cases relating to this subject are collected under the head of Settlements by Renting a Tenement, pp. 748—766.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

some land in Marston, and in one year, while he was in the occupation of the said premises, he agisted three cows for two or three months in the fields of his landlord. No positive contract for the agistment was proved. The three cows were agisted for above forty days in the year, and the average value of the agistment, reckoned by the year, added to the value of the other tenements, made the whole above 10*l.* per annum; but, if the value of the agistment, taken only for the time that the cows were on the land, were to be added, it would make the whole less than 10*l.* Abbott, C. J., delivered the judgment: "Upon the authorities there can be no doubt that the facts here stated must be deemed to be a coming to settle upon a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, within the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12. The only doubt was, whether a difference of construction might prevail upon the certificate act, the 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, which is expressed in somewhat more precise terms, viz. 'boná fide take a lease of a tenement of the value of 10*l.*' It is obvious, however, that in construing these words, reference must be had to the former statute, to supply the word 'yearly', which is wanting in this statute; and in like manner the words of the second branch of this clause, 'execute some annual office in such parish, being legally placed in such office', have been construed, with reference to the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 6, to require a service of the office for an entire year (Rex v. Fittleworth, p. 936). No case has been found in which the 9 & 10 Will. III. has received a different construction from the 13 & 14 Car. II., as to the nature of the tenement or of the taking thereof. On the contrary, it has been decided, that a lease at will is a lease within the certificate act. (Stra. 502.) And in Rex v. Shenston (Burr. S. C. 474,) Lord Mansfield says, "the two acts are to be considered together, being in pari materia."

Lease at will is within the act. (See Rex v. St. Mary, Newington, p. 954.)

A person who comes into a parish and takes a lease, does not come in under the certificate, and therefore his servant may acquire a settlement. (Rex v. Macton, post.)

The servant of the lessee may acquire a settlement.

Secondly. By executing an Annual Public Office, being legally placed therein (See "Settlement by Office," p. 923.)

The words "legally placed therein" are not in the 3 & 4 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6.

Thirdly. By Estate. Estates acquired by operation of Law, &c. (See "Settlement by Estate.")

Devise of an estate pur autre vie discharges certificate. Quære, whether estate conveyed on mere voluntary consideration will discharge certificate.

Rex v. Cassington, 2 Bar. & Ad. 874. W. Whitley was removed from Handborough to Cassington. Order confirmed. Case:—Robert Whitley, about sixty years ago (before 1771), went to Handborough with a certificate, acknowledging that he, his wife and family were legally settled at Cassington. In 1771, Thomas Whitley, father of Robert, by will devised as follows:—"I give and bequeath to my son Robert Whitley the sum of 5*l.*, and my desire is that my son Robert shall live in that part of my house as he now doth, and at the same yearly rent which he now gives, as long as my son John shall enjoy or own the same: And all other my estate and stock whatsoever I stand possessed of at the time of my decease, I give to my beloved son John Whitley and his heirs for ever." It appeared by the court rolls of the manor of Handborough, that on the 18th of October, 1772, John Whitley, as son and devisee of Thomas Whitley, was duly admitted tenant to the house mentioned in his father's will. It further appeared from the same court rolls, that on the 25th of October, 1773, the said John Whitley surrendered the house to the use and behoof of Robert Whitley of Handborough and his heirs for ever, and at the court Robert Whitley did his fealty and was admitted tenant. It appeared also, that in the year 1773 it was not usual to state on the court rolls the considerations, whether valuable or otherwise, which were given for property surrendered; but they were mentioned in the copies of the court rolls delivered out. The copy was not produced in evidence in this case. Robert Whitley, the pauper's father, resided in the house more than forty days previous to such surrender, (and after his father's death and more than forty days after the surrender, and during this occupation the pauper was born. Lord Tenterden. "It seems to me that under the will the pauper's father took an estate pur autre vie, that is, for John's life, defeasible on his ceasing to enjoy and own the estate. No one could say that John would so cease during the whole of his life, so long therefore as John lived Robert might hold his estate. And it was conveyed to him by the will of his father, and not by his purchase or any act of his own." Parke, J. "Robert took an estate for life determinable on certain events. It is immaterial whether the estate be equitable or legal, the certificate is equally discharged. The Rex v. Great Driffield, (p. 991,) leaves all the cases untouched where the consideration is any other than pecuniary." Taunton, J., and Patteson, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

So if an estate be devised to the wife of a certificate man for her life.

Rex v. Shenstone, Burr. S. C. 468. The wife of Isaac Green, a certificate man, had an estate devised to her for life by her father; upon which she and her husband entered, and lived thereupon for above six months. The court: "Isaac hereby gained a settlement, notwithstanding the certificate."

Twenty years' possession of an estate by a certificated person gives him a settlement, and a child not emancipated during this time takes a derivative settlement.

Rex v. Cold Ashton, Burr. S. C. 444. In 1725 D. Harrison, Mary, his wife, and William, their son, went with a certificate from Woodchester to Cold Ashton. In 1728 W. Fido, the father of Mary, died intestate, leaving her and five other children, and being possessed of a tenement in Cold Ashton for the remainder of a term of eighty-two years, determinable on the death of himself and Mary. Upon the death of W. F., D. H. and Mary took possession of the tenement, and have occupied it ever since. No administration of the effects of W. F. was granted to any person. William lived with his parents in the tenement till 1748, when he married the pauper, Mary, and after his marriage he and his wife lived in Cold Ashton, separate from D. H., until the death of William in 1755. There were two questions: First, Whether D. H. acquired any settlement different from that to which he was entitled by the certificate? Second, Whether, if so, the son gained a derivative one? Lord Mansfield, C. J. "As to the first question, the case of a certificate man's gaining a settlement by residing on his own estate, is precisely the same as that of a common person not under a certificate, and arises by construction: for it is not within the words of the 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, which speaks only of serving an annual office, and renting 10*l.* a year. But residing on a man's own estate was considered as a stronger case than the casual property acquired by renting, because he has a settlement on the statute of the 13 & 14 Car. II., not by the words, but on the principle that he cannot be removed. This construction being made upon the reason, gives a greater latitude to the principle on which the construction is founded; and, therefore, a man who resides on his own estate, though of ever so small a value, is irremovable. And this holds equally in the case of a certificate person who gains a settlement, if, after he comes in by certificate, he is under such circumstances as by his property he cannot be removed. Whether in this case Daniel Harrison had such a property in this leasehold estate when he first entered upon it, is a question that need not now be determined. What I ground my opinion upon is, that he has acquired by the length of possession such a right as he was not removable from. For the statute of limitations doth not operate by way of barring the remedy, only, but it gives a right. He may bring an ejectment after twenty years' possession: and no person could have recovered against him, because such person was out of possession all the time. I except the case of landlord and tenant; for there the possession of the tenant is that of the landlord. This possession gives a title from which the parish officers could not remove him, nor the next of kin. In Rex v. Widworthy, (p. 865,) they had been satisfied their shares; and here, if they have not controverted it for such a length of time, it is to be supposed they have given up that right. If the case had turned upon the general question, whether the next of kin gains a settlement without administration, I should have desired time to consider Great difference between sole and several next of kin.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

of it, and the cases cited. There is a material difference between the party's being sole next of kin, and where in common with others, as in this case; for where one is the sole next of kin, he has the undoubted right of administration. In general it is of more consequence that the law with regard to the poor's settlements should be certain, than what the determination is as to the particular case in question. As to the second point, of a derivative settlement to the son, the word emancipation is a loose term in our law, especially in the matter of settlements, and it is used in the books without affixing any precise idea. Indeed, it is a term borrowed from another law, and not properly applicable to ours. The rule I take to be this: Children are entitled to the settlement of their father till they have acquired another. As to the distinction made at the bar, that the son shall not derive a new settlement from his father, because it was acquired by the father himself after the son had left him; this might be material were the fact so, but it is not stated here to-day that was the case, or that he left his father so as to change his derivative settlement. It is stated, that he lived twenty years with his father in this tenement, or, at least, very near it, and we cannot intend that he did not." Denison, J., was of the same opinion. (Forster, J., absent.) Wilmott, J. "As to the father, I do not think it material to say anything about the administration. Had the case turned upon that, it would have deserved consideration. If it be a matter already settled, I shall be for adhering to the rule stare decisis, which is a right rule, and more especially in the poor-law. Possession by wrong gives a title upon an ejectment against the legal owner. Here is a legal title, without administration: after such a length of possession, one would be inclined to presume as much as possible. Now, here it is possible that Daniel Harrison and his wife might have some grant or assignment from William Fido in his lifetime; or some other regular and rightful title to the possession which they took of this tenement. So that their possession might, possibly, have been a rightful one. It would be too nice to be computing days to see whether the son was with his father a day over or under the twenty years." And the order of sessions was affirmed.

Emancipation a loose term borrowed from the civil law.

No Settlement can be acquired by Purchase in its ordinary sense.

A certificated person cannot acquire a settlement by purchase in its ordinary sense.

Rex v. Great Driffield, 8 B. & C. 684. Order of removal of T. Harrison from Great Driffield to Garton quashed. Case:—The pauper's father was bound apprentice to Lyon, then residing in Great Driffield, under a certificate from Kirkburn. During the apprenticeship, Lyon bought a cottage at Great Driffield for more than 30*l.*, and the pauper served more than forty days after the purchase. Cur. adv. vult. Bayley, J., delivered the judgment. "The question was, whether the pauper's father gained a settlement in Great Driffield by serving as an apprentice to Lyon. It was contended that he did, because the certificate was discharged by the master's having acquired a settlement in Great Driffield by the purchase mentioned in the case; and if so, it was argued, that the subsequent service to the master, after he ceased to reside under the certificate, though by virtue of a binding made to him whilst so residing, was sufficient to confer a settlement on the apprentice. It is unnecessary to decide the latter question, if no settlement was gained by the master by the purchase which he made, and we are of opinion that no settlement was gained." [He then read the 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11, and said], "By the words of the statute no settlement can be gained by any act whatsoever; that is, as the context shows, by an act done by the pauper, other than the two which are pointed out by the act. The purchase of an estate by Lyon is an act done by him other than those mentioned; and according to the plain and ordinary sense of its words, he cannot gain a settlement in the parish. But we are bound to construe every statute according to the plain import of the words, unless we feel ourselves bound by an uniform course of well-considered decisions giving a different effect to the provisions of the statute; or unless it would lead to such consequences that we can safely say that the legislature must have had a different intention from that which the ordinary import of the words conveys. It will be found, however, that the decisions are few, and they are founded, in some degree, upon a mistaken supposition, that the point properly arose and was decided in the first reported case, that is, Burclear v. Eastwoodhay, in which it was held, that where a certificated pauper acquired an estate in right of his wife, his certificate was discharged; and it is stated in the judgment that he did not come to it by an act of his own, but by act of law. Other reasons, it is true, are assigned in the judgment, but it may be supported on that ground, for a settlement acquired by operation of law is not acquired by any act of the pauper, and therefore not prohibited by the 9 & 10 Will. III. In that case, Abraham Hacket came with a certificate into the parish of Eastwoodhay, and afterwards marries one Sarah Smith. Her father surrenders to her a copyhold estate of 20*s.* a year, and so the husband had it in her right. By the court: 'The 9 & 10 Will. III. is not an explanatory act, but new, and must therefore receive a liberal construction. The exceptions in the statute prove this case, being a case more reasonable than either that are there mentioned. If a certificate man by taking a tenement of 10*l.* a year gain a settlement, à fortiori, shall he who has an estate of his own, especially in this case, where he does not come to it by his own act, which might savour of fraud, but it is cast upon him by the operation of law. If he who serves a parish office gains a settlement by reason of his presumed ability, with greater reason shall he who has ability of his own, visible to all the world. It has been adjudged, that any other person, by descent or purchase of a freehold or copyhold, or by being entitled to a lease for years, gains a settlement, and the parliament never intended to put a certificate man in a worse condition than another person.' The court, therefore, seemed to think that a certificated man might gain a settlement by estate coming to him by purchase. But that was not a case of purchase; and where an act says in distinct terms that a settlement shall be gained by two modes only, we are not at liberty to say he may gain it by any other. There the estate came to the pauper by operation of law; by voluntary surrender of the copyhold to his wife. The next case was Ivinghoe v. Stonebridge. This case decided that an apprentice to a certificated man gained a settlement in 1709, because it was prior to 12 Anne, prohibiting such settlements. The opinion of the court, that the purchase of an estate made the certificate man a settled inhabitant, was expressly founded on Burclear v. Eastwoodhay, and was also extra-judicial. These two cases are not of sufficient weight to induce us to say, in the teeth of the words of the act, that a settlement may be gained by purchase, which is an act done. I come now to cases where the estates have been acquired by purchase for money. The first is Rex v. Stansfield, where a purchase for 47*l.*, paid by the pauper for a leasehold estate in the certificated parish, was held to confer a settlement. It is material to look at the language used by the court in their judgment. Lord C. J. Lee says, 'I do not know that the 9 & 10 Will. III. had been taken so strictly as the counsel suppose. A descent or devise, and, I believe, a purchase too, has been determined to gain a settlement upon the fact of a person not being removable from his own, and as not being included within the 13 & 14 Car. II.' The present question turns indeed upon the construction of the certificate act. Now, though this person was a certificate man, yet if he had come to this by act of law it would have gained him a settlement; and I believe it has been so determined in cases of purchase too. I think the same construction has been made on this act as upon 13 & 14 Car. II. In the following term, in Rex v. Deddington, it was held, that a purchase by a certificate man for 42*l.* gained a settlement expressly on the authority of Burclear v. Eastwoodhay. Lord Lee, C. J., says, 'The purchase was most plainly neither of the two cases mentioned in the act'; and he observes, 'a purchase was a matter of as much notoriety, or more, than the renting of a tenement of 10*l.* a year; that the construction ought to be agreeable to that put on 13 & 14 Car. II., under which any man is irremovable from a tenement of his own, and that if the construction was different, a person could not gain a settlement by a purchase of 5000*l.* per Burclear v. Eastwoodhay. 1 Stra. 163.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Ivinghoe v. Stonebridge. 1 Stra. 256.

Rex v. Stansfield, Burr. S. C. 205.

Rex v. Deddington. Burr. S. C. 120.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

annum.' In Rex v. Cold Ashton (p. 990), the estate came to the husband, not by his own act, but by operation of law, (a) and it should also be remembered that though a man may not be removable from his own, it does not follow that he will gain a settlement. In Rex v. Long Wittenham (2 Bott, 531), the estate came to the pauper by her husband's death." [His lordship then referred to the judgments of Ashhurst and Buller, Js., in Rex v. Warblington (p. 905), to show their impression as to the construction of 8 & 9 Will. III., and adds], "These two learned judges must have been satisfied that there was a material distinction between a case where the estate was obtained by purchase, and where it was obtained by a voluntary gift. We do not feel ourselves bound by these decisions to put a construction upon the act at variance with the plain import of the words. It is clear these cases proceeded upon a misapprehension of the precise point decided in Burclear v. Eastwoodhay. The other reasons assigned in giving their judgments do not appear to us satisfactory; they seem to us to turn upon the notoriety of the purchase. There is no question whether a certificated person would be removable during the time of his living in the parish and being the proprietor of an estate, but whether he acquired a settlement; and with respect to the similarity of construction to be put on this statute, as on the 13 & 14 Car. II., it is to be observed that the words are very different; and that looking at the recital in the latter statutes, which applies to poor persons going from one parish to another, and endeavouring to settle themselves where there was the best stock, and at the enactment which authorises the removal of such persons only as are mentioned in the recital, it is clear that it never meant to apply to persons who had estates in the parish in which they came to settle. We think also no mischief will follow from the construction which we put on the 9 & 10 Will. III., for though, on the one hand, a certificate man would gain no settlement by the purchase of a large estate; on the other, he would be disabled from burthening the certificate parish, by making a purchase of an estate for a very small consideration, which he might have done prior to the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 5. The other cases of settlements may be supported on the ground that the estate came by operation of law, as in Rex v. Cold Ashton, or by voluntary conveyance from another, as in Rex v. Upton (p. 971), which perhaps may be considered as an estate not acquired by any act done by the party. We are, therefore, of opinion that the 9 & 10 Will. III. prevents any settlement by reason of an estate acquired by the act of the pauper, by a purchase in the ordinary sense of that word; but it does not prevent the acquisition of a settlement by reason of an estate devolving on the pauper by operation of law, or acquired by purchase, in the technical sense of that word." Order of sessions quashed. (See the observation of Parke, J., in Rex v. Cassington, ante, 989.)

3. Determined by Abandonment of the Certificate.

Absence for seventeen years, and dying without returning to certificated parish, is an abandonment of it.

Rex v. Taunton, St. Mary Magdalen, Burr. S. C. Robert Bagg, grandfather of the pauper, came from St. James to St. Mary, Taunton, with a certificate, in 1702. He afterwards went back to St. James's, and there had a son, Robert, the father of the pauper. The pauper's father afterwards married, and lived in St. James's, apart from his father, and there the pauper was born. The grandfather died in St. James's. The pauper's father died, and the pauper was bound an apprentice by St. James's into St. Mary's, and there served his apprenticeship. And the court held, that the certificate was of no force at the time of the pauper's being put apprentice, but was then at an end. For in so long a course of time, and after such a desertion, we will conclude there was an end of it, and it ought to have been given up to St. James's. It is now of no more effect than if it had never been given. It was absolutely evaded and deserted; and the father and grandfather could not have gone to St. Mary's again without a new certificate. It is a good deal like the case of Rex v. Sudbury (p. 996).

(a) See also Rex v. Wivelingham, p. 874.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

If the person certified return to the certifying parish, and there have a son, and the son hire himself to a person in the certificated parish, and there marry and have a family, that family is not within the certificate.

Rex v. Frampton-upon-Severn, Doug. 418; Cald. 97. In 1751 Tretherne granted a certificate to Frampton, acknowledging Job Minett and wife to be settled at Tretherne. Under which certificate they lived in Frampton two or three years, when they voluntarily returned to Tretherne, and had afterwards a son, Samuel, born there. Job continued to live in Tretherne for seventeen or eighteen years, when, having a relation in Frampton dead, he went by himself (his wife being dead) to possess himself of the effects, and remained there about six months, when, being taken ill, he was by Tretherne recommended to Gloucester infirmary, and there died. Before he went to Frampton to take possession of his relation's effects, Samuel had been hired for a year, and served the same in Frampton, and so continued for several years until after his father died. Samuel, his wife and child, were the paupers removed from Frampton to Tretherne. It was urged, that in Rex v. Taunton (ante, p. 993), the extraordinary length of time during which the certificate had slept was considered as a waiver of it, and that a voluntary removal of a certificated person will not vacate a certificate, and this without any regard to any interval or length of time. It was also urged, that if a pauper can by length of time desert or annul a certificate, by analogy to the statute of limitations, twenty years at least ought to be required. Here, the certifying parish did not look upon the certificate as at an end, for they recommended the father to the Gloucester infirmary. Lord Mansfield said, "The principle has been long settled of abandonment by disuse, at least it is to be found in the Taunton case." He then [after adverting to the facts of the father returning for a special purpose, after an absence of seventeen years,] added, "The question is, whether the son went to Frampton under the faith of the certificate? Certainly not. Frampton had never heard of him. He goes there as an emancipated son, in his own right. It shall not be said that he came under a certificate abandoned by his father before he was born, and quo animo the pauper returns to the certificated parish must always be considered." Buller, J. "It does not appear that the court, in the case of Spotland (p. 1003 n.), meant to overturn that of Taunton. A mere going away, indeed, shall not avoid a certificate; but what absence shall have that effect is left open." Willes and Ashhurst, Js., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

An adult marrying and separating from his father, ceases to reside as part of the "family" of the father under the certificate.

Rex v. Heath, 5 T. R. 583. In 1794 the pauper was removed from Mansfield to Heath. Order confirmed. Case:—J. Smith, the grandfather of the pauper, resided at Mansfield, under a certificate, from 1743 to about sixteen or seventeen years ago, when he died. Two years after the certificate, the pauper's father, Richard Smith, was born. Richard continued to reside with his father at Mansfield, until he was twenty-four years of age. He then married, lived in a separate house at Mansfield, and has lived separate from his father ever since. He occupied some lands, but all under the value of 10*l.* He was rated for the land, and paid his rates. The Court thought this case came within Rex v. Darlington (p. 978), which had decided what was meant by "family." Here the pauper's father ceased to be a part of his father's family, when he married and lived separate from his father. He then became the head of a new family and acquired a settlement. Order of sessions quashed.

If a certificated person go to the certificating parish, and there be hired to different persons for a year respectively, and serve accordingly, and then return to her brother, who is still residing under the certificate, it is no desertion of the certificate.

Rex v. Keel, Cald. 144; 2 Bott, 605. Jane Peak was removed from Bedworth to Keel. Order confirmed. The pauper was born at Bedworth, where her father and mother resided under a certificate from Keel until their death; she remained there after their death until she was about seven years of age, with her brother (who was named in the certificate), and then voluntarily went to Keel, where she remained till she was fourteen, during which time she was maintained by Keel, and then she was hired for a year, and served the same, and also two or three others in Keel, when she voluntarily returned to her brother's house at Bedworth, and was afterwards hired to a person for a year, and served him at Bedworth. The question was, whether the pauper, after she returned to Bedworth, was to be considered as still under the certificate, or that under these circumstances it was to be considered as having been abandoned? Lord Mansfield, C. J., at first inclined to think that she returned independently and as sui juris, rather than to her old home and parish, and under the certificate. But Willes, J., thought that "the inquiry here must be, whether the certificate was functus officio? The fact is, that the pauper returns voluntarily to the house in which she had before resided under the certificate, which belonged to her brother, who was at that time resident there under the certificate: it certainly was not discharged as to him, and there do not appear to me to be circumstances in the case sufficient to warrant us in saying that it was so with respect to the pauper." Lord Mansfield. "I am satisfied. The voluntary return to the house of her brother, who was then resident under the certificate, had escaped me." Both orders affirmed. (a)

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

If the son of a certificated person leave him and go to the certificating parish, and there hire himself to and serve several persons, but gain no settlement there, and then return to the certificated person, it is no desertion of the certificate.

Rex v. Ingworth, 8 T. R. 339. Order of removal of S. Slaughter from Ingworth to Erpingham quashed. Case:—In 1781, the father of the pauper went with his wife and the pauper, as part of his family, to reside in Ingworth, under a certificate from Erpingham. In 1787 the pauper, then sixteen years old, let himself to J. Brettingham, of Erpingham, and served two years as a yearly servant. He then let himself to W. Clark, of Erpingham, and served him as a yearly servant for a year. He afterwards let himself from three days after Michaelmas following to M. Kemp, of Brickling, farmer, and completed his service. At the expiration of the year he returned to Ingworth, where his father still resided under the certificate, and lived in his father's house about a month, during which time he worked as a day-labourer at Brickling, and paid his father for his board. When he returned to Ingworth, he did not consider himself as going with a view to a certificate. At the expiration of the month he let himself for a year to B. N., of Ingworth, and lived in his service two years. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "Although the distinctions in some of the cases on settlements are very nice, whenever we find a case precisely similar to the case in question, we ought to be governed by it. Now it appears to me that Rex v. Keel (p. 994), is exactly like the present: there, indeed, Lord Mansfield at first doubted whether or not the pauper returned to the certificated parish under the certificate; but afterwards he was of opinion that the pauper had returned under the faith of the certificate. If the pauper in this case had gained a settlement in a third parish, the reasoning in support of this order could have applied; but here is no ground for presuming, as in Rex v. Newington (p. 996), that the parties had abandoned this certificate; for the pauper's father was resident at Ingworth under the certificate when the son returned to him." Le Blanc, J., mentioned Rex v. Collingbourne Ducis (p. 443), the principle of which he said applied to the present case. Order of sessions quashed.

Secus if he acquires a settlement there.

Rex v. Morley, p. 450. The son of a certificated person, not named in the certificate, upon the death of his father was bound apprentice in the certifying parish, where he served for some years, and then, with his master's consent, served the remainder of his time, till twenty-one, with a person in the certified parish, where his mother and family resided under the certificate; and afterwards he hired himself to the same person for a year, and served that and three successive years in the certified parish: Held, that he gained a settlement by such hiring and service. The authority of the Rex v. Ingworth, to its full extent is here denied, as it was observed that the court and counsel both overlooked the circumstance, that the pauper in Rex v. Ingworth must have been of age at the commencement of the second year's service under the last letting.

(a) In Rex v. Heath, Lord Kenyon remarked that "in Rex v. Keel, Lord Mansfield's first thoughts were best: he afterwards gave way to what was suggested, but it was generally thought he did so without sufficient grounds." Lord Tenterden. "I cannot agree to Rex v. Keel." Rex v. Bleasby, p. 439, where the name of J. Bayley is inserted by mistake in l. 19, instead of l. 28. J. Bayley's judgment begins with the words, "The cases relating to, &c."

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Quitting the certificated parish, without any intention of returning, discharges the certificate.

R. v. Newington, 1 T. R. 354. John Small was removed from Newington to Mersham. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper's father resided at Newington under a certificate from Mersham, when the pauper was born: the father removed with his family to Hoo, and stayed there two years; and from thence removed with his family to Strood, where he continued four years, when he died: about two years after the death of the father, his widow went to Newington to keep her uncle's house, with whom she continued until his death, and afterwards lived at Newington till she died; she had been relieved by Newington, having gained a settlement there after her husband's death: the pauper within a year after his father's death went to Newington and hired himself for a year, and served the same in Newington, and continued with the same master another year; and then was two years with the minister of Newington, and never gained a settlement elsewhere. Lord Mansfield, C. J. "It is admitted that there may exist a case in which a certificate shall be considered as functus officio. Then the court ought to draw a line; in doing which it will be material to consider what is the nature of a certificate. It seems to me that a certificate given by the parish from which the pauper goes to another parish, is an indemnity to that other parish from the consequences of permitting him to reside there; therefore it has done its office the moment that residence is permanently at an end. A temporary absence for a particular purpose will not discharge it; but when the pauper has left the certified parish for years, and neither party has had any reliance upon the certificate, then it has done its duty, and has no longer any operation. In the present case, the pauper had left the certified parish for six years, without any intention of returning, by which it is manifest that the certificate was discharged." The other judges gave their opinions to the same effect; and Buller, J., said, "That whenever a pauper returns to the certified parish again, they should require from him a new certificate." Order of sessions affirmed.

Secus by a temporary removal.

Same point.

In Rex v. St. Michael's, Coventry, 5 T. R. 526, the certificated man left the certificated parish, and returned to his own parish, together with all his family, and there took a house, and resided there for two years, during which time the pauper was born; at the end of two years he and his family returned to the certificated parish, after which he returned to his own parish, and made it his permanent residence; and the question was, whether this were a desertion of the certificate? Lord Kenyon, C. J., acknowledged the law to have been settled by Rex v. Newington (supra), that a voluntary removal from the certificated parish, where the residence there is permanently at an end, will put an end to a certificate. He said that he understood a temporary removal to be where the person goes from the certificated parish to make a visit elsewhere, or on occasional business, leaving his family behind him in that parish, as being the place of his domicile. On the ground therefore that the certificated man left the certificated parish, not for a temporary purpose only, but with a view of making the certificating parish the place of his permanent residence, he considered the certificate to have been discharged. The other judges agreed.

A temporary removal is where a person goes on a visit, or on occasional business, leaving his family behind him in that parish as his domicile.

4. Determined by Order of Removal.

Certificate discharged by an order removing the pauper to the certifying parish.

Rex v. Sudbury, Burr. S. C. 373. Thomas Bladen came by certificate from Sudbury with his wife and children to Uttoxeter. Thomas died there, and his wife and child John became chargeable, and were removed to Sudbury. About a year after, John was bound apprentice to T.B. of Uttoxeter, and served out his time there. Ryder, C. J. "The question is, whether the pauper is to be considered a certificate man now, since 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 11. We are all of opinion, that the removal of the pauper did restore him as fully as if there had been no certificate at all. The certificate was functus officio, after this order of removal to the parish which gave it. It can have its effect but once, and therefore after his removal back again it can have no further effect. The intention of the certificate is to secure the parish in case the pauper should be chargeable. Now this event did fall out, and they were accordingly removed. The law is so far from looking upon a certificate as continuing after an order of removal, that the pauper cannot return to the place from which he was removed without incurring a penalty. It is said, that the construction contended for would destroy the certificate. But it does not destroy it any otherwise than by satisfying it. And there is no absurdity in its being satisfied as to one, and remaining in force as to another. In Sowerby v. Halifax the pauper was not removed by any order." Order quashed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Rex v. Bridham, Cald. 500; 4 Doug. 245. George Eaurcher was removed from Bridham to Walberton. Order quashed. Case:—The father of the pauper, about thirty years ago, went by certificate from Bridham to Walberton, where the pauper was born three or four years after. His father went to several other parishes after, and to each with a certificate from Bridham. From one of these an order of removal was made for him and his five children (he having only five) to Bridham. The pauper, being then in employ, was not removed with his father, but went to him in Bridham two or three days afterwards, and there lived six months as part of his family, and then being about sixteen years of age, he bound himself to E.N. at Walberton, and served him there the greater part of the time, and particularly the two last months. Lord Mansfield. "I think the original certificate was discharged by the following certificate; but if that is doubtful, I am clearly of opinion it was discharged by the order of removal." Order of sessions quashed.

Same point.

An order of removal (unappealed against) to a certificated parish from a third parish is conclusive against the certificated parish, on a removal to the certifying parish. (Rex v. Ealing, 4 Doug. 12.)

So also by an order of removal unappealed against to the certified parish.

5. Determined by a Certificate to another Parish.

Rex v. St. Peter, Derby, 1 T. R. 218. Order of removal of Benjamin Pratt, &c. from St. Peter, Derby, to Chaddesden, quashed. Case:—The pauper, on the 5th November, 1751, was bound an apprentice for seven years to Joseph Pinn, of All Saints, in Derby, to which place Pinn had a certificate from Smalley; the pauper served his master in All Saints about five years and a half; and the master and his family, at Lady-day, 1757, removed to Chaddesden, where he resided till 14th January, 1758, when Smalley granted Pinn, the master, a certificate. Between Lady-day, 1757, and 14th January, 1758, the pauper served his master upwards of forty days in Chaddesden. Pinn never returned to All Saints, but continued at Chaddesden under the certificate; but the pauper returned to All Saints in the summer of 1758, and served his master there upwards of forty days after Smalley had granted the certificate to Chaddesden. The only question was, whether the second certificate to Chaddesden discharged the former one to All Saints, they having both been given by Smalley? The court being of opinion that this question was determined by Rex v. Birdham, supra, affirmed the order of sessions.

A second certificate to a pauper discharges a former one given by the same parish.

---

12. Removal of Certificated Persons.

12. Removal of Certificated Persons.

In Rex v. Framlingham, Burr. S. C. 748, Aston, J., said, "If several persons reside in a parish under the same certificate, the asking relief by a single one of them would not render the rest removable. The certificate act says that the parish who gives the certificate shall receive and provide for the person mentioned in it, together with his family, whenever he or they shall happen to become chargeable or ask relief; and then, and not before, it shall be lawful for any such person, and his or her children, to be removed to the parish from whence such certificate was brought. And it must be adjudged by the justices that such person has actually become chargeable before they can legally make an order of removal. Now how can the justices be authorised to make such an adjudication upon a person who in fact is not become chargeable, nor ever has asked relief?" (See also Rex v. Kingswood, Burr. S. C. 392, and Rex v. Haydon, 2 Bott, 717.)

Of a certified family, those only can be removed back that ask relief.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

The chargeability of the son does not render the father removable.

Rex v. St. Mary, Westport, 3 T. R. 44. T. P. and family were removed from B. to W. They went to reside in B. under a certificate from W., where the eldest son afterwards married, and lived apart in the same parish, and during sickness received (as did his infant son after his death) relief from the parish of B., with the knowledge of T. P., who had never himself, or any part of his family residing with him, asked relief. It was contended that they were irremovable because not chargeable. Lord Kenyon. "Although this certificate is not in the usual form, yet as far as it relates to the question now before us, it must be considered as a common certificate: and the single question is, whether these persons who have been removed can, in the fair sense of the words, be said to have been actually chargeable to the parish? Now it is negatived by the case that any of these parties receive relief in person. But it is contended that they were virtually relieved, because the son and the grandson both received relief. But it must be observed, that at that time they were not members of the family of the pater-familias now removed; they lived apart from him, and formed another family of themselves. Then it has been said that a burthen has been thrown upon the parish by the relief of the son and grandson, and therefore that the grandfather was virtually chargeable, because the 43 Eliz. requires fathers and grandfathers to support their children and grandchildren. But that proposition hastens to a conclusion too soon; for by that statute they are not in all events to maintain their children, &c., but only when they are of sufficient ability. Now the justices are the proper judges of that ability; and the grandfathers, &c., are only to be called upon by an order of justices."

A pauper may be removed from a parish where he is residing under a certificate, to a parish in which he gained a settlement before the granting of the certificate.

Rex v. St. Martin at Oak, 16 East, 303. The pauper, T. Gardener, in 1775, obtained a settlement in Felthorpe, and subsequently a settlement in Drayton. In 1787 Felthorpe granted a certificate to the parish of St. Martin at Oak, where the pauper continued to reside under this certificate, occasionally receiving relief from Felthorpe, until 1812, when he was by order removed to Felthorpe; from this order Felthorpe entered an appeal. The parish of St. Martin then withdrew the order, and the pauper was removed to Drayton. The question was, whether St. Martin at Oak was not bound to remove him to Felthorpe, the certifying parish under the 8 & 9 Will. III.? But the court were clearly of opinion that the act was not restrictive of the power of removal from the parish to which the certificate is granted, to any other parish, but only conclusive upon the certifying parish, as between that and the parish to which the certificate is granted. This was considered to be the object of the act in Rex v. Lubbenham (ante, 986), and in a prior case of Rex v. St. Giles (2 Salk. 530). All the authorities agree that it signifies nothing when the certificate was granted; it is only an estoppel upon the parish granting it as between the two parishes. Order of sessions quashed.

---

13. Of Apprenticeship under Certificate.

13. Of Apprenticeship and Service to Persons residing under a Certificate.

If any person who, upon or after 24th June, 1713, shall be bound by indenture, or be a hired servant to any person who did come into or shall reside in any parish under a certificate, such person shall not thereby gain a settlement. 12 Anne, st. 1, c. 10, s. 2 (ante).

Apprentice of an uncertified man serving a certificate man, can gain no settlement thereby in the certificated parish.

Romsey v. St. Michael's, Southampton, Burr. S. C. 640. S. Bishop was bound an apprentice to W. Kearley, of All Saints, for four years, and served him there for three years. It was then agreed between them and S. Dagnell, residing in Romsey under a certificate from St. Giles's in Reading, that Bishop should work with Dagnell the remainder of his apprenticeship, for which Kearley was to receive 2*s.* a week. Bishop accordingly served him and resided with him in Romsey. The question was, whether the apprentice gained a settlement by this service in Romsey? Lord Mansfield, C. J. "This question is plainer than any argument can make it. The end and (a) See also several cases, ante, title, Emancipation, pp. 442, 443.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

intention of the act was to prevent certificated persons from bringing a charge upon the parishes into which they came by certificate. How then can it be imagined that another man's apprentice should gain a settlement by serving him in that parish, when his own apprentice is made incapable of doing so?" And the court were unanimously of opinion that the apprentice gained no settlement in Romsey.

Nor an apprentice to a certificate man serving an uncertificated person in the same parish.

Rex v. Hinckley, 4 T. R. 371. The pauper, J. Farborough, at nine years old was bound a parish apprentice to D. Palmer, of Hinckley, who was residing there under a certificate from Copson. The pauper, after serving part of his time with Palmer, was assigned by him to J. Hurst, a parishioner of Hinckley, under an agreement that Hurst was to pay 1*s.* a week to Palmer, and which was paid accordingly. He served Hurst in Hinckley above forty days before he left him. Lord Kenyon, C. J., delivered the judgment: "The question is, whether any settlement was obtained by the apprentice by his service under his second master, who was a parishioner of Hinckley, in which parish his first master, by whom he was assigned, had been certificated to? The first impression made upon my mind was, that as the last forty days of the apprenticeship was served under a person who was not under the disability of the certificate, such service gained a settlement; but upon looking more fully into the authorities cited, on which I had formed my first opinion, and adverting more particularly to the words of the statute of Anne, I am disposed to think that a settlement was not acquired by the service under the indenture of the second master in Hinckley, although he were not residing there under the certificate. And that opinion which we have formed, proceeds principally on the words of the statute of Anne, and the view with which it was passed. By the general tenor of the certificate act, persons settled in one parish, bringing a certificate with them into another, have a right to remain there until they become chargeable; and the parish to which such certificate is granted cannot refuse to receive them. But the mischief was, that though the certificated persons themselves could not gain a settlement in that parish, yet they were the means of conferring settlements on others, by taking servants and apprentices, which was thought to be a great hardship on those parishes who were bound to receive them under the certificate. Therefore, to provide against that inconvenience, the 12 Anne, c. 18, s. 2, was passed. There has never been any precise determination on this point; and therefore we think it better to abide by the words of the act, from whence the intention of the legislature can best be collected; and the act having expressly provided that persons bound apprentices to certificated men shall not by virtue of such apprenticeship, indenture, or binding, gain a settlement in such parish, it is necessary that the binding should be such as would be capable of conferring a settlement by service under the original master in that place, otherwise no settlement can be gained there by virtue thereof; for the legislature intended that no act whatever of this sort done by a certificated man should help to bind the parish. As to Rex v. Petham (p. 987), where it was held, that the apprentice of a master, certificated to Tenterden, might gain a settlement under an assignment to a second master residing at Lidd, which was a third parish; that does not govern the present, because it does not interfere with the policy of the statute of Anne; for the parish of Lidd had not received the original master by force of the certificate, and therefore had no right to avail themselves of the provisions of that statute, which was intended for the protection of the certificated parish. But here the words of the statute cover Hinckley in the broadest manner, to prevent any burthen coming on that parish on account of their obligation to receive the certificated person. The other case principally relied on (of Romsey parish) has no application to the present question; for though it was contended generally at the bar, that the statute of Anne was confined to apprentices bound by indentures to certificated masters, and claiming settlements by serving under such original masters, yet the court by no means adopted that argument, but decided rather on the ground that no settlement could be gained by the apprentice, through the medium of a certificated person in that parish. Therefore, as there has been heretofore no determination on this point, as the statute of Anne was passed for the express protection of the certificated parish, and as the words of the act are very particular and positive in favour of that parish, we see no reason to restrain the meaning of them to a service with the original master." Both orders quashed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Under the 33 Geo. III. c. 54, s. 24, (similar to 12 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 2,) an apprentice bound to a person residing in a parish under a certificate cannot gain a settlement by such apprenticeship, though the certificate be subsequently discharged, and he afterwards continue to serve his master in the parish for forty days.

The binding to confer a settlement, must be such as would at the time be effectual for that purpose.

Rex v. Leeds, 1 Nev. & M. 650; 4 B. & Ad. 248. N. Bowles was removed from Horton to Leeds. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper's father was settled in Leeds. In 1809, the pauper being about thirteen years of age, was bound apprentice by his father for seven years to Joseph Fox, shoemaker, who was then residing in Horton under a certificate from a Friendly Society. Four years after the indenture was made, Fox took a farm for a year in Horton at 40*l.*, which he occupied for the year. The pauper continued to serve his master for seven years from the date of the indenture. Denman, C. J. "The question was, whether the pauper had gained a settlement in Horton. The pauper was bound apprentice to a master who was at that time residing at Horton under a certificate from a friendly society: but before the term of apprenticeship expired, the master gained a settlement in Horton by renting a tenement, and the pauper served him under the indenture of apprenticeship more than forty days after that time. The question turns upon the proper construction of the 33 Geo. III. c. 54, s. 24, by which it is enacted, 'that no person who shall be an apprentice bound by indenture to any person who did come into or shall reside in any parish, township, or place under the authority of this act, and not afterwards having gained a legal settlement in such parish, township or place, shall gain or be adjudged to have any settlement in such parish, township or place, by reason of such apprenticeship or binding; but all such apprentices shall have their settlements in such parish, township or place, as if they had not been bound, any act or acts of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding.' The words are copied nearly verbatim from 12 Anne, stat. 1, c. 18, s. 2, which act has received a judicial construction in Rex v. Hinckley (ante, p. 999), by which case we think we are bound. That case differs from the present in one circumstance only, viz., that in that case the pauper having been bound to a certificated man, was afterwards assigned to another person in the same parish, who was under no disability, whereas here the pauper continued with the original master after his certificate was discharged. But the reasons given by Lord Kenyon in delivering the judgment of the court, which was evidently much considered, apply to the present case as much as to that; and we cannot decide in this case that the pauper gained a settlement without overruling Rex v. Hinckley. The words of the statute are plain, that an apprentice bound to a man who did come into or shall reside in a parish under a certificate, and not afterwards having gained a settlement, shall not by such apprenticeship or binding gain a settlement in that parish, but shall be as if he had not been bound. Now the words 'not afterwards having gained a settlement', are grammatically to be referred to the preceding words 'come into or reside', and manifestly point to the situation of the master at the time of binding. If the master be residing under the certificate at the time of the binding, no settlement can by possibility be acquired by the apprentice in the certificated parish, notwithstanding a subsequent removal of the master's disability; but it is otherwise if the binding is after the discharge of the certificate, where the master has gained a settlement in the certificated parish. Lord Kenyon says, 'It is necessary that the binding should be such as would be capable of conferring a settlement by service under the original master in that place, otherwise no settlement can be gained there by virtue thereof, for the legislature intended that no act whatever of this sort done by a certificated man should help to bind the parish'. Here according to this opinion the binding was not, at the time it took place, such as would be capable of conferring a settlement, nor could any subsequent circumstances make the binding more efficacious, whatever effect they might have on the service; the consequence is, that the pauper remained as if he had not been bound, and gained no settlement at Horton. The case of Ivinghoe v. Stonebridge (p. 992), was pressed in argument; but in that case the service expired before the passing of the statute of Anne, and besides the original binding was not to a certificated person, and was free from all objection. The Rex v. St. Peter's, Derby (ante, p. 997), was also pressed. It is sufficient to say, that in that case the present question was not presented to the court, but it was decided without argument on the sole point whether one certificate was discharged by the granting of another, and the case was also prior to Rex v. Hinckley. Neither does our opinion militate against the Rex v. Nacton (p. 763), decided in Easter term last, for that case proceeded entirely on the ground that the master never did reside under the certificate, but came into the parish in a condition to obtain a settlement. Upon the whole, we are of opinion that the Rex v. Hinckley must govern the present decision, and that the order of sessions must be affirmed."

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

A settlement by apprenticeship can be gained by a party who is one of the family of the certificated person, only by a binding and inhabitation after he is sui juris.

Rex v. Manningtree, 6 M. & Sel. 214. Order of removal of W. Finch from Manningtree to Culphoe quashed. Case :—The pauper was born in Manningtree, where his parents were residing under a certificate from Culphoe. When he was nineteen years of age and upwards, he was duly bound apprentice to R. Hobson, of Mistley, for three years, to serve on board his vessel engaged in the coasting trade from Mistley to London. He served his master for two years and then ran away, the vessel then being at Mistley. Eight months previous to this he became twenty-one, during which eight months he slept at his father's in Manningtree for more than forty nights, with his master's consent, his master having no room for him. He slept at his father's the night before he ran away. Whenever the vessel was at Mistley the pauper uniformly slept at his father's. No evidence was offered of a settlement gained by the pauper in any other parish. He was not married, nor had his father done any act to discharge the certificate. The sessions thought a settlement had been gained in Manningtree. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "It has occurred to this court, upon reference to the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, which requires a binding as well as inhabitation, in order to confer a settlement, for the words are, 'such binding and inhabitation,' that in a case like the present, where the pauper is to be withdrawn from the effect of a certificate, and placed in a condition to acquire a settlement in the certificated parish, by some act clearly indicative of his being sui juris, the binding must be for this purpose after he has attained his full age. It is plain the binding here was before he was of age; and that seems to make an end of the question." Bayley, J. "It is clear, I think, that a settlement could not be gained in Manningtree by this pauper by means of a binding and service there whilst he was under age. A settlement in that parish could only be acquired by him after he became sui juris; and as it regards a settlement by apprenticeship, the act of binding as well as inhabitancy ought to be one entire act after he was of age, and not an act in part commencing during his nonage. The binding therefore ought to have been after he was twenty-one. In this lies the distinction between this case and Rex v. Morley (p. 450), because a hiring and service concurred there after the pauper was of age. This decision will not militate with former cases. The court does not say that where a settlement in the certificated parish is not in question this doctrine will apply; if the question here were upon the effect of this binding coupled with a service in a third parish, the court does not pronounce that the pauper would not have acquired a settlement there. For instance, let the binding be in A., the service in B., and let the apprentice sleep in C., in that case the settlement would be in C.; yet if C. be the certificated parish, then, unless the binding and sleeping be entire after the pauper be of age, he does not acquire a settlement in the parish C. This, I apprehend, is the distinction on which the court means to decide the case." Holroyd, J. "The son of a certificated person included in the certificate as part of his family, can only gain a settlement in the certificated parish when he is sui juris. Under 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, two things are requisite to confer a settlement by apprenticeship, viz., binding and inhabitancy. By analogy to that statute, when the question regards a settlement in the certificated parish, both these must concur after the party is of full age, so as to make an act sui juris. If the apprentice had been bound when he was of age, and had served afterwards, Rex v. Morley would have been in point." Order of sessions quashed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

Son of a pauper living in a parish under a certificate will not gain a settlement there by apprenticeship, unless both the binding and inhabiting take place after he is of age.

Rex v. Queenborough, 2 Bar. & Adol. 219. J. Webb was removed from Milton to Queenborough. Order confirmed. Case:—In 1775 the parish of Queenborough granted a certificate for Robert Webb, the pauper's grandfather, and several individuals of his family by name, to the parish of Milton, under which certificate William, one of the persons named, the father of the pauper, has continually from that time hitherto resided in Milton. On the 10th of July, 1810, the pauper, then being about eleven years of age and residing as part of his father's family under the certificate, was bound without any premium, an apprentice to his father's brother, Daniel Webb, an inhabitant of Milton, as a dredgerman, for ten years. His master covenanted in the indentures to find him in board, lodging and clothing, and to instruct him in the business of a dredgerman, and he continued to serve under the indenture until January, 1818, when his master and his family became chargeable to Milton. The master having originally resided under the certificate, and not being then supposed to have acquired a settlement in Milton, was with his family removed to Queenborough, but on arriving there and an explanation taking place, this order was abandoned. The pauper was afterwards, by another order of removal bearing date the 5th of February, 1818, removed to Queenborough, which parish acquiesced in his removal, and received him as their parishioner. The pauper stayed at Queenborough about a week, and then returned to Milton to the said D. Webb, and continued with him there under circumstances which amounted to a service and residence of forty days under the indenture subsequently to his return. He never gained a settlement in any other parish. Lord Tenterden. "The binding in this case having been before the pauper attained his full age, is not distinguishable from that in Rex v. Manningtree (p. 1001), where it was held no settlement was gained in the certificated parish. That case must govern our decision in the present instance, unless we can say that a binding which was not available at the time it was made, can be rendered so by matter ex post facto. I cannot think that any subsequent act of the parish can have the retrospective effect of making that binding effectual by relation which was not so at the time when it was entered into. The safest course is to adhere to the decision in Rex v. Manningtree." Littledale, J. "No subsequent act of the certifying parish will make the binding valid for the purpose of conferring a settlement in the certificated parish, which was not so at the time when it was made." Parke and Patteson, Js., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

Apprentice bound and serving twenty-two days before the execution of a certificate, gains no settlement, though he continues three years after.

St. Cuthbert's v. Westbury, Burr. S. C. 470. A person was bound apprentice to a man residing at Westbury, but whose settlement was at Harptree, a neighbouring parish. After the apprentice had served twenty-two days, the master obtained a certificate from Harptree, and delivered it to the overseers at Westbury; and the apprentice served there further with his master for three years. The question was, "whether the apprentice hereby gained a settlement in Westbury?" By the court: "Before the act, the serving under an apprenticeship to a certificated man for forty days in the parish where the master lived, would have gained a settlement to the apprentice. But the act says, that if any person shall be bound apprentice by indenture to any person residing under a certificate, he shall not thereby gain a settlement. Now here is no service for forty days under an apprenticeship to a master who did not reside in this parish under a certificate; therefore the apprentice in this parish did not gain a settlement. But it would have been otherwise if he had served forty days before his master became certificated."

Apprentice to a man who had a certificate, but which was not

Rex v. Wensley, 5 T. R. 154. The pauper was bound apprentice to R. Hallam, of Chesterfield, with whom he continued two years. Before the pauper was bound to Hallam, the overseer of Chesterfield told Hallam he must procure a certificate or they would remove him; he accordingly before such binding of the pauper procured a certificate from Chaddesden, directed to Chesterfield, but nothing further passed between Hallam and the overseers of Chesterfield respecting the certificate, after their first requisition to him to procure one; he therefore not being again called upon, did not deliver the certificate to the overseers of Chesterfield, and it remained in his hands without mention or further notice during the whole time that the pauper served him as his apprentice at Chesterfield; but some time after the pauper left Hallam the certificate was delivered by Hallam to the overseers of Chesterfield. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "We cannot depart from the express and positive words of the act, which are decisive of this question. In the construction of some statutes, the courts have thought, from considering the context and the words of it, that some particular words are merely directory; but there is nothing in this statute to show that the words commented upon should be construed to be directory only. The statute says expressly that 'if any person shall come into any parish, &c., he shall at the same time procure, bring, and deliver to the churchwardens, &c., of the parish where such person shall come to inhabit, a certificate, &c.; the act therefore requires a delivery at the time when the pauper goes into the certificated parish; and it is essential to the interest of that parish that it should be delivered, as the withholding it from them for a time may be the means of introducing frauds. Rex v. Buckingham (p. 986), only decided, that a certificate, though not delivered, was an acknowledgment by the parish granting it, that the pauper was settled with them when it was given, but it did not determine that it prevented the pauper gaining a settlement in the certificated parish after it was granted. Both orders quashed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

delivered till after the apprenticeship, may gain a settlement by such apprenticeship.

Rex v. Rustington, 6 M. & Sel. 396. Order of removal of J. Mitchiner from Newhaven to Rustington confirmed. Case:—The pauper was included by name in a certificate given in 1763 by Rustington to Newhaven. While residing under it he was bound apprentice to a lighterman in Newhaven, and served the seven years. During the greater part of the apprenticeship, and on the last night of it, the pauper slept at Newhaven; but in the course of his master's employment he went up and down the Ouse to Lewes in his master's barges. He was frequently detained at Lewes two or three days together, but not more at any one time; and, when so detained, he slept either at an inn in St. Thomas à Becket, by the cliffs near Lewes, or on board in his master's barge, while it lay in the same parish. He slept in that parish more than forty nights in the seven years, but not forty nights in any one year. (a) Lord Ellenborough. "Had it not been for the certificate, the settlement would have been at Newhaven, because that is the parish where the pauper slept the last night of his service. The certificate prevents this; but why is that to place a third parish in a worse situation? There was nothing like a permanent residence in St. Thomas à Becket to constitute an abandonment of the certificate." Bayley, J. "The law on this branch of the settlement is, that an apprentice is settled in the parish where he sleeps the last night of his apprenticeship, if he has slept there altogether during the year for forty nights. According to that law the pauper would have been settled in Newhaven were it not for the certificate. How then is the certificate, which is in the nature of a bargain between two parishes, to vary the case as it regards a third parish, and in the present instance to throw a charge on St. Thomas à Becket, which, otherwise, they would not have to bear? In Rex v. Great Torrington (p. 988), the certificate was completely discharged by a settlement gained in another parish by apprenticeship. But when was this certificate discharged?" Abbott, J. "The Rex v. Spotland (b) certainly gives colour to the argument of to-day, which

An apprentice resided generally, and the last night, in the certificated parish, but he also resided more than forty days in L.: Held, he gained no settlement in L.

(a) Residence for forty days during the term would have been sufficient, Rex v. Aldstone, (ante, 684).

(b) Rex v. Spotland, Burr. S. C. 527. The pauper, John Hamer, was bound apprentice to a certificated man at Castleton, and after some years removed to Spotland, where he served him forty days, and then married; and till the expiration of the apprenticeship, which was upwards of half a year, the apprentice worked in the daytime with his master in Spotland, but would maintain that a settlement was acquired in St. Thomas à Becket, for the two cases are in circumstances very similar. But I cannot help thinking that the court there were under some misapprehension of the terms of the statute, for it also says, 'that the apprentice shall have his settlement in such parish, as if he had not been bound apprentice to the certificated person.'" Holroyd, J. "The argument would place a third parish in a worse situation than if a certificate had not existed." Order confirmed.

1. Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate.

---

12. Of Settlement by Acknowledgment, viz. by Relief.

12. Of Settlement by Acknowledgment; viz. by Relief.

It is a presumption of law, that a parish will not extend relief to a pauper, at least when out of such parish, unless it is under an obligation to do so, by the pauper being settled in such parish. Wherever, therefore, such relief has been afforded, it has been considered to be an acknowledgment that the pauper is settled in that parish. Whether the parish institutes any inquiry as to the settlement at the time, or has the means of ascertaining the fact, is not very material, if the relief be given in a manner and under circumstances which fairly lead to the conclusion that it was given because it was felt and believed that the pauper was settled in such parish. At the same time the parish is not thereby absolutely precluded and estopped from disputing the settlement, as the fact of giving relief only shows the opinion of the parish that the pauper was settled with them. But relief given to a pauper resident in the parish does not afford primâ facie evidence that he is settled there. It is no evidence whatever against the parish (Rex v. Coleorton, p. 1005; Rex v. Edwinstowe, post, p. 1008).

The bare fact of receiving relief while in a parish is no proof of settlement in that parish.

Rex v. Chadderton, 2 East, 27. Removal of John Buckley from Little Bolton to Chadderton confirmed. Case:—The pauper, when he buried his first wife, applied to, and received relief from, the overseers of Chadderton, and the pauper's mother being with child of a bastard, some few years after his father's death, went from another township to Chadderton to lie in there, and "as the pauper had heard from his mother," who has been dead some years, she was relieved there by Chadderton. This hearsay evidence was objected to, but received. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "The hearsay from the pauper's mother is no evidence at all of any fact, and then the only fact applicable to the settlement in C. is, that when the pauper buried his first wife he received relief there from the overseers: but the bare fact of his receiving such relief is no evidence of a settlement, as they might have been relieved as casual poor. If the paupers were in want of relief while they were in C. the overseers were bound to give it, whether the paupers were settled there or elsewhere; and by the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, they could not have been removed till they were actually chargeable." Case remitted.

Hearsay no evidence of the fact.

Not even when relief was given many times.

Rex v. Chatham, 8 East, 498. Removal of Sally Burgoyne, widow, from Ashford to Chatham, confirmed. Case:—The pauper was married to Robert Burgoyne in Clerkenwell. A considerable time after their marriage her husband went to live at Chatham. Her husband more than once lodged with his wife at Castleton. By the court: "The master, who was a certificated man at Castleton, gained no new settlement in Spotland; and the pauper still remained an apprentice to this certificated man. The master may still go back to Castleton, the parish to which he was certificated. Indeed, it hath been determined, that if a certificated person goes to another parish, and becomes chargeable to it, and is by an order of justices removed from thence to the parish which gave the certificate, then the certificate is at an end, it is satisfied, it is functus officio, and it can have its effect but once. But here the removal is voluntary, not by force: the certificate subsists, and the apprentice remains part of his master's family. He was so at Spotland; and all along continued to be so. The certificate act says, that the apprentice shall not gain a settlement in the parish to which his master came by certificate. But as this apprentice hath gained an intermediate settlement, he ought to be sent to that settlement which he hath intermediately gained." And the court were unanimous that his settlement was at Spotland.

---

received relief from Chatham: he was at one time a fortnight, at another a longer period, in the workhouse of that parish, on account of illness; and he died in that workhouse, and was buried at the expense of the parish. During all these times of relief he was resident in that parish. Lord Ellenborough. "On subjects of this sort, it is important there should be one uniform rule, as far as is consistent with law: and the rule having been laid down by Lord Kenyon in Rex v. Chadderton, that the bare fact of giving relief to a pauper within the parish was no evidence of his settlement there, because it might be given to him as casual poor, it is proper to abide by it. In that case, indeed, the relief was only administered once; and it becomes necessary to consider, whether its having been administered more than once, or several times, alters the case, and differs this in substance from the other; for each instance in itself might not be evidence of the settlement, and yet it might be difficult to say that several instances might not furnish the conclusion. At the same time, however, it is to be observed, that though the relief were given for any length of time, the inference may either be, that the party receiving was a settled inhabitant, or that his settlement could not be known. But that would bring it to an alternative case, on which the sessions might draw their own conclusion, and the difficulty would still exist. Upon the whole, therefore, it appears to me, as the better rule to adopt, that it does not amount to evidence of the settlement. And there would be great impolicy in allowing it to have any weight; for if the parish officers, by giving relief to a pauper, were to be making evidence against themselves as to his settlement in their parish, it would make them perform their duty to casual poor with great reluctance. And therefore it is more consonant to humanity and policy, and to the rule of law laid down by Lord Kenyon, to say at once that it is no evidence of the settlement, than to leave it as a matter of inference in each case." Order of sessions quashed.

12. By Relief.

Nor though the relief be continued for a long period, and one of the family be put out apprentice by the parish.

Rex v. Coleorton, 1 B. & Ald. 25. Joseph Allen was removed from Merevale to Coleorton. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper's father died when the pauper was seven years of age, and left him residing with his mother in Coleorton, where, after her husband's death, she and several of her children were relieved during a long period while resident in the same parish. During this time, also, one of the children (the pauper's brother) was bound out by the parish of Coleorton into a third parish. But throughout the whole of the above time the mother of the pauper, with her children, received relief from the parish of Thringstone whilst they were resident (as before mentioned) in Coleorton; and the pauper's mother having died in that parish, was buried there at the expense of Thringstone. The sessions were of opinion that the relief by Coleorton preponderated over the relief by Thringstone, and confirmed the order. Bayley, J. "If there had been evidence on both sides it would have been for the sessions to draw their own conclusion, and I should not be inclined to disturb it. But if there is evidence on one side, and the sessions act upon what is not evidence on the other, and then send the case to us, it becomes a fit subject for our adjudication. It is decided, and I think rightly, by Rex v. Chatham, that relief by the parish in which a pauper resides is no evidence of settlement. Lord Ellenborough there enters into the question, whether relief, administered in more than one instance, may not require a different consideration, but he concludes by laying it down as the best rule to abide by, that such relief, whether given once or several times, is not evidence. One powerful reason in support of this decision is the reluctance which parish officers would feel against relieving casual poor, if by doing so they were furnishing evidence against their own parishes. It is true that, in the present case, Coleorton has not only relieved the family, but bound out one of the children. The sessions, however, have not acted upon this fact per se, but upon the continued relief generally; and in my opinion, the binding is no more evidence against Coleorton than the other circumstances; for parish officers may apprentice out paupers, being within the parish, whether settled or not. Rex v. Yarwell (p. 1008), 12. By Relief. does not militate against our present decision. In that case the sessions formed their own judgment on the facts, and afterwards sent a case to us, not stating upon what point they doubted. We, therefore, would not interfere with the conclusion they had come to. But here was evidence on one side, and none on the other, and the sessions have determined that the no-evidence preponderated." Littledale, J. "The court having decided in Rex v. Chatham that relief in circumstances like the present is no evidence, I think we ought to hold accordingly. The binding out of the child carries the case no farther, as the power of apprenticing does not depend upon the pauper being settled in the parish." Parke, J. "If this had been res integra, I should have had a difficulty in saying that the relief being continued was not evidence. But the contrary rule is so distinctly laid down in Rex v. Chatham, that we are bound to abide by it. As to the apprenticing, if the law had empowered parish officers to bind out settled paupers only, we might have sent the case back; but the statute of Elizabeth gives the power generally. The binding therefore is no additional proof, and the evidence on which the sessions decided was altogether illegal." Order of sessions quashed.

Maintenance of a pauper for several years resident in the parish is no evidence of his being settled in the relieving parish

The fact of a poor child being first found in a particular parish, is no evidence of his having been born there.

Rex v. Trowbridge, (a) 7 B. & C. 252; 1 M. & R. 7. Order of removal of Matthew Acorn, &c., from Trowbridge to Chatham, quashed. Case:—The pauper's first recollections were of his being in the workhouse at Chatham. He supposed he might be then about four or five years old. He never knew his father, and his mother was not in the workhouse with him. He stayed in the workhouse till he was thirteen or fourteen, when he entered on board a man-of-war and served in various ships till 1814. He then went to Trowbridge, and married there. Being out of work at Trowbridge he went with his wife to the workhouse at Chatham, where he stayed more than three weeks, during which time he was maintained there by the parish of Chatham; and on going away was furnished by the parish officers of Chatham with 1*l.* in money, and a pair of shoes for him and his wife to return to Trowbridge. He returned, and remained there about ten years, when, being again out of work, he went to Chatham again with his wife and family, where he again stayed about three weeks in the workhouse; and while there was again maintained by Chatham, and received 1*l.* in money, and a pair of shoes for him, his wife, and each of his children, and provisions to return to Trowbridge; at the same time he was desired by the Chatham overseers not to return to Chatham again without an order or a pass. He then returned to Trowbridge, at which place he was afterwards relieved, and thereupon removed by an order to Chatham. The parish registers of Chatham were searched by the pauper, but no entry was found of his baptism nor of any persons bearing his name. Bayley, J. "If the decision in Rex v. Chatham (p. 1004), has established the principle that relief is no evidence of a settlement in the relieving parish, then the sessions could not act upon the evidence of the relief by Chatham, and have come to the right conclusion in holding that there was no proof of the pauper's being settled at Chatham. It does not, however, appear to me in the present case necessary to decide whether the giving relief within a parish may or may not, under certain circumstances, be evidence from which the sessions may conclude that the party so relieved was settled in the relieving parish; because, admitting that there was some evidence of a settlement at Chatham, the effect of that evidence was a question for the sessions to decide: and as they have decided it, and the facts of the case do not, in my opinion, shew that their decision was wrong, I think we ought not to interfere to disturb it. The pauper is first found in the workhouse at Chatham. By what means he came there does not appear. Until they could ascertain that he had a settlement elsewhere, the parish officers of Chatham were bound to maintain him, and relief given under such circumstances is no evidence of his being settled there. It is true the pauper on two occasions returned to Chatham, but how did the officers of Chatham then act? They relieved him undoubtedly, and supplied him with money, provisions, and clothes, for the purpose of returning him to Trowbridge, and at the same time telling him not to come to Chatham again without an order or a pass. I think it is impossible to say, that relief given by Chatham, under such circumstances, and for such a purpose, was equivalent to relief given to the pauper in Trowbridge, or was any admission that he was settled and belonged to Chatham; if it had been, it would have been conclusive against the latter parish; but, as it seems to me, it had no such effect. The mere fact of a pauper being found in a particular parish when four or five years old is not any evidence of his having been born there. Upon the whole view of this case, I am of opinion that the sessions have come to a right conclusion. Holroyd and Littledale, Js., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

(a) Mr. Starkie has remarked on this case, "that the appeal was against an order of removal to Trowbridge, and the justices at sessions quashed the order, but quære, whether, though they were not bound to act upon it, they might not have acted on it." Lord Holt, in Banbury v. Broughton (Comb. 364), held, "that where a child is first known to be, that parish must provide for it till it find another." (2 Stark. Ev. 728, n.)

12. By Relief.

But relief given to a family resident in another parish, is evidence of a settlement in the relieving parish.

Rex v. Wakefield, 5 East, 335. Removal of Mary, the wife of G. F., from Alverthorpe with Thornes to Wakefield, confirmed. Case:—Wakefield at various times during forty years past relieved the father of G. F., the husband of the pauper Mary, and different members of his family, some by being taken into the appellant's workhouse, and some in other ways, during the time that they resided in the township of Stanley, and had provided coffins for, and defrayed the expenses of, the funerals of some of the family. G. F., who at the time of the appeal was thirty-eight years old, the husband of the pauper Mary, and father of the other paupers, was born and had always lived in Alverthorpe with Thornes. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The relief was given by the township of Wakefield to the father of the pauper's husband and to different members of his family, which must mean the family of the pauper's husband's father: and this, while they were residing in another township. This was evidence of the pauper's husband's settlement in Wakefield at that time; and this is stated to have been done at different times during the last forty years; the particular periods are not material, for no other settlement has been established since; and all things are presumed to continue in the same state, unless something be shown to the contrary. Then the only evidence against this is, that of the birth of the pauper's husband in Alverthorpe, which is no more than primâ facie evidence of a settlement there. Then if there were evidence on both sides, the sessions were to decide on it." The other judges agreed, and Le Blanc, J., added, "That the place of birth is the weakest evidence of settlement." Orders confirmed.

Such relief may rebut the effect of a certificate.

Rex v. Stanley cum Wrenthorpe, 15 East, 350. Peter Musgrave was removed from Leeds to Stanley cum Wrenthorpe. Order confirmed. Case:—Joshua Musgrave, the grandfather of the pauper, Elizabeth his wife, and Elizabeth his daughter, came into Stanley with Wrenthorpe with a certificate from Ossett dated the 5th of December, 1727. The pauper and his family had been relieved at different times by the overseers of Stanley with Wrenthorpe, when residing at Leeds, and also whilst residing at Wakefield. Upon this evidence the court confirmed the order. The court (Lord Ellenborough absent) were clearly of opinion, that the sessions had drawn the right conclusion.

Such relief for seven years is cogent evidence.

In Rex v. Barnsley, 1 M. & Sel. 377, Lord Ellenborough said, "The only doubt is, whether, where the sessions have drawn a conclusion palpably erroneous upon two points, we should send the case down again, or in ease of the parties, draw the irresistible conclusion ourselves. The relief given by the parish of Killinghall to the family of J. G. for seven years, is evidence of such preponderating weight that I should think any judge would direct a jury to find upon such evidence (supposing the question legally to come before them), that G. was by some means or other a settled inhabitant of that parish. It does not, indeed, amount to an estoppel; but it is cogent evidence against the parish." (See also Rex v. Woburn, ante, 899.)

12. By Relief.

It may be proved that the relief was given under a mistake as to the settlement.

Single instance of such relief not conclusive.

The effect of such relief is a question of the sessions, and Q. B. will not reverse their decision.

In Reg. v. Bedingham (post), a parish was allowed to prove that relief which had been given for twenty years had been given by mistake, under the belief that the pauper had acquired a settlement by the hiring and service set out in the examination under which the order was made, whereas in truth such hiring had been dissolved before the year expired.

Rex v. Edwinstowe, 8 B. & C. 671. Order of removal of Sarah Dewick, &c., from Mansfield to Edwinstowe confirmed. Case:—The pauper, resident at Mansfield, applied for relief to R., the overseer of Edwinstowe, at a public-house in Mansfield, which is seven miles from Edwinstowe, on a market-day; he gave her 3*s.* and said, if she wanted more she must apply again at Edwinstowe and he would give it her. A fortnight after, the pauper went to Edwinstowe for relief, when she saw B. and the other overseer: they then refused to give her relief, saying, she must throw herself upon Mansfield. Bayley, J. "I certainly agree that if there be not any premises to warrant the conclusion to which the justices at sessions have come, we are bound to reverse their decision. I do not say that, from the facts stated in the case, I should have drawn the same conclusion which the justices have done. But it was a question of fact; and it was for them to draw their conclusion from the evidence. Before we reverse their decision, we must see clearly that they were wrong. It is not sufficient that the evidence in support of their conclusion is slight. The question is, whether there was any evidence to warrant the justices in coming to the conclusion? It appears that at the time when the relief was given, the parish officer was at a distance from home. It is possible, however, that he may have known that the pauper was settled at Edwinstowe. If he did not know it, he might have said to the pauper, 'I cannot tell whether you are settled in the parish or not, and I give you this whether you are settled there or not.' But he gave the relief in an unqualified manner, and seems to have acted on the principle, that he conceived there was an obligation on his part to grant relief and a right in her to demand it. It was for the sessions to draw their conclusion from these facts. There was some evidence upon which they might exercise their discretion; and though I might, perhaps, have come to a different conclusion, I think we are not at liberty to reverse their decision." Littledale, J. "I concur in the judgment delivered by my brother Bayley, entirely on the ground that there were some premises to warrant the sessions in coming to the conclusion to which they have come. The evidence was undoubtedly very slight; but it was for the sessions to draw their conclusion from it, and having done so, I think we ought not to disturb their decision." Parke, J. "Upon the evidence stated in this case, I should have come to a different conclusion. But it is for the sessions and not for us to draw the conclusion from the evidence given, and they having done so, I think their decision ought not to be disturbed." Order of sessions confirmed.

Relief may be strong evidence. If the sessions, however, refuse to infer a settlement, Q. B. will not disturb their decision.

Rex v. Yarwell, 9 B. & C. 894; 4 M. & R. 685. T. Ireson, &c. were removed from Yarwell to Stibbington. Order quashed. Case:—The respondent proved by the pauper and his wife that the appellants had, about twenty-eight or twenty-nine years ago, and at three or four times subsequently, the last time being ten years ago, relieved the pauper and his family while they were residing in the respondent parish. When they wanted relief they applied to the parish officers of the appellant parish for work, and as they could not find it for them, they allowed the family 12*s.* a week. It was the pauper's wife who applied for relief upon all those occasions except one, when the application was made by the pauper himself. He had been once examined by the appellants, and stated that he had been an apprentice in their parish. The appellants also, within the last six years, and while the pauper was resident in the respondent parish, paid the expenses of his wife's confinement in a lunatic asylum at Peterborough. Bayley, J. "The sessions have sent this case for our consideration, without telling us what question they wish to be answered. They have stated a strong primâ facie case, from which they were at liberty to draw the conclusion that the pauper was settled in Stibbington, but they were not bound to do so. It was purely a question for them. The pauper might have been examined as to the fact whether he had ever gained, or whether there was a reasonable ground to conclude that he had gained a settlement in the appellant parish by apprenticeship, or otherwise. If he was not examined as to that, the sessions may have refused to act on presumptive evidence of settlement, when the respondents might have proved a settlement actually gained by the pauper in the appellant parish." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion." Parke, J. "If the sessions intend to ask us whether there was primâ facie evidence of a settlement in the appellant parish, I should have answered that there was, and that they ought to have acted upon it. If they asked me whether they were bound to do so, I should answer they were not." Order of sessions confirmed.

See Rex v. Coleorton, p. 1005

12. By Relief.

Rex v. Great Salkeld, 6 M. & Sel. 408. (See part of this case, ante, 413.) The case also stated, that soon after the order was quashed, the mother returned to Great Salkeld, and was removed from thence to Bongate, but whether by an order or not did not appear. Bongate received her, and told her she must nurse her child, the pauper then at the breast. When the pauper was six or seven years of age and residing with his aunt at Great Salkeld, the mother being in service, the overseer of Bongate went to Great Salkeld and paid the aunt some arrears of relief due from the parish for the maintenance of the pauper, and threatened to take him away that he might earn something for himself: the aunt was reluctant to part with him, and the overseers threatened to diminish her allowance. Bayley, J. "If the circumstances were sufficient to raise a presumption of a settlement in Bongate, it was for the sessions and not for this court to draw the conclusion, but I cannot see any ground for such a presumption."

The sessions to draw the conclusion.

In Rex v. Maidstone, (p. 708,) Lord Ellenborough said, "That, however, in the absence of all other circumstances, relief given (out of the parish) might be evidence; yet that the fact of giving relief only shewed the opinion of the parish that the pauper was settled with them."

Relief given shews the opinion of parish as to settlement.

The parish giving the relief may shew that it was given under a misapprehension. Reg. v. East Winch, (p. 602).

Such relief may be explained by the parish.

13. Of Settlement by Acknowledgment; viz. By Non-Appeal against Order of Removal.

13. Of Settlement by Acknowledgment, &c.

If the act of relieving a pauper can in any case be regarded as an acknowledgment by the parish giving the relief, that the pauper is settled with them, it seems reasonable that the acquiescence in or submission to an order of removal, by the parish against whom it is made, should be treated as at least equally conclusive. It is an adjudication by a competent legal authority (the magistrates) of the fact that the pauper is settled in the place to which the removal is directed to be made, and although such an adjudication may be disputed upon appeal, yet if the party whose interest it is does not in due form put its correctness in issue, the legitimate inference is, that it cannot be set aside or reversed. Mr. Justice Buller says, "There is no proposition in the law of settlements more clear than this, that an order of removal unappealed against is conclusive against all the world." See Rex v. Kenilworth (post). But it is only decisive of the question, up to the time when it is made; it has no effect prospectively; the pauper may acquire a settlement elsewhere immediately afterwards, and if he does, upon proof thereof, the order of removal unappealed against is no longer in force. The decisions upon which this plain and simple rule of law is founded, and the requisites of such an order to make it effectual for this purpose, will necessarily be given under the general title Of Removals, and need not therefore be inserted here.

An order of removal, unappealed against, is conclusive.

Up to the time it was made.

CHAPTER VII.

OF REMOVALS.

THE authority of the magistrates to remove paupers to the place of their settlement is given by statute, and must be exercised according to the prescribed regulations, some of which relate to the form of the order itself. And though so strict an observance of them is not necessary, as the sessions, in case of appeal, are empowered by 5 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, to amend defects of this description, yet in matters of substance, correctness is essential, as errors of this kind cannot be aided or remedied in like manner. Besides, it will sometimes be doubtful whether the particular defect complained of be one of form only or of substance, the line of distinction not being very obvious in the statute, nor very accurately marked by any of the cases, so as to afford a sure guide upon all occasions. Hence the importance of correctness in both respects becomes apparent.

We propose in this chapter to consider under what circumstances poor persons are removable, the method of proceeding in cases of removal, and the requisites of the order for that purpose.

The general division will be as follows:—

I. Enactments on the Subject.
II. Who may be removed.
III. Of the Order of Removal, Suspension, and Execution thereof.
IV. Of Persons returning after Removal.
V. Order of Removal of one Certificated.
VI. Appeal against an Order of Removal.
VII. Effect of an Order Unappealed against.
VIII. Effect of Quashing or Confirming an Order.
IX. Of Amendments by Sessions.
X. Power of Sessions in Orders of Removal.
XI. Of the Superintendence of the Queen's Bench.

I. Enactments on the Subject.

1. Enactments on the Subject.

13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12.

Recites inconveniences resulting from poor persons removing from one parish to another, &c.

The first statute that authorised the removal of poor persons to their place of settlement, was the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 1, which after reciting that the necessity, number, and continual increase of the poor, not only within the cities of London and Westminster, with the liberties of each of them, but also through the whole kingdom of England and dominion of Wales, is very great and exceeding burthensome, being occasioned by reason of some defects in the law concerning the settling of the poor, and for want of a due provision of the regulations of relief and employment in such parishes or places where they are legally settled, which doth enforce many to turn incorrigible rogues, and others to perish for want, together with the neglect of the faithful execution of such laws and statutes as have formerly been made for the apprehending of rogues and vagabonds, and for the good of the poor: for remedy whereof, and for the preventing the perishing of any of the poor, whether young or old, for want of such supplies as are necessary, enacts, "That whereas by reason of some defects in the law, poor people are not restrained from going from one parish to another; and, therefore, do endeavour to settle themselves in those parishes where there is the best stock, the largest commons or wastes to build cottages, and the most woods for them to burn and destroy, and when they have consumed it, then to another parish, and at last become rogues and vagabonds, to the great discouragement of parishes to provide stocks, where it is liable to be devoured by strangers; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful, upon complaint made by the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of any parish, to any justice of peace, within forty days after any such person or persons coming so to settle as aforesaid, in any tenement under the yearly value of 10*l.*, for any two justices of the peace, whereof one to be of the quorum, of the division where any person or persons that are likely to be chargeable (a) to the parish shall come to inhabit, by their warrant, to remove and convey such person or persons to such parish where he or they were last legally settled, either as a native, householder, sojourner, apprentice, or servant, for the space of forty days at the least, unless he or they give sufficient security for the discharge of the said parish, to be allowed by the said justices."

1. Enactments on the Subject.

Enacts, that within forty days after any pauper coming to settle in a parish in any tenement under 10*l.* yearly value, justices may by warrant remove him, if likely to become chargeable, to his legal settlement, unless he gives security.

How to be removed, coming to any tenement under 10*l.* yearly value.

(Altered and explained by 1 Jac. II. c. 17, s. 3; 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3.)

The 13 & 14 Car. II. c 12, s. 3, provides, "That (this act notwithstanding) it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons to go into any county, parish, or place, to work in time of harvest, or at any time to work at any other work, so that he or they carry with him or them a certificate from the minister of the parish, and one of the churchwardens and one of the overseers for the poor for the said year that he or they have a dwelling-house or place in which he or they inhabit, and hath left wife and children or some of them there (or otherwise as the condition of the persons shall require), and is declared an inhabitant or inhabitants there: and in such case if the person or persons shall not return to the place aforesaid when his or their work is finished, or shall fall sick or impotent whilst he or they are in the said work, it shall not be accounted a settlement in the cases abovesaid, but that it shall and may be lawful for two justices of the peace to convey the said person or persons to the place of his or their habitation as aforesaid, under the pains and penalties in this act prescribed: and if such person or persons shall refuse to go, or shall not remain in such parish where they ought to be settled as aforesaid, but shall return of his own accord to the parish from whence he was removed, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the city, county, or town corporate where the said offence shall be committed, to send such person or persons offending to the house of correction, there to be punished as a vagabond, or to a public workhouse in this present act hereafter mentioned, there to be employed in work or labour; and if the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish to which he or they shall be removed, refuse to receive such person or persons, and to provide work for them as other inhabitants of the parish, any justice of the peace of that division may and shall thereupon bind any such officer or officers in whom there shall be default, to the assizes or sessions, there to be indicted for his or their contempt in that behalf."

Persons going to work in harvest.

By the 1 Jac. II. c. 17, s. 3, the forty days' continuance in a parish intended by the above act, was to be reckoned from the delivery of notice in writing, by the person coming to settle, of the house of his abode, and the number of his family, to one of the churchwardens or overseers of the parish to which he shall so remove.

1 Jac. II. c. 17.

The forty days to be accounted from notice in writing.

And by the 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 3, it was further required that the churchwarden and overseer should cause such notice to be read on the next Lord's day, immediately after divine service, in the church or chapel

3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11.

Notice to be read in church.

(a) By 35 Geo. III. c. 101, "actually chargeable," p. 1012.

1. Enactments on the Subject. of the parish, and that the forty days to make a settlement should be accounted from such publication.

35 Geo. III. c 101, abolishing the notice.

These provisions as to notices were in effect abrogated by the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 3, which enacts that no person coming into any parish, township, or place, shall from the passing of this act be enabled to gain a settlement therein by delivery and publication of notice in writing.

3 W. & M. c. 11, s. 10.

Overseers required to receive the persons removed, under a penalty.

And the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 10, provides a more summary remedy as follows: "That if any person be removed by virtue of this act from one county, riding, city, town corporate, or liberty, to another, by warrant under the hands and seals of two justices of the peace, the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the said parish or town to which the said person shall be so removed, are hereby required to receive the said person, and if he or they shall refuse so to do, he or they so refusing or neglecting (upon proof thereof by two credible witnesses upon oath before any justice of the peace of the county, riding, city, or town corporate, to which the said person shall be so removed), shall forfeit for each offence the sum of 5*l.* to the use of the poor of the parish or town from which the said person was removed, to be levied by distress and sale of the offender or offenders' goods, by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace of the county, riding, city, or town corporate, to which such person was removed, to the constable of the parish or town where such offender or offenders dwell; which warrant the said justice is hereby empowered and required to make; the overplus, if any be, to be returned to the owner or owners; and for want of such sufficient distress, then the said justices shall commit the said offender or offenders to the common gaol of the said county, riding, city, or town corporate or liberty, there to remain without bail or mainprize for the space of forty days: provided always, and be it hereby enacted, that all such persons who think themselves aggrieved with any such judgment of the said two justices, may appeal to the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held for the county, riding, city, town corporate, or liberty, from which the said person was so removed." (a)

Distress.

Commitment.

Appeal.

5 Geo. II. c. 19, enables justices to rectify defects in form on appeals.

The 5 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, gives the sessions power to amend defects of form in orders of removal, "Whereas in many cases his majesty's justices of the peace by law are empowered to give or make judgments or orders, great expenses have been occasioned by reason that such judgments or orders have, on appeals to the justices of the peace at their respective general or quarter sessions, been quashed or set aside upon exceptions or objections to the form or forms of the proceedings, without hearing or examining the truth and merits of the matter in question between the parties concerned; therefore, to prevent the same for the future, be it enacted, that after the 24th day of June, 1732, upon all appeals to be made to the justices of the peace at their respective general or quarter sessions to be holden for any county, riding, city, liberty, or precinct, within that part of Great Britain called England, against judgments or orders given or made by any justices of the peace as aforesaid, such justices so assembled at any general or quarter sessions shall and they are hereby required from time to time, within their respective jurisdictions, upon all and every such appeals so made to them, to cause any defect or defects of form that shall be found in any such original judgments or orders, to be rectified and amended without any cost or charge to the parties concerned, and after such amendments made, shall proceed to hear, examine, and consider the truth and merits of all matters concerning such original judgments or order, and likewise to examine all witnesses upon oath, and hear all other proofs relating thereto, and to make such determinations thereupon as by law they should or ought to have done in case there had not been such defect or want of form in the original proceeding; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

And may proceed to determine them.

35 Geo. III. c. 101.

By 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 1 (called Mr. East's act), reciting the 13 & 14

(a) See construction of 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, and, above, section of 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 10, in Rex v. Davis, (post.)

Car. II., and reciting also "that many industrious poor persons chargeable to the parish, township, or place where they live, merely from want of work there, would in any other place where sufficient employment is to be had, maintain themselves and families without being burthensome to any parish, township, or place; and such poor persons are for the most part compelled to live in their own parishes, townships, or places, and are not permitted to inhabit elsewhere, under pretence that they are likely to become chargeable to the parish, township, or place into which they go for the purpose of getting employment, although the labour of such poor persons might in many instances be very beneficial to such parish, township, or place: and whereas the remedy intended to be applied thereto by the granting of certificates, in pursuance of the 8 & 9 Will. III. intituled 'An Act for supplying some Defects in the Laws for the Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom,' hath been found very ineffectual," it enacts, "That from and after the passing of this act, so much of the said in part recited act of 13 & 14 Car. II. as enables the justices to remove any person or persons that are likely to be chargeable to the parish, township, or place into which they shall come to inhabit, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that from henceforth no poor person shall be removed by virtue of any order of removal from the parish or place where such poor person shall be inhabiting, to the place of his or her last legal settlement, until such person shall have become actually chargeable to the parish, township, or place in which such person shall then inhabit, in which case two justices of the peace are hereby empowered to remove the person or persons in the same manner and subject to the same appeal, and with the same powers, as might have been done before the passing of this act with respect to persons likely to become chargeable."

1. Enactments on the Subject.

35 Geo. III. c. 101.

So much of recited act as enables justices to remove persons likely to be chargeable to parishes, repealed; and no persons to be removed till they have become actually chargeable.

Sect. 2. "And whereas poor persons are often removed or passed to the place of their settlement during the time of their sickness, to the great danger of their lives; be it enacted, that in case any poor person shall from henceforth be brought before any justice or justices of the peace, for the purpose of being removed from the place where he or she is inhabiting or sojourning, by virtue of any order of removal, or of being passed by virtue of any vagrant pass, and it shall appear to the said justice or justices that such poor person is unable to travel, by reason of sickness or other infirmity, (a) or that it would be dangerous for him or her so to do, the justice or justices making such order of removal, or granting such vagrant pass, are hereby required and authorised to suspend the execution of the same until they are satisfied that it may safely be executed, without danger to any person who is the subject thereof; which suspension of, and subsequent permission to execute the same, shall be respectively indorsed on the said order of removal or vagrant pass, and signed by such justice or justices; and no act done by any such poor person continuing to reside in any parish, township, or place, under the suspension of any such order, shall be effectual, either in the whole or in part, for the purpose of giving him or her a settlement in the same: and the charges proved upon oath to have been incurred by such suspension of any order of removal may by the said justices be directed to be paid by the churchwardens and overseers of the parish or place to which such poor person is ordered to be removed, in case any removal shall take place, or in case of the death of such poor person before the execution of such order; and if the churchwardens or overseers of the parish, township, or place, to which the order of removal shall be made, or any or either of them, shall upon the removal or death of such poor person, ordered to be removed, refuse or neglect to pay the said charges within three days after demand thereof, and shall not within the same time give notice of appeal as is hereinafter mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for one justice of the peace by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause the money mentioned in such order to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person or persons so refusing or neglecting payment of the same, and also such costs attending Justices may suspend the removal of sick persons.

(a) Rex v. Oldland, p. 114.

Charges incurred by such suspension to be paid by the officers of the parish to which they are ordered to be removed, which may be levied with costs. See p. 1016.

1. Enactments on the Subject.

35 Geo. III. c. 101.

the same, not exceeding forty shillings, as such justice shall direct; and if the parish, township, or place, to which the removal of such poor person is made, or was ordered to be made, before the death of such person as aforesaid, be without the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace issuing the warrant, then such warrant shall be transmitted to any justice of the peace having jurisdiction within such parish, township, or place as aforesaid, who upon receipt thereof is hereby authorised and required to indorse the same for execution: provided, nevertheless, that if the sum so ordered to be paid on account of such costs and charges exceed the sum of twenty pounds, the party or parties aggrieved by such order may appeal to the next general quarter sessions against the same, as they may do against an order for the removal of poor persons by any law now in being; and if the court of quarter sessions shall be of opinion that the sum so awarded be more than of right ought to have been directed to be paid, such court may and is hereby directed to strike out the sum contained in the said order, and insert the sum which in the judgment of such court ought to be paid; and in every such case the said court of quarter sessions shall direct that the said order, so amended, shall be carried into execution by the said justices by whom the order was originally made, or either of them, or in case of the death of either of them, by such other justice or justices as the said court shall direct; provided that nothing in this act contained shall extend to alter or abridge the power of justices of the peace to pass or punish vagrants in the manner and under the circumstances set forth in an act, passed in the seventeenth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Second, intituled, An act to amend and make more effectual the laws relating to rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and disorderly persons, and to Houses of Correction (except so far as regards the power of suspending the vagrant pass, in the manner and for the causes before mentioned)."

If costs exceed 20*l*., appeal may be made to the quarter sessions.

This act not to alter the power of justices to pass or punish vagrants, by 17 Geo. II. c. 5, except as to suspension.

Sect. 5. relates to vagrants, and is repealed by 5 Geo. IV. c. 83 (post).

Unmarried women with child to be deemed chargeable.

Bastards to be deemed of the mother's parish.

Sect. 6. "That every unmarried woman with child shall be deemed and taken to be a person actually chargeable, within the true intent and meaning of this act, to the parish, township, or place, in which she shall inhabit, and may be removed as such to the place of her last legal settlement; and in case any order of removal obtained for such purpose shall be suspended for any of the reasons before mentioned, and during such suspension the said woman shall be delivered of any child, which by the laws of this kingdom shall be a bastard, every such bastard child shall be deemed and taken to be settled in the same parish, township or place, in which was the legal settlement of the mother at the time of her delivery: provided nevertheless, that all act or acts heretofore made touching bastard children, or concerning the mothers or reputed fathers of such children, shall be and remain in full force and effect after the passing of this act, as well in cases where by this act the place of settlement of such bastard children is directed to be the same as that of the mothers of such children, as in cases where the place of settlement of such bastard children remains the same as it did before the passing of this act."

Former acts touching bastards, &c., to remain in force. (a)

49 Geo. III. c. 124.

Where any order of removal, &c., shall be suspended, any justice for the place may order the same to be executed, &c.

49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 1. After reciting the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, and further reciting that "it is expedient that the power of putting an end to the suspensions of any such order of removal or pass, and of executing the several other authorities aforesaid, should not be confined to the order of the justice or justices making such order or pass; be it enacted, that in all cases wherever the execution of any order of removal or of any vagrant pass shall be hereafter suspended by virtue of the said recited act, it shall be lawful for any other justice or justices of the peace of the county or other jurisdiction within which such removal or pass shall be made, to direct and order that the same shall be executed, and to direct the charges to be incurred as aforesaid to be paid, and to carry into execution any such amended orders as aforesaid, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as the said respective powers and authorities can or may be executed by the said justices who shall make any such order of removal, or by the justice who shall grant any such pass as aforesaid."

(a) This constructive chargeability is repealed by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76. (See Appendix.)

1. Enactments on the Subject.

49 Geo. III. c. 124.

Sect. 2. "That when the execution of any such order of removal shall be suspended, the time of appealing against such order shall be computed according to the rules which govern other like cases from the time of serving such order, and not from the time of making such removal under and by virtue of the same."

How time of appealing shall be computed.

Sect. 3. "'And in order to avoid any pretence for forcibly separating husband and wife, or other persons nearly connected with or related to each other, and who are living together as one family at the time of any order of removal made or vagrant pass granted, during the dangerous sickness or other infirmity of any one or more of such family, on whose account the execution of such order of removal or vagrant pass is suspended:' be it enacted, that where any order of removal or vagrant pass shall be suspended by virtue of this or of the said recited act, on account of the dangerous sickness or other infirmity of any person or persons thereby directed to be removed or passed, the execution of such order of removal or vagrant pass shall also be suspended for the same period with respect to every other person named therein, who was actually of the same household or family of such sick or infirm person or persons at the time of such order of removal made or vagrant pass granted."

Order of removal suspended in case of sickness, shall be suspended as to other persons of the family.

Sect. 4. "That whenever it shall happen that any pauper is by age, illness, or infirmity, unable to be brought up to the petty sessions to be examined as to his or her settlement, it shall be lawful for any one magistrate acting for the district where such pauper shall be, to take the examination of the said pauper, and to report the same to any other magistrate or magistrates acting for the said district, and for the said magistrates upon such report to adjudge the settlement of the said pauper, and make and suspend the order of removal, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the said pauper had appeared before two magistrates."

One magistrate may examine an infirm pauper as to his settlement, and report to petty sessions.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 3, enacts, "That every person being able wholly or in part to maintain himself or herself, or his or her family, by work or by other means, and wilfully refusing or neglecting so to do, by which refusal or neglect, he or she, or any of his or her family, whom he or she may be legally bound to maintain, shall have become chargeable to any parish, township, or place; every person returning to and becoming chargeable in any parish, township, or place, from whence he or she shall have been legally removed by order of two justices of the peace, unless he or she shall produce a certificate of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of some other parish, township, or place, thereby acknowledging him or her to be settled in such other parish, township, or place; shall be deemed an idle and disorderly person, within the true intent and meaning of this act; and it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to commit such offender (being thereof convicted before him by his own view, or by the confession of such offender, or by the evidence on oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses,) to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one calendar month."

5 Geo. IV. c. 83.

Persons refusing to maintain their family, or returning after removal, deemed "idle and disorderly."

By section 20 it is enacted, "That every person who, under the provisions of that act, shall have been convicted as an idle and disorderly person, or as a rogue and vagabond, shall be deemed to be actually chargeable to the parish, township, or place, in which such person shall reside; and such person shall be liable to be removed to the parish of his or her last legal settlement, by the order of two justices of the peace of the division or place in which such person shall reside."

Persons convicted chargeable to parish in which they reside.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 79, enacts, "That from and after the 1st day of November, 1834, no poor person shall be removed or removable, under any order of removal from any parish or workhouse, by reason of his

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

No person to be removed till after

1. Enactments on the Subject.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

notice of his being chargeable has been sent to the parish to which the order of removal is directed.

Such person may be removed if order submitted to;

but not in case of appeal, until it be determined.

being chargeable to or relieved therein, until twenty-one days after a notice in writing of his being so chargeable or relieved, accompanied by a copy or counterpart of the order of removal of such person, and by a copy of the examination upon which such order was made, shall have been sent, by post or otherwise, by the overseers or guardians of the parish obtaining such order, or any three or more of such guardians, to the overseers of the parish to whom such order shall be directed: provided always, that if such overseers or guardians as last aforesaid, or any three or more of such guardians, shall by writing under their hands agree to submit to such order, and to receive such poor person, it shall be lawful to remove such poor person according to the tenor of such order, although the said period of twenty-one days may not have elapsed: provided also, that if notice of appeal against such order of removal shall be received by the overseers or guardians of the parish from which such poor person is directed in such order to be removed within the said period of twenty-one days, it shall not be lawful to remove such poor person until after the time for prosecuting such appeal shall have expired; or, in case such appeal shall be duly prosecuted, until after the final determination of such appeal."

Maintenance under suspended order.

Sect. 84. "Provided always, that no charges or expenses of relief or maintenance shall be recoverable under a suspended order of removal, unless notice of such order of removal, with a copy of the same, and of the examination upon which such order was made, shall have been given within ten days of such order being made to the overseers of the poor of the parish to whom such order is directed."

6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 65.

By 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 65, s. 3, carriages conveying prisoners or paupers are exempted from duties or assessed taxes.

2 Who may be Removed.

II. Who may be Removed. (a)

This head may be subdivided as follows:—

1. Of Removal of Paupers from or to their own Estate.
2. Of Removal of the Wife.
3. Of Removal of Children.
4. Of Removal of Servants.
5. Of Removals under 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 6, of Women with Child.
6. Of Removal of Casual Poor.
7. Of the Removal of Poor Persons born in Scotland, Ireland, Isles of Man, Scilly, &c.
8. Of the Removal of Poor Persons born in Guernsey or Jersey.
9. Of Removal of Soldiers, &c.

1. Of Removal of Paupers from or to their own Estate.

1. Of Removal of Paupers from or to their own Estate.

A pauper resident on his own estate cannot be removed, although he be actually chargeable, and has applied for relief; nor can a pauper be removed to his own estate.

A person resident on his own estate cannot be removed.

A person resident on an estate granted him for lives, in consideration of two pounds two shillings fine and one shilling rent, cannot be removed therefrom, though he have applied for relief, and is thereby actually chargeable. Whether this is an estate within 9 Geo. I., quære? (Rex v. Martley, p. 908.)

A tenant is removable, although he has resided above forty days on a tenement, if

Rex v. Ampthill. The facts of this case are stated p. 816. Bayley, J., on the question of the power to remove, said, "I am of opinion, that at the time when this order was made the pauper was removable. It is said, that although he had in fact received relief from that parish, yet as he possessed property, he was not actually chargeable. But, I think, that as the parish did not act fraudulently, and as they were compelled to grant him relief by an order of justices, the pauper is to be deemed as actually chargeable, and if so, then he was removable under 35 Geo. III. c. 101, although he had resided on the tenement more than forty days. It is material to consider the history of the law with respect to this power of removal. By the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 1, upon complaint made to any justice of the peace within forty days after any person comes to settle in any tenement under the yearly value of 10*l.*, any two justices of the division where any person that is likely to be chargeable to the parish shall come to inhabit are authorised to remove such person to such parish where he was last legally settled. Under that statute complaint must be made to a justice within forty days after the party has come to reside in the parish. The 35 Geo. III. c. 101, recites this act, and repeals so much of it as enables justices to remove persons likely to be chargeable, and enacts, that 'no person shall be removed from the parish where he shall be inhabiting to the place of his last legal settlement until such person shall have become actually chargeable to the parish in which he shall then inhabit;' and then two justices are empowered to remove such person in the same manner, and subject to the same appeal, and with the same powers as might have been done before the passing of that act with respect to persons likely to become chargeable. Now, taking these two statutes together, I think the meaning of them is, that the statute 35 Geo. III. c. 101, takes away altogether the power of removing, within forty days, persons likely to become chargeable, but gives the power to remove persons actually chargeable at any time after they have become so, and before they have actually gained a settlement." Holroyd and Littledale, Js., both concurred on this point.

(a) As to the removal of lunatics, see pp. 128 to 137, and post, "Notice of Appeal."

1. Removal of Paupers.

He has not paid a year's rent, as required by the 59 Geo. III. c. 50.

A pauper may be removed before his tenancy commences. (Rex v. St. Michael, Coventry.

Wookey v. Hinton Blewet, 1 Stra. 476. A person settled at Hinton Blewet had an estate descended to him in Wookey; whereupon the justices send him thither as to the place of his last settlement. But by the court: "The order must be quashed; for it is no settlement nor inhabitation, though if he should go thither he could not be removed; it may be a great injury to send him away from a good trade at Hinton Blewet to perhaps half an acre of land wherein he has but a term."

If an estate descend to a man in another parish he is not therefore removable thither as to his settlement.

One of the next of kin is removable from the parish in which the intestate held leasehold property. (Rex v. Berkswell, p. 840.)

---

2. Of Removal of the Wife.

2. Of Removal the Wife.

A woman cannot be removed from her husband's estate, though he had run away.

Rex v. Aythorp Rooding, Burr. S. C. 412; 2 Bott, 104. William Gates, husband of the pauper, Susannah Gates, being settled at White Rooding, went away and left his wife and children. Whereupon she and her children went and lived for forty days, without her husband, in a copyhold tenement of her husband's at Aythorp Rooding. She was removed to White Rooding. Order quashed. By the court: "There doth not appear any dissent of her husband from her going there, and therefore it is rather to be presumed that she went with his consent. The husband's settlement remains as it was, but nevertheless the wife was not removable from his estate. It is one thing to say, that a person may not be removed; and another, that such person doth not gain a settlement. The husband himself would not have been removable from his own if he had gone thither. A man's right to reside upon his own estate is founded on Magna Charta, which says, that a man shall not be disseised of his freehold. A wife hath a natural right to go and reside upon her husband's estate. If she had gone against her husband's consent, it would have made an alteration." And the court were unanimous that the justices could not remove her from her husband's property.

The right of the husband is founded on Magna Charta.

2. Removal of the Wife.

Nor from a leasehold tenement of the husband's, above the annual value of ten pounds. Quære? (a)

Rex v. Leeds, Burr. S. C. 524; 1 Bla. Rep. 466. Joseph Howe, husband of Anne Howe, the pauper, took a tenement of 10*l.* a year at Blackfordby, and resided there above forty days. Afterwards he took a tenement at Leeds of above 10*l.* a year, and went and resided there for above forty days, leaving his wife at Blackfordby. Then he returned to Blackfordby, and stayed with his wife there twenty-seven days. And on his leaving her and going away to Leeds, she was removed from Blackfordby to Leeds, as to her place of settlement. Order confirmed. It was argued, that her settlement must follow that of her husband; but the court were of opinion that the justices had no power to remove her from Blackfordby whilst her husband's interest there subsisted. The husband himself could not have been removed from his own tenement at Blackfordby, the lease whereof was unexpired. And if they could not have removed the man himself from his own, it follows, that they could not remove his wife so long as it remained his. Both orders quashed.

The wife of a transported convict resident on an estate in which she was jointly interested with her sisters, under their mother's marriage settlement, is irremovable.

Rex v. Brington, 7 B. & C. 546; 1 M. & R. 431. Maria, wife of Edward Chambers, a convict at Van Diemen's Land, was removed from Brington to Badby. Order quashed. Case:—John Elliot, by a marriage settlement in January, 1772, settled a messuage in Brington, and about twenty acres of land, in trust to himself for life, and remainder to his wife; and after other remainders, remainder to the first son and his heirs, remainder to the second and every other son, remainder to the use of the daughters of the said John on the body of Mary, and the heirs of their bodies, as tenants in common. They had four sons and eight daughters, all of whom died without issue in the lifetime of their mother, except four daughters, viz., Elizabeth, Alice, Maria, and Sophia, who survived her. Maria, the pauper, married Edward Chambers, whose legal settlement is now in Badby, where she was living until February, 1826, (her husband being at that time, and continuing at the date of the order of removal, absent from England,) when she went to Brington, the parish in which the property lies, to her sister, who lives in the house mentioned in the settlement, and resided there thirteen weeks, until she was removed to Badby. Bayley, J. "The question is not as to the place where the wife is settled; that, without doubt, is in her husband's parish, Badby. This is a case where the party goes to her own estate, of which she has a seisin: the husband had not sole seisin, for when an estate in fee comes to a feme covert, the interest of the husband and wife is a seisin in fee, and both in right of the wife. (Polyblank v. Hawkins, Doug. 329.) Rex v. Aythorp Rooding, (p. 1017,) is not so strong a case as the present: there the property was the husband's, while here it is the property of the wife, descendable to her heirs. There is no distinction between a sole occupation and an occupation in coparcenary. Although no partition had been made, the wife had a right to say that she would occupy her part, and not suffer other persons to occupy it. And there might be good reason for it here; as, by the husband's absence abroad, it might have been difficult to collect the profits without residence. The pauper, therefore, is irremovable, although she could not have gained any settlement by her residence in Brington."

A house in the parish of W. was let to A. and B. his wife, for their joint lives, and the life of the survivor. A. and B. were ejected wrongfully from the house, but their furniture

Rex v. Matlock, 1 Adol. & Ell. 124. G. Arnalt was removed from Wirksworth to Matlock. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was settled in Matlock, and removable thither, unless the power to remove him from Wirksworth was negatived by the following facts. The pauper being a married man, went to live with his father in a cottage built on the waste in Wirksworth; his father paid sevenpence a year rent to the Duchy of Lancaster for the cottage, and the pauper continued to pay the rent after his father's death, until about nineteen or twenty years ago, when all the

(a) This was before the 35 Geo. III. c. 101. Since that statute the man might have been removed, Rex v. Ampthill, p. 1016; and by parity of reasoning, his wife also.

2. Removal of the Wife.

cottages belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster were sold, and the pauper purchased his cottage for 5*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.*, and it was conveyed to him. In 1827 the pauper sold the cottage to a person named Wilson for 40*l.*, and Wilson at the same time demised it to the pauper and his wife for their joint lives and the life of the survivor of them, at a rent of 40*s.* a year. At Christmas, 1831, Wilson demanded a year's rent of the pauper, which he was unable to pay, and Wilson then took possession of the cottage. The pauper denied that there was any power of re-entry in the case of non-payment of rent. A lodger as well as the pauper's furniture remained in the house after he quitted it. About the same time that this transaction happened, the pauper applied to the overseer of Wirksworth for relief, but the overseer refused to relieve him until the lease was destroyed, and Wilson also called upon the pauper, and told him that if he and his wife would consent to give up the lease, they should have 5*s.* a week instead of 2*s.* 6*d.*, and should not be disturbed during their lives. The pauper finally agreed that the lease should be destroyed, and Wilson brought it to an inn in Wirksworth, where it was destroyed in the presence of many persons, the pauper himself assisting to destroy it. It did not appear that the pauper's wife was present when the lease was destroyed, or that she afterwards gave her consent to its being so disposed of. Wilson told the pauper that he should not be disturbed, but on his applying for relief, he was informed that unless he went into the workhouse he could not be relieved. He and his wife accordingly went into the workhouse and remained there for a fortnight or three weeks, when they were removed to the appellant parish, pursuant to the order of removal. It was admitted that the pauper had a freehold estate, from which he could not have been removed, but it was said that it had been destroyed by re-entry. [Littledale, J. " We cannot infer a legal power of re-entry unless it be stated."] But he consented to destroy the lease, though the wife did not. [Lord Denman. " How could she consent? and if she could not, there was a freehold interest still subsisting. The lodger and the furniture remained on the premises."] Not as the lodger of the pauper. Littledale, J. " He is not stated to have become the lodger of Wilson." Parke, J. " The case shows a continued occupation of the pauper till he went to the workhouse." Per Curiam: " The order must be quashed." Order of sessions quashed.

and a person who had lodged with them remained in the house. Afterwards A. assisted the lessor to destroy the lease. A. and B. are still irremovable from W. though actually chargeable.

St. Michael's, Bath, v. Nunny, 1 Stra. 544. Order of removal of the wife of a poor person. It was moved to quash the order, because it did not appear the husband was at the time of the removal in St. Michael's, so that it might be they sent the wife away from the husband. But by the Court: " We cannot intend he was not; if he were in the parish from which she was sent, that indeed would vitiate the order; for the wife cannot be removed from her husband: but as neither of these facts appear against the order, to satisfy us that it is bad, we are not to presume it to be so; and therefore it must be confirmed."

The wife cannot be removed without the husband, if he is in the parish.

Absence from her will not be presumed.

Rex v. Stockton, 2 Nev. & M. 353; 5 B. & Ad. 546. F. Carstofen and her children were removed from Stockton to Spalding. Order reversed. Case:—On the 2d of May, 1832, Robert Carstofen, who is a native of Scotland, without settlement in England, and a lunatic, returned from Sunderland in Durham, where he had for some time been residing, to Stockton, accompanied by his wife and children. Almost immediately on their arrival in that township they applied to the assistant overseer for relief, and on the 2d and 3d of that month were relieved by him and ordered to quit the town and return to Sunderland. About the 19th of May the wife again applied to the Stockton overseers for relief, whereupon she and her children were removed to Spalding, by an order reciting the complaint, " that Frances Carstofen, the wife of Robert Carstofen, a Scotchman, having no settlement in England, and who is a lunatic, had come to inhabit in Stockton," and it adjudged " the settlement of Frances and her children to be in Spalding." The maiden settlement of Frances is in the parish of Spalding. She was legally married to Robert Carstofen, and the children named in the order are legitimate. Robert was born in Scotland, and has not gained any settlement in England: he is a lunatic, and was living at the date of the order of removal. The sessions quashed the order, as it did not contain any statement of the desertion of the wife by the husband, and as the defect was in a matter of substance, which the court had not power to remedy. The respondents tendered evidence to show that the husband was not living with his wife nor in the township of Stockton at the time of the wife's application for relief, and the order of removal being made, but that he had escaped from his family in a fit of lunacy on the preceding 4th of May, when they were all in the parish of Thirsk, in Yorkshire. Denman, C. J. "The authorities cited, show that the court will not presume any fact in order to vitiate an order of removal. Here it is perfectly consistent with that order, that it may not have the effect of separating husband and wife, for the husband and wife may not have been living together at the time when that order was made, or he may be living at Spalding, the parish to which she is ordered to be removed." Parke, J. "This case falls within St. Michael, Bath, v. Nunny, (p. 1019). We cannot intend that when the order was made, the husband of the pauper was residing at Stockton, or that he was not at Spalding." Taunton and Patteson, Js., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

In the order of removal of a married woman and children to the place of her maiden settlement, it is not necessary to notice the husband's absence, or that he had no settlement.

Neither will be presumed.

2. Removal of the Wife.

To make such removal invalid, it must appear that the husband was resident with the wife at the time of her removal.

Rex v. Ironacton, Burr. S. C. 153; 2 Bott, 111. Mary, the wife of William King, was removed to Ironacton, the settlement of her husband. Order confirmed. It was objected that the wife was removed without the husband. But the court overruled the objection; for "how doth it appear that the husband was not at Ironacton at that time? The court will not suppose it to be wrong, unless it appears so. The intrusion complained of was only by the wife, and they could not remove the husband when he was not complained of."

If a wife be removed (eo nomine) to the place of her legal settlement, it is good.

Rex v. Higher Walton, Burr. S. C. 162; 2 Bott, 112. Order of removal of Mary Bennet, wife of Samuel Bennet, to Higher Walton, the place of her settlement, confirmed. It was urged that it did not appear whether it were this woman's settlement in her own right, or in the right of her husband, and nothing shall be intended. Now if it were not her settlement in right of her husband, the justices had no power to send her thither. By the Court: "It is adjudged to be her last legal settlement; and she could not be settled but where her husband was; and we are not to intend any thing to vitiate the order. Therefore we cannot intend that the husband's settlement was not at Higher Walton." Motion denied.

An order for the removal of a married woman (not stating her to be such) and her children to Y., adjudging that the lawful settlement of her and her children is in Y., was held well, without adjudging that Y. was her husband's settlement.

Rex v. Yspytty, 4 M. & Sel. 52. Order of removal of Ann Williams from Llandyrnog to Yspytty confirmed. Case:—The pauper is the wife of Griffith Williams, a soldier in his Majesty's service at Woolwich. The mother of the husband proved that he gained a settlement about eleven years ago in Yspytty. This was the only evidence of the settlement of the husband or of the pauper, and no attested copy was produced of the husband's examination upon oath, pursuant to 54 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 69. The order was for the removal of Ann Williams (not stating her to be the wife of any one,) Jane, her daughter, aged three years, and Griffith, her son, aged two years; adjudging that their settlement (not that the settlement of her husband) was in Yspytty. Rex v. Bucklebury (post), was cited to show that the order was well enough in point of form, although it did not state that Yspytty was the settlement of the husband. Contra. "The evidence of the mother to prove the settlement of the son, when it appeared the son himself might have been called to prove it, was not the best evidence." Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "If the respondent parish prove enough to launch a primâ facie case of settlement, is it necessary they should prove more? Must they go on to call witnesses at the hazard of having that which is already proved defeated? As to the objection upon the form of the order, it is stated that it is the wife's settlement, and the medium through which she became settled there need not be stated." Order confirmed.

The wife and children of an Irishman could not, when they be-

Rex v. Carleton, Burr. S. C. 813. Johanna, wife of Simon Mac Owen, and their four children, were removed from Hoylandswain to Carleton, stating in their order that complaint was made, that Simon Mac Owen,

2. Removal of the Wife.

Johanna his wife, and children, came to inhabit in Hoylandswain, not having gained a settlement there; and that Simon was an Irishman, and had done no act in England to gain a legal settlement, and that his wife and children were chargeable to Hoylandswain; which they adjudged to be true, and that the settlement of Johanna and children was in Carleton; and therefore they removed them thither. Order confirmed. Case:—John Tyas, father of Johanna, in 1727, came with a certificate from Carleton to reside in Hoylandswain, and during his residence there, Johanna was born, and continued to live with him there until she was upwards of twenty-one years of age: she afterwards took a house at Hoylandswain, and resided therein till she was married to Simon, who upon his marriage went to reside with Johanna in her house, and continued to reside with her from the time of their marriage in 1766, until she and her children were removed under this order from the said Simon, and from his dwelling-house wherein he then and still continues to reside; Simon maintained himself and family until a little time before the removal was made. It was objected that this would occasion a separation between husband and wife; and amount in effect to a divorce. And the court were clear that the removal was wrong. It was not like the case of the husband being dead, or having left his wife. Here the husband was alive; resided at Hoylandswain; followed the business of a cloth-dresser there; and maintained his family by it for many years, till they were taken ill of this temporary fever, which obliged them to apply for relief. The parish had had the benefit of his labour nine years. This man was settled in a house and carried on business in this place. There might be no business for a cloth-dresser at Carleton at all. Or this man might have no acquaintance there. He might starve there though he could maintain his family at Hoylandswain. Orders quashed.

came chargeable, be removed from him to the wife's parish. (a)

Removal of a woman, as the wife of J. G., to C., is good, for it will be presumed that C. is the husband's settlement.

Rex v. Hinxworth, Doug. 46 (n. 13.); Cald. 42; 2 Bott, 115. Sarah, called in the order "the wife" of Joseph Griffin, was, on 17th June, 1776, removed from Cheshunt to Hinxworth in the husband's absence, and without having examined him. The order was not appealed against. The husband soon after went to his wife and children at Hinxworth, from whence they were all sent back under a new order, dated 13th October, 1776, to Cheshunt. Cheshunt appealed against this order, and producing the former order, insisted it was conclusive as to the husband as well as the wife and children. The sessions, however, after hearing evidence as to Griffin's settlement, confirmed the new order as to him, and quashed it as to his wife and children. The wife then went back with her children to her husband at Cheshunt. After which a third order, of 20th January, 1777, was made, removing the children again from Cheshunt to Hinxworth. This was appealed against, and confirmed as to all but two of the children, who by reason of their tender years were inseparable from their mother, on account of nurture. The question was to what extent the fresh order was conclusive, Sarah having been thereby removed as the wife of S. Griffin. Lord Mansfield. "There is nothing in this case. It is admitted that if they had put into the first order, that it was the husband's settlement, that would have been conclusive; and the question is, whether there accrues a necessary implication that upon the face of the order his settlement is there. The general rule is, that the husband's settlement is the settlement of the wife. There are some special exemptions; as where the husband is beyond sea. But the presumption is in favour of the general rule; and if this had been the case of an exception, it ought to have been stated. Hinxworth having neglected to appeal at the time they were aggrieved, their being too late now is their own fault." And the rule was made absolute to quash all the orders but the first. (b)

(a) As to the removal of the wife of an Irishman or Scotchman, see p. 129.

(b) The first order is conclusive that the husband, wife, and children were settled at Hinxworth, at the date of that order, viz., 17th June, 1776. But an order unappealed against is not of more force, than an order confirmed. By the second order in Oct. 1776, the husband is decided to be settled at Cheshunt. Upon

2. Removal of the Wife.

If the husband return after the wife has been removed, and that order of removal is quashed, they cannot be removed together to the place of the former removal.

The wife may be removed without her husband (he having no settlement) if they consent.

Rex v. Leigh, Doug. 46; Cald. 59; 2 Bott, 116. Order of removal of a married woman from Ewell to Leigh, in the absence of the husband, quashed. The husband afterwards returning to Ewell with his wife, they were removed under a new order to Leigh, which was confirmed; but it was given up as not to be supported, since Rex v. Hinxworth (p. 1021).

Rex v. Eltham, 5 East, 113. An order made on examination of the husband, and with the consent of him and his wife, removed Mary, wife of Peter Finn, a Scotchman, who never gained a settlement in England, and children, from St. George the Martyr, to Eltham. There was an appeal, which was dismissed without a case; and both these orders being removed by certiorari, it was objected that the wife was removed by such order from her husband, who was still living, and probably in the very parish whence she and her children were removed, and whose assent to their separation, even if it could be presumed in favour of the order, was invalid. In St. Michael's v. Nunny p. 1019, the court said, that 'if the husband were in the parish whence the wife was sent, it would vitiate the order': now that fact is to be collected in this case; for he is stated to have been examined before the magistrates, and to have given his consent to the removal. But by Lawrence, J. "How does it appear that the husband was living in St. George the Martyr? He might have been before the magistrates without residing there. The order only states that the wife and children were come to inhabit in that parish." Lord Ellenborough. "Independent of the mentioned objection, what doubt is there in the case? A Scotchman, who has no settlement of his own, and is desirous to give his wife and children the benefit of hers, being unable to maintain them, consents that she should be sent to her parish, to which she herself is willing to go. Why should he not consent? This is nothing like the contract of separation declared to be illegal in Marshall v. Rutton (8 T. R. 545). Servants, and other persons of that description, members of the same family, who are to subsist by their labour, must frequently separate for that purpose. Here there is neither a private nor a public injury." The court affirmed the orders. (a)

Not to her maiden settlement, if the husband has one.

But the wife resident with her husband cannot be removed to her maiden settlement if the husband was born in England, although the place of his birth cannot be ascertained. (Rex v. St. Mary, Beverley, p. 458.)

Deserted wife of Irishman.

The wife of an Irishman, who has no settlement in England, may, if deserted by him, be removed to her maiden settlement. (See Rex v. Cottingham, ante, 127.)

The wife of a prisoner confined in a gaol for debt, in the parish where she resided, and in which the gaol was situate, cannot be removed without his consent.

Reg v. Stogumber, 1 P. & D. 409; 9 A. & E. 622. An order for the removal of Sarah, wife of George Stafford, a prisoner confined in Bristol gaol, and her five children, from Bedminster, in the city of Bristol, to Stogumber, was confirmed. Case:—G. Stafford, the husband of Sarah, and father of her five children, was settled by birth in Stogumber. Sarah and her children had become chargeable to the parish of Bedminster at the date of the order, at which time the said G. Stafford was confined in the gaol of the city and county of Bristol, which is situate in the parish of Bedminster, in execution for 11*l.* and upwards, under the provisions of the Bristol Court of Requests Act, for 100 days, which expired on the 21st of November, 1837. At the expiration of the said 100 days, G. Stafford was regularly discharged, and returned to his house in Bedminster, to his wife and family, he being the tenant of such house, and the trial of the appeal against the third order, why was not the confirmed order of Oct. 1776, conclusive as to the settlement of the husband? It was subsequent to the order removing the wife as such to Hinxworth; and in favour of the order, it might have been presumed that the husband acquired a settlement at Cheshunt, between the months of June and Oct. 1776. It does not appear from either of the reports that this point was adverted to, although the children were removed obviously to their father's settlement. It does not appear that the court of King's Bench had any authority to quash the second order.

(a) This case, as far as it regards Scotchmen, is no longer an authority. (See Rex v. Leeds, p. 130.)

having occupied that and other houses in Bedminster for the last fifteen years, and supported his wife and family there by his labour as a sawyer, and which he has continued to do since his discharge from prison and return to them. During the imprisonment of G. Stafford, his wife was at liberty, at the times and in the manner which the rules of the prison permitted, to visit her husband. Lord Denman. "It is clear in this case that the parties were residing in the same parish, and that there might have been a consortium between them, which it is the policy of the law not to interrupt. No consent on the part of the husband, nor any thing equivalent to it, appears on the face of the case." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

2. Removal of the Wife.

A married woman pregnant of a child, which will be a bastard, was removable, if the husband was abroad, as an unmarried woman with child.

Rex v. Tibbenham, 9 East, 388. Rebecca, wife of John Knowles, was removed from Diss to Tibbenham. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper's husband, John Knowles, being settled at T., had gone to the East Indies four years before, and had never returned. At the time of the removal the pauper was residing in Diss, and pregnant of a child, which was afterwards born a bastard in T. The pauper never received any relief from Diss parish, nor was chargeable in any other manner than as above mentioned. Lord Ellenborough. "The first question is, whether a married woman, who, in the absence of her husband abroad, is pregnant under such circumstances as that the child, when born, would be deemed by law a bastard, be liable to be removed under the 35 Geo. III.? The act indeed says, "that every unmarried woman with child shall be deemed and taken to be a person actually chargeable within the true intent and meaning of the act," and removable: but the legislature plainly had in view that every woman pregnant of a child, which was not protected by the matrimony of its parents, but would, when born, be a bastard, should be removable, whether married or unmarried; for though the mother were married, yet if her child would by law be a bastard, she was in pari jure within the scope of this act with an unmarried woman who was pregnant. The next question is, whether the order of removal be good in the form of it? It states the complaint of the parish officers of Diss, that Rebecca, the wife of John Knowles, is actually become chargeable to their parish, &c.; and the justices, upon due proof made thereof, adjudge the same to be true. The act says, that a woman under the circumstances I have stated, 'shall be deemed and taken to be a person actually chargeable,' &c. Have not then the justices done enough in stating that the pauper was 'actually become chargeable to the parish?' They are to draw the conclusion whether chargeable or not, and it is enough for them to state that conclusion upon the face of the order, without stating the premises upon which it was founded. If that conclusion be disputed the party is to appeal; and such appeal having been made, and the facts stated to us, it is to be seen, thirdly, whether the premises warranted the magistrates in drawing that conclusion. The legislature intended that an unmarried woman, or what is the same for this purpose, a married woman, under the circumstances I have mentioned, being with child, is primâ facie chargeable within the law: it raises a presumption of her being chargeable. But I say again, as I said in Rex v. Alveley (post), that if it appears that the woman is a person of substance, and that there is no pretence to say that she is likely to bring a burden upon the parish, the act did not intend to make such a person liable to be removed. But it is made a presumptive chargeability, so as to put it on the party disputing it to show that she is a person of substance, or, as in Rex v. Alveley, a person under a contract of hiring and service with another at the time, so as to rebut the presumption. The only cases that materially affect the construction of the clause in question are, first, Rex v. St. Mary Westport, (p. 998), which was the case of a certificated person who, under the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, was not removable till actually chargeable: and it was held, that one of the family of the certificated person being pregnant of a child likely to be born a bastard, was not removable under that act. The question was again made in Rex v. Great Yarmouth (post), after the passing of the 35 Geo. III., where the residence

The order need not describe how she became chargeable.

If it appears that the woman is not likely to bring a burden upon the parish, she is not chargeable under the statute.

2. Removal of the Wife.

Pregnancy of a single woman does not dissolve a contract of hiring.

of a person so circumstanced under a certificate was held to be no objection to her removal. Then came Rex v. Alveley (post), where the principal point decided was, that a single woman being with child did not operate such a dissolution of the contract of hiring and service, as to make her removable against the consent of herself and her master. In that case there is one observation attributed to me which I am not prepared to abide by; viz. that where the act says such a person may be removed, it does not say that she shall be so. Now I do not think that the use of the word may there, as contradistinguished from shall, makes any difference in the sense. If the party come within the true intent and meaning of the clause as there described, I think the true meaning of the words 'may be removed,' is, that she 'shall be removed'. All the statutes respecting the removal of the poor form together one system of law, and it is a condition precedent, if I may so say, that the persons to be subjected to their operation should be in the condition of poverty. When therefore the clause in question says that an unmarried woman with child shall be deemed to be actually chargeable, &c., for the purpose of subjecting them to be removed, it means that persons so situated shall, primâ facie, only be deemed to be chargeable, and it still leaves it open to show that the party is of substance, so as not to be within the scope and view of the poor-laws. Therefore, whether in the form of the order it be said that the woman so circumstanced is deemed to be chargeable, or is therefore chargeable, or that she is chargeable, it is all alike and equally good: and she must be presumed to be in the situation in which she is considered by the legislature. viz. as actually chargeable to the parish where she is inhabiting. and consequently liable to be removed, unless the contrary be shewn. Here then it is sufficiently adjudged in the order that the pauper was actually chargeable, so as to make her removable under the act; and it appearing by the facts stated on the appeal, that though married, yet that her husband was abroad, and could not have been the father of her child, this was a prima facie case to bring her within the sixth clause, and to show that she was actually chargeable within the meaning of the act; and nothing being shown to rebut that presumption, it remains presumptively established that the pauper was within the description of persons liable to be removed." The other judges agreed, and both orders were confirmed.

An order of removal made upon complaint that M. S., the wife of W. S., who is absent from her, is come to inhabit, &c, and is now with child, which is likely to be born a bastard, adjudging the said M. S to be actually chargeable, is sufficient.

Rex v. Sowerby, 5 M. & Sel. 299. Margaret Sykes was removed from Sowerby to Pilling; and the order stated that Margaret, the wife of William Sykes, a soldier in the army, and absent from her, is to come to inhabit in Sowerby, that she is now with child, which is likely to be born a bastard, and that her settlement is in the township of Pilling; and the justices, upon due proof made thereof, and likewise upon due consideration had of the premises, did adjudge the said M. S. to be actually chargeable to Inskip-with-Sowerby, and her settlement to be in Pilling. And then it proceeded to order her removal. The sessions quashed the order for insufficiency of form, because it was not stated in the complaint that the pauper was become actually chargeable. The court, without hearing argument, were of opinion that the order of removal was sufficient: for the complaint states the premises from whence the conclusion necessarily arose under the act of parliament (35 Geo. III. c. 101), that the pauper was to be deemed chargeable, and the justices have drawn the conclusion.

---

3. Of Removal of Children.

A child within the age of nurture, settled in a different parish, cannot be separated from its mother by an order of removal, though the order is made with the consent of the mother.

3. Removal of Children.

Reg. v. Birmingham, 7 Jurist, 1014, 13 L. J. J. Harriet and Elizabeth Ann, children of James Atkins, deceased, were removed from Aston to Birmingham. Order confirmed. Case:—The examination of Elizabeth Jones, on which the order was made, stated, that in August 1834, she married at Edgebaston church James Atkins, by whom she had the two children, Harriet nearly seven years old, and Elizabeth about four years and a half old; her husband died in December 1837, and in August 1841, she married Joseph Johns her present husband, who is now out of employ and unable to support her and her children; they are all inmates of the workhouse, chargeable to the parish of Aston; and she consents to the removal of her children from her, and wishes them to be sent to their parish. The sessions were of opinion that the children, although within the age of nurture, might be removed to their own parish, and separated from their mother by her consent, and confirmed the said order. Lord Denman. "There are no doubt some cases, where it has been thought necessary by particular statutory enactments to break in upon the principle, that a child within the age of nurture must continue with its mother. This has been done under certain circumstances, and for special reasons. But such is not the case here; the rule has been recognised by all judges, and doubted by none. It does not refer to the will of the mother, but is established for the protection of the child; we ought to crush the first attempt to depart from that important principle." Williams, J. "The only question for our consideration is, in whose favour is this rule made? I concur in the principle laid down by my Lord,—the rule is for the protection of the child, and is inflexible." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. This question is raised in the driest way; the consent relied upon on behalf of the order of removal is that of a married woman, which, in questions respecting property, would not be considered of the slightest value. We cannot make a different rule for a child of one week and a child of six years old. Now, look at the serious consequences of removing a child of a week old from its mother to a distant parish, because its mother consents to the removal. We cannot waive a principle which is for the benefit of the child." Wightman, J., concurred.—Order quashed.

3. Removal of Children.

Legitimate children above the age of seven years, and under sixteen, may be removed to their settlement. Rex v. Stafford, p. 432.

An order removing nurse children to the settlement of their parents, is good, though it takes no notice of the death of the parents.

Bucklebury v. Bradfield, 1 T. R. 164. Elizabeth, aged five, John, aged two years and a half, and Sarah Knott, aged one year and a half, were removed from Bucklebury to Bradfield. The order set forth the ages of the paupers, and that it was made as well upon the examination of Elizabeth Knott, their grandmother, upon oath, as otherwise. Order quashed. Case: —Charles Knott went to Twickenham in 1777, where he married Sarah Slade, who dying in 1784, Charles brought the paupers to Elizabeth, his mother, who was living at Bucklebury in 1785, and told her they were his children, and desired her to take care of them, and he would send money for their maintenance; the paupers remained with Elizabeth about fourteen weeks, but she not receiving any money from her son, and being unable to maintain them, they were removed to Bradfield, who appealed, and Charles was subpœnaed, but did not appear. The appeal was adjourned at the next sessions; he not appearing, the appeal was not heard, but adjourned, when the appeal was heard, and the removants proceeded to support the order by the following evidence: David Knott, the paternal grandfather, had his settlement in Bradfield, and his son Charles was born there. It did not appear whether Charles had gained any settlement subsequent to his derivative settlement, nor was any evidence given to identify the paupers to be the children of Charles and Sarah Knott, except as above. In support of the order it was urged, that the paupers being nurse children, ought not to have been removed without their father or mother, unless the order had stated they were dead, otherwise the children might be settled in a different parish from their parents. Another objection was, that the order was grounded on the examination of the grandmother, and not on that of the father. And there was no evidence produced at the sessions but the grandmother to identify those children, or that the father had not gained a subsequent settlement. The other side was stopped by the court, who were clearly of opinion that there was no objection to the competency of this evidence; and as to the other point, that it was incumbent on the parish of Bradfield to have shown that the father had gained a subsequent settlement. Order of sessions quashed.

Proof of the grandfather's settlement sufficient primâ facie case.

In Rex v. Brington, p. 1018, the Court of King's Bench presumed that the sessions had quashed the order as to the child that had been removed with its mother, as being within the age of nurture.

When child presumed to be under the age of nurture.

3. Removal of Children.

Bastard not to be removed from the mother whilst a nurse child.

If a mother and child have different settlements, it seems that the bastard child, like all other children, shall go with the mother for nurture until the age of seven years. Thus in Cripplegate v. Saint Saviour's, p. 409, it was agreed by the whole court, that the age of a nurse child, so as to go along with its mother, is until seven years of age. So also in Skeffreth v. Walford, p. 419. The order was to remove a woman to her settlement, and her bastard child, of two years of age, to another parish, at a distance from the mother, being the place of its birth. It was objected, that the child being a nurse child, it could not be separated from the mother, by reason of the care necessary to nurture so very young a child, which none can be supposed so fit to administer as the mother of it; and therefore it should have been sent with her to the place of her settlement. And the order was quashed by the court for that reason. But it appears to be settled, that although whilst the child continues with its mother as a nurse child, it is irremovable to its place of settlement, yet the parish where it is legally settled shall maintain such child in the other parish where it is resident with its mother.

To be maintained whilst a nurse child by its own parish.

Same point.

Rex v. Hemlington, Dougl. 9, n. 2. Case:—Elizabeth, a single woman, with her child Mary, went under a certificate from Hemlington to Darlington, in which last parish she had two bastard children, and there became chargeable. An order being made for the removal of her and Mary to Hemlington, she took the two children who were born in Darlington with her, they being both under the age of emancipation. Two justices made an order on Darlington for the maintenance of the two bastard children, which order, upon an appeal, was quashed. It was urged that there is no statute which gives the justices any authority to make an order for the maintenance of children on a parish where they do not actually reside. Lord Mansfield, C. J., said no authorities have been cited in support of this proposition, and there are many against it; Rex v. St. Giles's in the Fields (Burr. S. C. 2); Rex v. Wangford (2 Wils. 3; Fort. 307); and Rex v. Saxmundham (2 Bott, 18), which is directly in point. The practice is also agreeably to those cases. Aston, J., cited another case, where it was directly held that the parish where the settlement of the nurture child is shall maintain it. Judgment to quash the order of sessions, and confirm the original order by which the parish of Darlington was charged.

There is no difference between bastards and legitimate children under such circumstances.

Shermandbury v. Bolney, Carth. 279. A woman with three children, all under seven, being settled in Shermandbury, married a person settled in Bolney. After the marriage the mother and the three children were sent to Bolney. The parish of Shermandbury, before the marriage, allowed 3*s.* per week for three children; and the payment being discontinued after the marriage, on complaint of the parish of Bolney, two justices made an order that Shermandbury should continue to pay the 3*s.* The sessions, and afterwards B. R., confirmed the order of the justices. And the court said, "This case is within the equity of the statute for the relief of the poor, and there is no reason that Shermandbury should be discharged of the children by their mother's marriage. The inconvenience, when the two parishes are at a great distance from each other, is only similar to what is experienced on appeals brought on removals from parishes at a greater distance. As to the method of enforcing the order, it may be done by indictment, or perhaps the parish officers in whose behalf it is made might maintain a special action of assumpsit against those upon whom it was made." (Vide Rex v. Toms, Dougl. 401.) In Rann v. Green (1 Cowp. 474), the court held, that when persons acting under a private act of parliament, make an order by authority of such act for the payment of money, the law raises an assumpsit, and the same rule must hold in the case of a public act.

---

4. Of Removal of Servants.

A servant cannot be removed from the master without consent.

4. Of Removal of Servants.

It has already been observed that the justices have no power, upon the complaint of the parish officers, to remove a servant from his master, because that would be to dissolve the contract betwixt the master and his servant, which can only be done upon the complaint of the master or servant. Therefore if a female servant happens to be pregnant, and the child is likely to be born a bastard, yet if her master is willing to keep her, the parish cannot remove her; whilst, on the other hand, the master, if he pleases, may complain to a justice of the peace that she is less able to perform the service, and the justice (if he sees cause) may discharge her; and thereupon the parish officers, having obtained the order of two justices, may remove her.

4. Removal of Servants.

Rex v. Bleworth, Burr. 302, 304. Where a servant was hired for three years on certain conditions, Lord Chief Justice Lee put an end to the argument on the contract by saying, "How could the justices remove him out of the service?" It appears that the man was actually in the service at the time of the removal. And the court quashed the order.

Same point.

In Farringdon v. Witty, 2 Salk. 527; 2 Bott, 295, it was determined that excepting on complaint of the master, a servant could not be removed from his master's service, although the parish officers did complain.

Servant not removable from master's service.

Rex v. Marlborough, 12 Mod. 403; 2 Bott, 42. An order of removal was made of a female servant, who within her year of service was pregnant of a bastard. The court: "If one hire a woman for a year, and before the year's end she is got with child, she shall not for that be removed, but shall serve out her time. This, however, is good cause for discharge from her service; and after her discharge she might be removed."

A servant may be discharged for bastardy, and then removed.

Rex v. Brampton (ante, p. 464.) A female servant may be discharged by her master for being with child, and may then be removed to her settlement.

Same point.

Rex v. Alveley, 3 East, 563. Jane Hinson, single woman, was removed from Kinver to Alveley, being with child, and therefore deemed chargeable. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was settled in Alveley, and some time previous to Michaelmas, 1801, hired herself for a year to E. C., of Kinver, for a year. She entered and served till September 2d, 1802, when she being about seven months gone with child, the parish officers of Kinver insisted upon her going before two magistrates to be examined as to her settlement, and accordingly took her away from her service on the evening of that day, and the next morning brought her before the magistrates, who made the order of removal. The pauper's master had made no complaint against her, he did not consent to her being taken away, but objected to it, as did the pauper herself, who was perfectly able to do her work. After her examination had been taken, she returned to her master's service, and on the following day the parish officers removed her under the order from Kinver to A., telling her at the same time that she might return to Kinver. Lord Ellenborough. "If the order of removal were good, no doubt it would operate to dissolve the contract. In Rex v. Kenilworth (post), the order of removal being unappealed from, was deemed valid; but this is now under appeal, and may be controverted. And that brings it to the question, whether the order was properly made? Was it not the meaning of the act to prevent the removal of persons until actually chargeable, who were before removable, if likely to become so; but not to make persons removable who were not proper objects of removal before that act? Could it be meant that a person in this situation should be torn away from her parents, whatever her condition in life may be, and however far removed from any probability of being a charge on the parish? Is there any instance to be found in the books before this act, of a woman, under these circumstances, being a person of substance, and yet deemed to be removable? The substance of a person so situated repels the idea of her being chargeable; and the act did not mean to make any one removable who was not so antecedently to the passing of the act. The general provision is, that no person shall be removable till actually chargeable; and the 6th section introduces an exception to that general rule, leaving the person so circumstanced to the operation of the law, as it stood before the passing of the act." [The respondent's counsel observed, that there were no facts stated in the case to show that the woman was not a person who was likely to become chargeable at the time of the order made, or that the removing magistrates had not exercised their judgment upon that fact; on the contrary, they adjudge her to be chargeable, and before the act in question, such a person was removable.] Lord Ellenborough. "There is nothing of that sort stated in the case, nor anything in the order itself, to show that the magistrates adjudged her to be chargeable otherwise than as a consequence of law in their understanding of the act of parliament; they adjudge that she is with child, 'and is therefore deemed chargeable to the parish of Kinver.' But though the act says that such a person shall be 'deemed and taken to be actually chargeable,' yet that must be understood to be secundum subjectam materiam, or as the act itself expresses it, 'chargeable within the true intent and meaning of this act,' which I have before explained. It lies upon the respondents to show, that before this passed, the mere circumstance of a single woman in the service of another, being with child, operated as a dissolution of the contract, and made her liable to be removed against the consent both of the master and servant." (See p. 833.)

Such a servant cannot be removed against the consent of the master and servant.

4. Removal of Servants

---

5. Of Removals under 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 6, of Women with Child.

Statutes relating to the removal of unmarried persons with child repealed.

5. Of Removals under 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 6, of Women with Child.

By the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, it was provided that no one should be removed who was not actually chargeable; but by the same statute, an unmarried woman, with child, was thereby deemed to be actually chargeable. The 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 9, however, repeals so much of the act as rendered an unmarried woman, with child, liable to be removed. Although the 35 Geo. III. declared such woman to be chargeable, yet a woman able to provide for herself and child, or who is in service, is not within the rule of the statute. Rex v. Alveley, p. 1027. A married woman, whose husband is abroad, was held to be within the old statute. Rex v. Tibbenham, p. 1023.

Order adjudging merely that the woman removed was with child and unmarried, without drawing the conclusion that she was chargeable, is bad.

Rex v. Holm, East Waver Quarter, 11 East, 381. An order of removal stated, "That E. M., single woman, is with child and unmarried, we the said justices do adjudge the same to be true." Order confirmed. The objection was, "That it ought to have adjudged that the pauper was actually chargeable, and that it was not sufficient merely to state that she was with child and unmarried." Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "If it were an irrefragable conclusion that being a single woman and with child, the party removed must be deemed to be chargeable within the meaning of this statute, then this order would be good; otherwise the justices ought to have drawn that conclusion, in order to show that in their judgment she was a proper object of removal within the poor laws. But consistently with this order, the party might have been a single woman with child, worth 10,000*l.*, or she might have given the most ample security to the parish against any charge which could be thrown upon them. The statute in question first gives the general rule that no persons shall be removed before they are actually chargeable. It then says that single women with child shall be deemed and taken to be actually chargeable, within the true intent of the act. But still the justices ought to draw the conclusion that she is within that general rule, otherwise every single woman with child, whatever might be her substance, might be removed by the parish officers. Being unmarried and with child, such a person is presumptively chargeable, from the strong probability of the fact that she must be so; but there may be circumstances, such as the substance of the party, or the giving a complete indemnity to the parish, which may exclude that presumption. Now every circumstance of that sort might have existed in this case, and yet the order, as it is framed, be true. In Rex v. Diddlebury (p. 1029), the justices deemed her to have become chargeable; but she could not have been deemed to be chargeable if those circumstances had existed in her instance. It ought to appear by the order that the justices have exercised their judgment upon the matter, and repelled the existence of such circumstances by the adjudgment that she was chargeable, in order to show that she was a proper object of removal within the meaning of the law."

5. Removals under 35 Geo. III.

Rex v. Diddlebury, 9 East, 398. Upon complaint "That Ann Evans, single woman, had come to inhabit, &c. &c., and is, by being pregnant, deemed to have become chargeable to the said parish of T.," two justices, "upon due proof made thereof, did adjudge the same to be true." Case: —The pauper, being a single woman, settled in D., and becoming actually chargeable to T., within the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 6, by being pregnant with a child who had since been born a bastard, was removed from T. to Diddlebury, and the pauper appearing to be a labourer without substance, the mother of other bastard children, and not a hired servant, was properly removed as actually chargeable. This case was argued immediately after Rex v. Tibbenham, p. 1023, and after giving judgment in that case, Lord Ellenborough, said, "That there was little more to add with respect to this, than that the orders should be confirmed. On the facts of the case, as bringing it within the general policy of the poor laws, and the words of 35 Geo. III., there could be no doubt, and with respect to the form of the order of removal, the premises are stated, as in the statute itself, from whence the conclusion is drawn; and therefore all is stated which the statute requires."

But an order stating that A. E., single woman, was, by being pregnant, deemed to have become chargeable, &c. is good.

Rex v. Great Yarmouth, 8 T. R. 68. Mary Pestile, widow, was removed from Great Yarmouth to Ditchingham. Order quashed for informality, but no case stated. In the order of removal it was recited and adjudged, that the pauper was with child which was likely to be born a bastard; that she was living in Great Yarmouth, not having gained a settlement there; that she was deemed to be a person actually chargeable to Great Yarmouth, and that her place of settlement was at Ditchingham; without negativing her having a certificate from any parish. The question intended to be raised was, whether or not the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, extends to an unmarried woman who is residing under a certificate? Per Curiam: "The orders which alone are before the court are scarcely sufficient to raise the question that (it is said) was meant to be agitated; but even if they were, this pauper comes within the words of the statute alluded to, which are general, 'every unmarried woman, &c.;' and also within the reason of the act. This clause seems to have been introduced for the very purpose of remedying what was before an apparent defect in the poor laws; for before that act passed, a certificated person in this situation could not have been removed, although the child when born would be settled in the certificated parish. Therefore as the words of the statute are sufficiently comprehensive to include this case, there is no reason why we should narrow or abridge the construction of them, so as to prevent their extending to a case that wanted the remedy." Rule absolute.

An unmarried woman, being pregnant, may be removed, though she be residing under a certificate.

---

6. Of Removal of Casual Poor.

6. Removal of Casual Poor.

We have before considered the duty of overseers to relieve casual poor in the parish where they have sustained any accident or have been suddenly taken ill, and incidentally how far the power of removal, p. 113, and the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, or 35 Geo. III. c. 101, is in such cases taken away or suspended during such illness. If a pauper meets with an accident in a particular parish, that parish is bound to provide for him as casual poor, until he be cured; nor can they relieve themselves by removing such pauper into an adjoining parish, or his proper parish; for no person is removable from the parish where he is, unless under some positive enactment, and such person is not within the statute Car. II. as a person coming to settle.

Paupers meeting with an accident in a parish in which they are not dwelling, are not removable.

Rex v. Birmingham, 14 East, 251. Mary Hoppins and her children were removed from Feckenham to Birmingham. Order confirmed. Case: —The pauper was resident in the parish of Inkberrow, in Worcestershire, renting a house there, and receiving relief from I. Upon applying, as usual, for this relief to the officers of the parish, it was refused her, and she was desired to go to the officers of Feckenham, an adjoining parish, in which some of her husband's relations had resided; this she did; F. refused relief, and sent her back to I. Upon her return to I. and again

But a pauper who had been sent backwards and forwards from one parish to another, and been occasionally relieved by both, was holden removable.

6. Removal of Casual Poor.

applying there for relief, they refused and desired her to apply again to F.; and when she expressed an unwillingness to do so, one of the overseers of I. took her to F., without any order of removal, and told her not to return again to I. Upon her being thus brought to F. the officers of F. relieved her, and at the same time threatened to send her to prison if she returned to I. She remained in F. for eight or ten days, not having previously had any abode there; at the end of that time she was removed by an order of two magistrates from F. to Birmingham. Rex v. St. James, Bury St. Edmund's, p. 113, was cited to show she was irremovable. Lord Ellenborough. "That was a very different case. This was the case of a starving vagrant, in whichever of the two parishes she was, who was going backwards and forwards between them, and would have been starved if she had not received temporary relief from one or the other. She was liable to be removed from either. How then can this oscillation between the two parishes affect the order of removal to her proper parish?" Orders confirmed.

Foreigners.

Foreigners, who have not gained a settlement, cannot be removed, but are to be relieved as casual poor.

Must be maintained where they are found.

Cowred's case, Comb. 287; 2 Bott, 17. A Dutchwoman and her two children landed at Harwich from Holland, and, removing to another place, were sent back to Harwich by an order of two justices. Eyre, J., (Holt, C. J., being absent), said, "You must keep them when you have them for aught I know; for it seems to be a case omitted out of the statute." Order quashed.

---

7. Of the Removal of Poor Persons, &c.

7. Of the Removal of Poor Persons born in Scotland, Ireland, Isles of Man, and Scilly.

Persons born in Scotland, Ireland, the Isles of Man and Scilly, and becoming chargeable to any parish here, may be removed to their own country if they have acquired no settlement in England. The removal is now regulated by the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 40. The 1st sect. repeals the former statutes, and the 2nd gives the power of removal. These have already been considered, p. 121. The other sections of the statute, which were altogether new, relate to the mode of removal, and the payment of the expenses. By s. 3, it is enacted, that the justices of the peace of every county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, next after the passing of this act, or some adjournment thereof, and from time to time thereafter, at their general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, to direct in what manner, and whether by sea or land, or part of the way by land and part by sea, such poor person, his wife and child or children, removable under the provisions of this act by the churchwardens and overseers of any parish, township, or place maintaining its own poor within such county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, shall be removed.

Justices at sessions to direct how they shall be removed.

Justices at quarter sessions to make rules, &c. for carrying this act into execution.

4. And be it further enacted, that the justices of the peace of every county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty shall and may and they are hereby required, at the general or quarter sessions of the peace to be holden in and for such county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, next after the passing of this act, or some adjournment thereof, and from time to time thereafter, at their general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, to make such orders, rules, regulations, and directions, for the more effectually carrying the provisions of this act into execution, as they in their discretion shall think proper; which orders, rules, regulations, and directions shall from time to time be observed and submitted to by all justices of the peace, overseers, churchwardens, constables, and other persons concerned in or charged with the removal of such poor person, his wife, child or children as aforesaid, within such county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty.

Overseers to be repaid expenses out of county rate.

5. And be it further enacted, that in case the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, township, or place maintaining its own poor, on whose complaint such order of removal shall be made as aforesaid, shall bring or send to the clerk of the peace or town clerk of the county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty in which such parish, township, or place maintaining its own poor shall be situate, such order of removal, accompanied with an affidavit sworn before some justice of the peace of such county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, (who is hereby authorised to administer the same,) of the amount of the expenses bonâ fide incurred and paid by such churchwardens and overseers on account of the removal of such poor person, his wife, child or children as aforesaid, and also a statement of the several items comprised in such amount, such clerk of the peace or town clerk is hereby required to lay the same before the justices of the peace assembled at the quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, held in and for such county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, next after he shall have received the same; and the said justices so assembled as aforesaid are hereby authorised and required to order the amount thereof to be paid out of the county rate raised and levied in such county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty: provided, that on the removal of such poor person, his wife, child or children as aforesaid, the orders, rules, regulations, and directions of the said justices, made as hereinbefore mentioned, have been duly complied with.

7. Of the Removal of Poor Persons, &c.

6. And be it further enacted, that all such charges and expenses as aforesaid, which shall be properly and reasonably made for the purposes aforesaid out of any such parish rates within the city of London, shall by such parish or extra-parochial place maintaining its own poor, or parish next adjoining to such extra-parochial place, be charged against the said city of London, and being audited and allowed by the justices of the said city of London assembled at any quarter sessions or adjourned sessions of the peace in or for the said city of London, shall thereupon by the chamberlain of the said city of London be repaid to the overseers or guardians of the poor of the said parish or extra-parochial place maintaining its own poor, or parish next adjoining to such extra-parochial place, for the benefit thereof; for which purpose a rate or assessment shall be made by the order and under the authority of such justices of the said city of London, in the several wards of the said city of London, at such time or times as such justices shall think fit, in the same manner and with the same powers and authorities as the rates for the relief of the poor are made in the said parishes and extra-parochial places; and the powers and authorities contained in the several acts of parliament for making and collecting rates for the relief of the poor shall be and the same are hereby extended to this act.

How expenses to be defrayed of removing poor persons within London.

7. And be it further enacted, that in any city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty which does not contribute to the county rate, or in which no county rate shall be made, raised, or levied, the charges and expenses paid for the purposes aforesaid by the parish or parishes within such city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty as aforesaid, shall be allowed by the justices of the peace for such city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty as aforesaid, at any quarter sessions or adjourned sessions of the peace, and paid by the order of such justices to the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish or parishes within such city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, for which purposes a general rate or assessment shall be made by the order and under the authority of such justices in the parish or parishes, if more than one, within such city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty, at such time or times as such justices shall think fit, in the same manner and with the same powers and authorities as the rates for the relief of the poor are made in the parish or parishes of such city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty; and the powers and authorities contained in the several acts of parliament for making and collecting rates for the relief of the poor shall be and the same are hereby extended to this act for the making, raising, levying, and collecting the said rate.

How expenses to be defrayed when parish is situate in any city, &c. not contributing to county rate.

7. Of the Removal of Poor Persons, &c.

8. And be it further enacted, that this act shall continue in force until the first day of May, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six, and to the end of the then next session of parliament.

Term of act. (a)

SCHEDULE.

Form of Order of Removal.

To the constable of the parish of in the county of

WHEREAS complaint hath been made by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the ["parish, township," et cetera, as the case may be,] in the said county of unto us, whose names are hereunto set and seals affixed, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said county (one being of the quorum), that a person born in Scotland, [or "Ireland," or "the Isle of Man," or "Scilly,"] hath become and is now actually chargeable to the said ["parish, township," et cetera, as the case may be]: and whereas upon examination of the said taken upon oath before us (which examination is hereto annexed) it doth appear and we do adjudge, that the said hath not gained a settlement in England, and that he hath a wife named and children, videlicet, neither of which children have gained any settlement in England:

These are therefore to require you the said constable of aforesaid, in the county of aforesaid, to convey the said his wife and family aforesaid, to Scotland, [or "Ireland," or "the Isle of Man," or "Scilly,"] in the manner directed by the justices of the said county of in pursuance of the provisions of a certain act made and passed in the fourth year of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled [here set out the title of this act].

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty

[Here copy the regulations, et cetera, of the justices at sessions, as applicable to the removal of the party.]

Form of Examination.

THE examination of taken on oath before us two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the ["county, riding, city, borough, town corporate, division," or "liberty"] aforesaid, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty- who on oath saith, that according to the best of ["his" or "her"] knowledge and belief ["he" or "she"] was born in in that part of the United Kingdom called Scotland, [or "Ireland," or "in the Isle of Man," or "Scilly,"] which ["he" or "she"] left about years ago, and hath done no act whereby to gain a settlement in that part of the United Kingdom called England, and hath actually become and is now chargeable to the [parish] of in the ["county, township," et cetera, as the same may be,] of [and that he hath a wife named and children, neither of which children have gained a settlement in England.]

Sworn the day and year first above written, before us,

Persons removing poor in pursuance of the above act, to have the power of constables.

By the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 10, every person to whom an order of removal under the above act shall be delivered for the purpose of being carried into execution, may detain in safe custody every poor person mentioned in such order, until such poor person shall have arrived at the place to which he is ordered to be removed; and for that purpose in every county and place through which he shall pass, in the due execution of such order, shall have the powers with which a constable is invested, notwithstanding he may not be empowered to act as a constable in such county or place.

(a) By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 27, the powers of the above act are continued to the session of parliament next after the 1st August, 1843.

8. Of the Removal of Poor Persons Born in Jersey and Guernsey.

8. Of the Removal of Poor Persons to Jersey and Guernsey.

The 11 Geo. IV. c. 5, repeals so much of 17 Geo. II. c. 6, as relates to the removal of vagrants, and of 59 Geo. III. c. 12, and of 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, as relates to the passing and removing vagrants and poor persons born in Jersey and Guernsey, and makes provision for the removal of such persons to their native islands. See p. 127.

---

9. Of Soldiers, Officers, Mariners, Marines.

9. Of Soldiers, Officers, Mariners, and Marines.

By 3 Geo. III. c. 8, officers, mariners, soldiers, and marines, who had served since 29th of November, 1748, and not deserted; and by 42 Geo. III. c. 69, the like persons who had served since 16th of July, 1784; and by 42 Geo. III. c. 60, s. 3, and 42 Geo. III. c. 90, s. 75, all militia-men, being married men, who had personally served in actual service for five years; and by 56 Geo. III. c. 67, all such persons as aforesaid, who had been employed since 22nd of June, 1802, and also all fencibles who had served five years, and been honourably discharged, and also their wives and children, might set up such trades as aforesaid, without any molestation by reason of the using of certain trades, nor should they, or their wives or children, during the time they shall exercise such trades, be removable to their place of settlement until they shall become actually chargeable.

In Rex v. Gwenop (3 T. R. 133), it was determined that working as a husbandman was not a trade within the meaning of the above act, and such persons are therefore removable.

However, 35 Geo. III. c. 101, has rendered these provisions unavailable, as far as respects removals, as that act provides that no person shall be removable till actually chargeable.

Militia-men, &c.

By 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 6, so much of 43 Geo. III. c. 47, is repealed as authorised relief to be given to the wives and families of substitutes, hired men, or volunteers of militia; and also so much as prevents such families from being removable to their place of legal settlement, or sent to any workhouse, by reason of their receiving any allowance or being chargeable.

---

10. Woolcombers not Removable.

10. Woolcombers not removable.

Persons who have served apprenticeship to any branch of the woollen manufactures, and their wives and families, may set up and exercise any trade in any place in Great Britain, &c.

Not removable.

By 49 Geo. III. c. 109, s. 5, it is enacted, "That all such persons who have served an apprenticeship to any branch of the woollen manufacture, or who are by law entitled to use and exercise the same, and also the wives and children of such persons, may set up and exercise such trade, or any other trade or business which they are apt and able for in any town or place within Great Britain, without any let, suit, or molestation of any person or persons whatsoever, for or by reason of the using of such trade: nor shall any such person, or their wives or children, during the time they shall exercise such trade, be removable from such respective place or places to his, her, or their last legal place of settlement, by virtue of any law now in being relative to the settlement of the poor, until such person or persons shall become actually chargeable to such parish or place; and if any such person, or the wife or child of any such person, shall be sued, impleaded, or indicted in any court whatsoever within this kingdom, for using or exercising any such trade as aforesaid, then the said person, or the wife or child of any such person, making it appear to the same court where they are so sued, impleaded, or indicted, that they have served a legal apprenticeship to the said trade as aforesaid, or that he, she, or they is or are the wife or wives, child or children, of such person or persons who shall have so served a legal apprenticeship as aforesaid, shall upon the general issue pleaded be found not guilty in any plaint, bill, information, or indictment exhibited against them; and such persons who, notwithstanding this act, shall prosecute the said suit by bill, plaint, information, or indictment, and shall have a verdict pass against him, or become nonsuit therein, or discontinue their said suit,

10. Woolcombers not Removable.

such person or persons shall pay unto such persons who have served an apprenticeship to, or who may be entitled to exercise any branch of the woollen manufacture, or the wife or child of such person respectively, double costs of suit, to be recovered as any other costs at common law may be recovered; and all judges and juries before whom any such suit, information, or indictment shall be brought, and all other persons whatsoever, are to take notice of this present act, and shall conform themselves thereto, any statute, law, ordinance, custom, or provision to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

III. Of the Order of Removal, Suspension, and Execution of it.

1. Of the Place from and to which a Removal may be.
2. On the Complaint of Whom.
3. Of the Justices, their Style and Jurisdiction.
4. The Hearing and Examination.
5. The Form of Order of Removal.
   1. The County.
   2. Description of Paupers.
   3. That they are Chargeable.
   4. Adjudication.
   5. To whom Directed.
6. Time and Manner of Serving it.
7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.
8. Of Superseding Order.
9. Of Filing Order of Removal, &c.
10. Penalty and Punishment for not Observing Order.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

This subject has been partially treated already, p. 406.

There can be no removal from an extra-parochial place where there are no overseers.

The Forest of Dean v. Linton, 2 Salk. 487; Fol. 96, 97; 2 Bott, 688. If a place be extra-parochial and hath no overseers, the justices cannot remove from thence, because there are none either to complain or to convey; but the justices ought first to appoint overseers, and then to remove. (But see Rex v. Mereval, Burr. S. C. 661.)

Paupers not removable to or from extra-parochial places.

Bridewell v. Clerkenwell, 2 Salk. 486; Carth. 515; 1 Ld. Raym. 549. H. served seven years to a hemp-dresser in the precinct of Bridewell, and afterwards lived in Clerkenwell, without gaining a settlement, and the justices removed him to Bridewell as his last legal settlement, by an order which set forth Bridewell to be an extra-parochial place. Holt, C. J. "If a place is extra-parochial, and has not the force of a parish, the justices have no authority to send any man thither; and so it was resolved in the case of Sir J. Osborn. Possibly a place extra-parochial may be taxed in aid of a parish, but a parish shall not in aid of that. This is casus omissus." Order quashed.

A pauper may be removed to the parish in a hamlet of which he gained a settlement, though such hamlet was not rated to the poor of the parish.

Rex v. Tamworth, Cald. 28; 2 Bott, 633. T. Goff and family were removed from the hamlet of Bolehall and Glascote to the parish of Tamworth, adjudging their settlement to be at Sirescote, in the parish of Tamworth, and ordering the overseers of Tamworth to receive them. Order confirmed. The pauper was hired for a year, and served that year at Sirescote, which is a hamlet consisting of one house only, and between three and four hundred acres of land; but had never contributed to the poor of the parish of Tamworth, nor had ever been assessed thereto; but had been always assessed and paid to the support of the church of Tamworth. No overseers had ever been appointed for the hamlet of Sirescote. The pauper and his family were delivered to the churchwardens of the parish of Tamworth. It was insisted, that the circumstance of the hamlet never having contributed towards those burthens which the law threw upon the whole parish was immaterial, and that this place could never be considered as a vill within the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, there being only one house, and no overseers, and that this was a part of the parish. On the other side it was contended, that this was a distinct vill, independent of the parish, and to which no pauper could be sent until it had officers duly appointed: that the justices had stated this to be a hamlet, and adjudged that the pauper had therein gained a settlement. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "There is no doubt at all: the place is averred to be within the parish where the hiring and service were had and performed, and it has no township or vill within the stat. of Car. II. where officers are appointed, and therefore the justices could not remove the pauper there; here are no overseers, no separate economy: the adjudication is to Sirescote, as part of the parish of Tamworth." The other judges concurred. Both orders affirmed.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

Rex v. Saighton-on-the-Hill, 2 B. & Ald. 162. Removal from St. Bridget, Chester, to Saighton-on-the-Hill. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper, Joseph Gill, being settled in Saighton-on-the-Hill, about twenty years ago acquired a subsequent settlement by renting a tenement in the township of Gloverstone, in the parish of St. Mary-on-the-Hill, in the city of Chester, in which parish there are several townships, each separately maintaining its own poor. Of these townships Gloverstone was one, and was situated in the county palatine, and not in the city. At the time the pauper obtained a settlement in Gloverstone it was a township, having overseers, and maintaining its own poor, which continued to be the case until about ten years ago, when all the houses in the township were taken down for the purpose of enlarging Chester castle. There are now no buildings in the township of Gloverstone, except part of the courts of the county, and some barracks and other buildings belonging to the Barrack Board. No overseers have been appointed for the township of Gloverstone for the last ten years, and there is no place within the township inhabited by persons capable of being appointed overseers. Abbott, C. J. "The authority of magistrates to remove paupers exists only and is derived from the express provisions of an act of parliament; and in a new case the best mode for the court is to form their judgment on the very words of the act. There may be many cases where a pauper having no settlement in the place where he may happen to be, may still not be removable from it; either because he has no settlement at all, or because the parish officers are not enabled to discover the place of his settlement. The words of the act are, that any two justices of the peace may, by their warrant, remove and convey persons likely to be chargeable to the parish where he or they were last legally settled. It is, therefore, enough for the court in deciding this case to say, that Saighton is not the parish where the pauper was legally settled, inasmuch as he appears to have subsequently acquired a settlement in Gloverstone, by which the former settlement was extinguished. The justices, therefore, in this case had no authority to remove the pauper; and the sessions have done wrong in confirming their order." Bayley and Holroyd, Js., concurred.

Where the pauper acquired a settlement in a township which was afterwards extinguished, he could not be removed to a prior settlement.

Reg. v. Tipton, 2 G. & D. 92; 2 Q. B. 215. The facts are given in the judgment delivered by Lord Denman:—"The question in this case arises upon the removal of Elizabeth Shaw from Tipton to the township of the borough of Hales Owen. The sessions quashed the order, and stated a case in substance as follows. Previous and up to the year 1832 the parish of Hales Owen consisted of fifteen townships, twelve of which are in the county of Salop, and three in the county of Worcester. The three latter were always independent of the other twelve, and of each other, for the purpose of maintaining the poor. The former twelve, 'from time immemorial (until 1832),' constituted one parish, having one set of overseers, and maintained their poor as such parish. In 1832, (a) by virtue of a writ of mandamus (on the application of one of the twelve townships, Oldbury), the parish of Hales Owen became divided, and all the twelve townships in the county of Salop have since maintained their poor apart, have had separate overseers, and none have since been appointed for the parish of Hales Owen. About ten years before such subdivision, the pauper was born a bastard, in the parish workhouse in the township of the borough of Hales Birth in a township, which is afterwards made separate, confers no settlement there.

(a) Rex v. Salop, p. 18.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

Owen, and the question is, whether she gained a settlement in the latter township by such birth; and that must depend upon this, how far, before such subdivision, each township ought to be considered as connected with or independent of the parish for purposes of settlement. Generally speaking they are not so connected: any act by which a settlement may be gained has no reference to the township in which it may be acquired, but to the parish only. Whether that settlement was gained in the township of the borough of Hales Owen or Oldbury, or any other of the ten townships constituting the parish of Hales Owen, was before the separation wholly immaterial: it was not a settlement in township A. or B., but in the district, where alone it could be gained, the parish. This point has been, to a certain extent, under the consideration of the court in respect of this same parish and townships. In Rex v. Oldbury (post,), there was an order of removal into that township, Oldbury, and in support of it a former order was produced, removing the pauper into the parish of Hales Owen, against which there had been no appeal. Such latter order was relied upon as conclusive against the township of Oldbury, and was held so to be by the Court of Quarter Sessions. This court, however, decided, with some hesitation, that it was not; which decision could only have been upon the ground that a settlement in the parish is not a settlement in the whole, and also in every part or township in it; because, if it had been, the sessions were unquestionably right; for if, as was then contended, the proof of a settlement there given applied to the parish and to every township equally, and to the same extent, the order of removal unappealed against would have been conclusive, and all evidence against it inadmissible. The decision in Rex v. Oakmere (infra), cited in the argument, was to this effect, that the birth of a pauper in the forest of Delamere, whilst extra-parochial, gained no settlement in the township of Oakmere, which was constituted such township by act of parliament long after; or, in other words, that the state of things at the time of the birth was to be considered, and then no settlement could of course be gained. So here, by 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 3, the settlement of the pauper at her birth was in the parish of Hales Owen, that being the 'district on whose account the pauper's mother was received and maintained in the house.' The locality, therefore, of the township of the borough of Hales Owen is excluded, and all the townships contributing to the workhouse stand on the same footing. Indeed, independent of the statute, the settlement by birth would have been in the parish. That being so, to sustain the order of removal into the township of Hales Owen, we must hold that a settlement by birth was gained equally in the parish and each of the townships composing it, for which we can find no warrant of direct authority or analogy in the law of settlement. It has been suggested, as a difficulty, that, unless we so hold, the parish, by subdivision, will get rid of settlements, and that persons who would otherwise have gained them may have none. A similar result happened under circumstances nearly the converse of the present, in the case of Rex v. Saighton-on-the-Hill, (p. 1035). There the pauper had gained a settlement in Saighton, and afterwards in Gloverstone, then a township. Afterwards, by certain alterations in the castle of Chester, all the houses in Gloverstone were pulled down, and it ceased to exist as a township. The removal was accordingly into Saighton, as the last practicable place of settlement. The court, however, decided that the settlement in Saighton was extinguished by that in Gloverstone, though the necessary effect of the decision was to leave the pauper without any settlement at all. Upon the whole we are of opinion, that the decision of the sessions was right."

Remarks on Rex v. Oldbury.

Rex v. Oakmere.

In Rex v. Hunnington (p. 407) it was held that no settlement could have been acquired in Hales Owen prior to 1834.

None can be acquired till after the separation.

Rex v. Oakmere, 1 D. & R. 427; 5 B. & Ald. 775. John Bradford was removed from Over Tabley to Oakmere. Order confirmed. The township of Oakmere was before and until the passing of an act of parliament, 52 Geo. III., part of the forest of Delamere, and extra-parochial. By that act, intituled, "An Act for Inclosing the Forest of Delamere," the forest

A district previously extra-parochial, was by act of parliament made a township, from thenceforth

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

to maintain its own poor.

A bastard born within the district previously to passing the act, is not settled there.

was, in December, 1819, divided into four separate townships, of which Oakmere was one. Since that time overseers of the poor have been duly appointed for the township of Oakmere. The pauper was born many years ago, a bastard, in Oakmere, whilst it was extra-parochial, and part of the forest of Delamere. The question was, whether the removal to Oakmere, as the birth-place of the pauper, could be sustained? The following were the clauses in the act on which the question depended: "And be it further enacted, that the district called or known by the name of Delamere Forest, and all such lands lying contiguous thereto, as are now extra-parochial, shall, as soon as the moiety of the said forest, which is hereby directed to be allotted to and amongst the persons enjoying rights of common thereon, shall have been so allotted, divided, and inclosed, be and be deemed and taken to be a parish, and called and known by the name of Delamere parish, and shall for ever thereafter be and be deemed and taken to be a rectory. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall, and they are hereby authorised and required to, divide the said parish into two or more townships, to be called and distinguished by such names as the said commissioners shall appoint; and when the same shall be so divided, each and every such township shall, from thenceforth for ever thereafter, provide for its own poor, make and maintain its own roads, and have, enjoy, and be vested with such and the like powers, privileges, and immunities, and be subject to the same regulations as are incident to, and as are had, held, and enjoyed by the several other townships within the said county of Chester, by the laws and statutes of that part of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England." C. a. v. Abbott, C. J. "This case arises on the act 52 Geo. III. for inclosing the forest of Delamere, and the question is, whether the district newly created into a township under this statute, which before was neither in any parish nor township, is to be considered as if it had formerly been a parish or township, with regard to settlements; or only as becoming so from the time of its creation under the act, and as if it had formerly been wholly uninhabited? And we are of opinion that the latter is the true construction and effect of the statute. If the former construction should be adopted, much inconvenience and litigation might ensue. Many parishes wherein paupers have been considered as legally settled and have accordingly been maintained, might relieve themselves from their burden, by removing to this new township not only illegitimate persons born within the district whereof the township consists, but also many of those who had been servants, or apprentices, or had rented tenements of the yearly value of 10*l.* within it. By such removals a heavy burden might be thrown at once upon the new township. It is true, on the other hand, that the new township, having now overseers, may remove persons which the inhabitants of the district could not previously do; but then the inhabitants were not previously under the same legal obligation to maintain the poor who might be found within it as a parish or township; the consequence of which must have been, that such poor would in general find their way without removal into those parishes or townships that were compellable to maintain them, so that the new power of removal would not be likely to afford a relief commensurate with the new burden; and the former want of the power of removal might have the effect of charging this new township with the maintenance of persons under circumstances, in which, if the district had been previously a township, the inhabitants might have taken care to prevent the burden from falling upon them, as by the removal of unmarried pregnant women, or of persons coming to settle on tenements under 10*l.* a year, especially before the 35 Geo. III. c. 101. The latter, indeed, would not acquire a settlement for themselves, but settlements might be derived under them by apprentices and servants. And this is not like the case of a modern appointment of overseers to places that formerly had no such officers, because all such places must have been vills from time immemorial, and, consequently, under a legal obligation to maintain their poor, and See Rex v. Oldbury, post.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

possessing a legal right to the appointment of officers; and by such appointment to remove persons under the same circumstances as other townships or parishes might do. The consequence of this opinion is, that both the orders must be quashed."

The parish of C. was divided into seven townships, each maintaining its own poor. A waste salt marsh within the parish, not belonging to any township, was awarded by the commissioners of an inclosure act to pay a quantum of rate to each of the townships, and a settlement having been gained in such waste, the removal of the pauper to the parish of C. was bad, there being no overseers of the parish.

Rex v. Cartmel, 4 Nev. & M. 357; 2 Ad. & Ell. 262. R. Armer was removed from Burton to Cartmel. Order confirmed. Case:—The settlement relied upon by the respondents was by hiring and service at East Plain, in 1822. East Plain was before the act of parliament and award hereinafter mentioned part of a salt marsh formed by the gradual retiring of the sea, but occasionally overflowed by the tide, which salt marsh was part of the waste lands within the parish of Cartmel, and is bounded on the one side by the sea, and on the other by the ancient inclosed lands of the townships of Lower Holker and Lower Allithwaite, both within the parish of Cartmel; but whether East Plain was within or formed part of any of the other five townships hereinafter mentioned in the said parish, no other evidence was given than its local situation as above set forth, and the act of parliament and award hereinafter mentioned. There are in the parish of Cartmel seven townships, viz. Upper and Lower Holker, Upper and Lower Allithwaite, Broughton, Staveley, and Cartmel. Each of them maintains its own poor separately, and has a separate poor rate, and separate overseers. All the lands in the parish (except it be the said salt marsh, which East Plain is part of,) are comprised within one or other of these townships. There are no overseers of the poor for the parish at large, nor have any ever been appointed; neither is there or has there ever been any poor rate for the parish at large, or any parochial funds out of which the poor can be maintained. The notice of appeal against the order of removal was signed by all the churchwardens and all the overseers of the poor of all the said townships respectively, wherein they described themselves as the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Cartmel, and the appeal was entered as that of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Cartmel. The pauper was delivered to the overseer of the township of Lower Holker, with whom he still remained. By stat. 36 Geo. III. c. lxiv. (private), "For Improving, Dividing, and Inclosing the Commons, Waste Grounds, and Mosses, in the parish of Cartmel," (which act was made part of the case,) it was enacted, "that the commissioners appointed by the said act should draw up an award, which should specify and direct in what township or division within the said parish of Cartmel the several messuages, tenements, lands, mosses, and hereditaments, which should be exchanged, divided, or allotted by virtue of that act, should lie, or be parcel, and should be charged and pay all such taxes and assessments as should become due and payable in respect thereof." The commissioners in 1809 made their award, which, after allotting East Plain to certain persons, went on to order "that the said allotment or parcel of ground shall from time to time, and at all times hereafter, be subject to, and charged, and chargeable with the payment of such proportion of all rates, taxes, and assessments, parliamentary, parochial, or otherwise, out of the yearly value thereof, to the several townships or divisions within the said parish of Cartmel as are hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say,) to the township or division of Broughton after the rate of two-thirteenth parts or shares of the whole annual value thereof," &c. (the case then proceeded to state the proportions in which East Plain was directed by the award to contribute to the other townships respectively); "such several rates or assessments to be made in proportion as the said allotment bears in value with the estates of other proprietors in the said several townships or divisions." Since the making of the above-mentioned award the poor rates in respect of East Plain have been paid to the several townships within the parish of Cartmel, in the proportions named in the award. Thus, if there be a rate of 6*d.* in the pound on the annual value of lands in the township of Broughton, then East Plain pays to the overseer of the poor for the township of Broughton a rate of 6*d.* in the pound, or two-thirteenth parts of the annual value, and so mutatis mutandis of the other townships. On these facts the appellants contended, that as East Plain was a part of a marsh which was derelict of the sea, and which marsh abutted on the townships of Lower Holker and Lower Allithwaite, East Plain was situate within one or other of those townships, and that the respondents ought to have ascertained within which of them it was situate, and to have removed accordingly; and that a removal to a parish which had no poor rate and no overseers was bad. But the sessions held, that as East Plain, where the pauper gained a settlement, was within the appellant parish of Cartmel, it was for the appellants to show, not merely that there was no poor rate made and no overseer ever appointed for the parish at large, but that East Plain was within some one or other of the seven townships, and they were of opinion that as far as appeared it might be within none of those townships, although it was within the parish of Cartmel. They therefore confirmed the order. Lord Denman, C. J. "It is impossible to say how the matter may turn out on further inquiry. The mere fact of the inclosure is not sufficient to guide us; but at all events we must see that no party is called on to do that which he is not bound to do." Littledale and Williams, Js., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

Estoppel.

The removing parish may be estopped from saying that the place does not maintain its own poor. Reg. v. J. Westmorland, 13 L. J. p. 113. M. C.

If the place is a township, but described as a parish, and no appeal is had, it is conclusive.

Spitalfields v. Bromley, 18 Vin. Abr. 468; 2 Bott, 890. A pauper was sent to the parish of Stepney, who did not appeal. On removal of the order into the King's Bench, exception was taken, that the removal ought to have been to the township of Spitalfields; for Stepney is divided into four townships, and the poor have been removed from one township to another, in the same parish, and the statute takes notice of townships as well as parishes, and Spitalfields is a hamlet of Stepney. By the court: "If a person is removed to a wrong place, that place ought to appeal, and so Stepney ought to have done if it were a wrong place, or else the order will be conclusive upon them; but this is a matter here out of the record. Justices of the peace are not obliged to take notice of the divisions of parishes into townships and villages which maintain their own poor severally and distinctly; and Stepney here, upon an appeal, might have shown that the person did belong to the township of Spitalfields, which might have been a reasonable cause to discharge the order. Two townships within a parish are the same as two parishes; yet churchwardens are overseers of the poor of the whole of the parish, (though so divided,) and have a superintendency over the whole villages and townships."

Churchwardens are overseers of a whole parish, though it be divided into townships.

Where there is a parish and township of the same name, and the order is delivered to the officers of the township, that township will be concluded if it does not appeal.

Rex v. Kirkby Stephen, Burr. S. C. 664; 2 Bott, 894. The parish of Kirkby Stephen consists of ten different townships, who maintain their respective poor, and have separate overseers. The township of Kirkby Stephen and the township of Wharton are two of them. The pauper, W. Greer, was removed from Newport, by an order directed to the officers of the parish of Kirkby Stephen, and adjudging his settlement to be in that parish, and removing him to that parish; and was delivered to the overseers of the township of Kirkby Stephen. But neither the parish of Kirkby Stephen, nor the township of Kirkby Stephen, appealed from the order; and the pauper remained in Kirkby Stephen, and was maintained by a sister, in the township of Kirkby Stephen, for near a year and a half; when his sister dying, he asked relief of the township of Kirkby Stephen, who thereupon got him removed by an order to the township of Wharton. Order quashed. By Lord Mansfield and the Court: "The original order made for the removal from Newport to the parish of Kirkby Stephen, must mean the township of Kirkby Stephen. The township was as a parish for the purpose of a removal to it; the poor within the parish not being maintained by the whole parish, but by the particular townships to which they respectively belong. The township of Kirkby Stephen ought in this case to have appealed. They could not get rid of this order but by appealing. And if they had appealed, the truth might have appeared. And when the facts had appeared to the justices upon the whole truth being disclosed, the pauper might in the end of the inquiry have been sent to Wharton." Order of sessions confirmed.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

Distinctive character of churchwardens of a township.

Where there were two churchwardens appointed for a township, and two by the rest of the parish, and distinct rates were made by each of them, the churchwardens of the township might sue their predecessors without joining the churchwardens of the parish as plaintiffs or defendants. Astle v. Thomas, 2 B. & C. 271.

The parish of B. has no overseers but contains several townships, separately maintaining their own poor, one of which is named B., and the other B. P. An order of removal was made to the parish of B., and the churchwarden of the parish of B. placed the pauper in the workhouse of the township of B. The pauper in fact belonged to the township of B. P.: Held, by Denman, C. J., and Littledale, J., (Taunton and Patteson, Js., dubitantibus,) that the township of B. had a right to appeal, and that the order of removal was bad.

Rex v. Bishop Wearmouth, 3 Nev. & M. 77; 5 B. & Ad. 942. An order of removal from Botchergate to Bishop Wearmouth was confirmed. Case:—The order was made on the 28th of March, 1829, and the execution of it duly suspended; the suspension was taken off on the 12th of September, 1829, and a further order was then made by the magistrates on the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of Bishop Wearmouth to pay the sum of 5*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, being the expense incurred by the suspension of the said order of removal, to William Kidd or Luke Kidd, upon demand, the said Luke Kidd being the overseer of the township of Botchergate, and father of the said William Kidd. The parish of Bishop Wearmouth consists of seven townships, each maintaining its own poor separately, and having separate and distinct overseers. Two of these townships are called Bishop Wearmouth and Bishop Wearmouth Panns respectively; and in the latter the pauper and his family were legally settled. There are no overseers of the poor of the parish of Bishop Wearmouth. When the order of removal was made, both the magistrates who signed the same, and the overseers of the removing township, knew of the division of the parish of Bishop Wearmouth into townships, each maintaining its own poor, and that the pauper's settlement was in the township of Bishop Wearmouth Panns, though in the order of removal it was declared and adjudged by them to be in the parish of Bishop Wearmouth. The suspended order was not served till after the suspension was taken off; namely, on the 28th of September, 1829. The pauper and his children were taken by W. Kidd from the removing township to the township of Bishop Wearmouth Panns, with directions from the overseer of Botchergate to serve the order on and deliver the paupers to the overseer of the township of Bishop Wearmouth Panns, and to demand from him 5*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* W. Kidd, accordingly, on the 28th of September, took the paupers to that township, and saw the overseer there, to whom he delivered the order, and demanded from him the above sum. The overseer of Bishop Wearmouth Panns stated that he believed the settlement of the paupers was in his township; but as the order of removal was not directed to the overseers of that township, but to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Bishop Wearmouth, he objected to it on account of its informality. Ultimately, however, he agreed, in order to save further expense and trouble, as he had no doubt of the paupers belonging to that township, that he would waive the objections he had taken to the order, if the overseer of the removing township would consent not to call for the 5*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* This proposal, however, not being acceded to, W. Kidd (to save expense) took the paupers to the workhouse of a neighbouring and distinct parish, leaving them as boarders; and returned home, taking with him the order of removal. The paupers remained there till the 22nd of October following, when Luke Kidd, the overseer of the removing township, having paid for their board, took them with the same order to the same overseer of Bishop Wearmouth Panns as before, and again attempted to prevail upon him to accept the paupers and pay the money. This, however, he refused to do, for the same reasons he had before assigned, acknowledging at the same time that the paupers belonged to his township; whereupon Luke Kidd took the order to Mr. W. Hills, one of the churchwardens of the whole parish of Bishop Wearmouth, and who resided in the township of Bishop Wearmouth, and informed him of the refusal by the overseer of Bishop Wearmouth Panns to receive the

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

paupers. Mr. Hills accompanied L. Kidd to try to prevail on the overseer of Bishop Wearmouth Panns to take the paupers. They found him at his place of business, situate in a distant parish (Sunderland), but he still refusing to receive the paupers, L. Kidd, the overseer of the removing township, served Mr. Hills, the churchwarden of the whole parish of Bishop Wearmouth, with the removal order, Hills being then in the parish of Sunderland; and the paupers were lodged by him in the workhouse of Bishop Wearmouth township, and maintained by that township till the appeal was heard. The questions were, whether the township of Bishop Wearmouth was entitled to appeal, and whether the order directed and served as aforesaid, was, notwithstanding the objection made to it at the time of such service, valid and binding. Denman, C. J. "Great pains have been taken to perplex this case by the magistrates and the officers of the removing township. No doubt it was the duty of the magistrates when they ascertained that the parish was divided into townships, and the settlement of the paupers was in one of those townships, to remove the paupers to the township bound to maintain them. If they had done so here there would be no dispute. But the order is to remove to the parish of Bishop Wearmouth generally, which, for the purpose of maintaining the poor, has no existence. Then the officer of the removing township sees the officer of the township to which the removal ought to have been made, and the latter objects to receive the pauper, because the order is to remove to the parish, unless the former will waive some costs; he refuses to do so. The paupers are then taken to the churchwarden of the whole parish of Bishop Wearmouth. He was not overseer of the township of Bishop Wearmouth, and as far as that township is concerned in the appeal, must be considered an entire stranger. He took the paupers with the order to another township which happens to be of the same name with the parish to which the removal was directed to be made. That township, therefore, had the paupers under an order directed to a parish of the same name: it was not bound to receive them, and was a volunteer to a certain extent; and the question is, whether it comes within the stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 2, s. 2, which gives the right of appeal to all persons who think themselves aggrieved by any judgment of the justices. That clause, as it seems to me, ought not to be construed so as to let in any one who, taking a capricious view of the order, may think himself aggrieved by it, when it is clear that he was not intended to be included in it, but must be confined to those who may have reasonable ground for thinking themselves aggrieved. I think, however, that there was in this case reasonable ground for the inhabitants of Bishop Wearmouth to think they might suffer by this order, whereby the paupers were directed to be removed to a parish of the same name as the township, and that therefore they had a right to appeal. They might have a reasonable apprehension that they would be fixed with the pauper if they did not appeal, and, consequently, might think themselves aggrieved by the order. The appeal was heard, and the order of removal was confirmed on proof of a settlement in the township of Bishop Wearmouth Panns, the inhabitants of which, for the purpose of this appeal, must be considered as third persons. The sessions have clearly done wrong in this respect, and the order must be quashed." Littledale, J. "The order of sessions must evidently be quashed, because it confirms an order of removal to the parish of Bishop Wearmouth, and it appears clearly that the settlement of the pauper was in a township within the parish. It seems to me that the township of Bishop Wearmouth had a right to appeal. They had just reasons to apprehend that they would be fixed if they did not appeal. They therefore come within the words of the stat. 13 and 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2. They had very good reason to think they might be injured by the order; for though the justices thereby directed the paupers to be removed to the parish of Bishop Wearmouth, the officers of the township of that name might suppose that the paupers must be maintained by some one of the townships within that parish, and that their township being of the same name as the parish, was the one intended by the justices. The order was not binding on Bishop Wearmouth Panns.

St. of Car. II. gives a right of appeal to reason and not to caprice.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

because not directed to that township." Taunton, J. "The order of sessions is wrong, because the paupers were settled in Bishop Wearmouth Panns, and it was intended to remove them thither: but the sessions have confirmed an order removing them to the parish of Bishop Wearmouth, which does not maintain its own poor. This is not a mere verbal mistake, as in Rex v. Kirkby Stephen (p. 1039), for the names of the parish and township are not the same, and the thing done was not according to the intention. But I have great doubt whether the inhabitants of the township of Bishop Wearmouth had reasonable cause to think themselves aggrieved. The statute does not give the right of appeal to every person, who, upon any inconsiderate view of his case, may think himself aggrieved, but only to persons who have reason to think themselves aggrieved. I am not satisfied that the appellant township would have been concluded by this order if they had not appealed against it. It never had been served on the officers of that township, nor was it served by the officers of the removing township. My doubt, however, is not so serious as to make me differ from the rest of the court." Patteson, J. "For the reasons already given, the sessions ought clearly to have quashed the order of removal. It is to be regretted that the magistrates should have ordered the paupers to be removed to a place where they were clearly not settled. Spitalfields v. Bromley, (p. 1039,) goes to this extent, that magistrates are not bound to notice the division of parishes into townships; and, therefore, if they do not know that a parish is so divided, and make an order directing a pauper to be removed to the parish, such an order may not be wrong. But if they are informed before they make the order that a parish is divided into townships maintaining their own poor separately, and that the settlement of the paupers is in one of those townships, it is their duty to direct the paupers to be removed to the township bound to maintain them. It seems to me also that the service of the order on the township of Bishop Wearmouth was not good. The order was directed to the churchwarden and overseers of the poor of the parish of Bishop Wearmouth, but there were no overseers of the poor of that parish. It was not served on the overseers of the township of Bishop Wearmouth, but of Bishop Wearmouth Panns. I doubt, therefore, whether the inhabitants of the township of Bishop Wearmouth had any right to appeal, because, not being bound to receive the paupers, they were, to a certain extent, volunteers. At the same time, as the order was served on the churchwarden of the parish, who was in some respect the representative of all the townships within it, and he in fact placed the paupers in the workhouse of the township, the officers of the latter may be considered as having received and maintained the paupers under the order, and may have thought it obligatory on them so to do, and, consequently, that the township might be aggrieved by it. I therefore yield on this point (though not without much doubt) to the opinion of my lord and my brother Littledale." Order of sessions quashed.

The right of appeal is not given to persons who think themselves aggrieved, but have some reason for it.

Removal to the township of Bingley, the township not maintaining its own poor, but being in the parish of Bingley, is informal, and the sessions may amend it.

Rex v. Bingley, 2 Nev. & M. 103; 4 B. & Ad. 567. I. Rushworth was removed from Heslington, St. Lawrence, to the township of Bingley. Order confirmed. Case:—The parish of Bingley consists of several townships, of which the township of Bingley is one. The parish maintains its own poor collectively; and there are no separate overseers for the township of Bingley. The question was, whether the order of removal to the township of Bingley could be supported. Cur. adv. vult. Denman, C. J., said (after referring to Rex v. J. Carmarthen (post) as in some degree analogous,) that "the present order was informal, but might have been amended at the sessions; and that being so, the court thought that the case should go back to the sessions, that the amendment might be made."

Removal to a village, a part of a parish, is void.

Rex v. Swalcliffe, Cald. 248; 2 Bott, 786. An order of removal to Ascott, a large populous village, part of the parish of Witchford, but maintaining its poor in common with Witchford, is a mere nullity, and not conclusive, although unappealed from.

Removal to the parish of Poole, that being the Rex v. Topsham, 7 East, 466. This was an order of removal from Topsham to "the parish of Poole, or town and county of Poole," and addressed to the churchwardens and overseers of "the parish of Poole, or town and county of Poole." There was in fact no such parish as the parish of Poole, but the town and county of Poole consisted but of one parish, and the name of that parish was St. James's in Poole. It was held, that it was no objection to the description of the parish of Poole, omitting the mention of its tutelary saint, there being but one parish in the town and county of Poole, and Poole being the common name of the place. And that the parish officers of Poole had themselves considered this description sufficient to call upon them to appeal to the sessions against the order, by whom the objection to the misnomer had been overruled.

1. Place from and to which an Order of Removal may be made.

common name, is sufficient.

---

2. On the Complaint of whom.

2. On the Complaint of whom.

By the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 1 (p. 1010), the justices are empowered to make an order of removal, "upon complaint made by the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of any parish, to any justice of peace, within forty days after any such person or persons coming so to settle as aforesaid, in any tenement under the yearly value of ten pounds, for any two justices of the peace, whereof one to be of the quorum, of the division where any person or persons that are likely to be chargeable to the parish shall come to inhabit, by their warrant to remove and convey such person or persons to such parish where he or they were last legally settled, either as a native, householder, sojourner, apprentice, or servant, for the space of forty days at the least, unless he or they give sufficient security for the discharge of the said parish, to be allowed by the said justices."

The complaint must be by the churchwardens or overseers.

The necessity of proceeding according to this provision of the statute has been long established.

Rex v. Hareby, Andr. 361; 2 Bott, 811. An order of removal did not set forth any complaint made. The court: "The complaint is the foundation of the jurisdiction of the justices; and therefore the order must be quashed."

Order of removal must set forth the complaint of the parish officers.

Western Rivers v. St. Peter's, 2 Salk. 492; 3 Salk. 254; 2 Bott, 803. Exception to an order of removal, in that it was said to be upon complaint only and not of the churchwardens or overseers. By the court: "This exception is fatal; for no one can disturb a man coming into a parish but they that have authority to do it. A complaint from one not concerned is nothing: it may be the parish is willing to keep him."

Same point.

Words of surplusage may be rejected. Therefore, if the order purports to be made on the complaint of the guardians and overseers, and either of them have no authority, their names may be rejected. Reg. v. Goodall, 6 Jur. 86.

Complaint of unauthorised person rejected as surplusage.

Spalding v. St. John Baptist, Fol. 267; 2 Bott, 639, &c. The order was, "To the churchwardens of Spalding, and to the churchwardens, &c. of St. John Baptist: whereas complaint hath been made by you ——." It was moved to quash the same for the uncertainty, because it did not say by which. But by Parker, C. J. "Sure that is well enough; for it is upon complaint of the right, if both complain."

"Complaint by you," where sufficient.

An order was made on the examination of J. L., one of the overseers of the poor. One ground of appeal was, that it did not appear on the face of the examination, that it was made by the majority of the overseers. The complaint is sufficient. Reg. v. Bedingham, (post.)

One overseer may complain.

The jurisdiction of the justices depends on the complaint of chargeability being made, not on the fact itself. Reg. v. Buckingham, (p. 1051).

The complaint, not the fact, material.

---

3. To what Justices.

3. To what Justices.

Rex v. Great Yarmouth, 6 B. & C. 646; 9 D. & R. 682. R. Lenny was removed from Woodbridge to Great Yarmouth, on the complaint of the churchwardens and overseers of Woodbridge. G. Thomas, one of the magistrates who signed the order, was one of the churchwardens of Woodbridge. Bayley, J. "I think there was no objection to this order of removal, on the ground of interest in the magistrate. The 16 Geo. II. c. 18, authorises justices to act (in the case therein mentioned), notwithstanding they may be interested by reason of their being rateable. It is impossible to say that a churchwarden or overseer has any other interest in the removal of a pauper, except in his character of a rated inhabitant. He may, indeed, in the character of churchwarden, become liable to costs: but that responsibility can only attach to him, in consequence of his improperly removing the pauper. It is, therefore, against his interest to make any order of removal as far as costs are concerned; for, by so doing, he subjects himself to a responsibility which would not otherwise attach to him. But, I think that it is a fatal objection to this order, that the person who was the complainant heard and adjudicated upon the complaint. I cannot consider him as divested of the character of churchwarden at the time when the order was made. It purports to be made on the complaint of the churchwardens and overseers; and the 43 Eliz. c. 2, commits the management of the poor to the churchwardens and overseers. From the nature of the thing, the complaint must have been made by the churchwardens and overseers. Then, if the churchwardens made the complaint, the person who was one of the complainants heard and adjudicated upon it. Upon that ground, I think the order of removal was bad, and that the order of sessions confirming it ought to be quashed" Holroyd, J. "I also am of opinion that the order of removal is invalid, on the ground that the same person cannot, in point of law, be the complainant and the person hearing the complaint. The 16 Geo. II. c. 18, enacts, that magistrates, who, by reason of being rateable to the relief of the poor in any parish, are virtual parties to the complaint of chargeability upon which an order of removal is founded, shall be competent to act in the making of such order. In this case, the parish officers are not only virtual but acting parties to the complaint. Now, it is quite inconsistent that the same person should be a party to and a judge in a suit. The two characters are incompatible with each other. In this case, therefore, as one of the parties who made the order was churchwarden of the removing parish, and appears to have adjudicated upon a complaint to which he was a party, I think the order of removal was bad." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion. The 16 Geo. II. c. 18, which enabled justices having an interest in the removal of a pauper, by reason of their being rateable in the parish, contemplated those cases only, where there was one set of persons to complain and another to adjudicate, viz. churchwardens and overseers, as persons distinct from the justices to whom the complaint is made." Order of sessions quashed.

The removing justice must not be one of the complaining churchwardens.

The justices may act, though rated inhabitants.

3. To what Justices.

The justices' authority must appear. (a)

It must appear upon the face of the order, that the parties making it are justices of the peace; thus in Walton v. Chesterfield (5 Mod. 322; 2 Bott, 775), an order was quashed, because it was only "whereas complaint hath been made unto us," without reciting their authority as justices.

Complaint may be to one justice, but the order of removal must be by two.

Rex v. Westwood, Sett. & Rem. 107; 1 Stra. 73; 2 Bott, 782. On complaint to one justice, two justices adjudge and remove; and it was held to be well. Otherwise, where one justice sets his hand to the order in the absence of the other.

One justice may order a pauper to be brought up; but two must be present at the examination.

Ware v. Stanstead Mount Fitchet, 2 Salk. 488. Exception to an order, for that it was said, it appears upon examination before us or one of us. By the Court: "The examination ought to be before both, because both are to make the judgment of removal." And Gould, J., said, "The statute directed and the practice was, to make complaint to one justice, and he grants his warrant to bring the pauper before two justices, and then they two examine and remove." (See 49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 4, p. 1015.)

(a) In Morrell v. Marten, 3 M. & G. 581, it was held, that a plea by a constable merely showing the warrant of distress was bad, and that the jurisdiction of the parties ought to have been alleged. It was a distress for a highway rate; and C. J. Tindal observed, "The cases are express, that if a person be assessed to the relief of the poor who is not by law liable, and his goods are taken by warrant of distress, an action of trespass will lie against the overseers levying under the distress. Nicholas v. Walker, p. 12; Milward v. Caffin, p. 333; or against the magistrates who issued the warrant. Amherst v. James, p. 16; Weaver v. Price, p. 355; and the ground of these decisions appears from what is said, Nicholas v. Walker, viz., that magistrates have but a particular jurisdiction to make warrants, to levy rates well assessed."

3. To what Justices.

Where it is doubtful, if an examination was taken before one or two justices, it will be presumed to have been before two, especially if the ground of appeal does not deny the fact.

Reg. v. Silkstone, 2 G. & D. 396; 2 Q. B. 520. Case:—One of the examinants stated that the witness remembered the birth of the husband of the pauper in Cawthorne, and that she was present when he was born. At the foot of this examination was written, "Sworn before me, the day and year first above written, and I do hereby certify that the above examination was read over and explained to the said examinant, previously to her being sworn thereto, who appeared perfectly to understand the same. W. Bennet Martin, H. Watkins." One ground of appeal was, that this examination is illegal, for though signed by two justices, it purports to have been taken before one justice only. The sessions considered the jurat to be defective, and that there was no examination disclosing any legal evidence of the birth settlement in question, and discharged the order. The order of removal and the examination itself were returned to the certiorari. During the argument it was observed, that although the examination had been returned to the certiorari, it was no part of the case. Lord Denman said, "We must refer to the examination, for the objection refers to it, and says it is bad." He afterwards added, "This question has arisen entirely from the magistrates having neglected to comply with the usual practice in the manner of drawing up the examination. The ground of appeal is that, though the examination is signed by two justices, it 'purports' to be taken by one only. The objection is very clearly taken, and it was pointedly relied upon at the trial of the appeal. Does the examination then purport to be taken by one justice only? I think, when we consider that the taking of the examination was a judicial act, which could not legally be performed unless by two magistrates, and that the examination and jurat cannot be said to do more than make it doubtful whether they state the examination to have been taken by two magistrates or one, that we may safely call in aid the presumption of 'omnia rite,' &c., and hold the examination good. I think the sessions were wrong, and their order must be quashed." Williams, J. "The question for our opinion is stated at the end of the case, and is whether the jurat was such as to require the sessions to reject the examination. I certainly feel some reluctance in agreeing with the rest of the Court. I do not see the utility of sustaining examinations, when nothing but a departure from the ordinary practice, which is so easy to follow, has exposed them to objection, and I am unwilling to get to the apices juris for the sole purpose of setting up a blunder. The case no where states that the examination was in truth taken before two magistrates, and, if evidence had been tendered of the fact, I doubt whether it could have been received to contradict the jurat. Upon the face of the examination itself, the jurat being one way, and the signatures the other, it was left in doubt whether one or two magistrates had taken the examination, and upon this evidence I doubt whether the sessions did not come to a right conclusion. But I cannot help seeing (and on that I found my judgment) that it was understood between the parties that all had really been rightly done; that the examination, though wrong in form, was right in fact, and that the appellants went to trial relying upon a mere flaw in the examination. For the objection being that the examination is bad because it 'purports' to have been taken before one justice only, may be thought fairly to imply that the examination was really taken before two. I think that the examination, which is ambiguous, may be sustained on this ground." Coleridge, J. "I agree with my brother Williams, in regretting that due care has not been taken in drawing up this examination, and I go the length of saying I do not wonder at the decision of the sessions, for any one might infer, on looking merely at the body of the examination and the jurat, that the examination was taken before one justice only. But we are bound to give these proceedings the benefit of such legal presumptions Examination referred to, though not part of the case.

3. To what Justices.

as can fairly be applied to them. Now here the examination and jurat will bear the construction that the magistrates who signed the examination were both present when it was taken, and the personal pronoun, which is used in the singular, may apply to each magistrate separately. In this state of things, I think the presumption that all has been done rightly may fairly be called in to determine the right construction to be, that the examination was taken before both magistrates, for otherwise it must be imputed to the single magistrate, who did take the examination, that he assumed an authority which the law does not allow; and to both magistrates who have signed the examination, that they have been guilty of misrepresentation and fraud, in making it appear that they were both present when the fact was not so." Wightman, J. "The examination has the signature of two magistrates. It is impossible to say to which of them the first person singular really applies, if it applies to one only; but it may apply severally to each of them. A promissory note in the form 'I promise to pay,' &c., signed by two persons, has been held to be the note of both the parties signing. (a) I think the pronouns 'I' and 'me' in this examination and jurat, are not to be applied to the magistrate first signing alone, or to either alone, but to each magistrate who has affixed his signature." Order of sessions quashed.

Examination must be by the justices who remove.

Rex v. Wykes, Andr. 238; 2 Bott, 818. One justice took the examination, and other two justices removed upon that sole examination, and in the order set forth that the party was examined before themselves; for which, and for not summoning the party before them, an information was granted against the two justices.

Rex v. Hamstall Ridware, 2 Bott, 503; (p. 667.) Whether it be necessary that two justices shall be together at the time, depends upon the circumstance whether the act to be done be judicial or merely ministerial.

The justices of one county cannot make an order of removal on an examination taken by the justices of another county.

Rex v. Coln St. Aldwin's, Burr. S. C. 136; 2 Bott, 673. The order of removal was made by two justices of Wiltshire, on an examination of the mother of the child removed taken before two justices of Middlesex, which had been transmitted to the justices of Wiltshire with an affidavit verifying that it was duly taken. In the order the justices of Wiltshire for themselves adjudged, "that it appears to them upon due examination and inquiry upon oath into the premises." Lee, C. J. "It is plain that these Wiltshire justices have grounded their adjudication upon the examination transmitted to them from the Middlesex justices. What they examined and inquired into upon oath, was the conveyance of the child out of one parish into the other. Now the examination on which they relied being taken by two justices of another county, and the person examined by those justices remaining still alive, for aught that appears to the contrary, it is plain this deposition ought not to have been received as evidence to ground their adjudication upon; though it might, perhaps, have been used as concurring evidence. I have often heard it declared here, and by Eyre, J., particularly, that both justices ought to be present at the vivâ voce examination of the witnesses." Page, J. "I remember a case where it was determined that both justices must be present; and that it is not sufficient for one justice to examine the matter and transmit it to the other, and that other to sign the order without examining into the matter itself. If the woman was alive, she ought to have been examined by these justices themselves. But even supposing that she was not alive, yet still I do not know that they could regard that Middlesex examination. It does not appear that the Middlesex justices had any jurisdiction, for no complaint appears to have been made before them; and if not, they could have no jurisdiction. The justices having set forth, though they were not bound to do it, the grounds of their adjudication, the court will judge of the sufficiency of them." Chapple, J., said, "That the justices founded this, their adjudication of the place of settlement, wholly upon the transmitted examination, which they ought not to have admitted at all."

Both justices ought to be present at the examination.

(a) See March v. Ward, 1 Peake's N. P. R 130; and Chitty & Hulme on Bills of Exchange, (9th ed.) 529.

3. To what Justices.

Examination taken and order signed by two justices separately, is not void but only voidable on appeal.

Rex v. Stotfold, 4 T. R. 596. M. Shaw and family were removed from Stotfold to Chilvers. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper was born at Stotfold, but his father's settlement was at Chilvers Coton, and the pauper had never gained any settlement in his own right, except as follows: He and his family were in 1776 removed from Sandon to Stotfold in the usual form, and were delivered to the parish officers of Stotfold, who received them, and did not appeal. The pauper and his family have ever since, till the present removal, occasionally resided in and been relieved by Stotfold. It was then proved by the respondents (but which evidence was objected to by the appellants, but overruled by the court), that the order of removal from Sandon to Stotfold, and the examination on which it was founded, were in fact taken and signed by the two justices separately, and not in the presence of each other, and that one of them, though a magistrate for the county of Hertford, took the examination and signed the order at his own house, situate in that part of Royston, which lies in Cambridgeshire, Royston lying partly in each county. Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "That he was not then prepared to state from his papers the reasons at length upon which their judgment was founded, but that he had thoroughly and attentively considered the question; and that the result of his deliberations and of the rest of the court was, that the former order was only voidable, not absolutely void; and therefore that it was necessary for the parish who wished to avoid it, to have appealed against it in a regular course of proceedings; that it would be extremely inconvenient to permit a parish to set aside an order of removal at any distance of time, which had been acquiesced under for years without any dispute; and that a distinction had always prevailed between void and voidable instruments; a strong instance of which was, that on the construction of the statute Westminster 2, c. 1, which, though it enacts that all fines contrary to that act shall be ipso jure null, has been held to mean only voidable by some legal proceeding." Order of sessions confirmed.

An order of removal obtained and served may be abandoned, and a new order procured.

Reg. v. St. Pancras, 7 Jurist, 193; 3 Q. B. 347. This was an appeal against an order of Mr. Maltby, a metropolitan magistrate, for the removal of Eliza Stenson and child. Order confirmed. Case:—On the 27th May, 1842, the appellants received by the post an original order from Mr. Hardwick, another metropolitan magistrate. The examination accompanied the order; and no notice of appeal was given. On the 14th June, an original order by Mr. Maltby, dated the 13th June, 1842, was received by post by the appellants. Annexed to this second order was the examination on which it was founded; and the only variance between the two examinations was, that, in the first, the service through which a settlement was claimed was said to have expired in October, 1832, while in the latter it was correctly stated to have expired in October, 1833; in all other respects the parties removed, the orders and examinations were exactly alike. Below the latter examination was a notice, of which the following is a copy: "To the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of St. Pancras in the county of Middlesex. Order of removal of Eliza Stenson and child, dated 26th May, 1842. It appearing to us that the examination upon which the former order of removal above mentioned in the case of Eliza Stenson and child was made, in some respects was erroneous, we do hereby forego and abandon the said order of removal bearing date the 26th May, 1842, and shall abstain from the execution thereof. Given under our hands this 13th day of June, 1842." Signed by the churchwardens and overseers. No notice relating to the first order of the 26th May, 1842, was given to the appellants previously to the making of the second order of the 13th June, 1842. Against the second order a notice of appeal was on the 1st October last duly served on the respondents. It was contended that, at the time of making the second order, the first order was a valid and subsisting order. The question whether Mr. Maltby had jurisdiction to make and did make a valid order on the 13th June, 1842, when the order of Mr. Hardwick of the 26th May, 1842, had been served, and at the time of making the second order, not countermanded abandoned, discharged, or superseded. Lord Denman delivered the judgment of the court. "At the instance of the respondents in this case, an order of removal of a certain pauper was first made by Mr. Hardwick, which was served, with the examination, upon the appellant parish; but there was no notice of appeal against that order. The respondents afterwards discovered a defect in the examination, and brought the pauper before another magistrate, Mr. Maltby, and he, upon a new examination, made a second order of removal. The respondents, at the time of serving this order upon the appellants, gave notice of their abandonment of the former order. Against this latter order there was an appeal, on the single ground that the former order was at the time of making the second in full force and undischarged. Upon the argument we were pressed with the objection, that, while one order remained unabandoned, it was not lawful to procure another. This doctrine is entirely new, and was not supported by any authority; and on consideration we think that it is not entitled to any weight. Such an order is merely a warrant to the overseers of the parish procuring it to remove the pauper; and they may abstain from carrying it into execution, on the ground that the examinations will not support it, or indeed from any other reason. If the doctrine contended for on behalf of the appellants was true, the existence of any other order unappealed from and unabandoned would be a bar to the party who had procured it from proceeding to obtain another. Even if the former and latter orders were inconsistent, we should not be prepared to go the length contended for; but the only difference between the two in this case is, that, upon obtaining the latter, a fact which was omitted in the former was supplied, and that the second order was justified by a more perfect examination. It has been frequently suggested from this place, that a party discovering a defect in the examinations should abandon the order founded upon them, and procure better evidence in support of another. That recommendation has been followed by the respondents in the present instance, though they would have acted better and more in the spirit of the recommendation, if they had given notice of their abandonment of the first order both to the appellants and to the justice who made it. But such neglect does not affect the justice who made the second order with want of jurisdiction; and if he had jurisdiction to make the order, the sessions were wrong." Order confirmed.

3. To what Justices.

When the examination is defective the order should be abandoned.

To be justices of the peace.

Reg. v. Uplin, Sett. & Rem. 27. The order was quashed, because it did not say that they were justices of the peace but only justices of the county.

And to be for the county, &c.; in the county not sufficient.

Rex v. Owlton, 2 Sess. Ca. 76; 1 Salk. 474. Exception was taken to an order for saying "unto us, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in the county aforesaid;" for that by this it appears only that they lived in the county, and not that they were justices for that county: and the court held this to be a fatal exception, and quashed the order.

Justices of the borough or town and parish sufficient.

Rex v. Andover, Cald. 373; 2 Bott, 801. Exception was taken to an order, that the magistrates stated themselves to be "two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the borough or town and parish of Andover," &c. Order quashed for irregularity upon the face of it. It was contended that the order was uncertain; they may be justices for the town and not for the borough, or for the borough and not for the town; but certainly not for both, nor does it appear for which. Buller, J. "Whether for one or the other enough appears to support the order; for both town and borough are coupled with parish. And they sufficiently appear to be justices of either of those places for which they were empowered to make this order." Lord Mansfield, C. J., and Willes, J., concurring, (Ashhurst, J., absent,) order of sessions quashed.

It need not appear that they are justices of the division.

Anon., 2 Salk. 473; 2 Bott, 795. It was objected to an order, that it did not appear thereby that the justices were of the division, which is required by the statute. But this objection was overruled, for that the statute therein is only directory.

What is a sufficient description of the justices as justices for the county.

Rex v. St. Mary's, Leicester, 1 B. & A. 327. Removal from Wing in the county of Rutland to St. Mary's in the borough of Leicester. Order confirmed. Both orders being removed by certiorari, a rule was obtained to show cause why they should not be quashed for a default of jurisdiction in the magistrates making the original order, apparent on the face of it, in not stating them to be justices of the peace of the county of Rutland. The order was: "County of Rutland. To the churchwardens and overseers of Wing in the said county, and to the churchwardens and overseers of St. Mary's, in the borough of Leicester, in the county of Leicester. Rutland to wit. Upon the complaint of the churchwardens and overseers of Wing in the said county, made unto us whose names are hereunto set and seals affixed, being two of his majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and one of us of the quorum, that Mary Bacon, &c., are come to inhabit," &c. (pursuing the usual form of such orders). Lord Ellenborough. "If this court is put under the painful necessity of overruling Rex v. Moor Critchell (a), in order to do justice in this case, I have no hesitation in so doing. The words 'justices of the peace in and for the said county,' in that case immediately follow the words 'the county of Wilts aforesaid,' and in plain grammatical construction can have reference to the county of Wilts only. For the word said must have reference to the last antecedent, and I wish that the very able and learned judge who decided that case, instead of lamenting that such an objection had there been taken, had applied his powerful mind to the objection itself, and I have no doubt that it would have vanished before that mind exerting its proper vigour on the subject. Here there is first, 'County of Rutland,' in the margin, then come the words 'parish of Wing in the said county;' that must mean the county of Rutland, if we are to give the word said any meaning at all. Then immediately follow the words 'justices of the peace for the said county;' that must, therefore, also have a reference to the county of Rutland. The grammatical construction and plain meaning of the instrument direct us to that conclusion alone." Bayley, J. "It is impossible to doubt in this case to what county the magistrates who made this order belonged. Rex v. Moor Critchell is undoubtedly a very strong authority, and perhaps not distinguishable from this case; but that case does not convince me. I think the court ought there to have come to a contrary conclusion. In that case the words 'said county' could only mean, in grammatical construction and common sense, the county of Wilts. Now here, 'said county' must mean Rutland and not Leicester. Besides, in this case, after the direction of the order, there are found in the margin the words 'county of Rutland, to wit,' which make the case much stronger. Then, if there be no doubt to which county the word said refers, the objection cannot prevail." Abbott, J. "The Rex v. Moor Critchell was a decision, not establishing any general rule of law, but turning upon the construction of the terms of that particular instrument, and has not, I believe, been since recognised or acted upon. Even if this case were precisely similar to that, I should say that the court there had not adopted the true construction, nor that which was warranted by the ordinary rules of criticism or language. Here, however, there is a distinction; the county here is named, for the second time, in the margin, and we may therefore begin to read the instrument from that part; if so, there will be no doubt; for the county of Rutland is the only county named to which the word said can have any reference." Holroyd, J., concurred. Order affirmed.

3. To what Justices.

The order is void if the jurisdiction does not appear.

In Rex v. Chilverscotten, 8 T. R. 178, post, there was no county named in the margin, and the order was held to be void, though unappealed against. (See Rex v. Countesthorpe, p. 682; and Rex v. Hinckley, p. 681.)

One of the justices must be of the Orders formerly have been quashed for not setting forth that one of the justices was of the quorum; but now, by 26 Geo. II. c. 27, no order shall be set aside for that defect only. But if neither of the justices be, in fact, of the quorum, it seems (except in the cases hereafter mentioned, by 7 Geo. III. c. 21; 4 Geo. IV. c. 27) that such order will not be good; for the statute requires that one of them shall actually be of the quorum, though it dispenses with the necessity of setting that forth in the order. And there are many towns corporate whose charters have no quorum, but only constitute certain of the chief officers justices to keep the peace. That is to say, they have the power which the justices of the county at large have, by the first assignment in the commission of the peace. The power of hearing and determining, which they have now by the second assignment in the commission, and which only implies a quorum, is a separate and distinct authority, and was superadded to the former some years after the institution of the office of the justices of the peace. (See tit. "Justices," Vol. III.)

(a) Rex v. Moor Critchell, 2 East, 66. The order was, "Wilts, to wit. To the churchwardens, &c., of Donhead, St. Mary, in the county of Wilts, aforesaid, to remove; and to the churchwardens, &c., of Moor Critchell, in the county of Dorset, to receive, these:—Whereas, complaint hath been made by you, the churchwardens, &c, of Donhead, St. Mary, in the county of Wilts, aforesaid, unto us, whose hands and seals are hereunto subscribed and set, being two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, &c." It was contended that the order was bad for a default of jurisdiction in the magistrates making the order, apparent upon the face of it, in not stating them to be justices of the peace of the county of Wilts. Lord Kenyon held the objection to be fatal.

3. To what Justices.

quorum, though the fact need not appear on the order.

Justices of a franchise, &c.

And by 7 Geo. III. c. 21, if in any city, borough, town corporate, franchise, or liberty, they have one (and no more than one) justice actually of the quorum, all acts, orders, adjudications, warrants, indentures of apprenticeship, or other instruments done or executed by two or more justices, qualified to act within such city or other place, shall be valid, although neither of the justices shall be of the quorum.

Cities, &c., having two or more justices of the quorum.

And further, by 4 Geo. IV. c. 27, reciting the last-mentioned statute, "'And whereas it is expedient that the provisions of the said act should be extended to such cities and other jurisdictions as have two or any other limited number of justices of the quorum qualified to act within the same:' be it therefore enacted, That from and after the passing of this act, in all cases where the number of justices of the peace for any city, borough, town corporate, franchise, liberty or other local jurisdiction, is limited, and any one, two or more of such justices only are of the quorum, all acts, orders, adjudications, warrants, indentures of apprenticeship, or other instruments, which shall be made, done or executed, either in or out of the general quarter sessions or petty sessions, or any adjournment thereof, by virtue of any charter or grant, or by virtue of any act of parliament made or to be made, by any two or more justices of the peace acting within the same, though neither of the said justices be of the quorum, shall be valid in law, to all intents and purposes, as if the said justices had been of the quorum; any grant, charter, law or custom to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

The sessions may examine into the jurisdiction of the removing justices.

Albrighton v. Skipton, 1 Stra. 300; 2 Bott, 797. Upon an appeal from an order of removal made by two justices, one of the quorum: the sessions, reciting that they had perused the charter of Albrighton, and it not appearing thereby that the two justices were either of them of the quorum, therefore they quashed the order. But by the court: "The order of sessions must be quashed; not for want of any power in the sessions to look into the jurisdiction of the two justices, for that they certainly have; but because that want of jurisdiction is not sufficiently alleged; since they might have a jurisdiction, though it did not appear upon the charter of Albrighton. The sessions should have said in general, that it appeared to them that the two justices were neither of them of the quorum, and that would have been good cause to quash the order of the two justices."

Where magistrates take the examination, but they refuse to make an order, the court of Q. B. will not grant a mandamus commanding them to make it. Nor will they order justices to alter the examination of a pauper according to the facts, so as to make it evidence of a settlement.

Reg. v. Rogers, 7 Jurist, 375. John Jones became chargeable to the parish of Llanfihangel, and on the 3rd November an overseer of that parish took the pauper before the justices, when the pauper was examined, and stated, "I, in the year 1837, occupied a messuage farm and lands in Llanfihangel, of the late Rev. G. A. Barker, for five years, the rent I did not pay, but paid all levies and taxes for the same; I served the office of overseer for the parish of Llanfihangel, and in that year I paid from 12*l.* to 15*l.* for parochial rates." After the pauper had been sworn, the justices adjourned the case till the next petty sessions, on the 1st December, when the justices determined on not making the order for the removal, as the pauper had gained a settlement in Llanfihangel by paying rates and taxes, and serving the office of overseer. Another application was made on the 12th January, but the magistrates still declined. On a rule for a mandamus, Williams, J., said, "It seems to me, that I cannot interfere in the manner proposed. I cannot at all agree in thinking that the duty of the justices was merely ministerial, or imagine how it can be called so. If, indeed, the magistrates had neglected or refused to take the examination of the pauper at all, or peremptorily declined to enter into the consideration of the case, that would be a question of a very different nature. But here an examination had been actually taken on the 3rd November, and on the 1st December the magistrates decided on not making the order for removal. Now, it is plain, that here the magistrates had entered on their duty; and I cannot set them right by mandamus, where the result arrived at would probably be exactly the same. There is the case of R. v. Barnstaple, (1 Barnard. 137), where, on an application to the Court of King's Bench for a mandamus to be directed to the overseers of the poor of Barnstaple, commanding them to make an equal rate, the court observed, that, although they would not grant a mandamus to make an equal rate, they might well grant a mandamus to make a rate in general, on an affidavit being produced that a rate is wanting. But there, as well as here, the court will presume, that if the magistrates began their duty, they would perform it in a satisfactory manner." It was then submitted, that a mandamus to compel the justices to make such an addition to the examination as would make it sufficient evidence of a settlement might be granted. Williams, J. "Indeed I think not. I cannot interfere."

3. To what Justices.

The jurisdiction of magistrates does not depend upon the fact of chargeability, and Q. B. will not revise the conclusion of the removing magistrates, however erroneous it may be, when once their jurisdiction appears. The court, therefore, will not issue a certiorari to bring up an order of removal, upon affidavits setting out the examination, although it may contain no evidence of inhabitancy or chargeability, if the order itself states a proper complaint of such inhabitancy and chargeability. Where the parish of "All Saints, Poplar," appealed against an order of removal made upon it by the description of "Poplar" only, the court refused a certiorari applied for on the ground of such misdescription.

Reg. v. The Justices of Buckinghamshire, 2 G. & D. 560. On a rule to show cause why a certiorari should not issue to remove an order for the removal of Maria Bavin, &c., from High Wycombe to All Saints, Poplar, the examinations on which the order was made, the notice and grounds of appeal, and an order of sessions, confirming the order of removal, it appeared by affidavits, that the sessions refused to grant a case, on the alleged insufficiency of the examinations. The order of removal commenced thus:—"To the overseers of the poor of the parish of High Wycombe, in the county of Bucks, and to the overseers of the poor of the parish of Poplar, in the county of Middlesex, and to each and every of them. Whereas complaint hath been made unto us whose names are hereunto set and seals affixed, being two of her majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said county of Bucks," &c. The order was made on the examination of Maria Bavin, at present residing at Great Marlow, in the county of Bucks; and she stated, "I have been in Marlow workhouse three weeks last Wednesday with my two children;" and on the examination of the master of the workhouse at Great Marlow, who said, "Maria Bavin and her two children came into the house three weeks last Wednesday; they are chargeable to the parish of High Wycombe, in the county of Bucks." Neither examination contained any further statement respecting Great Marlow. One objection was, that the residence and chargeability of the paupers in High Wycombe did not appear upon the examinations, so as to show the jurisdiction of the removing justices. Another was, that High Wycombe did not appear to be in the county of Buckingham, except by the address." Lord Denman. "On the main question now raised, our opinion will not interfere with the judgment of this court in the case of Reg. v. Bolton (a). When properly considered, the fair meaning of what was there said is, that, if justices act in a case not properly brought before them, such a state of things may be shown to this court on affidavit. So, in the present case, if the magistrates had acted without any complaint having been made to them by the parish officers of High Wycombe, the case in which they assumed to make their order would not have been properly before them. The fact of such a complaint was essential to their jurisdiction; and, if they had acted without such a complaint, it would be the duty of this court to interfere. But if there be a complaint made to the magistrates, and it need not that I know even be in writing, and the complaint states the chargeability, inhabitancy and settlement of the pauper, they have jurisdiction to enter on the inquiry. One fact on which they must then decide is the chargeability, another is the residence, and a third is the settlement of the supposed paupers. The evidence given in the present instance enabled the magistrates satisfactorily to themselves to adjudicate on all these facts. The recent cases which have been referred to decide that we shall not grant a writ of certiorari, with a view to determine whether sufficient appears on the face of the examinations to justify the conclusions drawn from them by removing justices, after they have once rightly entered upon the subject of their inquiry. The examinations are what the justices have acted on, not in entertaining, but in carrying through their inquiry. In this point of view, the decisions of this court last term, in the cases of Reg. v. Rotherham (a) and Ex parte Tollerton (b), do not interfere with the case of Reg. v. Bolton. As to the objections made to the order of removal, they are of a very unsubstantial character. High Wycombe is sufficiently shown to be in the county of Bucks by words of reference, and perhaps even such words of reference were unnecessary. As to the other objection it has often been held that a parish may appeal although misdescribed in the order appealed against. The parish of 'All Saints, Poplar,' has appealed and has been heard upon the merits, without, so far as it appears, even taking this objection. In conclusion, I must observe that although on objections like these, where no case has been stated, we cannot review what has been done below, yet we are extremely desirous that there should be a fair trial of all points which arise before the court below. We have taken great pains to exact on the one hand from respondents a full statement in their examinations of their grounds of removal, and from the appellants on the other hand an equally full statement of their grounds of appeal. These statements being required, it is most desirable that the justices should, in disposing of such questions as arise before them, exercise reasonable intendment, with a full desire to do justice between the parties. Where they have disposed of such questions, we are bound by the late decisions to say that the examinations on which an order has been made cannot be removed. Patteson, J., concurred. Coleridge, J. "In this case the order of removal is clearly good on the face of it. It is alleged, however, that the magistrates had no jurisdiction to make it, and that in order to satisfy ourselves that such was the fact, we must either bring up the examinations by certiorari, or hear the objection to those examinations as disclosed in the affidavits used. As to the first method, we have already refused to accede to the proposition. As to the other course, undoubtedly there are cases in which we may inquire on affidavits, as was said in the case of Reg. v. Bolton, whether magistrates have jurisdiction. But on the making of a complaint by parish officers, as stated in the order, magistrates have jurisdiction. On the complaint being made, they are to inquire into the chargeability and residence of the paupers. The magistrates here state that they have done so. If they have decided wrongly, they have only come to a wrong conclusion on the evidence laid before them. The case is that put by the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in the passage cited from Brittain v. Kinnaird (c). On the principle there laid down, the court would not receive an affidavit to show that that which a magistrate had adjudged to be a boat was in fact a seventy-four gun ship." Wightman, J., concurred. Rule discharged.

(a) 4 P. & D. 679.

3. To what Justices.

(a) 2 G. & D. 523.
(b) 2 G. & D. 533.
(c) 1 B. & B. 432.

---

4. Of the Examination.

4. Of the Examination.

The order of removal must be made on the due examination of witnesses, and such examinations must together disclose every fact necessary to give the Justices jurisdiction to remove the paupers, as well as every ingredient of the settlement on which the complaining parish relies. All must be stated with convenient certainty, and supported by legal testimony. The examinations therefore must show that the paupers are chargeable to the parish applying for the order of removal (Rex v. Black Callerton, (d) Rex v. Brixham). It is not sufficient to state that the paupers are chargeable, the facts must be stated, (Reg. v. High Bickington,) and that they were inhabiting the parish at the time of the order, (Reg v. Rotheram).

The examinations must show that the parties are chargeable.

(d) The cases are referred to here shortly. They will be found at length immediately after this analysis of them.

4. Of the Examination.

Whenever residence in a parish is necessary to complete a settlement, that fact must be stated distinctly, and not left to inference. The following are instances of insufficient statement of residence:—"I was hired by A. of K.; I agreed to go on Mop-day; I did go on that day, and served her for a year in that parish, and then left." (Reg. v. Stoneleigh.) "I was bound an apprentice to W. T., of Dalton; I went to, and served, and resided with him three years." (Reg. v. J. Yorkshire.) (Barnsley v. Dalton.) "I rented a house and land, and occupied it for twelve months, and thereby gained a settlement." (Reg. v. J. Yorkshire on a notice of appeal.) "My indentures were assigned to G. W., of Flockton, with whom I went and resided for three or four years." (Reg. v. Flockton.) "Sixteen years ago my husband and I went to live in a house in Strood; we occupied it till his death, seven years ago; I occupied it till 1841, when I came to the house I now reside in." (Reg. v. St. Margaret, Rochester.)

Residence essential to settlement, and must be stated.

As a settlement by hiring and service can be acquired only by an unmarried person not having a child; the pauper saying, "I was single and unmarried" is insufficient. (Reg. v. Wymondham.) (Rex v. Sherburn), Rex v. Leeds, 2 Q. B. 545. It must appear that the party was hired for a year, that the service was for a year, and the date of the service should be given, so that it may appear that it was completed before the 14th August, 1834. (Rex v. North Bovery) (Rex v. Bridgwater, post, notice of appeal). If facts are disclosed, which would justify the inference that there was a hiring, it is sufficient. (Reg. v. Pilkington.)

It must state that the person hired had no child, and that he was hired and served for a year,

A settlement by birth cannot be proved by such evidence as "I was born illegitimate at S." (Rex v. Rishworth) or, "I have heard my father say I was born at A." (Reg. v. Eccleshall) (Rex v. Lydiard, St. Laurence.)

Insufficient statement of place of birth. (a)

On the examination as to settlement by apprenticeship, the indentures must be produced and proved (Rex v. Flockton) or the non-production legally accounted for (Rex v. Mildenhall). A statement that the pauper was bound apprentice by "a covenant Indenture" is sufficient to show that it was not a parish indenture. (Rex v. Cumberworth-half.)

Statement as to settlement by apprenticeship,

If the service relied on was with a second master, the consent of the original master must be stated. "When I was bound it was agreed that I should serve the last forty days in L., and I did so with A. H." is not a sufficient statement of consent. (Rex v. Lydiard, St. Laurence.) and of service under it.

Many facts must now concur to entitle a party to a settlement by renting a tenement; each fact must appear, and some description of the premises, by which they may be ascertained; and the time of the tenancy must be stated. An examination which did not give the name of the landlord (Reg. v. Recorder of Pontefract); and one which did not allege that it was rented for a year (Rex v. Middleton Teasdale), or occupied for a year under the yearly hiring (Reg. v. Pontefract), are defective. "I took a house for a year, I paid rent for the whole time of my tenancy," is not a sufficient statement of the payment of rent. (Reg. v. Leeds.)

Renting a tenement.

If the complaining parish relies on relief given to the party when not resident in the relieving parish, a distinct statement is sufficient, although it may be inferred from the same examination that such relief was given in reference to a settlement supposed to be acquired by hiring and service, and the examination as to which is clearly defective. (Reg. v. Camrose.) An examination stating that the examinant's father was twice relieved by K., as I have been informed, is some evidence, so that the sessions cannot refuse to hear the case. (Reg. v. J. Yorkshire) (Keighley v. Wilsden.)

Relief.

If the evidence relied on be that of a former order of removal of the same parties, or those from whom they derive a settlement, the examination not disclosing either that the paupers had been removed, or that such

Former order

(a) The statute relating to the removal of persons born in Ireland, &c., gives the form of the order, wherein it is merely stated, that "to the best of my knowledge and belief, I was born in" &c.

4. Of the Examination.

order had ever been served, is defective. (Ex parte, Overseers of Ackworth.) And the order must be produced, or its absence accounted for. (Reg. v. Mildenhall.)

Evidence must be legal.

The judges have frequently intimated their opinion that the justices should not receive any but the legal evidence of the facts, (Reg. v. Rishworth) although it seems that the admission of some illegal evidence will not vitiate the remainder, (Rex v. Tetbury) if there be still sufficient to justify the removal. It is not a valid objection that the justices received the evidence of a convicted felon, unless they were at the time aware of the fact. (Rex v. Altemein.) The examination may be used as evidence against the parish obtaining it. (Reg. v. Stow.)

Omitting to send all the examinations.

Further it is necessary for the complaining parish to send to the parish ordered to receive the pauper, copies of all the examinations taken. (Reg. v. Black Callerton.) The omission of this is a good ground of appeal. (Rex v. Outwell.) So also the omission to send a notice of chargeability. (Rex v. Brixham.)

Having thus briefly analysed the cases, we proceed to set them out, nearly in the order in which they have been cited, premising only that in the Appendix will be found a collection of precedents suited to the different kinds of settlement. In framing them it has been wholly impracticable to adapt them to every possible case, but they will, perhaps, be found sufficient, if the justices will bear in mind what in each case constitutes a legal settlement, and then take care that all essential ingredients are disclosed in the examinations.

It is a good ground of appeal that the chargeability does not appear on the examination.

Reg. v. Black Callerton, 10 A. & E. 679. H. Hope was removed from Quarrington to Black Callerton. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was removed under the usual order. Notice in writing of the chargeability, a copy of the order, and copies of the examinations were duly served, but the examinations did not contain any statement or proof that the pauper was chargeable to or had been relieved by Quarrington. One ground of appeal was, that it did not appear by the copy sent to them of the examinations taken at the time of making the order, that the pauper was at the time of making the order chargeable to Quarrington. Lord Denman. "The preliminary objection is not to be got over. If we do not require that the chargeability shall appear on the examination we shall give occasion to speculative removals." Patteson, J. "It is argued that the statute requires only three things to be sent before the pauper is removable:—notice of chargeability; a copy or counterpart of the order; and a copy of the examination upon which the order is made. That the word 'examination,' though in the singular number, means all the evidence, and must necessarily include the proof of chargeability, without which the order could not be made." Williams, J. "Proof of chargeability is the foundation of the order of removal. It must, therefore, appear on the examination sent to the appellant parish. Order quashed.

It is not sufficient to state that the pauper is chargeable. The facts must be stated.

Reg. v. High Bickington, 8 Jurist, 377. Ann Ford was removed from Atherington to High Bickington. Order confirmed. Case:—The evidence on the face of the examination, touching the chargeability of the pauper to Atherington at the time of the removal, was as follows;—Ann Ford said, "I and my children are inhabitants of Atherington, and are chargeable to the said parish." John Pincon, relieving officer, said, "I am one of the relieving officers of the Barnstaple Union, and administer the relief ordered for the paupers of the parish of Atherington: the said Ann Ford and her children (naming them) are now chargeable to the said parish of Atherington." One ground of appeal was, that the examination contains no legal evidence that Ann Ford and her children were chargeable to Atherington at the time of the application for or making the said order of removal. Lord Denman. "We think that to say a person is chargeable is no proof of chargeability: there are no facts stated. The appellants have a right to say, show us in point of the fact how the pauper has been relieved." Patteson, J. "If the relieving officer meant to say he had given relief to the pauper, it would have been very easy for him to have done so." Order quashed.

Reg. v. Brixham, 8 A. & E. 375. E. Thomas was removed from Formsham to Brixham. Order confirmed. Case:—A copy of the order and of the examinations were duly served, but no notice in writing of the pauper being chargeable to or relieved by Formsham was sent to the overseers of Brixham. On this ground they appealed against the order. Lord Denman. "The course pursued by the appellant was the only one by which the enactment could be taken advantage of, unless we were to multiply distinctions in a manner not desirable: s. 79 clearly makes the notice of chargeability necessary to give effect to the order of removal." Patteson, J. "The notice is necessary to make the pauper removable. I should be disposed to uphold this enactment as strictly as possible." The other judges concurred. Order quashed.

4. Of the Examination.

Notice of chargeability must be sent, the omission is a good ground of appeal.

Reg. v. Stoneleigh, 2 G. & D. 535; 2 Q. B. 530. T. Heritage, &c., were removed from Kenilworth to Stoneleigh. Order confirmed. Case:—On the examination, T. Heritage stated, "I am about the age of thirty-six years, and was born, as I have been informed and believe, in a farm-house belonging to Mr. Boultbee, near his house at Springfield, but in what parish I do not know. On Kenilworth statute-day, about eighteen or nineteen years ago, I was hired by Mr. W. Cattell, Mrs. Whitmore's bailiff, in my father's garden at Kenilworth, to serve the said Mrs. Whitmore, who lived at Wainbody Wood, in the parish of Stoneleigh, for twelve months, as cow-boy, at the wages of 50*s.* certain, and 5*s.* to be left to Mrs. Whitmore. Mr. Cattell asked me to come as soon as I could, as they were busy at Michaelmas, and I said I would go on Warwick Mop-day, which was held on the 12th of October. I did go on that day, and I served the said Mrs. Whitmore in the said parish of Stoneleigh, from that time to the 12th October following, when I received my wages and left." One ground of appeal was, that the examination is defective, because it discloses no legal settlement, or legal evidence of any settlement in Stoneleigh, inasmuch as it does not state that the pauper resided in the parish of Stoneleigh, during the hiring for forty days or any other period. Lord Denman. "The examination is bad. The court is bound to see that both examinations and grounds of appeal in stating a settlement set out most distinctly all the requisites necessary to constitute it. I believe that the course this court pursues of requiring sufficient evidence of a settlement before a pauper is removed, will in the end be productive of great benefits to parishes." Order quashed.

An examination, in stating a settlement by hiring and service, stated that the pauper went to and served in the appellant parish for a year, as cow-boy, at the wages of 50s. This is not a sufficient statement of residence.

Reg. v. J. of W. R. Yorkshire, 7 Jurist, 1063. J. Haley and family were removed. The examination of the pauper: "I am about thirty-six years of age, and was born at Wakefield. When I was about sixteen years of age, I was bound parish-apprentice by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Wakefield, with the consent of two justices of the peace for the said riding, to William Townsend, of the township of Darton, in the said riding, linen-weaver, to serve him until I attained the age of twenty-one years. I went to and served and resided with the said William Townsend from the 29th March, 1822, for above three years and a half, when, as work became scarce, my master proposed to give me my indentures for ten shillings; but as I had not as much money, he gave me my indentures and kept my box for the ten shillings. After I was twenty-one years of age, I went to my master and paid him the ten shillings and took away my box. After my indentures were delivered to me, I went to work at Mr. Holdsworth's dyehouse, where I remained about six months at weekly wages. I afterwards got work as I could for a few days in a place, but never did any act to gain a settlement after my apprenticeship. I now produce one part of the indentures, which were duly executed by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Wakefield, and allowed by J. P. Haywood, Esq. and William Wood, clerk, two justices of the peace for the said West Riding. I have made diligent search for the other part, but cannot find it; the indentures were duly entered in the register kept by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Wakefield. I was married at Barnsley new church, about eleven years ago, to Christiana Bramah, my now wife, by

A statement that the pauper was bound to W. of D., and that he served and resided with T., is not a sufficient statement of a residence in D.

4. Of the Examination.

whom I have one child born in wedlock, namely, Ann, aged eleven months, and I am now poor, and actually chargeable to Barnsley aforesaid; my examination is now taken upon the complaint of the overseers of the poor of Barnsley aforesaid, caused by my so being chargeable to them as aforesaid, without having acquired any legal settlement in Barnsley." Darton appealed. One ground of appeal was: that the examination is defective, insufficient, and bad, because it does not state the date of the alleged indenture of apprenticeship, nor that Haley served and resided with William Townsend in the township of Darton. The sessions decided that the examination was not sufficient to entitle the respondents to give any evidence in support of the order, and discharged the order, and refused to assign the special reasons for discharging it. On a rule for a mandamus, Patteson, J., said, "I quite agree as to the effect of the word "of". It no doubt means residing in, in the common case of an affidavit, when coupled with the name of a place: but yet, giving full scope and effect to that argument, there is still here this defect, that it does not say then residing or being of the township of Darton. In fact, it does not say where the master resided. It is quite consistent with the statement in the examination, that he resided with Townsend elsewhere than in Darton. He may have removed before the pauper went to him. In a case this morning, the mischiefs arising from such a decision were adverted to, but I confess I do not very well see where the mischief is; and here, where the examination is so palpably hit by the grounds of the appeal, they might have corrected their mistake. They have themselves to blame if they proceeded with the order. It would have been exceedingly easy to have quashed the order after such a defect as this had been pointed out to them. If parties choose to persist they must take the consequences. I think the sessions were very right." Rule refused.

"of," effect of the word.

Reg. v. Flockton, 2 Q. B. 535. J. Chambers, &c., were removed from Barnsley to Flockton. Order confirmed. Case:—The examination whereon the order was made was that of J. Chambers: I am fifty-six years of age, and was born at Hoylandswaine; the place of my father's settlement is at Denby, which he gained by apprenticeship; when I was about eleven years of age, I was put out a parish apprentice to Thomas Burton of Denby, tailor; after residing with him for a few months, my indentures were assigned to George Walker of Flockton, collier, with whom I went and resided with between three and four years, when I left him and enlisted for a soldier. The grounds of appeal were first, that the order and the examination are bad on the face thereof respectively; secondly, that Chambers never was put out a parish apprentice to Burton and assigned to G. Walker of Flockton, as stated in his examination, nor was he ever an apprentice to Burton by indenture duly bound, nor did he ever serve as such; that the pauper never was legally assigned as an apprentice, either by the assignment of his indenture or otherwise, to Walker of Flockton, nor did he ever serve as such an apprentice in Flockton; that the said pauper never did act to gain a settlement in Flockton. The sessions held that the order was good and the examination sufficient on the face thereof, and proceeded to hear the appeal. The indenture and assignment were not produced, but secondary evidence was given of their contents; evidence was also given showing that the indenture and assignment had been produced before the removing justices, and had been subsequently lost. Lord Denman. "I think this case is governed by Rex v. Middeton in Teasdale, (post) and I feel bound by that authority. Rex v. Staple Fitzpaine (post), does not apply; both general and specific grounds of appeal were stated there, which distinguishes it from this case. There is no sufficient residence stated in the examination, and Rex v. Toke does not assist the respondents." Patteson, J. "I cannot distinguish this from Rex v. Middleton in Teasdale; in that case, under the general statement that the examination was bad on the face of it, this court was of opinion that the appellants were at liberty to show that the examination did not give sufficient information of the settlement; so, here, the examination does not go far enough, unless we admit that the pauper resided. As to the word 'of' in Rex v. J. W. R. of Yorkshire, (p. 1055,) it was contended that it meant residing at. Suppose it does; the examination here states that 'the indentures were assigned to George Walker of Flockton, with whom the pauper went and resided with,' it does not state where the pauper went to reside, or where he continued to reside; at any rate it only carries the residence to the time of the assignment of the indentures, and no further. It is not necessary to go into the other ground of objection as to the indentures not having been produced; they may have been there. If the want of production of a document is an objection, it would be better that it should be pointed out by the statement of grounds of appeal. However, I decide upon the other question, that it does not sufficiently appear upon the face of the examination that there was any residence in the appellant township. Williams, J. "I decide this case entirely upon the authority of Rex v. Middleton in Teasdale. The general objection, bad on the face of it, is sufficient where there is a bad examination. Here no sufficient reason is shown, which is clearly fatal. 'Of Flockton,' does not necessarily mean that the person resided at Flockton. My brother Patteson seemed to doubt, in Rex v. Toke, whether 'of' was sufficient in that case. 'George Walker of Flockton' is matter of description, not of residence; he might have ceased to reside the next day. So, in cases of settlement by renting a tenement, occupation of a house is not sufficient; it is also necessary that there should be residence." Order quashed.

An examination stating that the pauper's "indentures were assigned to G. W. of F., with whom the pauper went and resided with," does not sufficiently show residence in F.; and this defect may be heard upon a ground of appeal stating that the order was bad on the face thereof. Semble, that, on a settlement by apprenticeship, it must appear by the examination, that the indenture of apprenticeship was produced, or the non-production accounted for before the removing justices.

4. Of the Examination.

An examination stating "My husband and I went to live at a house in the parish of S. My husband and I occupied it from that time until his death. I continued to occupy the same house until March 1841, when I came to the house I am now residing in;" does not show that the pauper or her husband resided forty days in the parish of S.

Reg. v. St. Margaret, Rochester, 2 Q. B. 533. Rachel Smith was removed from St. Margaret, Rochester, to Strood. Order quashed. Case:—The examination of Rachel Smith was: "I am now resident in St. Margaret, Rochester, and am chargeable to the same; by reason of illness and infirmity I am unable to be taken to a petty session to be examined as to the place of my settlement. On or about the 2nd of June, in 1822, I was married to W. Smith, a bargeman, at the parish church of St. Margaret aforesaid. About sixteen years ago my husband and I went to live at a house in Caroline-place, in the parish of Strood, which I hired of Mr. Edmund Aldersley, of Strood, coal merchant, for 11*l.* a year; my husband and I occupied it from that time until his death, which happened about nine years back. I have seen my husband pay rent to Mr. W. Payne for this house many times; he paid it quarterly to Mr. Payne at the house. I continued to occupy this same house until March, 1841, when I came to the house I am now residing in. After my husband's decease I paid the rent, during the eight years I occupied it, to Mr. Payne." The grounds of appeal were: That it does not appear, upon the examination, that R. Smith or her husband resided for forty days in the house in Caroline-place, in Strood, nor either of them resided for forty days in Strood. On the appeal, the appellants insisted that the examination was insufficient on this ground, and the sessions decided in favour of the objection, and quashed the order. Lord Denman. "We consider this case to be already decided in Rex v. J. W. R. Yorkshire." (p. 1055.) Order of sessions confirmed.

An examination disclosing a settlement by hiring and service, should state that the pauper at the time of hiring was unmarried, and not having child or children.

Reg. v. Wymondham, 2 Q. B. 541. An order removing J. Girdlestone, his wife and family, from Barford to Wymondham, was confirmed. Case:—The material examination was that of the pauper, therein described as a labourer, and who deposed that, previously to Michaelmas-day in or about the year 1820, whilst he was single and unmarried, he let himself to and was hired by J. Davey, of the appellant parish, for a year from that Michaelmas-day, and served the said J. Davey under that hiring one whole year in the appellant parish; he then deposed to a hiring and service with the same person for the two subsequent years, and that he was single and unmarried during the whole of the said three years of his service; and that he slept during the whole of the said three years in the appellant parish; and that he was married to his present wife about the year 1830, and had by her the four children named in the order of removal. The ground of appeal was, that the examination was defective and bad upon the face of it, in not stating that at the time of his respective hirings the pauper had not any child or children. Lord Denman. "Undoubtedly the objection may be regarded as carrying to the very extreme the doctrines which this court has laid down, respecting the sufficiency of the examination; but we adhere to the rule established by recent precedents, and confirm the order."

4. Of the Examination.

Stating that he was eighteen years old; and unmarried, is insufficient.

Reg. v. Sherburn, 2 Q. B. 545. A. Sidebottom was removed from Mecklefield to Sherburn. Order confirmed. Case:—The examinations on which the orders were made, were that of William Wilson, who said, "I am 46. I lived as a servant in husbandry with Mrs. Margaret Garthwaite, late of Sherburn, farmer, for several years up to her death. At Martinmas, 1825, she asked me who was a likely servant in husbandry for her to hire, and I pointed out Joseph Sidebottom to her as a likely lad. He came to my mistress's house a day or two after Martinmas, 1825, at the same time that other husbandry servants usually entered on their places, and he continued in her service until Martinmas, 1826. During the whole year, he lived at Mrs. G.'s house, in Sherburn, and slept with me all the year in her house there. He served Mrs. G as a servant in husbandry. J. S. lived in servitude at Mr. Pollard's, at Sherburn, when I pointed him out to my mistress, and he came from P.'s to Mrs. G. Joseph Mason, in his examination, said, "I am 28 years old. I remember Joseph Sidebottom, late of Mecklefield, labourer, long servant with Mr. Pollard, of Sherburn; he went about Spring and remained till Martinmas. On Martinmas morning, I remember J. S. cleaning his horses, and then going to Mrs. Garthwaite, of Sherburn, to get hired, as he told me; he returned in half an hour, and told me she had hired him. He left P.'s on that day, and went home to his parents at Mecklefield, and after staying with them three or four days, he returned to Mrs. G 's house. I was about 11 years old when J. S. went to live with Mrs. G.; he lived with Mrs. G. until Martinmas-day, or the day following Martinmas, in the next year, and then left. He served her as a servant in husbandry; we were companions, and I used frequently to go along with him with the horses to pasture. He was then about 18 years old, and unmarried." Richard Chadwick was examined, and said, that he remembered J. S. in Mrs. G 's service, and he was then unmarried." The appellants objected that the examination did not show that the said J. S. was at the time of the alleged hiring an unmarried person without child. The court overruled the objection and confirmed the order. During the argument it was urged that such particulars ought not to be required to be stated directly. Patteson, J. "Could not a witness who had known him for many years affirm directly that he was unmarried, and without child or children, at a particular time?" Lord Denman. "It is clear there is a deficiency in these examinations; and it is too much to expect that, after deciding as we did in Reg. v. Wymondham this morning, we should at half-past three pronounce a contrary decision." Orders quashed.

What is a sufficient statement of hiring and service.

Reg. v. Pilkington, 8 Jurist, 267. A pauper on examination stated, "When I was about 15 years of age, I went to work at Messrs. C. & D.'s factory. There was a custom in the mill requiring the workpeople to give a fortnight's notice before leaving the employment. I remained in their employment better than two years; I worked under the custom as to giving notice. The works consisted of two mills; and when I wanted to leave the first mill, in which I had been working for about a year, to go to the other, I was compelled to give a fortnight's notice. The second mill was under a similar custom; and after I had worked in the latter better than a year, I had a dispute with the overlooker, and wanted to leave at once, but was not allowed The overlooker afterwards gave me a fortnight's notice, at the end of which time I left." In addition to the above facts, it was proved at the sessions that the pauper went to work at the first mill as a piecer; that the practice of such mills is, that the piecers assist certain spinners, to whom they are attached. The whole wages are paid to the spinner in proportion to the work done, and he pays the piecers. Subject to the rule as to a fortnight's notice, the spinner engages and dismisses his own piecers without the interference of the master. The pauper was thus engaged by one E. At the second mill, the pauper engaged himself as a spinner to one M., who had the sole management of it, spinning by commission for Messrs. C. & D., but the mill was under their superintendence and control. The pauper was to be paid according to the work done. Lord Denman delivered the judgment. "In this case the question was, whether the grounds of appeal stated any valid objection to the examination. There was a minute criticism of some of the expressions contained in it, but we think there is no valid objection to the examination. It may be very true, that, when the settlement depends upon a single fact known to the pauper, such as residence, or being unmarried and without child or children, it is reasonable to expect his examination should contain a specific statement of that very fact; but it is very different as to the legal consequence of a fact. Hiring is a most difficult question of law. The justices of the peace may possibly have asked the pauper whether he was hired or not; the answer may have been, 'I do not know what you call hired, but I will tell you what took place on the occasion.' And then he may possibly state facts, as on the present occasion; and if those facts which are stated amount to a hiring for a year, the justices may properly adjudicate that the settlement was gained, and remove the party upon it: they must form their opinion upon the effect of such statement. If it amounts to any evidence, these facts appear sufficient. In the second place, the sessions found a settlement on the evidence of the hiring and service, subject to our opinion, whether the objections are well founded or not. The first objection was, it was doubtful whether this was a general hiring; but we think the facts of the case furnished evidence of such a hiring. Then it was doubtful whether the pauper was hired by the owners of the mill, or by the person called the spinner, who immediately employs the pauper and others in his situation. The sessions found the hiring and service by and to the owners of the mill, subject to our opinion. The question was as to the effect of that finding. The court of quarter sessions have either done right or done wrong in sending that question to us. They have done right, if they ask our opinion whether the fact stated will warrant the finding which they have made of the party being hired; but they have done wrong, if they refer to us the mere question of fact, and ask our opinion, as a jury, upon it. We are not to assume they have done wrong; we, therefore, must conclude they have put the question to us in this way: whether the facts which led them to the judgment which they have formed are such as are sufficient to found the judgment they have come to. We think those facts sufficient. The case of R. v. Sparsholt was that which was most referred to, as shewing we were to form our opinion, or to send the case back to the sessions to be re-heard on such a question; but, in that case, the order of removal was confirmed. What was done by the justices was itself right. We do not take upon ourselves to say they have done anything wrong where there is a sufficient foundation for the judgment." Order confirmed.

4. Of the Examination.

A pauper's examination stating, "I was born illegitimate at S.," is insufficient.

Reg. v. Rishworth, 1 G. & D. 597; 2 Q. B. 476. An order for the removal of E. Bottomley from Rishworth to Stayley Bridge was quashed. Case:—The material part of the pauper's examination was, "I am twenty-eight years of age, and was born illegitimate at Stayley in Cheshire." The grounds of appeal were, "that no legal evidence of a birth or settlement in our township of Stayley is disclosed in the examination, upon which the order is made, such evidence being only hearsay. That the order and examination are bad upon the face thereof." The sessions decided, that the examination was not sufficient to let the respondents into evidence of a settlement by birth in Stayley. Lord Denman. "This appeal depends upon the sufficiency of the examination. Distinct notice has been given of the particular objection to it. In the first place, does this examination shew the order of removal to have been made upon hearsay evidence within the cases lately decided? Of that there can be no doubt—the pauper speaks to that which cannot be within her own knowledge, viz. to the fact of her having been born illegitimate at a particular place. The question therefore comes to this, are those cases rightly decided? On that point also I have no doubt, though I am glad the matter has come before us again, because the conclusion we came to was new, and may be attended with some inconvenience; but I think the balance of inconvenience is the other way. The Poor Law Amendment Act has not introduced any change into the kind of evidence upon which removals may be made; but, by requiring the examination to be handed over to the parish removed to, has laid open the evidence, and made it necessary for us to determine whether an order resting upon no legal evidence is good. I think an order of removal and any other order of justices is invalid if not founded on legal evidence. The parish to which the pauper is removed has a right to say, 'Why have you sent us a pauper to maintain when there is no legal evidence that he belongs to us?' If any kind of hearsay evidence is receivable, I do not see why it should not be enough for the pauper to say, 'I have heard that I am settled' in such a parish; for even then some ingenious suggestion may be offered that under certain possible circumstances the statement was legal evidence. Undoubtedly the practice has hitherto prevailed of removing paupers upon very loose evidence, but still, whatever the practice may have been, when once such proceedings are brought into court they must be tested by legal principles. There may certainly be some difficulty in bringing documents, subscribing witnesses and so forth, before the removing magistrates, and, perhaps, the legislature would act wisely if it made some provision on the subject. But if the examination is to give no information, the chance is taken of an appeal. With regard to costs, if previous information is given to the appellants, then they should pay costs if they go on perversely; but why should they pay the costs, that have been referred to, of the preliminary ex parte inquiry before the removing justices? It seems to be supposed that there is some inequality if the appellants are to give the grounds only of appeal, and the respondents to give the examination. But the examination is that upon which the respondents themselves act, and they can furnish it without inconvenience. They are required by the terms of the statute to furnish the examination, and the appellants to furnish the grounds only of their appeal. We think we do a benefit to the public by adhering to our former decisions on this subject, and by declaring that for the future there must be no doubt that an order of removal is to be obtained on legal evidence." Patteson, J. "I have no doubt that the evidence on which the present order has been made was not legal evidence. Even if there were no distinction between the admissibility of evidence of the time and of the place of birth, yet here the pauper's evidence of the time of her birth would be inadmissible, it would not do at the sessions, it would be nothing. As to the general question, the strongest objection on the score of inconvenience, relates to the production of title-deeds, indentures, and subscribing witnesses. There is certainly no provision in the statute for the costs of bringing such evidence before the removing justices. But then the probability of an appeal is lessened by requiring such legal evidence; as an opportunity is thereby afforded to a parish of exercising a sound discretion whether to appeal or not. Suppose, in the case of a settlement by apprenticeship, the pauper to say, 'I was bound apprentice to such a person in such a parish:' are the appellants to hunt out the indenture and the subscribing witnesses? Obviously the onus would be thrown on the wrong party. Whether the inconveniences of our decision are so great as to render it expedient for the legislature to interfere, I do not know, but I am satisfied that our decision is the only one we could come to on legal principles. If, after the objection is pointed out to their order the respondents feel that they are wrong, they may probably, after notice to the other parish, be able to abandon it and get another made on legal evidence. I believe in one case in the crown paper the question will arise whether such an order can be abandoned. I do not see how the act is to be carried into effect without requiring legal evidence in these cases." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion, and agree with my lord that it is well this question has been again brought before us, and trust that henceforth all doubt

4. Of the Examination.

The order must be founded on legal evidence.

Difficulty of bringing witnesses and documents before the justices.

Reg. v. St. Pancras, p. 1047.

will be at an end. Three points have been raised. First, it is said, this case is distinguishable from the cases which are supposed to govern it; secondly, that the evidence here was legal evidence; thirdly, that the former cases ought to be reconsidered. 1. As to this case being distinguishable. In one of the former cases the examination was certainly open to the farther objection pointed out; but still the decision is not put on that objection, but on the objection we have now to dispose of. The other case is not distinguishable; there the evidence was hearsay in terms, and here it must of necessity have been so in fact. 2. Was there legal evidence in this case, of the place of birth: Rex v. Erith, (a) which was a well considered case, decides that hearsay evidence of the place of birth is inadmissible. 3. Were the former cases rightly decided? My opinion on this subject may be entitled to some weight, because I always felt the inconvenience that would result from those cases. But I am satisfied, by the reasoning of my lord and my brother Patteson, that those cases were rightly decided, and, though inconvenience may be the result, that the inconvenience would have been greater if we had decided otherwise. And the act in some measure remedies the inconvenience by suspending the actual removal for twenty-one days, during which the objection to the examination may be pointed out. By our decision we merely carry out the old law, for an order might always have been quashed if bad on its face, and, if it had been the practice to set out the grounds in the order itself, the order might always have been set aside, if those grounds were insufficient. The only change is that now the examination must be sent with the order, and thus the grounds are open to immediate objection." Wightman, J. "I am unable to distinguish this case from the two former cases, and think that, if we had decided otherwise than we have, the object of the act would be defeated. That object appears to have been the prevention of litigation and expense, by compelling in the outset a mutual disclosure between the contending parishes. In the present instance, the weakness of their adversary's case became known to the appellants by the new system of sending the examination with the order of removal. Independently of the distinction laid down in Rex v. Erith that the same hearsay evidence that would be sufficient to prove the time, is insufficient to prove the place of birth, the evidence in this case would not be admissible to prove the time. For in all cases the declarations as to time of birth have been made by those who would know the fact, and here it is proposed to allow the evidence of a person who could not know the fact. Order of sessions confirmed.

4. Of the Examination.

(a) 8 East, 539.

Hearsay evidence of relief and birth insufficient of themselves.

Reg. v. Ecclesall Bierlow, 1 G. & D. 160; 11 A. & E. 607. W. Chappell, &c., were removed from Dodworth to Ecclesall Bierlow. Order confirmed. Case:—One of the examinations was that of W. Chappell, the father of the pauper, who said: "I am sixty-two years of age, and was born at Doncaster, but the place of my father's settlement was at Ecclesall Bierlow, as I have heard him say, and believe to be true, and I have heard my father say that he has had relief from the overseers of Ecclesall Bierlow, and I never did any act in my own right to gain a settlement." Another was that of W. Chappell, the pauper, who said: "I am thirty-two years of age, and was born at Cawthorne in the said riding, but the place of my father's settlement, as I have heard him say, and believe to be true, is at Ecclesall Bierlow in the said riding. I have heard the above examination read over to me, and I believe the same to be true, and that I never did any act in my own right to gain a settlement." The grounds of appeal were that the settlement of W. Chappell was not in Ecclesall Bierlow; that the settlement of the grandfather of the pauper was not in Ecclesall Bierlow, nor had the grandfather relief from the overseers of Ecclesall Bierlow, as in the said examinations mentioned, nor otherwise. That the order is bad and inoperative, and the examinations on which it is made are defective, and insufficient to support the same. On the appeal the appellants insisted that the examinations contained no legal evidence of the pauper's settlement being in the appellant township; and that, even if there were any such evidence, it was confined to the relief given to the grandfather by the appellants, and that it ought to have appeared on the examinations where he was residing when such relief was given. The sessions decided that these objections did not afford a sufficient ground for discharging the order, and proceeded to hear the appeal, and, having heard it, confirmed the order. If the court should be of opinion that these objections ought to have prevailed, then the order and the judgment of sessions be quashed. Lord Denman. "I have no doubt whatever that the magistrates should have the usual kind of legal evidence before making an order of removal. Their order is a warrant to the parish officers to remove the pauper, and should not issue except on legal evidence. It is said that the pauper is a party before the magistrates, and that his hearsay statement is in the nature of an admission. I do not think that he is a party, and, even if he were, his statement of what he had heard some one else say would not be evidence against him. The objection pointed out is a good ground of appeal, and we must give effect to it." Patteson, J. "Whatever the case may have been formerly, it is clear that since the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, the litigating parties are the two parishes. The argument that the pauper is a party, and that nothing can be stronger than his bare admission, goes too far, for, if he had stated positively that he was settled in A., that would not do; the ground of settlement would still have to be stated, and to be supported by legal evidence. It is said that inconvenience will ensue from our requiring legal evidence, as an indenture of apprenticeship or other evidence may have to be sent for from a great distance. But, if the case goes to the sessions, the sessions must have legal evidence; the witnesses must be produced at some time or another. The appellants have clearly pointed out the objection, and it must prevail. If a removing parish think their evidence will not do, they should abandon their order, and apply for another when they can get better evidence." Williams, J. "The object of the sections that have been commented on, of the new act, are decisive to my mind. They were intended to prevent litigation, by making the case of each party known to the other. Now an order of removal made upon hearsay evidence is, for this purpose, as if made upon no evidence; for the legal evidence, which must afterwards be adduced at the trial, would come upon the appellants by surprise." Wightman, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

4. Of the Examination.

The evidence should be legal.

The statement of an apprenticeship by a covenant indenture, shows that it was not a binding by the parish.

Reg. v. Cumberworth Half, 8 Jurist, 57. William Burdett was removed from Denby to Cumberworth Half. Order confirmed. Case:—The examination of the pauper, upon which the order was made, stated, "my settlement is in Cumberworth Half, which I gained by apprenticeship with Amos Burdett, of Gelfal, in Cumberworth Half. When I was about fourteen years of age, I was put out an apprentice by covenant indenture to the said Amos Burdett for seven years, to learn the trade of a clothier, and I went to and resided with the said Amos Burdett in Cumberworth Half, under the said indenture, for five and a half years, when my brother purchased my time out for two guineas, which was paid by my mother, and the indentures were destroyed: the appellants objected, that the examination was insufficient on the face of it, and the order ought to be quashed. Because the alleged indenture was not shown to have been produced before the justices, nor was its loss shown, to let in secondary evidence; and that the secondary evidence was insufficient, as it did not appear by the examination whether W. Burdett was a parish apprentice, or by whom he was bound, or who were the parties to the indenture; and that, if he were a parish apprentice, that it did not appear by the said examination, whether the binding was allowed by justices, or that the money given or contracted for in relation to such apprentice was inserted in the indenture, or that the indenture was duly stamped. The sessions overruled the objections, and held the examination good. Lord Denman. "The first (a) question is, whether the examination is good. The court had much doubt in the first instance, but I think the words 'covenant indenture' are sufficiently descriptive of the indenture of apprenticeship." Patteson, J., (who had not heard the argument.) said, "He thought the words 'covenant indenture' were sufficient to distinguish this from a parish indenture." Coleridge, J. "I had a different opinion in the first instance upon this point. But when it is considered that parish indentures were introduced by the 43 Eliz., that in that statute they are put in contrast to an indenture of covenant, it is very reasonable that a covenant indenture should mean something different from parish indenture; and, moreover, from the examination, this indenture seems to have been put an end to without any application on the part of the master, either to the overseers or justices." Wightman, J., concurred. Order confirmed.

(a) See notice of appeal as to second point.

4. Of the Examination.

Reg. v. Lydeard St. Lawrence, 1 G. & D. 191; 11 A. & E. 616. E. Winter, &c., were removed from Spaxton to Lydeard St. Lawrence. Order confirmed. Case:—One of the examinations upon which the order was made, was that of W. Winter, now confined in gaol for felony, who said, "I am now about twenty-five years old; I was born in the parish of Lydeard St. Lawrence, as I have heard and believe; I have done no act whereby to gain a legal settlement on my own account; about January last I was removed by an order of removal from the parish of North Cadbury, in the said county, to the parish of Lydeard St. Lawrence, in the said county, the last legal place of settlement of my father, W. Winter, as I have heard and believe." W. Winter, the father, was also examined, and said, "My son, W. Winter, hath not, to the best of my knowledge and belief, gained any legal place of settlement on his own account; my parents were legally settled, as I have heard and believe, in Lydeard St. Lawrence; I was born in Lydeard St. Lawrence, as I have heard and believe; I was bound apprentice by indenture with John Hurley of Fitzhead, shoemaker, but it was agreed in the indenture of apprenticeship that I should serve the last forty days of my apprenticeship in Lydeard St. Lawrence, and I served the last forty days of my apprenticeship in Lydeard St. Lawrence with Aaron Hurley, my master's father; I have had relief from the overseers of Lydeard St. Lawrence; my son was removed in January last by an order of removal from North Cadbury to Lydeard St. Lawence, as the last legal place of his settlement; I was examined before the magistrates as to the place of settlement of my son, when the order was made." The grounds of appeal were, because the paupers were not legally settled in Lydeard St. Lawrence, as set forth in the respective examinations of W. Winter and his father. Because it does not appear by either of the said examinations, in what manner Elizabeth Winter and Emma became settled in Lydeard St. Lawrence. Because it is not true that W. Winter, the father, was bound apprentice by indenture with John Hurley of Fitzhead, shoemaker, nor that he served the last forty days of his alleged apprenticeship in Lydeard St. Lawrence with Aaron Hurley, his master's father, under any indenture of apprenticeship, or with the consent of John Hurley. Because it does not appear in the examinations that W. Winter, the father, at any time served Aaron Hurley by the consent of John Hurley, or in any other manner, under any indenture of apprenticeship, nor when or by whom or for what time William Winter, the father, was bound apprentice by indenture with John Hurley, as in the said examination of the said W. Winter, the father, is alleged, and which said John Hurley in the same examination is described as of Fitzhead, shoemaker, and there is no person of that name and description now, or at or about the date of the said order, residing at Fitzhead, nor any person of the name and description of Aaron Hurley, father of John Hurley, now, or at or about the date of the said order, residing in Lydeard St. Lawrence, and the said examinations are too general, and are wanting in sufficient particularity in each of these last-mentioned respects. Because no examination, or any copy thereof, has ever been sent to the overseers of the said parish of Lydeard St. Lawrence, proving or setting forth upon oath of any credible witness when or where the said W. Winter, the son, was born, nor his age. The court found that

A pauper's statement of what he has heard as to the place of his birth is insufficient.

One ground of appeal was that it was not proved upon the oath of any credible witness where or when the pauper was born. This notice sufficiently pointed to the hearsay evidence, and not to the competency of the witness, who was a felon.

Where residence of apprentice with another master is relied on, the master's consent must appear in the examination.

4. Of the Examination.

the father, W. Winter, resided and served the last forty days of his apprenticeship in Lydeard St. Lawrence with Aaron Hurley, his master's father, with his master's consent, under a valid indenture of apprenticeship, bearing date the 6th of April, 1789, produced by the respondent parish from the custody of W. Winter, the father. The court also found that W. Winter, the son, was born in Lydeard St. Lawrence. The question was, whether the respondents could go into either of these grounds of removal under the above examinations. The appellants objected to any evidence being received on these points, but the court received it, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench. Lord Denman. "The first question is, whether the examination sufficiently states that the pauper's father served the second master with the consent of the first. I am of opinion that such consent is not properly stated, and that the objection, of which due notice has been given, must prevail. The second question is to the sufficiency of the examination in setting forth the place of the pauper's birth-place. It is said that the only objection made, and intended to be made, to the examination in this respect, is that, with reference to the pauper, who speaks as to his birth-place, being a felon convict, and so incompetent from infamy, the fact in question is not proved on credible testimony, and that the objection, therefore, to the evidence, as being in itself hearsay, comes by surprise upon the respondents. I think the word 'credible' by no means confines the notice of objection to the competency of the pauper, and that the appellants were entitled to go into the objection, that the evidence as to the birth settlement is entirely hearsay. That objection also must prevail, and the nature of the fact to be proved does not make this an excepted case. Early recollection may be evidence of the place of birth, but early recollection is not the evidence set forth, but merely hearsay and belief. It is remarkable, too, that the father, who was before the magistrate, and who might have given strictly legal evidence of the fact, is not examined as to it. I do not think the inconvenience of requiring magistrates to make orders of removal on legal evidence will be so great as is suggested. They may summon within their jurisdiction, and with respect to witnesses out of their jurisdiction we will do our best to assist them. In the sense in which the sessions ask our opinion, I think they were not at liberty to go into the facts of this case." Patteson, J. "I am of the same opinion. The appellants have given sufficient notice of their objections, and the removing parish might have abandoned their order, and drawn up a proper order on better evidence. If they obstinately go to the sessions with a bad order they have no ground of complaint. They knew the consent of the original master was necessary to make good the service with the second master, and they should have gone back and got the fact supplied, if it could be. As to the other notice of objection, I had no notion that it referred to the pauper, being a convict; I took it to refer to the hearsay evidence, and think it a good notice. The date of the indenture of apprenticeship is not given. I do not know that it must always be stated, but it is often a material fact, and in this case it might show (though the fact is highly improbable) that the father was bound after the son's emancipation; I do not know why the date should be kept back. I think it is much better to be strict in these matters, and trust that we shall bring parties at last to some regularity in their proceedings." Williams, J. "As soon as it was decided that an order of removal is not to be made upon hearsay evidence, this case was disposed of. It is new to me that evidence of the place of birth is to be a case excepted from the rules of hearsay evidence. With regard to the other objection, assent to the second service is the very point in that part of the case, and should have been stated. I abide willingly by the rule in Reg. v. Middleton Teasdale (post), and think that the act meant to require every particularity." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. I understand the objection to the evidence and birth settlement to point to the circumstance that the evidence was entirely hearsay. It is said the magistrates may remove on hearsay evidence, because the examination is ex parte, and because they Magistrates may summon witnesses.

Semble. Reception of hearsay evidence not to vitiate an order,

4. Of the Examination.

If there is other sufficient evidence.

An examination stating that the pauper's father rented a close of land situated at Lindley, is insufficient; and the examination stating that the pauper occupied a cottage and land belonging to R. R., situate at L., at the yearly rent of 9*l.* is insufficient, because it does not state that the pauper rented it for one year, or that he occupied under such yearly hiring within 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 2.

have no process for compelling the attendance of witnesses generally. But I think they must act on legal evidence, and, if the want of process causes inconvenience, it may be obviated by the legislature. I do not mean to say that the reception of hearsay evidence would vitiate an order of removal, if there was other legitimate evidence." Order of sessions quashed.

Reg. v. The Recorder of Pontefract, 2 Q. B. 548. W. B. Clapham and wife were removed from Pontefract to Leathley. The examination of the pauper was: That he is sixty-three years of age or thereabouts; that the examinant's father, Jacob Clapham, late of Leathley, blacksmith, deceased, was duly settled at Leathley, which settlement he gained in the year 1813 or 1814 by renting of W. Fawkes, Esq., a blacksmith's shop at Leathley, at the yearly rent of 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*; a cottage also situate at Leathley, of Mr. Milnthorpe, then of Leathley, farmer, since deceased, at the yearly rent of 2*l.* 15*s.*; and also a close of land situated in Lindley in the said county, at the yearly rent of 6*l.* 6*s.*; that his father was tenant of the above-mentioned premises for one whole year, in 1813 or 1814, or thereabouts; that during the whole of that period his father resided and slept in Leathley, in the cottage taken by him of Mr. Milnthorpe. He further stated, that he also gained a settlement in Leathley in his own right, for, in or about the year 1828, he occupied a cottage and close of land belonging to the Rev. Richard Ridley, situate at Leathley, at the yearly rent of 9*l.*; the above-mentioned blacksmith's shop at the yearly rent of 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*, all which premises he occupied for three years, paid the several rents as they became due, and resided and slept the whole of the time in Leathley in the cottage. Deponent also, in the year 1828, rented of Joseph Pawson the eatage of the burial-ground for one year, at the rent of 12*s.*, which rent he also paid. The grounds of appeal were: That the examination is defective and insufficient, inasmuch as it does not disclose the name of the person of whom J. Clapham rented the close of land in the examination of W. B. Clapham described to be situated in Lindley; that with respect to the settlement alleged to be gained by W. B. Clapham in his examination, the examination is defective and insufficient, inasmuch as it is not therein stated that W. B. Clapham rented or occupied the cottage, close of land, and blacksmith's shop, under a yearly hiring; nor does it appear that W. B. Clapham ever bonâ fide rented a separate and distinct dwelling-house or building, or land, or both, in our township at and for the sum of 10*l.* a year at the least, for the term of one whole year, nor that he occupied any such house or building or land under such yearly hiring, and actually paid the rent for the same to the amount of 10*l.* at the least for the term of one whole year. The appellants objected to the appeal being heard upon the above grounds. The recorder refused to hear the appeal, quashed the order. On a rule nisi for a mandamus to hear the appeal, it appeared that the township of Lindley was small, that it adjoined the township of Leathley, and that it contained not more than twenty-five families. Lord Denman. "The first objection is, that the examination does not disclose the name of the person from whom the pauper's father rented the close of land mentioned in the examination. It seems that the sessions have adjudged that the examination is in this respect insufficient, and have done what they were required to do by Rex v. Bridgewater. We are bound by that decision and ought not to disturb it. With respect to the other objection, the examination does not follow the 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 2, as it does not allege that the pauper rented for one whole year, or that he occupied under such yearly hiring. Cases have been put where the examination would be made out in evidence, and yet there would be no yearly hiring. We under these circumstances think that the examination is insufficient." Patteson, J. "I am entirely of the same opinion. The objection to the examination with respect to the settlement of the pauper's father is fatal; it is not stated from whom he rented the close in Lindley. As to the settlement gained by the pauper himself, the objections are clearly pointed out by the grounds of appeal. The words of 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, s. 2, require a little consideration. The word 'rented' is somewhat ambiguous; it might apply to a contract for taking for one whole year as well as to an occupation for a year without any hiring for a year; but it is clear, upon reading further on, 'under such yearly hiring,' that rented for a year must mean taken for a year. This may have been a tenancy at will, which would not be a taking for a year. The objection is clearly pointed out, and I think the sessions were right." Williams, J. "I think the first objection is wholly unanswerable. We cannot go into the dimensions of a township on affidavit, for that would make the examination good for one township and insufficient for another. There is an absence of a material fact from the examination. I quite agree with the rest of the court as to the meaning of the word 'rented' in the statute; coupling that word with what follows, it is clearly equivalent to a taking for a year." Wightman, J. "I am of the same opinion on the first point as to the derivative settlement from the father. On the second point the statute requires two things; that the tenement shall be bonâ fide rented for the term of one whole year, and that it shall be occupied under such yearly hiring. Here it is merely stated that the pauper occupied a cottage and close at a yearly rent of 9*l.*, which is not at all in the terms of the statute." Rule discharged.

4. Of the Examination.

An examination, stating, "I took a house for a year; I paid rent for the whole time of my tenancy," is not a sufficient statement of payment of rent.

Reg. v. Leeds, 8 Jurist, 447. M. Redmayne was removed from Preston to Leeds. Case:—The pauper in his examination, stated, "In the month of May, 1820, I became the tenant of a house in Kirkgate, in the town of Leeds, in the West Riding of the county of York. I took the house for a year, at, I believe, 19*l.*; but I am not certain whether it was 1*l.* more or less. I entered on, and resided in, the house in the said month of May, and continued to reside upon it with my family until the month of October, 1821, when I left it. I paid rent for the whole time of my tenancy." One ground of appeal was, that the examination did not state that the rent was actually paid for one whole year. The sessions overruled the objection, and confirmed the order. Lord Denman. "We cannot find a settlement here. It is very unfortunate that the payment of the rent is not more fully stated in the examination, and that such an omission should have so serious an effect." Patteson, Williams, and Coleridge, Js., concurred. Order quashed.

An examination disclosing a settlement by relief is not impaired by a defective statement of the settlement.

Reg. v. Camrose, 2 Q. B. 330, n. In the examination it was stated that the pauper gained a settlement by hiring and service in the appellant parish, but did not show that the pauper was at that time unmarried and without children, and was otherwise defective. It was proved, that the appellants gave relief whilst the pauper was resident in another parish; and it was contended that the fact of relief must be supposed to have been grounded on the defective settlement. The sessions quashed the order. Per curiam. "The relief is an admission that there was a good settlement, and the examinations do not show the contrary. If the relief is to be coupled with the hiring and service here stated, it does not follow, because the examinations are imperfect, that the settlement by hiring and service may not in reality have been very good." Order of sessions quashed.

Statement of relief is some evidence, and the sessions should hear the case.

Reg. v. York hire, W. R. (Keighley v. Wilsden) 2 Q. B. 331. Sarah Hartly, a widow, and two children were removed from Keighley to Wilsden. The pauper in her examination stated that her husband's father died about twenty-four years ago at Hauden, in the parish of Bingley; that when he was lying ill Mr. C., the overseer of Keighley, came over to see him several times at Hauden, and gave him relief once. The sister of the pauper's husband was examined, and stated, "My father belonged to Keighley. I never gained any settlement for myself before I was married, which is about twenty-eight years ago. Better than thirty years ago I had an illegitimate child. When I was pregnant I lived with my father at Hauden, and E. S., the overseer of Bingley, sent me to the overseer of Keighley, and I went with his knowledge and consent to my cousin's, J. L. of Keighley, and lay in there, and I afterwards went with the overseer of Keighley to filiate before the justices. I received pay for my child from the overseer of Keighley till my child died. It lived about nine months."

The examinations contained no evidence of the time of the pauper's marriage further than the age of her eldest child. The sessions thought the examinations defective, and quashed the order, and on a rule for a mandamus, Lord Denman said, "there is certainly some evidence," and made the rule absolute (a).

4. Of the Examination.

Ex parte Ackworth, 3 Q. B. 397. This was an application for a mandamus to erase an entry made at the sessions, or to hear the appeal. The principal facts are stated, post. In giving judgment, Patteson, J., said, "It appears that the examination on which the order of removal was made disclosed no sufficient ground of removal. It professed to set out a former order of removal from the respondent to the appellant township, and showed that former order to have been suspended by the justices who made it, but failed to show either that the suspension had ever been taken off, or that the order had been acted on after it was so suspended. The appellants, when the case came on for trial, took this objection, and the sessions thought the examination bad, as it undoubtedly was, and they quashed the order, "not on the merits."

Where a former order is relied on, the examination must show that it was acted on.

Reg. v. Mildenhall, 2 G. & D. 86; 2 Q. B. 517. Matilda Roper and children were removed from St. Mary, Nottingham, to Mildenhall. Order confirmed, subject to a case on the sufficiency of the examination. M. Roper in her examination stated, "That she was born, as she heard and believed, in St. Mary, Nottingham, and that she was there married to William Roper, who died two years ago. About seven years ago, my husband's father, William Roper, a labourer, was, I believe, removed by order of justices from the parish of St. Mary aforesaid, to the parish of Mildenhall, in Suffolk, and I have not heard of him since." Barnett, clerk of the board of guardians of St. Mary, Nottingham, stated, "That William Roper, the father of Matilda Roper's husband, was removed by order of justices from the parish of St. Mary aforesaid, on the 11th day of June, 1834, to the parish of Mildenhall aforesaid, against which order there was no appeal." One ground of appeal was that the order of removal in the examinations mentioned, was not produced, or shown to have been lost or destroyed, and that the order was made on inadmissible evidence appears on the face of the examinations. It was contended, that the strict rules of evidence ought not to be applied to the preliminary investigation before the justices, and that sufficient appeared on the examination to justify the admission of secondary evidence, as the document might have been in the possession of parties out of the jurisdiction of the justices. Lord Denman. "There is no presumption as to the custody of this document, nor any reason shown why it could not have been produced." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

The examination must also show that the order was produced before the magistrates, or evidence given to show that it could not be obtained.

Reg. v. Tetbury, 1 G. & D. 166, n. Lord Denman. "We have not yet said, and should be unwilling to say, that an order of removal would be vitiated, because part of the evidence taken has been improperly admitted by the removing justices." See Reg. v. Lydeard St. Lawrence, (p. 1063.)

Some inadmissible evidence will not vitiate the examination.

Reg. v. Alternun, 1 G. & D. 261; 10 A. & E. 699. C. Bray, and three children of Thomas Bray, were removed from Gwennap to Alternun. Order confirmed. Case:—The only examination which accompanied the order of removal, and which related to the chargeability, was the examination of Thomas Bray, the father of the paupers, who was described in the examination as a prisoner in the gaol at Bodmin. One ground of appeal was, "because the examination of T. Bray, on which the order was made, is insufficient, illegal, and without effect, and ought not to have been taken by the same justices, T. Bray, at the time of the taking thereof, being a convicted felon in the gaol of Bodmin, and now suffering his punishment there." The appellants in support of this objection tendered in evidence the record of Bray's conviction. The sessions rejected this evidence, and confirmed the order. Lord Denman. "My first impression was certainly

It is no objection to the examination, that the witness was a convicted felon, it not appearing that the justices making the order knew that fact.

(a) This decision has been reversed in Reg. v. Kesteven (post). The sufficiency of the examination being a question for the sessions.

4. Of the Examination.

opposite to that I have now formed. I think the justices were bound to take the examination of the witness, though a prisoner at the time, unless it was brought to their knowledge that he was then a felon convict. He might have been a prisoner without being a convicted felon, and the fact that he was so, ought not to invalidate the examination, unless it appear, which is nowhere found in the case, that the justices knew the fact. Our decision is not at variance with the cases of Reg. v Black Callerton, and Reg. v. Middleton in Teasdale, which were both cases of examinations defective on the face of them, the former showing no chargeability, the latter no settlement whatever, and therefore nothing to show the jurisdiction of the justices to make the order. Here everything is shown necessary to give the justices jurisdiction, and they were bound to make the order. If the witness had been called at the sessions, a valid objection to his competency might certainly have been made. Reg. v. The Justices of Norfolk, 5 B. & A. 484, (post,) was decided on another question, the right of the sessions to refuse to enter an appeal when the order had been superseded with the consent of the removing parish." Littledale, J. " The fact of the witness being in prison might have suggested to the justices to make an inquiry whether he were a convicted felon or not, but it does not appear in the case that they made such an inquiry, or were in any manner made acquainted with the fact. The examination is perfect as far as it went, and the case is the same as it would be if the justices had proceeded on the testimony of persons, who, it was afterwards found out, were interested." Patteson, J. " The case does not state that the magistrates knew of the conviction, nor do the appellants state that they did, in their grounds of appeal. The examination is good on the face of it: though it states the witness to be then in gaol, he might have been merely committed to take his trial. Reg. v. Black Callerton, is a different case, the examination omitted a fact material and necessary to give the justices jurisdiction. I think proving at the sessions that the witness was a convicted felon is not enough; it must be shown that the magistrates knew it." Coleridge, J. " I think this case stands clear of all the decided cases. The examination states enough to show the jurisdiction. The chargeability and all the requisite facts appear upon the face of it. The general presumption is in favour of the competency, and the incompetency must be proved. Unless clear proof was given of the conviction and judgment, the witness was competent at the time this examination was taken. The case is like that put by my brother Littledale, of the examination of an interested witness." Order of sessions confirmed.

All the examinations taken by the justices must be sent.

Reg. v. Outwell, 9 A. & E. 836; 1 P. & D. 610. An order for the removal of Penelope Bott and children, from Outwell to March, was quashed. Case:—The magistrates who made the order took the examination of the pauper, John Bott, the father of pauper's husband, and C. Smith, who stated a settlement gained by pauper's husband by apprenticeship in the appellant parish. Before making the order, they also took the examination of W. Clarke, which referred to the hiring of some land in the respondent parish by the husband; but they made the order upon the examination of the paupers, John Bott and W. Smith only, and these were the examinations sent with the order. The land as to which W. Clarke was examined was the same tenement, by the hiring of which the sessions adjudged the pauper to have gained a settlement in the respondent parish. The grounds of appeal were, that the person who acted as overseer in obtaining the said order, was not duly appointed. That a copy of all the examinations touching the settlement of the paupers, taken by the justices previous to signing the order, was not sent to us with the counterpart thereof. That the paupers are settled in the parish of Outwell. It was contended on the part of the respondents that, as the notice of appeal did not deny the settlement set out in the examinations of the paupers J. Bott and W. Smith, it must be taken to be admitted, and they need not give any evidence of that settlement; and the court were of that opinion. It was then objected by the appellants, that the examination of W. Clarke ought to have been sent with the duplicate order of removal to the appellant parish. But such objection was overruled by the court, and the appellants proposed to give evidence of a settlement in the respondent parish by renting a tenement. The respondents objected to the terms of the notice of appeal being too general, and that such evidence could not be given. The court, however, received the evidence and quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this court as to whether the examination of W. Clarke ought to have been sent with the order of removal; and whether, under the terms of the notice of appeal, evidence of the settlement in Outwell could be given. Littledale, J. "It appears to me that the removing parish ought to have sent the examination of the witness Clarke as well as of the others, because Clarke spoke to the hiring of a tenement in the respondent parish, which, as it afterwards appeared by the opinion of the sessions, conferred a settlement. It is true that the other witnesses proved a settlement in the appellant parish, and that the justices acted upon their evidence; but I think it requisite, within the principle of the provision of the legislature, that the whole of the examination should be sent." Williams, J. "I have had some doubt in this case, but on the whole I think it is better to construe the rule strictly, and to decide that the act is compulsory on the removing parish to send the examinations of all the witnesses. From what is stated, I must conclude that the evidence of Clarke had an important bearing on the question of the pauper's settlement, although not on the particular settlement which was established to the satisfaction of the justices." Coleridge, J. "Except for the doubts entertained by one of my learned brothers, I should have thought this a very plain case. These clauses are most beneficial to the public, and, having the laudable object in view to prevent needless litigation, should not be frittered away. What are the words of the act? 'That no person shall be removed under any order of removal till twenty-one days after a notice in writing of his being so chargeable or relieved, accompanied by a copy of the order of removal of such person, and by a copy of the examination on which such order was made.' Examination is nomen collectivum, and without anything to explain it must mean the whole examination. The purposes of justice also require that the whole should be sent; for, if we were to decide that a portion only was sufficient, the inconvenient practice would be introduced of discussing at sessions what evidence was material, and what not. Besides which, the parish obtaining the order might be exposed to the temptation of withholding important examinations. But it is said that the removing parish is only bound to send the evidence on which the order of removal is made, and not to furnish evidence against itself; but I cannot bend to that argument, for the legislature may have intended, by requiring the copy of the examination to be sent, that the parish to which the pauper is removed may be put into possession of all the evidence elicited, in order to shape its future proceedings. It is then contended that, as section 83 enacts that, if either of the parties shall have included in the order or statement any frivolous grounds of removal or appeal, the justices may award costs, the clause shows that any ground of settlement but that on which the order is made ought not to be sent, as leading to unnecessary expense. But the order alluded to there is the order of justices, and the statement is the statement of the grounds of appeal, the examination of the witnesses not being alluded to at all. Which then is more likely to increase the expenses of an appeal, the withholding evidence and keeping parties in the dark as to the facts, or sending the whole examination, which may, indeed, prevent the appeal altogether? We do much better in holding that the removing parish has no discretion as to which of the examinations are to be sent." Order of sessions confirmed.

4. Of the Examination.

An examination, on which an order of removal was founded, is admissible as evidence against the parish to which the pauper was

Reg. v. Sowe, 2 G. & D. 537. Frederick Benton, &c., were removed from St. Mary, Warwick, to Sowe. Order confirmed. Case:—It appeared upon the hearing of the appeal that the magistrates had admitted as evidence upon the present removal the order and examinations which had been taken by two justices on the removal of Mary, the wife of Samuel Benton, a brother of the present pauper, which order had been executed, and removed, on the removal of another member of the same family.

4. Of the Examination.

had not been appealed against. The examinations, taken in 1835, were those of Samuel Benton the younger, and Samuel Benton the elder. Samuel Benton the younger stated, that he is about the age of twenty-four years, and that he was born, as he hath been informed and verily believes, at Birmingham, where his father and mother then lived, but belonged to the parish of Sowe; and that he had not done any act to obtain a settlement in any parish. Samuel Benton the elder stated, that when he was about the age of thirteen, he was hired by Mr. Joseph Cator, a farmer of Sowe, at Bulkington Statutes, about a fortnight or three weeks before Michaelmas, 1800, for a year, at the wages of 4*l.*, and received a 1*s.* earnest; that he went into and remained in Mr. Cator's service the whole of his time, and received his full wages and left at Michaelmas, 1801; that he was married to Rebecca, his present wife, by whom he has had six children, and among them the said Samuel Benton the younger, and Frederick, and has obtained no settlement since he left the said Mr. Cator's service to the best of his knowledge and belief. These documents were again produced and admitted on the appeal, and it was also proved that the paupers had been received without appeal by the parish officers of Sowe. The grounds of appeal were, that the order was bad and inoperative; because the examinations on which it is grounded are insufficient and defective, and disclose no legal evidence to support the same; because from the said examinations it appears that the family of one Samuel Benton the younger, were, in 1835, removed from St. Mary to Sowe, and such order and the examinations on which it was made were improperly admitted as evidence on the making of the order in this case, inasmuch as it is not shown or set forth in the examinations in this case, that the pauper, Frederick Benton, derived his settlement from Samuel Benton the younger. Because the order for the removal of Samuel Benton the younger, and the examinations on which it is grounded, were not legal evidence in this case, and ought not to have been admitted as evidence by the removing justices. The appellants objected that the order of removal of Mary Benton, and the examinations on which the same was founded, were not admissible evidence before the removing justices of the settlement of the pauper, F. Benton, against the appellants. The recorder of Warwick was of opinion that the order and examinations were admissible evidence. Lord Denman. "It is impossible to say that this evidence was not admissible. Whether it was or not is the only question submitted to us by the case." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

Summons.

One justice may issue his warrant to summon the pauper to be examined concerning his settlement. Witnesses may also be summoned for the like purpose, (p. 1063.) And it is very advisable that the overseers and churchwardens of the parish, to which it is proposed to remove the pauper, be summoned to attend the examination. (See forms, Appendix.)

Due examination or consideration sufficient.

Munger-Hunger v. Warden, 2 Sess. Ca. 40; 2 Bott, 817. Exception was taken to an order, for that it was said to be made upon due examination, without saying upon oath. But by the court: "This is sufficient; for if it is said to be made upon due examination, it shall be understood to be upon oath, though the statute directs the examination to be upon oath."

Rex v. Fisherton Delamore, Sess. Ca. 45. "Upon due consideration" was held sufficient, for that implies due examination.

If two justices take the examination of a pauper relative to his settlement, but do not remove him, and the pauper afterwards dies or becomes insane, Quære, whether two other justices may remove his family on it? (See Rex

Rex v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 707. Order of removal of John Sharp from Icklingham, All Saints, to Eriswell, confirmed. Case:—Examination of the pauper in 1779 was taken before two justices, upon the overseers of Icklingham taking him to be examined as to his settlement; his examination was taken upon oath before those justices, and signed by the pauper; by which examination it appeared that he had gained a settlement by hiring and service for a year in Eriswell, and had done no act to gain a settlement elsewhere. No proceedings were had in consequence of this examination until this order of removal was applied for and made. [N.B. The two justices who made the order of removal were not the same two justices who took the examination.] The pauper, from the time of the examination being taken, continued to reside at Icklingham for about five years, without being chargeable to that parish, when he became insane, and so continues. His examination was offered in evidence, and objected to, but received. The evidence, exclusive of the said examination, was not sufficient to warrant the determination. The judges gave their opinions at great length. A hhurst and Buller, Js., were for confirming, and Lord Kenyon, C. J., and Grose, J., were for quashing the orders; but there not being a majority of the court of opinion that the rule for reversing the orders should be made absolute, they consequently stood confirmed.

v. Warminster, p. 1072.)

One justice may take the examination of an infirm person.

Where a pauper is too infirm to be brought before the justices at their petty sessions, a justice is authorised by the 49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 4, to take the examination, and report to another justice. (See statute, p. 1015).

Such an order of removal need not state the special circumstances of taking the examination.

Rex v. South Lynn, All Saints, 4 M. & Sel. 354. Removal of E. Smith, widow, and her children, from St. Margaret's to South Lynn, All Saints. Order confirmed. Case:—The order was founded upon the examination of the pauper, taken before one justice, and reported to the other, pursuant to 49 Geo. III. c 124, s. 4. The pauper, being at the time of her examination sick and unable to travel, the justices suspended the order. The question was, whether this order was void, as it omitted to set out that the examination was taken before one justice only, and was reported to the other justice, so as to show the particular jurisdiction and authority of the justices under the statute? Lord Ellenborough. "The justices have no jurisdiction at the common law, but only what is given to them by statute; and the argument is as if this were a proceeding contrary to the common law. It seems to me that the statute in question does not make it necessary for the justices to state the proceedings had under it in their order." Le Blanc, J. "The statute enacts, that in case the pauper is by age or other infirmity unable to be brought up to be examined as to his settlement, it shall be lawful for one magistrate to take his examination and report it to another, and for those magistrates, upon such report, to adjudge the settlement; but I do not find that the statute makes any alteration in the form of the order." Per curiam: order confirmed.

The respondents cannot use the examination of a pauper upon an appeal against the order of removal, though the pauper cannot be found.

Rex v. Nuneham Courtney, 1 East, 373. The pauper absconded between the notice of appeal and the then sessions, and could not be heard of; the respondent offered in evidence an examination in writing of the pauper, first taken upon oath on the 4th of June, 1799, by one magistrate, upon the complaint of the overseers of Burcot, and to the truth of the contents of which examination the pauper made oath before the justices at the time they made the present order. But no person was present belonging to Nuneham Courtney; whereupon the appellants objected to the admissibility of this evidence; but the court overruled the objection. But the Court of King's Bench, without hearing counsel, expressed a decided opinion against the admissibility of such evidence, and quashed both orders. (See Reg. v. Sowe, p. 1069).

Neither the hearsay of a pauper who is dead, nor his examination in writing, taken on oath, are admissible evidence.

Rex v. Ferry Frystone, otherwise Ferry Bridge, 2 East, 54. Order confirmed Case:—The pauper, Catherine Hill, deposed, "That she was the widow of John Hill, and that she had heard John in his lifetime say that his settlement was at Ferry Bridge, which he said he gained by hiring with and serving one J. Hawkeshead, a bricklayer, in Ferry Bridge, for a year" The following examination was also given in evidence. The examination of John Hill, late in the Royal Artillery, now residing at Kilnwick, taken upon oath this 15th day of April, 1788, who saith, "That his legal settlement is at Ferry Bridge; that he acquired the same by servitude; namely, by being hired for one whole year, and serving the said year with J. H, bricklayer, of Ferry Bridge; and that he hath not gained any legal settlement elsewhere since, to the best of his knowledge and belief." (Signed and attested.) No proceedings were had in consequence of this examination until the order was made. Ferry Frystone and Ferry Bridge were the same township. Lord Kenyon. "The point upon which the court were divided in opinion in Rex v. Eriswell, (p 1070,) has been since considered to be so clear against the admissibility of the evidence, either as to the hearsay of the pauper or his examination in writing, that it was abandoned by the counsel at the barin Rex v. Nuneham Courtney without argument. It is true there was no evidence there that the pauper, whose examination had been admitted in evidence, was dead; but our opinion against the general doctrine laid down by the two judges who supported the reception of the evidence in the former case was pretty broadly hinted; and to be sure, that point may now be considered to be at rest." Per curiam: both orders quashed.

4. Of the Examination.

Although the pauper is dead.

Rex v. Abergwilly, 2 East, 63. It was also settled that an ex parte examination in writing of a pauper, touching his settlement, cannot be received in evidence of such settlement, though he be dead.

Soldiers billeted, and having wife or child, may be examined as to their settlement.

1 Will. IV. c. 15, s. 69, (a) (the Mutiny Act), enacts, "That any justice in the United Kingdom, within whose jurisdiction any soldier in the regular army or the permanent staff of the militia, [and by c. 14, s. 55, "any marine"] having a wife or child, shall be billeted, may summon such soldier before him in the place where he is billeted, (which summons he is hereby directed to obey) and to take his examination in writing, upon oath, touching the place of his last legal settlement in England, and such justice shall give an attested copy of such examination to the person examined, to be by him delivered to his commanding officer, to be produced when required; which said examination, and such attested copy shall be at any time admitted in evidence as to such last legal settlement, before any justice, or at any general or quarter sessions, although such soldier be dead or absent from the kingdom: provided that in case any soldier shall be again summoned to make oath as aforesaid, then on such examination, or such attested copy thereof, being produced by him or by any other person on his behalf, such soldier shall not be obliged to take any other oath with regard to his legal settlement, but shall leave a copy of such examination, or a copy of such attested copy of examination, if required.

Attested copy thereof to be evidence.

No other copy but the attested one is evidence.

Rex v. Clayton Le Moors, 5 T. R. 704. The examination of the pauper, taken under the Mutiny Act, was the evidence relied on. The witness stated that the paper produced was a true copy examined by himself with another paper, which witness saw in the office of W. Addington, London. W. A. was the name of the justice who signed the original. He saw W. A. subscribe his name to the paper produced. He did not know the pauper, nor was he present at the original examination. The sessions refused to receive it. Lord Kenyon. "It is not necessary to say here whether or not the original is evidence; it is sufficient for the determination of this case to say that the copy of the examination tendered in evidence is not the copy which the act directs to be received in evidence." Order of sessions confirmed.

The original examination is evidence.

Rex v. Warley, 6 T. R. 534. It was determined that the original examination is evidence; and Lord Kenyon added, that "On this question it was impossible to doubt; the proposition attempted in this case is, that the attested copy is of more weight than the original examination; but it is fair to conclude that the legislature, when they made the inferior species of writing evidence, also intended to make the superior evidence."

The examination must be authenticated.

Rex v. Bilton with Harrowgate, 1 East, 13. An examination under the act was produced. The witness stated that he received it from the overseer of the respondent parish, but he was not called. No proof was given that the persons who signed it were magistrates, or that the signatures were the signatures of the said persons; and it was held that the examination must be authenticated before it could be received, and does not prove itself primâ facie, though the paper is in the form prescribed by the statute.

The examination under the former

Rex v. Warminster, 3 B. & Ald. 121. Abbott, C. J. "It has been (a) The terms of the annual Mutiny Act seldom vary. The words "although such soldier be dead or absent from the kingdom," were not contained in the similar statute of 1 Geo. IV. c. 19; and in the last-mentioned statute the words were "any non-commissioned officer or soldier."

4. Of the Examination.

contended that the words 'at any time' do not mean at a time when the pauper was either absent from this country, or when he was dead. I cannot however find anything in the act from which I can infer that it was the intention of the legislature to restrain those words to the life of the pauper, or during his residence in this country. On the contrary it seems to me that it may have been the intention of the legislature to preserve the memorial of the evidence of the settlement of a person whose life is exposed to more than ordinary risk. I think therefore the examination ought to have been received in evidence." Order of sessions quashed.

acts are receivable in evidence, though the soldier is dead or absent.

It is now expressly provided that the examination and attested copy shall be evidence, although such soldier be dead or absent from the kingdom, p. 1071.

Rex v. All Saints, Southampton, 7 B. & C. 785; 1 M. & R. 663. E. Carden was removed from Romsey Extra to All Saints, Southampton. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper was the widow of Richard Roe Carden, deceased; and to establish his settlement the respondents duly proved the following paper:—

The examination is not admissible unless on the face of it it appears that the soldier was quartered within the jurisdiction of the justices. Quære, whether this fact must not proceed aliundè?

"Town of Romsey Infra, in the county of Southampton. } The examination of Richard Roe Carden, a private soldier in his majesty's 25th regiment of foot, taken on oath before us, two of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said town, the 6th day of April, 1782, touching the place of his last legal settlement. The said examinant on his oath saith, that he was born in the parish of Romsey Infra, as he hath heard and verily believes, where his father was a settled parishioner; that about fifteen years ago last harvest, he hired himself as a covenant servant for a year to David Pallant, of the parish of All Saints, in the town and county of Southampton, Esq., at the wages of 4*l.*, and in consequence thereof he entered into the service of the said David Pallant, and served him there till about Christmas following, when this examinant went with his master and his family to London, where he stayed with him about three months, when he returned with his said master to the said parish of All Saints, and continued in his said master's service there during the remainder of the said year, and at the expiration thereof he received his full year's wages, and that he hath never done any act since to his knowledge whereby to gain a settlement; and that he hath a wife named Elizabeth, and one child, named Moses, aged two years and upwards.

(Signed) Richard Roe Carden.

Sworn the day and year above mentioned, before us,

(Signed) { William Biggs, mayor, Thomas Dawkins."

It was objected, that it did not appear on the face of it that at the time the examination was taken, the soldier was quartered in the town of Romsey Infra. The court however found the paper to be a due examination under the Mutiny Act. Bayley, J. "In this case I think there is not enough to make the examination evidence. The Mutiny Act gives a special power in certain cases; but for the statute this examination would be extrajudicial. By that statute, if any non-commissioned officer or soldier shall have wife, child, or children, two justices may summon him where he is quartered, to make oath of the place of his last legal settlement, who shall obey such summons, and make oath accordingly: and the justice shall give an attested copy of such affidavit, to be delivered to the commanding officer, to be produced when required, which attested copy shall be at any time admitted in evidence as to such settlement, before any justices, or at any sessions; and if he be summoned again to make such oath as aforesaid, then on such attested copy of the oath by him formerly taken being produced, he shall not be obliged to take any other or further oath with regard to his settlement, but shall leave a copy of such attested copy of examination if required. The justices therefore have no jurisdiction, except in the case of a soldier, nor unless the soldier is quartered within their jurisdiction. In the Banbury Peerage case, it was resolved, in 1809, by the judges, on a question put to them by the House of Lords, that a bill in equity, or depositions, cannot be received in evidence against a party not claiming under the plaintiff or defendant in the chancery suit. Here the facts constituting the jurisdiction, namely, that the examinant is a soldier, and quartered within the jurisdiction, must be shown either aliundè or ex visceribus. I think it should have been made out aliundè. In Rex v. Warminster, (p. 1071,) it was proved aliundè that the party was a soldier, and quartered within the jurisdiction. Here it merely appears upon the face of the examination, and you would make the examination proof of facts giving the jurisdiction. But even these facts are not represented to have been stated on oath; they are merely introduced as part of the description of the examinant. We are asked to supply by construction and intendment that which must at least have been proved before the justices. In Rex v. Gouche (a) the court said, that they would presume jurisdiction; but that decision was overruled in Rex v. Halling, (b) and Rex v. Hulcott, (c) in the last of which cases Lord Kenyon upon full consideration says, 'As it does not appear on the face of this order that the justice had jurisdiction, the pauper was not legally discharged from her service. There is no material distinction in principle between this case and cases of orders. If it were sufficient to state the jurisdiction upon the face of an order, there would be no difficulty here. If that be not sufficient, there must be proof aliundè to make the examination evidencè.' Here the facts necessary to give the jurisdiction are not all stated upon the face of the instrument, nor are they proved aliundè." Holroyd, J. "The distinction between courts of special and general jurisdiction is laid down in Miller v. Seare, (d) and though that case is overruled (e) as to the point there decided, that an action would lie against commissioners of bankrupt for a wrongful commitment, that distinction is well established. The rule, omnia præsumuntur ritè esse acta, does not apply to the facts which constitute the jurisdiction. In a plea of justification all the facts which show the jurisdiction must be stated, and they must also be proved. Here those facts neither appear on the face of the document nor are shown aliundè. It is therefore not necessary to decide whether it would have been sufficient if the facts had appeared on the face of the document. The case referred to, with regard to wages in husbandry, (e) is directly in point." Order of sessions quashed.

4. Of the Examination.

The pauper himself ought to be summoned and heard.

Rex v. Wykes, Andr. 238; 2 Bott, 819. A person ought to be summoned, and be heard before he be removed; for he may produce a certificate, or give other sufficient security, or show cause otherwise why he ought not to be removed; especially as he himself perhaps by the removal is likely to be the greatest sufferer; and therefore natural justice requires that he be not condemned unheard.

But it is not necessary in all cases that the pauper himself should be examined.

But in Rex v. Bagworth, Cald. 179; 2 Bott, 644, objection was taken to the order, that it did not appear to have been made upon proper evidence; that it was made only upon examination of the premises; that the pauper himself must be examined; and was so holden in Rex v. Wykes. But by the court: "It cannot be necessary in all cases that the pauper should be examined. In that of an infant of tender years it would be impossible. There is no such general rule. The case in Comberbach, 478, is in point: in that case Holt, C. J., says, 'If it can be, 'tis fit it should be so, but not absolutely necessary.'" See Rex v. Everdon, p. 1084.

The sessions cannot quash an order because the pauper was not examined.

Rex v. Tavistock, 3 D. & P. 427. The sessions, on an appeal, quashed an order, on the special ground that the pauper had not been adduced and examined before the removing magistrates, though he was in every respect competent to, and capable of being examined. The case, however, did not state that the pauper had not been summoned, and the Court of King's Bench quashed the order of sessions, and directed the appeal to be re-heard.

It is the duty of justices to examine him.

It is not essential to the validity of an order that the pauper should be examined, but if it is possible the justices are bound to examine them; and if they corruptly omit to summon him for that purpose, they are liable

(a) 2 Salk. 441; 2 Lord Raym. 840.
(b) 1 Stra. 8.
(c) 6 T. R. 583.
(d) 2 Bla. Rep. 1141.
(e) Doswell v. Impey, 1 B. & C. 163; 2 D. & R. 350.

to an information, or to an action at the suit of the pauper, if he is removed illegally. Ib.

4. Of the Examination.

Justices may commit a pauper who refuses to be examined.

Rex v. Jackson, 1 T. R. 653. A rule was obtained for an information against justices of Kendal, for committing a pauper to prison, whom they were examining relative to his settlement, for not answering a particular question. Under which commitment he continued in prison for thirteen days, which it was contended was so manifestly illegal, that they must have known they were exceeding their authority, and therefore that it must be intended that they acted from corrupt motives. But it appearing on reading the affidavit on both sides, that no corrupt motives were to be imputed to the defendants, the rule was discharged. Ashhurst, J., said, "He would not then decide whether magistrates have, or have not, a power to commit a pauper for refusing to answer proper questions put to him in the course of his examination. They certainly have a right to examine a pauper touching his settlement; and yet that would only be a shadow of a right, unless they had likewise a power of enforcing that examination, by committing the pauper for refusing to be examined." Buller, J., said, "With regard to the power of commitment, he did not know how justices were to act, unless they had such a power. This commitment, 'until he should answer,' he thought right; and though the pauper continued in prison under the commitment thirteen days, that will not make the case stronger against the defendants. The party committed for refusing to be examined is to clear himself, and when he will answer must give notice to the magistrates. This is like the case of a commitment by the commissioners of a bankrupt, where the party committed must send word when he will submit and answer the questions." Rule discharged.

Examination of prisoners to their settlements made evidence.

By 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 28, it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, to take in writing the examination on oath of any person having a wife, or child, who shall be a prisoner in any gaol or house of correction, or in the custody of the keeper of any such gaol or house of correction, or who shall be in the custody of any constable, or other peace officer, by virtue of any warrant of commitment, touching the place of his or her last legal settlement; and such examination shall be signed by such justice taking the same, and shall be received and admitted in evidence as to such settlement before any justices, for the purposes of any order of removal, so long only as the person so examined shall continue a prisoner."

---

5. The Form of the Order of Removal.

5. The Form of the Order of Removal. (a)

We have seen what are the principal requisites of these orders. We will now notice some of the formal parts, premising only that every fair presumption will be made to support the order, as that a husband was not resident with the wife, when she only was removed. Rex v. Stockton, p. 1019.

1. The County and Date of Order.

1. The County and Date of Order.

The county must appear in the order.

It must appear distinctly in the order in what county it is made; and to name the county in the margin, without any statement in the body of the order, that the place is in such county, or in any words of reference, as in the said county, or in the county aforesaid, will not be sufficient. (Sett. & Rem. 151; 2 Sess. Ca. 181.) Rex v. St. Mary, Leicester, p. 1048.

Rex v. St. Stephenson, 1 Barnard. 177, 196. There was an order of removal by the justices of the town of Bedford, from the parish of St. Peter's in Bedford, to the parish of St. Stephenson, in the county of Bedford, and it was only said in the margin the town of Bedford, without mentioning in what county. It was moved to quash this order; and insisted, that it was necessary to mention what county this Bedford lay in,

(a) See the Forms, post, Appendix.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

because the appeal must be to the justices of that county where it lies. And the court was of this opinion, but did not quash the order, by reason of a flaw in the certiorari, by which it was removed.

Distinction between orders and indictments.

Rex v. Holbeck, Leeds, Burr. S. C. 198; 2 Bott, 864. The borough of Leeds was in the margin, and the direction was, to the churchwardens, &c. of Holbeck, in the said borough. And by the court: "That is well enough, and the distinction is, betwixt orders and indictments. In orders, the margin is to be considered as a part of the order, and a clear plain reference to it is sufficient; but in indictments, the county must be expressed in the body, and a reference to the margin is not sufficient.

2. The Description of the Paupers.

2. The Description of the Paupers.

The name of the person, if known, (a) must be stated in the order, and where children are included they must be separately named, and their ages stated; and if omitted it seems that the order is bad, although it specially adjudges their place of legal settlement. If the order state the age of any child removed with his parent at more than seven years, it may set forth that the child has not gained a settlement in his own right, or adjudge the place removed to is his settlement.

Pauper to be named, if known; if not, say whose name is unknown.

Southwell v. Needwell, Sett. & Rem. 57; 2 Bott, 760. "Whereas a certain woman hath intruded, these are therefore to require you to convey:" Objection, it is not said who this woman was. Parker, C. J. "You must either name her, or say a certain woman unknown."

An order cannot remove more parties than complained of.

Rex v. Newington, Sett. & Rem. 45; 2 Bott, 760. "Whereas J. S. hath intruded into the parish of A. and is likely to become chargeable; these are therefore to require you to remove him with three children." The court quashed this order, for the justices have removed more than is complained of.

An order to remove a man and his family is bad.

Johnson's case, 2 Salk. 485; 2 Bott, 837. Order to remove a man, his wife, and family, from Brood to Sandhurst, not good, because too general; for some of the family might not be removable, they might have a settlement in Brood, though Johnson had not.

Beaston v. Scisson, 1 Stra. 114. Order for removal of Thomas Block and his family; upon the first reading quashed as to the family, because too general.

Children should be described by name, and semble age.

Flixton v. Royston, 1 Sess. Ca. 11; Fol. 278. Order to remove Jane Smith and her five children, quashed as to the children, for the uncertainty; because it neither tells the names nor ages of the children; for she might have more children than five, and some of those five might have gained settlements.

Not necessary to state the age of the children. Quære, Rex v. Withernwick, post.

Ringmore v. Petworth, Sett. & Rem. 41. The order was, "Whereas such a person and his three children are likely to become chargeable, and their last legal settlement was at Ringmore." It was moved to quash the same, because the children's ages were not set forth. But by the court: "It is not necessary in this case; for the order says, they were last legally settled in Ringmore, and then no matter what their ages are."

Hobey v. Kingsbury, 1 Stra. 527. Two justices adjudging the settlement of the husband to be at Kingsbury, and that he is likely to become chargeable to Hobey, send him, his wife, and son of one year old, to Kingsbury: and whether this was good as to the wife and child was the question: And it was held to be well enough. Order confirmed.

Must adjudge the settlement of a child of ten years.

Rex v. Middleham, Fol. 271. Order to remove a child, of the age of ten years, to Middleham, because Middleham was the place where his father was last legally settled, quashed by the court; because there was no adjudication that Middleham was the place of the child's last legal settlement, and at that age it might have gained a settlement.

The order must set forth the ages

Rex v. Trinity in Chester, 2 Sess. Ca. 74; 2 Bott, 867. This rule was laid down: Every order that concerns the removal of a father and his children ought to show the ages of the children; for they may have gained a settlement in some other right, as by being apprentices or servants; therefore their age ought to be set forth, that it may appear to the court, that by reason of their infancy they have not gained any settlement in their own right, but have only a relative settlement from their father. Seven years is an age that the court will presume a child could gain a settlement at, in his own right: but if it appears upon the order that the child was above seven years old, the order must set forth that such child hath not gained a settlement in his own right.

(a) In Rex v. Maidstone, 12 East, 550, one of the paupers was described as "an infant male child, not baptised."

5. Form of Order of Removal.

of children, unless their settlement is adjudicated.

Rex v. Bowling, Burr. S. C. 177. The order removed the father and children (without setting forth their ages) from Bradford to Bowling, and adjudged Bowling to be the place of the father's last legal settlement. By the court: "The established rule is, that where the children are sent in consequence of their father's settlement, either the ages of the children must be set out (to show that they are of such tender years as not to have gained a settlement for themselves); or there must be an express adjudication of their having gained no other settlement. Therefore it is bad as to the children."

Same point.

Reg. v. Newcastle, 1 Q. B. 428. Case:—The point raised by this case was, whether two members of the same family, having distinct settlements, could be removed by one order. The 79th section of the Poor Law Act was referred to. Lord Denman. "The phrase 'no person' necessarily includes the plural, and negatives all mankind. And in a subsequent part of the interpretation clause, it is provided, that, if in describing any person or party, a word importing the singular number only is used, the same shall be understood to include several persons as well as one person." He added, "It is not expedient to change the ordinary course of proceeding, but if we are called upon to say whether an order for the removal of two persons, having different settlements, is necessarily bad in point of law, we think it is not." Order of sessions confirmed.

An order for removing two persons with distinct settlements is not necessarily bad.

Chewton v. Compton Martin, 1 Stra. 471. An order made by two justices for the removal of two different families, was quashed by the sessions; and in support of the decision of the sessions, it was argued that the removal of one might be legal, and of the other illegal; and then upon an appeal to the sessions against the order generally, there would be great difficulty as to costs, the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, giving costs to the parish in whose favour the appeal is determined, because it could not be said that the order is reversed, because it stands good as to part, and it cannot be said to be confirmed, because it was not held good as to the whole. Eyre and Fortescue, Js., were of opinion that the order was ill, giving this further reason, that the party removed had a right to appeal, for it may be that he was removed from his own estate, and then, upon his appeal, it will consequently draw over the other matter, in which, perhaps, the parties on all sides acquiesce. Order of sessions confirmed.

Contra.

Reg. v. Graffham, Sett. & Rem. 16; 2 Bott, 808. The order sets forth, that Henry Tate and his wife do endeavour to intrude into the parish; and quashed by the court; for that he cannot be removed out of the parish, unless he hath come into it.

"Endeavour to intrude" not sufficient.

3. Of the being Chargeable.

3. Of the being Chargeable.

Whenever it is necessary to prove that a pauper has become chargeable, a certificate that he is so chargeable, signed by the chairman, sealed with the seal of the board, and countersigned by the clerk, shall be sufficient to show to what parish, and at what time, he so became chargeable, unless the contrary be proved. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57, s. 17. See form, Appendix.

Evidence of chargeability.

We have already had occasion to consider some of the circumstances that render a person chargeable. And by the 56 sect. of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, all relief given on account of the wife or child under the age of 16, not being blind, or deaf and dumb, shall be considered as relief given to the husband or father; and relief given on account of such child of a widow shall be considered as given to the widow. And by the 57th sect. the Relief to wife or child, when it renders parent or husband chargeable.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

husband is liable for the maintenance of the children, legitimate or illegitimate, of his wife, born before his marriage, and is chargeable with all relief, or the cost price thereof, until the child is 16 years of age, or the mother dies.

Formerly, relief to an unemancipated child made the father chargeable.

Before this statute, relief to any unemancipated child was considered as relief given to the parent. And in Rex v. Mile-End (p. 125), the judge declined to give an opinion as to the effect of this statute upon relief given to a child above the age of 16 years. As a general rule, a statute will not be so construed as to operate as a repeal of the previous law, unless its provisions are inconsistent with it. But it may be observed that there was no distinct authority for the position, that relief given to an unemancipated child rendered the parent chargeable, and the object of the statute might have been to introduce a sensible and definite rule on the subject; and unless this was the object, the section will be of little importance, and will be applicable to those cases only (which are of rare occurrence) where the child receiving relief has been emancipated under the age of 16. If this section should be considered as declaratory, one effect will be, that relief given to a child under the age of 16, if the child is blind, or deaf and dumb, will not render the parent chargeable.

The order must adjudge the pauper to be chargeable to the removing parish.

Rex v. Bradford, Sett. & Rem. 40. Likely to become chargeable, (a) but not said to what parish. Quashed.

St. Nicholas, Gloucester, v. St. Peter's, Bristol, 2 Sess. Ca. 73. Upon an order of removal of Mary White, the reciting part of it was, "Whereas the pauper was likely to become chargeable to the parish of St. Nicholas;" but in the adjudicating part it was only said, that she was likely to become chargeable, without saying to the parish of St. Nicholas. The court allowed this to be a good exception, and said they would not take these orders to be good by intendment; for the court will not intend a jurisdiction in the justices, where they do not entitle themselves to it on the face of the order.

Same point.

Rex v. Bourn, Burr. S. C. 39. The complaint was, that the pauper was likely to become chargeable to the parish of Spalding; and the adjudication was, that the pauper was likely to become chargeable, generally, without saying to the said parish of Spalding. And by Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "There must be either an express adjudication, or a plain reference to the complaint; because it is the very point upon which the jurisdiction of the two justices is founded. Here the complaint is right; but the adjudication is at large, there being no words of reference. It is only that the pauper is likely to become chargeable. Now this may be to his relations or parents, as well as to the parish." And he cited the case of St. Nicholas v. St. Peter's (supra), as similar to the present; and said that "Rex v. Witham (b) was not finally determined by the court, but was referred to the judge of assize." And he added, "that there was no case that he could meet with, upon the strictest inquiry, where an adjudication at large, without some words of reference to the complaint, has been holden to be good."

Same point.

Rex v. Ufculm, Burr. S. C. 138; 2 Bott, 870. It was objected, that the paupers were said to be likely to become chargeable, but did not say to what parish. The words were, "and whereas upon due examination and inquiry, it appears to us, and we do accordingly adjudge that they are likely to become chargeable." By Lee, C. J., and the court: "The objection is fatal. A complaint must appear 'of the pauper's being likely to become chargeable to the parish from whence removed;' and there must be an adjudication of the truth of it. (c) For the justices have no authority, without such complaint, and an adjudication of the truth of it. We cannot support an order by implication. There is no necessity, indeed, for any particular set or form of words. But there must be an adjudication of it in (a) These were the words used before stat. 35 Geo. III. c. 101.

(b) A contrary doctrine had been held in that case, 1 Stra. 142; also in Maidstone v. Dething, 1 Stra. 393, and Rex v. Leofield, 2 Stra. 698, which are not considered to be cases of authority, and are therefore omitted.

(c) It must now be shown that the pauper had actually become chargeable.

some words or other." Order quashed. Same point in Rex v. Netherton, Burr. S. C. 139, where the order was given up as indefensible. Same point in Rex v. Hucheston, Burr. S. C. 287.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

Notice of chargeability must be sent twenty-one days before removal. The omission to do so, ground of appeal.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 79, it is enacted, that no person shall be removed or be removable, by reason of his being chargeable or relieved, until twenty-one days after a notice in writing of his being so chargeable or relieved, accompanied by a copy of the order and examination, shall have been sent by the overseers removing, to the overseers of the parish to whom the order is directed. And in Reg. v. Brixham (p. 1055), where no such notice had been sent, the Court held, that the omission was a good ground of appeal. Lord Denman said: "The course pursued by the appellants was the only one by which the enactment could be taken advantage of, unless we were to multiply distinctions not desirable. Sect. 79 clearly makes the notice of chargeability necessary to give effect to an order of removal." Patteson, J., observed, "I should be very much disposed to uphold this enactment as strictly as possible."

Examination must disclose it.

The chargeability must appear on the face of the examination, Reg. v. Black Callerton, p. 1054.

An examination which states that it was taken at S., that the mother is of S., and that she and her three children, of the ages respectively of seven, three years, and one year, were poor and chargeable to S., sufficiently shows that they were inhabiting in S., so as to give the justices jurisdiction to remove them.

Reg. v. Rotherham, G. & D. 523; 2 Q. B. 557, n. A certiorari issued to bring up the proceedings of the sessions, upon an appeal against an order for the removal of paupers from Sheffield to Rotherham. It required the return of the order of removal, the examination on which it was founded, and the notice and grounds of appeal. One objection was, that the order of removal ought not to be unconditional, but should have been conditional, or the notice not been given under sect. 79 of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76. Coleridge, J. "Your objection is that the order should embody the whole of the proviso." Lord Denman added, "That is to say, that the order to remove should, under certain circumstances, be an order not to remove." It was also argued, that upon the examination there was no evidence of the pauper's being an inhabitant and chargeable in Sheffield. Coleridge, J. "You seek to make the jurisdiction depend on the truth of the complaint, and not on the fact of there being a complaint. The chief justice, in delivering the judgment of the court, in Cave v. Mountain, 1 M. & G. 257, said, 'If the charge be of an offence over which, if the offence charged be true in fact, the magistrate has jurisdiction, the magistrate's jurisdiction cannot be made to depend upon the truth or falsehood of the facts.'" As to the other point, Cur. adv. vult; and Lord Denman delivered the judgment:—"This case comes before us upon a return to a writ of certiorari, whereby the sessions was commanded to return their order, confirming the original order of two justices, for the removal of certain paupers to the appellant township, and also the examination whereupon that original order was made, and the notice of appeal to the sessions, upon which nothing turns. The objections founded upon that return consisted of two parts; first, that the original order of removal was defective upon the face of it, for want of showing jurisdiction in the removing justices; and, next, that the examination whereon they proceeded was defective in not showing that the paupers were at the time in the township, and that therefore they had no jurisdiction to remove. Upon the first point (the form of the original order), the court gave sufficient answers to the various objections which were urged in the course of the argument, which we do not consider it necessary to repeat. We then thought, and think still, that the original order is unobjectionable. We shall now only add that we certainly should not be induced, upon slight grounds, to overturn a form of proceeding which we have reason to believe has been established by the usage of very near a century. One objection only was felt as creating any difficulty, and it was this; that it does not appear upon the face of the examination by the removing justices that the paupers, at the time of the removal, were residing in the township,

It is not necessary in the order to refer to the provision of sect. 79 of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76. (a)

The fact, and not the truth, of the complaint, gives jurisdiction.

Form of order very ancient.

(a) So also in Rex v. Tibbenham, p. 1023, it was determined that where a woman became chargeable by reason of pregnancy, it was sufficient for the justices to adjudge that she was actually chargeable in the common form without referring to the special circumstances.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

and that, therefore, there was no jurisdiction to remove. This objection involves consequences more extensive perhaps than may at first sight appear, as to the jurisdiction of the Court of Quarter Sessions, and as to the matters into which this court will inquire, where they (the sessions) have undoubted jurisdiction over the subject brought under our consideration. It raises two questions of some importance; first, whether the writ of certiorari itself did not issue improvidently, so far as it required the return of the original examination and of the notice of appeal, the same forming a portion of the evidence submitted to the sessions upon the hearing of the appeal; and, next, whether, although returned, this court ought to go further than to examine the validity of the original order and of the order of justices, without examining the evidence upon which they proceeded in a matter obviously within their ordinary jurisdiction, and where no case has been stated for our opinion as to the admissibility or effect of that evidence or any part of it. Into these questions, however, we do not feel it necessary to enter, because, giving full effect to the objection and judging the examination as by that objection we were called upon to do, we think it sufficient. The point for consideration is, whether, upon the face of the examination, by fair and reasonable intendment (and by that rule we were desired to consider it), it does not sufficiently appear that the paupers were inhabiting in the removing township at the time of the examination and of making the order. And, first, with respect to the mother. She is stated to be 'of Sheffield,' and her examination is taken by the removing justices 'at Sheffield.' Moreover, she and the other paupers are stated to be 'chargeable to Sheffield.' Now this statement of being chargeable we find to have been considered by this court as material upon this very point of inhabitancy. In the case of Rex v. Binigar, 7 East, 377, it was stated in the order of removal 'that the paupers lately came and intruded themselves into the parish, endeavouring there to settle as inhabitants thereof;' and the objection to the order was, that the complaint did not state that the paupers 'then were,' but 'lately came,' and so that the justices had no jurisdiction. To this it was answered by the court—'The order states, and the justices adjudge it to be true, that the paupers are likely to become chargeable to the parish, which could not be if they were not in the parish at the time.' And there is certainly no ground for presuming any change of circumstances, as the examination and order are by the same justices, and bear date on the same day, the 3rd of September. From these circumstances taken together, we think it sufficiently appears that the mother was then in the township of Sheffield. Then, as to the children. The helpless infancy of the two younger (three years and one year of age) raises a presumption of law and common sense that they would be with the mother for custody and protection, and the more so in this instance, as from the examination we find that their father was then dead. As to the eldest (seven), though the inference may not be so strong, he is nevertheless of an age up to which the period of nurture is considered as extending. This, therefore, with the weight which we have seen attributed to the statement of chargeability, will, we think, suffice as to him." Rule discharded (a).

It may be presumed that infants of tender years are with the mother for custody.

4. Of Oaths and the Adjudication.

Oath necessary. Mistake in Jurat.

4. Of Oaths and the Adjudication.

It must appear that the examinations were taken upon oath and before the two justices; but where the jurat was "sworn before me," and it purported to be before two justices, and was signed by both, the jurat was referrible to each justice, Reg. v. Selkstone.

It must appear on the copy of the examination that it is taken before two justices. An examination commencing: "The examination of S. S., taken

Reg. v. Shipston-upon-Stour, 8 Jurist, 492. Sarah Sutton, single woman, and her illegitimate child, William, aged about seven weeks, were removed from Shipston-upon-Stour to Atherstone. Order quashed. Case:—The order of 31st of December was made by William Dickins, and H. Townsend, two justices of the peace. The examinations sent to the appellant parish were, "The examination of Sarah Sutton, taken upon oath before us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of Worcester, who upon her oath saith, 'I am about twenty-four years of age, and have not, to the best of my knowledge and belief, gained any settlement in my own right. About seven weeks ago I was delivered of a male bastard child in the parish of Shipston-upon Stour, which has since been christened William.' Taken and sworn before us this 31st day of December, 1842. (Signed) William Dickins, H. Townsend. The mark of × Sarah Sutton." Then immediately followed, on the same sheet of paper, "The examination of Patience Randall, the wife of Thomas Randall, of Shipston-upon-Stour, in the county of Worcester, labourer, taken this 31st day of December, 1842, who upon her oath saith, 'that the pauper, Sarah Sutton, is my daughter; that she was born in the parish of Atherstone-upon-Stour, in the county of Warwick, and is about the age of twenty-four years, and is illegitimate, being born before I was married.' Taken and sworn this 31st day of December, 1842, before us. (Signed) William Dickins, H. Townsend. The mark of × Patience Randall." These two examinations filled the second and third pages of the sheet of paper, the first page of which was occupied by the notice of chargeability and order of removal. The grounds of appeal were: That it does not appear by the examination, that the examination of Patience Randall was taken before two justices for the county of Worcester, nor that she was examined before two justices of Worcester, touching the settlement of the said Sarah Sutton, or before the justices who signed the order of removal. That the order, as regards William, is bad in this, that it adjudicates as to his settlement in our parish absolutely; whereas it should have adjudged that, as an illegitimate child, he should have and follow the settlement of his mother, until he should attain the age of sixteen only. The order was quashed upon these objections. If the first objection is fatal to the sufficiency of the examination, then the order of sessions to be confirmed. Or, if the order is bad only upon the other objection, then the order to be quashed so far as regards William; otherwise the case to be sent back to be heard upon the merits. Lord Denman. "There is much more in one of these objections than was at first sight apparent, namely, the question upon the taking of the examinations. The first examination commences as follows:—'The examination of Sarah Sutton, taken upon oath before us, two,' &c., 'who, upon her oath, saith,' &c. Then the jurat is, 'Taken and sworn before us this 31st day of December, 1842: William Dickins, H. Townsend.' Immediately following this, upon the same sheet of paper, there is, 'The examination of Patience Randall, of, &c., taken the 31st day of December, 1842, who, upon her oath, saith;' and the jurat is in the same form as the former. It is not stated in the latter examination, or in the jurat to it, that the examination is taken before persons having authority to administer an oath. It is contended that this is immaterial. I am not sure that this case sets out the examinations; probably they are only copies; but, supposing that to be so, we do not think that the respondents would set out anything less perfect for the purpose than the original examinations. The first examination is right; the second is insufficient,—standing alone, it does not appear to be taken before two justices. It is said to be taken before two individuals, and to be on the same sheet of paper with the first; but it ought not to be left to us to collect, from any conclusion of our own, that the parties had authority to administer an oath. This defect is fatal to the latter examination." Patteson, J. "We must take these to be true copies of both the examinations. Now strike out both the jurats, and look at the caption; it would only apply to the first examination. It would appear that the first examination was taken before two justices, but that is not the case with regard to the second. The commencement of the first examination cannot be left out; that is the only place where the fact that these persons were justices appears. Could Patience Randall be indicted for perjury? If she could not, it is quite clear that it does not appear that she has been sworn before upon oath before us, two," &c. Another examination, on the same sheet of paper, commenced: "The examination of P. R., the wife," &c., "who, upon her oath, saith." The jurat to each examination was in the same form, "Taken and sworn before us this 31st day of December, 1842. A. B., C. D. This latter examination is insufficient.

(a) See 2 G. & D. 533, and Reg. v. The Justices of Buckinghamshire, Ib. 560.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

An order of removal of a mother and her illegitimate child is not bad as to the child, because it adjudicates that the settlement of the child is that of the mother absolutely.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

a competent tribunal. If these examinations are to be allowed, because they are upon the same sheet of paper, the next thing would be, that, if two affidavits in the same cause were written on the same sheet of paper, and one was stated to be sworn before A. B., a commissioner for taking affidavits, &c., and the other before A. B., and there was no reference made from the one to the other, this court must hold them both to be good." Williams, J. "I was much struck with the remark, that the copy sent need only be a copy of the evidence, and not a copy of the whole examination; but this point is put out of the question by the case. The first examination is stated to be the examination of Sarah Sutton, 'taken upon oath before us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace,' &c. That is not so stated as to the second, and the particularity of the first may be said to affect our decision as to the second. Now, as is truly said by my brother Patteson, there is no sufficient foundation for an indictment for perjury; there is no reference in the second examination to the persons mentioned in the first, nor is there any sufficient statement of the qualification of the persons mentioned in the second." Coleridge, J. "I have come to the same opinion after much hesitation, and with considerable regret, but I conceive that it is the only safe conclusion at which the court could arrive. We must treat these documents as the examinations; they must be assumed to be correct copies. It is said, that examinations are to be construed as strictly as orders. That is not quite the case, for we have said, that, as to examinations, the justices are to judge of the language contained in them, whether it is sufficient or not; but, with respect to orders, it is for this court to determine on the construction to be given to them. Still, I think, the rule applies equally to examinations and to orders, as to all which gives jurisdiction to the justices, that ought to appear unequivocally. In this case, if we take Randall's examination alone, jurisdiction does not appear; but then it is said, we must take the other examination, which is upon the same sheet of paper, and that shows the jurisdiction. No doubt, in this particular case, the decision may appear to be hard, but where are we to stop? Suppose it was shown here, by affidavit, that the handwriting to the jurat of each examination was the same, would that be sufficient? The principle is this, that we ought not to allow jurisdiction to be shown by external circumstances." Order of sessions confirmed.

The justices must expressly adjudicate upon the chargeability of the pauper and the place of his settlement.

Suddlecomb v. Burwash, 2 Salk. 491; 2 Bott, 858. Order quashed, because it was only said to be complained by the officers, that the person removed was likely to become chargeable, but not adjudged so by the justices.

The justices must make an express adjudication.

Rex v. Westwood, 1 Stra. 73; 2 Bott, 782. Order quashed, because the justices only say, We order him to be removed to such a place, as the place of his last legal settlement, without adjudging that to be the place.

Rex v. Minchin Hampton, 2 Sess. Ca. 93. Order, "Whereas complaint is made to us, that such a person is now become chargeable; we do adjudge that the last place of his lawful settlement is in the parish of Minchin Hampton." Objected, that here is no adjudication that he is likely to become chargeable; and quashed for this reason.

"Do believe" insufficient.

Stallinburgh v. Haxlay, 1 Sess. Ca. 131; 2 Bott, 848. "On examination we do believe the same to be true." Quashed; for a man may believe a thing on uncertain evidence.

So also "credibly informed."

Reg. v. Waltham Magna, Sett. & Rem. 38; 2 Bott, 844. "Whereas such a person is likely to become chargeable, as we are credibly informed, these are therefore to require you to remove." Quashed; for that here is no adjudication that he is likely to become chargeable, and this is only the belief of another.

Recital of complaint is not an adjudication.

Bury v. Arundel, 2 Salk. 479; 2 Bott, 584. "Whereas complaint hath been made unto us, that Jacob Duckin, with his wife and children, came from his place of abode and last legal settlement in Bury to Arundel, we therefore require you to remove." Naught; for there is no adjudication of the justices which was his last legal settlement, but only a complaint that Bury was, which doth not appear whether true or false.

5. Form of Order of Removal.

Egburn v. Hartley-Wintley, 1 Sess. Ca. 45; 2 Bott. 847. An order adjudges that a man was settled at such a place; and therefore they remove his widow thither. Quashed; for that here was no adjudication of the widow's settlement, and she might have gained a settlement after the death of her husband.

Removal of widow.

Rex v. Warnhill, 2 Sess. Ca. 92; 2 Bott, 662. Adjudication that the last legal place of the pauper is at Warnhill, in the county of Berks. Quashed; for that is no adjudication of the settlement.

His "legal place" insufficient.

Anon. 2 Salk. 473. It was held that legal settlement and last legal settlement are the same thing; because by every new settlement the precedent is discharged.

Legal settlement sufficient.

Crowland v. St. John the Baptist, 19 Vin. Ab. 399, n. 2. The justices need not allege how he was settled, nor negative the fact that the pauper did not rent a tenement of 10*l.* a year. (Weston Rivers v. St. Peter's, 2 Salk. 492; 3 Salk. 255.)

Not necessary to notice the mode of settlement.

Reg. v. St. Mary Ottery, Sett. & Rem. 32; 2 Bott, 346. The justices say that the poor person was last settled there, according to their knowledge. By the court: "They should have said, he was last settled there: an order is a judgment, and must be certain and positive: he might have been settled elsewhere and they not know it." Quashed.

"According to their knowledge" insufficient.

5. To whom Order directed.

5. To whom Order directed.

St. George v. St. Olave's, 2 Salk. 493; 2 Bott, 665. The order was to convey to the parish of St. Olave, and it was directed, to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Olave. Quashed; for they ought and can only order the parish officers where the intrusion is made to make the removal.

Orders to be executed by the officers of the removing parish.

It is not necessary to use the word churchwardens; if directed to the overseers it is sufficient. (Rex v. Searle, 1 Bott, 3.)

An order directed to officers of both parishes to remove and receive is bad, because it is entire. (Comb. 325.)

Must not be to both parishes to remove and receive.

Rex v. Alverstone, 7 T. R. 564. The order was directed to the churchwardens. &c. of the parish, township, or division of U., and it was wished to have the opinion of the court whether such description was proper; and Lord Kenyon said, that, as at present advised, he saw no objection to it. The order was quashed on another ground.

"To a parish or township" may be good.

It is not necessary that the pauper should be conveyed by the overseers.

---

6. Time and Manner of Serving or Executing the Order of Removal.

6. Time and Manner of Serving or Executing the Order of Removal.

In Llanwinio, 4 T. R. 474, one of the objections was, that there was an interval of a year between the signing of the order and the execution of it. Upon which Lord Kenyon said, there might be some weight in that objection, if the circumstances of the pauper had been altered, but nothing of that kind is stated here; nor indeed is any question referred to us on this point.

Served a year after, good.

But in Rex v. Lampeter, (p. 1087), an order of removal had been suspended, and not served till three years afterwards, the court held it an unreasonable time, and it was treated as a nullity.

But three years after, unreasonable.

To prevent the too precipitate removal of a pauper after the order has been obtained, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, sect. 79, enacts that no poor person shall be removed under an order of removal until twenty-one days after notice in writing of his being so chargeable or relieved, accompanied by a copy or counterpart of the order of removal of such person, and by a copy of the examination upon which such order was made, shall have been

Pauper not to be removed till twenty-one days after notice of order of removal has been made, &c.

Reg. v. Brixham p. 1055.

6. Of Serving Order of Removal.

sent, by post or otherwise, by the overseers or guardians of the parish obtaining such order, or any three or more of such guardians, to the overseers of the parish to whom such order shall be directed: Provided always, that if such overseers or guardians as last aforesaid, or any three or more of such guardians, shall by writing under their hands agree to submit to such order, and to receive such poor person, it shall be lawful to remove such poor person according to the tenor of such order, although the said period of twenty-one days may not have elapsed: Provided also, that if notice of appeal against such order of removal shall be received by the overseers or guardians of the parish from which such poor person is directed in such order to be removed within the said period of twenty-one days, it shall not be lawful to remove such poor person until after the time for prosecuting such appeal shall have expired, or, in case such appeal shall be duly prosecuted, until after the final determination of such appeal.

What was a valid service before.

In Rex v. Alnwick, post, it was held that the service of the order of removal, to render the same valid, must be by delivery of the order itself, or by serving a copy of the order, and producing at the same time the original.

Paupers to be removed under an order may be conveyed by other persons than the churchwardens or overseers themselves.

By 54 Geo. III., c. 170, sect. 10, it was enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful for the churchwardens, overseers, or others having the control, ordering, or management of the poor of any district, parish, township, or hamlet, to employ any proper person or persons whomsoever to carry, remove, and deliver any pauper or paupers ordered to be removed by any of his majesty's justices of the peace, competent to make such order; and that a delivery by such person or persons of any pauper or paupers so ordered to be removed shall be as good, valid, and effectual to all purposes whatsoever, as if the same was or were delivered by any churchwarden or overseer whatsoever."

---

7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.

7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.

35 Geo. III. c. 101. Justices empowered to suspend orders of removal of sick or infirm persons. Charges incurred by such suspension to be paid by the officers of the parish to which they are ordered to be removed, which may be levied with costs.

By 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 2, it is provided, "that if any poor person shall be brought before a justice, for the purpose of being removed by virtue of any order, or any vagrant pass, and it shall appear to the justice that such person is unable to travel, by reason of sickness or other infirmity, or that it would be dangerous for him so to do, the justice is required and authorised to suspend the execution of the same until it may safely be executed; which suspension of, and subsequent permission to execute the same, shall be indorsed on the order of removal or vagrant pass, and signed by the justice; and the charges incurred by such suspension may be directed to be paid by the parish to which such person is ordered to be removed, in case any removal shall take place, or in case of the death of such poor person before the execution of such order." (a)

The statute then provides a remedy for the costs, and gives a right of appeal, where the same shall exceed 20*l.*

The 49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 1, provides, that when any order of removal or vagrant pass shall be suspended, any other justice of the county or place where such removal or pass shall be made, may order the same to be executed.

And sect. 3 provides against the separation of husband and wife, or other persons nearly connected with each other, and living together as one family at the time of any order of removal made, or vagrant pass granted, during the sickness of any one of such family.

It is not essential that the pauper

Rex v. Everdon, 9 East, 101. An order was made to remove a pauper

---

(a) This act did not enable a magistrate to enforce reimbursement from time to time, but only in the event of actual removal or death. But by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 84, the parish will be liable to all costs and expenses, from the time of notice of chargeability being sent, provided only, in suspended order, that notice of the order be given within ten days of the order being made.

7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.

from Everdon to Wappenham, and suspended. By an order reciting the death of the pauper, and that 20*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* expense had been incurred by the suspension, the same magistrates directed the parish officers of Wappenham to pay that sum to Everdon. Against this last order there was an appeal. Order quashed. Case:—The order of removal was made upon the examination of the pauper's father only, who swore that the pauper, from excessive infirmity and sickness, was unable to be brought before the justices who made the original order for examination, and that the said justices at the same time made the order for suspension. The pauper died without having been removed, and she had never been before the justices at any time upon the matter, nor been examined by them when they made the order of suspension. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. construed the words, "In case any poor person shall from henceforth be brought before any justice or justices of the peace for the purpose of being removed," to mean, in case a question concerning the removal of any poor person shall be brought before the justices of the peace for the purposes of his removal, &c. And he said that the language of the act adverted to the case which most generally happens, where the pauper is brought before the magistrate to be examined as to his settlement; but that it appeared from Rex v. Bagworth (p. 1074), that it was not necessary in all cases, though if it can be, it is fit it should be so, but not absolutely necessary. And that all that the act meant was, not that where any person was brought personally, but where his case was brought judicially before the magistrates, for the purpose of his removal, that they should have power to suspend the execution of the order of removal, if it appeared to them by due examination of the facts, that from sickness or infirmity of the party due removal could not then safely be made. And he added, that in thus straining the words of the act, he did not go further than was done in Antony v. Cardigan (p. 477), where the description of a person not having any child was construed to mean not having any child which could be a burthen to the parish where the father was hired and served. The other judges agreed, and the order of sessions quashed.

should, but his case must, be brought before the justices; and pending illness of pauper an order, suspending his removal, may be made in his absence.

Rex v. Chagford, 4 B. & Ald. 235. On the 2nd December, 1816, two justices removed William Endacott from Chagford to Staverton. This order was suspended. On the first of July, 1817, the parish officers of Chagford, believing the pauper sufficiently recovered to be removed, obtained an order, taking off the suspension, and also for the payment of 22*l.* 17*s.* 1½*d.*, the expense of the suspension. Immediately after this order was made, it was ascertained that the pauper was still too ill to be removed, and on the 7th of July the justices signed a second order of suspension. On the 16th of May, 1819, the pauper's father died at Chagford, and by his death two freehold houses in Chagford descended to the pauper as heir-at-law. (a) The parish of Chagford thereupon ceased to relieve the pauper. On the 7th of February, 1820, another order was made for the removal and also for the payment of 60*l.* 9*s.* expenses of the suspension. The pauper was never removed; but on the 18th of February, 1820, the appellants were, for the first time, served with the order of removal, and with the several other orders here mentioned, and on the same day payment was demanded of the expenses incurred by the suspension. The parish of Staverton gave notice, that they intended to appeal against an order made by B. Fulford and G. Gregory, bearing date the 1st of July, 1817, so far as the same order directs the payment of 22*l.* 17*s.* 1½*d.*; and also of an appeal against another order by B. Fulford and G. Gregory, bearing date the 7th of February, 1820, so far as that order directs the payment of 60*l.* 9*s.* The sessions quashed both orders. Abbott, C J. "In this case

The power of ordering the charges incurred during the suspension was confined to two cases only, viz., the death or removal of the pauper; and therefore where a pauper, during the suspension, became irremovable in consequence of an estate descending to him, it is not within the act.

(a) It is provided by 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 2, (p. 1013), that no act done by the pauper during the suspension shall give him a settlement; and in Rex v. St. John, Hackney, (4 N. & M. 336), it was determined that residence on a tenement during a suspension was within the restriction.

7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.

we are called upon to put a new construction on this act of parliament, which was passed in order to prevent a grievance, arising from the too great temptation afforded to parish officers by orders of removal, to convey paupers from one place to another during sickness. The second section recites, that poor persons are often passed to the place of their settlement during the time of their sickness, to the great danger of their lives; and it gives a power to magistrates, in order to remedy this inconvenience, of not carrying their order into immediate effect, but of suspending its operation for a time. But then, in order to prevent this from producing any hardship to the removing parish, it provides, that no act done by the pauper during the suspension shall give him a settlement; and empowers the magistrates to order the intermediate charges to be paid by the parish to which the order is made, in case any removal shall take place, or in case of the death of such poor persons, before the execution of such order. This power, however, seems to me to be confined to these two cases only, viz. the removal and death of the pauper. Whether or not it would have been expedient for the legislature to have provided for the present case it is not for this court to say. All that we can do is to determine that the non-removal of the pauper prevents the case from falling within the act. I should have thought, indeed, that as the order of the magistrates, not being within the act, was altogether nugatory, the proper course for the sessions to have pursued would have been, not to have quashed the order, but to have dismissed the appeal. However, as they have done substantially right, I think their order ought to be confirmed." Bayley, J. observed, that "a very long period had elapsed, during which this order remained suspended, and no notice of it was given to the opposite party. If that notice had been given, (and there are no words in the act that supersede the necessity of it,) it might have enabled the other parish to have made prompt inquiry, and to have ascertained the fact relative to the settlement of the pauper." Holroyd, J., thought the statute could not be construed so as to apply to this case, although probably the legislature would, if it had occurred to them, have provided for it. Order of sessions confirmed.

An order for the removal of J. T., his wife and children, was suspended on account of the husband's sickness, who afterwards died, and the wife and children were removed, without taking off the suspension. The order of removal ought not to be quashed.

Rex v. Englefield, 13 East, 317. An order was made for the removal of J. Timms, E. his wife, and two infant children, by name, from Englefield to Cassington; the order was suspended as to Joseph, until it should appear that he was sufficiently recovered from his illness to be removed without danger; and a third order was made on the 17th March, 1810, which stated that Joseph died on the 7th instant, and that the charges incurred by the suspension amounted to 41*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*, which they directed the parish of Cassington to pay. After the death of Joseph, his wife and children were removed under the first-mentioned order from Englefield to Cassington; and on appeal against such order, and also the order for payment, the three orders were quashed, because the order suspending the order of removal had not been itself taken off by an order of magistrates on the death of Joseph. A difficulty occurred upon the opening of the case which the court thought could not be got over; upon what ground the sessions could quash these orders, which, upon the face of them, were all good, when the real objection to the removal of the wife and two children, if any, was the want of another order of magistrates taking off the suspension of the original order of removal. The respondents' counsel, indeed, suggested that the death of the husband operated as a natural death to the order of suspension, but the court did not decide the case on that ground, and it was observed, è contrà, that the terms of the order of suspension did not apply to the case of death, but it was to operate till the sick person could be safely removed. For the other reason, however, the court quashed the order of sessions, and Le Blanc, J., referred to the precedent of a permission to remove after an order of suspension, given in the new (viz. the 21st) edition of Burn's Justice, as being best adapted to such a case.

The order must be served within ten

No charges under a suspended order of removal can be recovered, unless a copy of the order and examination is served on the overseers within ten days of the order being made by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 84. Before this statute, it was required that the order should be served within a reasonable time.

7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.

Rex v. Lampeter, 3 B. & C. 454; 5 D. & R. 310. An order was made on the 14th May, 1821, for the removal of Gwen Rees, widow, from Lampeter to Llanfairclydoge, but on the same day suspended on account of the age and infirmity of the pauper, which rendered it unsafe for her to travel. The same justices, on the 16th February, 1824, made an order, which recited that the pauper was dead, and that an expense of 12*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* had been occasioned by the suspension, which they directed the parish of Llanfairclydoge to pay. Both these orders were served on the appellants for the first time on the same 16th February, upon which they appealed against the order of removal, and the sessions held that the order of removal and suspension never having been served in the pauper's lifetime, nor after her death, until the money was demanded, the order of removal had become a nullity. Abbott, C. J. "I am of opinion that the sessions came to the right conclusion in this case. The utmost effect of Rex v. St. Mary-le-Bone, post, is this; that the death of a pauper during the suspension of an order for his removal does not render that order a nullity; and that a subsequent order for payment of the expenses is a grievance upon the parish to which the pauper is ordered to be removed, for which an appeal will lie against that order. No question arose in that case respecting the necessity of serving or giving notice of the order of removal, or the order for suspending it; that question arises, for the first time, in the present case. The legislature has not fixed any precise time for the service, but it is evident from the 49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 2, that such an order may be served previous to a removal; and if a suspended order may be served, and reason and convenience require that it should be served before removal, the service should be within a reasonable time. In this case a period of three years elapsed between the issuing of the original order of removal and the death of the pauper, and during all that period no notice was given either of the original order or of the order of suspension. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the order of removal in this case was not served within a reasonable time, and consequently that the order of sessions must be confirmed." Bayley, J., observed, "that by the delay of three years, the opportunity of examining the pauper had been lost, and the expense incurred in supporting the pauper may be thrown upon persons not inhabitants of the parish during that period." Littledale, J., concurred.

days to entitle the parish to any charges.

A suspended order of removal must be served within a reasonable time.

Service after the lapse of three years, and after the death of the pauper, is not within a reasonable time.

Rex v. Penkridge, 3 Bar. & Ad. 538. An order was made on the 21st of May, 1825, for the removal of W. Cooper to Leamington Priors, and suspended. No notice of this suspended order was given to Leamington Priors until the 12th of August, 1826, when that parish was served with a copy of the order of removal, and the order for suspending the same. Against this order the parish of Leamington Priors did not appeal, until the removal of the pauper hereinafter mentioned. By another order on the 24th of January, 1831, indorsed upon the order of removal, the suspension was removed, and an order made for the payment of the expense of 80*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* incurred by the suspension. This last-mentioned order, and the order of removal, and the order for suspending the same, were served on the parish officers of Leamington Priors on the 16th of February, 1831, the pauper was at the same time delivered to them and payment was demanded of the above-mentioned sum. Leamington Priors appealed against the suspended order of removal and the order of the 24th of January, 1831, at the Easter sessions, being the first sessions after the removal of the pauper and demand of the expenses. The sessions quashed both orders, upon the ground that the first order had not been served within a reasonable time. Lord Tenterden now delivered the judgment:—"This was a suspended order, of which no notice was given to the parish of Leamington Priors till fifteen months after it was made, the pauper having been, during that period, in such a state that it was improper to remove

An order not served within a reasonable time, is voidable only by appeal.

The appeal must be to the next sessions after notice of the order. An appeal at the sessions next after the removal of the suspension is too late.

Order made on 21st May, 1835, and served, August, 1826. Sessions held delay unreasonable.

7. Of Suspending Orders of Removal.

him. The order of January, 1831, in fact only took off the suspension. The suspended order was by two justices, who were to inquire and adjudicate as to the propriety of removing the pauper. The other order was by justices who were only to direct the execution of the first order and the payment of the charges attending it. The removal, therefore, was under the first order, and there was an appeal against it on the ground that as it was not served for so long a period after it was made it was a mere nullity; and it was argued, that this being so, the appeal to the next sessions after the actual removal of the pauper was in good time. If the first order had by reason of the death of the pauper become inoperative, it would have become a nullity of course; but the objection here taken was, that it was not served within a reasonable time: the sessions have so found, and of that they are the proper judges. It is, however, a question for us whether the order was for that reason absolutely null and void or voidable only. In our opinion it was voidable only, and ought to have been avoided by appeal to the next practicable sessions after it was served. By the omission to appeal to that sessions, the parish to which the removal was to be made lost its opportunity of making that objection to the order. In Rex v. Lampeter, p. 1087, the appeal was to the sessions next after the service of the order. Besides, that was a case where the order was not served till after the death of the pauper, and it had therefore become a nullity. Here the pauper was living at the time when the order was served, and there might therefore have been an appeal to the then next sessions." The order of sessions quashed.

---

8. Of Superseding an Order of Removal.

8. Of Superseding an Order of Removal.

The justices who make, have the power of superseding an order of removal. If, however, an appeal has been entered and respited, their power is taken away.

An order may be deserted and given up by consent, without appealing.

Rex v. Llanrhydd, Burr. S. C. 658. Two justices made an order of removal in May, 1768, from Llanrhydd to Ruthin, and the paupers were delivered to the officers of Ruthin, who maintained them for a while; and for some time after they were maintained at the joint expense of both parishes. Notice of appeal being served on the officers of Llanrhydd, on the morning of the sessions, previous to the filing of the appeal, the officers of Llanrhydd consented to take the paupers back to their custody, without giving Ruthin the trouble of appealing. Afterwards, in January, 1769, two other justices removed the same paupers from Llanrhydd to Denbigh. And upon appeal, their settlement was found to be at Denbigh. But it appearing that the former order had not been appealed against, the court were of opinion, that the order of removal from Llanrhydd to Denbigh ought to be quashed accordingly. Lord Mansfield, C. J. "That order was made in favour of Llanrhydd; Llanrhydd gave it up, and consented to take the paupers back, without giving Ruthin the trouble of appealing against it. May not a party give up a judgment intended for his own benefit?" The order of sessions quashed.

The parish in whose favour an order of removal is made, may, by consent, abandon it, without waiting to appeal to sessions; and another order made by them, removing the pauper to a different parish, is good.

Rex v. Diddlebury, 12 East, 359. By an order, dated August 15th, 1809, M. Davies, single woman with child, was removed from Much Wenlock to Diddlebury. Order confirmed. Case:—Soon after the sessions in July, 1809, two justices, by an order, removed the pauper from Much Wenlock to Long Stanton; she was conveyed by the officers of Much Wenlock, and delivered, with the order, to the officers of Long Stanton, who received her, and maintained her for five weeks. On the 15th of August following, a meeting was had between the officers of Much Wenlock and Long Stanton, who, finding the account given by other witnesses was different from that given by the pauper, on whose evidence the order of removal to Long Stanton had been made, and being of opinion that it could not therefore be supported, they mutually agreed to cancel that order, which they did, with the consent of the magistrates who had made it, and who thereupon made another order, which is the order now appealed against, and which was made before any sessions had intervened, to which any appeal against the first order could be made. There was no appeal against the order of removal to Long Stanton. When this case was called on, Le Blanc, J., said, "that the point had been expressly decided in Rex v. Llanrhydd;" and Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "that the point was so clear upon principle, that it did not want any authority to support it." Against the order, Chalbury v. Chipping Farringdon (post), was cited; and it was urged shortly, that however an order made might be abandoned before execution, it could not afterwards; and being in the nature of a judgment executed, it could only be reversed by appeal." Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "There are two ways of getting rid of an order; one by the consent of the parish in whose favour it is made, to abandon it; the other, by waiting till the time of appeal, and appealing against it to the sessions, by whom it may be quashed if not supported. Here the parish in whose favour it was made, finding, upon further information, that they could not support it, very sensibly determined to abandon it at once by consent, and acted accordingly. And what objection can there be, as Lord Mansfield observed, in the case mentioned, to a party's abandoning a judgment intended for his own benefit? In the case of Salkeld (Chalbury v. Chipping Farringdon), there was no consent of the party in whose favour the order of justices was made to vacate." Per Curiam: Order confirmed.

8. Of Superseding Orders of Removal.

An order may be superseded although a removal has taken place.

If the costs are paid, no appeal lies against such order.

If the result of the sessions is right, the court will not inquire into the reasons.

Reg. v. J. W. R. of Yorkshire, (Longwood v. Halifax), 1 G. & D. 630; 2 Q. B. 705. On a rule for a mandamus to enter and hear an appeal against an order for the removal of Joseph Fox from Halifax to Longwood, it appeared that the order had been made on the 8th of May, 1841, served on the 11th of May, and executed by the actual removal of the paupers to Longwood, soon after the expiration of twenty-one days from the date of the service. After the twenty-one days, and after the actual removal, viz. the 15th of June, notice of appeal was given by the parish officers of Longwood for the then next quarter sessions. One of the grounds was that the order had been made on hearsay evidence. On the 21st of June, the respondents, conceiving the above ground of appeal to be valid, obtained from the removing justices a supersedeas of their order, and on the following day served the township of Longwood with the supersedeas, and stated at the same time that the paupers would be taken back, and the expenses consequent upon their removal would be allowed to Longwood in the account current between the townships. To this course no objection was made. The paupers were taken back to Halifax on the 16th July, and the expenses claimed for maintenance, &c., by the officers of Longwood, were settled in September. On the 31st July another order of removal was obtained upon a different examination, and against this second order an appeal had been entered and respited at the October sessions. On the 30th June last an appeal was entered at the quarter sessions against the first order, and the appellants moved to quash it for the insufficiency of the examination. The respondents opposed it on the ground that the order having been superseded, the sessions had no jurisdiction to permit an appeal to be entered against it. The sessions decided that they had jurisdiction to permit and they discharged it generally, declining to make an entry for want of form. On the same day, after the sessions had returned to other business, and a considerable time after the order had been so disposed of, the respondents suggested to the court that the originals of the order of removal, and of the examination on which the same had been made, ought to have been filed according to a rule of the sessions, which provides that "all appeals shall be entered, and the respective orders or convictions appealed against shall be filed with the clerk of the peace before the sitting of the court on the first day of every sessions," &c. The court on such last-mentioned point decided, that since the original order had not been filed according to the rule of practice, the sessions had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, and they accordingly directed the clerk of the peace to strike out such appeal and to take the copy order, the notice of chargeability, and the copy examination from the file of the court, which was done. Lord Denman. "In this case the appellants stated as a ground of appeal against an order of removal, that it was made upon insufficient evidence; and the respondents being convinced that the objection was good, had their order superseded, and agreed to pay all expenses which the removal had occasioned to the appellants. This took place before the appeal was entered. The appellants however entered their appeal and went to sessions. The first question is, whether the sessions could entertain this appeal against an order of removal, which had been thus abandoned after execution. The sessions appear to have thought at first that they could try the appeal, but in the course of the day they struck it out, on learning that one of the rules of practice to be observed on entering such appeals had not been complied with. The object of this application is to make them restore the appeal and hear it, so as to get a decision which may conclude the respondents on their first insufficient order, and shut them out from contesting an appeal against their second and amended order upon the merits. The object is certainly one which we do not view with favour, but still, if the law requires it, we must grant the application. Have then the sessions acted so with respect to the appeal before them that we are called upon to interfere? It is said that we must control them, as they have improperly decided to strike out an appeal because one of their rules of practice had not been observed. But we have nothing to do with the reasons on which the sessions have decided. If they had struck out the appeal in the first instance they would have acted correctly, for the appeal was against an order of removal which had been superseded. Eventually they did strike out the appeal: they were right in doing so, and we will not inquire into their reasons. But it is said that the result itself, which the sessions have come to (without reference to their reasons), is wrong, because an order of removal cannot be superseded after it has once been carried into execution. The words of the old decision, Pancras v. Rumbold, 1 Str. 6, which is relied upon for this point, appear to me much too large, and the case has been decided in Rex v. Diddlebury (p. 1088), and Rex v. Justices of Norfolk (post). Bayley, J., in the last-mentioned case lays it down that, even where the removing parish consents to a supersedeas of their own order before appeal entered, still 'the sessions may exercise a discretion, and enter the appeal or not, so as best to answer the purposes of justice.' But I think even these words are to be qualified by what follows, 'if the parties removing do not choose to pay the expense of maintenance incurred previously to the supersedeas, they may then enter the appeal, for the purpose of compelling them to do so; if they are willing to do it the sessions may refuse to enter the appeal.' Where the costs of maintaining the pauper after removal have not been paid to the appellant parish there may remain something for the decision of sessions to operate upon. I quite agree with the language of Patteson, J., in the two cases referred to. It is a beneficial rule to lay down that where a good objection is pointed out to an order of removal, the respondents may bid adieu to it and make another." Patteson, J. "This rule is applied for mainly on the ground that the sessions have refused to hear for one specific reason, and that, although their decision may be supported by many good reasons, we are bound to interfere, if the reason they acted on is bad. The question is whether the sessions were right in refusing to entertain this appeal. Allusion has been made to what I said in two of the cases cited, and in Reg. v. Rishworth (p. 1059.) What I said in Reg. v. Rishworth I said advisedly, for my observations in the two preceding cases had been made in passing, and I was desirous in the last case to avoid prejudging the question, which I knew would be raised in this case as to the general power of a removing parish to abandon an insufficient order. That question is now before us, and I think we should act very hardly by parishes if we were to say that they cannot cure a mistake by abandoning an order of removal which they find to be bad, and by making a fresh one. Before the Poor Law Amendment Act

8. Of Superseding Orders of Removal.

When the order has been superseded, the sessions should strike out the appeal.

no communication was necessary between contending parishes respecting an order of removal. Now that communication is required for the purpose of preventing litigation, and it would be prejudicial to that purpose as well as strange, if, after it has been pointed out to the respondents in the course of such communication that their order is bad, they should be obliged to take the case to sessions and to increase costs. When an order of removal is sent under this statute, and notice of appeal against it is given within the twenty-one days after service, it cannot be said that the order is executed. It is true that here there had been an actual removal of the paupers under the order. Why? Because the parish removed to had neglected to give notice of appeal within the twenty-one days. It was the fault of the appellants that the order was acted upon, but still the removing parish, whether bound to do so or not, has in point of fact paid all expenses consequent upon the removal. The general question having now come before us, I do not hesitate to say that the respondents had a right to get their order superseded after the objection stated, and that no court of quarter sessions ought to enter an appeal against an order so superseded. Coleridge, J. "This is an attempt either to increase costs or to get rid of the merits, and I am glad that we may, consistently with law, defeat it. The order of removal was not objected to during the twenty-one days which are required to intervene before its execution by the actual removal of the panpers. Then notice of appeal against the order was furnished, and the respondents, finding one of the grounds of appeal to be irresistible, do all they can to set themselves right. They get the order superseded, and offer to defray all expenses which the appellants have been put to. Then behind the backs of the respondents this appeal is entered. If this case stood upon the rule of the sessions with respect to the mode of entering appeals I should hesitate. I am doubtful whether it is a proper rule, and I agree that they cannot make such rules of practice as will vary the general law respecting these appeals. But previously to the discussion on this rule of practice, there was another discussion on the effect of superseding an order of removal actually executed. The sessions decided that they had jurisdiction to try the appeal against an order superseded; they afterwards decided that they had no jurisdiction, because their rules of procedure had not been observed. Now as it cannot be denied that the sessions might alter their decision at any time during the sessions, and they at last came to a right conclusion, it matters not whether they acted on good or bad grounds, their conclusion is right, and we are not bound to facilitate injustice by making this rule absolute. One word on the abandonment of orders of removal. I think the present state of the law makes it quite proper that there should be the right, which has been exercised in this case, of abandoning an order made on an insufficient examination, and I accede to all the observations of my brother Patteson." Wightman, J. "In Rex v. J. Norfolk, Bayley, J., expressed an opinion that the sessions had discretion, on account of costs, to enter an appeal, if they please, against an order of removal which had been superseded after execution but added, that if the removing parties choose to pay the costs, 'the sessions may refuse to hear the appeal.' Here all expenses have been paid. It is said in this case that the sessions had at one time exercised their discretion, that they decided to hear the appeal, and afterwards rescinded their decision on insufficient grounds. We cannot go into that: for some reason or other they have determined the matter, and we may consider this as an application made to us to hear in the first instance." Rule discharged.

8. Of Superseding Orders of Removal.

Rule of sessions requiring the original orders to be filed, is of doubtful validity.

Rex v. J. Middlesex, 3 P. & D. 459; 11 A. & E. 809. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal against an order of removal from Tottenham to St. Pancras, and determine the merits thereof, it appeared that the order was made on the 2nd January, 1839, upon the examination of the pauper, wherein she described herself as Jane Foyster, single woman, and stated that she had gained a settlement by hiring and service in St. Pancras parish. She was removed to that parish on the 25th January following,

After an appeal has been entered against an order of removal, the justices cannot supersede their order.

8. Of Superseding Orders of Removal.

and at the ensuing sessions, holden on the 9th April, St. Pancras entered an appeal against the order, and on the 11th April gave the respondent parish notice for the trial of the appeal on the 24th April, pursuant to the practice of the sessions. On the 14th April, the appellants received from the attorney of the respondents a notice that, on examination of the pauper it was discovered that she was a married woman at the time of the settlement mentioned in her examination, and that he therefore should not defend the appeal at the ensuing sessions, and that he should either move to quash the order or abandon it. He also stated that the husband had been settled in the appellant parish, and intimated that he should remove the pauper to the appellant parish on such settlement. On the 23rd April, the appellants received from the respondents the copy of an order of supersedeas, dated 22nd April, by the justices who had made the order of removal, reciting that the examination and declaration of the pauper were founded on mistake, which had since been discovered, as the pauper was not a single woman, but that the pauper was nevertheless settled in the appellant parish, by reason of her husband's being settled there, and rescinding their order. On the appeal being called on at the sessions, held on the 24th April following, the respondents put in the order of supersedeas, and the sessions refused to entertain the appeal as the order was cancelled. Lord Denman. "We think the supersedeas was obtained too late in this case after the appeal has been entered, and notice given of trial, the power of the justices who made the original order is at an end and the proceedings are lodged before another tribunal. This distinguishes the case from Rex v. J. Norfolk, where the appeal had not been entered." Littledale and Patteson, Js., concurred. Coleridge, J. "The supersedeas appears to have been made simply on the ground that the respondents had discovered a better case than that on which they had originally removed the pauper, and which formed the subject of an appeal. I cannot see that the justices had any power to make the order of supersedeas." Rule absolute.

The order cannot be superseded by the removing justices after an appeal has been entered at the sessions.

Reg. v. Brighton, 2 G. & D. 88; 3 Q. B. 342. On a certiorari to quash an order of sessions for insufficiency, it appeared that the order was dated the 17th May, 1841, and that the removal took place in June. At the sessions on the 28th June, an appeal by the parish of Henfield was entered and respited. The appellants gave the respondents notice on the 1st October of their intention to try the appeal at the next sessions. On the 4th October, 1841, the order of removal was superseded by an order of justices, and was served on the appellants on the 8th October. The sessions were held on the 18th October. Notice of trial was proved, and the respondents relied on the supersedeas of the 4th October. The sessions quashed the order of removal and refused a case. Per Curiam. "The Reg. v. Justices of West Riding is not in point; there it was attempted to compel the sessions to quash a non-existing order; here the order was in existence, and the sessions were properly in possession of the appeal. On the question of jurisdiction the Rex v. J. Middlesex (p. 1091) is quite conclusive. Any hardship that has arisen is the fault of the parties who complain. The dates of the proceedings, the facts of the supersedeas and of the notice of abandonment, raised for the sessions a question of costs, and of the terms on which the appeal should be settled. The respondents might also have applied to the sessions to make a special entry that the appeal was disposed of not upon the merits.

Practice as to costs.

In this case Coleridge, J., observed that the Middlesex sessions had adopted a very wholesome practice of not giving the appellants any costs when the appeal is entered before the notice of appeal is given.

Fresh order.

If the removing parish, before any notice of appeal, or entry of appeal at the sessions, give notice of abandonment, they may obtain a fresh order. Reg. v. St. Pancras, (p. 1047.)

9. Of filing Order of Removal unappealed against. (a)

8. Of filing Order of Removal unappealed against.

As an order of removal, executed upon the parish to which it is directed, and which is unappealed against, is binding upon such parish as to the settlement of the pauper at that period, and may therefore become an important piece of evidence at some future period, the expediency of preserving the document itself in an authenticated form is obvious. Upon this subject there is a report as follows:—Anonymous, 1 Salk. 406. Per Holt, C. J. "The most regular way for justices to proceed upon the 14 Car. II. in removing a poor person, is to make a record of the complaint and adjudication, and upon that to make a warrant under their hands and seals to the churchwardens, to convey the persons to the parish to which they ought to be sent, and deliver in the record per proprias manus into court next sessions, to be kept there amongst the records, to charge the parish; and that record may be well removed by the general certiorari to the justices of the peace: Mr. Broderick said he had advised the justices in Surrey to do so." And upon this it is remarked in a former edition of Burn's Justice. (b) But how such record shall charge the parish is not perhaps very evident; unless it shall appear likewise that a removal was made in pursuance of such order; otherwise, how shall the parish be charged by an order which possibly they know nothing of, and consequently could have no opportunity to appeal against? It is there said to be usual in some places for the overseers who make the removal to bring the order to the next sessions, and there make oath that they removed the party in pursuance of such order, and if then there appeared to be no appeal against it, the order is confirmed by the court, and filed amongst the records. And although such confirmation is merely void, because the sessions have no jurisdiction therein, unless in the case of appeal, which here is not; yet such confirmation is also superfluous and needless. But an order, not appealed against, is final without more; and as such order is a record of itself, and contains in it the adjudication of the justices, it seemeth that the court (at the next sessions) may record thereupon that no appeal was made, for in that case they are the proper judges whether an appeal was made or not. But still it seemeth that unless it be upon appeal, they have no power to inquire concerning the removal, for that as to them is extra-judicial: but the justices who made the order have a right to see it executed; and therefore they may inquire upon oath, whether the removal was duly made; and if it was, they may record the whole. Which record of the whole proceedings, being delivered in at the next sessions, and the court thereupon recording likewise that no appeal was made, in such case perhaps the parish may be concluded.

---

10. Penalty and Punishment for not obeying Order of Removal.

10. Penalty and Punishment for not obeying Order of Removal.

By 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 10, (p. 1012), a penalty of 5*l.* is inflicted upon churchwardens or overseers for refusing to receive a person sent to them by warrant of removal. Such refusal may be punished also by indictment, for the enactment does not apply to all cases.

Rex v. Davis, Say. 163; 1 Bott, 338. Indictment for refusing to receive a pauper sent by order of two justices to the liberty of the Tower. Plea, not guilty. Verdict against the defendant. It was moved in arrest of judgment that 3 Will. III. c. 11, having directed another method of punishment, to wit, a fine to be levied by warrant of distress in a summary way, that should be strictly pursued. Denison, J. "If a statute create a new offence, and give a punishment, that rule must be followed: but if the offence was before at common law, and a new punishment only given, it is indictable also. So if one statute give one punishment, and another statute

An indictment will lie for refusing to receive a pauper.

(a) The sessions cannot confirm an order unless there is an appeal. Rex. v. Leverington, post. And the respondents cannot enter the appeal. Reg v. Anglesea, J. (p. 1100.)

(b) See Burn's Justice, 16th edit. tit. "Poor."

10. Penalty and Punishment for not obeying Order of Removal.

give another punishment, the prosecutor has his election. This was an offence before the 3 Will. III. Such a parish officer might have been indicted on the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, or what would have become of a pauper in case of disobedience between the passing those acts; but the 3 Will. III. c 11, does not relate to removals from parish to parish, but from county to county; and therefore there is no remedy but by indictment" Foster, J. "In all cases where a justice has power given him to make an order, and directs it to an inferior ministerial officer, and he disobeys it, if there be no particular remedy prescribed, it is indictable." And judgment was given against the defendant.

The 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, requires in express words that such officer refusing shall be bound over to the assizes, or sessions, there to be indicted, (p. 1011.)

Removal without any Order.

Penalty under Gilbert's Act for procuring the removal of sick persons, &c., without an order.

Removal without any Order.

22 Geo. III. c. 83, s. 41. Whereas it frequently happens that poor children, pregnant women, or poor persons afflicted with sickness or some bodily infirmity, are enticed, taken, or conveyed by parish officers, or other persons, from one parish or place to another, without any legal order of removal, in order to ease the one parish or place and to burden the other with such poor persons, for remedy whereof be it further enacted, "That when any guardian or other person or persons shall so entice, take, convey, or remove, or cause to be so enticed, taken, conveyed, or removed, any such poor person or persons from one parish or place to another, which shall adopt the provisions of this act, without an order of removal from two justices of the peace for that purpose, every person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty pounds, nor less than five pounds.

4. Of Persons Returning after Removal.

4. Of Persons Returning after Removal.

Persons returning after removal were prosecuted as vagabonds. Quære, now?

If the person removed return of his own accord, without a certificate, the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 3, directs that he shall be punished as a vagabond. Upon this Lord Tenterden has remarked, in Rex v. Barham (p. 841) that "it was insisted that the return of the pauper, after the removal, was an offence against the law; but since the 35 Geo. III. c. 101, this may admit of considerable doubt. Before that act, a person likely to become chargeable was removable, and if he returned after the removal, he returned in the same condition; but as that act renders a person irremovable, unless actually chargeable, he may after his removal return with the means of subsistence; and it is difficult to say that by so returning he commits an offence." This view sanctions the doubts expressed by Mr. Evans, in a note on 17 Geo. II. c. 3, and 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 3, which enacts, that persons returning and becoming chargeable to the parish from whence they had been removed, shall be deemed idle persons.

Such persons must have been charged therewith on oath.

Rex v. Angell, Cas. Tem. Hardw. 124; 2 Bott, 884. The justices of Berkshire held a petty sessions to search after vagrants, and a poor man, residing in the parish of Bingfield, being examined, confessed himself to be settled in the parish of Sunning, whereupon the justices ordered him to be removed to Sunning. On his return from Sunning without a certificate, the defendant, one of the justices present at the petty sessions, did, without any summons, or oath made of his return, commit the man to the house of correction, where he was kept three days. Upon this the court was moved to grant an information against the justice. The court allowed the transactions of the petty sessions in this case to be irregular, because there was no complaint made of his being chargeable or likely to be chargeable to Bingfield; but yet, as that was only a mistake of judgment, the court would not have thought it worthy of punishment; but the sending him to the house of correction, after having convicted him unheard, being contrary to natural justice, they were inclinable to grant an information; but as no malice appeared in the justice, the court allowed the prosecutor to accept of some proposal made by the justice to make him satisfaction.

4. Of Returning after Removal.

The warrant of commitment must be for a time definite.

Baldwin v. Blackmore, 1 Burr. 595. Baldwin and his wife were removed from Marsden to Banknewton. Afterwards they both of them returned to Marsden, without bringing a certificate: complaint of which being made in writing, and upon oath, to the defendant, a justice, he issued his warrant to bring them before him, who being brought and the facts fully proved upon oath, he committed them to the house of correction, until they should be discharged from thence by due course of law. Upon the trial of this cause, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and 1*s.* damages, subject to the opinion of the court on two questions:—1. Whether there ought not to have been a previous conviction of vagrancy? 2. Whether the wife could be convicted of vagrancy, or be liable to be sent to the house of correction for returning without a certificate, as she only accompanied and resided with her own husband? On the argument of this cause, Lord Mansfield, C. J., desired to be informed how the usage had been about sending the wife to the house of correction with the husband: (though it would not indeed, as he observed, alter the law.) Afterwards, this case being mentioned as standing for the opinion of the court, it was said for the defendant, that he had several certificates of its being the practice for justices to commit the wife as well as the husband, for returning to the parish from whence they had been removed, although she so returned with her husband. Lord Mansfield, C. J., delivered the resolution of the court. He observed, that "it was manifest the justice had not acted intentionally wrong. And it is plain that the jury were of that opinion, as appears by their giving only 1*s.* damages. The court would gladly therefore have leaned towards excusing him from suffering for what he had honestly done, if they could have found him justifiable by any legal excuse. But there is one fatal objection to his proceeding, which we cannot get over, and which puts all the other points out of the case, and that is, that the warrant of commitment is illegal. The legality of the warrant depends upon two acts of parliament, or at least upon one of them. For there are two acts of parliament, upon one of which two this warrant must be founded, though it doth not appear upon which the justice proceeded. The two acts are 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, (a law made before certificates under the late acts existed); and 17 Geo. II. c. 5, [which related to persons returning without bringing such a certificate, and is repealed by 3 Geo. IV. c. 40; see 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 3, tit. Vagrants.] Now the warrant is not within the former of these acts; nor is the case itself within it. These persons did not go to any parish, carrying with them a certificate of their being inhabitants of their proper parish. The commitment is, till discharged by due course of law; whereas upon this act it should have been to the house of correction, there to be punished as a vagabond, or to a public workhouse, there to be employed in work and labour. Nor can this warrant be good on the latter act; because the power given to the justice by that act is, to commit such offenders to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one month: whereas this warrant is quite general: it is an indefinite commitment; not for a precise limited time, as the act directs. Therefore the warrant of commitment is totally illegal; and consequently the plaintiff is entitled to the damages that he has recovered."

The commitment must state to what place the pauper returned.

Rex v. Elere Cole, 2 Bott, 886. A motion was made to discharge a man out of custody, because 1st, the commitment does not state to what place the man returned: 2ndly, nor that he returned without a certificate; 3rdly, that it did not appear that he had been before convicted as a vagrant, which prior conviction alone, under stat. 17, Geo. II. c. 5, gave a power of commitment for a month. The commitment was "for returning from the parish of St. Sepulchre, after a legal warrant of removal from the parish of the Holy Trinity." Lord Mansfield. "This commitment cannot be supported; it does not say to what place he returned." Aston, J. "It is totally uncertain."

4. Of Returning after Removal.

The pauper may lawfully return to a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*

A conviction of the plaintiff for unlawfully returning, is a good answer to an action, though in fact he did not return in pauperism.

Rex v. Fillongley, (p. 797.) The pauper returned to the parish from whence he had been removed, to reside on a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.* and upwards; the court said he had a right to return, for that an order of removal only prevents a return in a state of vagrancy.

Mann v. Davers, 3 B. & Ald. 103. Action for false imprisonment. Verdict for the plaintiff, 40*s.* damages. The defendant, who was a magistrate of Suffolk, committed the plaintiff to prison as an idle and disorderly person, under 17 Geo. II. c. 5. The defence was a regular recorded conviction of the plaintiff, and the information stated, that within three months the plaintiff unlawfully returned from the parish of A. to the parish of B., from which parish he had been removed to the said parish of A. by an order, &c. without bringing a certificate from the said parish of A. The conviction then stated, that plaintiff, being brought before the defendant, had confessed himself guilty of the offence. When the plaintiff returned to the parish, he was not in a state of pauperism, but maintained himself by his own labour, and was actually taken up upon the charge upon which he was convicted when he was working in the harvest fields. The question was, whether the conviction was a bar to the action? Abbott, C. J. "This information pursues the language of the statute, and in so doing it does all that is necessary to be done. The returning to the parish without a certificate was at least primâ facie evidence of his being an idle and disorderly person, and then it was for the defendant to show that he had a lawful excuse for returning. It would be extraordinary indeed if a person who refuses to answer, and suffers the magistrate to convict him, should afterwards be at liberty to bring an action against the magistrate; the defendant here confessed the substance of the charge, and when called upon for an excuse, he does not give one, but suffers imprisonment, in order that he may afterwards bring an action against the magistrate." Bayley, J. "The facts of the case induce a suspicion that it was one of considerable hardship on the party who had been removed. We must however consider the situation in which magistrates would be placed, if a party who neglected to make his defence when he had the opportunity could afterwards sue the magistrate. It seems that the parish officer had lodged before the magistrate a complaint, upon which, if established, the party was liable to punishment. The substance of the charge was, that he had returned unlawfully; if he could show any lawful excuse for his return, he might have stated that before the magistrate; he however confesses that he is guilty of the offence charged, upon which the law says that he is an idle and disorderly person, and I am of opinion that he cannot now turn round and bring an action against the magistrate." Holroyd, J., concurred. Best, J. "This conviction appears to be in the ordinary form; nevertheless I must say that the parish officer acted most improperly in taking a man up as a vagrant who was at work in the harvest field. But when he was before the magistrate, and alleged no fact to show that he was not, as he appeared to be, in a state of vagrancy, the magistrate could do nothing but convict him. Had he stated to the magistrate that he returned for the purpose of working, it would have been a question for the court whether the magistrate should not have used the language of this court in Rex v. Fillongley" (p. 797.) Judgment for the defendant.

5. Order of Removal of one Certificated.

Overseers to be reimbursed on reconveying certificate persons.

5. Order of Removal of one Certificated.

The nature of a certificate, and the provisions as to its form, delivery, and extent, are explained under the title Acknowledgment of Settlement by Certificate (ante, 961).

It is provided by the 3 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 9, "That when any overseer or overseers of the poor of any parish or place, or other person, shall remove back any person or persons, or their families, residing in such parish or place, or sent thither by certificate, and becoming chargeable as aforesaid to the parish or place to which such person or persons shall belong, such overseers or other persons shall be reimbursed such reasonable charges as they may have been put unto in maintaining and removing such person or persons, by the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish or place to which such person or persons is or are removed, the said charges being first ascertained and allowed of by one or more of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county or place to which such removal shall be made; which said charges so ascertained and allowed, shall, in case of refusal of payment, be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish or place to which such certificate person or persons is or are removed, by warrant or warrants under the hand and seal, or hands and seals of such justice or justices, returning the overplus, if any there be; which warrant or warrants he or they are hereby required to grant."

5. Order of Removal of one Certificated.

There does not appear to have been any difficulty in understanding or carrying into effect the above provision, as the books present no cases upon its construction. It is probable that the only question which could arise, requiring the judgment of the superior court, would be, whether, when a certificate person has been once removed back to the certifying parish, the latter has the power of sending him into the same parish from which he has been so removed again with a fresh certificate. There is nothing in the statute nor in the reason or policy of the law to prevent it. In many instances if the person finds it expedient to quit his own parish once more in search of employment, he will prefer to return to the place in which he has been before, as most likely to answer his purpose; and this is not likely to operate as a hardship upon the parish to which he so returns, as, should he again become chargeable, the expense of again removing him, and of his maintenance in the mean time, must be borne by the parish from which he is certificated.

6. Appeal against an Order of Removal. (a)

6. Appeal against an Order of Removal.

The law relating to appeals has been classed as follows:—

1. The Statutes relating to the Appeal.
   Against an Order of Removal.
   Against suspended Order.
2. Who may appeal, and to the Sessions of what Place.
3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.
4. Entering Appeal after executed Order is superseded.
5. Of Adjournment.
6. Of Notice of Appeal.
7. Evidence.

1. The Statutes relating to Appeal.

1. The Statutes relating to Appeal.

13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12.

Power of appealing.

The 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2, enacts, "That all persons who think themselves aggrieved by any such judgment of the said two justices, may appeal to the justices of the peace of the said county, at their next quarter sessions, who are hereby required to do them justice according to the merits of their cause."

Overseers to have access to pauper in cases of appeal.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, prohibits the removal of a pauper, where notice of appeal has been given within the twenty-one days, and by the 80th section it provides that in case of appeal, the overseers shall have access to the pauper to examine him as to his settlement, and even if necessary to remove him out of the respondent parish; such removal, however, to be at the expense of the appellant parish. This statute further provides that the grounds of appeal shall be stated in the notice (post, Notice of Appeal), and enables the sessions to grant costs either of the appeal or of frivolous statements.

By 35 Geo. III. c. 101. (p. 1013,) Justices may suspend the execution of an order of removal, and the charges incurred by such suspension, may be directed to be paid by the parish; and if such costs exceed 20*l.*, the parish has a power to appeal, s. 2.

(a) As to an appeal against the removal of Insane persons, see p. 131, and post.

1. Statutes relating to Appeal.

By 49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 2. When the execution of any such order of removal shall be suspended, the time of appealing against such order shall be computed from the time of serving the order.

An appeal lies against an order for payment of the charges of suspension after the three days.

Rex v. Bradford, 9 East, 97. An order was made on the 7th of July, 1807, for the removal of S. Spires from Bradford to Melksham and suspended. On the 16th of September they directed the first order to be executed, and 41*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* expenses of the suspension to be paid by Melksham to Bradford. On the 17th of September, the pauper was carried to Melksham; and a motion was made to enter and adjourn an appeal against the order for the payment of the expenses, which was agreed to by the court; but they reserved the question, whether any appeal were allowed, and notice of appeal having been given within three days after the removal of the pauper. But Lord Ellenborough "held the meaning of the clauses to be clearly this; if the party aggrieved by the order, and intending to appeal against the amount of the charges, will give notice of the appeal within three days after demand made, he shall be relieved from the inconvenience of a distress: but though he neglect to do so, he only subjects himself to that inconvenience; for his right of appeal, which is afterwards given, is not thereby taken away; and if he afterwards think proper to appeal, within the time appointed by law for appeals against orders of removal, he is expressly empowered to do so." Order of sessions confirmed.

An appeal lies against an order for costs incurred during the suspension, though the pauper dies before removal.

Rex v. St Mary-le-Bone, 13 East, 51. On the 3rd of July, 1809, an order was made for the removal of J. Harlow, and suspended. By an order of the 18th of September following, the same justices, reciting that J. H. was dead, directed the expense incurred by the suspension to be paid. St.M. appealed against the order of removal, and the order for the payment of the charges. The sessions dismissed both appeals, and stated, that neither of the orders of removal or suspension thereof were served on the parish officers of St. M. until after the death of the pauper, which happened between the 3d and 11th of July, 1809; after which time the parish officers of St. M. were served with the orders, and 5*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* given thereby was demanded, at which time they gave notice of appeal to the parish officer of H. against the order of removal, and also against the order of adjudication for the payment of the charges incurred by the suspension. The respondents offered no evidence that the pauper was settled in the parish of St. M., but contended that no appeal could lie against the order of removal, as it had never been executed; and that there can be no execution of an order of removal, but by delivering the pauper to the officers of the parish. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The appeal is by the 3 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 9, given to the party aggrieved by the determination of the justices respecting the settlement of the pauper; then, though the grievance grow by a subsequent statute, the party is still aggrieved by the order of removal. Before the 35 Geo. III., there was no grievance to the parish to which the order of removal was made, until it was executed: but that statute attaches a contingent consequence to the order itself in this case, which, coupled as it is with the order for payment of costs, makes it a grievance, though the pauper died before any removal in fact took place. Then the appeal against the order of costs is not against the quantum, but against the liability of the parish to pay any costs at all in this case; taking it as a consequence of the order of removal appealed against." Order of sessions quashed.

Time of appeal computed from the valid service of the order. Valid service must be either with the original or a copy producing the original.

Rex v. Alnwick, 5 B. & Ald. 184. Order of removal, dated the 6th of August, 1814, of M. Walker, from Alnwick to the chapelry of Haydon, at the Michaelmas sessions in 1820, was discharged. Case:—The pauper, at the time of the order, was in such a state of health that she could not be removed without danger, the execution of the order was therefore suspended. About the 6th September, 1814, a copy of the order and indorsement was served upon one of the overseers of Haydon, by a person sent by one of the overseers of Alnwick, such person not then having the order with him; and on the 4th October, 1815, another part of the original order of removal and indorsement was served upon one of the overseers of Haydon by the overseers of Alnwick. This last had not been executed by the removing justices on the 6th August, 1814, but by them in September, 1815. It however bore date the 6th of August, 1814. The order originally executed was not at any time shown to any of the overseers of Haydon. The suspension was taken off in August, 1819, and an order was then indorsed by the justices for the payment of 161*l.* 17*s.* 5*d.*, the charges incurred by the suspension. On the 5th of September, 1820, the pauper was removed from Alnwick to Haydon, and an appeal against the order of removal was entered at the Michaelmas sessions, 1820. It was contended that the time of appealing against such order was to be computed from the time of serving the order, and not from the time of making the removal. Abbott, C. J. "The objection made here to the judgment of the court of quarter sessions, is, that they have allowed this appeal, when, in point of law, the appellants were not entitled to it, not having appealed within the time allowed by law. That question depends entirely upon the validity of the service of the order. Now that service, in order to be valid, must either be by delivery of the order itself, or by leaving a copy of the order, and at the same time producing the original. It is admitted that the service, in 1814, was defective; but then, in 1815, there was a second service. Now, if that was the service of a copy, it is bad, for the same reason as vitiated the previous service. It is, however, contended, that this was the service of a new original order. But if we were to hold that to be so, we should, as it seems to me, give to it an effect not intended by the justices who executed it; for if they had intended it as a new order, they would have given to it a date corresponding with the time of its execution. I think that they never could have intended it as a new order, but only as an authenticated copy of their former order; and that the court of sessions were right in so treating it. In that view of the case, it is clear that both services are defective, and consequently that the appeal was in time, and the order of sessions is therefore right."

1. Statutes relating to Appeal.

An appeal is also given against the order adjudicating in the settlement of an insane person, and the costs of maintenance. (See p. 128.)

---

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what place.

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

Where parishes are incorporated under Gilbert's Act, it is indispensable that the guardian should give notice of appeal, and describe as such.

The proper persons to appeal are the overseers of the parish, but if the parish is incorporated under Gilbert's Act, the guardians only can appeal.

Reg. v. J. of W. R. Yorkshire, (Harnley v. Rothwell,) 7 Jurist, 1132. The appellant township is not under the Poor Law Amendment Act, but incorporated under Gilbert's Act, which by s. 7, (see p. 10,) invests the guardians with all the powers and authorities given to overseers of the poor, and provides that all notices to be given or made to the overseers of the poor, with respect to the care, or management, or removal of the poor, shall be given or made to the guardian of the poor; but in case any orders of removal or notices shall happen, by mistake, to be given or sent to the churchwarden or overseer, the same shall be as valid and effectual as if given to the guardian. In this case the notice of appeal was not signed by the guardian as such, nor had he styled himself as guardian, but had signed with others under the general title of overseers. The justices refused to hear the appeal upon this objection, and on a rule nisi for a mandamus to hear the appeal, Patteson, J., said, "It seems to me to be perfectly clear there should be no rule. It appears to me the overseers are expressly forbidden to interfere, and that, quâ overseers, they have no authority whatever. If a guardian do not sign as guardian, but chooses to sign as overseer only, he makes a blunder, and must take the consequences of his own act. The sessions were perfectly right. He should have signed as guardian, and not as overseer." Rule refused.

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

Rex v. Hartfield, Car. 222; 2 Bott, 924. Two justices removed Nicholas Wells from Hartfield to Framfield; from which order Wells, and not the parish, appealed. By the whole court: "The party may appeal as well as the parish." (See also Rex v. Catterall, post.)

The pauper may appeal as well as the parish.

Rex v. Bishop's Wearmouth. A township may appeal, although the order is directed to the parish.

It is not competent for the respondents to enter an appeal. Rex v. J. Anglesea, 12 L. J., M. C.

An order directed the removal of paupers to the parish of L., and they were removed and delivered to a hamlet within the parish of a different name. On appeal by such hamlet, the respondents cannot object to a notice of appeal given in the name of such hamlet, they having delivered the pauper to the officers of such hamlet.

Rex v. Carmarthenshire, 1 Nev. & M. 368; 4 B. & Ad. 563. An order was made for the removal of a pauper from Mothvey to Llywell. The order was directed to the overseers of the parish of Llywell, and after adjudging the settlement of the pauper to be in the parish of Llywell, it required the overseers of the parish of Llywell to receive the pauper. The parish of Llywell is divided into three hamlets, viz. Treganmaur, Traganlaes, and Hydach, each of which maintains its own poor, and has separate churchwardens, separate overseers, and separate rates. Appeals have frequently been tried against orders of removal between the three hamlets, at the Brecon quarter sessions. There are no such officers as churchwardens and overseers for the whole parish of Llywell. On the 27th of August, 1832, the pauper was delivered by an officer of the removing parish of Mothvey to one of the overseers of the hamlet of Treganmaur, together with the order of removal. The overseer received the pauper, but at the next quarter sessions, held in October, 1832, an appeal against the order was duly lodged and respited on behalf of the churchwardens and overseers of the hamlet of Treganmaur, and on the 22nd of December, 1832, the following notice of appeal was duly served upon the churchwardens and overseers of Mothvey: "To the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Mothvey, in the county of Carmarthen: This is to give you notice, that we the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the hamlet of Treganmaur, in the parish of Llywell, in the county of Brecon, do intend at the next quarter sessions of the peace to be held in and for the said county of Carmarthen, to prosecute an appeal which was duly lodged at the last quarter sessions, against an order of, &c. to our said hamlet of Treganmaur, in the said parish of Llywell, in the county of Brecon from your parish of Mothvey At the sessions the respondents objected that the notice of appeal ought to have been given by the overseers of the parish of Llywell, to whom the order was directed, and not by the officers of the hamlet of Treganmaur; and that the notice stated the order to be an order for the removal of the pauper to the hamlet of Treganmaur, in the parish of Llywell, whereas it was an order for the removal to the parish of Llywell. The justices determined against hearing the appeal. On a rule nisi for a mandamus, Denman, Lord, said: "We are of opinion that the sessions ought to have heard the appeal. The notice of appeal could not mislead the parish officers of Mothvey, to whom it was addressed. It recited the order of removal sufficiently; the names of the paupers, the removing parish, and the part of the parish of Llywell to which the removals were made under the order, although the order professed to remove to the parish at large. The parish of Mothvey is estopped by its own acts from availing itself of the objection. The removal was by the order to the parish at large; but the service of that order was on the hamlet. Parties who have thus acted upon their own order cannot afterwards say that an appeal against it under such a notice as this shall not be heard." Littledale, Taunton, and Patteson, Js., concurred. Rule absolute.

Where only one overseer has been appointed in a township, rated inhabitants may appeal.

Two appeals entered at the same sessions.

Rex v. J. Denbighshire, 1 B. & Ad. 616. By an order of removal of 2d of September, 1829, the overseers of Llangerniew were directed to convey the paupers from that parish to the parish of Machynlleth, and to deliver them to the overseers there, and the latter were required to receive the paupers as inhabitants. Machynlleth was at that time divided into three districts, each maintaining its own poor. Two churchwardens were appointed for the whole parish, and one overseer for each district. The paupers were delivered to the overseer of one of these districts, namely, the township of Uwchygarreg, where their settlement was understood to be. The overseer of the township with the two parish churchwardens (describing themselves as churchwardens of the township) gave notice of appeal. At the sessions the appeal was dismissed on the grounds that there appeared to be only one overseer for the appellant district, and that the churchwardens described as of the township were in fact those of the parish. A fresh appeal was then entered at the same sessions on behalf of T. Owen, D. Pritchard, and W. Jenkins, as inhabitants of a part of the parish of Machynlleth. These appellants were rated inhabitants of Uwchygarreg. Shortly afterwards two overseers were appointed for the same township, and they, with the churchwardens of the parish, then gave the respondent parish two notices of their intention to prosecute the appeal at the next sessions; one notice describing it generally as an appeal against an order, &c., the other, as an appeal lodged at the last sessions by the three inhabitants above named. These last-mentioned parties also gave notice at the same time of prosecuting their appeal; and another notice was given by the attorney for the appellants, describing himself as attorney for the three above-named inhabitants, for the churchwardens and overseers of the township. The appeal was heard at the following sessions, and the order of removal was there quashed upon the merits, with costs, by an order of sessions, purporting to be made between T. Owen, D. Pritchard, and W. Jenkins, inhabitants of the parish of Machynlleth, appellants; and the parish of Llangerniew, respondents. On a rule for a certiorari to quash the orders, Lord Tenterden said: "I think the rule ought to be discharged. This is a parish consisting of three divisions respectively maintaining their own poor. The order to receive the paupers was directed to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, but it seems the paupers were not taken to any regularly appointed officers of the parish, or of any district, or to the inhabitants; but to a single overseer, appointed for one township. An appeal was entered on behalf of the churchwardens and of the overseer for that township. The sessions held, that it could not be entertained, and dismissed it; but without going into the merits. A new appeal was entered at the same sessions in the names of some inhabitants of the parish, that course becoming necessary under the circumstances, and two overseers were afterwards appointed, who gave notice of prosecuting the appeal. Then at the following sessions the magistrates were of opinion that they ought to hear the appeal; they did so, and have decided on the merits; justice has been done, and I think we ought not to disturb their decision." The rest of the court concurred. Rule discharged; but without costs.

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

Rate-payers cannot appeal against an order of removal, independently of the parish officers. Semble, the pauper may appeal.

Reg. v. Colbeck, 3 P. & D. 488; 12 A. & E. 161. The defendants appealed against an order for the removal of A. Hope and children from Coxhoe to Black Callerton. Order confirmed. Case:—The notice of appeal was signed by Colbeck, Carins, and Reay, inhabitants and rate-payers of Black Callerton, and contained the grounds of appeal. No other statement of the grounds of appeal was sent. One question was, whether, as no notice of appeal had been sent or delivered by the overseers or guardians of Black Callerton to respondents, the appellants were entitled to be heard. Lord Denman. "If there is any case in which the court would be justified in straining the words of an act, it would be one where no other remedy could be afforded, as in Rex v. Denbighshire, (ante), where there were not the ordinary parish officers, and where the appeal had been made by rated inhabitants. Whether the decision was right or not I cannot say, but in this case, where there were parish officers, I have no doubt that they were the proper parties to appeal, otherwise every parishioner would be at liberty to appeal, and on separate grounds. The language both of 9 Geo. I. and 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, shows that the parish officers were intended to represent the parish in these matters. It is not to be supposed that they will ever refrain from appealing in furtherance of their private interests, and in opposition to those of the parish." Littledale, J. "Nolan lays down (a) that the 'party removed may appeal as well as the parish,' and it is reasonable that the pauper should have the right of appeal, because, although one parish or the other is bound to support him, it may be more convenient to him to be located in one than the other. An opinion of Holt, C. J., may be found in Weston Rivers v. St. Peter's (a), that the pauper may appeal if he is wrongfully removed. But, as to rated inhabitants appealing without the intervention of the parish officers, I think that both general principle and the language of the statutes show that they cannot." Patteson, J. "I think the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, quite sufficient by itself to show that rated inhabitants cannot appeal, and that Rex v. Denbighshire is no authority to the contrary. The court refused there to exercise their power by certiorari, when the court below had come to a conclusion which the justice of the case warranted; whether the decision was right is another question, but the ground of it was simply, that justice having been done this court would not interfere. But supposing it to be an authority for the appellants, it is quite clear, since the late act, that the legislature contemplated that none should be appellants but the parish officers." Williams, J. "Public convenience clearly requires that the parish officers only should make the appeal; and this more especially since the late incorporation of large districts into unions." Order of sessions quashed.

(a) 2 Nol. 488.

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

(a) 2 Salk. 492.

The appeal must be to the quarter sessions of the county from which the pauper is removed.

And 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 6, enacts, "That the appeal against any order for the removal of any poor person from out of any parish, township, or place, shall be had, prosecuted, and determined at the general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county, division, or riding wherein the parish, township, or place from whence such poor person shall be removed, doth lie, and not elsewhere; any former law or statute to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Since the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act, the borough sessions have jurisdiction to try appeals against orders of removal.

Reg. v. St. Edmund's, Sarum, 1 G. & D. 137; 2 Q. B. 72. Lord Denman delivered the judgment. "The 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 6, required that the appeal against any order of removal of any poor person from out of any parish, township or place, shall be tried at the general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county, division, or riding, wherein such parish, &c. doth lie, and not elsewhere, any former law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding. Thus the trial of an appeal against removal from a parish in any city or town, not being a county of itself, took place at the quarter sessions for the county at large, not at those holden for the town, though the charter might contain a ne intromittant clause. The Municipal Reform Act, by section 103, enables the crown to grant a court of quarter sessions to towns corporate, and appoints the recorder the sole judge in such court. Then the 105th assigns to it jurisdiction over all offences 'and matters whatsoever, cognizable by any court of quarter sessions of the peace for counties in England,' and to the recorder 'power to do all things necessary for exercising such jurisdiction.' The present case is that of an order of removal, made by two justices of the peace for the city of Salisbury, for removal of paupers from a parish in the city, against which an appeal was tried at the October sessions for the county of Wilts, and there quashed, subject to a case, which stated a very old charter granted to the city, and another much more recent, in the reign of James the First, with a ne intromittant clause, and, since the passing of the Municipal Reform Act, the grant of a charter in the usual form, under the 103rd section. The question is, whether the 8 & 9 Will. III., which clearly applied to Salisbury before, has been kept alive for the purpose of this trial, notwithstanding the recent charter. Much learning and great ingenuity were employed in maintaining the affirmative of this proposition, but, while we hold that a positive enactment is not to be repealed by inference, we must also act on the maxim, Leges posteriores priores contrarias abrogant, wherever it comes into operation. Here, the quarter sessions of the city, under its former charters, were deprived of the cognizance of appeals against orders of removal, by the 8 & 9 Will. III. But the Municipal Act gives to the city sessions all the jurisdiction, and to the recorder all the power, that formerly belonged, not to the quarter sessions of a town corporate, but to any county quarter sessions. The use of these words, without reference to the 8 & 9 Will. III., might raise an argument that that act was not in the contemplation of the parliament of 5 & 6 Will. IV., though most probably it was, for the strongest objection to local justices of peace was removed by the appointment of a single judicial officer: but, even if this intention were doubtful, the words are not. They give the recorder the trial of all matters that could be tried by a county session. This appeal is one of those matters, it is therefore given to the recorder, and the words 'not elsewhere,' in the statute Will. III. being contrary, are abrogated. It does not follow that there might not be a concurrence of jurisdictions: but, if there is, the borough sessions were holden earlier than those for the county, and the appeal ought to have been to the former. The rule for quashing the order of sessions must be absolute."

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

Reg. v. J. Salop, 1 G. & D. 146; 2 Q. B. 85. Lord Denman delivered the judgment of the court. "We have lately held that, under the 105th section of the Municipal Reform Act, the court of quarter sessions for the borough has jurisdiction to try an appeal against the removal of a pauper. This case and some others, which have been since argued, require us to determine whether that jurisdiction is exclusive. The 8th section of 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, is cautiously penned, probably to avoid giving offence to the magistrates in limited jurisdictions, but framed in the spirit of jealousy towards them. It found them, when assembled in quarter sessions, empowered to try appeals and other questions in which the members of the court were likely to be interested or prejudiced; and, without naming them, transferred that power to the county sessions, wherein, and not elsewhere, they are from thenceforth to be tried. Now we have lately shown and held that those exclusive words are abrogated by the 105th clause of the Municipal Reform Act, which lodges in the hands of the recorder all the powers and functions (with some specified exceptions) that had been transferred to the county sessions by the act of Will. III. It is possible, though highly improbable, that the legislature may have intended to give a concurrent power of trial to two jurisdictions so differently constituted, and thus to open new sources of litigation as to the manner in which, of two competent jurisdictions, one may possess itself of an appeal cause, to the exclusion of the other, and the still more serious doubts on the validity of trials for crimes which fall within the same provision. It is equally possible, and in a less degree improbable, that the intention to prevent these evils may have been entertained, but not carried into effect; or, finally, that the whole subject may have been overlooked. In any one of these cases we should be bound to discover what the law is, and declare it, without any regard to the consequences of its imperfection. The rules for interpreting statutes have been much discussed in these arguments, but we apprehend that, in applying them to questions on the effect of an enactment, we can never safely lose sight of its object. We have already referred to that of the stat. Will. III. It was to deprive the borough sessions of their power in certain cases, and this is effected by giving it exclusively to the county sessions. Parliament, in William the Third's time, may be supposed to address the borough justices of the peace: 'We cannot trust you with this power. We take it from you and authorise the county justices of the peace to act in your place.' But the parliament of Will. IV. holds the opposite language: 'We wish you to be restored to the jurisdiction of which you were deprived, and have taken effectual means to prevent the abuse which led to the deprivation.' Since, then, the object is directly reversed, and the borough sessions empowered to act, we cannot reasonably doubt that parliament designed to put an end to that power which had been for the first time given to a foreign body for the purpose of supplying the deficiency of judicature which the exclusion had caused. The two enactments are substantially but one. 'Let A. perform the office which we take from B.' But when B.'s office is revived in him, A.'s must cease, as far as the exclusion of B. is concerned, and, that exclusion being manifest, the sole reason for giving A. the office, he is ipso facto deprived by the re-appointment of B. The first section of the Municipal Act repeals all former laws that are contrary to its provisions, not indeed going further than the principle of the common law, but explaining, perhaps, why it was not thought necessary to repeal, in express terms, the act of Will. III. The 111th clause is generally admitted not to apply to the quarter sessions, and to have been framed with special regard to the altered boundary of boroughs, but it certainly furnishes evidence of the desire felt by the legislature to prohibit the county magistrates from interfering with those who had authority in the borough. Upon the whole, we think that the quarter sessions for the borough of Shrewsbury had exclusive right to try the present appeal, and that this rule for quashing the order of the county sessions must be made absolute." S.P., Reg. v. J. Lancashire; Reg. v. J. Suffolk. Ib.

And they have exclusive jurisdiction to try an appeal against orders made by borough justices.

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

The quarter, and not the general sessions, is the proper tribunal to try an appeal against an order of removal.

Reg. v. J. Middlesex, 7 Jurist, 669. On a rule to the justices of Middlesex to enter and hear an appeal, which stood for hearing on the 13th October last, being the adjournment of a general (not being a quarter) sessions commenced on the previous 13th September, when the appeal was originally entered; cause was first shewn, not by the justices, but by the respondents, when an objection was taken to the jurisdiction of the justices to hear such an appeal at a general (not being a quarter) sessions, whereupon the rule was enlarged to allow the justices to be heard. Lord Denman. "In this case an appeal against an order of removal was entered at the general sessions on the 13th September, and respited to the general sessions on the 13th October, and the question for our consideration is whether the general or the quarter sessions is the proper tribunal to try such an appeal. There can be no doubt but that we must decide as in R. v. The Justices of London, (a) that the quarter sessions is the proper tribunal. There are other authorities to the same point, though not on the same statute. (R. v. Turnock, 2 Salk. 474; Purnall's case, 2 Salk. 476; Taylor's case, Palmer's R. 44)." Patteson, J. "The words in 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 4, are the same as in 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 6, and the court decided upon them that the quarter sessions was the proper tribunal; the other statutes mentioned in the argument all seem to point to the quarter sessions." Williams and Coleridge, Js., concurred. Rule discharged.

(a) 15 East, 631.

The appeal must be to the sessions for the county, and not of the corporation.

Rex v. Wendover, 2 Salk. 490; 2 Bott, 953. Two justices of St. Alban's remove a person to Wendover. Wendover appeals to the sessions of St. Alban's. By the court: "The appeal ought to have been to the sessions of the county, and not of the corporation; and as it was, it was coram non judice."

Same point.

Rex v. Malden, Sett. & Rem. 10; 2 Bott, 959, n. By Lord Parker, C. J. "Where there is a town corporate that hath sessions of its own, and the justices within that town make an order there, if the parties will appeal, they must appeal to the county sessions, and not to their own sessions; for then there would be an appeal ab eodem ad eundem, there being it may be the same justices sitting who made the order."

An appeal from an order of borough justices must be to the county justices.

Rex v. East Donyland, Burr. S. C. 592; 2 Bott, 959. Two justices for the borough of Colchester removed the pauper from St. Giles's, in Colchester, to East Donyland, in Essex; and on appeal to the quarter sessions of the borough, the justices there confirmed the order, and stated a case. Upon arguing the matter there it was observed, that the appeal ought to have been to the county sessions. Unto which it was answered, that the parties having acquiesced in the jurisdiction, and entered upon the merits, and actually settled a case for the opinion of the court, they were not at liberty now to make the objection. But by the court: "The borough sessions had no jurisdiction to make this order of confirmation, and, therefore, their opinion and their order are both nugatory. The appeal ought to have been to the quarter sessions of the county. As no such appeal has ever been made, the original order stands good, as unappealed from." And accordingly the original order was confirmed.

But by charter the magistrates of a borough may have jurisdiction.

Rex v. The Justices of Carmarthen, 4 B. & Ald. 291. Two justices of the borough of Carmarthen, on the 23d of May, 1820, removed a pauper from St. Peter, in that borough, to New Church, in the county of Carmarthen. New Church appealed, and in their notice of appeal stated their intention of appealing to the next quarter sessions of the borough of Carmarthen. At the next sessions (which, it appeared, were the general, and not the quarter sessions) for the borough, held on the 21st September last, the parties accordingly attended, and applied for leave to lodge the appeal; but the magistrates refused the application. A rule nisi was obtained for a mandamus. It appeared from the affidavits that the borough of Carmarthen was a county of itself, and that by the charter there were annually elected six peers of the borough, who, with the mayor and recorder, were magistrates of the borough, and had the power twice in a year to hold a court of view of frankpledge, and to summon the sessions of the peace within the borough, and to hold the sessions of the peace there, and to do all things relating to the sessions of the peace, according to the custom of England; and that in the said court they had full power to hear, execute, and determine upon all articles, misprisions, trespasses, and offences within the borough, which, according to law, belong to the court of view of frankpledge, or to the office of justices of the peace in their quarter sessions, or otherwise to execute and determine. It also appeared, that the parish of St. Peter was co-extensive with the borough; but that three out of the eight magistrates did not reside in the parish. It was argued, that there is nothing in the charter enabling the magistrates to do acts relating to the poor laws at their general sessions. Lord Hale lays it down, that a general sessions is perfectly distinct from a quarter sessions. By 13 & 14 Car. II. the appeal was given to the quarter sessions; but by 8 & 9 Will. III. altered to "general or quarter sessions." Here, too, there are only three justices who can sit to determine this appeal; for by 16 Geo. II. c. 18, all the rest are disqualified. And by 17 Geo. II. c. 38, it was provided, that in limited jurisdictions, where there are not four magistrates, the appeal must be to the county sessions. Abbott, C. J., said, "I am of opinion that the true construction of the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, is, that if there be an appeal to the sessions of a town which is a county of itself, where by charter only general sessions are held, it must be made to the general sessions. Here, the magistrates are empowered to hear and determine upon all articles within the borough, which, according to law, belong to the office of justices of the peace in their quarter sessions, or otherwise, to determine. Now this is a very large expression, and comprehends, as it seems to me, a power to decide upon orders of removal. As to the other objection, it appears that there are three magistrates at least qualified to act, and a sessions of the peace may, it is known, be held before two magistrates. The act of parliament to which a reference has been made only applies to corporations or franchises, where there are not more than four justices altogether; and, besides, it does not apply to appeals against orders of removal. Upon the whole, therefore, I am of opinion, that this rule ought to be made absolute. (See Rex v. Essex, J. p. 338.)

2. Who may Appeal, and to Sessions of what Place.

Where such place held only general sessions twice a year, and not quarter sessions: Held, that an appeal against an order of removal might be made to the next general sessions of the peace for such borough.

---

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

Appeal must be to the next sessions.

By 13 & 14 Car. II. the appeal must be to the next quarter sessions after the judgment.

It need not be within the 21 days after the order.

The pauper cannot now be removed until twenty-one days after the order has been sent to the overseers of the parish to which the order has been directed. It is not necessary, however, to give notice of appeal within that time. Rex v. Justices of Suffolk, post.

A party is allowed 21 days to consider of the appeal, and 14 days to give notice.

Rex v. Justices of Lancashire, L. J., Oct. 1843. An order of removal was made and suspended on the 5th of October. A copy was served on the 14th October. The sessions were held on the 3rd of November. It is not necessary to enter the appeal at those sessions, as the appellants are allowed twenty-one days to consider of the propriety of appealing, and fourteen days to give grounds of appeal.

Not necessary to appeal within the 21 days.

Rex v. Justices of Leicester, 4 Dowl. 633. J. Patteson decided that the statute did not require notice of appeal within twenty-one days.

Rex v. Justices of Cornwall, 6 A. & E. 894. The order was served on the 8th June. The sessions were held on the 28th June. The pauper was removed on the 29th June. The notice of appeal was given on the 3rd of October, for the October sessions. The court were of opinion that the notice was given in sufficient time.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

Order served on 8th June; sessions held on 28th. Appeal may be to October sessions.

To be the next sessions after the removal.

Parties not aggrieved till after the removal.

Rex v. Norton, 2 Stra. 831. Exception was taken to an order of sessions, because the justices' order was dated June 21st, and the sessions' order was not till Michaelmas sessions. To this it was answered, that the appeal is to be to the next sessions after the parties find themselves aggrieved, which is not till the removal; and for aught that appears, Michaelmas sessions might be the next sessions after the aggrievance. And so held in Milbrooke v. St. John's, in Southampton, M. 1 Geo. I. To which the court agreed, and the sessions' order was confirmed.

But now the appeal may be made before the removal actually takes place. (See s. 77 of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, Appendix.)

The time limited for appealing against an order of removal is not suspended by the matter being referred to arbitration, if the award is not final.

Rex v. Devonshire J., Cald. 32; 2 Bott, 961. A mandamus had been moved for to hear an appeal to an order of removal: the sessions had refused to enter into it, as one sessions had intervened since the removal. The order was dated October 21st, 1776; in November the pauper was removed; some time afterwards it was agreed between the two parishes, that the question should be decided by an opinion, provided such opinion was given before the 14th day of January, the sessions beginning on the 15th. It was also agreed, that no other instructions should be given to the counsel than the examination of the pauper, which was, that he was born in Witheridge, and about the age of seven years was bound to Richard Elworthy, of Witheridge, with whom he lived till twenty-one, and then made an agreement with his master to give him one guinea to discharge him from his apprenticeship. Elworthy gave him a discharge under his own hand: after different services he gained a settlement by hiring and service under Robert Salter, in Paddington, if he was so far discharged as to be capable of gaining a settlement by hiring and service. On the 10th of January the opinion was given; and was, "That if the indenture of apprenticeship remained in the master's hands uncancelled the apprenticeship still continued, and the agreement was no dissolution thereof, but only a licence to the apprentice to serve where he pleased." On this day the officers of Witheridge told the officers of Paddington, that as the opinion was not decisive, they must inquire of the master what had become of the indenture. At the sessions, on the 15th, no appeal was entered. At Easter sessions following, Paddington appealed, but the justices refused to enter into it. A mandamus was moved for, on the ground that under the agreement the opinion in favour of Paddington was conclusive, and that Paddington had appealed in consequence of objections raised to this decision subsequent to the Epiphany Sessions, and therefore the statutable limitation of appeal to the next sessions ought, during the time the parties were under the terms of compromise, to be suspended: the court being satisfied of the appeal having been prevented in consequence of the objection not having been raised previous to the Epiphany Sessions. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "As both parties had agreed that this question should be submitted to counsel, and that his opinion should conclude, though the court does not quite agree with the counsel in point of law, they would not, had the opinion been positive, have granted the mandamus. Upon the point of law, I am of opinion, that if the indenture had not been destroyed, but remained in the master's hands, the apprentice would yet have gained a subsequent settlement in Paddington. The master received a guinea of his apprentice, then of full age, for the express purpose of vacating the indenture: why should the master after this have used the indenture against the apprentice? So far from it, that the apprentice might have brought an action against the master for it. But the opinion of the counsel was hypothetical only, and upon a state of facts at the time not settled and submitted to him by the parties. The case, therefore, might be considered as open to the interposition of the court. But the merits of the case appearing to be clearly against the party applying, the court, to prevent further litigation and expense, refused the rule; and on account of some misconduct with respect to the affidavits laid before the court by the prosecutors of the rule, directed that it should be discharged with costs out of pocket." Mandamus refused.

An agreement to cancel an indenture by an adult is good.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

Rex v. The East Riding of Yorkshire, Doug. 192. The order had been made on the 22d of September, but the pauper was not removed till the 5th of October. Hull, the place to which the pauper had been removed from Whitby, is sixty miles from Northallerton, where the sessions began on the 6th of October; at which sessions no appeal was entered. At the Epiphany sessions Hull offered an appeal, but the justices refused to hear it. An appeal might have been entered at the Michaelmas sessions on the second or third day. The court said, that by next sessions the statute Car. II. must have meant the next possible sessions, and that here it was impossible for the appellants to lodge their appeal at the Michaelmas sessions. A mandamus granted.

Next sessions means the next possible sessions;

Rex v. Justices of Essex, 1 B. & Ald. 210. Rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding the justices to receive and hear an appeal against an order of removal from Tolleshunt Knights to Washbrook. The order was made on Tuesday, the 8th July, 1817, and was served about twelve o'clock on the following Saturday. The distance between the respondent and appellant parishes was twenty-four miles, and the appellant parish was thirty-seven miles from Chelmsford, where the sessions were held on the Tuesday following, and lasted four days: and by the practice of that sessions a motion to enter and respite the appeal might have been made at any time during the sessions. The parish not having appealed at the July sessions, the justices refused to receive the appeal at the Michaelmas sessions. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The 13 & 14 Car. II. certainly directs the appeal to be at the next quarter sessions, but that must mean the next practicable sessions. The parish officers must have a reasonable time allowed them to make the necessary inquiries, that they may judge of the propriety of appealing or not. The notice here is served on the Saturday. I am of opinion that they are not bound to devote Sunday to such a purpose. They have then only one entire day, i. e. the Monday, to get the necessary information, and to consider whether they will appeal or not; and that, in my judgment, is not sufficient. It has been said, that although the appeal could not have been heard at those sessions, still that it ought to have been entered and respited; but that would only be incurring an useless expense, without conferring any benefit on either party, and was, therefore, quite unnecessary." Rule absolute.

Or the next practicable sessions.

Many of the earlier cases (a) had determined, that it was necessary to

It is not necessary

(a) Rex v. Herefordshire, 3 T. R. 504. The order was made on Friday, the 18th of April; on the 19th the pauper was removed; on Tuesday, the 22nd, the sessions was held at Hereford, twenty miles distant from the parish to which the pauper was removed; at which sessions it is the practice not to receive any appeal after the Tuesday morning. The parish not having appealed at those Easter sessions, the justices at the Midsummer sessions refused to receive the appeal. Lord Kenyon. "The words of the act of parliament are very strong, and they require the appeal to be made at the sessions next after the grievance. Where, indeed, an order of removal has been made some time before, and only executed a very short time before the sessions, so that there was no possibility of appealing to those sessions, this court has interfered, by granting a mandamus to compel the justices at the following sessions to receive the appeal; because the words 'next sessions' mean 'the next possible sessions.' But this is a very different case; for there were two intervening days after the execution of the order, and before the Easter sessions; and if there were not sufficient time, before those sessions, to give reasonable notice of appeal, the appeal might have been then entered and adjourned, according to 9 Geo. III. c. 7, s. 8." The other judges concurring—Rule discharged.

Rex v. J. W. R. York, 4 M. & Sel. 327. An order from a township in the West Riding to Saint Luke, in Middlesex, dated the 3d of January, was executed on the 12th, and the Epiphany sessions for the West Riding were holden on the 18th.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

to enter and respite an appeal, when there is not time to give notice of trial.

enter and respite an appeal at the next sessions, although there was not time to try it then; a more reasonable rule was laid down in Rex v. The Justices of Devon (p. 341). The order of removal from Upottery to Pitminster was served on the 8th of April. The sessions were held on the 15th of April, at Exeter. Pitminster is eight miles from Upottery, and thirty miles from Exeter. The sessions require eight clear days' notice to try an appeal (a). An appeal may be entered and respited without notice. The appeal was not entered at the Easter sessions, but at the July sessions, when they refused to hear it. Lord Tenterden, C. J., said, "It is clear that in this case the appellant could not have tried his appeal at the April sessions, but it was contended that he ought to have entered it then, and adjourned it. The entry for an adjournment only is an useless act, and only occasions unnecessary expense. I think, therefore, he was not bound to enter it at those sessions. One inconvenience only can follow from our holding that it is not necessary under such circumstances to enter the appeal at the first sessions, viz. where the removal is made within eight days of the sessions, so that the parish to which the pauper is removed cannot try their appeal at those sessions, the removing parish may not know of the intention of the other parish to appeal till within eight days before the second sessions. If that should prove an inconvenience, the sessions may remedy it by requiring, under such circumstances, a longer notice." Rule absolute for a mandamus.

Same point.

Rex v. The Justices of Kent, 8 B. & C. 639; 3 M. & R. 15. The order of removal from Lenham to Pluckley was served on the 8th April. The sessions were on the 15th at Maidstone; they require eight clear days' notice to try an appeal. The appeal was first entered at the July sessions; when the order was served, the officer of Pluckley said they should appeal. The officers of Lenham observed that nothing could be done at the April sessions, because there were not eight clear days. The sessions in July refused to hear it. Lord Tenterden, C. J. "We think it reasonable that the parish of Pluckley should have an opportunity of trying their appeal; they may probably have been misled by the observation of the officer of Lenham. Independently of that, it appears to me to have been wholly unnecessary to enter and adjourn the appeal at the first sessions, when they could not then try it." Mandamus granted.

Where the service of the order is delayed, the appellants are not to be prejudiced by it.

Rex v. Southampton, 6 M. & Sel. 394. The order of removal from Ropley to Bentworth was made on the 2nd, and served on the 7th of January. The sessions were on the 14th at Winchester. Eight days' notice is necessary to have an appeal heard. Bentworth is five miles from Ropley, and fifteen from Winchester. The appeal was first entered at the Easter sessions, when they refused to hear it. Lord Ellenborough. "The order was made on the 2nd, and not served till the 7th. What prevented the order's being executed promptly? If it had been served immediately, the appellants might, for anything that appears to the contrary, have gone to the first sessions and tried their case. The respondents having by their own act abridged the time, it seems reasonable that the appellants should be allowed to the next sessions, nunc pro tunc, for this purpose: for where delay has been caused by one party, the most favourable construction should be adopted as regards the other." Abbott, J. "The effect of the delay was to prevent the appellants, if they had been so minded, from

The parish of St. Luke did not appeal to those sessions, but offered to appeal at the Easter sessions in April, when the justices refused to receive it. Le Blanc, J., (in the absence of the Chief Justice,) said, "We do not think that the parish were entitled strictly to pass over the first sessions; but if they had done at the second as much as they ought to have done, the court would have relieved them. The parish might possibly have gone, in the first instance, to the Epiphany sessions, but they have not done this, and have also not placed themselves in a situation to be heard at the second sessions; the court, therefore, do not see a sufficient ground for granting the mandamus." Rule discharged.

(a) The grounds of appeal must now be delivered fourteen days before the sessions. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 81, post.

trying their appeal at the first sessions. Allowing that a satisfactory reason might be given for the delay, still the appellants ought not to be prejudiced by it." Mandamus granted.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

Rex v. Surrey, 1 M. & Sel. 479. Order of removal from Richmond to Mortlake was dated the 11th of January, and executed in the afternoon of that day. The sessions for Surrey began on the 12th. The affidavit stated that there was not sufficient time to procure any information respecting the pauper, or the evidence to support an appeal; notice must be served of their intention to try such appeal, at least six clear days before the sessions. The sessions are always adjourned for a certain time, and appeals are allowed to be lodged at any time during the sitting of the sessions, or at the adjournment held next after the making such order, without requiring notice. The January sessions commenced on the 12th, and lasted fourteen days, when they were adjourned to the 2nd February (which adjournment lasted one day), and again adjourned to the 1st of March, which lasted two days. Newington, where the sessions were holden, was distant eight miles from Mortlake. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The statute does not contemplate the continuance of the sessions. It enacts that the party may appeal 'to the next quarter sessions,' without adding, 'or some adjournment thereof.' It takes the holding of the sessions as the point of time to which it refers the appeal; and the sessions are always considered in law as one day, to whatever period they may by accidental causes be extended. The appellant parish ought to have a reasonable time allowed for considering whether they will appeal or not. The question is, whether the interval between the 11th and 12th of January was a reasonable time for that purpose? We are of opinion that it was not." Bayley, J., referred to Rex v. Flintshire Js. Rule absolute. And see several cases, post.

Time computed from the commencement of the sessions.

The sessions are one day in law.

The appeal may be either at the sessions next after the service of the order and notice, or after the actual removal.

Reg. v. The Justices of Middlesex, 4 Jurist, 1086. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal by Hingham, against an order which had been made for removing to that parish a female pauper and children, from St. Leonard, Shoreditch, it appeared that an order was made on 21st June, 1838. A copy of this order, and of the examination, was sent on the 22nd June to Hingham, with a request, that if there were any objection to the order it might be stated. On the 27th June, the overseers of Hingham gave notice that they should appeal, (but it did not state to what sessions,) "that the grounds of our appeal are," &c., (the grounds were then set forth). According to the practice, the appellants ought to have entered and respited their appeal at the October sessions, 1839, and to have tried their appeal at the January sessions. On the 18th April, 1839, the pauper was actually removed, upon which the overseers of Hingham gave a fresh notice of appeal, and took the proper steps to bring the appeal before the sessions. That court, however, refused to hear the appeal, on the ground that it was too late, and that they had no power to enter on the inquiry. After the argument, Patteson, J., said: "I wish this case had been argued before the full court, I must confess; for the material point being, whether or no a parish, after having given a notice of appeal, under the 79th section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, which they have not followed up by prosecuting an appeal, I say the material point is, whether the parish may, after the actual removal of the pauper, appeal under the old stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2. This I shall not determine without further consideration; and I am sorry it falls on me alone to determine. As to the rest of the case, I think that there is nothing in it, and that the point I have mentioned is clearly raised. A notice was sent, and was received; and as to the affidavit, that it was not meant to be a formal notice, I think it a very bold affidavit, and the man who so swears must be a bold man to say he gave no notice. After the service of the copy of the order of removal, an instrument was sent back in the form:—'We, the overseers of the parish, &c., give notice that we shall appeal, &c., and that the grounds of our appeal are,' &c. After such a notice, I repeat, it was very bold

A parish having given notice of appeal against an order of removal, may abandon that notice; and on the actual removal of the pauper may give fresh notice.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

swearing to say, that it was not a notice within the stat. 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 79. But whether, after that notice, and after the time has been suffered to elapse for following up that notice by an appeal, whether the right to appeal under the stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2, is taken away, has not been decided, and none of the cases that have been referred to touch the point. Under the recent act, the parish may appeal before an actual removal takes place, the clause giving a power of appeal on the order of removal being made, though it is not carried into effect; and all that the court has decided in the cases referred to is, that although the parish may appeal under the recent act before an actual removal, yet they are not bound to do so, and that they may still appeal under the stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. where an actual removal takes place. It has only been decided that the parish has a choice, and that because they do not act under the modern statute, the right to act under the old is not taken away. But it has not been decided in any case, because a parish begins to act under the recent statute, and does not follow up their proceedings, that, therefore, they cannot proceed under the old act. It is a point of consequence, and I shall take time to consider it." Afterwards, Patteson, J., gave judgment. "This was a rule for a writ of mandamus to the sessions to hear an appeal; and the question is, whether the appellant parish having given notice of appeal within twenty-one days after they received the order of removal, under the 79th section of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, and not having prosecuted such appeal, can, upon the subsequent removal of the pauper, appeal against the order under the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2. On the argument, I expressed my decided opinion, that what took place here amounted to a notice of appeal by the appellant parish; on consideration, I entirely adhere to that opinion, and I also think that the reasons adduced to shew that the question I have above stated does not arise, are insufficient. The question itself is of some importance in regulating the practice. This court has several times held, that the parish officers are not bound to avail themselves of the 79th section, but may suffer the twenty-one days to elapse, and appeal to the next sessions after the actual removal. They have considered that the appellant parish may treat itself as a party grieved by the order of removal before actual removal, by the necessary operation of the enactment of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, or may wait till they are grieved by the actual removal. Further than this, the decisions have not gone; the facts not having, prior to the present case, raised the question now to be determined. I have no doubt, that if the appellant parish had lodged and prosecuted an appeal in pursuance of their notice, and had failed, whether on a point of form or on the merits, and the pauper had afterwards been removed, as the 79th section directs, the appellant parish could not have appealed again. The R. v. Justices W. R. of Yorkshire, 3 T. R. 776, is an express authority for the principle on which I should so hold; and, indeed, the learned counsel did not dispute that point. The dictum of Mr Justice Buller in that same case is also an authority to shew, that a notice of appeal not followed up, will preclude a party from giving a fresh notice and appealing thereon, provided it is in proper time. Supposing it to be the first notice, the principle of that dictum applies to the present case; and as the 84th section of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, gives the expenses of maintenance to the respondent parish, if successful, from the time of their giving notice of the chargeability, no material injury arises to them from the delay. Looking, therefore, at all the enactments of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, relating to this subject, and not finding anything which shews that the legislature intends the notice of appeal, not followed up and prosecuted, to deprive the appellant parish of their remedy upon the actual removal of the pauper, and finding no absurdity or inconsistency involved in holding that they did not so intend, I feel myself bound to hold, that the appellant parish might expressly or tacitly abandon their first notice of appeal, and take their remedy after the actual removal. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the appellant parish was not too late, and that this rule must be made absolute."

The first notice however must not be prosecuted.

Reg. v. Justices of Cheshire, 7 Jurist, 370. This was a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal between the parishes of Ulkindon and Duddon. The order of removal was made on the 22nd February. Notice, by post, was sent to the overseers on the 25th, with a copy of the order, &c., and would be received on the following day. The next quarter sessions were held on the 29th March. This order was made more than thirty days before that time. The overseers of the appellant parish did not appeal within twenty-one days. The pauper was removed on the 12th April. The next sessions were held on the 28th June. At those sessions, without sending notice to the respondents, the appellants entered and respited. Notice of appeal to try at the following October sessions was served on the 2nd October, six months after the actual removal. These sessions took place on the 18th, when it was objected that the appeal was too late. Wightman, J. "It appears to me, that the order must be taken as made after the March sessions. If so, then, by the practice, it is not necessary to appeal to the Midsummer sessions; and, in that event, the appellants were in time at the October sessions. The language of Mr. Justice Patteson, in R. v. Justices of Middlesex, is in consonance with this opinion. He there says: 'Looking at all the enactments of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, relating to this subject, and not finding anything which shews that the Legislature intended a notice of appeal, not followed up and prosecuted, to deprive the appellant parish of its remedy upon the actual removal of the pauper; and finding no absurdity or inconsistency involved in holding that it did not so intend, I feel myself bound to hold, that the appellant parish might expressly or tacitly abandon their first notice of appeal, and take their remedy after the actual removal.' I think, therefore, that the present rule must be made absolute." Rule absolute.

3. Within what Time the Appeal must be made.

The appeal may be to the next sessions after the removal, though a previous sessions had been held more than twenty-one days after service of the order, &c.

---

4. Entering Appeal after Executed Order is Superseded.

Rex v. The Justices of Norfolk, 5 B. & Ald. 484; 1 D. & R. 69. A rule nisi was obtained for a mandamus to enter continuances and hear an appeal against an order of removal. The removal had taken place on the 22nd of August, and on the 5th of September notice of appeal was given. On the 10th of October, a supersedeas, under the hands and seals of the removing magistrates, was served on the officers of the appellant parish, stating, that doubts had been entertained whether the order could be supported by legal evidence, and requiring them to deliver up the duplicate order to be cancelled, and also requiring the other party to take back the pauper. This was done at the instance of the respondents, the order having been founded on the examination of Edward George, taken under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 28, and that, he being a prisoner convicted and under sentence for larceny, his examination was not evidence, he himself not being an admissible witness until the expiration of his sentence. It did not appear whether the costs of maintenance between the 22nd of August and the 10th of October had been tendered by the respondents. On the 17th of October application was made to the sessions for leave to enter the appeal, which was refused, the court being of opinion that the order was at an end. Pancras v. Rumbold was cited as an authority to show, that though the justices may supersede an order before, they cannot do so after it is executed. Bayley, J. "This is a very different case from Pancras v. Rumbold, which is only an authority to show that the justices having been surprised into making an order, may of their own authority, and without the consent of the removing parish, supersede it before execution, but not after. But in this case there is the consent of the removing parish. The language of Lord Ellenborough, in Rex v. Diddlebury (p. 1088), puts it upon that very ground, for he says, 'There are two ways of getting rid of

4. Entering Appeal after Executed Order is Superseded.

Where an order of removal has been executed, and by consent of the removing parish, and the magistrates making it, it is superseded, and the paupers taken back, it is in the discretion of the sessions to enter an appeal against it or not, according as they may think justice requires it, in order to compel the respondents to pay the costs of maintenance, &c., incurred by the appellants before the order was superseded. (a)

(a) In Reg. v. Townstal, p. 1110 during the argument Lord Denman observed, "There was a supersedeas in Pancras v. Rumbold, but that case only decided what magistrates could do, and J. Bayley, commenting on it in Rex v. Norfolk, seems to be of opinion that the consent of the parish is enough without a supersedeas. I do not believe that any judge ever considered a supersedeas necessary."

4. Entering Appeal after Executed Order is Superseded.

an order, one by consent of the parish in whose favour it is made to abandon it, the other by appeal;' and he adds afterwards, 'What objection can there be, as Lord Mansfield observed in Rex v. Llanrhydd (post), to a party's abandoning a judgment intended for his own benefit?' These observations show that the consent of the removing parish alone is requisite. I think that in cases like this the sessions may exercise a discretion, and enter the appeal or not, so as best to answer the purposes of justice. If the parties removing do not choose to pay the expenses of maintenance incurred previously to the supersedeas, they may then enter the appeal, for the purpose of compelling them so to do. If they are willing to do it, the sessions may refuse to enter the appeal. Here the only object of entering it would be, either to obtain a decision from the sessions, in the absence of a material witness, or to respite the appeal from time to time. In the latter case, there would be an useless expense entailed upon the parties. As soon as George is discharged from prison a new order may be made; and it is better for the appellants that it should be so, for they will not be compelled to keep the family in the mean time. I think, therefore, that it was entirely in the discretion of the sessions to enter the appeal or not; and I do not see any ground why this court should interfere with their decision. This rule for a mandamus must be discharged." Best, J. "The principle upon which this court proceeds, in issuing the writ of mandamus, is to prevent a failure of justice. Here the very reverse would be the effect. For we should either compel the sessions to hear the case in the absence of the person who can give the most material information, or put the parties to the useless expense of obtaining respites from time to time, till his imprisonment be over." Rule discharged.

We have already observed, that the parties may, in certain cases, supersede their own order, still it may be necessary, for the ends of justice, to enter an appeal against it. In the Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, ante, the court seemed to think that they had no jurisdiction to do so; but in the following case such power was distinctly recognised:—

Where the respondents abandon their order, but do not pay the costs, the appellants have a right to enter their appeal at the sessions to compel the payment of such costs.

By the order of sessions in Cheshire, all appeals are to be entered with the clerk of the peace at the opening of the court at which they are to be heard, when the order or a copy is to be delivered to him. The appellants, on entering their appeal, filed with the clerk of the peace a copy of the order The original order was not before the court, and no notice had been given to produce it. The order of sessions is sufficiently complied with.

Reg. v. Townstal; Reg. v. Stayley; 7 Jurist, 463; 1 Q. B. 376. The sessions for the borough of Clifton Dartmouth Hardness, on appeal, quashed an order of removal, subject to a case:—This was an appeal against an order dated the 23rd September, 1842, for the removal of J. Tucker from Townstal to Stokefleming. On the 6th of October following, the parish of Stokefleming served notice of appeal, and at the same time delivered the grounds of appeal. On the 8th of October, the respondent's attorney informed the attorney for the appellants, that the respondents would abandon their order, and were ready to pay the costs of the appellants, to which no consent was given. On the 11th of October, a notice was served by the respondents on the overseers of Stokefleming stating that they abandoned the order, and were ready to pay all such lawful and reasonable costs as may have been incurred in consequence of such order, and that a fresh order for the removal of the said James Tucker and his said children from and out of our said parish of Townstal to your said parish of Stokefleming. The appellants would not consent to the abandonment of the order; and on the 12th October, an appeal was entered by their attorney with the clerk of the peace for trial at the following sessions, held on the 27th October. At the sessions the respondents insisted, that the order having been abandoned, the appeal should be dismissed. The sessions overruled the objection, on the ground that, without the consent of the appellant parish, or a supersedeas, the abandonment was ineffectual. The court then proceeded to hear the appeal, and quashed the order of removal. If the court shall be of opinion that the order of removal had been effectually abandoned, the appeal shall be dismissed; but if the court shall be of a contrary opinion, the order of removal to stand quashed. Reg. v. Stayley. The Cheshire sessions, on appeal, quashed an order. Case:—This was an appeal against an order for the removal of B. Johnson from Stayley to Wooldale. Notice of appeal against this order, with the grounds proving several objections to the examination, was served fourteen days before the sessions next following, but the pauper was not removed. On the 23rd of June, and in time to prevent the incurring of any further expenses by the appellants going to the sessions, the respondents gave them notice of the abandonment of the order, on the ground that they had discovered that it could not be supported, by reason of the examination on which it was founded being inaccurate as to certain dates and other matters which did not affect the settlement of the pauper; but that the respondents still insisted that such pauper was legally settled in Wooldale, and that, should he continue chargeable, they would immediately apply for another order to remove him to Wooldale. There was no mention made of paying the costs already incurred by the appellant's township in preparing notices of appeal, in subpœnas, journeys to examine pauper, preparation of brief for counsel, and many other expenses; nor in fact were any of these expenses paid before the appellants had entered their appeal, and obtained the adjudication of the court of quarter sessions; nor had any application for such costs been made, or notice of any intended application been given, until the counsel for the appellants moved for them in court. Notwithstanding the service of this abandonment of the order, the appellants, at the sessions on the 27th June, 1842, and without giving respondents any further notice, entered their appeal for trial, having filed with the clerk of the peace a copy only of the order of removal, together with a copy of the examinations, and with the notice of chargeability. When the appeal was called, the appellants moved to quash the order, which the respondents did not appear to support, and for the costs of the appeal, this application was resisted by the respondents, (who were attending the sessions upon other business), on the grounds that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter, inasmuch as no original order was before it, and no notice to produce such original having been given, the paper filed as a copy could not be used; and that after the order had been abandoned for want of sufficiency in the examination, and as the notice of abandonment expressly stated, on no other account whatsoever, it could not entertain the appeal for the purpose of quashing the order which had been already abandoned. The appellants cited the orders of the court, that all appeals intended to be tried at any quarter sessions, whether the same shall have been lodged at a prior sessions or not, are to be entered with the clerk of the peace at the opening of the court at the sessions or adjournment at which the same are to be heard, when the order or proceeding appealed against, or a copy thereof, is to be delivered to him; and no appeal shall be called on for trial which shall not have been so entered. Appellants submitted that they had complied with the rules and practice of the court, in giving a copy of the order to the clerk of the peace. The appellants also contended, that respondents were too late in their notice, the rules of the quarter sessions requiring that notice of countermand of trial, of either traverse or appeal, is to be given six clear days before the commencement of each sessions, and that all other notices are to be given ten clear days before the first day of the sessions. The court quashed the order for want of form, and granted full costs to the appellants. Lord Denman. "It is much to be lamented, that there is a want of security for costs in the event of an abandonment of an order of removal by the respondents, upon the discovery of some defect in the examination. There is no other method of proceeding provided, and appellants have a right to go to the court of quarter sessions, and to enter their appeal if they think proper. We think there is nothing in the other objection—viz., that the appellants could not give evidence to a copy served on them." Patteson, J. "I am anxious to afford every facility to the abandonment of an order by a removing parish, when a defect is pointed out by the statement of the grounds of appeal; but there is no doubt a difficulty as to costs. It appears that in one of these cases there was an offer to pay, but no specific sum was mentioned; and if the parishes cannot agree between themselves, there is no other course but to go to the court of quarter sessions. Williams, J. "A tender is open to this observation by the opposite party. We will take all reasonable costs, but who but the court of quarter sessions is to say what are reasonable costs? The order of sessions must be confirmed in each case."

4. Entering Appeal after Executed Order is Superseded.

4. Entering Appeal after Executed Order is Superseded.

A removing parish may abandon its own order of removal.
It is most convenient that an order abandoned should be formally superseded.
In order to compel payment of costs, the appellants have a right to go to sessions, notwithstanding all proper steps have been taken by the respondents towards abandoning their order.
An order of removal had been made on the 27th January, and suspended. Notice of appeal, with a statement of the grounds of appeal, had been served on the 2nd March, to the effect that the examination did not sufficiently state the particulars of the settlement; and hereupon the removing parish procured a supersedeas of the order, and served the appellants with notice of it and of the abandonment.
The appellants proceeded to the sessions, and applied to enter their appeal, which was refused.
Upon motion for a mandamus to the justices to enter continuances and hear the appeal, the court refused to let the writ go, as it had not been shown that any expenses had been incurred by the appellants or any demand made by them on the respondents, which the latter had refused to satisfy.

Reg. v. J. Anglesea, 7 Jurist, 701. The facts are fully stated in the judgment of Coleridge, J. "This was a rule for a mandamus to enter continuances and hear an appeal against an order of removal. The order had been made on the 27th January, and suspended. Notice of appeal, however, had been served, with a statement of the ground of such appeal, on the 2nd March. The ground stated was, that the examination did not sufficiently state the particulars of the settlement; whereupon the removing parish procured a supersedeas of the order, and served the appellants with notice of it and of abandonment. The appellants, however, proceeded to sessions, and applied to the court to be allowed to enter their appeal, which, upon argument, was refused. It seems to me now very fully established, that a removing parish may abandon its own order of removal. In Reg. v. St. Pancras (p. 1047), the language of the court is, that "an order of removal is merely a warrant to enable the parish officers to remove the paupers, but they are not obliged to carry it into effect." To this abandonment by the parties has, in many cases, been added a formal supersede as by the removing magistrates of their own order; and the degree of importance to be attached to this supersedeas has varied in different reported cases. That the order, whenever it is abandoned by the party, should also be formally superseded by the magistrate, is undoubtedly most convenient as a mode of authenticating satisfactorily the abandonment, and furnishing the most conclusive evidence against any subsequent attempt to set up the order when it may be too late to appeal against it. But it is doubted whether the magistrates are not functi officio as soon as they have sealed and delivered their order; in making the order they exercise a statutable power, and no statute in terms gives them authority to supersede the order when once made. I should have thought, however, that such a power was almost necessarily incident to that of making the order, so long as it remained unexecuted, and there are not wanting decisions which give countenance to this opinion. If I were clearly right in this opinion, the consequence would be, that there could be no appeal to the sessions, for there would be no order in existence to appeal against, and the appellate jurisdiction of that court depends on the existence of the original order. This again is full of inconvenience, because if it be understood that no appeal can be entered when an order has been superseded and abandoned, removing parishes will often be found procuring the supersedeas behind the backs of appellants, without notice to them, and after considerable expense incurred, without paying them any indemnity. In support of this view, I was referred to two very recent decisions of the court, Reg. v. Townstal, and Reg. v. Stayley, and in the first there had been abandonment, and an offer to pay all reasonable costs; in the second there had been an abandonment, but no such offer; in both the sessions had allowed appeals to be entered after objection, and quashed the order, subject to cases; in both instances they were held to have done right, and their orders were confirmed. It was not necessary in either to decide on the effect of the supersedeas. The orders being in existence, the sessions undoubtedly might have jurisdiction, but Lord Denman, C. J., in the course of the argument, is reported to have placed abandonment and supersedeas on the same footing; and his judgment proceeds on the ground, that, in order to compel payment of costs, the appellants have a right to go to sessions, notwithstanding all proper steps have been taken by the respondents towards abandoning their order. This decision, for the reason I have stated, is consonant to justice, and of course binds me; if, therefore, the sessions in this case had received the appeal and adjudicated on it, I could not have interfered with that exercise of their jurisdiction; and if it had been shewn that any expenses had been incurred by the appellants, any demand made by them on the respondents, which the latter refused to satisfy, acting on the spirit of those decisions, I must have made this rule absolute. But as nothing of the sort was made to appear before me, and the case rested solely on the abstract right, and as the sessions would not be bound to give any costs if they heard the appeal, I should do no good if I directed the writ to go, but only encourage a vexatious spirit of litigation, and occasion useless expense. Without, therefore, in the least questioning those decisions, I think I may discharge this rule, and, under the circumstances, without costs." Rule discharged accordingly.

4. Entering Appeal after Executed Order is Superseded.

---

5. Of Entering and respiting the Appeal, and of Adjournment.

5. Of Entering and Respiting the Appeal, and of Adjournment.

In a preceding chapter, we have seen that it is not necessary to enter and respite an appeal at the sessions next after the execution of the order, unless there is time to try it; even then the sessions are not bound to enter an appeal.

The court is not bound to enter and respite the appeal, except on such terms for the payment of costs by the appellants as their rules required.

Rex v. Monmouthshire J. 1 B. & A. 859. An order was made August, 1830, and notice of appeal duly served on the 8th of October, for the sessions to be held at Usk, on the 18th, such notice being sufficient according to the practice of the sessions. The parties attended at Usk on the 18th, and at a late hour of the day, the appeal not having then been entered, the appellants moved to enter and adjourn it on an affidavit stating the absence of a material witness. The respondents, who had come prepared to try, and had received no countermand, opposed the granting of the motion, unless they were paid their costs of the day. The appellants offered forty shillings, the costs usually awarded by the practice of the sessions to the party succeeding on an appeal. The respondents declined this, but proposed to refer the amount to the clerk of the peace, and the court refused to allow the appeal to be entered and respited, unless the appellants should agree to pay the costs of the day, this being conformable to the practice of the sessions in cases where due notice had been given and not countermanded. The appellants would not consent, and the appeal was not entered. A rule was obtained calling on the justices to show cause why they should not enter continuances and hear the appeal. Lord Tenterden, C. J. "Entering the appeal is a mere nothing. The motion was to enter and adjourn. The justices consented to respite if the appellants would pay the costs of the day. That being declined, I think the justices exercised a very proper discretion in refusing the adjournment. The rule must be discharged." The rest of the court concurred. Rule discharged with costs.

The sessions may adjourn an appeal for further consideration;

Rex v. King's Langley, 2 Salk. 605; 1 Lord Raym. 481. Upon an appeal against an order of removal, the justices adjourned the appeal for further consideration. And it was held by the whole court, they may well adjourn an appeal upon debate for further consideration.

and ought to do so where justices are divided.

Bodmin v. Warligen, 2 Bott, 982. On an appeal against an order of removal, the justices were divided, and the clerk of the peace made an entry that the appeal was lodged, and nothing done in it. And the court held, that, under these circumstances, the clerk of the peace ought to have entered an adjournment.

Style of the sessions where they are adjourned.

Where the sessions itself is adjourned, the style of the sessions ought not to run, at such a sessions held by adjournment, but the time of the first meeting of the sessions ought to be set forth, and that the same was continued to such further time by adjournment, as in Rex v. Hindercleave, 19 Vin. Abr. 356; 2 Bott, 956. An order made at the general quarter sessions of the peace, held by adjournment, was quashed, because it did not appear that this was the next general quarter sessions; for it might be that the sessions was begun and continued by adjournment before the order was made.

Rex v. Heptonstall, Burr. S. C. 88; 2 Bott, 731. The sessions was said to be holden on such a day by adjournment, and it did not appear when the original sessions was holden. Order was quashed for that cause.

A quarter sessions once dropped cannot be resumed.

Rex v. Polstead, 2 Stra. 1263; 2 Bott, 986. Appeal was made to the sessions in Suffolk, held April 7th, 1766, against an order of removal. The sessions was adjourned to April 9th, at Woodbridge, where for want of a sufficient number of justices nothing could be done. April 11th, a sessions was held at Ipswich, and adjourned to the 14th, at Bury, where the appeal was allowed. It was moved to quash the order of sessions, as made without jurisdiction, the sessions ending for want of an adjournment at Woodbridge. And of that opinion was the court; for the words in 2 Hen. V. c. 4, and more often if need be, were never considered as giving more than one original sessions in a quarter, but only empowering adjournments. The county must take notice of adjournments, but are not supposed to expect a new sessions till the usual time. And the order of sessions was quashed.

5. Of Entering and Respiting the Appeal, and of Adjournment.

There must be an adjournment from place to place, where the sessions are held at different places.

Rex v. West Torrington, Burr. S. C. 293. The sessions was held at Kirton; and from thence adjourned to Caistor, at which place no sessions was held pursuant to the said adjournment. Afterwards, a sessions was held at Horncastle; and the appeal was determined there. By the Court: "The sessions at Horncastle could not take up the appeal, for want of jurisdiction. A quarter sessions must be holden four times in a year, as directed by the statute; and it may be adjourned from time to time, and from place to place; but if it is once dropped, it cannot be resumed."

Order confirmed at the sessions without hearing the appellants quashed by court of K. B.

Road v. North Bradley, 2 Stra. 1168. A pauper was removed from Road to North Bradley. North Bradley gave notice of appeal; on which Road took him back, but however got their order confirmed at sessions. The next sessions set both aside as fraudulent. And now Road insisted that the order was good, as not being appealed from at the next quarter sessions: and as to the other, that it was not in the power of one sessions to set aside the act of the other. All being now before the court they quashed the first order, as being properly quashable on appeal: and would not take notice, that it was not at the next sessions after service of the order, which being in the case of a recent appeal, they would suppose to have been served too late for an appeal to the next sessions. And as to the order of confirmation, they quashed that, as not being made on any appeal, and, consequently, without jurisdiction; and at the same time quashed the latter part of the second sessions' order, that rescinded that confirmation, as not being properly before them.

The sessions are not bound to adjourn the hearing, in order to cure a defect in the grounds of appeal.

Reg. v. J. of Staffordshire, 7 Jurist, 66; 11 L. J. 9, M. C. On a rule for a mandamus, to enter an appeal of the overseers of Ramshor against an order of removal, it appeared that a copy of the order of removal was served by the overseers of Kingsley on the overseers of Ramshor, on the 29th July, 1842; on the 18th August, Ramshor gave notice of appeal, and on the 1st October notice of the grounds of appeal were given. The appeal was entered, and on the 19th October the sessions were held, when the appellants having ascertained that the grounds of appeal, the material parts of which were as follows, were too general, applied to adjourn the appeal upon paying the respondent the costs of the day. The chairman expressed his willingness to grant the application if a case could be cited where an appellant parish had been allowed to respite an appeal for the purpose of curing a defect in the grounds of appeal; a case was cited where the appellants had given the notice of the grounds of appeal in time, and subsequently a fresh one not in time, where the court had allowed the appellants to respite, and proceed on the second notice. The application, however, was refused, the respondents contending that the court had no power to adjourn the hearing of the appeal. The grounds of appeal were held to be bad, and the order of removal confirmed. Wightman, J. "The difficulty I feel is this: the court of quarter sessions have refused to adjourn the case. They have not reserved any point for this court. Unless they were bound to adjourn the case, I do not see how we can interfere, and the rule must be discharged with costs."

---

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8. Reasonable notice is to be given of appeal.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

By 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, "No appeal or appeals from any order or orders of removal of any poor person or persons whatsoever, from any parish or place to another, shall be proceeded upon in any court or quarter sessions, unless reasonable notice be given by the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of such parish or place who shall make such appeal, unto the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of such parish or place from which such poor person or persons shall be removed; the reasonableness of which notice shall be determined by the justices of the peace at the quarter sessions to which the appeal is made: and if it shall appear to them that reasonable time of notice was not given, then they shall adjourn the said appeal to the next quarter sessions, and then and there finally hear and determine the same.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

But now overseers are required, fourteen days before the sessions, to give a statement of the grounds of appeal, and without it they cannot be heard, nor can they give evidence of any ground of appeal not there set forth in such statement.

The grounds of appeal must be delivered fourteen days before the sessions.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 81. "That after the 1st day of November, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, in every case where notice of appeal against such order shall be given, the overseers or guardians of the parish appealing against such order, or any three or more of such guardians, shall with such notice, or fourteen days at least before the first day of the sessions at which such appeal is intended to be tried, send or deliver to the overseers of the respondent parish a statement in writing under their hands of the grounds of such appeal: and it shall not be lawful for the overseers of such appellant parish to be heard in support of such appeal, unless such notice and statement shall have been so given as aforesaid: provided always, that it shall not be lawful for the respondent or appellant parish, on the hearing of any appeal, to go into or give evidence of any other grounds of removal, or of appeal against any order of removal, than those set forth in such respective order, examination, or statement as aforesaid."

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 81.

Grounds of appeal to be stated in notice.

Sect. 82. "That upon every such appeal the court before whom the same shall be brought shall and may, if they think fit, order and direct the parish against which the same shall be decided to pay to the other such costs and charges as may to such court appear just and reasonable, and shall certify the amount thereof; and in case the overseers of the poor of the parish liable to pay the same, shall upon demand, and upon the production of such certificate, refuse or neglect to pay the same, the amount thereof may be recovered from such overseer in the same manner as any penalties or forfeitures are by this act recoverable."

Parish losing appeal to pay such costs as court may direct.

Sect. 83. "That if either of the parties shall have included in the order or statement sent as hereinbefore directed any grounds of removal or of appeal, which shall in the opinion of the justices determining the appeal be frivolous and vexatious, such party shall be liable, at the discretion of the said justices, to pay the whole or any part of the costs incurred by the other party in disputing any such grounds, such costs to be recovered in the manner hereinbefore directed as to the other costs incurred by reason of such appeal."

Party making frivolous and vexatious statement to pay costs.

The sessions cannot refuse to hear an appeal because the appellant parish had not two legal overseers, one of them claiming an exemption which had not been allowed. Rex v. J. Cheshire, 8 Dowl. 616.

Appeal by two overseers de facto, but one claiming exemption, is good.

The court of sessions have a right to make rules to fix the time when notice of appeal shall be given, (see Rex v. J. Devon, p. 341). In some counties fourteen days' notice is required, in others eight days; in others it is to be given on or before the Monday in the week next before the sessions. Hence it was necessary in each case to inquire into the practice of each quarter sessions.

Sessions may fix time of notice.

Rex v. J. Warwickshire, 2 N. & P. 153; 6 A. & E. 879. The parish of Solihull appealed against an order of removal from the parish of Norton Lindsey. The grounds of appeal had been served upon T. Canning the churchwarden, and also one of the overseers of Norton Lindsey, but not upon the other overseer. The sessions thought the service insufficient, and dismissed the appeal. The notice of appeal, and the grounds thereof, had been signed by four churchwardens and two overseers, but there was an assistant overseer who had not signed. On a rule for a mandamus to hear Grounds of appeal signed by the majority of parish officers, is good, and service on one of the officers only is good, if without fraud.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

the appeal, Lord Denman said, "We have no hesitation in deciding that the statement of the grounds of appeal, signed by a majority of the parish officers is good, and that service on one of them, if without fraud, is also good." Littledale, J., concurred. Patteson, J. "This decision will get rid for ever of all questions that can be raised on the point." Williams, J., concurred. Rule absolute.

Delivery of grounds of appeal to an attorney acting on behalf of the overseers of the respondent parish, is insufficient.

Where no statement of the grounds of an appeal have been delivered, the sessions may respite the appeal.

Rex v. Kimbolton, 1 N. & P. 666; 6 A. & E. 603. Mary, wife of R. Phillips, a convicted felon, and her children, were removed from Kimbolton to Leominster; the appeal was adjourned, subject to a case. The notice of appeal was served upon the overseers of Kimbolton on the 10th September, 1835, and on the 3d of October the attorney for the appellants served the grounds of appeal, signed by the overseers of Leominster, upon Mr. Dipple, as the attorney of the overseers of Kimbolton, who accepted the same on their behalf. It was objected, that assuming that Mr. Dipple was the attorney employed by the respondents in this appeal (which the respondents said they were able to disprove), still the service was insufficient, as the statement was not served upon the overseers themselves, and the sessions were of this opinion. The appellants then applied to the court to adjourn the appeal to the next sessions, which the court ordered to be done. The question was, whether under these circumstances the sessions had power to adjourn the appeal. Littledale, J. "It seems to me that the sessions had power to adjourn. A general power to that effect is undoubtedly vested in them, and in every court at common law. But it is said in this case that it is useless for them to exercise it, because the statement of grounds is a condition precedent, and therefore if it be a nullity the appeal can never be heard. To that I cannot assent. The statute says that the appellants cannot be heard unless they have given a statement of grounds; it does not say the appeal cannot be adjourned. With respect to the service of notice on the attorney, I think it insufficient. It does, no doubt, in this instance appear that the person so served was the attorney for the respondent parish in this appeal: but when the service took place, the appeal was not, properly speaking, commenced; and at all events I think the service should have been on the overseers themselves. Under s. 79 of the same act, notice, preliminary to a removal, sent by an attorney is insufficient, and on comparing that section with s. 81, the latter appears to require a similar interpretation. Under 41 Geo. III. c. 23, s. 4, it is requisite that notice of appeal against a poor's rate should be signed by the persons giving it, or their attorney, and served on the churchwardens and overseers: this shows that where it is intended that the signing of notice by an attorney shall be equivalent to signing by the party, the legislature expresses that intention; and the same reasoning holds good as to service on the attorney." Patteson, J. "With respect to the service of this notice, I think we must abide by the letter of the act, and hold it insufficient. But the sessions had authority to adjourn, although not bound to do so in this instance, as they were under 9 Geo. I. c. 7, which does not apply here. The act does not say that an appeal shall not be received if no statement of grounds is given, only that it shall not be heard; it is therefore within the general jurisdiction of the court to adjourn it, and a new statement of grounds might be given fourteen days before the following sessions. The observations of Lord Ellenborough in Rex v. J. Wilts, (a) are particularly in point: the sessions have jurisdiction to adjourn where the appeal is properly lodged, and there is no doubt that it is so in this instance." Coleridge, J. "The only question is, whether the appeal was well lodged at the sessions. It appears to me that it was so. Supposing a removal had taken place so short a time before the sessions that the court could not try it, and the appellants could not deliver a statement, the court might adjourn it to the next sessions, and that would be precisely the same case. In Rex v. J. Lincolnshire (b) the question turned on the words of 49 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 7, that no bastardy appeal is to be brought, received, or heard, unless notice be given pursuant to the act; and there the court held, that such notice not having been given, the sessions could not enter

Power to adjourn.

Service of notice.

(a) 13 East, 352.

(b) 3 B. & C. 544.

the appeal: here the word is only 'heard,' which does not exclude a power to receive and enter; and then the power to adjourn is only that which every court must incidentally exercise for the purpose of justice, unless restrained by express enactment. Under these circumstances I do not think it necessary for us to decide whether the notice was well served, but I am of opinion it was not."

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

A guardian of a Union cannot sign.

Reg. v. J. Surrey, 8 Jurist, 379; 1 Car. H. & A. 124. On a rule for a mandamus, to hear an appeal against an order of removal from Whembedan to All Hallows, London, it appeared that the notice of appeal concluded thus,—"Now we the undersigned churchwardens and overseers of All Hallows do give you notice."

(Signed) W. R., and T. G.; for W. H., W. H. P. } Churchwardens and Overseers of All Hallows. J. E., Guardian.

A churchwarden cannot sign by a deputy, without express authority.

On the trial it was objected, that this notice was not signed by a majority of the overseers, and on this objection the court dismissed the appeal. By the affidavits it appeared that All Hallows formed part of a union, and that J. E. was the guardian. At the time of signing the notice, W. H., one of the churchwardens, was absent, and unable personally to sign the notice. No proof was given that W. P. H. had authority to sign for W. H., in that his signature was sanctioned subsequently. Lord Denman, C. J. "The sessions were quite right in refusing to hear the appeal upon this notice. It may be an unpleasant function to dismiss an appeal upon such an objection, for where the act of parliament requires that a document should be sent under the authority of the signatures of certain officers, it is the duty of the court to see that it has those signatures. Now, the signing by one person for another does not by itself make it the act of the other person; and, as to the deliberation which it is suggested that the act of signing implies, it may be the deliberation of the party signing, not of the party for whom the signature is given. Then, as to the signature by the guardian, he is not a guardian of the parish for this purpose. The 36th section gives a particular power to a sole guardian, but there is nothing in the act which says that guardians are parish officers in any other view, except the interpretation clause." Patteson, J. "I am of the same opinion. The 81st section of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, does not require that the notice should be signed by a majority of the parish officers; if it did, it might be difficult to say who are parish officers for that purpose under the interpretation clause. Where there is a union of parishes under the act, the guardians elected in each parish to form a board for the union are guardians for the union, and have no authority to sign a notice of appeal. The word 'guardian' in s. 81 applies only to the case of a single parish, not associated with others in a union, provided for in s. 39, when the order of removal would be to the guardians of the poor." Wightman, J. "In order to make the signature of an agent the signature of the principal, it should appear to have his authority, of which in this case there is no evidence. The signature depends only upon the profession of the party writing the signature. Then it is said that the signature of the guardian will make the signing of the document complete, because a guardian is one of the parish officers; but the 38th section contains an express exclusion of his having any authority except as a member, and at a board of guardians. It is clear that this act is not an act done by him in pursuance of his authority as guardian. Rule discharged.

Notice signed by eight officers does not estop the parish from showing there were only four. (a)

Where an appellant parish gives a notice of appeal against an order of removal, signed by eight parish officers, and afterwards a statement of grounds of appeal signed by four only, they are not estopped from showing that the latter is signed by the proper number. Reg. v. Church Knowle, post.

The notice of appeal must be

Rex v. Suffolk, 5 Nev. & M. 503; 4 A. & E. 319. On a rule for a mandamus, it appeared that on 17th September, 1835, an order of removal

(a) On an application for an order in bastardy, it was held that one overseer could not sign the notice, as the agent of another overseer. (Rex v. Cambridge, 7 A. & E. 480).

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

given according to the ordinary practice of the sessions.
It need not be given within twenty-one days after notice of the order.

was made, and a copy, with a copy of the examinations, and a notice of chargeability on the following day transmitted to the overseers of Manningtree; on the 9th of October, the overseers of Manningtree sent to the overseers of the removing parish a notice of appeal for the next sessions to be holden for the borough of Ipswich, accompanied with the grounds of appeal; on the 13th October, the overseers of Manningtree discovering that they had erroneously given notice of appeal to the borough sessions, sent to the overseers of the removing parish a notice of appeal for the next quarter sessions for the county of Suffolk, and referred to the grounds of appeal sent with the former notice. By the rules of the Suffolk sessions eight days' notice of appeal is sufficient; on the 17th October, the appellants had given notice of an intention to respite their appeal, as a witness was ill; on the 23d October, the sessions commenced, and the justices considering that notice of appeal ought to have been given within twenty-one days from the notice of chargeability, refused to hear the appeal. Lord Denman. "I think that by this act it was not intended to interfere with the practice of the sessions. Such an intention, if it had been entertained, would have been expressed in plain terms. It appears to me, therefore, that the practice as to notices of appeal must stand exactly as it did before the act passed. The act requires that a statement of the grounds of appeal shall be given with the notice, or at least fourteen days before the commencement of the sessions. It appears to me that this was done on the 9th October, for that though the notice of appeal which accompanied the statement was a notice to the wrong sessions, yet the statement of the grounds of appeal was available to all purposes. As, therefore, the notice was in due time according to the practice of the sessions, and the statement of the grounds of appeal was sufficiently early under the act of parliament, the sessions ought to have entertained the appeal." Patteson, J. "The notice on the 9th of October stated the grounds of appeal. That is a compliance with the act. If it be an absurdity that the statement of the grounds of appeal is required to be given earlier than the notice need be given, then it is an absurdity introduced by the act of parliament itself." Williams, J. "The only novelty introduced by the 79th section of the act is, that the pauper shall not be actually removed within twenty-one days, unless with consent, nor if there be a notice of appeal within that period, until the time for prosecuting the appeal has expired, or the appeal has been heard and determined. That is the only change effected by that section. And the novelty introduced by the 81st section is, that a statement of the grounds of appeal must be sent or delivered to the respondent parish at least fourteen days before the sessions. That has been effectively done here. Whether timely notice of appeal was given depends upon the practice of these particular sessions, which stands as it did before the passing of the poor-law amendment act." Coleridge, J. "It is admitted that there was no notice within the twenty-one days, therefore if Mr. Andrews is right in his argument, that the 79th section imperatively requires every notice of appeal to be given within the twenty-one days, the sessions have acted properly in refusing to entertain the appeal. The words of the statute do not in my opinion require the notice of appeal to be given within the twenty-one days. I think it quite clear that it was never intended to go that length. The mischief intended to be provided against, was the immediate removal of paupers. Paupers were de facto removed immediately upon the making of the order of removal, without previous communication with the parish charged by the order, and without giving any time for investigating the removal. The intention was only to prevent a removal within twenty-one days. The words of the act are only that the pauper shall not be 'removed, or removeable,' &c. It does not say that there shall be no appeal, unless a notice of the intention to appeal be given within twenty-one days. If this had been intended, the obvious course would have been to have inserted plain words to that effect. Then with regard to the 81st section. We are called upon to make a general alteration in the practice of all the courts of quarter sessions in the kingdom, upon the ground of a mere implication arising out of a supposition that some absurdity will be introduced if the practice be not so altered. The section does not say that the notice shall be given fourteen days before the sessions or at any particular time. I think that the obvious meaning of the act is, that where any greater time than fourteen days is required by the sessions for the notice of appeal, then you may deliver the statement of grounds with your notice, or if not, that you should deliver the statement of grounds at least fourteen days before the sessions. If any practical absurdity does arise out of this enactment, it is one which we cannot remedy." Rule absolute.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 81, makes no alteration in the time, fixed by the existing practice of sessions, for giving notice of appeal.

Reg. v. Draughton, 2 P. & D. 224. On appeal to the sessions held, April 2d, 1838, for the West Riding of Yorkshire, against an order for the removal of J. Spencer, who was removed from Draughton. Order discharged. Case:—The notice of appeal was served on the 19th March, 1838. It was objected that such notice was not in time, for that it was not given "fourteen days at the least before the first day of the sessions," which were held on the 2d April, 1838. The court, however, held such notice to be in time, but reserved the question for the opinion of this court. Lord Denman. "The implication contended for is not at all necessary to the construction of the act. Notice of appeal may, by the practice in some places, be required more than fourteen days before the sessions, in which case the grounds of appeal may be sent with the notice; in other cases, where so long a notice is not required, the alternative is provided, that the grounds of appeal should be sent to the respondents fourteen days before the sessions. There is no provision as to the time of notice itself." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

Objection to examination, how taken, how cured.

It is now to be considered how the objection to the examination must be taken, and how a defect in the examination is cured. If there is no appeal against the order, the defects of the examination are cured. If there is an appeal, such defects only can be noticed by the court as are pointed out in the notice of appeal. If for instance the notice of appeal refers only to a settlement acquired subsequent to that relied on in the examination, the respondents are not required to give any evidence of the settlement relied on by them (Rex v. Hockworthy), nor will they be required to prove any fact stated in the examination, and not denied in the grounds of appeal (Reg. v. St. John's, Margate, p. 1136), where the settlement disclosed in the examination was that by apprenticeship, and the ground of appeal was that the premium had been paid by the overseers, and no notice given under the statute, no proof is required of the execution of the indenture. Ib.

Statements in examination when admitted.

The respondents are confined to the examination.

On the other hand, the respondents cannot on an appeal give evidence of any other or different settlement from that mentioned in the examination.

What are fatal variances.

Variances which have been considered fatal are where the settlement relied on was part of a hiring and service to 1813, and the proof was a hiring and service to 1810, Ex parte Broseley, p. 1122. So, also, where the hiring was stated in the examination to have been by D. P., and the service partly with him and partly with his mother, and the proof was of a hiring by D. P. as the agent of his father, and part of the service with his mother, as a widow. Rex v. Misterton, p. 1122. Other instances of defects in the examination will be found in the cases collected under "Notice of Appeal," as it was settled (notwithstanding an early opinion of one judge to the contrary, Rex v. Kelvedon, p. 1124) that the examination and notice of appeal must be construed by the same rules. Reg. v. East Ville, p. 1123.

The examination and notice of appeal to be construed by the same rules.

The sessions the proper judges of a variance.

The sessions are the proper tribunal to determine if the variance between the proof and examination be material, Reg. v. J. Yorkshire (re Clint), p. 1125. The court of Queen's Bench is reluctant to control their decision, although when they refuse to hear an appeal, they do exercise such control. Reg. v. Recorder of Pontefract, p. 1065.

Effect of a variance.

If the sessions should think the variance material, and therefore quash the order and make no special entry, the judgment will it seems be conclusive between the two parties. See, however, the title, "Effect of order confirmed or quashed," post.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

The sessions having decided that the examination stating a hiring and service in 1813 was not supported by a hiring and service in 1810, the Q. B. will not disturb it.

Ex parte Broseley, 2 N. & P. 355; 7 A. & E. 423. M. Mason was removed from Broseley to Eaton. The removal was made on the examination of T. Smith, who stated, "In 1831 I occupied a farm at W., in Eaton. About three days before Shelton May Fair Feast, I hired Edward Mason, the late husband of the pauper Mary, to be my servant; and he requested that I would allow him to see the fair, and he promised to come into my service on the fair night, which he did, and remained in my service in Eaton for one whole year, and I paid him his full wages for the same." One ground of appeal was, "that there was in fact no such hiring or service for a year as is stated in the examination of Thomas Smith." Upon the appeal, Smith stated that the hiring took place in 1810, and not, as he had previously stated, in 1813. The sessions thought this was a fatal variance, and quashed the order. On a rule for a mandamus to hear the appeal, Lord Denman said, "The sessions have already decided on this case, which is a sufficient answer to this application. I think they have decided rightly; for by the terms of this examination the parish of Eaton would only be induced to inquire as to a hiring and service in the year 1810, and would be completely surprised by a hiring and service being set up three years later. With regard to Rex v. Cornwall, p. 1138, n. I certainly appear to have said that there was sufficient information given to the parish in the general terms of the grounds of appeal there; and I think in that case there was, on taking the order and examination altogether. It has been thought by my learned brothers since, that such a general mode of complying with the terms of the statute, as was then resorted to, does not give the requisite information to the other parish contemplated by the legislature; and I must say I agree in that latter construction." Patteson, J. "I also agree that the sessions have decided this case; and I am by no means prepared to say that they have come to a wrong decision. I am clearly of opinion that we shall do much better by construing all the notices and orders, required to be sent by the act, as strictly as possible. In Rex v. Cornwall, as my lord has pointed out, there were very peculiar circumstances: the question in that case turned upon a point of law, namely, whether the children of a wife are removable to the parish of her second husband; and the notice of appeal really did give information of the question intended to be tried." Williams, J. "I am entirely of the same opinion; and I am by no means satisfied that the sessions were wrong. The object of the legislature, in requiring these notices, was, that each parish should be informed of what was intended to be tried on the appeal; and the best mode to carry that intention into effect, is to hold that a strict compliance with the terms of the notice is necessary." Coleridge, J. "I think this case, so far as respects the propriety of the determination arrived at by the sessions, may be decided by Rex v. Holbeach, p. 1137. In that case the ground of appeal stated that the pauper had stipulated for two days' holiday at Spalding Club Feast; and we held that the sessions were wrong in admitting evidence that the exception was for one day at Holbeach Fair. If that case was rightly decided, and I think it was, it certainly governs the present case." Rule refused.

Rex v. Cornwall overruled.

So also where the examination disclosed a hiring by D. P. and service partly with him, and partly with his mother, and the proof was of a hiring by D. P. as the agent of his father, and service with the mother as his widow.

Rex v. Misterton, 2 N. & P. 109; 6 A. & E. 878. J. Wood was removed from Stowe to Misterton. Order confirmed. Case:—The 13th October, 1834, and pursuant to and as prescribed by the statute, a copy of the order, examination of the pauper, and notice, was sent to the appellants, and filed. The examination upon which the order was made was as follows:—"The pauper saith that he is twenty-three years of age, and was born at Gainsbro', and that at Gainsbro' statutes, before May-day, 1829, he was hired by Mr. D. Parkinson, of Thonock, farmer, to serve him for a year, from May-day, 1829, to May, 1830, for 3*l.* 10*s.* wages; that he went into his service at Thonock at May-day, and when he had been there about a fortnight, his master informed him that the servant of his mother, Mrs. Parkinson, of Misterton, did not suit her, and asked him if he had any objection to change places with Mrs. Parkinson's servant, and go and live with her instead of him; the pauper said he had no objection, and without having any fresh agreement, he went to Misterton and served the remainder of his year's service with Mrs. Parkinson, and at the end of the year received of her 3*l.* 10*s.*, the amount of his wages." This was the only ground of removal. The grounds of their appeal were, that the pauper did not gain a settlement in Misterton, by reason of having been hired by Mr. D. Parkinson, of Thonock, to serve him for a year, from May-day, 1829, to May-day, 1830, and by reason of having served first D. Parkinson for a fortnight, in Thonock, and afterwards his mother, in Misterton, for the remainder of the year, under the circumstances stated in the examination of the pauper, and that the contract of service with D. Parkinson was dissolved on the pauper leaving the same. The respondents proposed to prove a settlement in Misterton, as follows:—"That the pauper was hired previous to May-day, 1828, by D. Parkinson, the elder, to serve him from May-day, 1828, for a year; that at that time he lived at Lea; that the pauper entered his service accordingly, and continued in his service until Lady-day, 1829, when he quitted Lea, and took a farm at Thonock, and also a farm at Misterton, to which latter parish he himself went to reside with Mrs. Parkinson, and placed his son David at Thonock, as his servant, to manage that farm. David the elder himself never resided at Thonock, nor did Mrs. Parkinson. The pauper continued in the service of David, the elder, but by his direction accompanied David the son to Thonock, as the servant of David the father. Shortly before May-day, 1829, David the son, as the agent of his father, hired the pauper to serve David the elder, and as the servant of David the elder, for another year, from the May-day following; and the pauper continued in the service of David the elder, at Thonock, until David the elder died, which event took place shortly after May-day, 1829. Shortly after the death of David the elder, David the younger informed the pauper that Mrs. Parkinson, his mother, who continued to reside at Misterton, had a servant at Misterton who did not suit her, and proposed to the pauper to go to Misterton, and that that servant should come to Thonock; which was accordingly done, and the pauper served the remainder of the year at Misterton, under the original hiring to David the deceased, and was paid the 3*l.* 10*s.* wages, originally agreed upon by Mrs. Parkinson. The appellants objected to any evidence thereof, it not being stated in the examination. The court decided upon hearing the evidence, and confirmed the order, subject to the question, whether the respondents were at liberty to give evidence of the settlement of the pauper, as above. The appellants declined calling any evidence, or addressing the court, on the ground that the respondents were not at liberty to give such evidence." Cur. adv. vult. Lord Denman delivered the judgment. "This is a case in which a pauper has been removed, with a copy of his examination, which stated that he had been hired by a Mr. Parkinson, and had afterwards served with a Mrs. Parkinson. On that statement notice of appeal was given, and the appellants stated as a ground of appeal, that no settlement appeared on the examination, which is obviously true. When the respondents came to the sessions, they sought to give in evidence another state of facts, not indeed inconsistent with those set forth in the examination, but of which the appellants had no previous information. They proposed to show that the David Parkinson, mentioned in the examination, had acted as the agent of his father, and therefore that the service with his mother was a continuance of the original service, which certainly would make a good settlement. But we are all most clearly of opinion, that when the appellants have taken issue on the sufficiency of the settlement, as stated in the examination, it is not competent for the respondents to introduce a new state of facts, which, if they had been communicated, would have induced the appellants, if they had found them to be true, either not to appeal or to be prepared with evidence to meet them. It is quite clear, that under the late act, such an alteration of the examination is quite inadmissible." Order of sessions quashed.

The examination is to be construed

Reg. v. East Ville, 1 G. & D. 150; 1 Q. B. 828. Sarah Thirston was removed from East Ville to Friskney. The pauper stated, that she had

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

as strictly as the grounds of appeal.

An examination stating that the pauper's husband had told her that his settlement was in the appellant parish, the respondent parish not to go into evidence of a settlement by hiring and service.

often heard her husband say, that his settlement was in Friskney; that she had received a Christmas-box from Mr. Cust, of Friskney; that the charge-bearers of the same parish had told her that she belonged to that parish, and that they had on a former occasion received her husband without any order of magistrates. A notice of appeal contained the following grounds, that the settlement of W. Thirston was not in Friskney, as stated in the examination, that she had not received relief as a poor person belonging to the parish of Friskney; that the charge-bearers of Friskney had not admitted that W. Thirston was settled in their parish. On the trial, the respondents proposed to prove that the settlement of the pauper's husband was in the appellant parish by hiring and service; to which the appellants objected. The sessions received the evidence, and decided that the settlement of the pauper was in Friskney, subject to the question as to the reception of the evidence. On reference being made to Rex v. Kelvedon, Coleridge, J., said, "A distinction was taken by me in that case, between the language of sects. 79 and 81, as to respondents and as to appellants, but I think wrongly; and it has since been overruled." Lord Denman. "The objection having been distinctly taken at the sessions, we think it ought to prevail, notwithstanding the case of Rex v. Kelvedon." (a) Order quashed.

(a) Rex v. Kelvedon, 1 N. & P. 189; 5 Ad. & E. 687. J. Bird, &c. were removed from Kelvedon to Colsterworth. Order quashed. Case:—The order was made on the examination of J. Bird, who said: "I was born at Kelvedon, where my father then resided, but belonged to the parish of Colsterworth, and continued to belong there till his death, as I have heard and believe; and I have also heard him say, that he was a certificated man from the parish of Colsterworth. That I have never done any act, whereby to gain a settlement in my own right, to the best of my knowledge and belief." The grounds of appeal were that the father of J. Bird never was settled in Colsterworth, nor was there ever a certificate granted by Colsterworth, owning the pauper's father to be settled in Colsterworth, as in the examination stated, and we mean to avail ourselves of both or one of the said grounds of appeal. On the appeal the respondent proposed to prove a settlement gained by the pauper's father in Colsterworth by apprenticeship; and it was objected to, as it was not a ground of removal set forth in the examination. The sessions decided that the respondents were not at liberty to give evidence of the pauper's father having gained a settlement in the appellant parish by apprenticeship, and quashed the order. Lord Denman. "I am of opinion that the respondents have done all that is required by the act, and therefore the order of sessions must be quashed. The act gives the magistrates credit for setting out a perfect settlement of the pauper on the order of removal and examination; and that, with the notice of chargeability required by the 79th section, gives sufficient notice of the case to the other side. The legislature might have imposed upon the respondent parish the same duty as they have upon the appellant. They might have required a more specific statement of the kind of settlement, but they have not done so: and for this clear reason, that the appellants know the grounds on which they mean to rely on their appeal, and therefore they are bound to state them. The examination is taken by the magistrates, and is not the act of the respondents; an objection to the examination, therefore, is not an objection to the conduct of the respondents." Patteson, J. "I am of the same opinion. The notice of appeal says, that the father was not legally settled in their parish, how then can proof of any description of settlement in that parish be a surprise upon them?" Williams, J. "Whether or not the examination was properly conducted, is a question the court have nothing to do with. Perhaps it would have been better if it had stated the settlement of the pauper with more particularity. But the examination of the pauper was taken, and the order and notice required by the act sent. In that examination the pauper is stated to be settled in Colsterworth,—can it be said that they travel out of the notice, when particular evidence was given of what was there generally alleged?" Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion, and will only add, that there is a great difference in the language of the act with respect to the notice to be given by the respondents, and with regard to that to be given by the appellants. It is to be presumed that the difference is intentional. The respondents obtain the order of removal upon an examination taken by the magistrates; a copy of that order and examination, with the notice of chargeability, is all they are required to send to the other parish. The

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

The sessions must decide whether a variance between the evidence and the grounds of removal is fatal or not.

Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, 3 N. & P. 462; 10 A. & E. 685. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal on the merits, it appeared that in the examination of the pauper before the removing justices, he stated that in 1827 he took a farm at Clint, of about twelve acres, and entered upon it in the beginning of June; that he was to pay 40*l.* rent; and that he was not enabled to pay the whole of the first year's rent, and law proceedings were commenced against him in the latter end of June, 1828, upon which he gave up possession to Wm. Fawcett, of whom he took it. The grounds of appeal stated, that he did not bonâ fide rent or occupy for the term of one whole year a farm in the township of Clint from the beginning of June, 1827, until the latter end of June, 1828, as a tenant to Wm. Fawcett under the yearly hiring at the rent of 40*l.* At the hearing of the appeal, the pauper stated in cross-examination that the taking of the farm was not from June, 1827, to June, 1828, but from June, 1828, to August, 1829. The appellants objected that this was a material variance from the examination; and the sessions, on the authority of Ex parte Broseley, p. 1120, quashed the order of removal. Lord Denman. "Where the sessions had decided wrong on some preliminary point of practice, we should, no doubt, interfere with their decision, and issue the writ. This case certainly shows that very often it may be a matter of great difficulty to say whether a variance is material or not. A variance may occur which is so trifling as to amount to a mere clerical error, or it may be such a variance as to set up an entirely different question, and, though apparently trifling, such, for instance, as the mistake of a year or even of a name, yet, where the parish is very populous, in effect it may be quite sufficient to mislead the opposite party. This being so, it must be a matter of discretion in all cases for the sessions to say whether the variance is material or not; and, as they have done so here, I do not see how this court can interfere, and as we have not sufficient materials before us, it is very undesirable that we should interfere." The other judges concurred. Rule discharged.

We have seen that the appellants must not only give notice of their appeal, but of the grounds thereof, and they cannot at the trial depart from them or dispute any fact stated in the examination, unless specifically objected to. We have also seen, under the title "Examination," that the examination and grounds of appeal must be equally specific. The cases there collected, therefore, must be consulted, as well as the following, in order to ascertain what is a compliance with this provision of the legislature. No proof will be required from the respondents of any facts not put in issue by the grounds of appeal. The chargeability of the paupers need not be proved unless it is controverted in the notice, and even then the appellants may be estopped from denying it, as by an application for an order of removal by themselves, as in Reg. v. Holdsworth, p. 1127. The settlement disclosed in the examination need not be proved unless denied by the notice of appeal. Reg. v. Hockworthy, ante, p. 646.

The notice of appeal may be considered in two points:—

1. When the objections refer to the examination and settlement therein disclosed.

2. When it sets up a new and independent settlement.

1. When the objections refer to the examination and settlement therein disclosed.

---

statute takes care that the appellants shall not be prejudiced by any generality of statement in the examination, for the 79th section provides, that the pauper shall not be removed for twenty-one days after notice that the pauper is chargeable, and the copy of the examination has been sent. And then, as the 80th section gives the appellant free access to the pauper, to examine him touching his settlement, if any ambiguity should appear on the face of the examination, the whole of the case can be elicited from the pauper. But, as the grounds of appeal can only be known by the appellants themselves, the act very properly requires them to particularise them all, in their notice. Therefore it appears to me that the statute was made with very different purposes as to the notices to be given by each side. Order of sessions quashed. The case to be re-heard.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

A notice of appeal, stating that "the order and examination are bad on the face thereof," is sufficient to entitle the appellants to object that the examination which disclosed only one settlement, and that by renting a tenement, did not state that it was rented for a year (Reg. v. Middleton in Teesdale, p. 1127), and that a residence for 40 days was not alleged. Rex v. Horton, ante. But where the appellants made this general objection, and then condescended to particular objections, they will at the appeal be confined to those so particularised, as where, amid many objections, the notice stated that it did not appear by the examination that S. H. was not rated, and did not pay rates, and that the examination does not show in what year he paid rates, "the appellant is precluded from the objection that the rate books were not produced, and that the examination showed no legal evidence of a rating." (Reg. v. Staple Fitzpaine, p. 1128.) Even an objection apparent on the face of the order is not available unless it is made a ground of appeal. Rex v. Withernwick, p. 1131.

Objections to the examination.

An examination set forth a settlement by hiring and service, and also frequent instances of relief. The grounds of appeal were, that the pauper acquired no settlement by such hiring and service. This entitled the appellant to show that the relief was given under a mistake that a settlement had been gained by such hiring and service. Reg. v. Bedingham, p. 1132.

It is not sufficient to state generally that a statute has not been complied with, nor to say that the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, was not complied with, especially the 5th section, when the objection relied on arises in the 2nd (Rex v. Whitley Upper, p. 1135), nor when want of notice to the overseers of the intention to bind is relied on, can they call for proofs of the execution of the indenture. Reg. v. St. John's, Margate, p. 1136. If the appellant relies on the obligation of a second husband to maintain the paupers (children), he cannot object that they are irremovable, as being within the age of fourteen, although that fact appeared on the face of the order. Reg. v. Costock, p. 1136. Where the ground of appeal is, that the hiring stated in the examination was exceptive, as there was a stipulation for two days' holiday at Spalding Club, the proof, that it was for one day's holiday at Holbeach, is insufficient. Reg. v. Holbeach, p. 1137.

Grounds of appeal, having no reference to the examination.

2. When the notice of appeal discloses a new settlement, every essential ingredient of such settlement must be stated with the same particularity which is required in the examination. The statement of a settlement by hiring and service, without any particulars, or not stating the party to have been unmarried and without children at the time of hiring, though that fact might be inferred from the examination and notice of appeal taken together (Reg. v. Recorder of Leeds, p. 1137; Reg. v. J. Derbyshire, p. 1137; Rex v. Bridgwater, Compton Bishop, p. 1139), or without mentioning any date or residence (Reg. v. Old Stratford, p. 1141), or not stating it was for a year (Reg. v. North Bovey, p. 1141), or of a settlement by occupying a tenement, without any statement of residence (Reg. v. Old Stratford), or omitting the landlord's name (Rex v. J. Sussex, p. 1142) have been considered defective; so also where appellants relied on the renting of a cow, and did not state it was to be pasture fed, the notice is defective (Reg. v. Cumberworth Half, p. 1143), and precludes the appellant from being heard on such grounds on the appeal; neither can the appellant avail himself of the examination to supply the defects of his notice, unless he has therein identified the facts relied on by him with those disclosed in the examination (Reg. v. Stowford, p. 1144). Identity of name is not sufficient

It is sufficient, however, to say, that the paupers are settled in the respondents' parish, as they, during the last six years, and especially in 1839 and 1840, received relief from them when resident in another parish (Reg. v. J. Carnarvon, p. 1144). A mistake in the initials of the name of one of the removing justices is not sufficient to prevent the appeal being heard (Reg. v. J. Denbighshire, p. 1142).

It is a good ground of appeal that the pauper was not chargeable (Rex v. Brixham, ante). The notice need not state name of justices (Reg. v. West Houghton, p. 1146). If the appeal should be adjourned because the parties are equally divided, the appellants cannot serve fresh grounds of appeal (Reg. v. Arlecdon, p. 1146). But if it is adjourned because the court had not time to hear it, the sessions are bound to hear the grounds in a second statement (Reg. v. Derbyshire). The notice of appeal against an order adjudicating the settlement of an insane person, must be given to the clerk of the peace. Reg. v. J. Kent, p. 1147.

Application for an order of removal to a lunatic asylum estops the parish applying from denying chargeability.

Reg. v. Holdsworth, 1 G. & D. 442. On the application of the overseers of a parish, two justices made an order on them to remove a pauper lunatic to the county asylum, under the statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 40, s. 38. The order, pursuant to the 41st section of the act, stated that the legal settlement of the pauper was unknown, and directed the expense to be charged to the county. The overseers obeyed the order, and did not appeal against it. Under the 42nd section, two justices afterwards inquired into the place of the last legal settlement of the pauper, and adjudged it to be in the parish the overseers of which had applied for the first order:—Held, that on the trial of an appeal against such adjudication, that their acts of application for and obedience to the first order, precluded them from saying that the pauper was not chargeable to their parish at the time when they made their application for it.

No proof required of facts, not denied by the notice of appeal.

Reg. v. Hockworthy, 7 A. & E. 493; 2 N. & P. 383. The facts of this case are stated ante, p. 813. The notice of appeal did not take any objection to the settlement stated in the examination, but alleged that the pauper was settled in another parish. Lord Denman. "We think that the appellants cannot insist on any point for quashing the order of removal that is not stated by them in their grounds of appeal." Coleridge, J. "If we came to a contrary decision, appellants who had no case at all, but who meant to rely on some defect in the examination, might contend that they were not bound to deliver any statement of the grounds of appeal."

An examination stating a settlement in M. by renting and occupying a house of one J. F. in M., of the yearly rent of 10*l.* is insufficient. The objection may be taken on a notice stating the examination to be bad upon the face thereof (a).

Reg. v. Middleton in Teesdale, 3 P. & D. 473; 10 A. & E. 688. Elizabeth Collinson and her illegitimate child were removed from Newbiggin to Middleton in Teesdale. Order confirmed. Case:—On an appeal against this order, it appeared that the removal was made upon the examination of the pauper alone, who saith that she is nineteen years of age, and that her father gained a settlement in Middleton in Teesdale, by renting and occupying a house and land of one Jacob Farn, in the said township of Middleton in Teesdale, of the yearly rent of 10*l.* The grounds of appeal were, that the order and notice of chargeability are bad upon the faces thereof. 2dly. That the settlement of E. Collinson and child is in Newbiggin (she not having gained a settlement in her own right), her father having gained a settlement there by renting a tenement of the value of 10*l.* or more in the years 1816, 1817, 1818, and 1819, or some or one of them, and resided there during the time. 3dly. That her said father also gained a settlement in Newbiggin by again renting a tenement therein in the years 1829, 1830, and 1831, or some or one of them, and paying rent for the same to the amount of 10*l.* for the year. On the appeal the respondents insisted that the settlement set out in the examination was admitted by the appellants, as the notice did not specify any defect in the examination, or deny the settlement alleged in the examination, and that the appellants ought not to be allowed to give evidence of the settlement alleged in the second or third ground of appeal, as it did not sufficiently describe the tenement in its nature, or of whom it was held, and the sessions being of this opinion confirmed the order of removal. Lord Denman. "The objection taken by the appellants is that the order is bad, and the question is whether it is not clearly defective, not on any formal objection, but substantially for want of shewing that the justices had power to make a removal. Now it appears by the examination that the pauper describes a renting by her father, but makes no statement as to its being for a sufficient period to confer a settlement, the justices consequently had no jurisdiction to order a removal. When the respondents received the grounds of appeal it was their duty to get a better order if they could, but as they have chosen to rest upon it they must take the consequences. Rex v. Withernwick, p. 1131, is in my opinion consistent with the present decision, for there the defects pointed out were defects of form merely." Littledale, J. concurred. Patteson, J. "Our judgment may appear strict, but it is better for all parties to hold them strictly to the terms of the act. The examination should contain within itself a sufficient statement of a settlement. Here the pauper was never asked how long, or when her father occupied, and the statement is almost as meagre as if she had merely stated that her father was settled in the appellant parish." Williams, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

(a) Many remarks have been made on this case, but the judges have uniformly observed that they adhered to the principle on which it was decided. Reg. v. North Bovey, p. 1142.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

Where the notice points out specific objections, the appellant will be confined to them although the notice states the examination is bad on the face of it. Where the examination stated that the pauper paid the poor rates as the occupier, and the grounds of appeal were, "that J. H. was not rated, and did not pay rates for the estate; that the examination is informal, insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it. The appellants cannot object that the rate book was not produced before the removing justices, or that the examination contained no legal evidence that J. H. had been rated.

Reg. v. Staple Fitzpaine, (a) 1 G. & D. 605; 2 Q. B. 488. Betty Hake, &c. were removed from Staple Fitzpaine to Buckland. Order quashed. Case:—The examinations upon which the order was made were, that of Betty Hake, who said, "I am the widow of Sander Hake, late of Staple Fitzpaine, labourer, deceased. I was married to him in the parish church of Buckland about sixteen years ago. On my marriage I went to live with my husband on an estate at Blindmore, in Buckland, who resided with his father, and was carter to him. After we had lived there about a year, my father-in-law was burnt out of the estate, upon which he went to Staple Fitzpaine, and I and my husband went to Curland, and lived there with my father and mother. My husband never rented 10*l.* a year afterwards. My husband, Sander Hake, died about seven years ago." That of Mary Hake, who said, "I am the widow of John Hake, deceased. About twenty-six years ago (being about the year 1815), Mr. George Score employed my husband to work on and take care of his estate at Blindmore, in the said parish of Buckland St. Mary, and during that year the said Mr. Score, who was at our house, said to my husband; 'John, you shall have this estate,' to which my husband replied, 'I am not strong enough to stock it.' He then said, 'Won't you have it if I give it you? You can borrow some money, and I will be bound for it.' It was then understood that my husband was to have it. It contained about 100 acres, and was worth upwards of 100*l.* a year. My husband afterwards stocked the estate, and occupied it about thirteen years, except small parts of it he let to his sons. I believe he paid the rates and taxes all the time for the whole. I frequently saw him pay the overseers the poor-rates, and many times paid them myself. After occupying the estate about thirteen years, my husband was turned out of it by an ejectment." That of John Hake, who said, "I was present in the year 1815, and heard Mr. Score say he would give the estate to my father, and he might do what he liked with it. Mr. Score called John Pinney, who is now dead, to witness that he gave it to my father. My father afterwards occupied it about thirteen years, except small parts of it, which he about three years afterwards let to me and to my brother under 20*l.* a year, but my father paid the rates and taxes for the whole. From 1815 my brother Sander lived on the estate with my father, as one of his family. My father stocked the farm, and paid the rates and taxes. He also bought a new waggon on which his name was painted, and his name was also on the iron work on the gates. I paid my father rent for the land I took of him. My father during the time he occupied the estate built a new lime-kiln on it, and sold lime, and afterwards let the kiln to Mr. E. Ackland." That of Thomas Willie, who said, "I was overseer of Buckland five or six years, during the time the said John Hake occupied the estate, and about the year 1826 collected the poor-rates of him as the occupier." The following were the grounds of appeal:—"That the said John Hake, the father of Sander Hake, did not gain any settlement in our parish of Buckland by any of the means stated in the examination, and that the said Betty Hake and her children were not settled in our parish in the manner stated in the examination. That the said John Hake was not rated, and did not pay rates and taxes for the estate at Blindmore, as stated in the examination. That the said John Hake never was the occupier of the said estate at Blindmore. That the said examination is informal and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it. That the examination does not contain any sufficient evidence of a settlement gained in our said parish of Buckland by the said John Hake, nor does it contain any valid grounds of removal of the said Betty Hake and her children to our said parish. That the examination does not show that Sander Hake was at any time settled in our parish of Buckland, there being no proof or statement on the face of the examination that the said Sander Hake was unemancipated at the time of his marriage, so as to derive a settlement from his father John Hake. That the examination does not state when or in what year or years the said John Hake occupied the said estate at Blindmore, or in what year or years he paid rates and taxes for the same. That the examination does not state that the said John Hake resided forty days in our parish of Buckland, during the time that he occupied the said estate at Blindmore, or after he had so paid rates and taxes for the same. That the examination does not state any residence by the said John Hake in our said parish of Buckland, sufficient to confer a settlement under the statute of 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12. Upon the appeal it was proved that John Hake, the father of Sander Hake, had from the year 1813 to 1815 managed the estate mentioned in the examination for Mr. George Score in the appellant parish. That in 1815 Mr. George Score made a verbal gift of the estate to John Hake, in the manner stated in the examination. That from 1815 to 1826 John Hake resided in and occupied the said estate, claiming title thereto by virtue of the said gift, and paying no rent for the same. That in 1824 John Hake made a feoffment of the estate, and levied a fine of the same to the use of himself in fee, and was turned out by ejectment in 1826. That from 1815 to 1826 he was charged to and paid all the parochial rates and taxes in respect of the said estate, including the land-tax. That Sander Hake resided with his father from 1815 to 1825, as one of his family, being unemancipated, and that he was married to the pauper in August, 1825. The court were of opinion, that John Hake acquired a settlement in the appellant parish, both by such residence under a claim of ownership of the estate, and also by being charged unto and paying parochial rates and public taxes, and that Sander Hake followed his father's settlement up to August, 1825. Although the court were of opinion, that under these circumstances the settlement of Sander Hake was in the appellant parish, and that the respondents were entitled to the judgment of the court on the merits, they quashed the order upon the ground that the examination was on the face of it insufficient to enable the respondents to go into either of those grounds of removal. If the Court of Queen's Bench should be of opinion that the examination was sufficient, then the order of sessions to be quashed, and the order of removal to be confirmed. If the court should be of opinion that the examination was insufficient, the order of sessions to be confirmed. Cur. adv. vult." Lord Denman. "This was a case of appeal against an order of removal. At the sessions objections were made to the examination, and also the reception of evidence in support of the order, in consequence of the alleged defects in such examination. The sessions have found that John Hake, the pauper's father-in-law, under whom the settlement was claimed, acquired a settlement in the appellant parish by residence, under a claim of ownership on an estate, and also by being charged to and paying parochial rates, and that the respondents were entitled to the judgment of the court on the merits, but they quashed the order, on the ground that the examination on the face of it was insufficient to enable the respondents to go into either of the grounds of removal. The sessions have submitted to us simply the question of the sufficiency of the examination for these purposes. On the part of the respondents the case

Grounds of appeal.

(a) In several contemporaneous reports with A. & E., this case is by mistake called Stapleford Fitzpaine.

Judgment of the sessions.

Judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

has at present been only argued in respect of the settlement by rating, and, if we are of opinion that the examination was sufficient to let them into their case on this head of it, it will be unnecessary to go farther, as one ground of removal is enough, and the sessions have not submitted to us the conclusions which they have drawn from the evidence, supposing they were at liberty to receive and consider it at all. Before we inquire into the sufficiency of the examination, it is necessary to consider the statement of the grounds of appeal, because the appellants can make no other objections to any part of the respondent's case than are stated in such grounds, and we agree with the respondent's counsel, that at least the same degree of strictness is to be used in deciding upon the sufficiency of such statements as in deciding on that of the examination. Both are to be treated candidly, and with a view to advance the objects of the statute in requiring their mutual delivery. The examination, construed fairly, must show that the justices have primâ facie been justified in making the order; the grounds of appeal, construed in the same way, must disclose the nature of the objections to the order, or the new matter, as the case may be, which induces the appellants to resist the removal. By these modes the legislature has wisely thought that the expense of groundless removals and fruitless appeals may best be prevented, and it is the duty of the court of quarter sessions, and of this court, to take care that the provisions of the statute be fairly and fully carried out. The statement of the grounds of appeal, so far as regards the present question, after objecting that in fact 'John Hake was not rated, and did not pay rates as stated in the examination,' proceeds thus, 'that the said examination is informal and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it; that it does not contain any sufficient evidence of a settlement gained in our parish, nor any valid grounds of removal to our parish; that it does not show that S. Hake was unemancipated at the time of his marriage, so as to derive a settlement from his father; that it does not state in what year or years John Hake paid rates and taxes, or that he resided forty days after he had so paid rates and taxes.' It may be conceded that the examination does not in any part state in express terms, that John Hake was rated, and assuming that the parish rates were not produced or proved before the removing justices, two questions might have arisen; the first, whether the examination is on these accounts defective; the second, whether looking at it, and the notice of appeal, the respondents could be properly admitted to prove a rating at the trial. But it appears to us that the statement itself is so framed as to preclude the appellants from insisting upon either of these objections. As to the first, it does not object to the examination any want of proof of rating; it denies that in fact John Hake was rated, but does not say that the examination contains no evidence of it. It was urged that this objection was open under the general words 'is informal, and wholly insufficient in law, and bad on the face of it;' we are quite clear that under these words, if they stood alone, no objection would in this case be open to the appellants, for they would convey no information to the respondents of the ground of appeal intended to be relied on; and to hold them sufficient would defeat the very object of the statute. The addition of other particulars, instead of helping the appellants, makes their case worse. Any one reading these general words, followed by specific objections, would conclude that they were intended to introduce and comprise no more than such particulars as were afterwards so specified. And when, besides this, they are preceded by a denial in terms, that John Hake was in fact rated, the respondents would still more certainly be led to conclude that it was not intended to object to want of evidence before the removing justices, but to rely on the fact itself being otherwise than was asserted. Instead, therefore, of having a defect pointed out to them in the examination, of the existence of which, if true, they must be aware, and therefore might be led by it at once to abandon the support of their order, they would see themselves challenged only to prove the fact on the trial, and be led to prepare themselves to prove it then. Upon the principles before laid down, therefore, we think the notice defective for this purpose. But we were referred to our decision in Reg. v. Middleton in Teesdale, p. 1127, as inconsistent with this. There the grounds of appeal were stated thus:—'The order, the examination, as also the notice of chargeability, are bad on the face thereof,' and we thought this enough to let the appellants into an objection to the following paragraph of the examination, 'my father gained a settlement in, &c., by renting and occupying a house, &c., of one J. T. in, &c., of the yearly rent of 10*l.*' This was the whole that related to the settlement, and nothing was said of the time for which rented or occupied; and in such a case we think it was enough to say that the examination was bad on its face; the notice not only could not mislead, but would scarcely fail to point out to one who read it with ordinary diligence and ordinary knowledge, the defect intended to be insisted on. The facts of the two cases are so different, that the decision of the one case can be no authority for that of the other. The second question is decided by the fate of the first. There was clearly nothing to prevent the respondents from proving a rating at the trial but the assumed defect in the examination as to the want of express statement and strict proof of such rating, for a rating is impliedly stated, and at all events irregularly proved, by the evidence of the parish officer, who states he called on John Hake, as the occupier, for the rates, and he paid them, but if the appellants are precluded from insisting upon this defect, by the insufficiency of their notice, it is between these parties as if it never had existed. Other points in support of the order of sessions were argued, but they have not left them open to us to inquire into. With respect, indeed, to the question of emancipation, we may say that the examination appears to us not to be deficient as to this, the non-emancipation of Sander Hake being clearly to be presumed from the depositions set out. We are of opinion, therefore, that, with reference to the notice and grounds of appeal, this examination was sufficient as to the settlement by rating, and that the order of sessions must therefore be quashed."

A general objection of insufficiency defeats the object of the statute.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

What is a sufficient statement of non-emancipation.

Rex v. Withernwick, 1 N. & P. 423; 6 A. & E. 273. W. Tiplady, his wife, and children, were removed from Withernwick to West Newton. Order confirmed as to William and wife, but quashed as to the children. Case:—The order did not state the names or ages of the children, but it stated that West Newton was the place of their settlement. Their only grounds of appeal were that the said pauper, William, never obtained a settlement at West Newton, by hiring and service, as alleged in the examination; and if he did obtain such settlement, then, that subsequently thereto, about thirteen years ago, he gained a settlement by hiring and service with one W. Smith, of Leven. It was proved that he did gain a settlement in Newton, by hiring and service; that he had only four children, and that such children were legitimate, and were named Maria, William, David, and Ralph, and were of the respective ages of ten, seven, six, and two years, or thereabouts. The appellants failed in proving any subsequent settlement in Leven; but they objected that the order was bad as respected the children, inasmuch as it did not state their names or ages; and the respondents contended that was not necessary, as the order adjudged that West Newton was the settlement of the four children; and also, that the objection was not specified in the notice, and that the sessions might amend the order respecting the names and ages of the children in it. The sessions confirmed the order as to William and his wife, but quashed it as to the four children. Lord Denman, C. J. "We ought not to encourage any doubt on this point, and I think we ought not to introduce any distinction which may prevent a clear application of the statute. It is unnecesary for us to inquire whether this is matter of form or substance, and amendable or not, because we are clearly of opinion the sessions were not warranted in going into that objection." Williams, J. "I am of the same opinion. I do not find that it has been decided that the 81st section, which requires the grounds of appeal to be stated, is to be confined to grounds of appeal on which evidence is to be Defects on the face of the order cannot be taken advantage of on appeal, unless stated on the grounds of appeal

An order as to children which does not state their names or ages, is not necessarily void.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

given. We are left unfettered as to the construction of the act of parliament, which seems to me to require a large and literal construction. The act declares that the parties shall not go into matters of appeal. As this was not made the subject-matter of notice, it seems to me that the parties cannot, under this act of parliament, go into the objection." Coleridge, J. "I am quite of the same opinion. It has been a very common ground of complaint, that this court, by the allowing of refinement in the construction of statutes relating to the poor, have occasioned a great deal of litigation. We are now dealing with a new statute, which is most plainly expressed, and I think, therefore, we are bound to give the plain and literal interpretation to the words of this statute. They are as plain as possible, that an appellant, on the hearing of an appeal, shall not be allowed to go into or give evidence as to any other grounds of appeal against an order of removal, than those set forth in his statement. It is said that the statute does not apply to defects on the face of the order. I do not know why it does not. It is argued that a party who is in possession of the order is bound to know the law, and bound to know the defects in the order. So he may be, but he may also be led to suppose the other party does not intend to rely on such defects, and therefore he proceeds to maintain his order, and goes to the sessions, because he is only to contend with the objections which the other parties make in their statement of the grounds of appeal. Then it is said, when this order is brought before the court, that we are bound to take notice of the defects apparent on the face of the order, and to quash it. For the present, I will concede that such is the duty of this court; but it appears to me, that this is not a defect necessarily apparent on the face of the order. It is properly a ground of appeal, because, in order to raise it, some evidence must be adduced. If this order came here in the present state in which it is, we must exclude, on this point, all considerations of the facts stated. We must look only to the face of the order. I am not prepared to say an order is necessarily bad on the face of it, because neither the name nor age of the child is stated, for neither may be known, and therefore, in order to let in that defect, some evidence must be shown, that there were means of ascertaining either the name or the age. There might very well be an illegitimate child, who had never acquired any name by reputation. So these children, for anything we know, may never have been christened. They may have no name, and may have attained no name by reputation. We are at liberty to make all those surmises, because the argument is that the order on the face of it is necessarily bad; and that no state of things can be supposed in which such an order can be good. To that extent I am not prepared to go. It appears to me, therefore, the order of the sessions as to the children must be quashed."

Complaint by one of the overseers on behalf of the rest is sufficient. Relief given by mistake for many years may be explained.

An examination set forth a settlement by hiring and service, and also stated instances of frequent relief: under a notice of appeal respecting the particular settlement, the appellant may show that the relief was made by mistake.

Reg. v. Bedingham, 8 Jurist, 378. P. Quantul, &c. were removed from Bedingham to Earsham. The examination on which the order was made, was that of J. Smith, who saith, "I am an overseer of Bedingham. P. Quantul, his wife and children (naming them), have come to inhabit in the said parish, not having gained a legal settlement there, and they are now become actually chargeable to the same parish; wherefore I pray that P. Q. may be examined on oath touching his settlement." The pauper said, "At the Bungay sessions, I let myself to Mr. John Spilling, then of Earsham, in the county of Norfolk, at the yearly wages of 9*l.* 10*s.*, and a new hemp shirt, or the worth of one. I remained in his service, lodging in his house at Earsham, till about New Year's-day, when I met with an injury from a horse kicking me, and was unable to work: my master said to me, 'Peter, would you not like to go home to your mother, she would better take care of your leg than the maid can?' or words to that effect. I was willing to go home to her. When in Bedingham, I received from my master 2*l.* wages for the time I had then served, went home to my mother there, and remained there a fortnight. After the fortnight, Mr. John Spilling saw me again in the road, and asked me whether I would not like to come again and take care of my horses;

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

I said, 'Why, you have got another man,' and some other words of the same sort. I returned the same day into his service again. Nothing was said after the accident and before my return about wages, or the period of service. I remained with him for the rest of the year till the following Michaelmas; but a little before the Whitsuntide, he talked to me about what harvest wages he was to give; and I said, 'Why, harvest wages, sir, I thought I was come to fill up my year's service!' I then agreed to take 3*s.* 6*d.* a week, including harvest wages, and lived with him, lodging in his house at Earsham, till the Michaelmas, and received my wages at the above rate. I left his place at Michaelmas. My master and I agreed that the shirt should be thought of the value of 7*s.* I received a part of that sum from Mr. Spilling before the horse kicked me, and the rest at the end of the year. I have since done nothing to gain another settlement anywhere. During all this time I was single. About twenty-four years ago, I married Elizabeth, my present wife, in the parish church of Bedingham, by whom I have six children. In several of my wife's confinements in the birth of the above children, and whilst residing in Bedingham, I have been allowed by the overseers of Earsham, at the expense of that parish, a surgeon to attend my wife; and whilst residing in Bedingham, I have been repeatedly relieved by the overseers of Earsham with money. From the second year of my marriage down to about five years ago, I have received from the overseers of Earsham, though living in Bedingham all that time, some money, distributed from a parish charity of Earsham to persons belonging to Earsham," &c. The grounds of appeal were, that the order was not, and does not purport to have been made upon the complaint of the overseers of Bedingham, but of J. Smith only, described as being one of such overseers, and it does not appear, upon the face of the information of the said J. Smith, that he was authorised by the churchwardens and overseers, or by the overseers or guardians of Bedingham, to make such complaint that, if P. Quantul was hired by the said John Spilling for a year, such hiring was dissolved before the expiration of the year; that P. Quantul never acquired a settlement in Earsham, either by hiring and service with the said John Spilling, or by any other means. It was admitted that the application was in part made on behalf of the parish officers, and with their consent, and the court decided in favour of the respondents. Evidence was then given by the respondents of relief given by the appellant parish, out of the poor-rate of that parish, to the pauper occasionally for a period of twenty years, whilst he was residing in the respondent parish; and the respondents then closed their case. The appellants then called on the court to allow them to show that such relief had been given under the mistaken belief that the pauper had gained a settlement in their parish by his hire with Mr. Spilling, as stated in the said examination. To this the respondents objected, on the ground that the statement did not contain that as one of the grounds of appeal. The court then permitted the appellants to call the pauper with reference to this point, who, on examination, also admitted, that, seven or eight years previous to the present order, he was examined before the justices at a petty sessions respecting his settlement, on the application of, and whilst he was residing in, the respondent parish; they refused to make an order; since which he had been relieved several times by the respondent parish, whilst residing in it. The court quashed the order, subject to the following points:—First, whether there had been a sufficient complaint to give the justices jurisdiction to make the order. Secondly, whether the court ought to have admitted the appellants to give the evidence objected to. Lord Denman, C. J. "The sessions appear to me to have done right in everything but in the mode of stating the case. The first objection is, that the order was not made upon the complaint of the overseers. I am of opinion that the complaint is sufficient. It is true the complaint is in the name of one overseer, but the order recites that the complaint was by the overseers; and, at the sessions, it was admitted to be on behalf of the parish officers and with their consent. Then, secondly,

Grounds of appeal.

Judgment.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

we are asked, whether the sessions ought to have admitted the evidence objected to. I think the sessions were right upon that point. The examination states that a settlement was gained in a particular manner, and that relief was given upon several occasions by the appellants. No doubt relief alone is evidence sufficient to ground a primâ facie case of settlement; but it might be shown that the relief was given by mistake. The case is much stronger where the examination states a hiring and service and relief given. In this case no particular ground of appeal, with respect to relief, is stated by the appellants; but the appellants say what is equivalent; they do not deny that the relief was given, but they say no settlement was gained. Then, if, at the sessions, the settlement by hiring and service falls to the ground, and the respondents rely upon the relief, the appellants were at liberty to show that still no settlement was gained; and they did it, in effect, by showing that the relief was given by mistake; because, at the time, they believed that the pauper had gained a settlement in their parish by the hiring and service." Patteson, J. "The complaint of the overseers, under the 13 & 14 Car. II., is not required to be in writing; but it must be made on behalf of the overseers. Such was admitted to be the fact in this case at the sessions, although the complaint was by one overseer, and in writing. Mr. Andrews puts the inconvenience which would arise if one overseer might saddle the parish with heavy costs; but that does not necessarily follow; and here the complaint of one is the complaint of all, and is so treated both by the removing justices and at the sessions. As to the second point, it appears to me that the statement in the examination, that the pauper was settled by the means there stated, and that relief was given; and then a ground of appeal, saying that the pauper never acquired a settlement by hiring and service, or any other means, is tantamount to saying, it is true the pauper received relief, but he never gained a settlement, inasmuch as the relief was given by mistake; though it might have been better if it had been so stated. I am of opinion, however, that the ground of appeal is sufficient to enable the appellants to give this evidence." Williams, J. "The sessions only state two points for our consideration: the first is as to the sufficiency of the complaint. The cases quoted all apply to the form of proceeding which is necessary to set the justices in motion, and are not applicable. The question here is, whether the overseer acted by the authority of the other parish officers: that is recited in the order, and admitted at the sessions, which is surely sufficient. Then, as to the other point, the examination whereon the order of removal is made states a supposed settlement by hiring and service in the appellant parish, and relief given on several occasions by that parish when the pauper was residing elsewhere. By their grounds of appeal, the appellants say that the pauper never acquired a settlement in their parish, either by hiring and service, or by any other means; at the sessions, the respondents abandon the settlement by hiring and service, and merely give evidence of relief given by the appellants to the pauper whilst residing in the respondents' parish. Surely it is quite clear that the appellants may oppose that evidence, and explain the grounds upon which the relief was given." Wightman, J. "I am of the same opinion upon both points. Under the 13 & 14 Car. II., the complaint need not have been in writing. Now, the complaint was made by one overseer in writing; but that is not to be taken as a contradiction of the fact of its being on behalf of the parish officers, which is all that is necessary, and which this complaint is recited to be in the order. As to the second point, the argument of Mr. Archbold would have weight if relief was in itself a head of settlement; but that is not so; relief must be given for some settlement not stated. It is said that the appellants must either deny or confess and avoid the examination; but suppose, in this case, it had been stated in the examination that the pauper had received relief from the appellant parish whilst he was residing in that of the respondents, but the nature of the settlement has not been stated. The appellants could not deny the settlement specifically, because none

Relief only primâ facie evidence.

Complaint not required to be in writing.

was stated; but they could say the pauper never acquired a settlement in their parish, and then give evidence, as they have done here, that the relief was given by mistake." Order of sessions confirmed.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

Reg. v. Whitley Upper, 3 P. & D. 81; 11 A. & E. 90. An order for the removal of W. Child, &c. from Flockton to Whitley Upper. Case:— The examination of the pauper was, that he was illegitimate, and born in Flockton, and when seventeen years of age he was bound apprentice, by the overseers of Flockton, to G. Walker, of Whitley Upper, coal miner, until twenty-one years, and that he duly served his apprenticeship at Whitley Upper. The notice of appeal was, "That the said Child was born in your township of Flockton, and has never done any act whereby to gain a settlement in the township of Whitley Upper, inasmuch as the requisites of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, and more particularly the 5th section of that act, were not complied with, when the said child was put and bound apprentice, by the overseers of Flockton, to one G. Walker, of Upper Whitley, coal miner." The appellants proposed to prove that the overseers of the appellant township were not present at the binding, and that no notice whatever was given to the overseers of the appellant township previously to or at the binding of the pauper, pursuant to 56 Geo. III. c. 139. The respondents objected to the reception of this evidence, as being a ground of appeal not set forth in the statement. The Court refused to receive the evidence, and confirmed the order. Lord Denman. "I am of opinion that the appellants did not give such a notice as would entitle them to go into the case set up by them at the sessions, and that this order must be confirmed; and my opinion is not shaken by the argument that, if we hold such a notice as the present to be insufficient, it may become necessary for parish officers to incur the expense of taking legal advice. It may frequently be their duty to take legal advice upon the form of notice to be given, and when that is the case, they will, by doing so, save expense instead of increasing it. It is highly expedient to state facts in the grounds of appeal, instead of raising an argument upon the provisions of a statute. I do not allow that any injustice was done to the appellants in Rex v. Holbeach (p. 1137), and cannot see the inconvenience of requiring notice to be given of the particular issues intended to be tried. I am not, perhaps, prepared to go quite so far as I understood my brother Coleridge to go during the argument, (a) in saying that it never can be sufficient to state generally that none of the requisites of a statute have been complied with, but I think that it is not sufficient, under the circumstances of this case, and that it will always be much better to state facts." Patteson, J. "If I thought that, in consequence of our deciding against this notice, voluminous notices and increased expense, on the part of parishes, would become necessary, I should be unwilling to come to such a decision. But I do not think such consequences will follow. This notice not only does not lead the respondents to the point relied upon, but it actually misleads them. It calls their attention to the order and allowance under sect. 5 of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, whereas the point intended to be raised is as to the notice under the second section." Williams, J. "I am of the same opinion. The court has hitherto proceeded steadily on the sound principle of making the parties to the appeal state specifically what they mean to rely on, and I am not apprehensive of any of the inconveniences suggested." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. With regard to my observation, which my lord has referred to, I wish to say that I meant to confine it to the statute now before the court: and when I repeat that it is not enough in the grounds of appeal to state generally that the requisites of the 56 Geo. III. c. 139, have not been complied with, it must be remembered what diversity of opinion there has been, both on the bench and at the bar, as to the true meaning of many of its provisions. Such a statement refers the respondents to the statute and all the cases decided upon it. At the same time I do not say that there may not be cases in which general reference to a statute would not do, but it is much better to state facts." Order of sessions confirmed.

The examination stated a settlement by parish apprenticeship. The grounds of appeal were that the requisites of 56 Geo. III. c. 139, and more particularly the 5th section of that act, were not complied with when the pauper was so bound apprentice. This will not entitle the appellants to prove that their overseers had no such notice of the binding as is required by sect. 2 of that act.

(a) When he said, "Surely it is not enough to refer to a statute generally, and say that its requisites have not been complied with, leaving the other side to find out what they are, and what the result is of all the cases decided on the construction of the statute; facts should be stated."

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

A notice of appeal stating that the pauper did not acquire a settlement by apprenticeship, as in the examination stated, because the premium was paid by the parish officers, and the statute for binding parish apprentices was not observed, admits the execution of the indenture.

Semble, the notice was altogether bad for generality.

Reg. v. St. John's, Margate, 4 P. & D. 653; 1 Q. B. 252. J. Gocher and family were removed from St. John, Margate, to Playden. Order quashed. Case:—The pauper stated in this examination, "I am thirty-one years of age, and was born at Old Romney. When I was about fifteen years old, I was bound apprentice to John Clark of Playden. I was bound until I should attain the age of twenty-one years, and I now produce the indenture dated August 30th, 1821, executed by both parties and by my father; the consideration was 15*l.* I served the whole time, and resided in my master's house at Playden during the said service. I have been relieved by Margate parish three times." The grounds of appeal were, that J. Gocher did not acquire a settlement in the parish of Playden, by reason of his being bound apprentice by indenture dated 30th August, 1821, to one John Clark, and serving under the same indenture, because the premium of 15*l.* paid to the said John Clark was a payment made by the parish officers of Old Romney, and not by the father of the said J. Gocher, and the requisitions of the statute made for the regulation and binding of parish apprentices then in force were not complied with. Neither the indenture nor a copy of it was sent to the appellants at any time, nor had they seen it until the day of appeal. The respondents began their case by reading the examination and grounds of appeal, and then produced an indenture of apprenticeship as the document referred to in the examination, and was about to have it read, when the appellants inquired who produced it. The respondents then called J. Gocher, the pauper, who said he produced it, and had given it to the attorney for the respondents. The respondents then proposed to read the indenture, alleging that the execution was admitted by the grounds of appeal. The appellants contended that the due execution of the indenture was put in issue by the grounds of appeal, and that, as there was an attesting witness, that witness ought to prove the execution. The court decided that the execution of the indenture ought to be proved. The respondents then withdrew the indenture, and contended that the affirmative lay upon the appellants, and called upon them to begin and prove their case. The court decided that the appellants were not bound to begin, and they requested the respondent to proceed with his case. This the respondent did not do, whereupon the order was quashed. The Reg. v. Whitley, p. 1135, was quoted in support of the order. Lord Denman. "That case seems to show that the notice was altogether defective. However that may be, it is clear that the notice of the grounds of appeal does not put in issue the execution of the indenture. It merely disputes the legality of the payment of the 15*l.*; but that admits the formal execution of the instrument, and sets up a distinct ground, by which notwithstanding it is said the settlement was vitiated." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

Where the ground of appeal was that the second husband was bound to maintain the pauper, an objection of their being irremovable as children within the age of nurture cannot be heard.

Reg. v. Costock, p. 432. The grounds of appeal were, because the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 57, enacts, that every man who shall marry a woman having a child or children, shall be liable to maintain such child or children, as a part of his family. That in the case of the stepfather of these children there is sufficient evidence that he is unable to maintain them without the assistance of the parish, until and only so long as he is receiving relief in the workhouse. The parish of Costock does not deny the settlement of these children, but only their liability for their support, so long as they are under the age of sixteen and their mother shall continue the wife of William Marville. No evidence was offered on either side as to the circumstances of William Marville. Lord Denman. "A further point has been made that the child is within the age of nurture, and could not have been removable at all, and that neither child could have been chargeable; but these points are not raised in the statement of appeal, and cannot be raised now. It is highly important that notice should be given by the appellants of every objection which they mean to rely on. If this objection had been pointed out, the respondents might have been able to meet it at the sessions."

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

Rex v. Holbeach, 5 A. & E. 685; 1 N. & P. 137. The pauper was removed from Holbeach to Spalding. Order quashed. Case:—The examination of the pauper stated a settlement by hiring and service with J. B., of Spalding. One ground of appeal was, that at the time of the pauper's contracting to serve in Spalding for a year, "the pauper did stipulate and agree with J. B., his intended master, that he should, out of his year's service, be allowed to have two days' holidays at Spalding Club Feast," and that on those days he was absent. On the appeal, the pauper stated, "that at the time of hiring himself to J. B., he bargained for one day's holiday to go to Holbeach Fair, and that he had such holiday; but he denied that he made any bargain to have holidays at Spalding Club Feast, and in fact he had not such holidays." The respondents objected to any evidence as to the holiday at Holbeach Fair, as it was not a ground of appeal, but the sessions admitted it, and, treating the contract as an exceptive hiring, quashed the order. The question was, whether such evidence was admissible. Lord Denman. "It is quite clear that we ought to hold parties strictly to the notice they have given. It is very easy to imagine a case of this sort, where a notice might be given fraudulently, with a view to mislead, and yet a very slight difference in the proof be tendered from that specified in the ground of appeal. The objection having been taken at the hearing, we all think it must prevail." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

Where the examination of the pauper stated a settlement by hiring in Spalding, and one ground of appeal was, that the pauper had stipulated for two days' holidays at Spalding Club Feast, it is not open to them to prove a stipulation for one day's holiday at Holbeach Fair.

Reg. v. Recorder of Leeds, 2 Q. B. 547. J. Foulstone was removed from Leeds to Hemsworth. The pauper in his examination stated that he was 33 years old. One ground of appeal was, "that the pauper acquired a settlement in the township of Leeds, in or about the year 1820, by hiring and serving with a Thomas Lancaster, of Leeds aforesaid, butcher, for a year; that he served the said T. L., in Leeds, for 4 years or thereabouts, and received 1*s.* per week during the whole of such term, and during the whole of such term he resided and slept in the said township of Leeds." The respondents objected to the hearing of any evidence, as there was no statement that the pauper, when hired, was unmarried and without child. The recorder allowed the objection, and confirmed the order, without any evidence being heard on either side. The recorder offered to grant a case. On a rule for a mandamus, Lord Denman said, "This is a less expensive course than a case for obtaining a decision, and the applicant must be content to pay the costs." Rule discharged with costs.

The omission in a hiring, that pauper was unmarried, is fatal, although by the examination it appeared he was then only eleven years old.

Rex v. Derbyshire J., 6 A. & E. 885; 1 N. & P. 703. An appeal against an order of removal between Castleton and Bradwell, was entered at the Derbyshire sessions. The respondents objected to its being heard, on the ground that the statement of the grounds of appeal was insufficient. The grounds of appeal were, that the pauper gained a settlement in Chapel-in-le-Frith, in Derby, by hiring and service, for a year and upwards, subsequently to the settlement alleged to have been obtained by her in Castleton; and likewise that she gained a settlement in Bradwell, by hiring and service for a year and upwards; and also by having served several years under a general hiring in Bradwell, after the time when it is alleged she obtained a settlement in Castleton. The majority of the court deemed that the notice was insufficient, and refused to enter on the case. On an application for a mandamus, Littledale, J., delivered the judgment. "The question turned upon the sufficiency of a statement of the grounds of appeal given by officers of the township of Castleton, in Derbyshire, against an order of removal from the township of Bradwell, in the same county. The statement alleged as the ground of appeal, that the pauper had acquired a settlement in Chapel-in-le-Frith, by hiring and service, subsequent to the settlement in Castleton, without stating the time

A ground of appeal, that the pauper has "gained a settlement by hiring and service," in a third parish, without any farther specification, is insufficient. Where there are two overseers and one churchwarden, signature of notice of appeal by the two overseers is sufficient.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

when, or the name of the master. At the sessions the appellant proposed to give in evidence that the pauper was hired by and served a person in Chapel-in-le-Frith, since his acquiring a settlement in the appellant parish; but the court refused to hear the evidence, considering the statement insufficient within the 81st section 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 76. That section requires that the appellants should deliver a statement in writing of the grounds of their appeal, and provides, that on the hearing they shall not go into or give evidence of any other grounds. In this case, if the statement delivered by the appellants was in itself sufficient, they were entitled to give the evidence they tendered at the sessions, notwithstanding the proviso in the act, for it was not evidence of any other ground of appeal; it was to support, by detailed evidence, that ground which was alleged generally in their statement, viz. settlement by hiring and service in Chapel-in-le-Frith. In Rex v. Holbeach (p. 1137), and also in Rex v. Misterton (p. 1120), decided in the present term, we held that the sessions ought not to have received the evidence tendered, because in those cases the statement of the grounds of appeal in the one, and the examination of the pauper in the other, were sufficient in themselves in respect of the particularity of the statement; but the evidence tendered was at variance with those statements, and when received proved another ground of appeal in the one, and removal in the other. Now, it is obvious that this statement gives no real information to the respondent parish. Without being informed of the time of service, or the name of the master, the respondents would in vain make inquiries in any populous parish as to the fact of the pauper having been hired and served in it; and it seems far more convenient to require greater particularity in the statement. But we were pressed with the authority of Rex v. Justices of Cornwall (a) and Rex v. Kelvedon (p. 1124). In the former, the expressions used by the court undoubtedly seem to sanction generality of statement. The circumstances were, however, peculiar. The order of removal related to a man and his wife, and her children by a former husband,

(a) This case is now overruled. It was as follows:—

Rex v. Justices of Cornwall, 5 A. & E. 135. The overseers of St. Gluvias gave notice to the overseers of the parish of Penryn that they intended to appeal against an order for the removal of Charles Halooso and Charlotte his wife, and William, Asinath, and Emily, son and daughters of Charlotte, by a former husband, from Penryn to St. Gluvias, and that the grounds of the appeal are that Charles Halooso was not bound an apprentice (taking different objections to the removal of Halooso,) and that William, Asinath, and Emily, the son and daughters of Charlotte, the wife of the said Charles Halooso, by a former husband, are and each of them is now settled in the said borough of Penryn, &c. In her examination Charlotte Halooso stated that her former husband belonged to the borough of Penryn, and that neither of the three children had done any act to gain a settlement in his or her own right; that the children were living with Charlotte Halooso and her present husband. When the appeal came on to be heard, the sessions received the evidence respecting the settlement of Charles Halooso, but refused to hear any evidence against the removal of the children, except so far as depended upon the settlement of Charles Halooso, on the ground that it was not stated in the appeal how the children were settled in Penryn, and removal was confirmed. Lord Denman, C. J. "This rule must be made absolute. The sessions have refused to hear a case, raising an important point, because the notice does not state how the children were settled in the respondent parish. Sir W. W. Follett contends that the notice must be construed with reference to the order and examination, and that in connection with them it has full information. Without settling the question on that ground, we think it better to state that we think the notice sufficient in itself. The appellants say that they mean to dispute the order on the ground of the children being settled in another parish. That is sufficient to draw the attention of the respondents to the settlement there." Littledale, J. "I think this notice sufficient. Under the old law it was sufficient to give notice of appeal without stating the grounds. Such a statement is now made necessary. Formerly there might be doubt as to the nature of the case to be set up, but now a notice like the present confines the party giving it to proof of a settlement in the parish named, and is a compliance with the provisions of the act." Patteson and Williams, Js., concurred. Rule absolute.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

from Penryn to St. Glauvius. The examination of the pauper and his wife, a copy of which was delivered to the appellants under the 79th section of the act, showed that the man was settled in St. Glauvius, that the father of the children was settled in Penryn—and that they had acquired no settlement of their own. The statement of the grounds of appeal was sufficient as to the man; as to the children, it alleged merely that they were settled in Penryn—a fact which appeared upon the papers of the respondents themselves, and which was not in dispute; but it raised a point of law, namely, whether the children, by the operation of the 57th section of the act, (which makes the children part of the second husband's family, for the purposes of the act,) were removable with the man to his place of settlement. The sessions refused to hear evidence that the father of the children was settled in Penryn. The court held that they were wrong. Perhaps the proper course for the sessions would have been, to have taken the fact of the father's settlement as an admitted fact by both parties, and to have refused evidence either for or against it; but they were certainly wrong in excluding the fact from their consideration. The Rex v. Kelvedon turned on the sufficiency of the pauper's examination, to show the ground of removal; as to which, it was justly observed by my brother Coleridge, that the language of the act is different in the 79th and 81st sections, and that the act was made with different purposes as to the notices to be given by each side. Again, in that case the information was given to the parish in which the pauper was alleged to be settled, and they, by their statement of the grounds of appeal, showed that they fully understood the examination and the grounds of removal contained in it. The clauses in this act, respecting the grounds of removal and appeal, are intended to compel such a disclosure by both parties, as will enable them to go to the sessions fully aware of the questions which are to be discussed: and we think that we best effectuate such intention by holding that the statement must not be in general terms, but must condescend to particulars, not to the extent of setting out the evidence by which facts are to be proved, but so as to give the opposite party reasonable means of inquiry. Another point was made on the argument as to the persons who signed the notice and statement. This point was not made at the sessions; but if it had, we should hold the notice and statement sufficient in that respect, according to the rule which we laid down, a few days since, in the case of Rex v. Justices of Warwickshire, 4 A. & E. 873. Rule discharged.

Signature by two overseers, being a majority, is sufficient. (a)

Reg. v. Bridgewater, 1 G. & D. 265; 10 A. & E. 693. An order for the removal of H. Channon from Bridgewater to Compton Bishop, was quashed. The grounds of appeal were, "that the said H. Channon has never been maintained by our parish of Compton Bishop, but that he has resided in and obtained a settlement in your parish of Bridgewater by servitude therein, the said H. Channon having been the hired servant of C. Knight, of Bridgewater, sheriff's officer, for a period exceeding one year, and has not, since such servitude, obtained a settlement in our parish, and that he, by such service, now is legally settled in Bridgewater." It was objected that the grounds were insufficiently stated, as no time was mentioned. The court thought the notice insufficient, but heard the case, and found that the pauper did gain a settlement by such hiring and service in 1825, and 1826. Lord Denman. "It appears to me to be necessary to state the grounds of appeal as far as they are known. It would be dangerous to admit a generality of statement which might require an inquiry by the respondents through a period of fifty years. The greater the obscurity attending the facts, the more incumbent is it on the appellants to give as much information as possible." Littledale, J. "There may be, no doubt, inconveniences in giving statements as to time with great particularity. A service might be stated at a particular period inaccurately in some degree, and it might be proved that the alleged master at that particular time was dead, and thus greater difficulty would be thrown

The name of the master under whom the hiring and service took place, but no mention of the date of the service, and no reason for the omission, is insufficient.

(a) The signature of the majority of the parish officers is sufficient, Reg. v. Westbury. 1 Car. H. & A.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

in the way of the appellant; but, on the whole, I think there are more inconveniences on the other side. If the required particulars cannot be given, some reason may why they were omitted." Patteson, J. "In cases of settlement by hiring and service the name of the master and the date may easily be given; and, in general, if they are not, I should impute the omission to some sinister motive." Coleridge, J. "It is clearly not enough to show the cause of appeal; the statute requires the ground of appeal also to be given. The proviso (sect. 81) shows the intention of the legislature to require information to be given of the kind of case on which the appellants mean to rely, and to the proof of which alone they are confined, so that the respondents may be prepared. I have some doubt whether the information given in this case was sufficient. But, if it is necessary for us to lay down a rule, I think it better to say that the date of the service should be mentioned as well as the name of the master. I think, however, that the sessions would do well to constitute themselves the judges of the particularity requisite." Order of sessions quashed.

Stating that the party "occupied" is not a sufficient statement of residence.

Mandamus should be applied for promptly.

Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, (Drighlington v. Pudsey), 1 G. & D. 706; 2 Q.B. 505. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal against an order for the removal of Ann the wife of John Moorhouse, &c., from Pudsey to Drighlington, it appeared that the appellants relied solely on a settlement acquired in the respondent township subsequently to the settlement on which the order of removal was made, and one of their grounds of appeal was, "that the husband of the pauper, Ann Moorhouse, in or about the years 1828, 1829, 1830, some or one of them, or some parts of some two of such years, did rent and occupy for the space of twelve months and upwards a house and land at and in the township of Pudsey aforesaid, as tenant to one Mr. Charnock, of Woodhouse, gentleman, of the yearly rent and value of 10*l.* and upwards, and did pay upwards of 10*l.* rent for the same, and did thereby gain a settlement in your said township of Pudsey." The sessions said—"We are compelled to decide that this notice of grounds of appeal does not disclose residence, which is a necessary ingredient in order to gain this settlement," and they refused to allow the appellants to give evidence of this ground of appeal, and confirmed the order. They declined to make any special entry; the order of removal was therefore confirmed generally. As to the delay in applying for this rule, it was stated by the attorney, that he felt it to be his duty to consult with the parish officers and inhabitants of the appellant township, and therefore, shortly after the sessions, he desired the assistant overseer to convene a meeting of the inhabitants, which was done. That there was such a thin attendance of the inhabitants that they did not deem it proper to authorise this application, but directed him to take the first opportunity of consulting counsel thereupon, and then report to a meeting of the inhabitants previous to Easter Term. That during the Lent assizes at York deponent did consult with counsel upon the subject, and a meeting of the inhabitants was convened, on the 1st of April, and at such meeting he was authorised to proceed. It was objected that the rule should have been applied for in Hilary Term. Lord Denman said, "Although there is no absolute rule of practice upon the subject, yet it should be clearly understood that an application of this nature should be made with reasonable promptitude. I doubt whether the present application has been so made, but my brothers think that we should hear the case, as there has been no distinct notice of our practice in this respect. We certainly approve of the conduct of parish officers who do not rush hastily into litigation, but I think these applications should be made very speedily after the sessions, otherwise the situation of the litigant parties may be altered in the interval." Patteson, J. "I admit that the word 'occupy' in this ground of appeal would convey to ninety-nine men out of a hundred that the pauper's husband resided in the house. But we have to construe a notice under an act of parliament, and the notice must have legal certainty. It is said that 'occupation' in this case must mean 'residence.' I do not think so, or even that the words 'actual occupation' would have that meaning. A man may actually occupy a large estate which has no house

"Legal certainty" required.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

whatever upon it. The word 'occupation,' therefore, does not in itself necessarily involve residence; and, even in the case of houses, a man may occupy two houses in different parishes; he may reside in one house himself, and occupy the other by his servants residing in it, yet he could not himself be said to reside in the parish where the last mentioned house is situate. Some other words in addition to the word 'occupy' were necessary in this case to remove doubt and to show a residence in the respondent parish for forty days. The notice here does not necessarily import such residence, and, though our construction may appear strict, the court has decided that such notices must state such facts as necessarily import a settlement." Williams, J. "The decisions of this court do undoubtedly savour somewhat of strictness; but our principle has been to compel both respondents and appellants to give full information to each other of the case relied upon. In pursuance of this principle, we hold that it is not enough in these instruments, when a settlement is set up in them, to give the legal result of facts by stating generally any particular head of settlement, but that the constituent parts of such settlement must also be specified. The question here is, whether the occupation stated necessarily implies the residence also in the respondent parish. I do not think it does; there should have been an express allegation of residence." Wightman, J. "It follows, from the principle that a settlement must be shown in these notices, that the residence should have been shown in this case. Occupation does not necessarily include residence; a man may occupy lands with no house upon them, and even a house he may occupy by his servants. It is better that distinct terms should be used." Patteson, J. "I am requested by Lord Denman to say that he quite agrees with us in our decision." Rule discharged.

The grounds of appeal must state a residence as well as renting and occupation.

Reg. v. Old Stratford, 2 G. & D. 82; 2 Q. B. 513. Case:—The appellants admitted a settlement by the birth of the pauper in their parish, and they set up a subsequent settlement of the father of the pauper in Eatington, by renting a tenement. The grounds of appeal were that "Whatcote, the appellant parish, is not the last place of settlement of John Taylor, the pauper's father, as in the examination stated. That the father of the pauper, in November, 1832, rented a house and orchard at Eatington, in the parish of Eatington, the county of Warwick, from William Marshall, servant to Evelyn John Shirley, Esq. of the same place, at the rent of 10*l.* a year and upwards, and occupied the same under such renting or hiring from that time until Michaelmas, 1836, and paid the rent for the same, and also was assessed to and paid the poor rate for the same, during the whole of that time. It was contended that this statement was insufficient, as it was not stated that the father resided in the parish of Eatington for forty days." Lord Denman. "It is contended that there is a distinction between this case and that of Reg. v. J. W. Riding, and there is so in point of fact. The sessions here have found the statement of the grounds of appeal sufficient. But how have they found that question? Subject to the opinion of this court. They were not bound to grant a case, but they have done so. The grounds of appeal are intended to set up a settlement obtained subsequently to that stated in the examination, but they do not state a complete settlement. I think infinite benefit will be conferred upon parishes by requiring the full particulars of a settlement to be given; and I think we ought not to allow the use of words which are contended to be equivalent to those which would accurately describe the settlement." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

The grounds of appeal must state all the essentials of a subsequent settlement. In a settlement by hiring and service, it must be stated that the hiring was for a year.

Reg. v. North Bovey, 1 G. & D. 701; 2 Q. B. 500. J. Langworthy and family were removed from Northmolton to North Bovey. Order confirmed. Case:—The removal was made on the examination of the pauper, who stated that he had been bound a parish apprentice in North Bovey, without any date. When there were about six months to come of his apprenticeship his master gave him leave to serve whom he liked, and that he afterwards agreed to serve Edmund Stooke, of the parish of Ashton, for a month, at 3*s.* a week. When the month was up he agreed to live on at the same wages by the month; the bargain to be at an end at any time by a month's warning from either party. He continued under that agreement nearly two years, and left his place by giving a month's notice; and he has not done any other act whereby to gain a settlement. The ground of appeal was, "that the pauper acquired a settlement in Ashton by hiring and service with one Edmund Stooke, of George Teign, in the said parish, subsequently to that acquired by him in our parish." On the appeal it was objected that the ground of appeal was insufficient, as no time at which the pauper was hired and served with Edmund Stooke was specified, and that it was not stated that the hiring was for a year. The appellants contended, that the ground of appeal in connection with the examination was sufficient, and that all was stated as to time which it was bonâ fide in the power of the appellants to ascertain, and they tendered evidence to show that inquiries as to that point had been made, but without success. The court found that the appellants had set forth all that was within their knowledge as to time bonâ fide, and overruled the first objection to the notice, but on the second objection they think that it is necessary that the appellant should have set forth the hiring and service to have been of the nature and description of a yearly hiring, and, that not having been done, the court admitted the second objection, and confirmed the order. Lord Denman. "The question is, whether the notice of appeal discloses any settlement at all. It is very difficult to lay down any rule which parish officers may not elude, but our principle is, that they must give all the information they can. I certainly do not see by what means the justices arrived at the conclusion that the appellants in this case have given all the information in their power. But it is not necessary to go into that question, because it is quite clear that, when appellants meet an examination by setting up a subsequent settlement, the settlement set up must be shown to be a complete settlement. This seems almost a truism. It is argued that, where the appellants set up a settlement by hiring and service, it cannot be inferred that the hiring can be anything else than a hiring for a year. But why is anything to be left to inference? In conformity with Reg. v. Middleton in Teesdale (p. 1127), we must decide that this notice is insufficient." Patteson, J. "If this statement of the grounds of appeal be looked at by itself, as unconnected with the examination, it is wanting in proper particularity of time, and is clearly bad. The statement is, that 'the pauper acquired a settlement in the parish of Ashton, in the said county of Devon, by hiring and service, with one Edmund Stooke, of George Teign, in the said parish, subsequently to that acquired by him in our parish.' If it had said expressly that the subsequent settlement had been gained by the hiring and service mentioned in the examination, a different question would have arisen. It might then have been for the justices to say whether, on the facts, there had been a hiring for a year. But, as the notice now is, the hiring relied on by the appellants may be a different hiring from that in the examination, for the examination is not referred to. The notice of appeal should have shown such a hiring as would give a settlement." Williams, J. "The meaning of the court has been, that, as well in the statement of the grounds of appeal as in the examination, a complete settlement should be set out, and that there should be given explicitly all such information as may be requisite to regulate the conduct of the adverse party, to whom the document is sent." Wightman, J., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

A mandamus will not lie to compel the justices to insert the statement of the residence on the examination, though it is sworn that the pauper so stated, and that it was omitted through inadvertence. (Reg. v. Rogers, 21 L. J. 50.)

Grounds of appeal, setting up a settlement by paying rates in or about the year 1830, in respect of a tenement, not

Reg. v. J. Sussex, 10 A. & E. 682; 3 P. & D. 42. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal of Carshalton against the removal of H. Gilbert, it appeared that the grounds of appeal were, "that the said H. Gilbert did not acquire a settlement in Carshalton by service with T. F. R. for two years, at the wages of 20*l.*, payable half-yearly, as stated in the examination; and stating the name of the landlord, is insufficient.

secondly, that after leaving the service of the said Reynolds, the said H. Gilbert acquired a settlement in the parish of Ticehurst, in the county of Sussex, by having in or about the year 1830 paid parochial taxes for and in respect of a certain tenement in the said parish of Ticehurst, rented by the said H. Gilbert at 15*l.* a-year for one whole year, and occupied by him under such hiring for more than the said term of one year, the rent for the same to the amount of 10*l.* having been paid by the said H. Gilbert." At the sessions the appellants admitted the settlement in their parish, but proposed to prove a subsequent settlement in Ticehurst parish, by renting a tenement. The respondents objected that the grounds of appeal were too general, and the sessions stopped the hearing and discharged the order. Lord Denman. "I do not mean to say that the local situation of the premises must necessarily be specified, because that may be difficult; though in a large parish it ought to be ascertained as nearly as possible. But at any rate the landlord's name should be given. This notice was insufficient." Littledale, J. "The landlord ought to have been described; I do not say by his Christian name, but at any rate by his surname." Coleridge, J. "Ascertaining the situation of the premises might be more or less difficult, according to the nature of the parish. In an agricultural parish, for instance, there might be a good deal of difficulty, but there the name of the landlord would be the best way of fixing the property." Rule discharged.

That pauper rented a tenement consisting of the feeding of a cow on the land, &c., is not sufficient.

Reg. v. Cumberworth Half, 8 Jurist, 57. The settlement stated the following ground of appeal, "That, subsequent to the said alleged apprenticeship (a) in our said township of Cumberworth Half, that is to say, in or about the year 1812, the said William Burdett, the pauper, rented a cottage or tenement of the value and for the sum (which he paid) of 1*l.* 10*s.* per annum, situate at Exley Gate, in your said township of Denby, in which he resided for the term of one whole year at the least, and the said pauper has ever since continued to reside, and does in fact now reside in the same cottage at Exley Gate aforesaid; and that in or about the year aforesaid, and at the same time that he so occupied and resided in the said cottage or tenement at Exley Gate aforesaid, he also rented and occupied another tenement at Denby Hall, in your said township of Denby, consisting of the keeping or feeding of a cow, of which he was the owner, by and on the land and premises of James Haigh, of Denby Hall aforesaid, for the space of one whole year, and which was of the value of 10*l.* a year at the least, and for which the said pauper paid to the said James Haigh the sum of 4*s.* a week during the whole year, whereby the said pauper did acquire a settlement, and is now legally settled in your said township of Denby." The respondents admitted that the facts stated in this ground of appeal were true, and it was agreed that evidence sufficient to establish such facts should be taken as having been adduced by the appellants; but it was objected that the ground of appeal did not show upon the face of it a settlement in Denby. The sessions so decided, and confirmed the order. Lord Denman. "It is contended that the statement in the grounds of appeal, of a subsequent settlement by renting a tenement, is not sufficient. In my opinion, that which is stated does not constitute a tenement. Rex v. Tisbury (p. 757), and the other cases all show that a settlement can only be gained by a contract to keep and feed upon the growing produce of some particular land. The words 'by and on the land and premises' are not entitled to much weight; I think, that, putting a reasonable construction upon the language used, the statement with respect to the tenement is insufficient." Patteson, J. "As to the other point, the case is very clear, unless the argument as to the word 'by' is entitled to any weight. 'By,' it is said, must apply to the growing produce of the land for the whole year; but it seems to me that it can only apply to the growing produce when there is any on which the cow may be fed. Rex v. Sutton St. Edmond's (p. 759), is strongly in favour of the respondents. Bayley, J., citing Rex

(a) As to the examination in this case, p. 1061.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

v. Oswald Twissell (p. 759), says, 'In that case, the pauper rented, inter alia, the milk of a cow to be kept by the owner; her keep made up the necessary value, 10*l.*, and she was, in fact, pasture fed; but it was held, that, as it did not appear to have been made matter of bargain that she should be pasture fed, hiring her milk was not necessarily taking a tenement, and the order of sessions allowing the settlement was quashed.' Lord Tenterden, in his judgment in the same case, says, 'According to Rex v. Oswald Twissell, the contract must be to feed the cattle with the growing produce of the land.' Now, this statement does not show any such contract: this contract was generally to feed the cow for the whole year. As to the second point, reading the language of the grounds of appeal as a man of common sense would do, the contract was to keep and feed the cow by and on the land and premises of John Haigh, for the space of one whole year; using the word 'tenement' would not make that a tenement which was not one in law. It does not at all appear that the cow must necessarily be pasture fed." Wightman, J. "I am of the same opinion. It is true, the word 'tenement' is used in the statement, but it does not necessarily appear that the cow must have been pasture fed; the cow might have been fed upon hay grown on the land in a former year, or upon hay grown on other land. There is no sufficient tenement set out in the statement." Order confirmed.

A defect in the grounds of appeal cannot be supplied by incorporating the examination, unless the notice expressly refers to the examination.

Reg. v. Stowford, 2 G. & D. 390; 2 Q. B. 526. Williams was removed from Stowford to Broadwoodwidger. Order quashed. Case:—The examination of the pauper, after alleging a settlement in Broadwoodwidger, proceeded thus:—"About ten years ago I went to Mr. Rundell, at Stowford, and lived there from Michaelmas until Lady-day, and then went to Maristowe, and lived there eight months, and afterwards went to work until the following Lady-day, and then went to Stowford, and lived with Mr. Jackman there under a yearly hiring for eleven months and a fortnight." The grounds of appeal were, "because the pauper acquired a settlement in the said parish of Stowford subsequently to that acquired by him in our parish. Because the pauper acquired a settlement in the said parish of Stowford by hiring with one Mr. Jackman from Lady-day to the following Lady-day, and service under the same in that parish accordingly, subsequently to that acquired by him in our parish." The respondents objected that the appellants were not at liberty to go into evidence of the settlement in Stowford upon the above grounds of appeal. The sessions overruled the objection, and quashed the order. Lord Denman. "The first impression of any one reading these documents might very well be, that the Mr. Jackman mentioned in them is one and the same person. But when the grounds of appeal are attentively looked at, it will be seen that there really is no reference in them to the Mr. Jackman mentioned in the examination, so that there are two persons mentioned and no averment is made of their identity. There was the same state of things in Reg. v. North Bovey (p. 1141), and my brother Patteson considered whether the reference to the examination sufficiently appeared. He thought it did not, and I think he was right. Where the places mentioned are very small, and the names of persons very uncommon, there may be no uncertainty as to the persons meant; yet, on the other hand, the mention of a common name with reference to a populous neighbourhood, might give no information whatever, and it would be most inconvenient to lay down a different rule for the two cases. I think Reg. v. North Bovey an authority binding upon us, and, as the sessions have asked our opinion, we cannot but say, that we think there was nothing for them to inquire into, and that their decision was wrong." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

A ground of appeal stating that

Reg. v. Carnarvonshire (a), 1 G. & D. 423; 2 Q. B. 325. On a rule for (a) Another point determined in this case was, that the court of Queen's Bench will issue a mandamus to hear an appeal, if the sessions have refused to hear upon an erroneous decision as to the sufficiency of the grounds of appeal. This was reversed in Reg. v. Kesteven, post.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

a mandamus to hear an appeal by Gyffym against an order for the removal of M. Roberts and children, it appeared that it was objected that the grounds of appeal were too general, and the sessions allowed the objection, and refused to hear the case. The grounds of appeal were, secondly, that D. Roberts was settled in Liverpool; thirdly, "that the respondent parish have acknowledged D. Roberts to be an inhabitant of, and legally settled in, their parish, by relieving him and the other paupers, as part of his family, from time to time during the last six years, whilst they were resident (in other places) out of the respondent parish, and particularly by giving relief to D. Roberts and the paupers, as part of his family, several times in the years 1839 and 1840, during which time he and his family were residing in the town of Liverpool." Williams, J. "The third ground of appeal states that the appellants proposed to prove relief given by the respondents out of their parish. The argument against the sufficiency of it goes to exclude evidence of the most cogent description, that the pauper was settled in the respondent parish. This statement satisfies the object of the act of parliament, which was, that parties at the trial of the appeal should not be taken by surprise. The second ground is no doubt too general; but the third, I think, gives adequate information; and the sessions having declined to hear the case altogether, I am of opinion that this rule should be made absolute." Coleridge, J. "I agree with my brother Williams. The statement appears in perfect good faith to state a matter more within the knowledge of the respondents than of the appellants. It in fact says, 'I object to the removal of the pauper because your parish has always acted as if he were settled within it.' It gives adequate information of the strong primâ facie case which the appellants propose to prove—that the respondent parish has relieved the pauper repeatedly out of their parish. The times, sums, and places, are all more within the knowledge of the respondents than of the appellants. I think there is nothing in the objection that the statement does not in terms assert a particular settlement. Proof of those facts stated would constitute a primâ facie case without evidence of any particular settlement." Wightman, J. "The second ground of appeal, stating that the pauper is settled in the respondent parish, is too general; but the third, the legal effect of which is the same as the second, is not open to that objection. It gives the particulars of facts, much better known to the respondents than to the appellants, which, if proved, would establish a primâ facie case against the respondent parish." Rule absolute.

the pauper had been relieved during the last six years out of the parish, and particularly during 1839 and 1840, while residing at Liverpool, is sufficiently explicit.

Reg. v. J. Denbighshire, 5 Jurist, 99. An order was signed by B. Cundy and E. L. Kenyon, two justices of Denbigh. The order removed a woman and three children to the parish of Llangollen. A notice, without a date, of the order of removal, together with a copy of the order and of the examination of the pauper, was sent to Llangollen, and the paupers were removed. A notice of appeal was sent, stating that the parish of Llangollen intended to appeal against the order of removal made by R. H. Cundy and E. L. Kenyon. This notice properly described the paupers, the parishes, and the order of removal in every other particular. The settlement stated in the examination of the pauper, was a settlement of her husband by apprenticeship in the parish of Llangollen. The grounds of appeal were, that the husband, during his apprenticeship, resided forty days and slept forty nights in a third parish, but it was not distinctly stated that he had gained a settlement thereby, nor was there any statement that the last night of the service under the articles of apprenticeship was passed in the third parish. The want of date to the notice of the chargeability of the pauper was another ground of appeal. At the sessions it was objected that there was a variance between the notice of appeal and the order of removal, as to the name of one of the justices who signed the order, and that consequently no notice of appeal had been given against the order in question, and the justices refused to hear the appeal. On an application for a mandamus, Williams, J., said: "If the case had come to the point of how far those grounds of appeal were good, so as to let in the questions as to the residence of the pauper's husband in the third parish, there might have now been something for me to decide as to those questions; but as the case was stopped at an earlier stage, it is unnecessary for me to decide them; so in the same way it is unnecessary for me to decide as to the want of a date to the notice of the order of removal; that point not being raised on this rule. The only question now is, whether the variance in the name of the justice between the order of removal and the notice of appeal, is so material as to create a doubt whether the order of removal was the one appealed against or not. I think that the point is very different from a point of variance arising from the setting out of documents in pleading, and that it cannot be considered at all as a parallel case. The notice of appeal is for the purpose of intimating that the respondents have been aggrieved by the order of removal. The order is, in every other respect, properly described; and I think that the court of quarter sessions have unnecessarily taken into their consideration a nice point of variance, with which they had nothing to do." Rule absolute.

A variance between the notice and the order in the initials of the name of one of the magistrates who signed the order, is not fatal. The sessions ought to hear such appeal.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

The notice need not state the names of the justices who signed the order.

Reg. v. West Houghton, 13 L. J. 41. The notice of appeal did not state the names of the justices who made the order. The sessions allowed the objection, but reserved a case. Lord Denman. "We do not wish to encourage the practice of asking questions of this court, with a view to a rehearing of the case by the sessions; but in this instance we may say, that there is nothing whatever in the objection." Case sent back.

Where an appeal, in consequence of the justices being equally divided, is adjourned to a subsequent sessions, the appellants cannot serve new grounds of appeal.

Reg. v. Arlecdon, 3 P. & D. 93; 11 A. & E. 87. The appeal was heard at the Michaelmas sessions, when the justices, being equally divided in opinion, adjourned the appeal to the following sessions. Before the Epiphany sessions the appellants furnished fresh grounds of appeal, containing the ground set out in the first statement, and also three additional ones. It was objected that the appellants had no right to serve a fresh statement under the circumstances. The sessions held that the appellants had such right, and received the statement. The appellants then objected, under the new statement, to the notice of chargeability, as not having been signed by the requisite number of parish officers. The sessions allowed the objection, and quashed the order. Lord Denman. "This case has been properly distinguished from Rex v. Derbyshire (infra), where there had been no trial at all. Here the court was in possession of the grounds of appeal at the first hearing, and we cannot allow them to be afterwards unravelled. We think the case may be reheard upon the merits."

But when an appeal, in consequence of pressure of business, is made a remanet, the appellants may serve a fresh statement, differing from the former.

Reg. v. J. Derbyshire, 3 N. & P. 591; 6 A. & E. 612. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal, it appeared that notice of appeal, and a statement of the grounds, had been duly served on the respondent parish before the Epiphany sessions, when, in consequence of the pressure of business, the case was made a remanet to the Easter sessions. Before these sessions a fresh statement of the grounds of appeal was served, which differed in some respects from the former. On the appeal, the appellants produced both statements; and the court held that they must elect and rely upon one only, and on their electing to rely on the statement last served, it was objected that they had thereby waived the other, and that the statement relied on was invalid, because it had not been served, according to 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 81, fourteen days before the first day of the sessions at which the appeal was intended to be tried, which were the Epiphany, and not the Easter sessions. The sessions allowed the objection, and dismissed the appeal. During the argument, Lord Denman observed, "Suppose they had given in their statement so early before the sessions, that they had time enough afterwards to serve a totally different or an amended statement, could they not have done so?" And as to the inconvenience, Lord Denman said, "The sessions might award costs to the respondents, if they should be misled, and thereby put to expense;" and in giving judgment he said, "I do not think the word 'intended,' in the act, should be construed so as to confine the appellants strictly to their original statement. It is reasonable that they should be heard." The other judges concurred. Rule absolute.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

The notice of appeal against an order adjudicating on the settlement of an insane pauper, should be given to the clerk of the peace and not to the justices.

Reg. v. J. Kent, 2 G. & D. 152. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal by St. Nicholas, Deptford, against an order of two justices, adjudging the settlement of Eliza Rawlings, a poor insane person, confined in the county lunatic asylum, to be in the said parish, it appeared that the notice of appeal had been given to the clerk of the peace for the county. It was objected that the sessions could not entertain the appeal, as the justices who made the order ought to have been served with notice of the appeal, and have been made respondents therein. The sessions allowed the objection, and dismissed the appeal. Lord Denman. "The question is, whether the notice of appeal given in this case to the clerk of the peace, under the 54th section, was a good notice of appeal against an order made under the 42d section. I think it was a good notice, and that the justices should have heard the appeal. The words of the appeal clause, in section 54, are large enough to include this case, and, notwithstanding the position of the section, may relate back to the 42d section. It is said that we cannot leap over the intermediate appeal clause in the 46th section, which will include this case. But I think the 46th section, which gives the right of appeal, 'if any person shall feel aggrieved by any order, or by any refusal of an order,' applies only to the cases in the 44th and 45th sections—the cases of lunatics wandering about the country, and to other cases, where an individual is affected by an order or by the refusal of an order. The present is not such a case, but involves a question between the parish, upon which the order to maintain the pauper has been made, on the one hand, and the county on the other, upon which the burden of maintaining the pauper will be cast back, if the order is quashed. The appellants in the case are the churchwarden and overseers of the parish, and the county is represented by the clerk of the peace, as its officer. The clerk of the peace would seem to be the proper party to receive the notice on behalf of the county. As there are particular cases under sections 44 and 45, to which the appeal clause in section 46 may refer, and as the county fund is equally concerned, whether the case is under section 42 or section 54, it seems reasonable to hold that this notice to the clerk of the peace, under the 54th section, is good." Patteson, J. "I am of the same opinion, though the case is not free from difficulty. I think, however, that the appeal clause in the 54th section applies to orders made under the 42d section, and that there is no difference, in this respect, between criminal and pauper lunatics; in either case the contest is between the county and the parish. Section 46 appears to apply to the cases in the 44th and 45th sections only. There is certainly some difficulty in this construction, for, if under section 44 the vagrant has been adjudged to be a settled pauper, and the order should be appealed against, there seems just as good reason why the clerk of the peace should be respondent in that case, as if it were a case under the 54th section, for there is the same interest on the part of the county, and the same absence of interest on the part of the justices, in both cases." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. Sections 44, 45, and 46, seem isolated from the rest of the act. Under sections 44 and 45, individual interests are concerned either by the making or refusing an order, which adjudges a party to be disordered in his senses, and that his property may be seized. There is therefore abundant room in such cases for individual grievance, and it is right that the justices should have notice of appeal against their order. The appeal clause, therefore, in section 46, has something to act upon, without reference to the 42d section. In a case like the present, the interested parties are the parish on the one hand and the county on the other. It is therefore reasonable that the clerk of the peace, who represents the county, should have the notice." Wightman, J., concurred. Rule absolute.

The grounds of appeal must be served fourteen

Reg. v. J. Salop, 3 N. & P. 286. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal against an order of removal, that the Epiphany sessions were held clear days before the first day of sessions, and such days exclusive of the day of the delivery and of the first day of sessions.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

(a) In re Prangley, 4 Ad. & E. 781.

on the 2d January, 1836, and that the grounds of appeal had been delivered on 19th December, the sessions were of opinion that they had not been delivered "fourteen days at least" before the first day of the sessions, and refused to hear the appeal. Coleridge, J. "We lately held (a) that the three days' notice, under the rule of H. T. 6 Will. IV., by persons applying for admission as attorneys, were to be clear days." Lord Denman. "The rule has been already laid down, that so many days 'at least' means clear days: it would be more mischievous to shake this rule than to cause inconvenience in a particular case." Littledale, J. "If this were res integra, I should say that 'a day at least' cannot mean more than 'a day;' but as there has been a decision, we will abide by it." Patteson, J., concurred. Coleridge, J. "I concur on the ground already mentioned; but if there had been no authority, my opinion would have been otherwise." Rule discharged.

Sessions are bound to receive an appeal, although no notice has been given.

Rex v. J. of Huntingdonshire, Cald. 283; 2 Bott, 948. Upon a removal of a pauper, the notice of appeal was served upon a Sunday: had the appellants deferred the service of their notice till another day, they would not have been in time, under the practice established in that court, to have given reasonable notice for the purpose of trying the merits. The sessions (being of opinion that the party aggrieved was not at any rate, or for any purpose, entitled to appeal, unless the prescribed notice had previously been given; and also that a service of a notice on a Sunday was not a legal service, and that in point of law there had not been any notice,) refused to hear, adjourn, or enter the appeal. A rule was obtained for mandamus to receive and hear the appeal, and no cause being shown was made absolute.

The justices are bound to receive an appeal against an order of removal, if offered at the next sessions, although no notice has been given.

Rex v. J. of Gloucestershire, Doug. 191; 2 Bott, 727. On application for a mandamus to receive an appeal, it appeared from the affidavits, that the examination of the pauper was taken in August, the order of removal the 12th of November following, and the sessions were held on the 12th of January following: that no notice of appeal had been served (for which the reason assigned was, that the appellants had not been able to get their witnesses ready till it was too late to give such notice), that the court had been moved to receive the appeal, and adjourn the consideration of it till the following sessions, and had refused. The court were clearly of opinion, that the justices ought to have received the appeal, and the rule was made absolute.

It is imperative upon the sessions to enter and adjourn the appeal where no notice has been given to the respondents.

Rex v. J. of Bucks, 3 East, 343. It was determined, that where notice had been given, and if upon an appeal lodged against the order of removal, the sessions were of opinion that reasonable notice had not been given by the appellant to the respondent parish, they could not dismiss the appeal on the ground that notice might have been given in time, but were bound by the direction of the stat. 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, to adjourn the appeal to the next sessions. (N.B. This case overruled that of Rex v. Yorkshire, 3 T. R. 150, but see the reason given in that case for the refusal, and the observations of Lord Tenterden, Rex v. Wiltshire, p. 345).

Same point.

Rex v. J. of Shropshire, (erroneously reported Rex v. J. of Staffordshire, 7 East, 549). An appeal was lodged at the next sessions after an order of removal made, and was moved to be adjourned on the part of the appellants, no notice having been given to the respondents; but the sessions being of opinion there had been sufficient time for the appellants to have given notice of such, after the order had been executed, and before the holding of the sessions, dismissed the appeal. Whereupon a rule was obtained for a mandamus to enter a continuance to the next sessions, and hear the appeal. No opposition was made; it was considered (a) that Rex v. J. of the North

(a) In that case, reported 3 T. R. 150, an order was made on the 26th of November, and executed on the 28th. It appeared that the appellants attended at the next sessions, held on the 13th of January, and moved the court for leave to lodge the appeal, and to respite the hearing thereof to the next sessions. The following entry was made by the sessions: "Forasmuch as it appears to this Riding of Yorkshire had been overruled by Rex v. J. of Bucks. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, that "the latter case had been well considered, and that the court were satisfied that the statute was compulsory on the sessions in these cases to receive and adjourn the appeal." Rule absolute.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

Justices ought not to enter and adjourn an appeal, if there has been time to try it.

In Rex v. Wiltshire (p. 345), Lord Tenterden, C. J., said, "It appears to me, upon the sound construction of 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 4, that where there is time, between the allowance of the rate and the next sessions, for a reasonable notice of appeal to be given, and no notice is given, the justices not only may, but ought to reject the appeal, and not suffer it to be entered at all. But where they do suffer it to be entered, I think they have most clearly the power of adjourning or respiting it; for such a power is incident to their character as a court of justice."

The sessions have power to judge of the reasonableness of the notice; but the court of K. B. has a visitatorial jurisdiction (a)

Rex v. J. of Wiltshire, 10 East, 404. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal by Stourton against an order of removal from Mere, in Wiltshire, it appeared that the appellant's attorney lived at Wincaunton, in Somerset; that he was applied to by the officers of S. on the 19th of April last, to enter the appeal and get it respited until the next sessions, in consequence of which, notice of appeal, and of the intended motion to respite, was given to the respondents; the next sessions was held on the 26th of April, when the appeal was entered and respited to the Midsummer sessions, which was held at Warminster on the 12th of July; on the 2nd of July the appellant's attorney learnt, for the first time, that the sessions had made certain rules for their practice, which were not published till after the April sessions, nor acted upon, nor officially circulated, till the Midsummer sessions, by which it was required that, on all trials of appeals, the notice of trial was to be given on or before the Monday in the week next before the sessions, otherwise the notice to be deemed insufficient, and that the like notice was to be given in the case of respited appeals, unless, &c. On Tuesday, the 5th of July, notice of trial of the appeal was served on the respondents, at six o'clock in the morning, dated the day before, being as soon as the signatures of the parish officers could be obtained. The usual notice theretofore required in such cases, in this and the neighbouring counties, was given in this case. The appeal was called on, when the respondents objected that the notice had not been given in time. The appellants then applied for an adjournment under the circumstances, offering to pay the costs of the day; but the court refused it, thinking they had no power to do so. Affidavits were read in answer, alleging that the new order of practice was made at the preceding January sessions, held at Devizes: and that notice of it was immediately after promulgated in the county; that the appellant's attorney lived only five miles from S., though in the county of Somerset; and that the litigating parishes were very near to each other. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The magistrates certainly had a discretion to exercise with respect to what was reasonable time for giving the notice of appeal; but we have also a kind of visitatorial jurisdiction over them, in the exercise of such discretionary power; and we think that court that there has been sufficient time since the removal of the paupers for the appellants to give notice and come prepared to try this appeal at this sessions, and no cause shown why they did not proceed accordingly, it is ordered that the motion for lodging the same, and respiting the hearing to the next quarter sessions, be rejected." The court were of opinion that the justices had not acted wrong; for the motion was in effect to adjourn the appeal. And it was evidently the intention of the parties not to enter the appeal, unless the court would adjourn it. The justices are to judge of the reasonableness of the time; and in some counties they establish a rule regulating the time of notice. Here it appears that the order of removal was executed on the 28th of November; so that there was sufficient time for the appellants to give notice and to come prepared to try it; and the justices, who are the judges of this, thought so. Rule for mandamus discharged.

---

(a) "It is not correct to say this court sets its discretion against that of the sessions." Parke, J., 5 B. & Ad. 671, Rex v. Yorkshire J.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

in this case they have not exercised that discretion in a way that we ought to give effect to; but that we ought to interfere and correct it. Here it appeared that a new rule of practice, with respect to giving notice, had been recently made by the sessions, of which the appellant's attorney had no knowledge, but he conformed himself to the former practice; and, under these circumstances, it would be too much to conclude the appellants from having their case heard." Rule absolute. [Though by 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 13, the appeal was to be lodged at the next quarter sessions, yet when it was so lodged, the justices might have adjourned it toties quoties the purpose of justice required. Vide Rex v. Lumley, 2 Salk. 605. And there is nothing in 9 Geo. I. to restrain their general power in this respect, but rather to compel the adjournment, if the first notice has not been given.] —(Mr. East's note.)

The 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, only applies to the first sessions after executing the order of removal; and therefore the court will not interfere with the discretion of the magistrates at the second as to adjournment, if it is in furtherance of a reasonable practice.

Rex v. Monmouthshire, 3 Dowl. P. C. 306. By an order of removal, dated May 28th, 1834, a pauper was removed from Bedwellty, Monmouthshire, to Rhyndwyclydach Lower, Glamorganshire. At the following sessions, held at Usk on the 30th of June, an appeal against the order was entered and respited. No notice was given to the respondents previous to such entry and respite; but on the 30th of September following, the agents received a letter, inclosing a notice of appeal, which notice was forwarded by them, by the same day's post, to the attorney for the respondents. By the practice of the Monmouthshire sessions, eight days' notice is required in common appeals, and fourteen days' notice in respited appeals. The Michaelmas sessions were held at Usk on the 14th of October; it was therefore admitted that the notice of appeal was served too late, in consequence of which notice was given by the appellants to the respondents, that they should move to adjourn the appeal at the ensuing sessions. Accordingly at those sessions the appellants did so move; when the court, exclusive of the chairman, being equally divided in opinion, he gave the casting vote against the appeal being adjourned. The attorney for the appellants stated in his affidavit that he was wholly ignorant of the practice of the Monmouthshire sessions, never having tried an appeal at them; and that he never heard that fourteen days' notice of appeal, in case of adjourned appeals, was necessary, until he was so informed by a letter, dated the 30th of September, from his agents. The affidavit against the rule stated that the agents had been in practice for many years at Usk, where the sessions were always held, and were well acquainted with the practice of those sessions. Patteson, J. "The question here is, to what extent the court will interfere with the jurisdiction, and with the exercise of the discretion of the sessions. Though a doubt was raised last term, whether the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, applied to a subsequent sessions, I take it to be a settled rule, at least I always thought so, that it only applied to the first sessions. The extent to which the court will interfere with the sessions is a matter that I do not like to determine at once. In Rex v. Wilts (p. 1149), the judges seem to have gone a long way; but in Rex v. W. R. Yorkshire (p. 1149 n.), Parke, J., stated that "he did not approve of the observations in that case, that the sessions were judges of what was reasonable notice. Now if the court, in the case of Rex v. Wilts, means only that we might interfere where there is no rule, it is quite right: if it means that we are to interfere in all cases where there is an existing rule, I should have considerable doubt." Cur. adv. vult. Patteson, J. "I have considered this case; I think it seems to have been agreed on both sides that the 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 8, does not apply to the present case; that section unquestionably applies only to the first sessions; and that section gives no jurisdiction further than this, whether the notice is a reasonable notice or not: but it goes on to say, that, if it is not a reasonable notice, then the justices are to adjourn the appeal. They must adjourn it. In this case there was no notice at the first sessions, therefore the statute was entirely out of the question. The whole matter, therefore, depends on whether this court can interfere where the magistrates have laid down a rule, and have chosen to act upon the rule. Rex v. Wilts has been a good deal relied upon. That case is certainly one in which some of the expressions have been, I will not say found fault with, but cautiously abstained from in later cases, because the judges thought they went too far; that case proceeded entirely on this, that there was a new practice, only existing for two sessions, doing away with the former practice, and the attorney had acted in ignorance of that practice, and the court thought that the sessions had acted wrongly. How far there would be a similar decision now may be doubtful. But this case is not like that. Here there is no suggestion that the practice is a new practice; and I cannot say that that practice is an illegal practice. The practice requires eight days' notice of an original appeal, and fourteen days' notice of an adjourned appeal: why more should be required in the latter case than in the former I do not see." [Counsel. "It is founded on this ground, that the respondents may naturally expect to have an appeal at the first sessions after the order, and therefore eight days' notice will be sufficient; but if the appellants pass by the first sessions, the respondents will be lulled into security, and therefore are fairly entitled to a longer notice at the second sessions."] Patteson, J. "I suppose that may be so. There is nothing illegal in it. There is nothing so absurd in it as to require us to lay it down that it is not good. If the sessions have thought fit to lay it down, they may abide by it. It was for the sessions to determine whether they would adjourn. The sessions seem to have differed in opinion, but that is immaterial. It was in the exercise of their discretion whether they would adjourn. It was purely a matter of discretion. Undoubtedly, there was no great hardship on the attorney; he was a stranger, but he ought to have informed himself of the practice of the sessions where the case was to come on. Reliance was placed on Rex v. W. R. Yorkshire. There there was a special act, allowing an appeal upon giving ten days' notice of appeal, and nothing was said about that appeal, supposing it to be adjourned. The sessions refused to adjourn; and this court said that the sessions were wrong, because there was no practice, which there could not be, as to that appeal. There was no general practice brought to the notice of the court, and therefore they held that the sessions had acted wrongly in refusing to hear the appeal, there being nothing at all to show that the party desirous of appealing was to give a notice at the second sessions. Here there is a distinct practice of requiring such a notice." Rule for a mandamus discharged with costs.

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

Mandamus to hear appeal granted, when by practice of sessions fourteen days' notice was required.

Rex v. Lancashire, J., 7 B. & C. 691. An order was served, and instructions given for appeal too late to try the appeal at the July sessions in 1827. It was lodged and respited then. On the 8th of October notice of appeal was given for the sessions held October 22nd. By a rule of sessions made in 1816, fourteen days' notice, exclusive of the day of notice and the day of holding, was required. The attorney thought that the fourteen days were to be calculated, one exclusive, and the other inclusive. Lord Tenterden. "We think that justice will be most satisfactorily administered by ordering the justices to enter continuances, and hear this appeal. They certainly have a discretionary power to make rules for the governance of the practice of the sessions, but the case cited (Rex v. Wiltshire, J., ante, p. 1149,) shows that this court, for the purposes of justice, will interfere to control that discretion." Mandamus granted.

No notice of appeal is required where the respite takes place at the instance of the respondents.

Rex v. Lindsey, 6 M. & Sel. 379. An order of removal from Messingham to Tickhill was made on the 7th of January, 1817. On the 11th, Tickhill gave notice of appeal. At the sessions the respondents moved to adjourn the appeal on account of the absence of a witness, and it was adjourned. At the following sessions the respondents objected that no notice of appeal for that sessions had been given; and the order was confirmed without a hearing. By the rules of the sessions in all cases of appeal, not otherwise directed by law, ten days' notice in writing is required, and in case of respited appeals the like notice is given, unless the parties agree to the contrary. Lord Ellenborough. "The appeal was adjourned at the instance of the respondents, who now require notice; but have they not, in effect, had notice? The object of giving notice is to inform a person of that of which he may, otherwise, remain ignorant; but a person cannot be supposed to be ignorant of that which is done at his own request, and for his own convenience." Bayley, J. "The practice of the sessions does not apply to this case, but only to the common case of entry and respiting an appeal. In many cases parties enter and respite an appeal as a matter of course, not having satisfied themselves of all the facts of the case. But here the appellants were ready and in condition to try, and but for the application of the respondents, would have tried their appeal. Then the respondents desire to respite it, which is, in effect, an agreement that they will be ready at the next sessions to try it without notice."

6. Of Notice of Appeal.

If a regular notice has been given for one sessions, and the appeal be adjourned at the instance of the appellants, after hearing counsel on both sides, it is not necessary to give a strictly regular notice of trial for the following sessions.

Rex v. Gloucestershire, 3 Dowl. 298. The order of removal was made in March, 1834, and notice of appeal was given for the Easter sessions. At those sessions, upon the application of the appellants, the appeal was adjourned, upon an affidavit of the illness of a material witness for the appellants, after the court had heard counsel on both sides, the appellants paying the costs of the day. A second notice of appeal was given for the July sessions, which was too late by two days, if the rules of the sessions applied to this case. Those rules required notice on all trials of appeal to be given on or before the Thursday in the week next before the sessions; and the like notice in the case of respited appeals. Another rule required the appellants to produce the pauper, on the trial of the appeal, or the order would be confirmed. Within a few days of the July sessions the pauper was confined, and thereby rendered incapable of being produced at those sessions; in consequence of which the appellants, on an affidavit of these facts, moved to adjourn the appeal again, when it was objected that the appellants could not be heard; first, on the ground that the notice was too short; and secondly, on the ground that the pauper was not produced. The sessions refused to adjourn the appeal, and confirmed the order. Cur. adv. vult. Littledale, J., afterwards sent an intimation to the crown office, that he was of opinion that the rule for the mandamus ought to be made absolute: but giving no other reason than "I thought the notice sufficient." Rule absolute.

Mandamus to be applied for speedily.

No answer that a case was offered.

The application for a mandamus must be made speedily, and, it seems, in the term next after the refusal (Reg. v. J. Yorkshire, 13 L. J. 80, M. C.) It is no answer to the application for a mandamus, that the justices had offered the party a special case (13 L. J. 84, M. C).

7. Of Evidence.

7. Of Evidence.

54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 9, rated inhabitants and parish officers declared to be competent.

By 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 9, "No inhabitant or person rated or liable to be rated to any rates or cesses of any district, parish, township, or hamlet, or wholly or in part maintained or supported thereby, or executing or holding any office thereof or therein, shall on such account be deemed an incompetent witness for or against such district, parish, &c., in any matter relating to such rates or cesses, or relating to any order of removal, or the settlement of any pauper, or touching any bastards chargeable or likely to become chargeable to such district, parish, township, or hamlet, or the recovery of any sum or sums for the charges or maintenance of such bastards, or the election or appointment of any officer or officers, or the allowance of the accounts of any officer or officers of any such district, parish, township, or hamlet, any law, &c., notwithstanding."

Decisions thereon.

See the decisions on this act in Meredith v. Gilpin, 6 Price, 146; and see also 1 B. & Ald. 87; 2 Stark. R. 215; Rex v. Hayman, M. & M. 401; Marsden v. Stansfield, 7 B. & C. 815; and Rex v. Bishop's Auckland, 1 A. & E. 744.

In Slocomb v. St. John, 29th August, 1829, on an issue to try whether the parish of Putney were to appoint both churchwardens, or whether the minister, by custom, is to appoint one, Sir J. A. Park held, that a rated inhabitant of the parish is a competent witness to prove that the parish elects both churchwardens, saying, that the principal object of the act, on the face of it, appears to relate to the poor, yet the words "election or appointment of officers" are very general.

In Oxenden v. Palmer it was held, that an inhabitant of a parish is not, either at common law or under this act, a competent witness to prove the right of surveyors of highways in a parish to take beach from the sea shore in order to repair highways.

A witness in a settlement case having admitted that he had rateable property in the township, which was at that time primâ facie a disqualification, was allowed to prove on the voire dire that he was not actually rated. (a)

The overseers, on a parochial appeal, were not competent witnesses.

Reg. v. The Recorder of Bath, 1 P. & D. 469; 8 A. & E. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal it appeared, that on an appeal being called on, between two parishes of the city of Bath, an overseer of the appellant parish was called to prove the notice of appeal, when objection was taken that the recorder of a borough had no jurisdiction to try a settlement appeal; and secondly, that an overseer was not a competent witness: the recorder being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction, acceded to the objection and dismissed the appeal. Lord Denman observed, "The impression on my mind is, that these preliminary matters may be proved by the parties nominally interested. We will, however, look into the late act." Cur. adv. vult. Lord Denman afterwards said, "The question is, whether the recorder of Bath did right in rejecting the evidence of an overseer, who was called to prove the notice of appeal; and we are of opinion that the recorder did perfectly right in rejecting him, for none of the statutes make him competent. I had some doubts whether he might not be competent to prove a notice, as in this court we frequently admit affidavits from parties on preliminary matters; but on reflection we are of opinion that no distinction of that sort can prevail." Rule discharged.

Rate payers made competent witnesses.

In consequence of this decision, it was enacted by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26, "That no person called as a witness on any trial, in any court whatever, may and shall be disabled or prevented from giving evidence by reason only of such person being, as the inhabitant of any parish or township, rated or assessed or liable to be rated or assessed to the relief of the poor, or for or towards the maintenance of church, chapel, or highways, or for any other purpose whatever."

So also parish officers when only nominal parties.

And by s. 2, "No churchwarden, overseer, or other officer in and for any parish, township, or union, or any person rated or assessed or liable to be rated or assessed as aforesaid, shall be disabled or prevented from giving evidence on any trial, appeal, or other proceeding, by reason only of his being a party to such trial, appeal, or other proceeding, or of his being liable to costs in respect thereof, when he shall be only a nominal party to such trial, appeal, or other proceeding, and shall be only liable to contribute to such costs in common with the other the rate payers of such parish, township, or union."

Owner of lands is incompetent.

As to the construction of this statute, see Reg. v. Alderbury East, p. 1155. In Reg. v. Doddington, 1 Q. B. 411, it was held, that this statute had rendered the owner of lands a competent witness, although he was not liable to be rated, as it would be absurd and ridiculous for an act to render those immediately liable to the rates competent, and exclude those remotely liable.

A pauper competent to prove his own settlement.

A pauper is a competent witness, and may be examined as to the fact, whether he had ever gained a settlement, or whether there was a reasonable ground to conclude that he had gained a settlement in the appellant parish by apprenticeship or otherwise. Per Bayley, J., in Rex v. Yarwell, 9 B. & C. 895; 4 M. & R. 685; and per Ashhurst, J., in Rex v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 720.

A rated inhabitant is to be considered as a party to an appeal between his parish and another touching the settlement of a pauper, and cannot be compelled to give evidence against his parish.

Rex v. Woburn, 10 East, 395, 402. Upon an appeal by the overseers of St. Alban, against an order of removal from Woburn to St. Alban, J. Hilliard, an inhabitant of St. Alban, and rated and paying poor rates,

(a) Rex v. Gisburn, 15 East, 57; Rex v. Killerby, 10 East, 292.

7. Of Evidence.

A mortgagee, a rated inhabitant of the appellant parish, subpœnaed by the respondent parish, is not compellable under a subpœna duces tecum to produce the title deeds of his mortgagor. His attorney cannot be allowed to produce an abstract of the deeds, or to give parol evidence of their contents.

A party to the appeal not compellable to give evidence.

was called as a witness for the respondents, and refused to give evidence. The sessions were of opinion that John Hilliard was not compellable to give evidence, and quashed the order, subject to the opinion of the court on this point. The court said, that the question being of general consequence, as involving the construction of the late act, they would advise upon it before they delivered their opinion. And Le Blanc, J., observed, "That if the sessions had been aware at the time of the extent of the question, there would have been no difficulty: for if the witness were rejected on the ground of his being a party to the suit, his declaration of any facts touching the matter in issue would necessarily have been evidence against him."

Rex v. Upper Boddington, 8 D. & R. 726. Ann Leigh was removed, from Upper Boddington to Staverton. Order quashed. Case:—Joseph Leigh, the pauper's late husband, was the son of George and Isabella Leigh, who for many years after the year 1776 resided in a house in the appellant parish. Notice had been given by the respondents to a Mr. Thomas Hands, to the parish officers, and to their attorney, subpœna duces tecum served on Mr. Thomas Hands, to produce at the trial all the deeds, papers, and writings relating to a certain cottage, situate in Staverton, heretofore the property of George Leigh and Isabella his wife, or one of them, late of Joseph Leigh, deceased, and now of Richard and George Leigh, and lately on mortgage to the representatives of Mr. John Liddall, deceased, and particularly a lease and release bearing date respectively the 8th and 9th of April, 1776, and made between Elizabeth Isham, daughter and devisee of William Isham, the said George Leigh and Isabella his wife, and the said Joseph Leigh, the only son of the said George Leigh by the said Isabella his wife, of the second part, and John Leigh, of Upper Boddington, weaver, and Henry Burditt, of Staverton, shoemaker, of the third part; which deeds it was contended would, when produced, prove a conveyance of the said house to the said George Leigh. The lease and release were, before the removal of the pauper, in the hands of Mrs. Ann Marriott, as a mortgagee, at which time an abstract of them was made by a clerk of her solicitor, by the solicitor's direction. Afterwards these deeds came into the possession of Mr. Thomas Hands, as assignee of the said mortgage. Mr. Hands appeared in court in compliance with the subpœna, with a parcel of deeds, but objected to produce the one in question, as it formed one of the title-deeds of his property; and the court held that he was not bound to produce it. The respondents then called the clerk who made the abstract. He proved that the deed from which the abstract was made consisted of a lease and release, though he did not particularly notice with what stamp; and it appeared to have been duly executed. The respondents then tendered the abstract as secondary evidence of the contents of the deed, or offered to give parol evidence of its contents by the clerk. To this evidence the appellants objected, and the court refused to receive it, and quashed the order of removal. Bayley, J. "I am clearly of opinion that the decision of sessions was right upon both points, and that their order therefore must be confirmed. Hands was a party to the appeal, and as such was not compellable by the adverse parish, by whom he was called, to give evidence at all. He was also interested as a mortgagee in the deeds, and as their production might by possibility have put his interest in jeopardy, he was justified in refusing to produce them. The deeds themselves not being produced, secondary evidence of their contents was certainly admissible; but then that secondary evidence must have been of an unexceptionable nature in point of law. Was the secondary evidence offered in this case of such a nature? Clearly not. The abstract was made by the attorney of a former mortgagee of the premises, of which the deeds constituted the title; and those deeds had come into Mr. Hands' possession as the assignee of that mortgagee. It was therefore an abstract made by an attorney for the purposes eventually of Mr. Hands, and as it remained in that attorney's possession after Mr. Hands became the mortgagee, must be taken to have been deposited there by him, and for his use and benefit, and the attorney was not at liberty to produce it. If so, it follows that the attorney could not be at liberty to give evidence of the contents either of the deeds or the abstract, because the whole of those contents were a confidential communication between a client and his attorney, and therefore privileged from disclosure; and as to the attorney's clerk, he stood precisely in the same situation as his master. I think it would be opening a door to great abuse of the confidence necessarily reposed by the client in his legal adviser, if we were to hold such evidence as this admissible." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

Declaration of a rated inhabitant admissible against his own parish.

In Rex v. Hardwicke, 11 East, 557, where it was held that the declaration of a rated inhabitant was admissible, although it is exceedingly weak evidence in the case of a settlement. And the admissibility was determined on the principle that the inhabitants are substantially the parties to the appeal.

Even since 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26.

Reg. v. Alderbury East, 13 L. J. 9, M. C. Upon an indictment against a township for not repairing a bridge, the declaration of an inhabitant of the township is admissible in evidence against the township, on the ground that he is a party to the record, although he be not a rated inhabitant. It was contended that the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26, had not only made parties competent witnesses, but their ability to refuse to give evidence was removed. But the court were of opinion that the statute had not deprived the crown of the right of using such declaration. The act removes any disability that existed to a party being a witness, on the grounds either that he was rated, or a nominal party to the trial. He is not on that ground to be incompetent, but as a party he cannot be compelled to give evidence against himself, and therefore his admissions or declarations are receivable. It had been previously held that the declaration is admissible, though the party who made it is alive. (Woolway v. Rowe, 3 Nev. & M. 849; 1 Ad. & Ell. 114.)

7. Effect of an Order unappealed against.

7. Effect of an Order unappealed against.

1. How far it is Final.
2. Of what Facts it is conclusive, when Unappealed against.

1. How far it is Final.

1. How far it is final.

Order not appealed against is final; and there can be no second order reversing the first, excepting by appeal.

Malendine v. Hunsdon, Fol. 273. Two justices, by an order, send some persons to Hunsdon; two justices there, by an order, send them back again. By the court: "They ought to have appealed, and not sent them back; and held the order of the first two justices to be good, because there was no appeal against it."

Parish, upon whom an original order is made, cannot remove till that be reversed.

Chalbury v. Chipping Farringdon, 2 Salk. 488. A person was removed, by an order, from a parish in Warwickshire to Chalbury; from thence, by an order, to Chipping Farringdon. It was objected, that Chalbury ought to have appealed, and got the order upon them discharged; to which Holt, C. J., agreed; for sending the man to another place is falsifying the first order, which cannot be done but by appeal: for the order is a determination of the right against all persons, till it be reversed. Chalbury should have appealed from the Warwickshire order, and got that set aside, and sent the man back thither; and the justices there should have sent him to Chipping Farringdon. Therefore the latter order was naught.

A second order must be obtained where a settlement has been completed since the first order.

Rex v. Widworthy, Andr. 4 (ante). If a person has an inchoate right of settlement in the parish removing him (ex gra. as being entitled, when so removed, to administration of an estate in the parish,) which he afterwards perfects (by obtaining a grant of administration) before the appeal against the order of removal is heard, this does not authorise the sessions to quash such order. The proper course, in such case, is to remove him back by a new order. (And see Rex v. Willoughby, p. 818.)

The original order is, when unappealed from, conclusive. (a)

Rex v. Leverington, Burr. S. C. 276; 2 Bott, 935. Removal from Sut-

(a) See Rex v. Mytton, 4 Dougl. 333; Cald. 536. See also Rex v. Ealing, p. 997.

1. How far it is Final.

ton St. Mary's to Leverington; and no appeal. Four months after the first order, a second order was made to remove the pauper from Leverington to Sutton St. Nicholas; which second order was confirmed upon appeal. By the court: "The second order, and the order of sessions confirming it, were quashed, and the first order was confirmed; for L. was bound by the first order unappealed from, unless some subsequent settlement appears, and four months is not a sufficient distance of time, whereupon to ground a presumption of having acquired a new settlement. And the order of sessions confirming the first order was quashed, as being a voluntary and extra-judicial act of the sessions, to confirm an order which was not complained of. A resolution to the same effect in Godalmin v. St. Michael's, Winchester, 13 Geo. II., was mentioned by the court.

Except where the removal is to a place that does not maintain its own poor separate.

But in Rex v. Swalcliffe, Cald. 248; 2 Bott, 896, where T. Hawkins and his wife were removed from Swalcliffe to Stourton, the sessions quashed the order, and stated specially, that the pauper was born at Swalcliffe; that in January, 1782, he was moved from Swalcliffe to Ascott, a large populous village, part of the parish of Whichford, and maintaining its poor in common with Whichford: Ascott did not appeal, and Swalcliffe filed the order at the Epiphany sessions, 1782, for safe custody. The pauper and his wife coming again into Swalcliffe, and not having acquired any subsequent settlement, Swalcliffe obtained the first-mentioned order, and sent the paupers to Stourton, where he had gained a settlement by hiring and service. It was contended, an order is exclusive only when directed to a place to which a removal can legally be made, and where there is to be found some person legally authorised to appeal; yet that here were no officers to act: that to omit to do a thing which was impossible to be done could not be conclusive upon any one: that Whichford could not in this case appeal; for not being parties, they were not entitled to be heard. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "The removal to Ascott was, in truth, no removal at all; there was no reason for an appeal; it was a mere nullity." Order of sessions quashed. (See Rex v. Denbighshire J., p. 1100.)

Where the justices making the order want jurisdiction, it is a matter of substance, and not of form, and such an order, although not appealed against, is totally void, and cannot be amended.

Rex v. Chilverscoton, 8 T. R. 178. W. Fennel removed from Sow to Chilverscoton. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper, in 1779, married his present wife in Bedworth, where he then resided; they were afterwards removed to Sow by order: "To the churchwardens, &c., of Bedworth, in the county of Warwick, and to the churchwardens, &c., of Sow, in the county of the city of Coventry; whereas complaint has been made by you, the churchwardens, &c., of Bedworth, unto us whose hands and seals are hereunto set, two of his majesty's justices of the peace (whereof one is of the quorum), for the county aforesaid, that W. Fennel, E. his wife, &c." [The other parts were regular; it was dated 16th March, 1779. No county was mentioned in the margin.] Against this order there was no appeal. In May, 1779, a certificate was granted by Sow to Bedworth, acknowledging the pauper to be settled in Sow, but, at the time of granting this certificate, no settlement had been gained in Sow, unless the above order from Bedworth to Sow had conferred one; but the pauper's settlement had always continued at Chilverscoton. Lord Kenyon, C. J. "It should appear upon the face of the order, that the justices who made it had jurisdiction; which, if they had, every fair presumption will be made that they decided rightly; but if they had not, the proceeding is a nullity. It is said, however, that the parish of Sow ought not to be permitted, at this distance of time, to object to the order; but there is a maxim that quod ab initio non valet tractu temporis non convalescet. And as this order was void at the time when it was made, because it does not appear that the justices who removed had any jurisdiction, it cannot have become a valid order by the time that has since elapsed. A general proposition, indeed, that an order of removal unappealed against is conclusive on the parish to which the removal is made, cannot be shaken; but it must be understood as part of that proposition, that the order is not a nullity, but was made by two justices having jurisdiction to make it. The Rex v. Stepney (p. 29), is, I think, decisive of the present." Lawrence, J.,

1. How far it is Final.

expressing some doubt on the subject, the case was not then finally decided; but afterwards Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "that after considering the cases cited, and upon the authority of Rex v. Stepney, and Rex v. Bedwin, we are of opinion that the former order was a nullity; and though it was not appealed against, it was not conclusive on the parish of Sow." Order of sessions confirmed.

Rex v. Hulcott, 6 T. R. 583, though on a different statute, confirms Rex v. Chilverscoton. And see Rex v. Stotford (p. 1047), in which case the order was held to be voidable only on appeal; but the objection did not appear on the face of the order. (See also Rex v. Cottingham, p. 127.)

The order may be abandoned.

We have already seen that an order of removal may be abandoned by consent: and in such cases a fresh order may be obtained. (Rex v. Diddleby, ante.)

By an order, unappealed against, a pauper was removed from A. to the parish of B., in the county of S. B. at that time consisted of two townships, C. and D. (jointly maintaining their own poor,) in the county of S., and one township, (separately maintaining its own poor,) in the county of W. This order is conclusive upon that part of B. which lies in the county of S., semble. After the removal, C. and D., being required by mandamus, elect separate overseers and maintain their poor separately; the same pauper is afterwards removed from A. to the township of C. C. is not estopped by the former removal.

Rex v. Oldbury, 5 Nev. & Man. 547; 4 A. & E. 167. An order of removal of R. Thompson from West Broomwich to Oldbury was confirmed. Case:—The parish of Hales-Owen consists of the borough of Hales-Owen, the township of Oldbury, and ten other divisions situate in Shropshire, and three townships (Lutley, Cradley, and Worley), situate in Worcestershire. The three Worcestershire townships have always supported their poor apart from each other and from the rest of the parish. The township of Oldbury, the borough of Hales-Owen, and the ten divisions above mentioned, which lie in Shropshire, and which form the remaining part of the parish, until the separation of the township of Oldbury from them, as hereafter mentioned, always supported their poor jointly, and the affairs of the Shropshire part of the parish had, until that event took place, been administered by the churchwardens and four overseers, appointed respectively for four quarters, (Oldbury being one,) into which that part of the parish was divided. In 1832, this court made absolute a rule for a mandamus to compel the appointment of overseers for the township of Oldbury, pursuant to the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 21; since when that township has maintained its own poor distinct and apart from the other parts of the parish. In 1816, the pauper, together with her father and the rest of his family, were removed by an order of justices from Harborne, Staffordshire, to the parish of Hales-Owen, in the county of Salop. Against this order no appeal was made, and no subsequent settlement has been gained by the pauper. The pauper having become chargeable in West Broomwich, (where she resided,) was removed to the township of Oldbury, by an order of 6th January, 1834. Against this order an appeal was entered, and came on for trial at the last Easter sessions for Staffordshire; when the respondents put in the order of removal made in 1816, and unappealed against. The appellants then proposed to prove that the pauper had never gained any settlement in Oldbury, but the respondents contended that the last-mentioned order being unappealed against, was conclusive upon the parish of Hales-Owen, and every part thereof, and that as Oldbury at that time formed part of the parish of Hales-Owen, it was now estopped from contesting the question of the pauper's settlement not being in that township. And the sessions being of this opinion, declined to hear the evidence of the appellants, and confirmed the order. The question was, whether Oldbury was precluded from contesting the question of the pauper's settlement, in an appeal against the present order. Lord Denman. "I remember that when I first read the case, I thought that the respondents were right in contending that the order of removal was conclusive. But upon more consideration, I think that the township of Oldbury is now estopped. In 1816, a removal was made to the whole parish of Hales-Owen, which then consisted of fifteen divisions; three in Worcestershire, and twelve in Shropshire. There is a good deal of difficulty introduced into the case, in consequence of the mode in which the parish of Hales-Owen is described in the first order of removal. The words 'in the county of Salop,' may be considered as introduced in order to identify the parish. Upon this I entertain much doubt. Supposing, however, the order to have been properly made to the whole parish, it appears to me that the township of Oldbury, which began to maintain its own poor some time after the order had been made, was at liberty to deny that it was estopped from giving evidence to show that the settlement was not gained in that part of the parish of Hales-Owen which constitutes the township of Oldbury. Were it otherwise, a removing parish would be at liberty to select any township in the parish. There is no estoppel, unless the parties are the same. The party in the order of 1816 was the parish. The party now is the township. As the parties removing the pauper thought fit to say that the pauper was settled in the township of Oldbury, they ought to have proved the fact. Rex v. Oakmere is inapplicable, since it relates to a district newly made parochial—not to an immemorial vill. Lord Tenterden (a) says, 'This case arises on the act 52 Geo. III. for inclosing the forest of Delamere, and the question is, whether the district newly created into a township under this statute, which before was neither in any parish nor township, is to be considered as if it had formerly been a parish or township with regard to settlement, or only as becoming so from the time of its creation under the act, and as if it had been formerly uninhabited. And we are of opinion that the latter is the true construction and effect of the statute.' It would rather seem, therefore, that if that, instead of being a new district, had been an ancient division which could have maintained its own poor, when it began to have separate overseers, it would have become a separate township as from the earliest time, and would have constituted such a division as a removal might have been made to. Under these circumstances, it appears to me that we must take it that the township is not concluded by any order made on the parish of Hales-Owen." Patteson, J. "I entertain very considerable doubts upon this question. I thought, when the case was mentioned last term, that the township was estopped altogether, and precluded from denying that the pauper was settled in their township. My doubts are not cleared up now; but my lord and my brothers think that the township was not estopped, and I do not feel the doubts so strong as to lead me to say that I entirely differ from the rest of the court. The parish seems to have been divided long before the first order of removal was made, and it ought to be taken that the order was made on that part of the parish which lies in Shropshire; and the order being so made, the pauper was continuously settled in that division of the parish, and in the Oldbury part of the division as well as in the other parts. If it had been proved that the settlement had been gained by renting a tenement, not in Oldbury, that would not show that the pauper was not settled in Oldbury as to a third parish. Since the making of that order Oldbury has been separated from the rest of the division of the parish, but I cannot fully understand how, by a district's dividing itself into partitions, any particular portion can get rid of a liability that previously attached to the whole. At the same time there are great inconveniences in deciding the other way, because it would follow that every part would be estopped, as well as Oldbury. I confess I am not fully satisfied, but my doubts are not so strong as to make me differ entirely." Williams, J. "There is certainly the difficulty pointed out by my brother Patteson, that the parish, by their own act, are to get rid of a liability previously fixed upon them by the order of removal. Then, on the other hand, there is this difficulty, that if the pauper is conclusively settled in the whole and every part of the parish, and the parish were subsequently divided into twenty parts, a third parish might choose any one of the parts in which to fix the settlement of the pauper. It therefore comes to this, whether the precise ground on which the sessions have acted can be sustained. They have acted on the ground that this was an estoppel, and on that ground the evidence was refused. I think the township of Oldbury was not estopped. Admitting that the township is as distinct from the parish as Cumberland from Cornwall, I cannot conceive how a decision that the party was settled in the whole parish is any decision that he is settled in the particular district." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. I do not think this is a question of estoppel. The ground on which an order of removal unappealed from or confirmed, is conclusive, is not that it is an estoppel, but that it is an adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction. The ground of my decision is this: the respondents have removed to Oldbury, and are therefore bound to prove a settlement in that township. They put in the order of removal to Hales-Owen. That alone will not do for them. They must therefore make out their case by showing, by parol evidence, that at the time when the order was made Hales-Owen and Oldbury were identical. The sessions prematurely stopped the inquiry. At the same time, I am aware the court may have great difficulty in dealing with the case when it comes before them again. On the present statement I think the sessions have done wrong." Order quashed; the case to be reheard.

1. How far it is Final.

(a) Lord Denman. "In Rex v. Oldbury, I referred to a passage in Lord Tenterden's judgment in Rex v. Oakmere, as to the effect of modern appointments of overseers to townships which previously had none. It seems to me, however, that those remarks are not altogether sound. Though a vill or township may have existed from time immemorial, it cannot be said that the obligation on it to maintain its own poor separately has existed from time immemorial, as there may have been no means of appointing officers for that purpose. What fell from Lord Tenterden was wholly immaterial with reference to the decision of that case." Reg. v. Hunnington, p. 407. As to the parish of Hales-Owen, see Reg. v. Salop, p. 18.

1. How far it is Final.

---

2. Of what Facts it is conclusive when Unappealed against.

2. Of what Facts, &c.

Rex v. Northfeatherton, 1 Sess. Ca. 154. Order of removal of a man, his wife, and four children, naming them, to Featherton, and no appeal. Afterwards Featherton found out that this woman was not the wife, for that the man was married before to another. And they removed the woman by her maiden name to Horsington, and the four children thither as bastards. Horsington appealed; and the sessions stated that this woman and the four children were the same with those removed by the first order, and quashed the second order. And by the court: "They have slipped their opportunity, and the first order not appealed against is conclusive."

An order removing a wife and children is conclusive of the marriage.

Nympsfield v. Woodchester, 2 Stra. 1172. In 1731, a man and his wife were removed from Nympsfield to Woodchester, and no appeal. They afterwards returned to Nympsfield and had there three children, who were now sent from Nympsfield to Woodchester, together with the father. And upon appeal as to the children, evidence was offered that the man had a former wife, and, consequently, the children born at Nympsfield were bastards settled there. The sessions refused to go into this evidence, being of opinion that Woodchester was concluded by the first order, and that it made no difference that the children were born afterwards. The court, on debate, confirmed both orders; for the marriage being established by the first order, the settlement of the children (which is derivative) follows of course, and can no way be impeached, but by entering into the merits of the first order, which hath been acquiesced in. And nothing is more established, than that an order, unappealed from, is conclusive.

It is conclusive of the fact of marriage in respect of after-born children, claiming settlement from the father and mother.

In Rex v. Silchester, Burr. S. C. 551, the court were so clear in this as a settled point, that they did not hear counsel on the side of the objection.

Rex v. St. Mary, Lambeth, 6 T. R. 615. The pauper (with her three children) was removed as Elizabeth the wife of W. T. from St Mary, Lambeth, to Huntspill. Order confirmed as to Elizabeth, but quashed as to the children. Case:—The pauper, Elizabeth, in 1784, was removed from Stoke-under-Hampden to Huntspill, with and as the wife of a man, to whom, before that time, she had been married, which order was unappealed from. The appellants offered to give in evidence, that the pauper Elizabeth had been married to W. T. illegally, he then having a former wife, and which wife was still living; the children were born of the pauper Elizabeth during her cohabitation with W. T.; and the court said, "that Rex v. Southowram (infra), and Rex v. Lubbenham (p. 986), did not affect the authority of Rex v. Woodchester (p. 1159), and in that case it was established, that an order of removal unappealed against is conclusive, not only on the persons removed, but also on all derivative settlements from them."

2. Of what Facts, &c.

If a feme coverte be removed by an order describing her as a "widow," it is conclusive not only as to her settlement, but as to that of her husband's also.

Rex v. Rudgeley, 8 T. R. 620. Removal of Emanuel Smith and Elizabeth his wife from Acton Trussell to Rudgeley confirmed. Case:—About 40 years ago the paupers were married. They parted in 1787, and since that time never saw or heard of each other, until after the removal next mentioned. In 1799, Elizabeth was removed by the name and description of Elizabeth Smith, "widow," from St. George, Hanover-Square, to Acton Trussell; and against that order there was no appeal. It was said, that this was not a removal of Emanuel nor of his wife, as the wife of Emanuel, but simply of Elizabeth Smith, widow, and that, therefore, Acton Trussell had no notice of the ground on which the order of removal would be disputed. But Grose, J., said, "That this order was conclusive, as well as in the case of removal of one as wife; for that this description imported, that she was removed to a parish where her husband had gained a settlement, at least it put that question in issue, and therefore it behoved the parish to which the removal was made to inquire how that settlement was gained. This would have been an object of inquiry on an appeal against that order; but as that parish did not then litigate the question, the court were bound, according to all the authorities, to determine that the former order of removal is conclusive, and that not as to her only, but as to the husband likewise." And Lawrence, J., agreed, and also said, "that the description 'widow' raised a presumption that she was removed to the place where her husband was settled." Le Blanc, J., was of the same opinion, and said, "that the cases of Rex v. Silchester (p. 1160), and Rex v. St. Mary, Lambeth (supra), show that an order of removal unappealed from is conclusive, though the party be removed by a wrong addition; for in both those cases the woman was removed as the wife, though, in fact, she was not the wife; yet it was holden that the parties were precluded by the orders from disputing the settlements again upon subsequent removals. That the result of all the cases seemed to be this; an order of removal, unappealed against, is conclusive; an order of removal of a woman, though not as wife, is conclusive of the settlement of the husband as well as the wife; and the circumstance of the party being removed under a wrong description does not take the case out of the general rule." Both orders quashed.

Conclusive, though not named as wife.

Rex v. Towcester, 4 Doug. 240. If a wife is removed, and the order unappealed against, it is conclusive as to the husband's settlement, although it was not stated in the order that she was his wife.

An order removing a father and mother is not conclusive as to a son, not then a member of the family.

Rex v. Southowram, 1 T. R. 353. Elizabeth Booth, widow, and her three children, were removed from Southowram to Northowram. The sessions stated, that it appeared by the evidence of William Booth (father of Jeremiah, late husband of the pauper), that the said William and Jeremiah were born and settled at Halifax, but it did not appear that J. had done any act to gain a settlement; that on the 6th of April, 1774, William Booth and his wife, but not any of their children, were removed from Halifax to Northowram, who received them and did not appeal. Jeremiah and Elizabeth the pauper were married some years before the removal of William and his wife, and had those three children; and J., from the time of his marriage until his death, lived at H., in a house he rented, independent of his father, and was not removed by, or mentioned in, the order, nor was then any part of his family. By the court: "The order of removal, unappealed from, is conclusive as to the father and mother, but not as to the son, because he is not mentioned in it, and the sessions have expressly found that the son was settled at Halifax." Order of sessions confirmed.

Rex v. Binegar, 7 East, 377. Order of removal of Elizabeth Savage, otherwise Walters, by the name of E. S., single woman, from Midsomer Norton to Binegar, affirmed. Case :—In April, 1793, an order stated, "that John Savage, labourer, and Betty his wife, lately came into Kilmersdon, and are become chargeable ; and upon the examination of the said Betty, the wife of the said John Savage, it was adjudged that J. S., and B. his wife, were legally settled in Midsomer Norton." Betty was removed from K. to M. N., and no appeal. On the 20th of July, 1799, there was another order, made on the complaint of the parish of Wellow, by which it was adjudged that the place of the lawful settlement of the said E. S. is in M. N. No appeal against this order. At Lady-day, 1803, E. S. hired herself and served a year with J. B. of Binegar. John Savage is still living. After she left this service she returned to M. N., and became chargeable to that parish. In May, 1805, J. S. was committed to the house of correction for having run away and left E. therein, called his wife, so chargeable ; after this, he was at the sessions convicted of having so done, and was sentenced. The marriage between J. S. and E., before either of the said orders of removal were made, was a nullity. The question was, whether the respondents were estopped either by the orders of removal, or by the adjudication of J. S. to be a vagrant for running away and leaving his wife, from giving evidence to prove the marriage a nullity. The second order, treating E. S. as a single woman, was laid out of the case. And also the order of vagrancy was considered as an ex parte proceeding, and therefore not conclusive of the fact of marriage. And it was stated, that it did not appear that the parties ordered to be removed were within the jurisdiction of the removing magistrates ; it only stated, that the paupers lately came into the parish of K., not that they were then in the parish at the time of the order made. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The order states, and the magistrates adjudge it to be true, that the paupers are likely to become chargeable to the parish, which could not be, if they were not in the parish at the time." Then it was urged, that here was no adjudication of a present settlement, only that the paupers were last legally settled in M. N. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "That it referred to the time of the complaint made, and the court could not intend an intermediate settlement between the hearing of the complaint and the making of the order of removal." And the court considered the first order of removal as good upon the face of it, and conclusive of the question of marriage, which was involved in the judgment of the justices. Orders quashed.

An order removing B., as wife of J. S., is conclusive of the marriage.

An order of vagrancy is not conclusive.

Lately come into the parish is sufficient.

Rex v. Catterall, 6 M. & Sel. 83. Order of removal of W. Waring, his wife and children, from Preston to Catterall, confirmed. Case :—In 1810, George W., father of the pauper, not then emancipated, gained a settlement by renting a tenement in Catterall. In 1814, he was removed by an order from Claughton to Inskip, which order was confirmed, the sessions not being satisfied of the value of the tenement at Catterall. When the order was made, the pauper was emancipated, but had acquired no settlement in his own right. It was insisted, that the order of removal of the father was conclusive as to the son, and that the value of the tenement at Catterall could not then be proved. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "I own that it appears to me that in conformity to the rules which are applicable to judgments in other cases, we ought to quash the order of sessions. There is no doubt that the son is privy to the father's settlement; it is not pretended that he had any other at the time of the adjudication of the father's settlement, or that he acquired any subsequently to it. The question now is, whether the son's settlement is to be governed by this adjudication, which, as it is a matter which regards the general municipal regulations of the realm, is of universal obligation and effect, unless fraud be shown. This, then, being a fair bonâ fide adjudication on the subject-matter, is conclusive as to all the world. The pauper either derived a settlement from his father, or he did not. If

The order is conclusive as it regards the settlement adjudicated, and consequently of a derivative settlement.

2. Of what Facts, &c.

not, this adjudication could not affect his settlement, but if he did, then is his settlement determined by that which has been pronounced with respect to his father, to which he is privy." Bayley, J. "The difficulty I have felt in coming to this result, arose from the consideration lest we should thereby hold the son to be bound by an act to which he was not a party, and had no opportunity of giving an answer. But this difficulty is removed when it is recollected that this is not the son's appeal, and he might have appealed if he had been prejudiced by his removal. I forbear to give any opinion as to the question, whether it would have been conclusive against the individual if he had appealed." Abbott, J. "It is important that this question should be settled on general principles, rather than upon nice and petty distinctions. Now the general rule is, that an order of removal, confirmed upon appeal, is conclusive as to all other parishes, as it regards the settlement thereby adjudicated: and it is immaterial, as it respects this general rule, whether the child who derives the settlement from his father be named in the order or not. So, I think, it has been adjudged in other cases. As then the adjudication in 1814 decided that the parent's settlement was elsewhere than in Catterall, this was conclusive as to the son's settlement there, unless it could have been shown that the father acquired such settlement after the emancipation of the son." Holroyd, J., referred to Rex v. St. Mary, Lambeth (p. 1160), and the opinions of Grose, J., and Le Blanc, J., in Rex v. Rudgeley (p. 1160), and said, "These authorities appear to me to be decisive that the order in question, having been confirmed on appeal, is like a judgment of ouster, conclusive as to all the world, upon the point of the father's settlement, and of those deriving a settlement from him." Orders quashed.

The pauper may appeal. Is such order then conclusive?

Reg. v. Wye, 3 N. & P. 6; 7 A. & E. 761. W. Shrubsole and wife were removed from Doddington to Wye. Order confirmed. David Shrubsole, whose settlement was in Wye, was married to Elizabeth Fenn, whose settlement was in Kennington, at the parish church of St. Margaret's, Rochester, on the 24th day of May, 1813. By her he had issue William, the pauper, and several other children, all born during the marriage, in the parish of Eastling. David continued to reside in Eastling from his marriage until March, 1833, and during this period frequently received relief from the parish of Wye. By an order of June 6th, 1833, he was removed from Eastling to Wye, together with his wife and six children therein named, by the description of David Shrubsole and Elizabeth his wife, and their six children (naming them). The pauper William was not named in the said order, but he was then unemancipated, and had gained no settlement in his own right. At the sessions held on the 2nd July, the overseers of Wye entered and respited an appeal against this order, which was confirmed at the Epiphany sessions, on the 31st December, 1833. Previously to the confirmation of this order, the churchwardens of Wye commenced a suit in the Arches Court of Canterbury, for the purpose of annulling the marriage between David Shrubsole and his wife; and on the 1st May, 1834, a sentence of that court pronounced the marriage and license incestuous and unlawful, and that the same should be dissolved, "as having been absolutely null and void from the beginning, to all intents and purposes in law whatsoever." The sessions were of opinion that the order of removal, by which David Shrubsole and his wife and children were removed from Eastling to Wye, having been confirmed on appeal, was conclusive of the pauper's derivative settlement in Wye from David, his father. The question was, whether, in consequence of the dissolution of the marriage between the pauper's father and mother by the sentence of the Arches Court, pronounced subsequently to the date of the confirmed order, the settlement of the pauper, and consequently that of his wife, is in Eastling, the place of his birth, or in Wye, as a derivative settlement from his father. Lord Denman, C. J., delivered the judgment:—"In this case the pauper's father and mother, as man and wife, with their six children, were removed by an order, naming them, and dated in June, 1833, from

By an order confirmed, D. S. and E. his wife, with their six children, (named therein,) were removed to W. A subsequent order was obtained for the removal of W. S. to W., who was born during the marriage of D. S. and E. and unemancipated at the date of the first order, but not named in it. It is competent to W., on appeal against the second order, to prove that, since the first order, the marriage between D. S. &c. had been dissolved by the Ecclesiastical Court, as void ab initio, so as to defeat the derivative settlement.

Eastling to Wye. An appeal was entered and respited at the following July sessions, and after another respite, the order was confirmed at the Epiphany sessions, December 31st, 1833. Pending this appeal, and before the confirmation of the order, the churchwardens of Wye had instituted proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court to annul the marriage between the father and mother as incestuous; and on the 1st May, 1834, by a decree of that court, the marriage was for this reason dissolved, 'as having been absolutely null and void from the beginning, to all intents and purposes in the law.' At the date of the order the pauper was alive, but was not named in it nor removed by it. He was born during the existence of the marriage; and at that date was unemancipated and without any acquired settlement. He was now, by the order at present in question, removed to Wye; and the only point which we have to consider is, whether the first-named order, with proof that the pauper was born during the existence of the marriage, conclusively proves a derivative settlement for him in the parish of Wye. Our opinion is, that it does not. The judgment of the sessions, upon the former appeal, decided directly the settlement of the persons included in the order; and this being a judgment in rem, was conclusive not only between the parties, but against all the world. In order to arrive at this judgment as to so much of it as affected the wife and children, it was necessary for the court, and within its competence, to examine into and determine both the fact and legality of the marriage. And although the last-mentioned matter was only incidentally within the cognizance of a temporal court, and therefore it might have seemed, according to the judgment delivered by De Grey, C. J., in the House of Lords, on the trial of the Duchess of Kingston, (a) that the order was no evidence with regard to it in any future proceeding; yet numerous cases have decided that orders of removal, unappealed against or confirmed on appeal, are not only evidence, but conclusive as to all the facts mentioned in them, and which are necessary steps to the decision. Marriage, and the legitimacy of children, are among the facts as to which this rule has been upheld; and it has been extended to the case of a child emancipated at the date of the order; Rex v. Catterall (p. 1161); and even to that of children unborn at the time; Nympsfield v. Woodchester (p. 1159), and Rex v. St. Mary, Lambeth (p. 1160). These, and many other cases, have formed a class which has settled the practice at quarter sessions; and it is so especially desirable, with regard to this branch of the law, to avoid all uncertainty and all subtle distinctions, that we should upon no account think ourselves justified in throwing any doubt upon these decisions. The principle, however, on which these cases mainly proceed, is a perfectly sound one,—that a matter once examined into and decided by a competent tribunal, shall not be re-agitated and in effect shown to have been decided erroneously upon new evidence, which either could or could not have been, but in fact was not, produced upon the former hearing. And accordingly it is observable, that in all the cases where the conclusive effect of the former order has been disputed, it has been the object of the party tendering the rejected evidence to procure a contrary decision upon the same state of facts by throwing new light upon them. Thus, for example, in Nympsfield v. Woodchester, and Rex v. St. Mary, Lambeth, the marriages were in fact equally as void at the respective dates of the prior orders as of the later; but the evidence failed to prove them so. If the new and better evidence had been admitted on the second appeal, the effect must have been—not indeed to destroy the legal effect of the former adjudications on the points decided, i. e., the settlement of the parties actually removed—but, by showing them to have been erroneously decided, to take away their effect upon settlements derivative from the former; and the courts have rightly said, 'the opportunity for this is past.' But in the case now before the court, a new state of facts has arisen since the former decision. An incestuous marriage, until avoided by the sentence of the Court Christian, is voidable only, and remains valid to all civil purposes. The judgment of the sessions having passed before the sentence pronounced, was therefore correct in fact and in law. No alteration of the evidence, consistent with the state of facts then actually subsisting, ought to have made any difference in it. Had the incest de facto been ever so clearly made out, still the marriage must have been held valid, the children legitimate, and all the civil consequences as to the settlement of the wife and children named in the order must have followed. Whatever, therefore, has been decided upon the then existing state of facts, remains unimpeached. But the settlement of the pauper now comes in question for the first time; and it is admitted that he has no settlement in Wye, except upon proof that he is the legitimate son of his father. The former order, with proof of the date of his birth, is, no doubt, primâ facie evidence of his legitimacy. But suppose the appellants had tendered evidence that his father had been absent in America for a year before his birth, while the mother was in England, in order to show him a bastard, can it be doubted that such evidence would have been receivable? It would have contravened no fact found, or matter decided, by the former order; it would merely have cut the link which connected, primâ facie, his settlement with that found by the former order. It does not appear to us that the evidence tendered in the present case differs at all in principle from that just supposed. The appellants admit the former case rightly decided, that the settlement was, as there found, and the marriage then valid; but they say the decree of the Ecclesiastical Court shows that the pauper is, and always was, a bastard. Whatever be the conclusiveness of a former order on the facts found by it, it cannot, in point of time, extend beyond its date; it conclusively shows the state of facts then existing, and declares the law that results from it. But what is so shown conclusively then, may not continue; a change of circumstances may occur, to which the former finding is inapplicable. We are of opinion, therefore, that, consistently with all the former decisions, and desiring in no way to break in upon them, the sessions were wrong in refusing the evidence tendered; that the respondents did not, by their proof, make out conclusively a derivative settlement in Wye; and, consequently, that the order must be quashed."

(a) 11 St. Tri. 261.

2. Of what Facts, &c.

An order of removal, unappealed against, is conclusive of the place of settlement up to that time.

Rex v. Kenilworth, 2 T. R. 598. Thomas Byfield, his wife and children, were removed from Birmingham to Kenilworth. Order confirmed. Case:—The pauper, on the 10th May, 1765, was hired for a year to J. Chatterton, of Birmingham, and that day entered into his service, and continued in the same until the 1st of April, 1766, when he was taken up on a charge of bastardy, and married the next day. His master did not make any complaint against him, nor discharge him from his service. On the 3rd of April he was removed from Birmingham to Kenilworth, where he remained until the 7th of April, and then returned back to Birmingham into his master's service, who willingly received him again, and he continued in his service till the end of the year, and received his full year's wages. The order of removal was not appealed against. Buller, J. "There is no proposition in the law of settlements more clear than this, that an order of removal unappealed against is conclusive against all the world; and this is so clearly and universally established that it ought never to be impeached. At the same time the rule is, that the order of removal, though unappealed from, does not at all affect a subsequent settlement. After the order of removal unappealed from, the pauper could not legally return to the parish from whence he had been removed: it would have been a crime in him to do so: and if he could not return without committing a crime, he could not be liable to an action by the master for not completing his contract. If the law intervenes and disables a person from completing his contract, it puts an end to the contract. In this case the pauper returned after the order of removal to the parish of B., where he served a month; but that could not gain him a settlement there, for the act subsequent to the order of removal, by which he was to gain a settlement, should be complete in itself." Grose, J. "I doubt whether the party was liable to be removed, but there having been an order of removal unappealed from, it is decisive." Order confirmed.

This is the general rule.

But Rex v. Willoughby, ante.

Rex v. Corsham, 11 East, 388. The pauper was removed from East Moulsey to Corsham; and it was confirmed by the sessions, who stated that on the 9th of April, 1807, he had been removed from Charlton to Garsdon, and no appeal had been entered against that order; which removal was subsequent to a settlement he had gained in Corsham. Lord Ellenborough. "If the pauper were settled at Garsdon at the time the former order was made, could not Corsham, as well as all other parishes, have taken advantage of that upon a question of settlement? Now the order of removal submitted to is the most authentic proof of his settlement being there at the time the order was made, and we must intend every thing in support of that settlement so adjudged. It is in effect a statutable certificate, if I may so express myself, that the pauper was then settled at Garsdon. The statute gives him a settlement there; and the fact stated by the sessions of a prior settlement in Corsham is immaterial." Le Blanc, J. "If the former order were not conclusive as to the settlement being in Garsdon at the time, Garsdon would escape the effect of it altogether, for this order would be conclusive upon Corsham, so as to prevent Corsham removing to Garsdon." Order quashed.

2. Of what Facts, &c.

Even when a question of settlement is raised between two other parishes.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal Appealed against.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal Appealed against.

Effect of order superseded by consent.

The practice of superseding the order by the removing justices has become so frequent, that it may be proper to consider what the effect of this step is between the contending parishes. The power of the justices to annul their order by consent is clearly established, unless an appeal has been entered at the sessions, and then the order may indeed be quashed by consent, by the sessions, but it will be conclusive between the parishes unless it is quashed on special grounds. But if the order is annulled before such appeal, the legal consequence seems to be the same as if the order had never been made.

A judgment not acted on, but reversed by consent of the party entitled to it, is no bar to any future proceeding; and when a legal instrument is annulled, all legal rights, not vested, cease with them. The proper mode of annulling the order may be by cancellation, and then there seems no legal mode of asserting its validity, and it is not like the act of the court in quashing an order, for that does not destroy the original order, but only reverses the judgment of the justices. This proceeding is more analogous to the constantly exercised authority of the court in reversing their own orders during the sessions, i.e. as long as their jurisdiction remains; and their first order is entirely done away with. So also the reversing justices may act, so long as the matter remains under their control, and that will be until the appeal is entered.

If the order is discharged on appeal, it is conclusive only as between the contending parishes, and then only when quashed on the merits. The sessions may make a special entry that the order was quashed for form, and then it does not conclude the defendant parish. There are many cases on the point as to what is a decision on the merits and what on form. See post.

Where an order is confirmed it is conclusive as to all the world, as it is a judgment that the paupers were at that time legally settled in the appellant parish.

Order confirmed upon the appeal is final; but an order discharged binds only the parties.

Mynton v. Stoney Stratford, 2 Salk. 527. By Holt, C. J., and the court:—"If on appeal to the sessions an order be discharged, that judgment binds only between the parties; but when upon an appeal an order is confirmed, that is conclusive to all persons as well as to the parties, for it is an adjudication that this is the place of the party's last legal settlement, which cannot be avoided by the parish against whom it is made."

Little Bitham v. Somerby, 1 Stra. 232. A person is sent by an order to Somerby as the place of his last legal settlement Somerby appeals, and the order is confirmed. Soon after, without stating that he had gained any new settlement, Somerby sends him to a third place. By the court: "An order of reversal is final only between the two parishes; but if it be confirmed, it is final as to all the world; and therefore, no new settlement appearing, the order of removal from Somerby must be quashed.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

An order confirmed is not even evidence, if the settlement was a matter which arose collaterally. Is parol evidence admissible to show the ground of the decision?

Rex v. Knaptoft, 4 D. & R. 469; 2 B. & C. 883. Order for the removal of Elizabeth Burdett from Gumley to Knaptoft confirmed. The case is fully stated in the judgment delivered by Bayley, J. "Two questions were raised for our consideration in this case. First, whether the prior order of removal, and the judgment of the court of quarter sessions quashing the same, were admissible in evidence in the present appeal? and second, whether the question put to the pauper's father, and interdicted by the court, ought to have been allowed and answered? The order of removal and the judgment thereon were tendered for the purpose of disproving the pauper's settlement in the respondent parish: the question put to the pauper's father, he having stated that he was examined at the former appeal, was, what facts he had there stated? We who heard this case argued are decidedly of opinion that the prior order of removal and judgment were not, with any explanation, receivable in evidence on the second appeal. The prior order of removal was quashed. That may have been done upon any one of three grounds. Either because the sessions were of opinion that the pauper was emancipated, and had acquired a settlement of his own; or because the respondents were not then in a situation to prove the father's settlement in the appellant parish: or because the appellants were able to prove a settlement of his elsewhere. The case does not inform us on which of these grounds the order was quashed, but it is conceded that it was quashed upon the merits, and not upon any point of form. If we believed that the ground of the judgment was the want of proof of the father's settlement in the appellant parish, and had then thought that the evidence was under those circumstances admissible, we should have sent the case back to the sessions for further explanation on that head; but we are of opinion that under none of the circumstances supposed the evidence was admissible, and therefore we think it better to dispose of the case in its present shape. As a broad and general proposition we may say that the order of removal, confirmed or reversed upon appeal, or acquiesced in without appeal, is receivable in evidence, because it is a judgment of law. But where, and under what circumstances, is it receivable? This inquiry is answered by the rule laid down by De Grey, C. J., in the Duchess of Kingston's case, by which we find that to make the order receivable the parties in the case must be the same, and the point in issue must be the same: these are both indispensable qualifications. If the matter in issue be collateral or incidental, the evidence cannot be received. The language of that learned judge as applicable to the present case is, 'that a judgment directly upon the point is, as evidence, conclusive between the same parties upon the matter directly in question.' Does this case fall within that rule? Is the matter in question in the second appeal the same as that in the former? Is the judgment offered in evidence in the second directly upon the point which was in issue in the former? We think not. From the very nature and substance of the order of removal, it is merely collateral to the issue raised in the second appeal. By the original order, an individual, not the pauper in this case, was removed; the question to be tried on appeal was, where his settlement was. The judgment decided that his settlement was in a particular parish. That was the point there, and that was the matter in question; but it is not so here. The early case of Harrow v. Ryslip (2 Salk. 524; 3 Salk. 261), will illustrate this position. The case was this: A. comes into Harrow, and being likely to become chargeable, was removed to Ryslip; Ryslip appealed, and upon the appeal, A. was adjudged to be settled at Ryslip; afterwards Ryslip discovered that Hendon was the place of his last legal settlement, and sent him thither; and the question was, whether, after the adjudication upon the appeal,

A judgment to be conclusive must be direct on the point.

Ryslip was not estopped against all the world to say that Ryslip was not the place of his last legal settlement: et per Holt, C. J., 'Ryslip is estopped to say otherwise: for if Ryslip had not been the very place of his last legal settlement, the justices must have sent him back to Harrow, who were first possessed of him, for that reason, because they were possessed of him, and he did not belong to Ryslip. And now this is in effect the same question again, viz. whether he belongs to Ryslip? which question has been already determined by the justices on the appeal, who have adjudged that he was last settled at Ryslip.' The report goes on to say,—'Afterwards this was moved again, and then Holt and Gould held the adjudication was final as to Ryslip against all persons and places, because the point of his settlement as to Ryslip was tried in the appeal: but as to Harrow (for he had been formerly removed by them to Hendon, and that order reversed), they were at liberty to send him to any other place, and were not estopped; because the justices on the appeal did not adjudge him to be settled at Harrow, though they adjudged him now to be settled at Ryslip; so that the other point was not tried.' The language of the court in one part of this case applies to the instance where the order of removal is confirmed, and that on the other where it is reversed; and points out the distinction already alluded to between a judgment of confirmation and one of reversal. In the latter instance the sessions do not find where the pauper was settled, and thus the order of removal confirmed or unappealed from is conclusive evidence that the settlement is in the place to which he is removed; reversed, it is conclusive evidence that the settlement is not there; and beyond this point no case with which we are acquainted has ever yet gone. There are undoubtedly cases which show that where the point in issue is decided, all results flowing out of that point are decided also; as for instance, that a wife's removal to the place of her husband's settlement is conclusive to show that that is his place of settlement. But no case has ever gone further than to hold that the point decided is conclusive upon the same point, and therefore receivable in evidence; other points collateral or incidental to the point decided and undetermined by it are excluded from its operation, and cannot be proved by giving the point decided in evidence. It is the same with respect to judgments; they are merely evidence of the point decided. It is admitted that the pauper has no settlement in the parish to which he has been removed unless his father has acquired a settlement there. Then the father's settlement was a question which came in incidentally, but incidentally only, and was not the point decided by the judgment on the first appeal, which consequently was not admissible as evidence in the second. For these reasons we are of opinion that the order of sessions in this case was right, that the sessions properly rejected the evidence tendered, and that the rule for quashing their order must be discharged."

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

The order is not evidence upon points collateral.

Reg. v. Yeaveley, 1 P. & D. 60; 9 A. & E. 806. Ed. Smith and family were removed from Yeaveley to Shirley. Order quashed. Case:— The pauper was the son of Edward and Millicent Smith, and was born at Yeaveley, in 1798. The respondents, to show a settlement in the appellant parish, proved that the pauper's father, who died at Yeaveley in 1811, was born at Shirley, and that after his death his widow and family received relief weekly, for several years previously to 1817, from the appellant township, whilst residing in the respondent township, and that the pauper, in 1817, being then under age and unemancipated, was bound apprentice to William Walker, under such circumstances that no settlement was gained thereby. In answer to this case, the appellants offered in evidence an order of removal of the pauper's mother from Yeaveley to Shirley, dated the 6th day of October, 1824, in which order the said M. Smith was described as widow of the late Edward Smith, (who was the father of the pauper,) and for the purpose of proving that such order was quashed on appeal, they offered in evidence the original sessions book, being a paper book, containing the orders and other proceedings of the court, made up and recorded after each sessions by the clerk of the peace,

An order of sessions in 1824, quashing an order for the removal of the pauper's mother, a widow, is material evidence, on a subsequent contest between the same parishes as to the settlement of the pauper, to show that he was not settled in the appellant parish at the time of the quashing of such order, although he was not named therein, and was then 26 years old, it appearing that in 1817 he had gained no settlement of his own, and that he was then unemancipated.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

To prove that an order of removal had been quashed, the original sessions book, being a paper book, containing the orders of the court, made up and recorded, after each sessions, by the clerk of the peace, from minutes taken by him in court.

from minutes taken by him in court, which book he considered and stated to be the record itself of the proceedings of the court. It was headed at each sessions with the usual caption of the justices at sessions. The book contained under the above heading for the October sessions, 1824, amongst other orders made the same sessions, the following:—"Upon an appeal brought this sessions by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Shirley, in this county, against an order of removal under the hands and seals of Richard Arkwright, the younger, and William Webster, Esquires, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, (one whereof is of the quorum,) whereby Millicent Smith, widow of the late Edward Smith, and her grandson Thomas Smith, actually became chargeable, and were removed from the township of Yeaveley, in the said county, to the township of Shirley aforesaid, as the place of the lawful settlement of them, the said Millicent Smith and Thomas Smith; and upon hearing counsel and witnesses examined upon oath on both sides, this court doth order, that the said order of the said two justices be, and the same is hereby discharged; and doth further order, that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the township of Yeaveley aforesaid, do pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Shirley aforesaid, the sum of 40*s.* for their costs of this appeal, and also the sum of ———, for the maintenance of the paupers." The book at the termination of the proceedings of the sessions is signed, "By the court, John Charge, clerk of the peace." Every order, when copied out to deliver, is always signed in the same manner; no other record was kept of the proceedings of the sessions, than the said sessions book, and it had always been received in evidence in the court for the purpose of proving them. This evidence was objected to by the respondents, on the ground that it was not material to the issue between the parties; and also, that the order of sessions, if material, could not be proved by such evidence. The sessions received. Lord Denman. "I am of opinion that the sessions book was properly received as evidence that an order for the removal of the pauper's mother to the appellant parish was quashed in 1824. The book contained a regular caption, showing the authority of the sessions who made the order, and a statement of the order itself; and it appears also, though it may be doubtful whether it be material, that no other record of such orders was ever made. Unless we are to hold that parchment was necessary to prove the order, the book in question was legitimate evidence. A decision by the justices is all that takes place, and it is not followed up or modified by any ulterior proceedings. In Rex v. Ward (a) it does not appear what the state of the minute book was, but I should rather infer that it was a book kept by the deputy clerk of the peace for his own convenience, and that it did not contain any caption, so that our judgment upon this point does not interfere with the authority of that case. What then was the effect of this quashed order in 1824? The language of Bayley, J., in Rex v. Knaptoft, (p. 1166), was unnecessarily large. The adjudication in 1824, although it might have gone on other grounds, was at least primâ facie evidence, which was unanswered, that the settlement of the pauper's mother at that time was elsewhere than in the appellant parish. The pauper himself was not shown to have been then emancipated, though twenty-six years old; it appeared that an attempt had been made in 1817 to bind him an apprentice, but that it had failed. There was evidence then that he was unemancipated in 1817, and it was not shown that the state of facts was altered in 1824. Taking it therefore that he was unemancipated, it would appear that the settlement of his mother, which had been previously adjudicated upon, would extend itself to him; so that a good primâ facie case was made out by the appellants to meet the other primâ facie case of relief given by them to the widow and family while resident in the respondent parish." Patteson, J. "I think, in the absence of any direct authority, we must hold that the sessions book was receivable in evidence. In Rex v. Ward it appeared that something more than the book would have been producible, if it had been asked for; here it is found that the practice is to do no more than make the entries in the book, and that it is treated as a record of the court, so that it comes to the question whether or not parchment be necessary. I am of opinion that it is not. Now with regard to the materiality of the evidence. It is found that in 1817, when the pauper was nineteen years of age, he was put out as an apprentice under such circumstances that he gained no settlement thereby. We hear nothing more of him; it does not appear whether he ever returned to his mother at all; there are no new facts to show whether he was emancipated or not. The cases show that it is not necessary that he should have returned before he was twenty-one. But, as it appeared that he was not emancipated in 1817, the onus of showing that he was emancipated in 1824 lay on the respondents, who offered no evidence of it. We must presume then that he was unemancipated. It matters not whether the order of sessions proceeded on the ground that the widow had gained a settlement in her own right, which was elsewhere than in the appellant parish, or that she had gained no settlement at all, and that the settlement of her deceased husband was elsewhere. The respondents are in a dilemma, a derivative settlement elsewhere than in the appellant parish would on either supposition be communicated to the pauper." Williams, J. "I am entirely of the same opinion on both points. There is no instance where an objection to the admissibility of such an instrument as the sessions book, to prove their own order before the justices themselves, has been considered a valid objection. It is said a minute might be evidence of a conviction in the same manner. But how could such a minute prove any such thing? The judgment might have been arrested. So to prove that a person had committed perjury, it is essential that the jurisdiction of the court in which perjury was committed should appear; and that could only be manifested to another court at least by a formal record, as was held in Rex v. Ward. The book in this case was, in my opinion, a record for the purpose of proving to the sessions the existence of one of their own orders. In considering the effect of such order we are brought back to very early principles indeed. None of the books omit to tell us that an order quashed is conclusive between the same parishes, as to the point decided. What was the point decided? The settlement of the mother. This would communicate itself to her son, if unemancipated. According to the ordinary principles of evidence, it lay on the respondents to show that he was emancipated, for the last account of him is, that he was not so, and we must presume that this state of facts continued, until the contrary be shown." Coleridge, J. "This case is very simple. The evidence was cogent, if admissible. As to the mode of proof, we learn that the practice of the court was to have no other record. The book contained a regular caption, showing the authority under which the court sat. Mr. Clarke has admitted that he has never seen a formal record of a sessions order, nor have I. With respect to the effect of the evidence, no one can doubt at this time of day that an order quashed is conclusive between the same parishes as to a settlement at the time of the adjudication upon it, and that unemancipated children follow the settlement of their father, and on his death that of their mother. On whom then was the onus to prove this pauper's emancipation? Obviously it was upon the respondents, who contended that the state of things was different from what it was found to be when the cause was tried before." Order of sessions confirmed.

(a) 6 C. & P. 366.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

Order quashed does not conclude a third parish from the proof that the pauper was then settled in the appellant parish.

Rex v. Cirencester, Burr. S. C. 17; 2 Bott, 521. The pauper was removed from Minety to Coln St. Aldwin's; and on appeal the order was reversed. Afterwards he was removed from Cirencester to Coln St. Aldwin's. The former removal was on complaint of Minety; the latter on complaint of Cirencester: the pauper was sent on both complaints to Coln St. Aldwin's. On appeal against this latter order, the sessions quashed the same, because they thought the first order conclusive. By the court: "An order confirmed binds all the world; but when discharged, it is binding only between the parties concerned. For the discharge of the order doth not determine where the pauper is settled; but only that he is not sufficiently proved to be settled in the particular parish to which the justices had removed him." And Lord Hardwicke, C. J., said, "He took it to be clearly settled, where an order of removal is confirmed, that it is conclusive to all the world; where it is discharged, that it is conclusive only between the two contending parishes. And this distinction is reasonable; because a third parish may be able to give better evidence than the other could." And this latter order of sessions was quashed.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

An order of removal discharged does not prevent a third parish from showing a settlement in the same parish, at the time of the order discharged.

Rex v. Bentley, Burr. S. C. 425; 2 Bott, 919. The pauper was first removed from Baxterley to Stourbridge; which order, on appeal, was discharged. Then Baxterley removed to Bentley, and Bentley upon appeal offered to give evidence that the pauper had gained a settlement at Stourbridge subsequent to the settlement which they acknowledged he had gained in Bentley. The sessions refused to hear it, because the settlement set up in Stourbridge was anterior to the first appeal. By Lord Mansfield, C. J., and the court: "An order confirmed concludes all the world. It is a suit instituted and determined by a court having proper jurisdiction between all proper parties, for the parishes and the pauper were the only proper parties. It is establishing one certain fact, which, when ascertained, regards all the world, and is not to be considered in the light of a res inter alios acta. So the finding that such-a-one was the father of such a child, or the fact of a marriage, or that a person is executor, by suit properly instituted in the spiritual court; in all these cases, when the fact is once established by proper judges, and between proper parties, it is a truth which regards the whole world. But an order discharged is only a kind of negative finding that such a settlement is not the last legal settlement. But does this establish the affirmative, namely, what is so? There is all the reason in the world to let in a third parish, not party to the suit, to give what evidence they can; because it would otherwise open a door to much collusion between parishes. The sessions in substance have said no more than this, 'Upon the case made out to us the pauper is not settled at Stourbridge;' but this ought not to conclude the third parish from giving what evidence they can to discharge themselves. And nothing is more common in settlement cases, than for one parish to be able to get at evidence which another parish could not produce." And the orders were quashed.

Order quashed, conclusive only between the parties.

St. Michael's, Beddington, v. Kingston Bowsey, 2 Salk. 486. Order reversed on the appeal is conclusive only as to the parish acquitted, but the first parish may remove again to any parish not party to the former removal.

But it is conclusive as between them.

Foston v. Carleton, 1 Str. 567. A person was removed from Foston to Carleton. On appeal, the order is quashed; and at three months' end a new order is made to remove him from Foston to Carleton. But by the court: "The last order must be quashed. Barrow v. Ingoldsby, E., 11 Anne, was at the distance of nine months, but the court quashed it, because there could be no inconvenience in putting them to show a new settlement."

Appellant parish not liable for a child born before the appeal.

Pending an appeal against an order of removal, the pauper was delivered of a bastard child in the appellant parish. The order was afterwards quashed. The child acquired no settlement in the appellant parish. Rex v. Great Salkeld, p. 413.

Conclusive between the parties.

Rex v. Bradenham, Burr. S. C. 394; 2 Bott, 918. Order of removal, dated December 30, 1754, of John Saunders and Sarah his wife, and four children, from Thame to Bradenham. Bradenham appealed to the next (Epiphany) sessions, and the order was discharged. March 28, 1755, a new order was made for removing Sarah, the wife of J. S., and her children, from Thame to Bradenham. Upon appeal, the sessions adjudged the last settlement of Sarah Saunders and her children to be in Bradenham, and confirmed the order. On removal of these four orders into the King's Bench it was argued, that the order of reversal was conclusive between the two parishes, that so there might be an end of things; and that one sessions shall not counteract and control the acts of a former, unless they state specially, which they have not done here. By the court: "The last orders must be quashed. We must take the appeal, on which the original order is discharged, to be on the merits. The matter has been determined already between these two parishes, and it must be conclusive. But it is said there are cases where there may be a new removal, as supposing there had been one or two years' distance between the two orders of removal, or a sufficient time to gain a new settlement; yet the court will not intend one gained, unless it is stated in the order. (a) And in this case there is no such time."

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

If quashed on form, not conclusive between the parties.

Rex v. St. Andrew, Holborn, 6 T. R. 613. M. Carter and her illegitimate son were removed from St. Andrew, Holborn, to Northaw. Case:—By an order, dated 24th July, 1794, M. Carter was removed to Northaw. On appeal, the order, for want of a proper adjudication of the last legal settlement of the pauper, which was apparent on the face of it, was quashed. On the 25th of January, 1795, the present order was made, whereby M. Carter and her son were again removed from St. Andrew, Holborn, to Northaw. Upon appeal, the sessions were of opinion, that the first warrant and judgment, having been quashed, was binding between the two parishes, and they quashed the last order. Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "That as the first order in this case was quashed for defect of form, which appeared by the minute of the sessions, it was essentially different from the cases cited, where the order was quashed generally, which must be taken to be on the merits. And it is undoubtedly law, that if an order of removal be quashed for form, it does not conclude the parties." Order of sessions quashed.

Or on special matter as not being chargeable.

Rex v. Osgathorpe, 2 Stra. 1256. A person was removed by an order from Diseworth to Osgathorpe, which was quashed. He was by a second order sent from Diseworth to Osgathorpe as a certificated man; and upon an appeal it was stated, that the first removal was before he became chargeable, and the second after he became so; and the sessions were of opinion, that the first determination was not final, and therefore confirmed the second order. It was moved to quash these two last orders, because a reversal is final between the parties. But by the court: "So it would be, if the special matter did not appear; a certificated person cannot be sent back until he is actually a charge; a removal before is premature. The consequence of which only is, that he must be suffered to remain till he doth become chargeable, but not to make a premature removal final for ever. The last orders must be confirmed."

Appellant may show by evidence the ground upon which the former order was quashed.

Rex v. Wheelock, 5 B. & C. 511. This was an application for a mandamus to direct the sessions to make a special entry that an order had been quashed for want of proof of chargeability, which, though the fact, the sessions had refused to do. A rule nisi was refused, Bayley, J., saying, "The respondents are not, at all events, concluded by the judgment of the sessions, but may, in the trial of another appeal against another order of removal of the same party, explain by evidence to the sessions the particular ground on which the former order of removal was quashed." Holroyd, J., concurred.

An order of removal from A. to B. was quashed at sessions by consent, on the ground that the pauper was at that time irremovable, and this reason was communicated to the ap-

Rex v. Wick St. Lawrence, 2 Nev. & M. 289; 5 B. & Ad. 526. Elizabeth, wife of Isaac Harle (who had lately left the parish of Banwell) and children were removed from Banwell to Wick St. Lawrence. Order confirmed. Case:—The paupers were in 1822 removed by an order from the respondent to the appellant parish; against which order there was an appeal to the Easter sessions in that year. The respondents having discovered before those sessions that the paupers were irremovable, by reason of their residing on a tenement purchased by Isaac for less than 30*l.*,

(a) The accuracy of this decision may well be doubted. Unless there is some defect on the face of the order, how can the Court of Queen's Bench quash it, unless the sessions state their reasons specially? Besides, every intendment will be made to support an order. In this case, the pauper might have acquired a settlement in Bradenham by forty days' residence on his estate, between the 30th December, 1754, and 28th March, 1775, or he might have perfected a settlement inchoate only where the first order was made, as in Rex v. Willoughby, p. 818.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

determined to abandon their order, and the reason was communicated by the then attorney of the respondents to the then attorney of the appellants, but no mention of the same was made to the court, and at the said sessions an order was made by the consent of all parties for quashing the order of removal, in which order of sessions no mention was made of the ground on which the same was quashed. The court (on hearing of the present appeal), thinking themselves bound to admit the evidence above stated, overruled an objection to it made by the counsel for the appellants; and upon proof that the pauper Isaac did, before the order of removal now appealed against, sell the tenement which rendered him irremovable, and that he had before 1822 obtained a legal settlement in the appellant parish, the court confirmed the last order of removal. If the court should think that the sessions improperly admitted such evidence, and that the order of sessions in 1822 was, as between the present parties, conclusive of the pauper's settlement at that time, the order now appealed against was to be quashed. Lord Denman. "The only question submitted to us by the sessions is, whether the parol evidence was properly admitted. The justices have drawn their conclusion from the facts proved; and I think it sufficiently appeared that the consent was given in consequence of its having been discovered that the pauper was irremovable. The question as to the admissibility of the parol evidence depends on the nature of the point actually decided by the sessions when they quashed the first order of removal; for judgments of courts of competent jurisdiction directly on the point are, as evidence, conclusive between the same parties upon the same matter directly in question in another suit. Upon this principle a judgment at the quarter sessions confirming an order of removal is conclusive not only against the parish to which the removal is directed to be made, but (being a judgment in rem) against all the world, that the pauper, at the time when that order was made, was settled in the parish to which he was sent; for that is the point which the sessions must have decided when they confirmed the order of removal. An order of sessions, quashing an order of removal, is also conclusive between the contending parishes as to the point decided by it. Then the question is, what that point really is. It is that the parish to which the removal was directed to be made was not bound to receive the pauper. The court may have come to that decision, either on the ground that the pauper was not settled in the parish to which he was sent; or that he was not chargeable, or was irremovable when the order was made. That being the effect of an order of sessions quashing an order of removal, it seems to follow that if it be offered as evidence to prove that the pauper was not settled in the appellant parish, it may be shown by parol evidence that the judgment proceeded upon some other ground. It is said that the sessions ought to have made a special entry of the ground on which they quashed the order of removal, and there being no such entry, it must be presumed that they decided on the merits; but in Osgathorpe v. Diseworth, (p. 1171,) there was no such entry on the face of the order, and therefore parol evidence must have been given on the trial of the second appeal to show that the pauper was a certificated man when the first order of removal was made, and consequently not chargeable. That is an authority expressly in point; and in Rex v. Wheelock, (p. 1171,) Bayley and Holroyd, Js., refused to compel the sessions by mandamus to make a special entry of the cause for which they had quashed an order of removal; and that on the ground that the party had his remedy by giving, on the trial of a second appeal, parol evidence of the distinct ground on which the order of removal was quashed. It is said that admitting parol evidence to explain such an order of sessions will be inconvenient; but supposing the inconvenience were greater than any I can see in the case, injustice is the greatest of inconveniences, and when an order of removal has been discharged, not on the merits but on other grounds, it would be great injustice if it could be set up as a decision on the merits by a party who knew that they had not been inquired into." Parke, J. "The only question referred to us by the sessions, is, whether pellants, but not to the sessions. This order is not conclusive, and parol evidence is admissible to show that this was the ground of the order being quashed.

Order confirmed conclusive.

Mandamus to make a special entry refused.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

they were right in receiving the parol evidence. It is not for us to inquire whether they came to a right conclusion on that evidence, though I have no doubt they did; but the only question now is as to the admissibility of the parol evidence, and I think it would lead to much injustice if it were inadmissible. There are two rules applicable to this subject; one is, that an order of sessions confirming an order of removal is conclusive against all the world; the other is, that an order of sessions quashing an order of removal is conclusive between the contending parishes: but it is conclusive only as to the point which it decides, i. e. that at the time when the order of removal was made, the appellant parish was not bound to receive the pauper. It is like an acquittal upon an indictment, for not repairing a road, on a plea of not guilty, where the question of liability has not been raised on the record; such acquittal is no evidence that the parish was not liable, because it may have proceeded on a different ground, viz., either that the road was not out of repair, or was not a public highway. So an order of sessions, quashing an order of removal, may have proceeded either on the ground that the pauper was not settled in the appellant parish, or that he was not chargeable, or that he was irremovable. By analogy, therefore, such an order of sessions cannot be conclusive evidence that the pauper was not settled in the appellant parish. I think it would have been better if the court had held, that it was no evidence at all to prove any of the facts on which the decision may have proceeded, because it does not distinctly show upon the face of it on what ground it did proceed. The cases, however, show that it is primâ facie evidence that the pauper was not settled in the appellant parish; but it must be competent for the respondents to show by parol evidence that the order of sessions was not made on that particular ground, for otherwise they would be subjected to great injustice. In some of the cases the special ground for quashing the order of removal has appeared on the face of the order of sessions; in others it has not. In Osgathorpe v. Diseworth, the special ground was not stated on the face of the order of sessions. Rex v. Wheelock is a direct authority in favour of our present decision. There the order of removal was quashed in fact for want of proof of the chargeability of the person removed; but that ground was not stated on the face of the order of sessions, and this court refused a mandamus to compel the sessions to state that ground specially in their order, because the respondents might, on the trial of a second appeal, explain by evidence the particular ground on which the former order was quashed. Undoubtedly parties must have a right, either to have the ground stated on the order, or to prove it afterwards by parol evidence. As to Mungerhunger v. Warden, (p. 1070,) I doubt whether that is any authority at all; it does not appear to have been decided on the question of settlement. It is a general rule, that the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction is never final between the parties, except as to the point on which the court has adjudicated. Now here, the point adjudicated was merely that, at the time when the order of removal was made, the appellant parish was not bound to receive the pauper; and parol evidence was admissible to show that that was the matter really adjudged." Taunton, J. "I certainly had a strong impression in the first instance, that the decision of the sessions in this case was wrong. In the course of the argument, the difficulties I entertained have been removed. I think this falls directly within the authority of one case cited, and that it is also within the scope of another. I would be the last person to disturb the general rule laid down, that an order of sessions quashing an order of removal is conclusive between the contending parishes, and that an order of sessions confirming such an order is conclusive against all the world. But then, an order of sessions must operate with reference to the state of things existing at the time when it was made. Parol evidence, therefore, was admissible here to show the state of things when the first order was made, and explain to what extent it was intended to operate. The argument is, that if the parol evidence be admissible, it appears thereby that the ground for quashing the first order of removal was altogether temporary, inasmuch as the pauper then resided on a tenement which, being his own property, rendered him irremovable, but which was not of a sufficient value to give him a settlement: and, therefore, that the order of removal could not then be supported, it being premature: but that after 1822, a new state of things arose: the pauper sold his tenement, and was no longer irremovable: the right to remove him, which was only suspended, revived, and the sessions, in 1832, might take the new state of things into consideration. I think that view of the case correct. I rely chiefly on the case of Osgathorpe v. Diseworth; I do not place so much dependence on Rex v. Wheelock, because there the point now before the court arose incidentally and not directly. But I cannot distinguish this case from Osgathorpe v. Diseworth. There the pauper, who was a certificated person, was removed before he became chargeable, and a second order of removal having been made, upon appeal, the above facts appeared by evidence, (which must have been given to explain the first order of sessions,) and the sessions thought the first determination was not final between the parties, and made their order accordingly. On motion to quash the last two orders, on the ground that a reversal is final between the parties, the court said: 'So it would be if the special matter did not appear: a certificated person cannot be sent back until he is actually a charge: a removal before is premature: the consequence of which only is, that he must be suffered to remain till he does become chargeable, but not to make a premature removal final for ever. The last orders must be confirmed.' So in this case, as long as the pauper resided in the parish on his own property, he was irremovable; but as soon as the property ceased to be his, he became removable. If a different rule were to prevail here, the consequence would be to make a premature removal decisive. I think the evidence was properly received, and that this case is not distinguishable from Osgathorpe v. Diseworth." Patteson, J. "I think we must assume that the sessions were satisfied that the first order of sessions was made on the ground of the pauper having been irremovable. If they were not so satisfied, they would not have sent the case here. It is admitted, that if the special ground for quashing the first order of removal had appeared on the face of the order of sessions, it would not have been conclusive. The question then is, whether the parol evidence was properly received. Now on that point I cannot distinguish this case from Osgathorpe v. Diseworth. I think it would be much better if the special ground for quashing an order of removal were always stated on the face of the order of sessions, because it would then be unnecessary to give parol evidence on the trial of the second appeal, which is always attended with great expense: but on the authority of Osgathorpe v. Diseworth, I think parol evidence may be given on appeal against a second order, to explain the ground on which the first was quashed. It appears that in that case the ground for quashing the first order of removal was not stated in the first order of sessions, but that it was stated to the court on the trial of the appeal against the second order of removal. Rex v. Wheelock is not in point, but I am at a loss to see how the court could have refused a mandamus, unless they had been of opinion that upon appeal against another order, parol evidence of the circumstances might be received, for otherwise it is clear that the party must have a right to have the special ground appear on the face of the proceedings, and the court in that case would have interfered to enforce it." Order of sessions confirmed.

Order quashed analogous to an acquittal.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

An order of removal, regular on the face of it, was on appeal quashed by order of sessions for "informality." No case having been

Rex v. Cottingham, 4 Nev. & M. 215; 2 Ad. & E. 251. S. Moor was removed from Cottingham to Patrington. On appeal it was quashed. No case was stated. The order of sessions was, that the order "be quashed for informality, and that the respondents do pay to the appellants, 30*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* for their costs in prosecuting this appeal." The two orders having been brought up by certiorari, a rule was obtained to show cause why the stated, the court of Q. B. will affirm the order of sessions.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

The sessions may award costs to the appellant, though the order be quashed for informality only.

order of sessions should not be quashed. Lord Denman. "The court of quarter sessions ought to have absolute dominion as to law and facts which come before them. We can know only what they send to us; they have quashed this order on the ground of informality. What the informality is, we do not know. It is argued that it must be an informality on the face of the order; I cannot agree to that. Interpreting the meaning of the magistrates according to popular language and in the usual sense of the words, we must understand that they meant to state that the order was not quashed on the merits; and it is reasonable that they should do so, to prevent their order from having an effect in binding parties which it ought not to have. The Rex v. Wick St. Lawrence, (p. 1171,) supplies an instance in which an order was held not to be binding, because the decision was not on the merits. As to the question of costs, the order would certainly be bad if the act had said that costs should be granted only when the decision turned on the merits, but that is not so. The act says, that the justices may award costs to the party for whom the appeal shall be determined. They may justly think a removal vexatious which has been made under circumstances producing what they call an informality. It is not necessary that the determination of the appeal should be on the merits. In Rex v. The J. of Essex, (p. 350,) a question arose as to the power of the sessions to award costs, and it was held that they had no such power, but there the appeal was not entered, and the statute gives the power only where the appeal is 'determined'." Taunton, J. "I am of the same opinion. There are two ways in which the proceedings of a court of quarter sessions may be erroneous. They may be defective on the face of them, or they may be erroneous from facts apparent on a special case. Here there is no special case, but on the face of the order of the court of quarter sessions it appears that the original order was quashed 'for informality.' The only question then is, whether such informality could be an informality only on the face of the original order; certainly none such appears. But notwithstanding this, I think there might be an informality in some part of the proceedings, and such an informality as could come before this court no otherwise than by a special case. But if this court see that there might have existed some circumstance making the original order informal, we must confirm the order of sessions, there being no special case. I do not agree that all the cases suggested would be cases of informality, but looking at the order of sessions, and nothing being brought positively before us to show that it is wrong, I think it must be affirmed. It is a wholesome rule, that this court is not to entertain a jurisdiction over extraneous matters coming before the sessions unless they be specially stated. If it were otherwise, if we could go into the merits without a special case, there would be in almost every instance a discussion upon affidavits. As to the question of costs, I fully agree with my lord. The words of the statute are quite strong enough to give the power of awarding costs in the case of an order quashed for informality." Patteson, J. "If the word 'informality' in this order of sessions is to be used in its strict legal sense, the sessions have done wrong in quashing the original order. But if it may be understood as merely used in contradistinction to the merits of the case, we cannot say what the ground has been upon which the order has been quashed, and we can only act on what we see. As to the costs, I agree that the words of the act do not restrict the power of the justices to cases of decisions upon the settlement." Williams, J. "The question is, whether 'informality' means a strict legal informality, or whether the word is used in a more popular sense. I do not see why the more popular sense may not be that which the justices intended, and this is the more probable, as the entries of the courts of quarter sessions are frequently made with great laxity." Order of sessions affirmed.

Such an order is not conclusive, if it is in itself void, as being directed to a place not maintaining its own poor. (Rex v. Oldbury, p. 1157.)

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

An order then quashed for form is not conclusive between the parishes, and the sessions should make a special entry "quashed for informality only, and not on the merits (a)." The Court of Queen's Bench will not, unless a case is reserved for their opinion, inquire into the nature of the informality. (Exparte Overseers of Pontefract, p. 1184; Rex. v. Cottingham, p. 1174.) But if the sessions make a wrong entry, which they had no jurisdiction to make, they may be compelled by mandamus to erase it from the records, but not where they make a special entry which was in law incorrect. (Exparte Crick, and Exparte Ackworth; Rex v. J. Yorkshire; Rex. v. Cornwall.) The court, however, will not compel them to make any special entry, although it appears that the order was on the trial quashed for informality. (Reg. v. Lancashire, J., p. 1177.)

What is an adjudication on the merits.

It becomes very material to ascertain what is an adjudication on the merits, (b) and what on form; and perhaps it may be stated generally that a decision on the question of settlement is a decision on the merits, although the question might have been imperfectly raised on the examination, or grounds of appeal. Where the examination did not state that the pauper had resided forty days in the parish, and the respondents consented for that reason to quash the order (Rex v. Church Knowle, p. 1177, Reg. v. Evenwood, p. 1178), or where the sessions were of opinion that there was a material variance between the evidence and the examination (Reg. v. Yorkshire re Clint, p. 1125), or that the examination was in itself imperfect, which did not disclose the time of the pauper's birth (a settlement by birth being relied on), (Reg. v. Charlbury, p. 1180): or where an order was confirmed without hearing, because the appellants had given no notice of appeal, (Reg. v. Oundle, p. 1183), or when a former order is relied on, and it appears that it was suspended, and the order was quashed, because the examination did not show that such order had been executed, or the suspension removed; in all these cases, the decision is on the merits, and conclusive between the parishes: and a special entry by the sessions that the order was quashed not on the merits, was ordered to be erased (Exparte Ackworth, 3 Q. B. 397, post).

Not on the merits.

But where the order was quashed on the ground that the pauper was at the time irremovable (Rex v. Wick St. Lawrence, p. 1171), or on the ground that the examination did not disclose the chargeability (Reg. v. Perranzabuloe, p. 1184), the judgment of the sessions is not conclusive. Where the respondents had given notice of abandonment of the order, offered to pay all costs incurred, stating their intention to ask the court to quash it, but "not on the merits," which was done, a fresh order may be obtained. (Exparte Overseers of Pontefract, p. 1184.)

Where the examination did not state at what time the relief relied on was given, and quashed the order, "not on the merits," reserving a case as to the propriety of a fresh entry, the Queen's Bench declined to give any opinion, and discharged the rule for quashing the order of sessions. (Reg. v. Kingsclere, p. 1185.)

Where the order is quashed without any special entry, it will be presumed that it was quashed on the merits, but where the entry was "the merits not being inquired into," this is not a decision on the merits, and the order is not conclusive. (Reg. v. Ynisawdra, p. 1185.)

(a) Reg. v. Pixley, p. 131, an order relating to a lunatic was quashed "for form and not on the merits." This does not preclude a subsequent inquiry into the settlement.

(b) J. Patteson has observed, "I object, and did so in Reg. v. Charlbury, to the statement in such cases that an order was or was not discharged on the merits. The true question is, not whether the former order of sessions proceeded on the merits, but whether it decided the same point as is sought to be raised by the second appeal. Chargeability and settlement are both merits. Here the point decided on the first appeal was wholly collateral to the question of settlement, which was left untouched on that occasion, but is the question sought to be raised in this second appeal, Reg. v. Perranzabuloe, p. 1184.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

The Queen's Bench has no power to order the sessions to make a special entry.

Rex v. Lancashire, 3 Q. B. 367. On an application by a mandamus to the sessions to enter on their order the reasons for making it, it appeared that Mitchell was removed from Heaton Norris to Preston. Preston gave notice of appeal, stating that the order and examinations were bad on the face of them, and that the justices making the order had no legal evidence of the place of settlement. The appeal had been previously entered and respited. Finding the objections insurmountable, the overseers of Heaton obtained and served a supersedeas; but not agreeing with the overseers of Preston as to the terms of abandonment, they attended the sessions and moved to quash their own order for informality, incorrect evidence, and badness of the examinations, according to the grounds of appeal, and to have a special entry made of the reason for quashing the order. The appellants resisted it, in order to obtain their costs, and urged that the justices in sessions having in a previous case on that day expressed their determination to put an end to frivolous removals, they should not enable the respondents to remove again by quashing this order for mere informality. The justices refused to make a special entry, and quashed the order generally, saying they believed by so doing they pursued a course which would put an end to unnecessary litigation. They offered to grant a case, which the respondents declined. Lord Denman. "Enough has been said to justify our having granted the rule nisi, but there appears now to be no doubt on the point. The mandamus, if granted, would go to a court of quarter sessions perhaps differently composed from that which made the order, and therefore not able to judge of the reasons; and, at all events, the sessions may exercise their own discretion as to stating them." Patteson, J. "I regret that we cannot order this entry to be made; but we have no power to do so, according to Rex v. Wheelock, (p. 1171)." The other judges concurred. Rule discharged.

Where an order has been quashed by consent, but without communicating to the appellants the grounds on which it was quashed, the order of sessions is conclusive between the two parishes.

The copy of the examination, on which the pauper was removed, did not state any residence by him in the appellant parish, the respondents, on discovering this omission, procured their appeal to be quashed, by consent of the appellants, but did not communicate on what grounds, either to the sessions or the appellants. The order of sessions being general, is a decision on the merits.

Reg. v. Church Knowle, 2 N. & P. 359; 7 A. & E. 471. R. Galley was removed from Church Knowle to St. Martin, Salisbury. Order quashed. Case:—A former order of removal had been made upon the examination of the pauper on the 20th day of December, 1834, touching his hiring and service with James Furber, in or about the year 1824; but it did not state as a fact, that during such service the pauper resided in the appellant parish. A copy of this order, with the examination of the pauper, was sent by the overseers of Church Knowle to the overseers of St. Martin. Against this order an appeal was entered at the Epiphany sessions and respited to the Easter. At the Easter sessions, the parish of Church Knowle having discovered that in the pauper's examination no mention was made of his having resided in the parish of St. Martin, moved on this ground only, but without stating this or any other grounds either to the court or the appellant parish, to quash their own order, which was done generally, and with the consent of the appellant parish. The pauper having again become chargeable to Church Knowle, a second order of removal to St. Martin was made upon another examination of the pauper, dated 27th June, 1835, touching the same hiring and service with Furber, and also upon an examination of the said Furber, touching the same hiring and service, and copies thereof were sent to the overseers of St. Martin. On the 17th of August, the appellant parish sent to the overseers of Church Knowle a notice of appeal, signed by four churchwardens and four overseers, therein described as the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Martin, in the city of New Sarum, and on the 5th of October, a statement of the grounds of appeal, signed by two churchwardens and two overseers only, therein described as the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Martin, in the city of Salisbury, and the appeal was entered at the Michaelmas sessions. At the hearing of the appeal, the court overruled an objection made by the respondents, that the appellants were bound by the description contained in the notice of appeal of the four churchwardens and four overseers who signed the same, and were thereby precluded from putting in the statement of the grounds of appeal signed by two churchwardens and

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

The appellants are not estopped by the signatures to the notice of appeal from proving that those who signed it were not the real number of parish officers.

two overseers only. The court overruled, also, an objection made by the appellants, to the reception of parol evidence to explain the grounds on which the respondents had moved to have the first order quashed, and after hearing the same, thought the quashing of the said order conclusive as between the same parties, and accordingly quashed the last order. Lord Denman, C. J. "I am of opinion that the sessions were quite right, in both the conclusions they have come to. The first point made is, that the statement of the grounds of appeal was inadmissible, because the appellants had precluded themselves from tendering it, by having previously given a notice of appeal, signed by a greater number of parish officers. But it seems clear to me that the appellants were not so bound by the way in which the notice of appeal was signed, and as the very objection was raised at sessions, we must take it that an explanation was given, which was perfectly satisfactory, as the justices allowed the appeal to go on. Nothing in fact is stated in the case to show that those who signed the statement of grounds of appeal, were not both in fact and law the proper persons so to do. On this point it seems impossible to come to any other conclusion. Then it is said that the rule of law which makes an order of sessions conclusive between the two litigant parishes, is not applicable here, inasmuch as the order was quashed on an application of the respondents themselves, who had discovered some defect in the statement of their case, and we are referred to certain decisions as guides on the subject. I do not think, however, I shall interfere with anything that has been laid down either by myself or other judges, in arriving at a different conclusion here. For in those cases there was either an express decision of the sessions, pointing out the special grounds on which their judgment proceeded, or as in the last case cited, Rex v. Wick St. Lawrence, (p. 1171,) there was what was equivalent to it, a quashing of the order by consent of the parties, the point on which it was quashed being expressly made known to the other side. Can it be even said here that the sessions did not quash this order on the merits; all that can be gathered from the facts stated is, that the respondents found some deficiency in the facts to support their case, and upon that they procured their order to be quashed. If on an appeal being decided in this manner, we should hold that evidence was admissible to show that it was not decided on the merits, what a door we should open to injustice, for the respondents might get their order quashed again and again, and at last contend that the case had never been decided on the merits. The appellants, by such a course, would naturally be misled, for if this could be done once, it could be done twenty times, and then when the appeal came on to be heard, the question would be, whether the case had been previously decided on each occasion on the merits or not, the great inconvenience of which is obvious. In this case, in my opinion, the sessions were quite right in the decision they came to, that their former order was conclusive, because, on looking at the statement of the grounds of appeal, it is quite clear that the parties went to try the same question on both occasions; there could be no doubt, therefore, what the point to be tried was. I think, therefore, in every point of view, the sessions were quite right, and that when an order of removal is quashed, it is binding and conclusive, unless the opposing party is protected, and put on his guard, by being told that the appeal is to be quashed on some special ground, apart from the merits of the case." Patteson and Williams, Js., concurred. Coleridge, J. "I should not have added a word to what has fallen from my lord, had it not been that for some time I entertained a different opinion, which, however, was entirely altered by the argument for the appellants. Quashing an order for want of form is different from quashing it merely because the merits are not gone into. If the order is discharged because the respondents do not choose to enter into their case, that is a quashing on the merits. We decide this case, therefore, on the general ground, which has been long established." Order of sessions confirmed.

If an order is confirmed because the

Reg. v. Evenwood, 3 Q. B. 370. Margaret Robinson, and children, were appellants who relied on a settlement by renting a tenement did not allege any residence in E, the decision is upon the merits, and conclusive.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

removed from Middlestone to Evenwood. Order confirmed. Case :—The paupers were removed on an examination taken on the 18th August, 1842, which set forth a settlement of the paupers in Evenwood, derived to them from William Robinson, the late husband of Margaret, he having been settled in the said township by reason of his having rented and occupied a farm of land therein from May-day, 1824, to May-day, 1827, at the rent of 50*l.* a year, and having paid the rent for the farm, and having resided in the township on the said farm whilst such tenant thereof for more than a year. Against this order Evenwood appealed, and the ground of appeal was, that by an order of removal, of the 16th September, 1841, the paupers had been removed from St. Helen's Auckland, to Middlestone, and that such order had been confirmed on appeal, subject to a case, which had been since abandoned. On the trial of this appeal, the respondents proved all the facts necessary to support the settlement stated in the examination. The appellants contended that the judgment of the sessions on the former order was conclusive, the circumstances of which judgment were as follows: the former order removed the paupers from St. Helen's Auckland, to Middlestone, on an examination setting forth a derivative settlement of the paupers in Middlestone, by reason of a settlement having been obtained by the said W. R. in that township, by hiring and service, whilst unmarried, in the year 1822. Against this order Middlestone appealed, and admitted the settlement by hiring and service, but alleged a subsequent settlement in Evenwood, in the following terms, that is to say, that, in 1842, he rented a farm, situate at or near Tofthill, in Evenwood, from Mr. Thomas Dickenson and others, at the rent of 50*l.*, or thereabout, and occupied the same under such renting, from the 13th May, 1824, to the 13th May, 1825, and paid the rent for the same. And he also rented and occupied the same farm, from the 13th May, 1825, to the 13th May, 1827, and paid the rent, and was also assessed to and paid the poor-rate due for the same farm during the whole of the time he rented such farm. That appeal came on for trial at the Easter sessions, 1842, when the respondents objected that the grounds were defective in not stating any residence by W. R. in Evenwood ; and the sessions, being of this opinion, confirmed the order with leave to the then appellants to take the opinion of the court upon the sufficiency of the statement. Instead of proceeding with the case, they notified the abandonment thereof to St. Helen's Auckland, and obtained the present order of removal. The sessions were of opinion that their judgment, of the preceding Easter sessions, was not a judgment on the merits, and that the respondents were not concluded thereby. The appellants thereupon called witnesses to rebut the alleged settlement of W. R. in their township. Upon the evidence, the sessions confirmed the order, but granted this case upon the point, whether the court were right in holding that the former judgment of the paupers from the township of St. Helen's Auckland, was not conclusive. Lord Denman. " There is a regular mode of proceeding for a court of quarter sessions. If the court comes to a decision for defect of form, a special entry should be made to that effect ; if that is done, it will appear when necessary how the case was disposed of ; but if that is not done, a party must prove how the case was disposed of. I think we decided correctly in R. v. Lancashire, (p. 1177,) that the justices must exercise their discretion as to making a special entry of the grounds on which they quash an order, according to R. v. Wheelock, (p. 1171.) There will be infinite difficulty if we are to unravel the facts on which the judgment of a court of quarter sessions is given in a former case." Williams, J. " The appellants gave notice of this objection in their statement of grounds of appeal. In the former case, there was no allegation in the grounds of appeal, that the pauper resided in Evenwood, and the court of quarter sessions held that the statement was insufficient. I confess I cannot understand what is a hearing on the merits if this is not so. It seems to me, that if the parties go to the sessions, the appeal comes on to be heard, the respondents' case is concluded, and then it turns out that the statement by the appellants in their grounds of appeal is insufficient, so that they cannot be heard at all, the decision is not upon a preliminary objection." Coleridge, J. "I am entirely of the same opinion: this question is put upon the right issue; this is not a decision upon matter of form, but upon the merits. There has been a hearing of all the legitimate evidence upon the one side and upon the other. If evidence is improperly rejected, then the case is not decided upon the merits; but if the justices decide upon the evidence before the court, the appellants cannot be allowed to say they had not a full opportunity of being heard; the decision is conclusive. If there is once a departure from that rule, it will be impossible to know where to stop." Orders quashed.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

Where the sessions discharged an order of removal, on the ground of a material variance between the settlement stated in the examination, and that proved, the decision is upon the merits and final. An examination stated a renting from 1827 to 1828, but the renting being in fact from 1828 to 1829, the variance is material.

Reg. v. Clint, 1 G. & D. 245, 11 A. & E. 886. J. Lax was removed from Birstwith to Clint. Order confirmed. Case:—By a former order, the pauper had been removed from Birstwith to Clint, on the 8th May, 1839, upon an examination of the pauper, setting up a settlement in Clint by renting, &c., in that township, in 1827, and an occupation from June in that year to June, 1828. That order was appealed against, and the ground of appeal was, that the pauper did not bona fide rent or occupy for a year, from June, 1827, until June, 1828. On the appeal, it appeared that the pauper entered upon the tenement in June, 1828, and not in 1827, and that he quitted in August, 1829. The sessions held the variance material, discharged the order, and refused to grant a case. This court afterwards, in Trinity term, 1840, discharged a rule for a mandamus to the justices to enter continuances and hear the appeal. A second order of removal, now in question, was made upon an examination of the pauper, stating his occupation, agreeably to the dates proved at the trial of the former appeal, to have been from June, 1828, to August, 1829. The question was if the first order was conclusive. During the argument, Coleridge, J., said, "The question was not as to the settlement of the pauper generally, but as to the settlement alleged. Did not the sessions decide upon the merits when they decided the whole question, which was, whether the pauper had the settlement alleged?" It was then contended that the settlement now alleged had never been adjudicated on, and that by a mere informality they were prevented from going into his case. Coleridge, J. "You did go into your case and the sessions decided that you had failed to prove it. We must now assume the variance to have been material." Patteson, J. "You might as well say the decision would not have been upon the merits if you had set up in the examination a settlement by hiring and service, and had sought to prove nothing but a settlement by estate." Lord Denman. "The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, has made a great difference as to such points. A party must send notice of the actual settlement on which he relies, and if he does not, whether by mistake or not, his adversary has a right to bind him, and shut him out from proving any other settlement. This may be said to be a hard rule; but I think it promotes justice to keep parties to the issue, and not allow them to set themselves right at any future time." The other judges concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

An order was quashed on appeal, because the examination did not state the date of the birth, another order was obtained, which the sessions quashed, and found that the omission in the first examination was material. Q. B. will not interfere; and the judgment of the sessions on the first order is conclusive.

Reg. v. Charlbury & Walcott, 3 G. & D. 177; 3 Q. B. 378; 7 Jurist, 1083. By an order of February, 1843, E. Wright was removed from Charlbury and Walcott, to Bloxham. Order quashed. Case:—It appeared that a former order of removal between the same parishes as to the same pauper had been quashed on appeal upon the objection that the examination (on which the order was founded) was insufficient, in not stating the date of the birth of the pauper's husband; and which omission the sessions held to be material, and therefore quashed the order without hearing any evidence, or further going into the case. Upon this appeal, a witness was tendered to prove, that on the former appeal, the order of removal was quashed upon this preliminary objection to the sufficiency of the examination, and that the merits of the case were not gone into; but the sessions held, that such evidence would not alter their decision, and thereupon quashed the present order, subject to the question as to the judgment quashing the former order being conclusive between the parties so as to preclude the respondents from removing the paupers again upon a fresh order founded upon an amended examination, which supplied the omission in the former one. Lord Denman. "The object of the legislature and the wish of this court in these cases is, to make a free and true communication of the facts between the one party and the other; and where that is not done, great expense is incurred by reason of the doubts which are raised. In this case, the examination is sent by the respondents: the appellants say, by their statement of grounds of appeal, that the examination is insufficient, in not stating the date of the birth of the pauper's husband. That is the history of the parties. The omission may be material, and the respondents have notice of it. Then the respondents have a discretion; they may either go to the sessions, or they may abandon their order, and proceed to obtain a new one. It is said that the appellants have a right to costs, and have a right to enter their appeal at the sessions, in order to compel the payment of their costs, and then the order will be quashed; but it seems to me, that this has nothing to do with the question; the respondents should tender costs, or offer to refer the question of costs to some one who can decide that question between the parties: it is the fault of the respondents, if they prevent the appellants from getting them in that way. In this case, however, the respondents did go to the sessions; and, upon the question raised by the statement of grounds of appeal, whether the examination was sufficient, the sessions found that the objection was good, and the order of removal was quashed. The same pauper is removed again, and, upon the trial of an appeal against this latter order, an application is made by the respondents for an entry upon the records of the court, that the former appeal was not decided upon the merits; but this the sessions refuse to do, and quash the latter order, subject to the opinion of this court upon the question, whether the judgment quashing the former order of removal, under the circumstances, was conclusive. The sessions do not ask our opinion, whether the omission in the examination was material, and we cannot enter into a discussion upon it; they may be right or they may be wrong in that respect; but we must give them credit for acting judicially, and we ought to adhere to their decision. I think it might be upon the merits, because the pauper being about to be removed to her husband's birth settlement, the examination might be insufficient to make out the case without evidence of the date of the birth of her husband. In the Rex v. J. Carnarvonshire, where this court was called upon to interfere by mandamus, we thought the justices were mistaken in their decision, that the statement of grounds of appeal was not sufficiently explicit. With regard to matters of practice, this court will always interfere; and that was not a decision, strictly speaking, either on the merits of the appeal or upon a matter of form, but a decision with regard to the rights of the parties. In the present case, I think we ought to abide by our decision in Reg v. Evenwood, (p. 1178,) which appears to me to be on right and sound principles, and to confirm the order." Patteson, J. "There may, no doubt, be a great number of nice points raised for our consideration, but are there not fewer appeals tried at the sessions? are there not a multitude of cases in which settlements are fixed by means of the examination and statement of grounds of appeal, without the parties going to the sessions? The cases here are determined on the best view we can take of the questions brought before us. If an order of removal is quashed in general terms, the respondents may, on a subsequent occasion, go into parol evidence to show that it was not quashed on the merits, as in the case cited of R. v. Osgathorpe, (p. 1171,) where the first order of removal upon appeal was quashed generally; and, upon an appeal against a second order, it was proved by the respondents, that the first removal was before the pauper became chargeable, and the second, after he became chargeable: but that is not the case here; the first order was quashed on an objection that there was a material omission in the examination, but we cannot enter into

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

The sessions are the proper judges of the materiality of an omission in the examination.

the question of materiality; the sessions decided it; then a second order is made, and, upon an appeal against it, the respondents say, now we will go into the ground upon which the first order was quashed; they do go into it, and ask the sessions if the former judgment is conclusive. The sessions hold that it is. Then the sessions ask us if their former judgment is conclusive; it seems to me that it is. The ground of litigation is the same in both cases. If the sessions have found that there is a material omission in the examination, it is the same thing as if they had found that there was a want of evidence; and if an order quashed for want of evidence is conclusive, an order quashed for a material omission in the examination is conclusive. R. v. Evenwood seems to me to be similar to the present case; when that case was first brought under my notice in the Bail Court, I did not quite agree to it; but upon consideration I do. The principle is this: if there is a material omission in an examination, or in a statement of grounds of appeal, and the order is quashed or confirmed on that, there is a decision on the settlement itself, and that decision is conclusive; I therefore think, that the sessions decided rightly in the present case, and that the former order was conclusive." Williams, J. "I am of the same opinion. It has for a long time been settled, that, where an order is quashed, it is conclusive between the same parties on the same state of facts. A decision, that a pauper is not chargeable, is not a decision upon matter of preliminary form; as soon as fresh relief is given to the pauper, there is a new state of facts, and a fresh order is made. Now, in the present instance, the first order of removal is said to have been quashed on preliminary form, and not on the merits: that brings us to the point as to what may be considered a decision on the merits. If an appeal comes on for hearing, and the sessions decide that the examination is insufficient, or that the evidence is defective, that is a decision on the merits. It cannot, I presume, be said, that witnesses must be called on each side. Here, the cause was called on, it was alleged in the statement of grounds of appeal that there was a defect in the examination, the sessions decided that the examination was defective, and surely that was a hearing. On the second appeal, the sessions held that their decision on the former case was a hearing on the merits. When the sessions have come to a decision on a ground submitted to them, and eminently within their jurisdiction, we ought not to interfere. An order, quashed after a hearing upon the merits, is conclusive, except there be a change of facts." Coleridge, J. "I quite agree in the preliminary observations of my brother Patteson. I have no doubt, that, in consequence of the greater minuteness in the examination and in the statement of grounds of appeal, many appeals have not come before the sessions where there is an objection to an examination, on the ground that it is insufficient; it may be that the examination does not give sufficient information, or that the information is sufficient, but that at the trial of the appeal the evidence varies from it; but the sessions are to judge in the one case and in the other; and when they decide, it is as much a decision on the merits as if the whole facts were proved, and the evidence was not sufficient to support the order. If the sessions improperly refuse to let a party go into evidence, then a mandamus is the proper remedy; but there has been no such application in this case. The sessions held, on appeal against the first order, that the examination was insufficient, and the order was quashed generally. A second order is obtained, and an appeal is entered against it. On the hearing of the second appeal, the respondents pray to be allowed to show the ground on which the first order was quashed, as in R. v. Wheelock. (p. 1171). The sessions hold, that such evidence would not alter their decision, and quash this latter order, subject to our opinion whether the former decision was conclusive. We cannot say the sessions were wrong, if, on the facts stated, they may have been right. There are many cases where an objection to an examination may have rather an appearance like form; but it still may be substance. The date of the birth of the pauper's husband may have been most cardinal; there may have been a question as to his legitimacy, which may have turned wholly upon the opportunity given to the appellants by the date, if given in the examination, of hunting out the history of his birth. How can we say that the sessions were wrong? We must, therefore, decide that they were right." Order of sessions confirmed.

What is a decision "on the merits."

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

An order confirmed because no grounds of appeal had been given, is conclusive, although at the same sessions, on the usual motion, the appellants entered and respited an appeal.

Reg. v. Oundle, 2 G. & D. 77; 3 Q. B. 353, n. On appeal against an order of removal from Titchmarsh to Oundle, the sessions dismissed the appeal. The inhabitants of Oundle appealed against the said order at the sessions of the 7th January, 1841, when the court made this order:—"Now, upon the opening of the appeal by A. B. of counsel for the respondents, and hearing C. D. of counsel for the appellants in reply, and it appearing that notice of the grounds of the said appeal had not been given by the appellants to the respondents, as required by the act of parliament in that case made and provided, this court doth refuse to hear or respite the said appeal, and doth hereby order that the said order of the said justices be ratified and confirmed, subject, nevertheless, to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench on a special case." Subsequently, at the same January sessions, the court made another order, which, after reciting the same order of removal, proceeded thus:—"And whereas the inhabitants of the said parish of Oundle did, at this sessions, by C. D. their counsel, pray this court that they might be permitted and allowed to enter their appeal against the above recited order to the judgment of this court, to be tried at the next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden, &c. Now this court doth order that the inhabitants of the said parish be permitted and allowed to enter their appeal against the above recited order to the judgment of this court, to be tried at the next general quarter sessions, &c., upon due notice thereof to be in the meantime given to the churchwardens, &c., of the parish of Titchmarsh." This appeal came on to be tried at the April sessions. It did not appear at this time that any case had been tendered by the appellants to the respondents in pursuance of the said first mentioned order of the 7th day of January, at any time since the previous sessions. On the trial of this appeal, the only evidence given by the respondents was the entry in the clerk of the peace's book of the order of sessions, made on the 7th day of January, 1841. The order of the previous sessions, secondly before mentioned, was also read, and it appeared to the court therefrom (as the fact was) that the order of justices now appealed against was the same as that referred to in the first order of the previous sessions. The court considered that the said order of justices had been absolutely confirmed by the judgment of the previous sessions, and that such judgment was still in full force, and in nowise revoked by the said second order of the said previous sessions, and therefore refused to hear any evidence on the part of the appellants, and dismissed the appeal with costs. The question was whether the sessions were right in considering the order of justices as absolutely confirmed, and in dismissing the appeal. Lord Denman. "It appears that, when this appeal came on at the January sessions, notice of the grounds of appeal had not been given as required by the statute, and that the sessions therefore refused to hear or respite the appeal, and confirmed the order of removal, subject to a privilege, which the appellants did not choose to exercise, of stating a case for the opinion of this court. Subsequently, at the same sessions, an order was made, permitting the same appeal to be entered a second time. In point of form, it was by the order of the sessions that the second entry of the appeal was made, but we cannot but see that it was substantially an ex parte proceeding by the appellants, of which their opponents would have no notice or knowledge whatever; the usual practice being, that the motion to enter and respite an appeal is a mere motion of course, on which the appeal is put into a particular paper, without any communication to the respondents. In this case, the appeal having been once dismissed, the appellants should not have moved, in a mere formal way, to enter it as of course, and as though it had been an entirely distinct appeal from the previous one. However, in this formal way the appeal is re-entered, and at the ensuing sessions, when the justices find out that it is the same appeal they had previously dismissed, subject to a case, which had not been brought up, they think the appellants had no right so to enter the appeal a second time, and they dismiss it. I think they were authorised in dismissing the appeal under these circumstances. That is the only question we need decide, and the question as to the confirmation of the order by the dismissal of the previous appeal is immaterial." Patteson, J. "I think the sessions were quite right in dismissing the appeal, if they thought the order for entering it a second time was not authorised by them. The first appeal was dismissed, because the statement of the grounds of appeal had not been given as required by the Poor Law Amendment Act. The sessions refused to adjourn the hearing of that appeal, and they had a right to refuse, for the 9 Geo. I., which compels them to adjourn an appeal, when proper notice of it has not been given, does not apply when there has been no statement of the grounds of appeal delivered under the late act. The sessions heard the appeal as far as it could be heard under the circumstances, and dismissed it subject to a case. It is said that, as their decision was subject to a case, the appeal was not in truth decided. That may be so, but still it does not show that they were obliged to hear the appeal over again, because the appellants did not think proper to bring up the case granted them for the opinion of this court. Whether, as the appeal was dismissed, not absolutely but subject to a case, the order of removal was thereby confirmed, is immaterial to us, as we think, when the same appeal came before the sessions a second time, they had a right to say, that it was not by their act that the appeal had been so re-entered, and to dismiss it." Wightman, J. "The question raised as to the confirmation of the order of removal at the January sessions is unimportant; we think, when it was discovered that the same appeal which had been once disposed of was entered a second time, that it was rightly dismissed." Order of sessions confirmed.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

Effect of a decision subject to a case which is never acted on.

Reg. v. Fordham, p. 1189.

An order quashed because the examination did not disclose chargeability, is not on the merits, and therefore not conclusive.

Reg. v. Perranzabuloe, 8 Jurist, 57; 3 Q. B. 400; 1 Car. H. & A. 16. C. Cocking was removed from Perranzabuloe to Bodmin. Order quashed. Case:—The appellants proved that the pauper had been removed by a former order from Perranzabuloe to Bodmin, and that such order had been reversed on appeal; in answer to which, the respondents tendered evidence to show that the merits were not heard at the trial of the former appeal. It was then admitted that the former order of the 29th November was quashed, because the examinations upon which that order was founded did not contain evidence of chargeability; and the court, being of opinion that the omission went to the merits, quashed the second order. Lord Denman. "The former order of justices was discharged on an objection which was held to be the merits; but it was on the merits as they then existed. A new state of things has occurred since, and the former order cannot affect both. The second order has been quashed upon a misconception, and the order of sessions must be discharged." The other judges concurred

Where the sessions make a special entry, not on the merits, the Court of Queen's Bench will not direct it to be erased, the real ground being a defect in the examination.

Exparte Overseers of Pontefract, 3 Q. B. 391. On a rule for a mandamus to erase an entry from the records of the quarter sessions of Yorkshire, it appeared that on the 22nd April, 1843, a pauper was removed by an order from Thorne to Pontefract. The latter at the Midsummer sessions entered and respited an appeal against it on the 3rd of August. The overseers of Thorne gave notice to the overseers of Pontefract that they had discovered that the examinations were defective, and that they abandoned the order, stating also that they should apply to the quarter sessions to quash the order upon a special entry, "quashed not upon the merits." They further stated, that they were willing to pay all reasonable costs already incurred on the appeal, together with the maintenance, on the 29th September. The overseers of Pontefract gave notice of trial, and delivered their grounds of appeal. At the trial the notice of abandonment was admitted, and the respondents moved to quash the order, with a special entry "not upon the merits." The appellants claimed the right to have the appeal heard, or if the court declined to hear the appeal, that the entry should be according to the fact, that it was quashed because the examination was defective. The order of the sessions was, that the order of removal should be discharged "not on the merits," and that the costs of the appellants to the time of the service of the notice of abandonment, and the costs of coming to the sessions, should be paid to them by the respondents. Lord Denman. "It appears to me that the court of quarter sessions did perfectly right; and it would be sufficient to rest our judgment in this case upon their conclusion being a right one. When the respondents at sessions said, 'We feel that we cannot support the order, and we are willing to pay all the costs incurred up to the time of the abandonment,' it was the duty of the appellants not to make a job of the trial, but to ascertain what was the amount of their costs, and, receiving them from the opposite party, to withdraw the appeal. It was against good faith in the appellants to try to establish a settlement in the respondent parish after they had been served with notice of abandonment, and to seek to get an entry of judgment as if the case had been decided upon the merits. The appellant parish has indeed a right to say, 'We cannot accept your abandonment,' and to go on and take the opinion of the court of quarter sessions as to whether it will think the case, under such circumstances, decided upon the merits or not. In this case the court thought it was not decided on the merits, and I think so too." Williams, J. "Upon the hearing of the case, the opposite party strikes, and abandons his order. Then the party who requires the case to be heard has a decision in his favour on the very point which he sought to have determined. It could not be stronger for the appellants if all their witnesses had been heard. The result would have been the same." Coleridge and Wightman, Js., concurred. Rule refused.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

When the sessions quash the order not on the merits, it is not conclusive, although they decided on the sufficiency of the examination.

Rex v. Kingsclere, 3 G. & D. 186; 3 Q. B. 388. On an appeal against an order of removal, the sessions quashed the order, subject to a case which stated, that, with a view to enable the respondents to obtain a fresh order of removal, the court directed the order of quarter sessions to be drawn up in the following form:—"It appeared unto this court, that the examination of the pauper and other persons annexed to the order made by the said two justices for the removal of the said paupers, is insufficient. It is therefore ordered and adjudged by the court, that the order of the said two justices be quashed, but not on the merits; and it is hereby quashed accordingly. And it is further ordered, that a special case be stated for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, whether the insufficiency of the examination of the pauper is a defect of form or a question of merits." Lord Denman. "I should rather think, from the entry of the judgment, that the court of quarter sessions were of opinion that the date of the relief was not material. They say, indeed, that the examinations are insufficient; but they also say, 'We have not decided upon the merits.'" The other judges concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

An order quashed, "the merits of the case not being inquired into," is not conclusive.

Reg. v. Ynisawdra, 7 Jurist, 1057. On appeal an order made on the 11th day of September, 1841, for the removal of a pauper and her family from Ynisawdra to Laleston, was quashed. Case:—At the Midsummer sessions, 1841, an appeal came on to be heard, in which the overseers of Laleston were appellants, and the overseers of Ynisawdra were respondents, which appeal was brought against an order made on the 3rd day of April, 1841, by which the same paupers were ordered to be removed from Ynisawdra to Laleston. On the 28th day of June, 1841, the respondents served the appellants with notice of abandonment of the order of the 3rd April, and at the sessions on the following day it was quashed, on the application of the appellants, with the consent of the respondents, but not for want of form or chargeability, or after a hearing on the merits. The respondents thereupon, and after reading the 6th rule of practice of the said court under the head of "Appeals," which is in these words:—"Whenever any order of removal shall be quashed otherwise than on the merits, a minute of the grounds of the judgment shall, subject to the approval and revision of the court, be settled by the advocates on either side, and if they disagree, by the chairman, and such minute shall be entered on the record," prayed the court, in pursuance of such rule, that the grounds on which the order of removal was quashed, should be entered on the record. The appellants objected. Ultimately, by direction of the court, the following order and judgment were entered by the clerk of the peace, in the proper book or record of the same court:—"Midsummer sessions, 1841. Laleston and Ynisawdra. Appeal brought over. On the motion of W. Morgan, ordered that the order of justices be quashed, with costs, the merits of the case not being inquired into." At the trial of this appeal, the appellants stated, that the only ground upon which they relied and intended to resist the first-mentioned order was, that, at the last preceding quarter sessions, the order of the 3rd day of April, 1841, had been appealed against by the parish of Laleston, and was quashed on the motion of the appellants, and with the consent of the respondents. The respondents contended that they were not concluded by the judgment of the court upon the former appeal, as the order was then quashed without entering on the merits. The sessions were of opinion, that, in the present appeal, such order and judgment were conclusive against the respondents, and quashed the order of the 11th day of September, 1841. Lord Denman, C. J. "What was done on the trial of the first appeal is entirely within the principle, if not within the express terms, of former cases. The former order was clearly not quashed upon the merits; and the entry then made seems intended expressly to give an opportunity of trying the case upon the merits." Patteson, J., concurred. Coleridge, J. "Independently of the cases, this entry was made in express accordance with the rule of the sessions. A quashing not on the merits, and a quashing for defect of form, are really convertible terms." Wightman, J., concurred. Order of sessions quashed.

8. Effect of Confirming or Quashing Orders of Removal, &c.

IX. Of Amendments by Sessions.

9. Of Amendments by Sessions.

Enabling statute, 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2.

The 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 2, declares, that the justices upon the appeal shall do justice between the parties, according to the merits of their cause.

Defects of form to be amended.

And the 5 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, provides, that on all appeals to the sessions against the judgments or orders of any justices of the peace, the justices there shall cause defects of form therein to be rectified, without costs, and after such amendments shall proceed to examine and consider the truths and merits of the cause.

Power is given to the justices to amend defects of form; and this power should be liberally exercised, as they may order the amendment to be made on payment of costs. The legislature evidently intended that whatever did not relate to the "truths and merits of the cause" should be considered matter of "form." This is not the sense, however, in which that word was interpreted in Rex v. Cottingham (p. 1174), and Rex v. Wick St. Lawrence (p. 1171).

The omission of a complaint, and of adjudication of chargeability, is not a matter of form that can be amended.

Rex v. Great Bedwin, 2 Sess. Ca. 142; 2 Stra. 1158. Order of removal of a certificated person, in which there was no complaint nor adjudication of chargeability. On appeal the sessions amend the order in these particulars, as matter of form only, and insert such complaint and adjudication. And now the question was, whether these amendments went only to form or substance. By Lee, C. J. "There has been but one case in this court on this act since the making of it, and that was not determined. The present seems to be a very strong case against the power of amending. For there must be a complaint from the overseers, otherwise the justices have no power to remove; and a certificated person must be adjudged to be actually chargeable, otherwise he cannot be removed; and these amendments might be the real merits on which this case depended. And it would be a detrimental construction of the act to take it so largely; and would be giving the sessions an original jurisdiction." And quashed by the whole court.

Nor of the jurisdiction of the justices.

Rex v. Chilverscoton, 8 T. R. 178. The two parishes were in different counties, and no county mentioned in the margin. The justices were described as justices of the county aforesaid. Lord Kenyon. "It is now too late to discuss one of the points made at the bar, namely, whether or not the sessions could amend in this case, it having been decided in Rex v. Great Bedwin (p. 1186), that the sessions can only amend mere defects or wants of form. I verily believe that if the legislature had been asked what was their intention when they passed statute 5 Geo. II. c. 19, they would have said they meant, that if upon inquiry it appeared that the pauper had been removed to his proper parish, the sessions would have power to correct all defects in the order: but the decision to which I before alluded was made ten years after the passing of the act, and at a time when Lord Chief Justice Lee, who was peculiarly conversant in sessions law, presided here. And though I lament that that decision was made, because it renders the statute of little avail, yet it has been acted upon ever since, and it is important to adhere to determinations respecting settlements."

The true construction, but not observed.

Statute a dead letter.

Rex v. Moor Critchell, 2 East, 66. Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "That it was to be lamented that the 5 Geo. II. c. 19, which was intended to give the justices in sessions a power of amending orders of removal, which were defective in point of form, had, by the construction which had been put upon it, been rendered a dead letter, as all defects of this sort had been considered to be matters of substance, and not of form."

The sessions may alter the word "parish" to "vill;"

Rex v. Amlwch, 4 B. & C. 757. It was part of this case, that in April, 1824, overseers were appointed for the parish of Llanerchymedd. The order of removal was directed to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Llanerchymedd. To this it was objected, that Llanerchymedd was not a parish. The court of great sessions directed the order to be amended in this respect, and the appellants denied their right to do so, which forms the first point in this case. If they had that power, the case stands as if the removal had been to the parish or vill of Llanerchymedd. Bayley, J. "I am of opinion, that giving a fair construction to 5 Geo. II. c. 19, the sessions had the power to make this amendment. This order was directed to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, and the fact was, there were no churchwardens of L., and it was not a parish but a vill. The persons for whom the order was intended, received it, for they appealed against it, by the description given to them in the order. Upon the appeal they said that L. was not a parish, but an extra-parochial vill, or, in other words, they pleaded misnomer; that was a mere matter of form. Rex v. Great Bedwin (p. 1186), is very distinguishable, because in that case there was no complaint, nor any adjudication of chargeability; there were material facts and essential parts of the order, for the justices had no power to remove, unless there was a complaint from the overseers; and a certificated person could not be removed unless he was adjudged to be actually chargeable." Holroyd, J. "It was material in point of substance that the order should be directed to a district, the inhabitants of which were bound by law to maintain their own poor." In this case the sessions also erased the word "churchwardens."

and erase the word "churchwardens."

Township for parish.

In Rex v. Bingley (ante), the sessions amended the order by substituting the "township" for the "parish."

10. Power of Sessions in Orders of Removal.

X. Power of Sessions in Orders of Removal.

1. Of their Judgment upon Orders of Removal.
2. Of Special Cases thereon.
3. Of Costs and Maintenance.

It is important that the sessions should bear in mind, in adjudicating upon orders of removal, that the justices by whom the order is made, and also those who are rated or rateable in either of the contending parishes, or whose interests may be affected by the judgment, have no right to vote upon the determination of an appeal. (Rex v. Yarpole, 4 T. R. 71.)

Magistrates cannot vote on appeals where they are interested.

Rex v. Gudridge, 5 B. & C. 459; 8 D. & R. 217. A writ of certiorari issued under these circumstances: Upon an appeal against the accounts of the overseers, the order for allowance was quashed. The respondents applied for a case, but a majority of justices then present refused it. After some of them had left the court, a case was again applied for, and three voted for and two against it. One of the three was a rated inhabitant of the respondent parish, and had not voted on the decision of the appeal. The case was afterwards drawn without the concurrence of the appellant. Abbott, C. J. "We think it the safer course to hold that magistrates should not interfere in cases where they are interested; and that the rule for quashing the certiorari (quia improvide emanavit) must be made absolute." (See Rex v. J. Monmouthshire, post, and Rex v. J. Leicestershire.)

1. Of their Judgment upon Orders of Removal.

1. Of their Judgment upon Orders of Removal.

The sessions cannot make an original order of removal.

Rex v. Bond, 2 Show. 503; 2 Bott, 922. The court of quarter sessions cannot make an original order of removal.

Must either quash or affirm.

Rex v. Oswell and Woking, 2 Salk. 472; 2 Bott, 926. The sessions ordered the order of removal from Oswell to Woking to be superseded, and that the person should be removed to "Woking aforesaid." And it seems that the court were of opinion that the sessions could not supersede, though they might repeal an order of removal.

They cannot order the pauper to be returned to the respondent parish.

An order may be good in part.

The sessions may alter an order made at same sessions, but not of a previous sessions. (a)

Rex v. Milverton, 2 Bott, 928. The sessions ordered that the order should be quashed, and the party sent to the parish from whence he was removed. And it was held that they had only power to affirm or quash, but not to make a new order; and also that because an order might be good in part, and bad in part; the first part was confirmed and the latter quashed.

St. Andrew's Holborn v. St. Clement's Danes, 2 Salk. 494; 2 Bott, 929. The sessions made an order, and afterwards, at the same sessions, vacated it. Both orders were returned upon a certiorari; and by Holt, C. J., "You should not have returned the vacated order, but only the latter. There ought not to be two different judgments. The sessions is all one day, and the justices may alter their judgment at any time while it continues; but they cannot rescind the order of a previous sessions." (Rex v. Cuckfield, 2 Bott, 925.)

Where the justices are divided, the appeal should be adjourned.

Rex v. Justices of Westmoreland, 2 Sess. Ca. 193; 2 Bott, 931. Appeal to the sessions, at which only four justices were present, who were equally divided; so no determination was made, nor the appeal adjourned. A mandamus was directed to all the justices of the county in general, to proceed on the appeal. It was returned, that at such a sessions an appeal was lodged, and that four justices only attended, two whereof were interested in the question, and the other two were divided in opinion. It was agreed on all hands that this return was not to be supported. It was objected that the mandamus ought to be quashed, because it doth not appear that the appeal was before them; and that for aught appears, the mandamus requires the justices to do an impossible thing, viz. to proceed on an appeal not before them, since the appeal, being lodged at a former sessions, was not continued over to the subsequent sessions, and therefore was by law gone. On the other side it was said, that it was not usual in such cases to return the continuances; but that if in fact there was no such continuance, the fault was in the justices, who ought to have adjourned the appeal, till, by the coming of more justices, the matter might have been determined. Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "The question is, whether there is a possibility of the justices' proceeding in this appeal?" He thought if there was not, as there would be a failure of justice in this respect, an information ought to go against the justices who were at the sessions.

(a) See also Rex v. Cheshire, post.

1. Of their Judgment upon Orders of Removal.

[Note.—The chief justice advised the proceeding on the appeal, or returning the continuances, and seemed inclined to grant a peremptory mandamus if they did not do so.]

2. Of Special Cases. (a)

2. Of Special Cases.

How drawn up.

When the sessions entertain a reasonable doubt upon the law, they authorise the unsuccessful party to draw up a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench. It is settled by the contending parties, and if there is any dispute, the difference is disposed of by the sessions. It is usually signed by the chairman and the clerk of the peace.

and brought before the Queen's Bench.

When a special case is thus granted, the unsuccessful party sues out a writ of certiorari. The order of sessions, embracing the special case, is then returned, and a rule obtained to quash it, against which the successful party shows cause, and the point of law is then determined.

The examinations form no part of the record.

The examinations, however, on which an order of removal has been made, form no part of the record of the sessions, and therefore cannot give the grounds of appeal by the certiorari. (Reg. v. Abergele, infra; Ex parte Tollerton, p. 1190.)

Costs.

Before suing out the certiorari, security must be given to pay the costs, if the party does not succeed. At the same time, he will not be entitled to his costs from the other side, even if successful.

If the order returned does not correspond with the certiorari, a motion should be made to quash the return.

Reg. v. Fordham, 11 A. & E. 73. It was contended that the orders of sessions had not been properly received, as the certiorari mentioned one order only, and two had been received. Per Curiam: "It is too late to take this objection: a motion should have been made before this argument to quash the return."

Effect of a case.

If the party declines to bring up a case, it would seem that an order of sessions which was confirmed, subject to a case, is not confirmed at all, unless the case be stated. (Rex v. J. Pembroke, p. 1191.) The better form, therefore, would be, that the said order be confirmed, unless the Court of Queen's Bench shall otherwise direct.

when it ought not to be granted.

The sessions, however, are not bound to grant a case whenever they are pressed to adopt it by the counsel for the defeated party, but may exercise their discretion; and where they have no doubt in their own minds, they ought to refuse, in order to save the parties from further expensive litigation. (Rex v. Darley Abbey, 14 East, 285, 597.) On the other hand Lord Hardwicke said, "that if the justices will not state the facts specially, though requested to do so, when the matter is doubtful, this is very blameable conduct in them." (See Rex v. Preston-upon-the-Hill, p. 1191.)

The sessions having refused to state a case, on a certiorari to bring up the order, a statement of the facts relating to the appeal, and the grounds of appeal ought not to be returned.

Reg. v. Abergele, 3 N. & P. 406; 8 A. & E. 394. A certiorari having been obtained for removing into this court all orders made on an appeal touching the removal of Evan Evans, between Eglwys Rhos, otherwise Llanehos, and Abergele; the clerk of the peace made a return, setting out the order of removal, the grounds of appeal, (which was bad on the face of it,) and the order of the sessions, (which was good on the face of it,) quashing the original order, and also setting out the facts of the case. The grounds of appeal being bad, the respondents applied to the Queen's Bench to quash the order of sessions, and confirm the original order. The objection to the notice had been taken at the sessions, and overruled, and a case to this court had been refused. Lord Denman. "In the absence of any authority, I think the course which has been adopted here is wrong. It would be a departure from the usual practice, and an introduction of a precedent full of inconveniences for the future. The rule must be discharged." Counsel objected to the discharge of the rule, as the notice was clearly bad. Patteson, J. "If a motion were made now to quash the return for its introduction of impertinent matter, on the next return being made, the order of sessions only would be brought up; but that being good on the face of it, would be confirmed. The same result arises from discharging the rule."

(a) In copying the cases throughout this volume, the introductory part of the case has been abridged. The proper form is given in the Appendix.

2. Of Special Cases.

Where the sessions refused a case, the court of Q. B. will not grant a certiorari to bring up the examination, and grounds of appeal, for they are no part of the record of the sessions.

Ex parte Tollerton, 2 G. & D. 53. On a rule for a certiorari to bring up an order of removal, the examination on which it was founded, and the proceedings in the quarter sessions, upon an appeal against the said order, including the order and examination aforesaid, and the notice and grounds of appeal, it appeared that the sessions had refused to grant a case on the objection taken to the insufficiency of the evidence on the examination. Lord Denman delivered the judgment. "One of the questions, which in the case just disposed of we observed to be involved in the discussion, has now come before us; and it is this, whether the writ of certiorari ought to require anything more to be returned than the record of the court of quarter sessions, thereby meaning the original order of removal and the proceedings of the sessions thereon upon the hearing of the appeal. In the present instance the application is to require the return of that record, and also of the examination, whereupon the original order of removal was made. In the first place we find, upon reference to the officers of the crown office, that there is no memory nor any note to be found of any certiorari (except where a case has been granted by the sessions) having issued, requiring the return of any such additional matter. The case just disposed of is of course an exception, and the writ is considered as having issued improvidently, so far as respects the direction to return such additional matter as is therein specified. The cases cited in support of the present application are entirely foreign to the purpose. In all of them, without exception, a case appears to have been granted by the sessions, and so to have been brought before this court. In the case of Rex v. Tedford, it appears that a case was stated by the court of quarter sessions. In Rex v. Margam, a case also appears to have been stated, and this court (though not precisely in the usual form) in substance ordered that case to be restated. In Rex v. Whittlebury, a case had been granted by the sessions, and the remarks of Lord Kenyon, which were much pressed upon us, regarded the facts stated in that case, and are utterly without application to the present. Rex v. Wishford (the latest authority cited) was also the common case of an order of sessions upon a case reserved. Nothing therefore has been adduced to show that we ought to do what is now required. But, on the contrary, we find that an understanding seems to have prevailed in direct opposition to it. In the case of Rex v. Oulton (p. 1191), we find the following remarks in the judgment of Mr. Justice Probyn: 'This court can take no notice of anything but the order. I remember a case where the examinations were returned with the order, but the court said they could take notice of nothing out of the body of the order.' Upon the whole we consider this to be a speculative novelty, without the warrant of any principle, precedent or authority, and that therefore there must be no rule."

Special cases substituted in place of statement for judge of assize to determine. (a) Sessions ought not to grant cases

This practice of stating a case for the opinion of the court is a very wholesome substitute of the old mode, by which the facts were specially stated in the order of sessions, and then referred to the judges on the circuit. The appeal for this purpose was adjourned, and then the order of removal either quashed or affirmed, according to the opinion of the judge.

(a) Special cases from sessions should be always drawn by counsel. (Rex v. Woolpit, 5 Nev. & Man. 526, 538; and see Rex v. Great Wishford, p. 663.)

Still the order might be removed into the King's Bench; and in Cuerden v. Leyland, 2 Str. 903, was quashed, though the judge on the circuit had given an opinion in favour of it. But in Rex v. Natland (p. 873 n), the sessions directed a case to be drawn up for the opinion of the judge of assize, and agreed to be determined by his opinion. The judge heard counsel on both sides, and gave his opinion; and upon a notice of certiorari, Lord Mansfield observed, "that it was a manifest consent of the parties to this reference to the judge, and therefore it was like all other references, by consent; and after this consent, he thought it very improper to take the matter up again."

which in one alternative is to be reheard. Ap. 44; L. J. p. 41; Reg. v. Houghton; Reg. v. Stoke-on Trent.

Where it was agreed that several cases should abide the issue of one case, King's Bench will not interfere. (Rex v. Justices of Worcester, 9 D. & R. 210.)

If the justices will not state the case specially, though it may be blameable conduct in them in some instances, yet there are no means to compel them. In Rex v. Oulton (Burr. S. C. 64), an order of removal, upon appeal, was confirmed generally, without stating any case. The appellants excepted at the sessions to their refusing to state the case specially, and delivered into court a bill of exceptions under their hands, which was read and received by the court. The substance of the exception was, that the children, removed after their father's death, went with their mother to an estate of her own at Burnham Overy, and there inhabited with her upwards of three months. These exceptions were returned up together with the orders. And it was moved to quash the order of sessions together with the order of removal. The court were inclinable to come at this case if they could, as it seemed to be a determination against law. But by Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "To what purpose should we make a rule to show cause why this order of sessions should not be quashed? For I do not see that we can ever make such a rule absolute; because this, that it is alleged to have been the real state of the case, doth not appear to us to be the fact. And how can we take it for granted that it was the real fact? To be sure, it is a thing very much to be censured and discommended, when an inferior jurisdiction endeavours to preclude the parties from an opportunity of applying to a superior. But still we must go according to the due course of law." And Page, J., said, "he never knew an instance that this court could force the justices, against their will, to state a special case."

Sessions are not compellable to state cases.

Rex v. Preston-upon-the-Hill, Burr. S. C. 77. Order for removal from Daresbury to Preston upon appeal confirmed generally; not caring to state any special case in their order. A motion was made to quash these orders, which came before the court upon a bill of exceptions containing a special state of the case. On showing cause, the single question was, whether a bill of exceptions would lie in this case to a court of quarter sessions? By Lord Hardwicke, C. J. "This is a case of great consequence, and there may be very great inconveniences on either side. It hath been much wished, that a bill of exceptions would lie to the justices at their sessions; because otherwise it may sometimes happen, that they may determine in an arbitrary manner contrary to the resolutions of the courts of law. For if the justices will not state the facts specially (though requested to do so) when the matter is doubtful, this is a very blameable conduct in them, and it is to be wished that it might be avoided. On the other hand, there may be very great inconveniences arising from the abuse of bills of exceptions. And this matter of the settlement of the poor, which ought to be rendered cheap and speedy, may, by such means, be rendered dilatory, expensive, and burthensome." And after a full hearing of the arguments on both sides, the court were unanimously of opinion, that a bill of exceptions doth not lie to the quarter sessions.

A bill of exceptions does not lie to the quarter sessions.

Rex v. J. Pembrokeshire, 2 B.& Ad. 391. On a rule for a mandamus to the justices of Pembrokeshire to state a special case for the opinion of the Court of King's Bench, pursuant to an order of sessions made on an appeal against an order of removal from Narberth to Llanboidy, and to return the case so

The court refused a mandamus to the sessions to state a special case, though it

2. Of Special Cases.

Appeared that a case had been granted, as the decision of the sessions upon the facts precluded any question of law.

stated into the court, it appeared that the appeal came on to be tried at the Midsummer quarter sessions in 1830, when, after hearing contradictory evidence on a question of settlement by renting a tenement, the court confirmed the order; but, being requested to grant a case, did so in general terms, and without reference to any specific point. The attorneys could not agree in drawing up a case; and, upon their waiting on the chairman to settle the statements they had prepared, he said he could not sign any case by which it should not appear that the court had decided in favour of the respondents on the facts, independent of the law. The appellants' attorney declined taking a case so stated. The question of law which the appellants wished to bring before the court regarded the effect of a supposed agreement between the pauper and the landlord of the tenement, that certain repairs to be done by the pauper (and which it was alleged he had afterwards done) should be allowed in lieu of rent: but it seemed that the justices at sessions, although they granted the case, had been of opinion, upon the evidence, that the agreement had not been made, nor the repairs done; and the chairman would not sign any statement to a different effect. Lord Tenterden. "The justices have confirmed the order, subject to a case. That is no confirmation, unless a case be stated. All we can do, under the circumstances, is to require them to enter continuances, and hear the appeal. I do not see how we can order them to state a case." The rest of the court concurred. Rule discharged. On a subsequent day in the term, Rex v. Earl of Effingham (determined in Hilary Term, 1782,) was mentioned, from a note taken by the late Mr. Dealtry, and in which the court granted a mandamus to the justices present at the last Bradford (West Riding of Yorkshire) sessions to state a case. Lord Tenterden. "I admit that there may be instances in which such a mandamus may issue; but not that it ought to go upon the present application. Here the case, if stated, could come to nothing. The facts are for the judgment of the sessions; and, under the circumstances disclosed, it would evidently be useless to call upon them for a case."

Aliter where the decision of the sessions as to a case had been defeated by some misunderstanding.

Rex v. Earl of Effingham, 2 B. & Ad. 393, n. On a rule for a mandamus to the Earl of Effingham, and the justices, commanding them to state a special case on an appeal between Northowram and Hipperholme, it appeared that, the order being affirmed, the appellants desired a special case to be stated, which the sessions unanimously consented to; and the counsel for the appellants drew the case; and in the afternoon both counsel tendered the case to the sessions for their approbation. Two parties who joined in making the original order, and one who had an estate in each parish (and therefore declined giving any opinion in the morning) were the only justices remaining, when two of them refused to permit the case to be stated. Lord Mansfield doubted whether a mandamus could go to compel justices to state a case; but Mr. Justice Buller saying that in this instance the court of quarter sessions had actually agreed to state one, but Sir W. H. prevented it, a rule nisi was granted. Mr. Fearnley and Mr. Dunning (in Hilary Term, 1782) showed cause on affidavits, in which it was represented that the case had not been regularly granted, but that some of the justices had said a case might be stated if counsel could agree upon one; that counsel had not agreed, and that no directions for a case had been given to the clerk of the peace. The Attorney-General and Mr. Heywood, in reply, said that the case had been properly granted, and that the justices were willing that it should be stated; and the Attorney-General mentioned that an instance had occurred in which a mandamus had been granted, when the respondents would not consent to the stating of a case. Lord Mansfield ordered the case annexed to the affidavits in support of the rule to be read; and, it being read, asked Mr. Fearnley what facts in the case he could controvert? Mr. Fearnley said he had not seen the case at the sessions, and was not prepared now to go into the truth of the facts. Mr. Heywood observed, that though the case was annexed to Mr. Parker's affidavit, none of the justices showing cause had denied any fact in it. Lord Mansfield said there had been a misunderstanding; there did not seem to be any contrariety of facts, and the mandamus must go. Mr. Fearnley asked whether the justices must re-examine the witnesses? Lord Mansfield. "They must do it in order to know what case to return, if there is a difference about the facts." In Easter Term, 1782, a return was made, stating a special case, and stating also that the sessions had discharged the order of two justices; and a rule nisi was obtained for affirming this last-mentioned order of sessions; which rule was afterwards made absolute, no cause being shown.

2. Of Special Cases.

It was moved to set aside an order of sessions confirming an order upon appeal. But the court would hear nothing of the merits of the cause, the order of sessions being in that case final, unless there had been error in form. (1 Vent. 310.)

The justices at sessions are not bound to express the reason of their judgment.

South Cadbury v. Braddon, 2 Salk. 607; 2 Bott, 751. On appeal to the sessions, the court discharged the first order. It was moved to set aside the order of discharge, because the justices do not say whether they discharge it for form, or on the merits. But by the court: "The justices are not bound to express the reason of their judgment, any more than other courts; but the reason of their judgment must be collected from the record, as where judgment is arrested upon an insufficient indictment."

Effect of their judgment.

If the sessions reverse the first order, and that, being removed, appears to be good, this court must intend it was reversed on the merits, and affirm the order of sessions. So also if the order is reversed specially for want of form, and no defect of form appears on the face of it, the court will infer that it was quashed for some extrinsic informality. (Rex v. Wheelock, p. 1171.)

If the sessions reverse the first order, and that, being removed, appears not to be good, the court must intend it was reversed for form, and affirm the order of reversal.

So, if the sessions affirm the first order, and that appears to be good, the court must affirm the order of sessions.

But if the first order appears bad, and the sessions affirm it, this court must reverse it, because it appears naught.

The justices should find the facts, and not merely state the evidence from which the facts are to be drawn.

In stating a case it is the duty of the justices to find the facts, and not to state the mere evidence of the facts. "The court are left to draw the inference which the justices below ought to do." (Rex v. Lyth, p. 496.) "However strong the presumption be, as only the evidence of hearing is stated and not the fact itself," the court cannot decide the case. (Ib.) The fact of a parish being unable to enjoy the benefit of the statute of Ely must be stated, and not the circumstances (Rex v. Watson, p. 15). "The sessions have not found all the facts from which we might draw the legal inference, but in addition to some facts stated, have supplied us with a considerable portion of documentary evidence. This is not the proper mode of submitting a case for our consideration, and it must not be assumed because we enter into the examination of these documents, that we will on all occasions inquire into matters of fact cognizable by the sessions only." (Reg. v. Marquis of Salisbury, p. 224.) The sessions must decide whether a particular excavation is a mine or a quarry. If they "avoid such finding, the answer of the court is,—we will not decide the question of fact." Case sent back. (Rex v. Dunsford, p. 246.) Whether a former wife was alive at the time of second marriage is a fact which the sessions should find. (Rex v. Harborne, p. 467.) "They should state the fact one way or another, whether it was a dispensation of the service, or a dissolution of the contract. (Rex v. St. Peter's, Mancroft, 575; Rex v. Bottesford, 579.) "It is a question for them (Rex v. Roxby, p. 587). The sessions should decide if the contract was one of hiring, or an imperfect apprenticeship. (Rex v. Ightham, p. 656). "The sessions should decide whether the party occupied the house as tenant, or servant" (Reg. v. Bishopton, p. 779). "It is a conclusion partly of law and partly of fact, and it is incumbent on the other side to satisfy the court that the sessions have necessarily drawn a wrong conclusion." (Rex v. Snape, p. 783.) The sessions should state whether the party occupied as tenant under a new contract, or as the executor of the former tenant (Rex v. Barnard Castle, 885).

They should draw their own conclusion.

2. Of Special Cases.

The sessions ought not to grant a case on the sufficiency of the grounds of appeal (Reg. v. Kesteven). In one case the facts were stated, without noticing the points for consideration. (Rex v. Harbury.) The judgment of the sessions was reversed. "Such practice is very inconvenient, the points for argument should be distinctly stated." But where the sessions stated that it appeared to them that the pauper was bound, the King's Bench thought this sufficient, as "it is not necessary that the evidence should appear to us." (Rex v. E. Knoyle, p. 735.) If a particular term has acquired a local meaning, the sessions must state the sense in which the word is used, for without such explanation, the King's Bench will understand it in its ordinary meaning, and if the word "going" imports pasture fed, the sessions must so state it. (Rex v. Thornham, 761.) Where it was insisted that the term, "Landsell Colliery," imported an interest in land, Willes, J., said, "We cannot take notice of the meaning attributed to the term, and said to be so understood in the North by the trade, unless it were so stated to us." (Rex v. N. Bedburn, p. 808.)

They are the proper judges of fraud.

The justices are the proper judges of fraud and must find it as a fact. If there is a fraud in dissolving the original contract of hiring, the sessions must decide it. (Rex v. Bottesford, 579.) So also if the departure from service is fraudulent. (Rex v. Preston, p. 593.) So also that the removal of a pregnant woman was by the fraudulent collusion of the parish officers. (Rex v. Llanfihangel, p. 412.) So also they must find whether the overseers gave money to a tenant by way of relief, or fraudulently to throw a burthen on another parish. (Rex v. Tillingham, p. 851.)

But their judgment, as a conclusion of law, has been reversed.

But where the justices do find fraud, the Court of Queen's Bench will inquire whether the fraud is such as will prevent a settlement. Where from the confirmation of an order the necessary implication was, that the sessions thought that the pauper had been born in an extra-parochial place by the fraudulent contrivance of a large rate-payer, the court quashed their order, as the fraud must be that of the parish officer. (Rex v. Mattersey, p. 411). The sessions stated it as their opinion that all transactions by masters to prevent settlements are fraudulent; but the court quashed their order, as it is lawful to hire so as to prevent a settlement. (Rex v. Mursley, p. 521.) The sessions found that the pauper and his grandfather had fraudulently colluded to impose the grandfather upon the parish as a proper master for the child; the court said the justices have mistaken the effect of the fraud, and as there had been no fraud by the parish officers, a settlement was gained, and they quashed the order of sessions. (Rex v. Great Sheepy, p. 626.) The justices refusing to bind an apprentice to a particular master, the overseer, the pauper, his mother, and the master, executed an indenture privately. The sessions found fraud. The court said, "There are no circumstances to warrant such a conclusion," and quashed the order of sessions (Rex v. Killy, p. 668.) The parish officers procured letters of administration for a widow, and thereby perfected her settlement. The sessions found that there was fraud in so doing. The court said, "The sessions have stated the facts on which that finding was grounded, and there is not any fraud sufficient to prevent the estate vesting in the widow. (Rex v. Great Glenn, p. 867.) A schoolmaster was appointed in a manner which the sessions thought was "fraudulent, and in no respect consistent with the will" of the person who created the trust. The court thought that by fraudulent the sessions meant a colourable appointment, by which the master was deprived of part of his emoluments; there was no fraud in the master, and quashed the order of sessions. (Rex v. Owersby-le-Moor, p. 877). A purchase was made for 39*l.*, 30*l.* of which was borrowed, and the sessions found that the purchase was fraudulent. Lord Hardwicke. "The justices are the proper judges of fraud, and if they had found fraud generally, we might have been bound by it; but when they state the facts particularly, the matter is as much open for our determination as for theirs;" and the order was quashed. So also where the sessions found the payment of rent by the parish officers was fraudulent, but that the landlord and tenant were not parties to it, the court held a settlement to be gained, and quashed the order of sessions. (Rex v. Kibworth Harcourt, p. 800.)

The court of Queen's Bench is not disposed to interfere with the decision of the sessions

Where the sessions draw a conclusion and state the facts specially, the inclination of the court is, although they do not concur in the inference drawn, not to disturb the decision, if there be any premises to warrant it. Dispensation, for instance, in a question of fact which the sessions must decide. "I should not, perhaps, have interfered if they had drawn a different conclusion, though I should not have been so well satisfied." Abbott, C. J. (Rex v. Bottesford, p. 579.) "The sessions have confirmed the rate, we must see that they are wrong before we quash their adjudication." (Rex v. Ellis, p. 223.) The sessions have found them to be saleable underwoods. I do not say their decision is right; and if I had to decide I might have come to a different conclusion. But it is a question of fact, and unless we can see that the sessions were wrong in law, we ought not to disturb their decision." Coleridge, J. (Reg. v. Narberth, p. 250.) "I should have drawn a different conclusion, but the decision of the justices ought not to be disturbed." Littledale, J. (Rex v. St. Martin's, Leicester, p. 499.) "As the sessions have expressly found the fact of hiring and service for a year, I think we are bound by it." Abbott, C. J. (Rex v. Tyrley, p. 505.) "I certainly should not have come to the conclusion myself. I should have thought there was no dispensation." (Ib.) "Rule is inveterate; if the justices find a hiring and service for a year, that is decisive to give a settlement." Grose, J. (Rex v. Overnorton, p. 583.) "The sessions had better not have found a special case." (Ib.) "Unless the court sees clearly that the sessions had concluded wrongly they would not reverse their conclusion." Le Blanc, J. (Rex v. Mildenhall, p. 584.) The sessions found that the contract was dissolved. "I should not be disposed to interfere with their judgment, even if I thought it wrong, which I do not." Abbott, C. J. (Rex v. Roxby, p. 587.) "I cannot say the sessions have done wrong, though I think they might have drawn a different conclusion." Le Blanc, J. (Rex v. Maidstone, p. 589.) "In this case the sessions have drawn, as they had a right to do by law, the proper conclusion from the presumption of facts, and we should not be justified in reversing their order." Rex v. Catesby, p. 966.) The sessions have implied a hiring. "I should have drawn a different conclusion, but the decision of the justices ought not to be disturbed." (Rex v. St. Martin's, Leicester, p. 499.) In Rex v. St. Andrews, Cambridge, 8 B. & C. 664; Rex v. Rosliston, Ib. 668; the sessions in one case found that there was a hiring and in the other there was none, and although some of the judges said they should have drawn different conclusions, the decision ought not to be disturbed. So also in Rex v. Edwinstowe (p. 1008), a settlement was inferred from a single act of relief, yet although the court would have come to a different conclusion, they would not reverse their decision unless they were clearly wrong. So also when they declined to make the inference from repeated acts of relief. "There was a strong primâ facie case, but they were not bound to draw the conclusion." (Rex v Yarwell, p. 1008.) But where "there was evidence on one side and none on the other, the sessions determined that the no-evidence preponderated;" their order was quashed. (Rex v. Colcorton, p. 1005.) "If it is a question of fact" (viz. whether the contract was for a hiring or for apprenticeship) "the sessions have decided it, and before we reverse it we ought to see clearly that there were not sufficient premises to warrant the conclusion." Bayley, J. (Rex v. Edingale, p. 658). In Rex v. Billinghay (p. 549), the sessions found it to be a contract of apprenticeship. But the court thought that it was a hiring, and quashed the order of sessions. Where the sessions find it expressly to be a contract of apprenticeship, Q. B. will not interfere. (Rex v. Great Wishford, p. 663.) "The jurisdiction on matters of fact is with the sessions. This court has it only when a matter of fact is referred to it by the sessions, or where they have decided on the fact without any evidence, or against evidence."

2. Of Special Cases.

Coleridge, J. (Rex v. Great Wishford, p. 663.) "The sessions have in effect negatived the consent by finding that the pauper gained no settlement." Grose, J. (Rex v. Crediton, p. 701.) "If we do not take all jurisdiction from the sessions their finding must be conclusive on the point, viz. an assent to a particular service." Lord Ellenborough. (Rex v. Ashby, p. 707.) "If the sessions think that the omission in the examination is material, the court will not interfere." (Reg. v. Charlbury, p. 1180.)

In other cases the court has considered the finding of the sessions to be conclusive, as, on finding a place to be a "vill" or "chase," (Rex v. Ronton Abbey, 14) or that "Stock was not productive," (Rex v. Macdonald, p. 147), though, in a similar case (Rex v. Dursley, p. 147), the order was quashed, because the facts were not sufficiently disclosed to enable the court to draw the conclusion that the party was rateable. As to which it was said, in Rex v. Darlington (p. 148), that the sessions had forborne to draw any conclusion, whereas "here they have," and the order was confirmed.

The decision of the sessions reversed.

But, although the court has thus shown an inclination to support the inference drawn by the sessions, they have in so many instances reversed it, that it is difficult to collect what the rule is. In Rex v. Harbury (p. 553), the order of sessions was quashed. Parke, J., observed, "The sessions in substance have found a continued service. I think their conclusion is wrong." In Rex v. Dursley (p. 147), the sessions thought that the property in question ought to have been rated; but the court quashed their order. The facts are not sufficiently disclosed to enable us to draw the conclusion that these persons ought to be rated." In Reg. v. Mansfield (p. 424), the sessions inferred illegitimacy from non-access. The court thought the inference wrong, and quashed the order. The sessions, it is said in Rex v. St. Peter's, Mancroft (p. 575), should find the fact of dispensation, or not. In Rex v. Little Coggeshall (p. 510), the sessions so found it; but the court thought otherwise, and quashed the order. In Rex v. Ardington (p. 503), the sessions found a yearly hiring. The court decided that this could not be supported, and quashed their order. "Though the sessions have drawn the conclusion that this was a general hiring, yet it is clear they meant only to state it as a conclusion of law, from the antecedent facts, the propriety of which they refer to us." Order of sessions quashed.—Lord Ellenborough. (Rex v. Hanbury, p. 516.) In Rex v. Threkingham (p. 530), it was urged that the sessions had found a yearly hiring. Lord Denman. "The sessions have given us the very words employed by the parties," and quashed the order of sessions. In Rex v. Norton Bavant (p. 540), the sessions quashed the order, thereby deciding that there was no hiring and service. The court decided otherwise. "It is quite trifling to say that there has been any finding by the sessions which can prevent our going into the inquiry."—Coleridge, J. Where no point was stated for the opinion of the court, Parke, J., said, "I think the conclusion upon the facts found by them is wrong." Order of sessions quashed. (Rex v. Harbury, p. 553.) "It (i. e. the service) is a mixed question of law and fact, and the circumstances are stated, that we may draw the conclusion."—Lord Ellenborough. (Rex v. Corsham, p. 588.) In Rex v. Whitchurch (p. 969), the court presumed on the facts in favour of a certificate, which the sessions had not done; but, in Rex v. Catesby (p. 966), the court said the sessions ought to make the presumption. In Rex v. Ightham (p. 656), the sessions quashed the order, thereby implying that the pauper acquired a settlement by hiring and service in the appellant parish, but the court reversed their decision. So, also, Rex v. Newton (p. 657); Rex v. St. Margaret's, King's Lynn (p. 662). In Rex v. Hatfield Broad Oak (p. 905), the sessions found that the consideration for the purchase was pecuniary only, and no settlement acquired by it. The court thought it was partly from love and affection, and quashed the order of sessions. "It is very clear the finding (as to a distinct house) is not warranted by the premises," (Rex v. Rickinghall, p. 769), where the decision was confirmed on other grounds. In Rex v. Clixby (p. 927), the sessions found that it was "a public annual office." Lord Denman. "The finding is not warranted by the facts stated," and the order was quashed. But, in Rex v. Ilminster, the sessions found the same fact, and Lord Kenyon said, "By thus finding that it was a public annual office, they have precluded any further discussion." In Rex v. Nether Knutsford (p. 660), the sessions by implication found the contract to be one of hiring. The court thought it an imperfect apprenticeship, and quashed the order of sessions. Rex v. Edingale (p. 658), seems at variance with this. This the court has done, because it must be "presumed that where the facts are specially stated, the justices wish to know if their inference is correct. But it cannot be said that the sessions doubted their own decision, by referring it to the court, for this argument would arise in every special case." (Rex v. Great Wishford, p. 663.) "If upon a case stating evidence only the court of King's Bench should think the conclusion drawn by the sessions wrong, they would probably deem it better to send it back for revision; but where the conclusion appears to be right, it would be useless to send it down again."—Abbott, J. (See Rex v. Rickinghall, p. 769.) So, also, the order of sessions will be confirmed, when the ultimate decision, although founded on wrong grounds, was correct. (Rex v. Skeffington, ante.)

Decision right, but reasons wrong.

When the case stated facts, from which the sessions ought to have drawn their inference, the case has been sent back to them for that purpose. (Rex v. Road, 1 B. & Ad. 362.) But, in Rex v. Harbury, they quashed the order. But it was agreed in Rex v. Wykes, (ante), that it could not be done without consent; and the counsel against the order of sessions refusing to consent, the order of sessions was quashed. Where the sessions were of opinion that an indenture was void, and the King's Bench thought otherwise, "as the merits of the case had not been gone into at the sessions," the case was sent down to be re-stated. (Rex v. Winwick.) (a) If the Court of Queen's Bench should be equally divided, order of sessions will be confirmed. (Rex v. Barnard Castle, p. 885.) When the sessions improperly rejected evidence of the contract of hiring, and a case was granted upon the admissibility of the evidence, the case was sent back to the sessions to be reheard. (Rex v. Wrangle, 2 Adol. & El. 13; 4 Nev. & M. 375.) If the case is signed by the chairman, strong evidence is required to show a mistake in any part. (5 B. & Ad. 883.)

Case sent back.

The sessions should state what the Court of Queen's Bench is to do in the event of their opinion being in favour, or against their judgment, and should not direct that in a given event the case should be sent back to be reheard. (Reg. v. Stoke-upon-Trent, p. 532.) "I hope that in future, where a question arises as to whether the facts form a sufficient ground of appeal, it will be clearly understood that they ought not to grant a case, if they are satisfied that there is not a sufficient notice of the grounds of appeal; and if they entertain so much doubt as to be induced to grant a case, they should go on with the hearing of the case, and determine the subject of the appeal."—Patteson, J. (Reg. v. Kesteven, post.)

The conclusion of the case.

Reg. v. Wistow, 1 G. & D. 681. An order of removal from Holy Trinity, Kingston-upon-Hull, to Wistow, was confirmed subject to a case, which, after stating the point submitted to the opinion of this court upon a question whether the grounds of appeal against the order had been served in time, concluded, "If the court shall be of opinion that the said service of the statement of the grounds of appeal was bad and insufficient, then the aforesaid order shall stand confirmed; but if the court shall be of a contrary opinion, then the appeal to stand respited until the general quarter sessions to be held for the said borough of Kingston-upon-Hull next after the judgment of the court." Lord Denman said that "this court could not hear a case so stated; that the sessions asked this court to decide the case, and appeared also to reserve to themselves the right of coming to a decision of their own upon it afterwards." The other judges concurred. Rule for quashing the order discharged.

Q. B. refused to hear a case which concluded thus—"if the court of Queen's Bench shall be of opinion, &c., then the order to be confirmed, but, if the court shall be of a contrary opinion, then the appeal to stand respited until the next sessions after the judgment of the court."

(a) In Rex v. Laindon, n., the court said, that a formal objection to the order ought not to be permitted, when both parties had agreed, by drawing up the special case, to take the opinion of the court on the merits. See also Abbott, J. 5 M. & Sel. 93.

2. Of Special Cases.

But where the order of sessions is quashed upon an objection, which the sessions ought not to have heard, the case will be sent back. (Reg. v. Arlecdon, 11 A. & E. 87.)

Case sent back to cure an informality. It is not necessary to hear fresh evidence. See subsequent cases.

Rex v. Bray, Burr. S. C. 682; 2 Bott, 993. The sessions stated the evidence only, and not the fact of hiring. (a) It was sent back to be re-stated, and the majority of the justices there refused to re-examine the pauper, or to hear any further evidence; although three of the justices then on the bench had not been present at the appeal. It was moved to send it again to the sessions, to be a second time restated. Rex v. Page, M., 1764, was cited, where the question was, whether a man was occupier of tithes, or only bailiff? The sessions was ordered to hear further evidence; and did so, and cited Rex v. Hitcham, H., 33 Geo. II., where the sessions did re-examine the fact, whether the pauper was a single or a married man, when hired? Unto this it was answered, that in both of these cases it was necessary to hear the evidence again: in the present case it was not necessary; the matter was fully examined into before; the sessions had stated the evidence, without drawing the conclusion; the court thought the sessions ought to have drawn the conclusion, and sent it back to them for that purpose only. They have now done so. They have stated a hiring for a year. And this court have now received all the information they wanted. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "Whether the justices, at the second sessions, were or were not obliged to hear new evidence, is a question that must depend upon the nature of the case. In Page's case new evidence was necessary. But in the present case it was sent back only to cure an informality. Here the pauper had before given a full account of the agreement. Therefore the justices at the second sessions did very right in not examining him over again."

The whole case must be reheard when it is sent back to the sessions.

In Rex v. Bromley, 6 T. R. 330, which was an order for the removal of Sarah, widow of J. Ward, the respondents proved the settlement of J. Ward in the appellant parish, and then cohabitation with the pauper as his wife. The appellants then called Sarah, to prove that they were never married, and the court refused to hear her. Lord Kenyon said, "The evidence was admissible, but the sessions must judge of the effect of it." It was then proposed that on the rehearing, the sessions should be confined to the examination of Sarah and of witnesses to that particular point, without putting the respondents to the expense of proving their case again. Lord Kenyon. "The whole case must be gone into again at the sessions. I remember a case, some years ago, when the same objection was made, and Lord Mansfield said, that 'it was like granting a new trial, in which case the whole case must be proved.'"

Where an order of justices has been quashed on appeal, subject to a case, and this court directs the case to be restated, the sessions have no jurisdiction to hear the case without a notice of trial.

The notice may be given by the respondents.

Serving the rule of Q. B. is not sufficient.

Reg v. Barnes, 2 G. & D. 233; 3 Q. B. 437. An appeal was brought by Barnes and another, surveyors of the hamlet of Beard, against an order of justices, adjudging a sum of 88*l.* to be paid by Barnes and another to the treasurer of a turnpike road. Case:—An order was quashed subject to a case. This court, upon argument in Michaelmas term, 1841, ordered the case to be sent back to be re-stated. The respondents served a copy of the order for the re-stating of the case on the appellants, but they gave no notice of any intention to appear at the next sessions for the purpose of having the case re-stated, or otherwise; nor was any notice of any intention to do so given by the appellants. The respondents appeared at the next sessions, the appellants did not, and the sessions made an order, which concluded: "And the court of Queen's Bench having, upon hearing counsel on both sides, directed the order returned with the writ of certiorari to be sent back to the sessions to be re-stated, and the said appellants now appearing to prosecute the said appeal against the said order of the said justices, this court doth order that the said order of the said three justices be and the same is hereby confirmed." A motion was made to quash this order, as the re-hearing had been without any notice of trial, or of intention to proceed at the next sessions, and the sessions had no jurisdiction. Lord Denman. "The party who wishes to relieve himself from the burden ought to give the notice necessary to put the court in motion. The case is distinguishable from the case of an ordinary appeal." The other judges concurred. Rule absolute.

(a) Such formal defects are now generally amended at the time of argument, by consent of the parties.

A case sent back to be re-stated must be re-heard, and the sessions may receive further evidence and make a new order on such re-hearing.

The certiorari by which the original order was removed does not operate to remove the subsequent one.

A certiorari cannot be applied for after six calendar months from the making of the order, whatever may have been the cause of delay.

Rex v. Bloxam, 3 Nev. & M. 385 ; 1 Ad. & E. 386. At the Warwickshire January sessions, 1832, James Smith, having been convicted by Dr. Bloxam, of being an idle and disorderly person, in refusing to support his wife and child, whereby they became chargeable to the parish of Rugby, appealed against the conviction, which was quashed by the sessions subject to a case. Dr. Bloxam thereupon obtained a certiorari to remove such case, and the orders and proceedings of the sessions in the court of K. B., and the usual recognizances were entered into for prosecuting the certiorari. On the hearing in K. B., the case was sent back to the sessions to be re-stated. At the July sessions, 1833, the appeal was re-heard, and the court then confirmed the conviction, subject to a case reserved to the appellant. In Michaelmas term, 1833, a rule of K. B. was obtained, calling on the prosecutor of the appeal to show cause why the recognizances of the defendant (Dr. Bloxam) and his bail should not be discharged, and why all further proceedings on the certiorari, and the re-stated order of sessions returned therewith, should not be stayed until the prosecutor's attorney should undertake to pay the defendant or his attorney his costs, if the last decision of the sessions should be affirmed. It was stated on affidavit, in answer to this application, that the ground on which the case was before sent back to the sessions, was their omission to state certain facts ; that they had now specially found those and other facts, but that such their special finding was inconsistent with the determination they had come to in favour of the conviction ; that at a subsequent session (October, 1833,) the appellant had moved that the case should be re-stated, and the proceedings returned to K. B. under the original certiorari, and an order had been made by the justices accordingly. A rule was thereupon granted by K. B. enlarging the rule for discharging the recognizances, until the judgment of that court should be given upon the re-stated case and order of sessions, in the matter of the above-mentioned conviction. In Hilary term, 1834, a rule was obtained calling on the prosecutor of the appeal to show cause why the rule last above-mentioned should not be discharged, and why the certiorari should not be quashed, and a procedendo awarded to carry back the record of conviction to the sessions. The affidavit in support of this rule professed to explain the finding and judgment of the sessions complained of by the appellant ; and it stated that, although the sessions had made an order for re-stating the case and returning the proceedings to K. B., no case had ever been prepared or brought up on behalf of the appellant under the existing writ of certiorari, nor had he applied for any new certiorari for that purpose, and that six months had elapsed since the reservation of a case at the July sessions ; it was therefore suggested that the prosecutor was now disabled from further carrying up such re-stated case or proceedings to K. B., under the present or any other certiorari, that the conviction must remain in force, and that the object of the respondent in suing out the certiorari and giving the recognizances having thus been effected, the recognizances ought to be discharged. In an affidavit on the other side, it was represented that the delay in preparing the case had been occasioned by the defendant's refusal to settle one." Lord Denman, C. J. "By 13 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 5, a certiorari must be applied for within six months next after the conviction, order, or other proceeding to be removed : and according to the authorities cited in 1 Chitty's Statutes, tit. Certiorari, p. 133, note c, the time is to be reckoned without regard to delays in drawing up the case, or from any such cause ; and if this were not so held, the statute would in effect be repealed. It follows from the express words of the act, that the court has no power of extending indulgence to a party who from whatever cause is behind the proper time. Then however it is said that the original certiorari is still in force. The question therefore is, whether when a party has obtained a certiorari to remove a judgment given against him, and the case has been sent back to the sessions, which implies a power given to them of re-hearing the whole, he is afterwards bound, upon the sessions reversing their former judgment, to bring up proceedings which are then in his favour: or whether the certiorari, which originally issued, had the effect of removing those proceedings which had not then taken place? and I think this cannot be maintained. As to the question, who should remove the ultimate proceeding of the sessions, it is often unnecessary to raise it, because if the second hearing convinces the justices that their former decision was right, the judgment is the same, and no such difficulty can arise. But where an opposite decision is come to, he who complains of it is the party to bring up the case. The appellant ought to have done so in the present instance, but he is out of time. The proper course will be to discharge all the rules, the case will then stand as if there had been no appeal." Littledale, J. "I am of the same opinion. The party who originally removed the proceedings has nothing to do with removing them now. They have changed sides." Patteson, J. "I do not acknowledge the distinction between re-stating and re-hearing. How is it possible for the sessions to re-state the case without hearing it again? The bench may not consist of the same persons. If the certiorari were considered as operating upon the last order of sessions, there would be this absurdity, that the party who sued it out would be liable under his recognizance to pay costs, unless he got a judgment set aside which was in his own favour." Williams, J., concurred. The court made the rule absolute for discharging the recognizances, but with this exception discharged all the rules.

2. Of Special Cases.

What is to be done with the pauper when the order of removal is quashed.

After the determination of an appeal at the sessions, if the order is reversed, and the paupers will not, or are not able to return of themselves, to the place from whence they were improperly removed, it seemeth that the place where they are cannot lawfully be rid of them but by another order of the justices, setting forth the matter specially. In Honiton v. South Beverton (Comb. 401; 2 Bott, 909), two justices remove a man from Honiton, Devon, to South Beverton, Somerset. They appeal to the sessions in Devon, where the order is reversed. Now two justices of Somerset may by order remove him to Honiton again; for it is but an execution of the order of sessions, which could not otherwise be done, because it is out of the jurisdiction of the court of sessions.

If no certiorari then no case.

If the writ of certiorari be taken away by statute, local, or otherwise, no case can be brought up to the superior court. (See Certiorari.)

A certiorari must be moved for within six months after the order of sessions; and six days' notice of such motion must be given to the justices, notwithstanding the order of sessions was made subject to a case.

Rex v. Justices of Sussex, 1 M. & Sel. 631. A rule was obtained for a certiorari to remove an order, in an appeal between Billinghurst and Slinfold. The affidavits stated that the appeal had been heard at the Michaelmas sessions, when the order was confirmed, subject to the opinion of K. B. on a case to be stated. A case had been drawn by counsel for Billinghurst in November, which was not approved of by the solicitor for Slinfold; but, although frequent applications were made to him, he would not state his objections. The case was afterwards settled by the court at the Epiphany sessions, and a copy sent to the solicitor for the respondents; and he was again applied to, to have the case set down for argument: this request he refused to comply with; but at the same time gave the solicitors for the appellants to understand, that they need be under no apprehension, as he would consent to a certiorari issuing without regarding whether the six months had expired or not. Under the impression that the certiorari would be consented to, the usual notice to the justices, as required by 13 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 5, had not been given. It was contended, that the statute was only intended to enable justices to show cause against the granting such certiorari, and did not apply to this case, where the justices themselves had settled the case, and thereby expressed their desire to have it brought up; and cited Lord Kenyon in Rex v. Battams (1 East, 298).

2. Of Special Cases.

Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The order of removal was in the first instance a summary proceeding, and the order of sessions thereupon was a revision of that which was originally a summary proceeding. I find nothing in the language of Lord Kenyon, on which an argument has been raised, to the contrary: it is not applicable to the present case. Admitting that the magistrates may have wished, at the time when they settled the case, to have brought it up, still there may be reasons why they might think fit to show cause, and, unless it can be shown that it could serve no possible end to give them six days' notice, we cannot so presume. The statute appears to me imperative." Bayley, J., "was not aware of any instance where a certiorari had been granted, after the expiration of the six months, upon a case reserved, and that it was the settled practice to give the six days' notice." Rule discharged. The application was renewed in the same term (1 M. & S. 734), the six days' notice having been given to the justices. It was urged, that the above circumstances took it out of the general rule. Rex v. Winpenny (34 Geo. I.) was cited, where a similar application for removing an order for the maintenance of a bastard child was made after the six months, and allowed. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The statute expressly requires that the certiorari shall be applied for within six calendar months after order made; and I think it will be attended with beneficial consequences, if we put a strict interpretation upon this clause, as it will have a tendency to accelerate the settling of the cases which are intended to be brought up for our revision." Bayley, J. "In strictness, the case ought to have been settled at the Michaelmas sessions sedente Curiâ." Rule refused.

The costs of the hearing at the sessions, at which a case was sent back to be amended, are not costs which the party suing out the certiorari are bound to pay. Rex v. Higgins, 5 A. & E. 554.

---

3 Of Costs and Maintenance.

3. Of Costs and Maintenance.

8 & 9 W. III. c. 30, s. 3. Justices, on appeal to them concerning the settlement of any poor person, to award costs.

By 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 3 (a), "For the more effectual preventing of vexatious removals and frivolous appeals, it is enacted, That the justices of the peace of any county or riding, in their general or quarter sessions of the peace, upon any appeal before them there to be had, for and concerning the settlement of any poor person, or upon any proof before them there to be made, of notice of any such appeal to have been given by the proper officer to the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of any parish or place (though they did not afterwards prosecute such appeal) shall, at the same quarter sessions, award and order to the party from whom and in whose behalf such appeal shall be determined, or to whom such notice did appear to have been given as aforesaid, such costs (b) and charges in the law, as by the said justices in their discretion shall be thought most reasonable and just, to be paid by the churchwardens, overseers of the poor, or any other person, against whom such appeal shall be determined, or by the person that did give such notice as aforesaid; and if the person ordered to pay such costs shall happen to live in any county, riding, city, or town corporate, or elsewhere, out of the jurisdiction of the said court, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the county, riding, city, liberty, or town corporate, wherein such person shall inhabit, and every such justice is hereby required, upon request to him for that purpose to be made, and a true copy of the order for the payment of such costs produced, and proved by some credible witness upon oath, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause the money mentioned in that order to be levied by distress and sale of the goods of the person that is ordered and ought to pay the same; and if no such distress can or may be had, to commit such person to the common gaol of that county or liberty, there to remain by the space of twenty days."

(a) As to costs of suspended orders of removal, see p. 1084.

(b) The statute does not extend to costs of the day when appeal respited, Rex v. Monmouthshire, 1 Bar. & Adol. 597.

3. Of Costs and Maintenance.

Also of frivolous grounds of appeal.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 82, the court of sessions may order the parish against whom the appeal shall be decided to pay just and reasonable costs, and the court is to certify the amount; and by the 83rd section, if any of the grounds of appeal are frivolous and vexatious, the court may award the costs of disputing such grounds. These costs, as well as the maintenance, are recoverable in the same manner as the penalties under the statute. (See the sections in the Appendix.)

Of maintenance.

The parish to which the pauper shall belong shall pay the relief and maintenance of the pauper from the time of receiving notice of the chargeability. Section 84.

If appeal against removal be determined in favour of appellant, the justices shall award to appellant payment of expenses as relieving the pauper.

By 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 9, "For the preventing of vexatious removals, if the justices of the peace shall, at their quarter sessions, upon an appeal before them there had, concerning the settlement of any poor person, determine in favour of the appellant, that such poor person or persons was or were unduly removed, that then the said justice shall, at the same quarter sessions, order and award to such appellant so much money as shall appear to the said justices to have been reasonably paid by the parish, or other place, on whose behalf such appeal was made, for or towards the relief of such poor person or persons, between the time of such undue removal, and the determination of such appeal; the said money so awarded to be recovered in the same manner as costs and charges upon an appeal are prescribed to be recovered by the said statute made in the ninth year of his late Majesty king William the Third, intituled (c. 30) 'An Act for supplying some Defects in the Laws for the relief of the Poor of this Kingdom.'"

Allowance of costs discretionary.

Rex v. J. Nottingham, 1 Sess. Ca. 422; 2 Bott, 776. A mandamus was granted for the justices to give costs to the party in whose favour the appeal had been determined; yet upon their return of it, the court held it reasonable for them to have the power of judging whether costs shall be allowed or not, and quashed the mandamus.

No costs on an adjournment.

Rex v. Stansfield, Burr. S. C. 205; 2 Bott, 776. The sessions adjourned the appeal to the next sessions, and ordered four guineas costs to the appellants; which order was quashed as to the costs; for the sessions cannot give costs on a mere adjournment of the appeal, without hearing it (a).

Mandamus lies to enforce.

St. Mary's, Nottingham, v. Kirklington, 2 Sess. Ca. 67; 2 Bott, 776. Motion for a mandamus to the justices, commanding them to allow Kirklington the expense their officers had been put to, in keeping a poor person from the time of his removal till the order was discharged by the sessions upon appeal. Mandamus granted.

Maintenance may be levied by distress. If the parish is not within the justices' jurisdiction, justices who have granted it must indorse the warrant of distress, and they cannot refuse.

Rex v. Kynaston, 1 East, 117. A rule for a mandamus was obtained against a magistrate of Essex, commanding him to indorse a warrant of distress. On the 6th of May, 1799, an order was made for removing D. Glover from Lexden to Coggeshall in Essex, and it was suspended. On the 31st of July suspension was removed, and an order made on the parish officers of Great Coggeshall to repay the parish of Lexden 20*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*, for expenses incurred during the suspension. The overseers of Great Coggeshall, not paying this within three days after demand, nor giving notice of appeal, the same magistrates granted a warrant of distress; but Great Coggeshall not being within their jurisdiction, the parties applied to the defendant, who had jurisdiction in Great Coggeshall, to indorse the warrant of distress for execution, and he refused. Lord Kenyon, after looking into 35 Geo. III. c. 101, said, "It was impossible to make any question upon this part of it: it is peremptory upon the magistrate under these circumstances to indorse the warrant; he has nothing to do with the propriety of making the original order or granting the original warrants; he acts merely ministerially; in like manner as justices do in allowing a poor rate, whose signatures are mere matter of form. The justices, indeed, by whom the original order and warrant were issued, had a discretion to exercise upon the matter submitted to them; but the magistrate who merely indorses the warrant of another, under this act, is not answerable for the legality of it, which remains at the hazard of him who first granted it; here also, the order, being for payment of above 20*l.*, might have been appealed against by the parties who were dissatisfied with it, and then the merits of the question might have been discussed; but the court cannot do otherwise at present than make the rule absolute."

(a) Where an application for an order of bastardy was entered with the clerk of the peace, pursuant to the rule of the sessions, before the sessions, and no one appeared in support of it at the sessions, but the defendant appeared and applied for costs—this is a sufficient hearing to entitle the court to award costs. Reg. v. Stamper, 1 Q. B. 117. See, also, Reg. v. Recorder of Exeter, 13 L. J. 7, M. C.

3. Of Costs and Maintenance.

And as to the enforcing or punishing disobedience of order of sessions, see Rex v. Mytton, 4 Doug. 333.

Sessions must either give or not give costs at the time they make their order.

Rex v. Great Chart, Burr. S. C. 194; 2 Bott, 1015. An order was quashed by the sessions for insufficiency; and the sessions thereupon order that the costs of maintaining the pauper since the time of his removal shall abide the event of the cause, in case Great Chart shall think proper, by another order, to remove the pauper to Kennington; which order, as to the costs, was quashed by the Court of King's Bench, because the sessions must either give or not give costs at the time when they make their order. Semble, therefore, the court at time of confirming an order subject to a case, should make a conditional order for costs and intervening maintenance.

May give costs where order quashed for informality.

Rex v. Cottingham, 4 Nev. & M. 215; 2 Ad. & E. 250, ante, 915. The sessions have power to award costs where the order is quashed for informality.

So also when the order has been abandoned.

An appeal may be entered after the order has been abandoned by the removing parish, on neglect to pay the costs and maintenance. Rex v. Norfolk, p. 1111.

Where an appeal is entered without notice of trial, and the respondents endeavour to obtain a supersedeas, the sessions should not award costs to the appellant. Reg. v. Bythen, 20 L. J. 106.

The costs must be ascertained at the sessions.

Where the recorder (and the same rule will apply to the county sessions) confirms an order with costs, but without specifying the amount, a taxation of such costs, after the end of the sessions, is irregular, although the amount be submitted to the recorder (after the sessions), and approved of by him. An order for payment of such costs cannot be enforced. Reg. v. Long, 1 Q. B. 740 (a).

An order of sessions confirming at the instance of the respondents (after a countermand) the order of removal, and giving the respondents the costs and charges of "attending the sessions to support" their order, after a countermand, is altogether bad.

Reg. v. Stoke Bliss, 1 Car. H. & A. 267. On January 2nd, 1844, the sessions confirmed an order, for the removal of Ann Wall, &c. from Kingswinford to Stoke Bliss. The order was, "Upon motion of counsel for the poor of the parish of Kingswinford, in the county of Stafford, and upon proof of notice of appeal, with a statement in writing, &c., and no one appearing on behalf of the appellants to prosecute their appeal, it is ordered that the said order made by the said justices be, and the same is hereby confirmed; and it is further ordered that the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Stoke Bliss do and shall forthwith pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Kingswinford the sum of 15*l.* 10*s.* for costs and charges which they have incurred and have been put unto in attending the court this day to support their said order." On a rule to quash the order for insufficiency, it appeared that the order of removal was dated September 29, 1843. Notice and grounds of appeal were served in time for the Epiphany sessions, 1844. On the first day of the sessions, (Tuesday, January 2nd,) the respondents received a letter from the attorney for the appellants, inclosing a copy of a notice of countermand of the appeal, and stating "that the delay had arisen in consequence of the absence of a material witness, and that, if any removal took place, they should give fresh grounds of appeal, as the paupers belonged to a third parish, which fully appeared from the grounds of appeal as already sent." The practice of the Staffordshire sessions is, that notice of coun-

(a) So also an order for costs under the Highway Act must specify the amount; an award of costs generally is bad. Selwood v. Mount, 1 Q. B. 726.

3. Of Costs and Maintenance.

termand of any appeal must be given not later than the Monday before the sessions, and, if given later, the appellants are in such case liable, by the practice of the court, to pay costs to the respondents for their failure to try the appeal. On the third day of the sessions, (January 4,) the respondents, having entered the appeal, applied for the costs incurred in preparing to try the appeal, and incident thereto; and, upon due proof of notice, and grounds of appeal, and notice of countermand, the sessions made the above order. Lord Denman. "This was an order of removal appealed against by the parish on which it was made. The parish officers gave notice of appeal, and then countermanded, but not in time. Their attorney, however, told the officers of the respondent parish that they countermanded because they were in want of a witness; but that, if any removal took place, they should appeal again. The respondents afterwards attended the sessions, and entered the appeal; when the justices confirmed the order, and gave the costs of appeal. The order of confirmation is bad; but it is contended, that, though the confirmation is bad, the direction about the costs can be sustained. That might be so in one view of the case, if the orders were distinct from each other; but, when we come to look at the documents issued by the sessions, we find that the confirmation of the order, which was beyond the jurisdiction of the sessions, and the order for costs, which was within their jurisdiction, are both included in the same order. It is clear, therefore, that the direction as to costs was ancillary to, and formed part of the order of confirmation; and as the sessions had no authority to make the one, the validity of the other cannot be sustained; I am, therefore, of opinion that the certiorari may issue to bring up an order which cannot be sustained in point of law." Patteson, J. "The sessions have here made a confirmation in a matter over which they have no jurisdiction, and to this they have added an order for costs. The defect of the former, as both are parts of the same document, affects the latter, by rendering the order, of which it forms part, incapable of being sustained." Williams, J., concurred. Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. This was certainly the proper time at which to make the application for costs, but it has not been properly introduced here. I do not mean to say that an order of this sort might not, under some circumstances, be divisible, and that one part might be held good, though the other was declared to be bad. If the order for costs could in this case stand alone, I should be glad; but this is a question of construction, and the whole document must be taken together. What was argued by counsel, or what was said at the sessions, cannot be taken into consideration in construing this document. We must see what was done on the face of the written order. We cannot, then, avoid seeing, that the sessions thought they had a jurisdiction which in law they had not, and they confirmed an order, and granted costs on the confirmation; that being so, the costs were dependent on the confirmation; and as the confirmation cannot be sustained, neither can the costs which are dependent on it." Rule absolute.

After a supersedeas, the appellants may enter an appeal to obtain costs.

The practice of allowing no more than 30*s*. costs to either party if the appeal was tried, is unreasonable.

The sessions ought to exercise their judgment as to the fair remuneration to the appellants for the costs incurred.

Reg. v. Merionethshire, 1 Car. H. & A. 277. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal against an order of removal from Denio to Llangar, it appeared that the notice and grounds of appeal were served on the 19th of March. On receipt of the grounds of appeal, which pointed out defects upon the face of the examinations, the parish officers of Llangar obtained a supersedeas of their order. This supersedeas was served on the appellants on the 29th of March, but no offer was made as to the payment of costs. On the 9th of April, the parish officers of Llangar obtained and sent a fresh order, with copies of examinations, to the parish officers of Denio, at the same time tendering them two guineas, in payment of the costs occasioned by the first order. The parish officers of Denio refused the money, and at the following sessions, held April the 12th, they attended, and applied to enter the appeal. On these facts appearing, and the parish officers of Llangar repeating their offer of two guineas for costs, the sessions refused to allow the appeal to be entered. It also appeared that there has been for a great many years past, a standing rule on the books of sessions for Merioneth, whereby it is ordered, "that the sum of 30*s.* only, as and for costs and expenses, shall be allowed, in appeals against orders of removal tried in the said court, to either party." Lord Denman. "I think the standing order and practice of the quarter sessions are sufficiently stated. It is said that the affidavits do not clearly show what the practice of the sessions is; but we must see what they consider to be the practice. The question is, whether they have acted legally or not. I think that they have not acted legally. They were bound to allow the appeal to be entered; and, when the writ goes, they ought to exercise their judgment as to the costs which have actually been incurred. It is very proper that a party should abandon an appeal against an order, when he feels that he cannot succeed in maintaining it; but it is equally proper, that the other party should recover the reasonable costs incurred by him up to the time when the notice of abandonment is given." Patteson, J. "I do not see how, consistently with the last decisions, it is possible for the sessions to justify their refusal to hear this case." Williams, J., concurred. Coleridge, J. "The justices were clearly wrong in refusing to hear the case; but we should not be warranted in allowing this writ to go, if we thought they would strictly adhere to what has been stated to be the practice at the sessions. As that practice is an unreasonable one, I have no doubt, that, after the intimation of the opinion of this court, they will alter it, and consider what the party ought fairly to receive, as a remuneration for the costs he incurred before the notice of countermand was given." Rule absolute.

XI. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

When the court of Queen's Bench will interfere by mandamus.

It is part of the privileges and duties of this High Court of Justice to interpose its authority to prevent a refusal or denial of justice by any inferior jurisdiction. It has been therefore the practice of this court for a long period, by the writ of mandamus, to compel the court of quarter sessions to hear cases, when they have improperly refused. Such has been the practice where the sessions have declined to hear a case when they ought to have entertained the appeal. When the sessions refuse to hear an appeal on the preliminary objection, that the grounds of appeal are insufficient, the court will not interfere by mandamus. Reg. v. Kesteven, p. 1213. In one case it was said it was unusual to issue it when the sessions had granted a case, (Reg. v. Suffolk, J. p. 1214), but in Reg. v. Recorder of Leeds, p. 1137, this course was approved of, as being less expensive. The court will not command justices to take or alter an examination, but if they refuse to make an order, the court will compel them. Reg. v. Rogers, p. 1142. If the sessions require notice of appeal to be given, which is not reasonable, the court will interfere. Rex v. J. Lancashire, p. 1151. So also to erase a false entry in their records, when they had no jurisdiction; but not to grant a case. Nor where the sessions first confirmed the order, and then quashed it, at the suggestion of a magistrate, that the order was directed to a place not maintaining its own poor. Reg. v. J. Cheshire, p. 1214.

If an order of removal, or the order of sessions are defective, and the defect is apparent on the proceedings, they may be removed into this court by a certiorari, and quashed.

The sessions, being equally divided upon the merits of an appeal, quashed the order: a mandamus will not lie to rehear it. (a)

Rex v. J. Monmouthshire, 4 B. & C. 844; 7 D. & R. 334. Upon an appeal against an order of removal, the justices were divided in opinion as to the settlement; but thinking that the respondents ought to have proved the forty days' residence, and had not, they determined, without any division, to quash the order. It was urged that whether the decision was right or wrong, the King's Bench ought not to interfere by mandamus; and also that the decision was right, although in Nolan's Poor Laws (vol. ii. p. 446), it is said, "That if the magistrates, who have a right to join in the court's determination, should be equally divided in opinion, no judgment can be given, but the appeal must be adjourned from sessions to sessions, until a majority concur." And in a note, "This seems to be their bounden duty; for otherwise the court will grant a mandamus to compel them to enter continuances and hear the appeal at a subsequent sessions." Bodmin v. Warlingen (2 Bott, 733, 889), and Rex v. J. Westmoreland (p. 1039), are cited in support of, but do not support these positions. In the former case, the justices neither made any order nor adjourned the appeal: and at the following sessions the order of removal was quashed, and this court quashed that order of session, because it was made without an adjournment. In the other case the justices neither gave judgment nor adjourned, and on an application for a mandamus, though the court entertained an opinion in its favour, nothing was done; but if a mandamus had been granted, that would only show that the court will compel the sessions to proceed to judgment on an appeal which they have begun to hear, and improperly refused to go on with. It was also urged, that this was not like an appeal to the House of Lords, where, if the house be equally divided, the respondent prevails, for the presumption is in favour of the respondents, who have the judgment of the court below. But that an appeal against an order of removal is in reality an original proceeding. Contra, it was argued that in Bodmin v. Warlingen, the court said that where the justices were equally divided, that was a sufficient warrant for the clerk of the peace to have entered an adjournment, and it was his duty so to have done. Abbott, C. J. "I think the rule for a mandamus ought to be discharged. It appears that in this case the sessions have given their judgment. This court is not a court of error from that court; it may compel the sessions to proceed to hear and decide the appeal; but when they have so determined it, this court cannot compel them to correct their judgment, if it appear to be erroneous. It is unnecessary to say whether the judgment pronounced by the sessions is erroneous, because we are of opinion that if it were so we have no authority to compel them to correct it."

(a) Subject fully considered in Reg. v. Cart-Hewes, 3 A. & E. 725; and sometimes a procedendo is awarded, Reg. v. Carworth, post.

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

Q. B. is not a court of error from the sessions.

By the vote of an interested justice the court were equally divided, and an adjournment was entered. Assuming this to be wrong, K. B. cannot review it. (a)

Rex v. J. Monmouthshire, 8 B. & C. 137; reported as Rex v. Uske, 2 M. & R. 173. On an application for a certiorari to bring up an order of removal, and an order of sessions for adjourning the appeal against the said order, that the same might be quashed, it appeared that four justices were present at the appeal. One of them was the removing justice, and rated in Uske (the respondent parish). He and one other justice voted for the respondents, and the other two for the appellants. The chairman announced that the court was divided. The appellants then moved to quash the order, because the respondents had not made out their case. But the court adjourned the appeal. Lord Tenterden. "This rule must be discharged; but I wish to have it clearly understood that, in doing so, we do not, in any degree, intend to sanction a magistrate's voting in any case in which he is interested. It is contended that, though the justices were divided in point of fact, that in point of law the vote given by the party interested was a nullity, and that the sessions ought to have quashed the order. The late decisions establish, that we cannot assume to ourselves the jurisdiction of a court of error, and revise the judgment of the sessions. It is said that the sessions had not jurisdiction to make the adjournment. It is clear that they had jurisdiction to make any order concerning the appeal; and, among others, the order that the hearing should be adjourned.

(a) See remarks on this case in Rex v. Cheltenham Commissioners, 1 Q. B. 476, from which it may be inferred that the court did not interfere, because they could not order the thing asked for. But it is not to be considered as an authority for saying that the court "refuses to interfere to prevent a decision taking effect in which an interested magistrate has participated."

In Rex v. Gudridge, 5 B. & C. 459, the rule which had been obtained was, not to review the order of the sessions, but to quash the certiorari, quia improvide emanavit. The question before the court was, whether that writ ought to have been allowed to issue to remove an order of sessions, made under circumstances similar to those in this case? And the court thought that the certiorari ought not to have issued. Here a judgment has been pronounced by the sessions, relating to a matter over which the court had jurisdiction; and assuming their judgment to be erroneous, I think we have not jurisdiction, as a court of error, to review it."

Where judgment was entered by mistake, on a miscalculation of votes, the court of K. B. refused to interfere. (a)

Rex v. J. Leicestershire, 1 M. & Sel. 442. On an appeal against an order for the removal of W. Clifton from Market Harborough to Biddenham, the chairman pronounced the judgment of the court for confirming the order; but one of the justices who made the order, being present, inquired of the clerk of the peace, whether he was not one of the justices making the order; and being answered in the affirmative, observed that, it being contrary to a rule of that court, for justices who had made orders of removal to vote on the hearing of any appeal thereon, his vote, in this case, must consequently be withdrawn; and therefore judgment must be for quashing, instead of confirming the order, as by taking away his vote, the majority would be against confirming and for quashing the same. The clerk of the peace thereupon entered the judgment of the court for quashing, without perceiving at the time, that, by withdrawing the vote of the said justice, the votes of the remaining justices would be equal; whereon, by the rules of the court, an adjournment of the appeal should have been entered, instead of a judgment to quash the order. On an application for a mandamus to adjourn the appeal to the next sessions, and then to hear it, Lord Ellenborough said, "If any error was made in the entry of the clerk of the peace, that error should have been pointed out at the sessions while the court was sitting, and competent to reform its own errors, and to draw out a more correct judgment. If no judgment had been pronounced, the court might have interposed; but here there is a judgment. The party who would have corrected the error should have applied to the proper forum, and in due time; and if it had been found that the numbers were equal, nothing would have been done upon it; for it would have been a nullity: but here no step of that sort was taken, but judgment was entered; and this court cannot, in order to supply a remedy, exercise a jurisdiction which does not belong to them." Grose, J. "This court ought not to countenance such an application, inasmuch as the error should have been noticed at the time." Bayley, J. "Except in matters of a criminal nature we cannot look dehors the record. This court cannot sit as upon a scrutiny before an election committee. In Bodmin v. Warlingen, p. 1206, the objection appeared upon the entry of record, made by the clerk of the peace." Rule discharged.

Where the chairman gave a casting vote, and on the following morning the court, though not the same justices, confirmed it, it is good.

Reg. v. Fladbury, (see facts, p. 806,) 10 A. & E. 706. Lord Denman. "We must take the facts of this case as we find them set out. It is said that the decision of the justices was not binding, because, as the chairman has no casting vote, the numbers on each side were equal, and therefore the judgment was a nullity. But it appears that on the following morning their decision was affirmed. It is suggested that their judgment then did not pass on the merits, but that is not so clearly stated as to enable us to say the justices have not pronounced their judgment on the whole case."

Q. B. may order an entry improperly made in the record of the sessions to be erased when an appeal has been entered by the respondents.

Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, 7 Jurist, 698; Crich v. Sheffield, 1 Car. H. & A. 98. On the 14th September 1841, an order was made to remove M. Young from Sheffield to Crich. Before the next sessions, the overseers of Crich gave notice of appeal and the grounds, and before the sessions countermanded them, the grounds being insufficiently stated reserving the right of appeal when the pauper was (a) Not even in a criminal case will a mandamus issue to alter the minutes of a verdict, or to cancel an alteration in the minutes. Rex v. Hewes, 3 A. & E. 725.

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

After countermand of the notice of appeal, the court will so interfere.

removed. At the next sessions after the order, notwithstanding the countermand, and without the knowledge of the overseers of Crich, an appeal was entered by the overseers of Sheffield, and confirmed at the sessions; at the time of holding the sessions, the paupers were not removed, nor were they removed, nor was notice given of the order of sessions, until the 10th May, 1842; at the next sessions after the removal (28th June), application was made by the overseers of Crich to erase from the records of the sessions the entry of the appeal and the order by which it was confirmed, and to enter and respite an appeal against the order of removal; but the justices refused so to do. A mandamus was issued commanding the justices to erase the entry of the appeal against the order, and the order of sessions by which the same was confirmed, and to enter the appeal of the overseers of Crich as of the last sessions, and to cause continuances, &c. The return set forth (inter alia) that, on the 18th September, 1841, the overseers of Crich did give notice to the overseers of Sheffield, that, in the event of the removal of the pauper from Sheffield to Crich, the overseers of Crich did intend to enter an appeal against such removal at the sessions to be holden next after such removal; that no appeal was entered by the overseers of Crich at such sessions, but at the sessions holden on the 25th October, 1841, upon the application of the overseers of Sheffield, the court ordered that an appeal should be entered against the order of removal, and that the order should be confirmed; and awarded 40*s*. to be paid by the overseers of Crich to the overseers of Sheffield for their costs; that the actual removal of the paupers did take place on the 10th May; that at the next sessions on the 4th July, the overseers of Crich did apply to the court to order an appeal to be entered against the order, and that the entry of the proceedings had at the sessions on the 25th October, 1841, should be erased; but that the court refused to order the appeal to be entered and the entry to be erased; by reason whereof, the order of confirmation of the order remains unrepealed and in full force. It then proceeded as follows: We the said justices have not erased the said entry nor the confirmation of the said order, because we conceive that we have no power or authority by the laws of this your Majesty's realm in England, to erase or cause to be erased the entry of appeal and order of confirmation from the records of the court of sessions, nor in any manner to alter, change, or vary the same records; and that, inasmuch as the order of removal of the paupers was and yet remains confirmed by the court of quarter sessions so holden as aforesaid, we have not entered or caused to be entered as of the last quarter sessions holden for the said riding, the appeal of the overseers of Crich against the said order of removal, neither have we caused continuances &c., as by the said writ we are commanded to do. Lord Denman. "This is a very peculiar case. I do not know but that this is the first time that this court has been asked to grant a mandamus to erase an entry made upon the records of a court of quarter sessions; but there must always be an example set, and I have no difficulty in saying, that whatever is necessary to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated, this court will do; the case of a mandamus to justices to enter continuances and hear an appeal, for instance, is a very strong proceeding on our part. At first we thought that the justices might do this act themselves, but I think we were wrong in saying that they did not require the authority of this court; when the mandamus was moved for, we wished to have the question discussed upon the return,—we thought that the entry was innocuous. It is quite clear that this erasure must be made, the practice of sessions to allow the respondents to enter appeals is wrong; it gives an opportunity for fraud, and might lead to great injustice. Under 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, s. 3, it was quite immaterial whether the order of removal was confirmed (being unappealed against), when the respondents applied for costs, and the application might be made behind the back of the appellants; but since the passing of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, the appellants may consider themselves aggrieved either by the order, or by the removal of the pauper. In this case, the overseers of Crich had withdrawn their notice of appeal against the order, reserving to themselves the right of appealing after the paupers should be removed, yet the respondents enter the appeal without the knowledge of the appellants, and the court confirms the order. This court would be neglecting its duty if it did not interfere under such circumstances, and the rule for a peremptory mandamus must therefore be made absolute." Patteson, J. "I had considerable doubt for some time whether we had the power to order this entry to be erased; but I am now satisfied that the proceeding is strictly analogous to the practice of ordering the sessions to enter continuances from sessions to sessions, and hear an appeal. The justices themselves have not power to carry this into effect, but they can do it by the authority of this court. I do not see that they have more power to make an entry than to make an erasure; but this court can order them to do either the one or the other. This is not an application to alter the record; there is a false entry, no such appeal ever was presented; and surely we must have power to order the justices to remove that entry. Before the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, the respondents had no means of obtaining their costs, if notice of appeal was given and afterwards withdrawn; I know not whether the practice for the respondents to enter an appeal is usual, but there would be no necessity for 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, if it was legal. Sect. 3 enacts, that the justices, upon any appeal before them, had concerning the settlement of any poor person, or upon proof before them made of notice of any such appeal given by the proper officer to the overseer of any parish (though they did not afterwards prosecute such appeal), shall award and order to the party for whom such appeal shall be determined, or to whom such notice did appear to be given, such costs and charges as by the said justices in their discretion shall be thought reasonable and just to be paid by the overseers of the poor against whom such appeal shall be determined, or by the person that did give such notice. From this section it appears, that the application, where notice of appeal was given, and such appeal was not afterwards prosecuted, was for costs only; and that being so, this practice of entering an appeal may have arisen, because, before the New Poor Law Act, it made no difference, inasmuch as, whether an order was unappealed against or confirmed, the appellants were equally concluded; but now, when it is decided that a parish may appeal, either after the service of the order, or against the actual removal, it becomes of importance to have the entry correct. The sessions have done wrong in one respect; when they were applied to to erase the entry of the appeal and the confirmation of the order, and to enter an appeal, it is true they had no power without the authority of this court as to the former entry, but they had power to enter an appeal, and ought to have done so. If we had only directed the sessions to enter continuances and hear an appeal, the former order would be on the records, and the parties might be said to be concluded; and therefore, although this may be the first time that we have been called upon to order a court of quarter sessions to make an erasure from the records, I have now no doubt as to our power to do it to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated." Williams, J. "I am now satisfied, partly by the argument of the learned counsel, and more especially by what has fallen from my Lord Denman and my brother Patteson, that the respondents were only entitled under 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30, to go to the sessions and to ask for some costs, in consequence of the appellants having abandoned their notice of appeal; the respondents had no power to give the sessions jurisdiction over the question of settlement; on the contrary, the appellants stated in their notice, that they reserved to themselves the right of appealing after the paupers should be actually removed. But the respondents take an irregular course, which was furthered by the practice of the sessions: they go to the sessions, enter an appeal, and obtain a confirmation of the order,—a proceeding most irregular and improper. The respondents wait six months until the certiorari is gone, and then actually remove the pauper; against which, the other side had reserved to themselves the right of appealing. The appellants come to the next sessions, and find the records blocked up against them. This is a case of extreme necessity for the furtherance of justice, though I have not come to the conclusion without a great deal of hesitation and difficulty." Coleridge, J. "I am of the same opinion. I put my decision on the grounds, that the sessions have acted without jurisdiction, and that the appeal was entered for a fraudulent purpose. The facts as they appear are as follows:—An order of removal is made and served; a notice of appeal is given and afterwards countermanded; that being so, the respondents enter an appeal against that order. It is not necessary for the respondents to have the power to appeal; if the order is against their interest, they may abandon it, or have it superseded, or they may remove it by certiorari; if they do not complain of the order, they may still go to the sessions for costs under 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 30; and if they wish to make the order evidence, they may inrol it there; it will not be so made stronger evidence, but it simplifies the mode of proof. The respondents cannot enter an appeal; the proceeding is irregular; and there are no words in the statute to enable them to do so. In the particular instance, it was made use of with a fraudulent design; for when the overseers of Crich withdrew their notice of appeal, they reserved to themselves the power of appealing when the pauper was removed; and the respondents having gone to the sessions, entered their appeal and got it confirmed; they do not forthwith remove the pauper, but wait for six months until the certiorari is gone. Surely that was for a fraudulent purpose. This was an act of the sessions, without jurisdiction; and, in the particular instance, the entry was made for a fraudulent purpose. Then, has not this court the power to act under such circumstances, and to correct the proceedings of the court of quarter sessions? I think that if there is no other instance in which there is an inherent power to enable us to make precedents, we have that power to-day, in analogy to that which our predecessors made many years ago, in ordering a court of quarter sessions to enter continuances and hear an appeal."—Rule absolute for a peremptory mandamus.

The justices at a subsequent sessions cannot erase an order of the court.

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

The inrolment of an order simplifies the proof, but does not strengthen the order.

Where, two days antecedent to the regular service of an order of removal, examination, and notice of chargeability, a rough copy of the order and examination, in which the year 1840 was, by error, substituted for 1843, was delivered by the overseer of the respondent to the overseer of the appellant parish, solely with a view of giving information as to the nature of the settlement, but not as a service of the order, and the appellants treated the rough copy first delivered as a separate order, and entered two appeals at the quarter sessions without the knowledge of the respondents; and the sessions quashed the first alleged order with costs, because no notice of chargeability had been

Reg. v. Cornwall, 8 Jurist, 289. On a rule for a mandamus to erase from their records of the sessions an entry made touching an order of removal of J. Schollor, it appeared that an application was made by the overseer of Breage, on the 13th May, 1843, at the petty sessions at Holsten, for an order to remove the paupers from Breage to Gennoe, and an order, bearing date the 13th May, 1843, was made and delivered to such overseer; one of the overseers of the appellant parish was present when the order was made, and requested that it might not be acted on till after the then next petty sessions, to give the appellants an opportunity to produce evidence, showing that the paupers were not settled in their parish. As the two parishes had been in the habit of conducting their business in an amicable spirit, and submitting parochial matters to arbitration, this request was acceded to by the overseer of the respondent parish, with the sanction of the magistrates present; on the 15th May an interview took place between the two overseers, when it was arranged that Gennoe should take the paupers, and Breage should receive in their place a pauper named Richards, then chargeable to Gennoe, and alleged to be settled in Breage; upon that occasion the overseer of Breage handed to the overseer of Gennoe a rough copy of the order of removal and examinations, in order that the latter might be apprised of the nature of the evidence in support of Schollor's settlement. This copy had never been examined; no notice of chargeability was given, nor was the original order exhibited at the time of delivery; and such rough copy was given only for the purpose of furthering a friendly settlement. In it there occurred a blank after the word "forty," so that the instrument purported to be the copy of an order of "the 13th May, in the 6th year of her Majesty Queen Victoria, and in the year of our Lord, 1840." On the same day the overseers of Breage fruitlessly applied to the overseer of Gennoe for a return of the rough copy of the order. On the 5th June examined copies of the order and examinations, together with the notice of chargeability, were duly served upon the parish of Gennoe. On the 26th June the paupers were removed to Gennoe under the order of the 23rd May, 1843, and the parish of Breage received the pauper Richards. On the 2nd October, fourteen days before the quarter sessions, the respondent was served with two notices of appeal, and two statements of grounds of appeal, the one against an order of the 13th May, 1840, and the other against an order of the 13th May, 1843. Until such service, they had received no intimation of any intention on the part of the parish of Gennoe to appeal against the order. The first statement contained seventeen grounds of appeal, of which one was, that no notice of chargeability had been given. The other contained eleven grounds of appeal, consisting of objections to the evidence in the examinations and traverses of the facts contained in it. The respondents attended the quarter sessions, and then learned that two appeals by the parish of Gennoe against the parish of Breage had been entered and respited at the last July sessions. On the first appeal being called on, the appellants produced the above-mentioned rough copy of the order, &c., and insisted on their right to try an appeal against an order of the 13th May, 1840, and proceeded to object that no notice of chargeability had been given; the respondents denied the right of the appellants to be heard, and proved, by uncontradicted evidence, that there was, in fact, but one order; that the delivery of the rough copy was not intended or understood as formal service, and that the removal of the paupers took place under the real order, dated in 1843. But the sessions thought themselves bound to adjudicate upon the appeal, and quashed the order with costs, on the ground of want of notice of chargeability. The second appeal was thereupon called on, and the appellants contended that the order which had just been quashed as an order of 1840 was, in fact, an order of 1843; that the respondents had themselves shown that there was, in fact, but one order, that that had been quashed, and they, consequently, could not be heard in support of it. The respondents declared themselves ready to support the order on the merits; contending, that the want of notice of chargeability could not apply to this order, and that the conduct of the appellants, in entering an appeal against a non-existing order, and then asserting its identity with a valid order, was a fraud upon the court: but the court refused to hear the respondents, and quashed the order with costs. On an application for a mandamus to erase these entries, Patteson, J., said, "An application to erase an entry from the records of the quarter sessions will not be granted except upon the strongest possible grounds, otherwise we should be gradually creeping into a most inconvenient practice. The Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, p. 1207, i no authority, as the facts there were of a very peculiar nature: there the respondents had entered an appeal against their own order, and procured the appeal to be dismissed and the order confirmed in the absence and without the knowledge of the appellant, and so the court had no jurisdiction. Here, undoubtedly, a gross fraud had been practised upon the sessions, and it is matter of surprise that they could have been deceived by it; and the conduct of the parties in the matter has been in the highest degree discreditable, but the matter was properly before the court, and they exercised a judgment upon it." Application was then made for a mandamus to hear the second appeal. Patteson, J. "I cannot grant the application for an erasure of the entry from the records, otherwise we shall have innumerable applications of the same nature. All I can do is to grant you a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to hear the second appeal."

given, and then quashed the real order with costs, without hearing the respondents in support of it, inasmuch as it was identical with the one previously quashed; a rule for a mandamus to erase the entry of the order on the first appeal was refused, but granted to enter continuances to hear the second appeal.

Reg. v. W. R. Yorkshire, (Ex parte Ackworth,) 3 Q. B. 397. J. Johnson was removed from Shitlington to Ackworth. This order was obtained on an examination, which, it was contended, did not disclose any settlement in, or ground for removal to, the appellant township, and, without calling on the appellant, the sessions held the objection to be fatal. The chairman then stated the order must be discharged; when a magistrate on the bench observed, that it would be proper to discharge the

Where the sessions quash the order, and make a special entry, "Quashed, not on the merits," although it was quashed on an objection which went to the merits, the court will not order them to erase such entry. The examination set out a prior order, but it did not state that it had been served, or pauper removed. Such examination is bad, and a decision by the sessions, that this objection was valid, is a decision on the merits of the settlement.

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

order not on the merits, so as to enable the respondents to remove again. The appellants contended that the decision was on the merits, and that, if the question were doubtful, it ought to be left for decision elsewhere, whenever a necessity for its decision might arise. But the court said they were disposed to make the entry "discharged, not on the merits." The appellants then stated, that, on condition of the court ordering the appellants their costs to be paid by the respondents, they would consent to the special entry, though the facts contained nothing to justify it; that the decision was in favour of the appellants according to the merits of the case; that the appellants had a right to try their appeal so as finally to dispose of the grounds of removal on which the order had been made. The court, however, ultimately determined that they would abide by their former decision, and caused a special entry to be made of the order having been "discharged, not on the merits," in order to prevent the respondents from being concluded. On a rule for a mandamus to erase this entry, Patteson, J., said, "It appears that the examination on which the order of the magistrates was founded, disclosed no ground for the removal of the pauper. It set forth, as the ground, a prior order of removal to the appellant parish unappealed against, which, it alleged, had been suspended; and there was no statement contained in it showing that it had ever been served. The examination was, therefore, bad; and the sessions, being of that opinion, quashed the order, with a special entry that it was "quashed, not on the merits." There appears to have been considerable discussion hereupon, and the counsel for the appellants offered to go into the case; that, however, was resisted, and it was contended, that the appellants must abide by the decision of the court already given. The sessions refused to hear it, and thereupon an entry was made, that the appeal was quashed, not on the merits. At the time the case was first mentioned, I thought the sessions were right, and that a decision upon this objection was not a quashing on the merits; but, on consideration, it now appears to me that the sessions were clearly wrong, not only from the older cases, but from a case or two decided a term or two ago. The Reg. v. Evenwood, p. 1178, and Reg. v. Charlbury, p. 1180, have rightly decided that, where the examination is defective, where it omits some material facts, it is the same thing as if, on the hearing of the appeal, the parties had not produced evidence of such facts before the court, and is conclusive, I will not say on the merits, for that word appears to me unfortunately used, and likely to mislead. The sessions were here undoubtedly wrong in their decision, and then the question arises, whether this court can apply a remedy by directing the record to be amended. The only case cited in favour of the rule was Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, p. 1207; but that case was of a peculiar nature, and should not be brought as a precedent. There this court certainly directed an entry of an appeal on the record of the court of quarter sessions to be erased, and it is urged, it is an authority for this application; but the court had there originally possessed no power to make any entry at all. The sessions had entered an appeal in that case, on the motion of the respondents, and in the absence of the appellants, which they had no authority to do. They consequently had no jurisdiction, for the case was not properly before them. In the present instance, the appeal was properly entered, and the court had jurisdiction over it, and they have decided it. How, then, can we compel them to re-hear a case on which they have decided? It is impossible for this court to interfere to compel them to hear and determine when they have actually heard. It may be true, that their decision is erroneous; but, nevertheless, we cannot interfere. They had the case properly before them, they came to a judgment, and made an entry, and it is impossible to interfere by erasure. The law in such a case has provided no means of redress; for this court, even though they have decided wrongly, is not a court of error, to which appeals may be made from the sessions. Whether, upon any subsequent occasion, the magistrates will permit the appellants to contradict their record, and explain the grounds of that decision by evidence that the former decision was erroneous, and in fact a decision on the merits, is a question which remains to be settled by them, and on which it is unnecessary now to enter. Under the circumstances, the rule now applied for must be refused."

Where the sessions have rejected evidence for the appellants, and confirmed an order of removal, on the ground that the statement of grounds of appeal was insufficient, this court will not interfere by mandamus. Rex v. J. Caernarvon, overruled.

If, on the hearing of an appeal, a point of law arises upon which the court entertains a doubt, and wishes to take the opinion of this court, they should hear the appeal through, and state a case, so that the decision of this court upon the point may determine the appeal.

Reg. v. J. Kesteven, 1 Car. H. & A. 151; 8 Jurist, 445. On a rule for a mandamus to the justices of Kesteven, to enter continuances and hear an appeal against an order of removal, it appeared that the order was grounded on a settlement by apprenticeship. The appellants relied on a subsequent settlement in the respondent parish, by residence of the pauper therein under the apprenticeship, with consent of his master. The respondents objected, that the grounds of appeal did not convey sufficient information as to the house in which the pauper slept, but merely stated that he served a person in the parish. The sessions were of that opinion. The appellants applied for a case, which was granted, and confirmed the order, subject thereto, and stated that if the court should be of opinion that the grounds of appeal were insufficient, the order was to stand confirmed, but if the court should be of a different opinion, then continuances were to be entered, and appeal sent back to be re-heard. Lord Denman. "After the present argument, it will, I should hope, be universally known that this court will not decide a point merely for the purpose of setting the sessions in motion, though we will give our opinion upon a question properly submitted to us; and the way of doing that is, for the sessions to decide the case provisionally, so that upon the delivery of our opinion, the case may be finally settled. If they ask us merely whether they shall go forward, fresh expense is unnecessarily incurred. In the next place, we have to consider whether the cases of Reg. v. J. Caernarvon, p. 1144, and Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire (Keighley v. Wilsden), p. 1066, were rightly decided, and I think we are bound to say that the former case (at the decision of which I was not present), is clearly wrong; and that the latter case, in the decision of which I concurred, is, if possible, more wrong. In the former case, the court may have been led to the decision by the way in which the parties at the bar agreed in presenting the case to it; but the court in both cases took upon itself to say, not merely that the sessions had done wrong, but that they had come to a wrong conclusion. This was, in fact, in each case a new trial upon the evidence, which the court has no power to order. The language of the judges in Reg. v. Caernarvon shows how this mistake arose. They say that where the sessions have taken an erroneous view of a preliminary objection, and refused to hear the appeal, this court will grant a mandamus; and so, if the preliminary point was a matter of practice on which the sessions were clearly wrong in point of law, this court will tell them as a rule of law that which is not so. But if the sessions have decided on a matter of fact, then we will not interfere. Now the question of the sufficiency of the grounds of appeal is entirely for the consideration of the sessions; they are the proper judges of it, as was suggested in former cases by my brother Coleridge and myself, and we cannot well judge of it." Patteson, J. "I hope that in future, when a question arises as to whether the facts stated form a sufficient ground of appeal, it will be clearly understood by the sessions, that they ought not to grant a case if they are satisfied that there is not a sufficient notice of grounds of appeal; and if they entertain so much doubt as to be induced to grant a case, they should go on with the hearing of the case, and determine the subject of appeal. The appellants argue that they are enabled to say that no case has been taken by them. There might be some doubt if a case had been asked and refused; but where a case is given, though in a particular form, which it is said amounts to none, the party should remonstrate and decline to take it, and then he would be entitled to a mandamus. I agree that Reg. v. J. Caernarvon, and Rex v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, were wrongly determined. Where the question is whether there was sufficient information on the grounds of appeal to entitle the appellant to go into his case, that is a question for the sessions." Williams, J. "The decision in the two cases referred to cannot be supported; and the erroneous part of the decision, Rex v. J. Caernarvon, rests upon the misapplication of the term 'preliminary point.' It is impossible to say that a case was not heard, unless the parties have gone through the whole of the case. There has been a hearing and decision of the appeal, if the case was stopped upon an objection to the sufficiency of the statement of the grounds of appeal." Wightman, J. "The decision in Rex v. J. Caernarvon proceeded upon an erroneous view of what is a preliminary objection. In this case, the sessions, in deciding the matter which they have, have done more than decide a point of practice; it is a point touching the merits of the case." Rule discharged. An application was then made to bring up the case. Lord Denman. "That we cannot allow now." (a)

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

If the sessions think that it was necessary to give the date of apprenticeship, Q. B. will not interfere.

Reg. v. Cornwall, 1 Car. H. & A. 161, n. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal against an order of removal from Redruth to Kenwyn, it appeared that the ground of appeal relied on was a settlement by apprenticeship in a third parish, subsequent to that set out in the examinations. The date of the indenture was not given. The sessions were of opinion that the grounds of appeal were insufficient, for not giving the date, and confirmed the order. It was urged that the respondents assume that every indenture of apprenticeship has a date. Lord Denman. "No; it only assumes that the date was necessary in this case, of which the sessions were the proper judges." Per Curiam: Rule discharged, with costs to the justices only.

When an appeal is dismissed, subject to a case, the court will not grant a mandamus to hear the appeal.

Rex v. J. Suffolk, 3 N. & P. 306. This was an appeal against an order of removal. One ground of appeal was, that it did not appear by the examination, that the pauper was chargeable. The sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of the court. Lord Denman. "I do not think we meant to proceed in Rex v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, on the distinction now pointed out, that it was a mere question of sessions practice. If the court of quarter sessions grant a case, they afford a ready mode by which a complete remedy may be afforded for any misdecision, and it is quite impossible to grant two modes of compelling a proper decision to be arrived at.

On an appeal against an order of removal to the parish or township of C., the respondents took an objection to the grounds of appeal, which the court held was valid; but on looking at the order, one

Reg. v. J. Cheshire, 1 P. & D. 88; 8 A. & E. 398. William Jepson, &c. were removed from Yeardsley-cum-Whaley to the parish or township of Chapel-en-le-Frith, otherwise called Coomb's Edge. The order was served on the 15th of December 1836, on A. Pott, as one of the overseers of Chapel-en-le-Frith. On the 30th of December, the overseers of Yeardsley were served with a notice of appeal, signed by J. Lomas, churchwarden, and A. Pott and J. Marckington, as overseers of the poor "of the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith." On the 8th of March a second notice of appeal, with the grounds of appeal, by the "churchwarden and overseer of the township,

(a) Reg. v. J. Caernarvon. The facts of this case, which is now overruled, are given p. 1144. In that case, Coleridge, J., said, "There may be judicial observations somewhat conflicting upon the question whether the sessions may take upon themselves to determine finally the sufficiency of the statement of the grounds of appeal; but the authorities, on a review of them, appear conclusive that when the sessions have declined to hear a case on a preliminary objection, shutting out the merits of the case, their decision may be reviewed by this Court. If the sessions go into the case, then their decision upon the facts is without appeal. Ex parte Broseley, p. 1122, was a case of the latter description: to the sufficiency of the examination there was in that case no objection. A witness was called by the respondents, who proved the fact, varying in part from that set out in the examination. The sessions said, 'You have failed in proving the case you proposed to prove.' They clearly therefore went into the case, and decided it upon its merits. I still think that the question, whether the notice given is sufficient, must depend on many circumstances, of which the sessions must be better judges than we are. But I feel myself bound by the authorities, that this Court will inquire into the propriety of the decision of the sessions." Wightman, J. "It is settled beyond all doubt, that this court will always interfere when the sessions have taken an erroneous view upon a preliminary point, and refused to hear a case."

district, or place known by the name of Coomb's Edge, and sometimes called Chapel-en-le-Frith," was served on the removing parish. The second notice was signed by "J. Lomas, churchwarden," and "A. Pott, overseer." On the appeal the respondents called for proof of the notice of appeal, and objected that the notice was invalid, and applied to have the order confirmed. The court decided that the notice was invalid. The order of removal was then looked at by the court. and one of the magistrates on the bench stated that there was no township of Chapel-en-le-Frith, but that the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith contained three townships, Coomb's Edge, Bradshaw Edge, and Bowden Edge, each maintaining its own poor; and thereupon the court decided that the order was misdirected and a nullity, and they quashed it; although the respondents contended that the order ought to have been confirmed, as the appellants were out of court, in consequence of the invalidity of the notice containing the grounds of appeal, and proposed to prove that the order was in point of fact correct. It was stated in an affidavit made by a late overseer of the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith, that the poor of the whole parish were maintained out of one common fund. On a certiorari to quash the order of sessions, Lord Denman said, "This is a case which presents very peculiar circumstances, and although I cannot approve of the result arrived at by the sessions, yet this court is always very scrupulous in interfering with their decisions. The first question is, whether they had jurisdiction over the subject-matter? They certainly had, for it was an appeal against an order of removal. It turned out that the notice of appeal was signed by one overseer only, which the sessions held to be bad. It is a fallacy to say that their decision on this point ousted them of their jurisdiction, and it may be tried by this test—could not the court, at any time during that sessions, have granted costs? It appears also by the affidavits that jurisdiction was given to the court below by the respondents' counsel, for they applied to have the order confirmed. It is not unnatural that the justices should ask to look at the order; and although the justices were apparently mistaken in the decision they then came to, it was their decision, and cannot be disturbed. I am not, however, prepared to say that this order would be a final decision of the question." Patteson, J. "If the question simply were, whether the sessions had done wrong, I should have no hesitation in deciding that their conduct was very wrong, very absurd, and very inconsistent. At the same time I cannot help seeing that they had jurisdiction. It is the decision alone of the sessions which is to be regarded; what they may have said before that decision may be treated as a mere opinion, with which we have nothing to do." Williams, J. "The affidavits state the counsel for the respondents insisted that the order ought to be confirmed; it is clear, therefore, from the affidavits, that at that moment the jurisdiction was not at an end." Coleridge, J. "Although the rule of law may bear hard in the present case, still if it is the rule, and if that rule is found as a whole to operate beneficially to the public at large, there can be no doubt that it ought to be strictly observed. It cannot be disputed that there are many cases in which affidavits may be looked at in order to ascertain whether there was jurisdiction or not; for suppose an order made, which was good on the face of it, but which was not made by a magistrate, it is clear that this fact may be shown to the court. The simple question then here being whether the justices had jurisdiction, I can entertain no doubt that they had. The appeal being lodged, an objection was taken to the notice, which was held bad, and it is contended that at that moment the appeal went out of court; but that is said without attending to the words of the act. If there had been any doubt as to the jurisdiction of the sessions, the counsel for the respondents appear to have helped them out of the difficulty, by applying to have the order confirmed." Rule discharged. See Reg. v. Westmoreland, p. 1039.

justice stated that C. was wrongly described, as there was no township of C. maintaining its own poor; the sessions held thereupon that the order was a nullity. Held, that although the sessions had decided the notice of appeal to be bad, their jurisdiction was not at an end, and that their order being good upon the face of it, could not be quashed on certiorari.

Affidavits may be used to show that an order of sessions, valid on the face of it, was made without jurisdiction.

Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire, (Sprotbrough v. Attercliffe,) 1 Car. H. & A. 64. Hur Turner, was removed from the township of Attercliffe cum Darnall to the parish, township, or place of Sprotbrough. The parish of

The court of Q.B. will not interfere, unless it appears that the sessions have not decided the question raised before them.

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

An application to respite an appeal is no admission that an objection taken to the notice, because it was signed by the overseers of the parish instead of the township, is valid.

Sprotbrough, in fact, consists of two townships, Sprotbrough and Cadeby, each maintaining its own poor, and having separate and distinct overseers. The parish of Sprotbrough has no overseers. The removing township sent the notice of chargeability, &c., to the overseers of the township of Sprotbrough, and on the 17th of March received a notice of appeal, purporting to be under the hands of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Sprotbrough, and on behalf of that parish. The notice was signed by T. Wood, one of the churchwardens of the parish of Sprotbrough, and by M. Clark and W. Nabon, the overseers of the township. On or about the 30th of March, the following notice was served by the respondents on the overseers of the township of Sprotbrough:—"To the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the township of Sprotbrough. We do hereby give you notice to produce, at the trial of the appeal against an order, &c. for and concerning the removal of Hur Turner, &c., from &c., out of our said township of &c., to your said township of Sprotbrough, and of which appeal you have given notice to us of your intention to try and prosecute at the next general quarter sessions, &c., the aforesaid pauper to be examined, &c." The appeal was entered at the sessions, on behalf of the overseers of the township of Sprotbrough, and was by agreement respited to the next sessions, on the understanding that no fresh statements or notices should be given. The appellants, however, did serve fresh notices, exactly similar to the former. The appeal came on for trial at the Midsummer sessions, when the respondents called upon the appellants to prove their notice and grounds of appeal; and on the production of the above notice objected that it was invalid, as coming from the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, instead of the township. A contention took place as to whether the respondents could or could not have been misled by the notice. During this argument the counsel for the appellants applied to respite the appeal. The respondents admitted the right of the court to do so, but contended it should only be done on payment of costs. This being refused by the appellants, the court said, "Then we confirm the order." On an application for a mandamus, Ex parte The Overseers of Armley, Mich. 1840, being cited, in which it was held that the guardians of a town forming part of a union under Gilbert's Act were the proper persons to appeal; and that a notice given by overseers of the township, one of whom was also the guardian, was not good, Patteson, J., said, "The 22 Geo. III. c. 83, s. 7, expressly provides, that, where guardians are appointed, the overseers shall not act. That notice was by the overseers, and was consequently a nullity; it did not state that one of them was also the guardian. Here the notice was given by persons who, by law, had a right to give it, but who took a wrong title." It was then urged that the notice was an estoppel. Lord Denman. "If this had been an application by the respondents, I can imagine that such a notice as this would have estopped the appellants from disputing the character of persons whom they had so treated in the notice. But, in this case, we are called upon by the appellants to say the sessions have done wrong. Upon the materials brought before us, I think they have not done wrong. At all events, it is impossible to say that they have not decided what they were called upon to do, namely, whether the respondents were or were not misled by the notice of appeal." Patteson, J. "I am of the same opinion. It does not appear from the affidavits that the point was brought to the notice of the sessions." Coleridge, J. "If I were called upon to conjecture, I think it possible that the sessions were wrong in the conclusion at which they arrived; but if misconduct is imputed to them, it must be made out satisfactorily. It is not done so in this case." Rule discharged.

Where the sessions refused to hear evidence on the ground that the examinations were deficient in particularity, Q. B. refused a man-

Reg. v. J. W. R. Yorkshire (Beckington v. Elland,) 1 Car. H. & A. 247. The facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment delivered by Lord Denman: "This was a case against the justices for the West Riding, which arose in this way:—In a former term, cause was shown against a rule for a mandamus (Reg. v. Kesteven), requiring the court of quarter sessions to enter continuances and to hear an appeal, on the ground that it had improperly refused to do so when the case was called on for trial. The cause shown was, that that court had heard the appeal and decided upon it, and that we could not subsequently enter upon any inquiry as to whether their judgment was right. In giving effect to this argument we were under the necessity of re-considering some former decisions of this court, by which it was determined that a mandamus would be the proper mode for compelling the sessions to correct their error; and we felt it our duty to overrule expressly the Reg. v. J. Carnarvonshire and Reg. J. W. R. Yorkshire, and perhaps some other cases. The more the question is considered, the more clearly will be shown the propriety of our last decision. The practice which had crept in, from the desire entertained by the court, that in all cases a fair trial of the issue between the parties should be had, would have led to perpetual interference with every proceeding of the quarter sessions, both embarrassing and derogatory to a tribunal exercising very important functions. All now understand, that, when any such tribunal declines to exercise a jurisdiction imposed on it by the law, this court will enforce its proceeding; but that, when it has acted, its judgment can only be reversed here on a case stated by itself for our opinion. There is certainly no want of facility in granting such cases, and they are conveniently disposed of on grounds well understood between the parties, while the conflict of affidavits on such matters is of itself a real evil. As soon as the said rule was discharged, another, involving the same point, was brought before us; we inquired of the learned counsel who appeared in support of it, whether the two cases could be distinguished; the learned counsel did not attempt to show that our preceding decision was wrong, and that the former authorities ought still to prevail; but he expressed an opinion that the two cases might probably be distinguished, and, that he might have the opportunity of distinguishing them, the rule was enlarged to this term. When, however, it was called on, no attempt at such distinction was made. It was then thought right to inform us, at much length, that the parties had been misled by our mistake in former decisions, and that hardship and injustice would result to the losing parish if we should now refuse them those means of questioning the judgment below which we had led them to suppose that they possessed. But we cannot allow any weight to these observations; parties must indeed act on the authority of our decisions, but those decisions, when pronounced erroneous, cannot give them any shadow of right against their adversaries who have acted on that which is now declared to be the law, in spite of that erroneous decision, even at the moment when it was pronounced. But these observations were rather made as introductory to an application for a rule to show cause why the appellants should not be at liberty to file affidavits in support of their application for a mandamus. So confident, it was urged, had both parties been that this court would continue to act as it had done before, that the appellants actually refused to take up a case granted by the court of quarter sessions, both parties agreeing to be bound by the opinion of this court on the disputed question, when discussed in the proceedings by mandamus. We have paused to consider, whether, in the exercise of our discretionary power, we ought not to grant this application: two cases were cited where the court was supposed to have done so, Rex v. J. Wilts, 10 East, 404, and Rex v. J. Lancashire, (p. 1151,) but in the latter the court either corrected a mistake in the judgment of the court below, in believing that they had no jurisdiction, or they acted in the manner which we have renounced and condemned by our late decision. In the former case the court interposed merely to defeat a fraud attempted to be practised by one parish on the other. On this we shall never hesitate; when the judgment of the inferior court is sought to be made available by fraud, the mandamus is not a coercion of that court, but a privilege to do what is right, which we confer upon them. No mala fides is imputed here; the agreement to be bound by our decision could not be confined to our decision of the single point argued, but would apply to any principle of decision that the law should require. We should be slow to unravel the matter by affidavits, nor can we fail to see the simple damus to compel them.

In cases of fraud, a mandamus will be granted.

11. Of the Superintendance of the Queen's Bench.

answer is the most consistent with probabilities, and must be decisive against the rule if it were granted. We feel it right, therefore, to abstain from re-opening the flood-gates of litigation, and refuse this application; and, instead of enlarging the rule, therefore, it must be discharged."

A mistake as to date had been made in the copy of an order of removal served on the appellants, who entered an appeal against it. A correct copy was afterwards served, and a return of the former requested by the respondents; the appellants, however, refused to return it, and entered a second appeal. The sessions heard and quashed the first appeal, but refused to hear the second, on the ground that it was in fact the same as the one already decided: Held, that the sessions were not justified in such refusal, and a mandamus was granted to compel them to enter continuances, and hear the second appeal.

Reg. v. J. Cornwall, 1 Car. H. & A. 314. On a rule for a mandamus to hear an appeal by the parish of Germor against an order for the removal of J. Schollar, &c. from Breage, it appeared that on the 18th of May, 1843, the respondents served a copy of the order of removal dated May 13th, 1840, together with copies of the examinations and a notice of chargeability, which was not signed. Against this order there was an appeal entered at the Michaelmas sessions. In June, 1843, the respondents served a second order of removal on the appellants, similar to the former, except that it bore date 1843, and the notice of chargeability which accompanied it was duly signed. When this last set of documents was served, the respondents requested that the former should be returned, but the appellants refused. Against this second order, also, they entered an appeal at the same sessions. When the appeal against the first order came on, the respondents contended that the first was not a formal order, but an incorrect copy of the second order, and that it had been served, in compliance with the usual practice, of giving the appellants notice of what had been done with respect to the paupers. The sessions however quashed the order, on the ground that there was no sufficient notice of chargeability. The appeal against the second order was then called on, when the appellants insisted that the order was in fact the same as the one already quashed; and that, as the sessions had quashed one, they were bound to quash the other, inasmuch as they were substantially one and the same. Upon this the sessions decided, that the respondents were not entitled to be heard in support of the second order, and it was accordingly quashed. Lord Denman. "The sessions have refused to hear the only appeal in which they had jurisdiction. They ought to have known they could have nothing to do with an order bearing date 1840, unless continuances from time to time had been entered. They make an entry quashing an order of 1840, and then refuse to entertain one of 1843, because they had already decided one of 1840." The other judges concurred. Rule absolute.

Procedendo awarded.

Reg. v. Cartworth, 8 Jurist, 360. A certiorari to remove an order of sessions had been quashed, because the affidavit on which it issued omitted to state that the justices on whom it was served had been present at the making of the order. A fresh certiorari being subsequently moved for and refused, in consequence of more than six months having elapsed, application was this term made for a mandamus, commanding the justices to enter continuances and hear, &c.; but (semble) on the antecedent facts, there had been already a hearing of the appeal by the justices; on an intimation, however, that a doubt existed at the crown office as to whether it was the record or a transcript merely which had been returned and filed, the court granted a rule nisi for a procedendo to carry back the record to sessions.

ADDENDA.

The greater part of the Cases added here are taken from the Reports of Messrs. Carrow, Hamerton, and Allen, the publication of which was not known to the Editor until the greater part of these pages had been printed.

P. 15.—Reg. v. J. of Cheshire, 1 Car. H. & A. 223. Two neighbouring divisions of a parish used the same parish church, situate in one of them. Each of them had an overseer, collector of taxes, surveyor of highways, and constable, appointed out of its inhabitants, but by the parish at large; each overseer collected the poor-rates in his own division, and kept his own accounts, but these were afterwards entered in one book, and passed jointly: both divisions formed part of the same union, and the poor of both were maintained at their joint expense; but it did not appear that either had separately appointed its own overseers:—Held, that these divisions, not being separate and distinct townships as to the maintenance of their own poor, were not entitled to an appointment of separate overseers, under the 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, s. 21. See 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 22.

Evidence of townships not being distinct.

P. 55.—When the commissioners have ordered a workhouse to be built, and land to be purchased, the Court of Queen's Bench will not inquire into the propriety of their order. It was alleged that one of the parishes had already a workhouse suited to the purpose. (Rex v. Poor Law Commissioners, Newport Union, 6 A. & E. 54.)

Q. B. will not inquire into the propriety of an order for building a workhouse.

P. 101.—Rex v. Morten, 1 Car. H. & A. 69. An order for the maintenance of A., B., and C., three grandchildren, "for so long time as the said A., B., and C. shall be chargeable to the parish of B." is bad: as "the words not able to work," and the word "chargeable," are not convertible terms; and because the adjudication ought to have been made with respect to each child individually.

What is not a valid order of maintenance on a relation.

P. 291.—Reg. v. Grand Junction Railway Company, 1 Car. H. & A. 207. The Grand Junction Railway Company, by a rate made for the poor of Leighford, on the 6th day, were rated for their Railway passing through the parish, and land adjoining, in 1050*l.* Rate confirmed. Case:—The Grand Junction Railway was formed under several acts, containing sections similar to those in Reg v. London and South-Western Railway Company, p. 291. Under these acts, not only has the railway originally contemplated from Warrington to Birmingham been constructed and opened for public use, but other railways, made by other parties, from Warrington to Newton, and from Crewe to Chester, and long since opened, have become the property of the appellants, and these now form part of the Grand Junction Railway, and the whole is managed, as to accounts and otherwise, as one entire business. Over all these railways, and also over the Liverpool and Manchester Railway between Newton and Liverpool in the one direction, and Newton and Manchester in the other, the appellants exercise the right of carriers on their

A railway company is rateable for their railway at an amount equal to the rent which a lessee would pay, making the same uses of the railway as the company, including their profits as carriers, and the amount of tolls they received from other carriers on the railway.

A Rate founded on the amount chargeable in respect of tolls only, is erroneous.

Addenda.

Deductions may be made for the interest on the capital employed in engines, &c. as carriers.

For tenant's profits and profits of trade.

For the depreciation of such stock, beyond usual repairs.

For the annual cost of conducting the business.

For the land occupied by stations, separately rated in the parishes in which they are situate.

And for the reproduction of rails, chairs, sleepers, &c.

The amount is a question for the sessions.

No station in appellant parish.

Their calculation of the rateable value.

own account of passengers and goods, providing for themselves stations or stopping-places, locomotive-power, carriages, coke, and watering-places, and all other things necessary for the conveyance of passengers and goods, and charging for such conveyance reasonable freights in addition, as regards the Grand Junction Railway, to the tolls or tonnage which they are authorised to take; and by this carrying trade, as well as by the tolls, the appellants make profits. Other parties also exercise the right of carriers over various parts of the Grand Junction Railway, and, amongst others, over that part which is in the respondent parish, providing for themselves, without the consent or concurrence of the appellants, and independently of them, subject, however, to the control of the appellants under several acts, locomotive power, carriages, coke, and watering places, and all other things convenient for the conveyance of passengers and goods, and separate stations and stopping-places adjoining the railway, and the needful branches into, or communications with the same; and they, like the appellants, make profits of their trade so carried on by them over the railway: and they pay to the appellants the tolls or tonnage duly fixed by the appellants pursuant to the acts, and being the same tolls as form the basis of the calculations hereinafter mentioned, as contended for by the appellants. A third class of carriers over the Grand Junction Railway hire from the Grand Junction Railway Company locomotive engines, and the use of stations, &c., but find their own carriages; and they likewise make profits over the railway: these also pay to the appellants the said tolls or tonnage, besides a compensation for the use of the power, stations, and other accommodations provided for them. The total length of so much of the Grand Junction Railway as lies between Birmingham and Newton is eighty-four miles, and from Crewe to Chester twenty-one miles, making together one hundred and five miles, and the distance along the Liverpool and Manchester Railway from Newton to Liverpool is fifteen miles, and from Newton to Manchester sixteen miles; the length of railway within the respondent parish is one mile, and there is no station, stopping-place, or property of the appellants other than the railway itself in the said parish. The appellants have duly caused toll-boards or lists to be made and published, as required by statute. The appellants have also duly kept the accounts of tolls, and free access has been afforded to them as required by the statutes. The fares and charges for the conveyance of passengers, goods, parcels, &c., by the appellants as carriers, are regulated by the number of miles through which they are carried, as well as by weight, bulk, value, &c., and various other circumstances, in like manner as the fares and charges of other carriers. The gross sum received by the appellants as tolls, rates, or duties, including both what they receive from other companies or persons using the railway as carriers, and also the gross sum of the tolls, rates, or duties, of which an account is also kept, calculated upon all the passengers, goods, &c., as aforesaid, carried by them for their own profit, added together, amount actually to the sum of 1,500*l.*, in respect of so much of the railway as lies in the respondent parish, for the current year of rating: and this is the gross produce of the land which the appellants, if not carriers, or which a lessee of the tolls, rates, and duties would in fact have received as such lessee, howsoever, or by whomsoever the carrying business of the railway was conducted; and the appellants contended that this sum, (1,500*l.*,) so found, ought to form the basis of any rate upon them in respect of their rateable property in the respondent parish. The gross yearly receipts of the company, including as well the tolls actually received by them as the tolls, fares, freights, and profits of every kind derived by them as carriers upon, and owners of the Grand Junction Railway, and its appurtenances, in all the parishes between Birmingham and Newton, and Crewe and Chester, excluding their receipts over the Liverpool and Manchester, and other railways which do not belong to them, but for passing over which, as carriers, they pay toll in the same way as the independent carriers over the Grand Junction Railway; and including also the profits of their stock in trade and personal property used by them as carriers in connection with and upon the entire Grand Junction Railway, and their working over and along it; and also the rents, profits, and value of all their stations and other conveniences at and between Birmingham and Newton, and Chester and Crewe, are agreed, for the purposes of this case, to amount to the sum of 440,366*l.* for the current year of rating; and adopting the principle of a mileage division thereof, that is to say, dividing the same by 105, being the total length of the Grand Junction Railway, the amount is 4193*l.* (and a fraction) in respect of so much thereof as lies in the respondent parish; and it is for the purpose of the present case admitted that the mileage principle of division is fair and equal as respects the respondent parish. It was admitted and agreed, (subject to the opinion of the court as to the propriety and principle of each item of deduction), that, if the 1500*l.* (that is to say, the amount of tolls) is to be adopted as the basis of calculation, then the full net annual value of the appellant's rateable property within the respondent parish will be 712*l.* 10*s.*, being the 1500*l.* minus the following deductions which the court of quarter sessions find to be reasonable in fact, viz.:—

Deductions claimed by appellants.

First, 20*l.* per cent. thereof for the tenant's subsistence and profits, regard being had in this case to the extensive amount of responsibility, risk, &c.

Secondly, 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent. for the collection of the tolls.

Thirdly, 350*l.* per mile for the maintenance of the railway with the works and fences, and for gatekeepers, and also for engineering and police, as to so much of the two latter items as are fairly chargeable on the proprietors of the railway as such.

Fourthly, 70*l.* per mile for poor-rates, highway-rates, church-rates, and tithe commutation rent-charge.

Fifthly, 30*l.* per mile for renewing or reproducing those portions of the subject of the rate which are of a perishable nature, such as the rails, chairs, sleepers, &c., when rendered necessary by accident or decay.

Calculation of rateable value allowed by the Sessions, and confirmed by Q. B.

The parish officers adopted, and the court of quarter sessions sanctioned, by their judgment, a different mode of arriving at the net annual rateable value of the property of the appellants in the parish. They ascertained the gross yearly receipts of the company throughout the railway as stated above, viz. the sum of 440,366*l.*, and then made therefrom the following deductions, the propriety, principle and completeness of such deductions, as well as the propriety and principle of the respondents' mode of arriving at the net annual rateable value of the rateable property of the appellants in the parish, being referred to the opinion of this court; and the court of quarter sessions finding such deductions to be reasonable in fact, viz.:—

First, 5*l.* per cent. for interest on 255,000*l.*, being the capital necessary for, and actually invested by the appellants in the purchase of engines, carriages, and all the other moveable stock necessary for the business of carriers as conducted by them in manner aforesaid.

Secondly, 20*l.* per cent. on the same sum, for the tenant's profits, and the fair profits of such trade carried on by means of so large a capital, and with such large risks, &c.

Thirdly, 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the said last-mentioned sum, as the fair annual amount of the depreciation of such stock considered to be in the hands of a tenant from year to year, beyond all needful and usual annual repairs and expenses.

Fourthly, 198,962*l.* per annum, being the appellants' reasonable annual cost of conducting their business during the same year, in which their earnings as aforesaid amounted to 4193*l.* per mile in Leighford; namely, in the coaching department, wages of guards, conductors, porters, station-keepers, clerks, and policemen, repairs of carriages, trucks, and horse-boxes, horsing, parcel-carts, oil, grease, &c. for carriages, and duty on passengers, &c.; and in the merchandise department, salaries and wages of agents, clerks, porters, &c., repairs of waggons, &c., carriage of live stock, and expenses in both departments, and generally locomotive power, enginemen's and firemen's wages, engineering, repairing, and cost of materials, including coke, maintenance of way, repairs of stations and buildings, office and general expenses, including insurance, and advertising, charge for direction, compensation account, rates and taxes, law expenses, and general petty disbursements attendant on the several businesses of railway owners and of railway carriers.

Addenda.

Fifthly, as the stations, offices, stores, and buildings, and repairing works and premises throughout the railway, have been and are separately rated in the several parishes in which they are situated, although necessarily used and occupied for the purposes of, and in connection with it, and the conduct of traffic upon it, the respondents further deducted the fair annual value thereof, viz. 9150*l.*

Sixthly, 30*l.* per mile for renewing or reproducing rail, chairs, sleepers, &c., as before.

The balance, amounting to the net sum of 135,589*l.*, was taken to be the net annual value of the whole railway, independently of the stations and other buildings, &c., rated separately; and the sessions found, as an inference from the above facts, that the railway and other corporeal hereditaments of the company in connection with the railway might reasonably be expected to let to a tenant from year to year at the last-mentioned sum of 135,589*l.*, exclusive of the rent of the stations and other buildings rated separately, such tenant being assumed to have the power of using the railway and all its appurtenances, now the property of the company, under the same circumstances as the company, and with no other privileges and advantages than the company now possess. The principle of mileage being agreed upon by both parties as fair for the purposes of this rate, both as applied to the expenses and deductions, as well as receipts, the net annual rateable value of so much of the railway as lies in the respondent parish is to be taken at 1050*l.*, at least, supposing the principle of rating adopted by the parish officers in that case to be just and correct. Of the total net receipts of the company only about 30,000*l.* per annum are received in the shape of tolls from other parties using the railway on their own account. All the other rateable property in the respondent parish is rated upon an estimate of the net annual value thereof according to the Parochial Assessment Act, and without directly taking into account any receipts, expenses, or allowances having reference to the amount of actual profit made thereon. The appellants have not any stations or buildings in the respondent parish. In various parishes along the line of railway, the parties who, as before-mentioned, use the railway as carriers, and have stations with buildings and with branches into the railway, and other conveniences connected with the railway, are not rated (in particular parishes or elsewhere) upon or in respect of, or with reference to, the Grand Junction Railway, but solely for their stations. The appellants derive no pecuniary profit whatever from their land in the respondent parish, except from the tonnages and tolls, and from their fares and other receipts hereinbefore mentioned, and their trade as carriers in common with all other carriers over the same, if, indeed, these latter profits are to be considered as profits arising from the land, which the appellants contend that they are not. The appellants contend, that, even supposing the rate to be founded on a just principle and proper basis, the deductions allowed by the respondents do not include all the items necessary to bring out the net annual value, that is to say, the rent at which what the respondents contend the appellants' rateable property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, amongst which omitted deductions the appellants instance, by way of example, an annual allowance for goodwill. The sessions adopted the principle of rating and the deductions contended for by the respondents, as furnishing the net annual value of the appellants' rateable property pursuant to the Parochial Assessment Act, and confirmed the rate accordingly, but granted a case on the several questions, the Queen's Bench to have the power of amending or of quashing or otherwise dealing with the rate as they deem right. Lord Denman now delivered the judgment of the Court:—"This was a case of an appeal against the poor-rates: it was argued in Michaelmas term last, and again on a concilium in Hilary term, and has been heard by all the members of the court. Independent of certain questions of detail, which we will consider hereafter, the main arguments of the appellants were directed to shew that this case was distinguishable from the case of Reg. v. The London and South Western Railway Company, in points which went to the principle of the judgment in that case; while the respondents contended, that the two cases were in principle the same, and that that judgment must govern the court in this case. It is necessary, therefore, in the first place, to compare the two cases: if they shall be found to be different in material circumstances, the principle of that decision may lead to a contrary one in this; at all events, that decision will not bind in the present case. If they shall be found to be substantially the same, it may be necessary to consider whether our own reflection, or anything urged in the argument, should induce the court to depart from their former decision. In that case the facts found (and it must never be forgotten, that the propriety of a poor-rate can only be determined with reference to the facts found to be actually existing when it was made) were, that the company were in the sole and exclusive occupation of the railway, warehouses, stations, and landing-places, and, being so, were solely and exclusively carrying on a large business as carriers thereon. That, although their act had, under certain limitations, made the railway a highway for all the liege subjects, and given them under these a right to use it as such, either as carriers or for individual travelling, and in such case provided for the payment of tolls to the company; yet that, in fact, no one having availed himself of this right, nor, as we thought, having the power of doing so conveniently or effectually, no tolls were in fact earned. To this state of facts we applied the established principle of rating, that the rate is to be on the occupier in respect of the beneficial nature of his occupation; upon estimating which as to the amount, or, to put it in other words, in ascertaining how much net rents such and such an occupation may be expected to command, parish officers are to consider, not drily and only what would legally pass by the demise of it, but all the existing circumstances, whether permanent or temporary, wherever situated, however arising or secured, which would reasonably influence the parties to the negotiation for a tenancy as to the amount of the rent. We therefore thought it impossible, in that case, to separate the three or four miles of the railway within the respondent parish from the whole line running through many other parishes; or that whole line from warehouses, stations, and landing-places; or those again from the consideration of the peculiar convenience which the tenant would have for carrying on (as occupier) a lucrative business, if not the effective monopoly, which the provisions of the act appear to give to the occupier for carrying on such a trade. What under the act was possible by law, what in point of fact might be in future, (however near), we thought immaterial as to the principle, although very fit to be taken into account when making the calculation as to the quantum; but, in principle, the parish officers were to look at the actual state and value of the occupation. In the case now under consideration, there are some facts entirely different from those which we have just mentioned. The case finds that other parties, as well as the appellants, exercise the right of being carriers over various parts of the railway, including therein that part of it which is within the respondent parish: providing for themselves, independently of the company, (subject, however, to its control under the act of Parliament), carriages, fuel, and all things necessary and convenient for the conveyance of passengers and goods, and separate stations, and the needful branches into, and communications with, the railway. They make profits of their carrying trade, as do the appellants, and pay them the tolls which they have fixed under the powers given them by their act. Besides these, another class of carriers hire from the appellants engines, and the use of the stations, landing places, &c., but find their own carriages; these also make profit of their carrying trade on the railway, and pay toll, and a compensation for the use of the engines, stations,

The judgment.

The principle on which the Reg. v. L. & S. W. Railway Company was decided.

The difference in the facts of the two cases.

Addenda.

and other accommodations provided for them. As the appellants receive tolls from these two classes of persons in respect of the goods and passengers conveyed by them on the railway, so they keep an account, as directed by their act, of the toll which would have been produced by them for the conveyance of goods and passengers not on their own account. These, added to the compensation above mentioned, form the total produce of the land which the company, if not carriers or lessees of the railway, carrying on no trade upon it, would receive; and upon the aggregate of these alone, after due deductions, the company contend the rate ought to be imposed. We understand them, although it is not precisely so stated, to admit the principle of considering the whole line as entire, and to arrive at the exact sum at which they contend the rate in the respondent parish should be fixed, by a mileage division of the whole line,—a principle very convenient in itself, and rightly adopted by consent. It is unnecessary, after this statement, to point out the difference in fact between the two cases, but we cannot perceive how this difference bears upon the principle on which the rate is to be imposed, or which governed the court in the former decision, which proceeded entirely on the then existing state of facts. Each of the two companies must be rated in respect of the occupation of the land: one of them derives no benefit from that occupation, except by carrying on upon the land the business of conveying goods and passengers, and the division of that profit into tolls and fares we think nominal; the other, in addition to this mode of profit of occupation, also derives a profit from allowing others to carry goods and passengers on the land also, and this latter profit is properly called toll; still in both the inquiry must be the same, what is the value of the occupation, from whatever source derived? In neither can the profits of trade, as such, be brought into the rate; but if the ability to carry on a gainful trade on land adds to the value of the land, that value cannot be excluded merely on the ground that it is referable to the trade. Suppose a house occupied by a private family to-day, which having great advantages of situation for the purpose of trade is turned into a shop to-morrow, and in consequence let for double or treble the former rent, would not the rate be properly increased in proportion? Could it be objected that to do so would be to rate the profits of trade? Again, supposing the occupier were to let out different rooms to other persons carrying on the same trade as himself, and this mode of occupying was still to increase the value of the house to let, would this at all vary the principle on which he was rated, although it would increase the quantum. Lastly, supposing instead of this species of underletting being at the option of the occupier, all persons using the same trade had the right by some statute, under certain restrictions, to carry it on in the different rooms of the house, paying a large compensation to the occupier, would not the principle of the rate be still the same? would it be material to inquire how the occupation became more valuable, except for the purpose of making greater or less deductions which the nature of the occupation would make just? We may all remember when the premises in Soho-square, now used as a bazaar, were occupied as a private residence; the present mode of occupation no doubt increases the rent, but whether one man, being the tenant, alone carried on the various trades now exercised there, or sold goods himself at part of the stands and let out others, and so derived his profit in part directly from trade, in part from the rent paid him by the traders, or let out all the stands and so earned no profit but from the rents paid him by the traders, the result would be in either case exactly the same. The overseers could only inquire what was the fair rateable value of the thing so occupied, nor, as we have said before, could the inquiry be at all affected if the occupier of the bazaar held it under some statutable license, which compelled him to let his stands to all persons paying certain rents, and submitting to certain regulations. But it is said that in the case supposed all is referable to the occupation under the supposed lease, that conveys the exclusive dominion, and thence flow entirely the means of making profit. We have, in truth, already given the answer to this, but it will be plainer if we observe, that

The company is rateable for the land increased in value by the tolls taken from carriers:

and is not a rating of stock in trade.

Bazaar in Soho Square.

there is a fallacy in confounding that which the lease conveys the legal title to, and that which it gives the lessee the means of doing or enjoying. No two things can be more distinguishable, and it is the latter which regulates the rent a tenant will give, and not the former. Suppose two estates of equal size, and in all respects of equal fertility, but one surrounded by good roads, a canal near to it, and a large market, and the other without these advantages: of course the rent and rateable value of the one would be larger than of the other, yet a tenant would take no more by the lease of one than he would by the other; the lease would give him no legal title which he had not before, to use the roads, the canal, or the market. Or suppose a more peculiar case; A., the owner and occupier of Blackacre, and having the command of a stream of water which he can turn over Whiteacre, on that account desires to rent it, to him it will be more valuable than to any other occupier, because he fertilises it at very little expense; he will therefore give a larger rent than any other person, yet by the lease he would take no more than any other person, although he ought undoubtedly to pay a higher rate. Apply the principle of these cases to the railway of the appellants, and it is quite true that if they were to let it to a tenant the lease would convey the land and railway only, and give a title to the tolls only, but the lessees would undoubtedly consider the facilities and advantages which the occupation as tenants would afford them for carrying on a lucrative trade as carriers, and in whatever proportion that consideration would increase the rent, in the same, after due allowance, would the rate be raised also. The two propositions are equally true, that the rate is not to be imposed in respect of the profits of trade, and that it is to be imposed in respect of the value of the occupation; and two propositions that are true and applicable to the same subject-matter cannot be inconsistent, and we think the respondents in the present case, by the scheme they propose, have shown that they are not so. The gross yearly receipts of the company, as occupiers of and carriers on the railway, must include the proper subject-matter of the rate; they have therefore taken a sum agreed to represent them, as the first point to start from; they then assume an amount of capital employed in the trade, and deduct from the former sum two percentages, on the latter, 5*l.* per cent. for the interest of this capital, and 20*l.* per cent. for the profits which ought to be made upon it; and a third for the depreciation of stock beyond the usual repairs and expenses; fourth, they deduct from the gross receipts the annual cost of conducting the trade; fifth, they deduct the annual value of all the lands occupied by stations, &c., elsewhere rated; and, sixth, a sum per mile for the reproduction of rails, chairs, sleepers, &c. These deductions taken together seem to us to include whatever is properly referable to the trade, and distinguishable from the increased value which that trade gives to the land; we do not now speak of the amount allowed under each item, and we are not competent to give any opinion on this point, which is properly for the sessions; but, if these are the proper heads of deductions, then the residue must represent the value of the occupation; and, if so, this alone is brought into the rate, and the profits of the trade are excluded. Accordingly, the sessions have found, as an inference from the facts, that the residue is the sum which a tenant from year to year might reasonably be expected to give for the railway and corporeal hereditaments now occupied by the company, in connection with the railway, exclusive of the stations and other buildings rated separately, such tenant being assumed to have the same and no other power of using the railway, the same and no other advantages and privileges, as the company now possess. If the deductions exhaust that portion of receipts referable to trade, the inference of the sessions is fair. If the advantages and privileges which the company possess are attributable to their occupation, and would pass with it, their assumption is well founded. We agree with them in both. The appellants, however, contend, that, even if the principle of the rate be fair, some reasonable deductions are omitted. We have used the sufficiency of the deductions made as a mode of trying the principle, but the objection of the appellants

Deductions referable to the trade, and not to the value of the land.

Addenda.

now to be considered is one of detail; the only instance which they specify and rely upon, is, that an allowance ought to be and is not made for goodwill. We presume by this it is meant, that a person bargaining with the company to become the yearly tenant of their railroad, in the expectation of succeeding to their trade as a probable consequence of succeeding to their occupation, would properly be called upon to pay them something for the goodwill of that trade, and that this would be in the nature of an outgoing and deduction from the profit. This objection appears capable of two answers: the first and decisive one is, that the purchase of goodwill implies that a trade is sold, that the company are to be bound to surrender their trade to the lessee, and no longer to be carriers on the line. But the calculation of the sessions proceeds on no such supposition; all those special advantages, indeed, for carrying it on, which the occupation gives them, whatever they may be, they must necessarily surrender; but the moment they have leased the railway, they would become part of the public, and have the right of carrying on their trade, retaining all the goodwill, with all those advantages which were carefully reserved to the public. Secondly, although the supposition of a tenancy is to be made, yet what the incidents of the tenancy must be, as to the actual terms and allowances, must be determined, for the purpose of fixing the amount of the rate, by the actual state of things; for this supposition of a tenancy is only a mode of ascertaining the existing value of the occupation to the existing occupier. Now, here, there is no tenancy in fact, no goodwill is, in fact, paid for, and therefore no deduction ought, in fact, to be made on account of its price. Again, it is contended, that the existing facts of the case show the unreasonableness of the rate. The carrying trade of the company goes beyond their own line, upon the railways of other sets of proprietors, but the receipts arising from this have been excluded from the rate: this, it is said, is inconsistent. How can the profit which the same engine earns, by drawing goods over one mile, be of a different character from that it would earn in the same employment over the next mile? So far from there being any inconsistency, it is necessarily involved in the principle on which the rate rests; that the distinction can be made, and has been made, is no slight proof of the soundness of that principle. The moment the engine leaves the railway of the company, what it earns ceases to have any connection with their occupation of the railway; it may, and of course does, increase the value of the occupation of that other line, on which it then works, and will, of course, in the shape of toll, proportionately increase the rate which the occupier will pay; but, if it were allowed to swell the charge on the company, it could only do so in respect of the profits of the trade, and this our principle excludes. But it is said, lastly, that this principle works injustice between the company and the other corporations, or individuals who carry upon their line; their engines and their trade are said to pay nothing to the poor's rate directly, and indirectly only in respect of their toll, which may be supposed to be calculated so as to bear its own rate, whereas the company pay on their tolls and on their fares. Colour is given to this objection from the fact, which might seem to explain it, that the company fill two characters, the other party one only; but the proper answer is a denial of the fact,—the company do not pay directly or indirectly on their fares, they pay only on the increased value of their occupation of the land, occasioned by whatever circumstances. If a trader should underlet to a lodger a room in his house, in which he derives the most profitable trade imaginable, such lodger would pay no poor-rate at all, but, as the trader would proportion the rent at which he let the lodging to the advantages which such lodger derived from them, the total rent which a trader would pay, and the rate which could be imposed on it, would be proportionably increased; but could he complain of any injustice, or say that he carried on his own trade in the rest of his house to disadvantage, because in his rate the value which the trade so carried on in the residue gave to the occupation was also taken into account in fixing the quantum of the rate? Yet those parties who carry

No deduction allowed for goodwill.

The receipts as carriers on another railway properly excluded.

The rate is not on the fares, but the increased value of the land.

on a trade on the company's line are in effect but in the nature of lodgers, or parties enjoying a profitable easement on the line, and, by the consideration they pay, increase its general value. In the examination which the case has compelled us to make, we have been necessarily led into a reconsideration of the principles on which the decision in the case of the South-Western Railway Company proceeded. That decision was not directly impugned, but the distinction of facts relied on has appeared to us on examination so unsubstantial, that it was necessary, in order to a decision against this rate, to examine the principles on which that was upheld; and in a matter of such vast importance and such apparent novelty, where, too, the decision of this court cannot be reviewed in a court of error, we were not unwilling again to examine the question. Upon the whole, we are satisfied with the decision of the sessions; it appeared to us founded upon a just application of established principles, and in accordance with many decided cases, and conflicting with none." Judgment for the respondents.

Profits of locks rateable in the parish where the locks are situate

P. 310.—Rex v. Lower Mitton, 9 B. & C. 810. The facts are stated in the judgment delivered by Bayley, J. "The question is, whether the profits of the locks situated in Lower Mitton are rateable in all the parishes through which the canal runs, in proportion to the length of each parish, or not. The sessions were of opinion that they were, and we think that their decision was wrong. It is now fully established in Rex v. Milton (p. 191), and Rex v. Palmer (p. 306), that the proprietors of a canal or navigation are rateable as the occupiers of land covered with water, in the particular parish in which the land lies; and it follows from thence, and it was so decided in Rex v. Kingswinford (p. 310), that they are rateable in each parish in proportion to the profit which that part of the land covered with water, which lies in the parish, produces. If it is more productive than other parts of the canal, either because there is more traffic, or because larger tolls are due upon it, or because the outgoings and expenses there are less, it must be assessed at a higher proportionate value. It is, however, contended, that there is a distinction between the case of a canal or navigation and a lock; and that the lock is profitable, because it is supplied with water from the rest of the canal lying in other parishes. This argument, supposing it to be well founded, only proves that a part of the source of profit is derived from the other parishes in which the canal lies, and that consequently a part only of the lockage dues ought to be ascribed to those parishes, for the dues are payable as well for the use of water derived from the Severn, as from the canal; and also for the use of the soil and fixed machinery of the locks; and therefore the rule adopted by the sessions, even according to the argument used by the respondents, was wrong. We are, however, of opinion, that there is no distinction, as to the principle of its rateability, between a lock and a portion of a canal or river navigation; and, that whether the subject-matter of the occupation be productive of itself, or rendered productive by something brought from another parish, or by being used in conjunction with property in another parish, no difference is to be made in the mode of rating. Thus, whether the water in the canal be brought from the same parish or another parish, whether conveyed in pipes, or carts, or by engines, makes no difference, if the land in which it is placed be thereby rendered more valuable. It makes no difference whether it remains comparatively still, as in a canal, or moves constantly, as in a river, or occasionally, as in a lock; nor does it make any difference that unless there was a canal in another parish, connected with the lock, no profit would be gained. It might as well be contended, that the profits of a bridge, which would not arise unless there were roads to it, or of land rendered more valuable by roads in an adjoining parish, should be rated in part only in the parish in which such bridge or land is situate."

No distinction between the profits of a lock and other parts of a canal.

Where a poor-rate had not been signed by a majority of the P. 322.—Reg. v. Lord Godolphin, 1 Car. H. & A. 1. On a motion for a mandamus to compel two justices to allow a rate for the relief of the poor, it appeared, that there were two overseers and two churchwardens in the parish officers, a mandamus issued commanding the justices to sign and allow the rate.

Addenda.

A rate is made when it is allowed and published, although the declaration is not attached to it. The appeal must be to the Sessions next after the allowance, not after the declaration made.

parish; but that the churchwardens had never been sworn, and had not acted. The rate had been made by the overseers, and signed by them: but the justices refused to sign and allow it, because it was not signed by a majority of the parish officers, and Williams, J., granted a rule absolute in the first instance.

P. 334.—Reg v. The Great Western Railway Company, 1 Car. H. & A. 310. Two rates, in which a railway company were assessed to the relief of the poor, were made on the 22nd of November, 1842, and the 24th of February, 1843, and allowed by two justices, and published. It being afterwards discovered by the parish officers that they had omitted the declaration required by the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 96, s. 2, they cancelled the above allowance, and supplied the requisite declaration, and the rates were afterwards, on the 25th of March, and 1st of April, again allowed by two justices, and published. There was no appeal against them at the Easter sessions (held April 3rd), but at the Midsummer sessions a rate-payer appealed, whereupon the sessions ordered both rates to be quashed, and two new ones to be made in their stead, which, on the 14th and 22nd of July, were made accordingly. At the Michaelmas sessions the company appealed against these latter rates, but the sessions ordered them to be confirmed. All the orders of sessions were removed into this court by certiorari (granted on the application of the company, though they had been no party to the first appeals). Held, that the first order was void, as the justices at the Midsummer sessions had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal; the right of appealing being confined to the next practicable sessions after the rate is made; and that the re-allowance and re-publication of the rates, with the requisite declaration, did not give those sessions jurisdiction. And that as the validity of the July rates depended on that of the Midsummer orders, which were void for want of jurisdiction, the order of the Midsummer sessions, confirming the July rates, was also void.

Appeal against poor-rate adjourned, and grounds of appeal stated in order of respite: no further notice held necessary at the following sessions.

P. 343.—Rex v. J. Hertfordshire, 4 B. & Ad. 561. S. Baxter, intending to appeal against a poor-rate, served his notices in time for the October sessions, 1832, and attended there ready to try, and to prove notice. The appeal being called on, counsel appeared for the respondents, and prayed a respite, alleging that the respondents had not had time to prepare their defence to the grounds of appeal stated in the notice, which were fifteen in number. The appellant opposed the respite, but it was granted, on payment of costs. Notice of appeal was not proved, nor an admission of it required. One of the notices was handed by the respondents' counsel to the clerk of the peace, and was thereupon (as the appellant represented) filed with the records of the sessions; but the respondents alleged that it was merely furnished to the clerk of the peace for his convenience, to assist him in making out the order of respite. This order (which set forth the grounds of appeal stated in the notice) was served on the churchwardens and overseers of the respondent parish on the 21st of December; but they had no further notice of appeal. At the next sessions (31st of December) the appeal was called on, and the respondents' counsel objected to its being heard without proof of the original notice. This the appellant was not prepared to give, conceiving that the fact had been admitted at the former sessions, and proof of it now was unnecessary; but he offered to prove the order of respite. The sessions held this insufficient, and confirmed the rate with costs. A rule nisi was obtained for a mandamus to hear the appeal. Per curiam. "The respondents had acted upon the notice, so as to make further proof unnecessary. The sessions ought to hear the appeal." Rule absolute.

Justices of the peace may examine accounts, and allow items disallowed by the auditor.

P. 368.—Reg. v. J. Staffordshire, 1 Car. H. & A. 128. The facts of this case appear from the judgment delivered by Lord Denman. "This was an application for a writ of mandamus to certain justices, commanding them to make an order upon the late overseers of West Bromwich to pay over to the present overseers the sum of 100*l.* and upwards, or, if necessary, to issue a distress-warrant for levying the same. It first seemed as if this application had been founded on the 50 Geo. III., c. 49, s. 1, by which the overseers are directed, within fourteen days after the expiration of their year of office, to submit their accounts to two justices at special sessions, who are authorised to examine the same, and to allow or disallow the various charges. It is there provided, 'that, in case such overseers shall neglect or refuse to pay to their successors, within fourteen days from the signing and attesting the account, any sum or sums of money, or arrearages, which, on examination and allowance of such account in manner aforesaid, shall appear to be found to be due and owing from such overseers, or any of them, or remaining in their hands, it shall and may be lawful for the subsequent overseers, by warrant from any two or more justices of the peace, to levy all such sum or sums of money by distress and sale of the offenders' goods.' It is plain from this section the justices are only to issue their warrant for such sum as is found to be due on the examination and allowance of the overseers' accounts by two or more justices at special sessions, within fourteen days of such overseers going out of office. It appears by the affidavits in this case, that the sum in question has not been found so to be due and owing; on the contrary, the charges in the account were allowed by the justices on their examination, as it is said, improperly; but, at all events, they were allowed, and no such sum was found to be due and owing; therefore the justices have no power to issue their warrant under the 50 Geo. III., c. 49, and so, of course, this court cannot command them to do that which by law they have no power to do. There is no other act, previous to the Poor Law Amendment Act, the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76, that authorises them to issue such warrant. The 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 2, directs the overseers, within fourteen days after the end of their year, and after other overseers are appointed, to make and yield up a true and perfect account to two justices, and to pay over such sums as shall be in their hands to their successors; but that act gives no remedy by distress, but applies only to the balance appearing in their accounts. The 17 Geo. II, c. 38, s. 1, directs the overseers to deliver an account to their successors, verified on oath; and sect. 2 enables two justices to commit the overseers until they shall give an account or pay up the money in their hands: but that act gives no remedy by distress, and applies only to the balance appearing in the overseers' accounts. The next act is the 50 Geo. III., c. 49, on which I have already remarked: and the last act, the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76, s. 47, directs the overseers to deliver, in addition to the annual account then by law required, accounts, once in every quarter, to the auditor, or such other person as by any statute, or by the rules, orders, or regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners, shall be appointed to examine, audit, allow, or disallow such accounts, and provides that all the balances may be recovered in the same manner as any penalties or forfeitures under this act. By sect. 99, the penalties and forfeitures under the act are to be levied by distress and sale of the goods of the person ordered to pay the same by warrant under the hands of two justices. And by the 101st section power is given to the justices to summon the party, and hear and determine the complaint, and adjudge him to pay the penalty or forfeiture incurred. It should seem the auditor mentioned in the affidavits was appointed by the Poor Law Commissioners, and the quarterly accounts were rendered to him, and he disallowed the charges in question, to the amount of 82*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*, in January, and subsequently the whole amount of 103*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.*, on the 24th of April, 1843. He considered them to be contrary to the provisions of that act, and at variance with the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners; and if so, no doubt they ought also to have been disallowed by the justices, when the annual accounts were rendered to them, for the 89th sect. of the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76, expressly provides that the justices shall disallow such items. The justices, however, considered the charges not contrary to the provisions of the act, nor to the rules, orders, and regulations of the Commissioners, and allowed them, as I have before observed. Against this allowance there was an appeal to the quarter sessions, and that seems to be given by the 3rd section of the 50 Geo. III.,

Under 50 Geo. III. c. 49, a distress can be made only for such sums as the justices find to be due.

The 43 Eliz. gives no remedy by distress.

Nor the 17 Geo. II.

Addenda.

c. 49, and the 17 Geo. II., c. 38, s. 4. On that appeal the allowance by the justices was confirmed. Notwithstanding this, the auditor summoned the overseers before two justices, under the 101st section of the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76, to compel them to pay over the sum which the auditor had so disallowed, and which the justices at special sessions had so allowed. The justices refused to make the order, and we are now asked to issue a writ of mandamus, commanding them to make such order, and, if necessary, to issue their warrant under the 99th section. This we cannot do, unless we are prepared to say that the power of two justices, under the 50 Geo. III., c. 49, to allow the overseers' accounts, subject to the appeal to the quarter sessions, is wholly taken away and rendered inoperative by the 47th section of the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76, and that that section has transferred that power to the auditors appointed by the Poor Law Commissioners. The late Attorney-General, in the course of his argument, distinctly contended that the justices had now no power to allow in the annual account any items that had been disallowed by the auditor in the quarterly account, although they might have a power, perhaps, to disallow what the auditor had allowed. The 47th section does not in terms authorise the auditor to disallow any item in the overseers' accounts, but it appears the rule of the Poor Law Commissioners does, which, under sect. 42, has the authority of an act of Parliament. Here there are apparently concurrent authorities, and in the case of a conflict between them, as in this case, it is difficult to say which view it was intended by the Legislature was to prevail. The authority of the justices must have been well known to the framers of the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76. The mode in which this authority is to be exercised is clearly laid down by the 50 Geo. III., c. 49, and applies as well to overseers as to any other person who may be aggrieved. This authority is evidently intended to be preserved, as the 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 76, s. 47, directs the quarterly accounts to be rendered in addition to the annual accounts, thereby preserving the annual account, and by consequence preserving all that by law ought to be done, or might be done, upon it. Section 89 further confirms the authority of the justices, and directs them to disallow, not what the auditors had already disallowed, but all payments, charges, or allowances contrary to the provisions of the act, or to the known rules, orders, and regulations of the Commissioners, leaving it to them, the justices, to determine what charges are so contrary, and not mentioning the authority of the auditors. Then the section contains this remarkable provision, 'that no allowance by any justice shall exonerate or discharge such overseer or guardian from any penalty or legal proceeding to which he may have rendered himself liable by having acted contrary to the rules, orders, and regulations of the said Commissioners, or to the provisions of this act;' as if the Legislature had contemplated that the justices, either from ignorance of the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners, or from a misinterpretation of them, might happen to allow improper charges, and intended to guard against the shielding the overseers from a penalty, though the charges might stand good as items of their account by reason of the allowance of the justices. Seeing, then, that this authority in the justices is evidently intended to be preserved, and that no provision had been made by which that authority has been made subordinate to that of the auditors, nor any provision by which the exercise of such authority as the Commissioners may think fit to give the auditors can be reviewed by way of appeal, we are of opinion, whatever effect was intended to be given to the examination of the overseers' accounts by the auditors, that ultimately the allowance or disallowance of them is still vested in the justices, subject to an appeal to the sessions. We are reminded of the stat. 6 & 7 Vict., c. 67, s. 3, by which all persons are protected from actions in respect of anything done in obedience to a peremptory mandamus, and therefore we are asked to let this writ go, if there is any doubt, inasmuch as the justices are bound to make a return, and if the return is badly made, under a peremptory mandamus, they are protected

Rules of the commissioners have the authority of a statute.

Protection to persons acting in obedience to a mandamus.

from any action for anything done in obedience to it. We feel no doubt in the case, nor does the act of Parliament say that the justices are to make a return to a mandamus instead of obeying it, for the sake of protecting themselves under the act." Rule discharged.

A person was hired for a year, and afterwards told by the master "he shall go away a fortnight at Michaelmas because of his settlement," and at the year's end he was paid a year's wages. This is a dispensation, and not an exception.

P. 529.—Rex v. Sulgrave, 2 T. R. 376. The pauper, D. Plester, was hired in February, to Mr. Howes, of Stuchbury, till Old Michaelmas, and served him accordingly. On the Friday before Old Michaelmas his master asked him if he would stay again; the pauper said he would if they could agree about wages, and asked five guineas, which the master thought too much. The pauper immediately went away, and having gone about ten yards, returned for something he had forgotten; he then met his master again, who said he would give him the five guineas, and gave him one shilling earnest. The master, while he was putting his hand into his pocket for the shilling, said, you shall go away a fortnight at Michaelmas, because of your settlement, and I will give you that fortnight to get what you can; to which the pauper agreed, and he accordingly went to his father's, and stayed a fortnight, during which time he worked for Mr. Chester in digging sand on Howes's land, and received fromChester 1*s.* a day, and once or twice during the fortnight he ate at Howes's; at the end of the fortnight he went to Howes's and continued to serve him at Stuchbury till Lady-day, when Howes removed, and the pauper with him, to Culworth. Howes soon after died, and the pauper continued to serve Mrs. Howes in Culworth, received his wages for that time, and he believes there was nothing deducted for the fortnight, but he does not remember what sum he received. The pauper apprehended that his master would not have hired him if he had not agreed to go away for a fortnight. Ashurst, J. "The rule established in these kind of cases is this: 'where there is a bona fide exception of part of the time at the time of the hiring, that is not a hiring for a year; but if there be no exception at the time of making the original contract, then a permissive absence is considered as a dispensation of part of the service by the master;' and it does not operate in the same way as an exception out of the original contract, which defeats the settlement. And the question whether it be one or the other must depend upon the particular circumstances of each case. In this case there was a complete hiring for a year at the time. The parties having disagreed on the terms proposed, the pauper went away, but on his return his master said he would give him the five guineas, which he agreed to accept, and gave him one shilling earnest. It is likewise stated, that while the master was putting his hand into his pocket he told the pauper he should go away for a fortnight; but the contract was complete before that time, and what passed afterwards can only be considered as a dispensation from the service: for at that time the master had a complete right to his service for a year, and the pauper had agreed to serve him for that time, and the shilling earnest was to bind the agreement for one year for five guineas; otherwise it appears to be giving the servant more than he originally asked for the whole year, for serving him for a shorter period. If then the contract was complete before anything was said relative to the fortnight's absence, this was a dispensation with the service, and not an exception out of the original contract. An exception is a stipulation on the part of the person for whose benefit it is introduced; but here it was not made on the request of the servant, but as the offer of the master, and he said it was for the express purpose of preventing the pauper gaining a settlement. That is not such a reason as the court will give much countenance to. Whether the sessions might not have determined this on the ground of fraud, was for their consideration. As it is, there is no occasion to go into that ground, as we think this is a dispensation from service. As to the servant's apprehension, that cannot vary the case: we are to decide on the terms of the contract, not on the apprehension of the pauper."

P. 529.—Rex v. Willoughby, K. B. Easter T. 11 G. IV. MS. The facts were precisely the same as the above, and the sessions found that it was an exceptive hiring, and the court confirmed it; Parke, J., observing "that the gift of the earnest being after the stipulation for absence, showed that the contract was not till then completed."

Addenda.

Facts from which the court of Q. B. will not infer an appropriation of payments to the rent of a particular year.

P. 823.—Reg. v. Cranbrook.—1 Car. H. & A. 5. R. Ellis was removed from Cranbrook to Hawkhurst. Order quashed. Case:—On the 21st of December 1838, the pauper agreed with S. Dobell, as agent to T. Smith, to rent a tenement in Cranbrook, consisting of a house, in two dwellings, with some land, at 18*l.* a year. He occupied it from Christmas, 1838, to April 1841, and during the whole of that time underlet a part of the premises to West, who occupied such part at a rent of 5*l.* 4*s.* a year. West having been an under-tenant to Ellis of a part of the same premises previously to the making of the above agreement, and having had his furniture distrained upon in consequence of Ellis not having paid his rent to the owner of the premises, he (West) paid his year's rent, which became due in 1839, by a cheque obtained from his (West's) employer, which cheque was handed over by Ellis to Dobell; and Ellis also in that year paid the further sum of 3*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* to Dobell, making together the sum of 8*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* paid during that year on account of the rent which accrued due at Christmas, 1839. During this year Ellis paid no rate whatever. In the second year of the pauper's tenancy, from Christmas, 1839, to Christmas, 1840, the under-tenant, West, paid his rent of 5*l.* 4*s.* for that year direct to the owner of the premises. In October, 1840, Ellis was rated to a poor's rate for the premises in question, in 7*s.* 3*d.*, which rate he paid in January, 1841, and subsequently resided on the premises more than forty days. The question was, whether he acquired a settlement by payment of rates. Lord Denman. "If the sessions wished us to draw an inference from the facts stated, I should say that this was not a payment on account of the first year's rent. If they did not, they should have found the fact expressly. It would be extremely objectionable to send such a case back to be re-heard, as it would invite tampering with witnesses." Order of sessions quashed.

Relief given in a workhouse situated in another parish, is no evidence of a settlement.

P. 1004.—Reg v. St. Giles in the Fields, 1 Car. H. & A. 137. W. Conquorer was removed from Ashton-under-Lyne to St. Giles in the Fields. Order confirmed. Case:—In 1823, the pauper being in St. Giles, was sent to Cresbrook in Derbyshire, at the expense of the said parish, and remained at Cresbrook until July, 1829, when, being destitute, he went from Cresbrook to St. Giles to obtain relief. On his arrival in St. Giles, he applied to the parish officers there for relief, stating that he had just come out of Derbyshire; and he received from them a pair of shoes, and was desired by them to go back into the country, and get something to do. He applied again for relief at their board, and received 1*s.*, after an inquiry made at the board whether he belonged to their parish. He received a shilling from them more than once during several weeks. In the winter, being again chargeable to St. Giles whilst living there, he was taken into the workhouse of the said parish, which is situate within the limits thereof, and remained there for some months, until he was sent from thence with other paupers to Islington, out of the limits of the parish of St. Giles in the Fields, to the establishment of one Perry, a contractor for the maintenance of paupers on behalf of that and other parishes, where he was maintained for some time at the expense of St. Giles. Shortly after leaving that establishment, he becoming again chargeable to St. Giles, was admitted, by order of the parish officers into the Surrey Asylum, which is a similar establishment, and locally situate out of St. Giles. Lord Denman. "It appears to me that the sessions have properly placed the question before us, whether there was any evidence of relief out of the parish so as to create an acknowledgment of a settlement; and I am of opinion that there was no such evidence. Rex v. Chatham, p. 1004, and Rex v. Coleorton, p. 1005, are authorities upon this subject. In Rex v. Chadderton, p. 1004, there was only one act of relief to the pauper by the parish while he resided in it, which it was held might well be considered as casual relief, and therefore no evidence of his settlement there. And the reason is obvious; the parish officers are bound to relieve casual poor, and if they were to be prevented doing what motives of humanity would dictate, by fear of a settlement being admitted by it, the pauper might die for want of assistance. With reference to the argument, that it ought to be shewn that the statutory provisions for workhouses out of the parish have been complied with, that seems to me immaterial. I think this house was in point of fact a parish house, and may be considered as the workhouse, and that, therefore, this is quite a case of relief within the parish, and against the supposition of its being any acknowledgment of a settlement by giving relief out of the parish" (a). Williams, J. "The question submitted to us is, whether there was any evidence at all of the fact that relief was given to the pauper out of the parish. This is rather an inference of law, than of fact. From the time of the decision of Lord Kenyon, C. J., in Rex v. Chadderton, to the present, the bare fact of relieving a pauper in a parish is no acknowledgment of his having a settlement there. I think it better strictly to abide by this rule, and am of opinion therefore that the sessions were clearly wrong. It is suggested that such acts of relief might grow into proof of a settlement. If so, where is the line to be drawn; would five or ten payments be necessary, and would it make any difference whether ten shillings was paid at once, or at ten payments of a shilling each? Here, instead of giving the pauper relief in their parish, the overseers transfer him to their own establishment out of it. It can make no difference whether that establishment is locally situate in or out of the parish." Wightman, J. "I am of the same opinion. I cannot agree that this can be considered as relief given out of the parish. They first relieve the pauper in the parish, and afterwards transfer him to an establishment where they keep their own poor. Rex v. Chatham and Rex v. Coleorton distinctly shew that no such inference as is suggested is to be drawn from such circumstances." Order quashed.

Chargeability not stated in the examination.

Reg. v. Lidford, 1 Car. H. & A. 244. G. Leaman was removed from Widdecombe to Lidford. Order confirmed. Case:—The examination was headed of A. B. as to the settlement of G. Leaman, residing in and now chargeable to Widdecombe. The pauper said, "I am now residing at Widdecombe and chargeable to the parish. I am confined to bed and incapable of being moved from a broken leg." It was objected that there was no proof of the pauper being chargeable, and Lord Denman said the objection must prevail. The other judges concurred. Order quashed.

An examination stating that a pauper, "whilst unmarried, and not having a child or children, lived at Spenser's Hotel, in Bow Street, Covent Garden, for several years, as chamber-maid, under a general hiring, and quitted there a few months previous to her marriage is bad, as it does not show that the pauper was unmarried at the time of hiring. Quære, if "Spenser's Hotel, Covent Garden," is a sufficient designation of the master.

Reg. v. St. Paul's, Covent-Garden, 1 Car. H. & A. 20. S. Bull, widow, was removed from St. Luke, Chelsea, to St. Paul, Covent Garden. Order confirmed. Case:—The order was made on the examination of the pauper who said that she was lawfully married to Edward Bull, at Arundel Church, Sussex, in 1814, and who died in 1834. That he never did any act to gain a parochial settlement since her marriage, and that she has no knowledge of his place of settlement. That, whilst unmarried, and not having a child or children, she lived at Spenser's Hotel, in Bow-street, in the parish of St. Paul, Covent-Garden, Middlesex, for several years as chambermaid under a general hiring, and quitted there a few months previously to her marriage. During the argument it was observed that the landlord of the hotel might have shifted two or three times, and therefore the master's name was not sufficiently specified. No judgment was given on that point, for it was objected that the examination did not show the pauper was unmarried at the time of her hiring. Lord Denman. "It certainly does not. It is quite consistent with this statement that she may have had another husband. She does not say she was unmarried at the time of her general hiring; only that, whilst she was unmarried, she served under a hiring made before. I think the examination bad." Order quashed.

Examinations from which no hiring could be inferred.

Reg. v. Catteral, 1 Car. H. & A. 167. W. Nuttall was removed from Catteral to Dutton. Order quashed. Case:—The examinations were as follow:—W. Bourn said, "I am a farmer in the township of Dilworth, in this county, and reside at a farm called Written Stone. I was married in December, 1833. I lived at home with my father for about a year and a half after my marriage, when I went to live at the farm I now reside at. My father's name is also William Bourn, and he lives at a farm in Dutton, in this county, called Gudgeons, which he has lived upon for upwards of thirty years. Better than two years before I was married, the pauper came to live with my father as a farm servant; he was not engaged for any particular time, but my father found him board, washing, lodging, and clothes for so long a time as he stayed. He continued in my father's service, in that manner, without leaving, from the two years before I was married until after I left home to live at Written Stone Farm, during all which time he lived and slept at my father's farm in Dutton, and was a bachelor. There never was any other agreement come to whilst I lived at home; but my father found him with board, washing, clothing, and lodging, during the said service." The pauper said, "Better than two years before the witness, W. Bourn, was married, I went to his father's, of Dutton, farmer, as a farm servant. There was no agreement made as to the length of my service, but I was found with board, lodging, clothing, and washing whilst I stayed. I continued in the service from the time I went until the witness, W. Bourn, left home to live at Written Stone Farm, being altogether upwards of three years and a half, during all which time my said master found me board, lodging, clothing, and washing, and I slept at his farm, and was a bachelor during such my servitude." Lord Denman. "There is no statement here that the pauper was hired, or contracted or agreed to stay with his master. It is a very different thing to infer a hiring for a year from a general hiring, and to infer a hiring from the fact of finding food and lodging." Patteson, J. "The proper construction of this agreement, as stated, is, that it was no contract of hiring at all." Williams and Wightman, Js., concurred. Order of sessions confirmed.

(a) Patteson, J., being an inhabitant of St. Giles, took no part in the proceedings.

Addenda.

Evidence of another settlement disclosed in the examination, does not justify the sessions in refusing to hear the case.

Reg. v. Whitwick, 1 Car. H. & A. 22. It is no objection to an order of removal, that the examination upon which it is founded discloses evidence (by relief) of a subsequent settlement of the pauper in a third parish. And, therefore, where the examination stated an acknowledgment of a settlement in S., the appellant parish, by relief, and a subsequent acknowledgment by relief in C., and the sessions refused to enter into the question of the settlement in S., on the ground that they were concluded by the statement of a subsequent settlement in C., and therefore quashed the order of removal, this court quashed the order of sessions.

The examinations must state wife's consent to be separated from her husband. The examination of the pauper's husband for the removal of his wife and children, was headed "touching the place of his settlement." The other examinations were headed, "at the time, place, and in manner aforesaid." This is sufficient. The examination of the overseer, that he "had made diligent search and inquiry if J. M. had any legal settlement, and had not been able to discover any," is sufficient. The pre-

Reg. v. Leeds, 1 Car. H. & A. 257. (Washton v. Leeds.) An order for the removal of Lydia Morgan and her four children from Leeds to Washton was quashed. Case:—The following were the examinations:—"Borough of Leeds, in the county of York.—The examination of John Morgan, of Leeds, taken upon oath, &c., touching the place of his lawful settlement, who saith, 'I have a wife called Lydia, whose maiden name was Lydia Miller; I have four children by her, all born in lawful wedlock, namely, Margaret, aged twelve years; Thomas, aged eight years; John, aged four years; and Ann, aged one year and nine months; all of whom are unemancipated, and never gained settlements for themselves. I am now living, residing, and inhabiting, with my said wife and children, in, and we are now actually chargeable to, the township of Leeds. I never gained a settlement in my own right; my father and mother were called James Morgan and Ellen Morgan; I never heard where they were married. They neither of them ever gained settlements in England, or had any place of settlement in England to my knowledge or belief, either derivative or acquired; I never knew the place of my birth, though I have made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain it; my father died about twenty-four years ago, and my mother about eight years; I am now aged thirty-two years. In the month of October last I assisted George Smith in endeavouring to discover my place of settlement, and inquiry after the place of settlement, if any, of my father and mother; and we inquired of all persons, and searched in all likely places to find a place of settlement for me, but without success;

we could not discover any settlement for me, and I believe I never had any. I hereby consent and agree that my said wife and children shall, without me, be removed to the township of Washton, that being the last place of her maiden settlement at and immediately before my intermarriage with her; and I pray that such removal may be forthwith ordered and made according to law.' The examination of Lydia Morgan, taken upon oath at the time, place, and in the manner aforesaid: who says as follows:—'I am the wife of the above-named John Morgan; I never gained a settlement for myself; I am now aged thirty-two years; I am the lawful daughter of the undermentioned John Miller.' The examination of John Miller, taken upon oath, at the time, place, and in manner aforesaid; who says:—'The above-named Lydia Morgan is my daughter, and was born in lawful wedlock. She is my daughter by my present wife.' [Miller's examination then proved that his own settlement, a derivative one, was in Washton.] The examination of George Smith, one of the overseers of the poor of the township of Leeds, in the said borough, taken upon oath, &c., touching the last place of the legal settlement of John Morgan and Lydia, his wife, and their children, who saith as follows:—'I have, together with the said John Morgan, made diligent search and inquiry with the object of discovering and ascertaining whether the said John Morgan hath any legal settlement; and I have not been able to discover or ascertain that the said John Morgan hath, either by his own act, or the act of his parents or their ancestors, or otherwise, acquired any settlement, or, if any such settlement have been acquired, I verily believe it is not known, and cannot in any manner be ascertained'." Lord Denman delivered the judgment: "This was an attempt to induce the court to revise the decision of Rex v. Eltham, but we are of opinion that the question cannot arise in this statement of the case, on account of the wife's consent not appearing. The order of sessions, therefore, must be confirmed." An application was afterwards made to have the order discharged as regarded two of the children, who appeared to be above the age of nurture; and Lord Denman gave a further judgment: "In this case the order of sessions was confirmed upon the single ground, that the wife had not consented to be removed without the husband, and that such consent was necessary to a valid removal, assuming that it could be valid under any circumstances. The court did not then recollect that this ground of decision does not apply to two of the children above the age of nurture, as to whom it is necessary to consider the other points of the case. The one arises on the examinations of the father and mother, and one Miller, which were taken touching the lawful settlement of the father, whereas the order of removal is of the wife and children to the wife's maiden settlement, and the examination should have been headed accordingly. We think this point is not tenable. An inquiry into the father's settlement was necessary in this case, and was the foundation of the proceeding; for, until it appeared that his settlement could not be discovered, the wife's settlement would be immaterial; and when it did so appear, the rest of the inquiry followed as of course. The heading of an examination may be important with regard to an indictment for perjury, and to show that it was taken in a matter in which the magistrates have jurisdiction. Here the heading shows jurisdiction, and it is true as far as it goes, for there was an inquiry touching the settlement of the father, and also a further inquiry arising out of the first inquiry. If that further inquiry had been unconnected with the first, the case would have been very different; but, as it is, we think it so naturally arose out of the first inquiry, that we must hold that the examination was sufficiently taken. The second point we also think untenable. It appears from the examinations that diligent inquiry was made to ascertain the father's settlement; the precise nature of those inquiries need not be stated. Then it is said, that the examinations do not negative the father being born in Scotland, Ireland, or the islands of Man, Scilly, Jersey, or Guernsey. It is obviously impossible to negative his birth in the places mentioned, except by showing where he was born. It is cise inquiries need not be stated; nor is it necessary to negative the birth of J. M. in Scotland, Ireland, &c.

An order for the removal of a mother and children, may be good, as to the children only.

Addenda.

absurd to require a search in Ireland, Scotland, or these other places; and, even if such search were made, the same necessity applies to searching every parish register in England. We are, therefore, of opinion, that the order of removal is good, and ought to be confirmed with regard to two of the children; and that, as to the two above the age of nurture, the order should be quashed as regards them and the wife, but remained confirmed as regards the other children."

The grounds of appeal that the party was charged with the rate.

P. 1127.—Reg. v. St. Olave, Southwark, 1 Car. H. & A. 188. Grounds of appeal allege that a pauper "had occupied a house, and resided therein, for upwards of seven months, and paid one or more of the parochial rates or taxes in respect of such house," are insufficient, because they do state that he was "charged with" such rates or taxes.

A certificate of chargeability must be sealed with the seal of the board of guardians. An objection that it was not sealed as required by the statute, entitles the appellant to be heard on such objection.

P. 1131.—Reg. v. Farthinghoe, 1 Car. H. & A. 238. W. Whitmill was removed from Newington, Oxford, to Farthinghoe. Order confirmed. Case:—The examinations on which the order was made, were that of the pauper, who said, "For twelve weeks past, I and my family have been in the workhouse of the Banbury Union. Before that time I was residing in Newington. I have heard the certificate now produced read by Mr. Moore, clerk to the guardians of the Banbury Union, and I am the person therein mentioned." Certificate of chargeability, Banbury Union, weekly meeting, the 30th day of March, 1843:—"The guardians of the poor of the Banbury Union, in the counties of Oxon, Northampton, Gloucester, and Warwick, do hereby certify, that W. Whitmill, now residing at the workhouse of the union, in the township of Nesthrop, in the county of Oxon, are now, and have been for twelve weeks past, chargeable to the township of Newington, and within the union aforesaid. Given under the seal of the board of guardians of the Banbury Union, at a meeting of the guardians, held on the day and year aforesaid.—H. R. Brayne, presiding chairman (L. S.), G. Moore, clerk to the board of guardians of the Banbury Union." G. Moore said, "I was present at a meeting of the guardians of the Banbury Union, held at the workhouse of the union, and did see H. R. Brayne, the presiding chairman of the meeting, sign the above certificate; I did also, at the said meeting, as the clerk to the board, countersign the certificate; the names 'H. R. Brayne' and 'G. Moore' subscribed to the certificate are the handwriting of the said H. R. Brayne, and of me, this deponent, respectively." One ground of appeal was, "That it does not appear by any legal evidence that the certificate of chargeability was signed and sealed, as required by the statute, by the presiding chairman of the board of guardians of the Banbury Union, or of a district board." Lord Denman. "I am of opinion that this objection is good. The only doubt was whether it could be taken advantage of in this manner. But that would not be an ingenuous way of dealing with it. Whoever put the seal, whether the chairman or anybody else, would make little difference. We ought to take the proper meaning of the objection to be, that the seal was not placed in the manner required by the statute." Patteson, J. "I do not see how to get over the objection; unless it can be contended that the seal proves itself, there must be some evidence of it. (a) If any evidence is required that the signature is that of the proper person, then it must also be proved that the seal is the proper seal." Williams, J. "It stands admitted that we must read it, that the certificate was not signed and sealed as directed by the statute. I understand the fact to be, that the chairman of the board signed it; but it was not signed and sealed as required by the statute, because the common seal was not proved to be put on it." Coleridge, J. "I have no doubt that the objection is a good one, but the difficulty I have had, and which I still feel, is whether it is properly stated. It is not the formal ground of objection, but only a point taken by counsel. I do not know that we should look at the statute at all for this purpose. The question seems to be, whether the affixing the seal by the chairman of the board means the same thing as affixing the seal of the union. If the act required the seal to be affixed by the presiding chairman, the objection could not have been taken in better language. But I think we cannot model the objection to suit the act of Parliament, and I therefore doubt if this is well taken." Order quashed.

(a) Not now, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 66.

Under what circumstances the respondents are precluded from showing that the persons who sign the notice of appeal are not the proper parish officers.

P. 1146.—Reg. v. Leominster, 1 Car. II. & A. 80. The facts appear in the judgment delivered by Lord Denman: "On the trial of the appeal in this case, the respondents objected that the persons by whom the notice of appeal had been signed did not legally constitute either the churchwardens and overseers, or the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the appellant parish; that there was nobody in office competent to give the said notice. It appeared that one Clare was one of the churchwardens, and that another person had been appointed churchwarden, who died before the notice of appeal was given, and no successor had been appointed. Clare signed the notice twice, once as churchwarden, and once as overseer. We think the sessions perfectly right in proceeding to try that appeal, in spite of this novel objection; for which there can be no reasonable foundation, unless the appellant parish legally was free to repudiate the acts of the officers, by whom it was represented; but this we think the parish could not do: we are clearly of opinion that it was bound by their acts, and must submit to any judgment against those whom they have represented as having power to act for them, although they may have been irregularly appointed, unless the document is invalid on the face of it. The respondents would, therefore, have all the benefit of a decision on the merits of the case in their favour, and are not at liberty to enter into the consideration of the legality of the several appointments in the adverse parish on the trial of an appeal." Order of sessions confirmed.

Where the appellants produced a former order between the same parties, which had been quashed generally, the respondents may prove that they had abandoned it on account of some defect in form.

Reg. v. J. Flintshire, 1 Car. H. & A. 288. On an application for a mandamus to hear an appeal against an order for the removal of Harriet Royle, from Cwm to Llangerniew, it appeared that a previous order of removal of the pauper from Cwm had been obtained and served upon Llangerniew, and which order was on appeal quashed. On the trial of this appeal the session book was produced, in which the former order was entered as quashed generally, and when the respondents tendered evidence to explain that the former order was quashed for form (namely on account of the defective examination of Harriet Royle, which consisted of hearsay evidence), the sessions held that such explanatory evidence could not be received because there was no entry on their minutes that the former order of removal was quashed for want of form, and accordingly quashed the second order. The respondents proposed to prove that, previous to the trial of the appeal against the former order, the attorney for the respondents called on the attorney for the appellants, and stated that inasmuch as he had discovered that the examination on which the order was founded consisted mainly of hearsay evidence, the respondents would abandon their order. A form of abandonment and consent was then agreed to between the parties, and it was arranged that the attorney for the appellants should attend at the following sessions and have the appeal quashed. As to the mode in which the order was to be quashed, the affidavits on each side were contradictory, that of the respondents stating that they consented to have the order quashed only on the understanding that it was to be quashed for the defect in form above mentioned, the appellants stating that no such understanding was expressed, and the consent was to quash generally. Coleridge, J. "I regret that this case has been heard by me sitting alone in this court. I am asked however for a judgment and will give one, trusting at the same time, that as I shall decide on broad principles my decision will do no harm. If the court below had heard the case then, as this is not a court of appeal from that, we could not have interfered; but if the sessions refuse to hear, then we have the power to set them in motion. Has there then, or has there not, been a hearing? A previous order, quashed on appeal by the same parties, was put in their way. This it is contended was conclusive, but I think it was not. The next step was to tender evidence to explain that order, and the sessions were wrong in refusing to admit it. It is said that if the evidence had been heard it would have turned out to be no evidence at all; we must look however at the substance of the whole of the proceedings, and when we do so it is impossible not to see that the justices exercised no judgment in the matter. Possibly when they had heard both sides they might have thought the order of removal ought to have been quashed, still there should have been a hearing, and then this court would not disturb their decision. There is a fallacy in arguing here on the effect of the evidence tendered, when the sessions have used to receive it." Rule absolute. (a)

Addenda.

(a) See Regina v. The Justices of Cornwall, 1 Car. H. & A. 314.

APPENDIX.

I. Of Statutes.
II. Of Forms.

I. OF STATUTES.

4 & 5 Will. IV. Cap. 76.

An Act for the amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales. (a) [14*th August*, 1834.]

Whereas it is expedient to alter and amend the laws relating to the relief of poor persons in England and Wales: Be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs and successors, by warrant under the royal sign manual, to appoint three fit persons to be commissioners to carry this act into execution, and also from time to time, at pleasure, to remove any of the commissioners for the time being, and upon every or any vacancy in the said number of commissioners, either by removal or by death or otherwise, to appoint some other fit person to the said office; and, until such appointment, it shall be lawful for the surviving or continuing commissioners or commissioner to act as if no such vacancy had occurred. See also 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, s. 2, post.

Appointment and removal of commissioners.

2. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall be styled "The Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales;" and the said commissioners, or any two of them, may sit from time to time, as they deem

Style of commissioners; who may sit as a board, with power to (a) Whilst these pages were passing through the press, the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, has been passed to amend this Act, the whole of which will be found in the Appendix.

The first eleven sections relate to orders on the putative father, which may be obtained at the petty sessions.

The 13th section abolishes all compulsory apprenticeship.

Several succeeding sections relate to the right of voting for guardians, and the distribution of large districts into wards, for the election of a guardian.

The 22nd section prohibits the appointment of overseers for any township not having separate overseers before this Act.

The wife of a person beyond the seas, in custody, or confinement as a lunatic, shall receive relief as if she was a widow, sec. 25.

The burials of paupers is regulated by section 31.

The election of auditors by 32 and following sections, and where such an auditor may be appointed, the authority of the justices to audit the accounts is abolished, section 37.

A power is given to the clerk of the peace to tax an attorney's bill for business performed on behalf of any parish or union, section 39.

School districts may be found, by the commissioners, to be under the control of district boards, sections 40, 43.

District asylums for the houseless in certain specified great cities, sec. 41.

Relief given to persons found destitute in places having no district asylum, and those just discharged from any gaol or hospital, is to be charged to the common fund of the union, section 54.

The workhouse to be deemed to be situated in the parish to which the pauper belongs, section 56.

The guardians may order the costs of certain prosecutions, section 59.

Expenses of making jury lists, and maintaining boundaries of parish, may be charged on the poor-rates, section 60.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

expedient, as a board of commissioners for carrying this act into execution; and the said commissioners acting as such board shall be and are hereby empowered, by summons under their hands and seals, to require the attendance of all such persons as they may think fit to call before them upon any question or matter connected with or relating to the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, and also to make any inquiries and require any answers or returns as to any such question or matter, and also to administer oaths, and examine all such persons upon oath, and to require and enforce the production upon oath of books, contracts, agreements, accounts, and writings, or copies thereof respectively, in anywise relating to any such question or matter; or, in lieu of requiring such oath as aforesaid, the said commissioners may, if they think fit, require any such person to make and subscribe a declaration of the truth of the matters respecting which he shall have been or shall be so examined: provided always, that no such person shall be required, in obedience to any such summons, to go or travel more than ten miles from the place of his abode: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be deemed to extend to authorise or empower the said commissioners to act as a court of record, or to require the production of the title, or of any papers or writings relating to the title, of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, not being the property of any parish or union.

summon and examine witnesses, and call for production of papers, on oath; or to substitute a declaration for an oath;

but not to inquire into any title.

To have a common seal.

3. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall cause to be made a seal of the said board, and shall cause to be sealed or stamped therewith all rules, orders, and regulations made by the said commissioners in pursuance of this act; and all such rules, orders, and regulations, or copies thereof, purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the said board, shall be received as evidence of the same respectively, without any further proof thereof; and no such rule, order, or regulation, or copy thereof, shall be valid, or have any force or effect, unless the same shall be so sealed or stamped as aforesaid.

Rules, &c. purporting to be sealed with such seal to be received as evidence. (a)

Commissioners to record their proceedings.

4. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall make a record of their proceedings, in which shall be entered in writing a reference to every letter received, from whence, its date, the date of its reception, and the subject to which it relates, and a minute of every letter written or order given by the said commissioners, whether in answer to such letters received or otherwise, with the date of the same, and a minute of the opinion of each of the members of the board of commissioners, in case they should finally differ in opinion upon any order to be given or other proceeding of the board; and such record shall be submitted to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state once in every year, or as often as he shall require the same.

Commissioners to make a general report to the secretary of state yearly;

5. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall, once in every year, submit to one of the principal secretaries of state a general report of their proceedings; and every such general report shall be laid before both houses of parliament within six weeks after the receipt of the same by such principal secretary of state, if parliament be then sitting, or if parliament be not sitting, then within six weeks after the next meeting thereof.

and to report proceedings to secretary of state when required.

6. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall from time to time, at such times as any one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state shall direct, give to the principal secretary of state requiring the same such information respecting their proceedings, or any part thereof, as the said principal secretary of state shall require.

Power to appoint assistant commissioners; and to remove same.

7. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall, and they are hereby empowered from time to time to appoint such persons as they may think fit, to be assistant commissioners for carrying this act into execution, at such places and in manner as the said commissioners may direct, and to remove such assistant commissioners, or any of them, at their discretion, and on every or any vacancy in the said office of assistant commissioner, by removal or by death or otherwise, to appoint, if they see fit, some other person to the said office: provided always, that it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners to appoint more than nine such assistant commissioners to act at any one time, unless the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury for the time being, or any three or more of them, shall consent to the appointment of a greater number.

Not more than nine to be appointed, without consent of Treasury.

(a) The court will not take judicial notice of them. But a copy of the rules, printed by the Queen's Printer, shall, after fourteen days from the date thereof, be judicially noticed, and deemed sufficient proof thereof, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 71.

8. And be it further enacted, that no commissioner or assistant commissioner, appointed as aforesaid, shall, during his continuance in such appointment, be capable of being elected or sitting as a member of the House of Commons.

Commissioners not to sit in parliament.

9. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners may and they are hereby empowered from time to time to appoint a secretary, assistant secretary or secretaries, and all such clerks, messengers, and officers as they shall deem necessary, and from time to time, at the discretion of the said commissioners, to remove such secretary, assistant secretary or secretaries, clerks, messengers, and officers, or any of them, and to appoint others in their stead: provided always, that the amount of the salaries of such secretary, assistant secretary or secretaries, clerks, messengers, and officers, shall from time to time be regulated by the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them.

Commissioners to appoint secretary, assistant secretary or secretaries, clerks, and other officers.

10. And be it further enacted, that no commissioner to be appointed by his Majesty, nor any assistant commissioner, secretary, or other officer or person to be appointed by the said commissioners, under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, shall continue to hold his respective office, or exercise any of the powers given by this act, for a longer period than five years (a) next after the day of the passing of this act, and thenceforth until the end of the then next session of parliament; and from and after the expiration of the said period of five years, and of the then next session of parliament, so much of this act as enables his Majesty to appoint any commissioner or commissioners shall cease to operate or have any effect whatever.

Appointment of commissioners, &c. limited to five years.

11. And be it further enacted, that every commissioner and assistant commissioner to be appointed from time to time as aforesaid, shall, before he shall enter upon the execution of his office, take the following oath, before one of the judges of his Majesty's Courts of King's Bench or Common Pleas, or one of the barons of the Court of Exchequer; (that is to say,)

Commissioners and assistant commissioners to take oath.

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will faithfully, impartially, and honestly, according to the best of my skill and judgment, execute and fulfil all the powers and duties of a commissioner [or assistant commissioner, as the case may be,] under an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled [here set forth the title of this act]."

Form of oath.

And the appointment of every such commissioner and assistant commissioner, together with the time when and the judge or baron before whom he shall have taken the oath aforesaid, shall be forthwith published in the London Gazette; and a notification of such appointment, and of the taking of such oath, shall from time to time be sent, under the hands and seal of the said commissioners, to the clerk of the peace of every county in England and Wales, who shall and is hereby required as soon as conveniently may be to cause the same to be advertised once in some newspapers, published or circulated in such county; and such notification as aforesaid shall be kept and preserved by such clerk of the peace with the records of such county.

Notification of appointment of commissioners to be sent to clerks of the peace, and published.

12. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to delegate to their assistant commissioners, or to any of them, such of the powers and authorities hereby given to the said commissioners (except the powers to make general rules) as the said commissioners shall think fit; and the powers and authorities so delegated, and the delegation thereof, shall be notified in such manner, and such powers and authorities shall be exercised at such places, for such periods, and under such circumstances, and subject to such regulations, as the said commissioners shall direct; and the said commissioners may at any time revoke, recall, alter, or vary all or any of the powers and authorities which shall be so delegated as aforesaid; and, notwithstanding the delegation thereof, may act as if no such delegation had been made; and the said assistant commissioners may and are hereby empowered to summon before them such persons as they may think necessary for the purpose of being examined upon oath (which oath such assistant commissioners are hereby empowered to administer) upon any question or matter relating to the poor, or their relief, or for the purpose of producing and verifying upon oath any books, contracts, agreements, accounts, and writings, or copies of the same, in anywise relating to such question or matter, and not relating to or involving any question of title to lands, tenements, or hereditaments not being the property of any Commissioners may delegate powers to assistant commissioners, and revoke them.

Assistant commissioners may summon persons and examine them upon oath;

(a) Continued for five years more, 2 & 3 Vic. c. 163; and see 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, post.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

parish or union, as such assistant commissioners may think fit, but so that no such person shall be required, in obedience to any such summons, to go or travel more than ten miles from the place of his abode: provided, nevertheless, that in lieu of requiring such oath as aforesaid the said assistant commissioners may, if they think fit, require such person to make and subscribe a declaration of the truth of the matters respecting which he shall have been or shall be so examined; and all summonses and orders made by any such assistant commissioner in pursuance or exercise of such delegated powers and authorities, shall be obeyed, performed, and carried into effect by all persons, as if such summons or order had been the summons or order of the said commissioners, and the breach, non-observance, or non-performance thereof shall be punishable in like manner.

of a declaration may be substituted for an oath.

Persons giving false evidence guilty of perjury; refusing to attend, &c. guilty of misdemeanor.

13. And be it further enacted, that if any person, upon any examination under the authority of this act, shall wilfully and corruptly give false evidence, he shall be deemed guilty of perjury; and if any person shall make or subscribe a false declaration, he shall, on being convicted thereof, suffer the pains and penalties of perjury; and if any person shall wilfully refuse to attend, in obedience to any summons of any commissioner or assistant commissioner, or to give evidence, or shall wilfully alter, suppress, conceal, destroy, or refuse to produce any books, contracts, agreements, accounts, and writings, or copies of the same, which may be so required to be produced before the said commissioners or assistant commissioners, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Reasonable expenses of witnesses to be paid, and by whom.

14. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, in any case where they see fit, to order and allow such expenses of witnesses, and of or attending the production of any books, contracts, agreements, accounts, or writings, or copies thereof, to or before the said commissioners or assistant commissioners, as such commissioners may deem reasonable, to be paid as follows: that is to say, out of the poor-rates of the respective parish or union which in the opinion of the said commissioners shall be interested or concerned in such attendance or production respectively, in all cases in which such witnesses shall not go or travel more than ten miles from the respective parish or union which shall be interested or concerned as aforesaid; and in all other cases, the expenses so ordered or allowed shall be deemed as part of the incidental expenses attending the execution of this act, and be paid accordingly.

Administration of relief to the poor to be under control of the commissioners; who are to make rules and regulations for the management of the poor, and administration of the laws for their relief, &c.

15. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the administration of relief to the poor throughout England and Wales, according to the existing laws, or such laws as shall be in force at the time being, shall be subject to the direction and control of the said commissioners; and for executing the powers given to them by this act, the said commissioners shall and are hereby authorised and required, from time to time as they shall see occasion, to make and issue all such rules, orders, and regulations for the management of the poor, for the government of workhouses, and the education of the children therein, and for the management of parish poor children under the provisions of an act made and passed in the seventh year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better regulation of Parish Poor Children of the several Parishes therein mentioned within the Bills of Mortality," and the superintending, inspecting, and regulating of the houses wherein such poor children are kept and maintained, and for the apprenticing the children of poor persons, and for the guidance and control of all guardians, vestries, and parish officers, so far as relates to the management or relief of the poor, and the keeping, examining, auditing, and allowing of accounts, and making and entering into contracts in all matters relating to such management or relief, or to any expenditure for the relief of the poor, and for carrying this act into execution in all other respects, as they shall think proper; and the said commissioners may, at their discretion, from time to time suspend, alter, or rescind such rules, orders, and regulations, or any of them (a): provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed as enabling the said commissioners, or any of them, to interfere in any individual case for the purpose of ordering relief.

Commissioners may suspend or alter rules, &c.

General rules to be submitted to secretary of state forty days before

16. And be it further enacted, that no general rule of the said commissioners shall operate or take effect until the expiration of forty days after the same, or a copy thereof, shall have been sent, signed and sealed by the said commissioners,

(a) A general rule cannot be altered by a particular rule, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, s. 3.

to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state; and if at any time after any such general rule shall have been so sent to such principal secretary of state, his Majesty, with the advice of his privy council, shall disallow the same or any part thereof, such general rule or the part thereof so disallowed, shall not come into operation, if such disallowance be notified to the said commissioners at any time during the said period of forty days; but if such disallowance be made at any time after that period, such disallowance shall, by one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, be notified to the said commissioners, and from and after such disallowance shall have been so notified, then such general rule, so far as the same shall have been so disallowed, shall cease to operate, subject however and without prejudice to all acts and transactions under or in virtue of the same previously to such disallowance having been so notified.

coming into operation.

If disallowed by king in council during the forty days, not to come into operation.

If disallowed afterwards.

17. And be it further enacted, that all general rules for the time being in force at the commencement of every session of parliament, and which shall not previously have been submitted to parliament, shall from time to time, within one week after the commencement of every such session, be laid by one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state before both houses of parliament.

General rules to be laid before parliament.

18. And be it further enacted, that a written or printed copy of every rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners shall, before the same shall come into operation in any parish or union, be sent by the said commissioners by the post, or in such manner as the commissioners shall think fit, sealed or stamped with their seal, addressed to the overseers of such parish, the guardians of such union or their clerk, and to the clerk to the justices of the petty sessions held for the division in which such parish or union shall be situate; and such overseers, guardians, or their clerk, and clerks to the justices aforesaid, are hereby required to keep and preserve, notify and give publicity to such rules, orders, and regulations, in such manner as the said commissioners shall direct, and also to allow every owner of property, or his agent, or any rate-payer, in every such parish or union, to inspect the same at all reasonable times, free of any charge for such inspection, and to furnish copies of the same, being paid for such copies at and after the rate of threepence for every folio of seventy-two words, and to allow copies or extracts thereof to be taken, on being paid for so doing after the rate of three-halfpence for every folio of seventy-two words; and in case any such overseer, guardian, clerk, or clerk to the justices, to whom such rules, orders, or regulations, or copies thereof, shall be sent as aforesaid, shall neglect to keep and preserve, notify and give publicity to the same in the mode prescribed or directed by the said commissioners, or shall refuse such inspection, or to furnish or allow such copies thereof to be taken as aforesaid, every person so offending shall, for every such offence, be subject and liable to a penalty not exceeding the sum of ten pounds nor less than forty shillings, to be recoverable in the same manner as any penalties are by this act directed to be recovered: provided also, that if any such rule shall, after the same shall have come into operation, be disallowed in manner hereinbefore mentioned, or revoked by the said commissioners, then and in every such case the said commissioners shall send, by the post, or in such manner as they shall think fit, to every parish or union affected by the said rule, notice of such disallowance or revocation; such notice of disallowance or revocation to be addressed, kept, preserved, notified, and publicly inspected, and copies thereof furnished or allowed to be taken in such and the same manner, and subject to the same penalties as are hereinbefore mentioned respecting the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners.

Rules, orders, &c. to be sent to overseers, &c. before they shall come into operation. (a)

Publicity to be given to rules, &c. in manner directed by commissioners.

Penalty on overseer, &c. neglecting to give publicity, &c.

Disallowance of rule to be notified in like manner.

19. And be it further enacted, that no rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners, nor any bye-laws at present in force or to be hereafter made, shall oblige any inmate of any workhouse to attend any religious service which may be celebrated in a mode contrary to the religious principles of such inmate, nor shall authorise the education of any child in such workhouse in any religious creed other than that professed by the parents or surviving parent of such child, and to which such parents or parent shall object, or, in

No inmate of a workhouse obliged to attend any religious service contrary to his religious principles, &c.

(a) It is not necessary to prove that the rule was sent, except to the clerk of the board, and, if there is no board, to the overseers, and even that is unnecessary, unless previous notice has been given of the intention to require such proof, and the party may be required to pay the expense of such proof, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 72.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

the case of an orphan, to which the godfather or godmother of such orphan shall so object: provided also, that it shall and may be lawful for any licensed minister of the religious persuasion of any inmate of such workhouse, at all times in the day, on the request of such inmate, to visit such workhouse for the purpose of affording religious assistance to such inmate, and also for the purpose of instructing his child or children in the principles of their religion.

Orders or regulations of assistant commissioners to be approved and sealed by commissioners.

20. And be it further enacted, that no order or regulation made by any assistant commissioner shall be in force, unless and until the same shall have been adopted by the said commissioners, and sealed or stamped with their seal, and thereupon every such order or regulation shall be considered as made by the said commissioners; and that no rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners, except orders made in answer to the statements and reports hereinafter authorised to be made by overseers or guardians to the said commissioners, shall be in force, until the expiration of fourteen days after a written or printed copy of the same shall have been sent by the said commissioners, sealed or stamped and addressed as lastly hereinbefore is mentioned. See 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, s. 4.

Powers of 22 Geo. III. c. 83, 59 Geo III. c. 12, and of all other acts relating to workhouses, and to borrowing money, to be exercised under control of commissioners, and be subject to their orders. (a)

21. And be it further enacted, that, except where otherwise provided by this act, all the powers and authorities given in and by a certain act of parliament passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," and in and by a certain other act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his said late Majesty, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws for the Relief of the Poor," and all acts for amending such acts respectively, and also all the powers and authorities given by every other act of parliament, general as well as local, for or relating to the building, altering or enlarging of poorhouses and workhouses, and to the acquiring, purchasing, hiring, holding, selling, exchanging, and disposing thereof, or of land whereon the same may have been or may hereafter be erected, and of preparing such houses for the reception of poor persons, and the dieting, clothing, employing, and governing of such poor, and the raising or borrowing of money for any of the purposes aforesaid, and for repaying the same, and all powers of regulating and conducting all other workhouses whatsoever, and of governing, providing for, and employing the poor therein, and all powers auxiliary to any of the powers aforesaid, or in any way relating to the relief of the poor, shall in future be exercised by the persons authorised by law to exercise the same, under the control, and subject to the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners; and the said commissioners and assistant commissioners respectively, and every of them, shall be entitled to attend at every parochial and other local board and vestry, and take part in the discussions, but not to vote at such board or vestry: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to give the said commissioners or assistant commissioners any power to order the building, purchasing, hiring, altering, or enlarging of any workhouse, or the purchasing or hiring of any land at the charge or for the use of any parish or union, save and except so far as such powers are expressly given by this act. P. 391.

Commissioners, &c. to be entitled to attend local boards and vestry; but not to order the building or hiring of work houses, except under limitations.

No additions or alterations to be made to the rules contained in the schedule to 22 Geo. III. c. 83, or in any other act until confirmed by commissioners.

22. And whereas by the said act made and passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, it is (among other things) enacted that the rules, orders, and regulations specified and contained in the schedule thereunto annexed, should be duly observed and enforced at every poorhouse or workhouse to be provided by virtue of the said act, with such additions as should be made by the justices of the peace of the limit wherein such house or houses should be situate, at some special session, provided that such additions should not be contradictory to the rules, orders, and regulations established by that act, and provided that the same should not be repealed by the justices at their quarter sessions of the peace: and it is expedient that such additions, or other rules, orders, or regulations, under that or any local or other act, should not in future be made without the sanction of the said commissioners: be it therefore enacted, that no additions or alterations shall hereafter be made to or in the rules, orders, and regulations contained in the schedule to the said recited act, and no rules, orders, and regulations shall hereafter be made under the authority of the said recited act, or of any act made for altering, amending, or extending the same, or any local or other act relating to poorhouses, workhouses, or the relief of the poor, until the same shall have been submitted to and approved and confirmed by the said commissioners; and that the same, when so confirmed, shall be legally valid and binding upon all persons; and no justice or justices shall have power to repeal the same.

(a) Under this section the commissioners have a power to prohibit the guardians, under a local act, from enlarging the workhouse, the guardians refusing to submit their plans to them. Reg. v. Brighton, 3 Q. B. 325.

Commissioners empowered to order workhouses to be built, hired, altered or enlarged with consent, &c.

23. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby empowered, from time to time when they may see fit, by any writing under their hands and seal, by and with the consent in writing of a majority of the guardians of any union, or with the consent of a majority of the rate-payers and owners of property entitled to vote in manner hereinafter prescribed, in any parish, such last-mentioned majority to be ascertained in manner provided in and by this act, to order and direct the overseers or guardians of any parish or union not having a workhouse or workhouses, to build a workhouse or workhouses, and to purchase or hire land for the purpose of building the same thereon, or to purchase or hire a workhouse or workhouses, or any building or buildings for the purpose of being used as or converted into a workhouse or workhouses; and, with the like consent, to order and direct the overseers and guardians of any parish or union having a workhouse or workhouses, or any buildings capable of being converted into a workhouse or workhouses, to enlarge or alter the same in such manner as the said commissioners shall deem most proper for carrying the provisions of this act into execution, or to build, hire, or purchase any additional workhouse or workhouses, or any building or buildings for the purpose of being used as or converted into a workhouse or workhouses, or to purchase or hire any land for building such additional workhouse or workhouses thereon, of such size and description, and according to such plan, and in such manner as the said commissioners shall deem most proper for carrying the provisions of this act into execution; and the overseers and guardians, to whom such order shall be directed, are hereby authorised and required to assess, raise, and levy such sum or sums of money as may be necessary for the purposes specified in such order, by such powers, ways, and means as are now by law given to or vested in churchwardens or overseers or guardians of the poor for purchasing or hiring land, or for building, hiring, and maintaining workhouses for the use of the poor, in their respective parishes or unions, or to borrow money (a) for such purposes under the provisions of this or any other act or acts.

Sums to be raised for purposes of building workhouses to be charged on poor-rates; not to exceed one year's amount of poor-rates. (b)

24. And be it further enacted, that for the better and more effectually securing the repayment of any sum or sums of money which may be borrowed for the purposes aforesaid, with interest, it shall be lawful for the said overseers or guardians to charge the future poor-rates of such parish or union with the amount of such sum or sums of money: provided always, that the principal sum or sums to be raised for such purposes, whether raised within the year or borrowed, shall in no case exceed the average annual amount of the rates raised for the relief of the poor in such parish or union for three years ending at the Easter next preceding the raising of such money; and that any loan or money borrowed for any of the purposes aforesaid shall be repaid by annual instalments of not less than one-tenth (c) of the sum borrowed, with interest on the same, in any one year.

Power to order workhouses to be altered or enlarged, without consent, &c.

25. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby empowered, without requiring any such consent as aforesaid, by any writing under the hands and seal of the said commissioners, to order and direct the overseers or guardians of any parish or union having a workhouse or workhouses, or any building capable of being converted into a workhouse or workhouses, to enlarge or alter the same, according to such plan and in such manner as the said commissioners shall deem most proper for carrying the provisions of this act into execution; and the overseers or guardians to whom any such order shall be directed are hereby authorised and required to assess, raise, and levy such sum or sums of money as may be neces-

(a) It may be borrowed of corporations, 1 & 2 Vic. c. 25.

(b) If this money is not paid, a mandamus will lie to compel the payment, and the statute of limitations is no bar, 6 A. & E.

(c) So that the whole amount would have been paid off in ten years. This has been extended to twenty years, by 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 107.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

sary for the purposes specified in such order, by such powers, ways, and means as are now by law given to or vested in churchwardens and overseers or guardians of the poor for altering, enlarging, and maintaining workhouses for the use of the poor in their respective parishes or unions: provided always, that the principal sum or sums to be raised for such purposes, and charged upon any parish, shall not exceed in the whole the sum of fifty pounds, nor in any such case exceed one-tenth of the average annual amount of the rates, raised for the relief of the poor in such parish for the three years ending at the Easter next preceding the raising of such money.

Sums to be raised for such purposes not to exceed one-tenth of one year's rates, or 50*l.*

Parishes may be united by commissioners. (a)

26. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by order under their hands and seal, to declare so many parishes as they may think fit to be united for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, and such parishes shall thereupon be deemed a union for such purpose, and thereupon the workhouse or workhouses of such parishes shall be for their common use; and the said commissioners may issue such rules, orders, and regulations as they shall deem expedient, for the classification of such of the poor of such united parishes in such workhouse or workhouses, as may be relieved in any such workhouse, and such poor may be received, maintained and employed in any such workhouse or workhouses, as if the same belonged exclusively to the parish to which such poor shall be chargeable; but, notwithstanding such union and classification, each of the said parishes shall be separately chargeable with and liable to defray the expense of its own poor, whether relieved in or out of any such workhouse.

Each parish chargeable for its own poor. (b)

Justices may order out-door relief to aged and infirm persons wholly unable to work.

27. And be it further enacted, that in any union which may be formed under this act, it shall be lawful for any two of his Majesty's justices of the peace usually acting for the district wherein such union may be situated, at their just and proper discretion, to direct, by order under their hands and seals, that relief shall be given to any adult person who shall from old age or infirmity of body be wholly unable to work, without requiring that such person shall reside in any workhouse: provided always, that one of such justices shall certify in such order, of his own knowledge, that such person is wholly unable to work, as aforesaid; and provided further, that such person shall be lawfully entitled to relief in such union, and shall desire to receive the same out of a workhouse.

When a union of parishes shall be proposed, commissioners to inquire the expense of poor belonging to each parish for three years preceding.

28. And be it further enacted, that when any union of parishes for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, shall be proposed to be made or shall be made under the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby required, from time to time, by such means and in such manner as they may think fit, to inquire into and ascertain the expense incurred by each parish proposed to form part of such union for the relief of the poor belonging to such parish, whether such relief shall have been given in or out of any workhouse, for the three years ending on the twenty-fifth day of March next preceding such inquiry, and thereupon the said commissioners shall proceed to calculate and ascertain the annual average expense of each parish for that period; and the several parishes included or proposed to be included in such union, shall from the time of effecting the same, contribute and be assessed to a common fund for purchasing, building, hiring or providing, altering or enlarging any workhouse or other place for the reception and relief of the poor of such parishes, or for the purchase or renting of any lands or tenements, under and by virtue of the provisions of this act, of or for such union, and for the future upholding and maintaining of such workhouses or places aforesaid, and the payment or allowance of the officers of such union, and the providing of utensils and materials for setting the poor on work therein, and for any other expense to be incurred for the common use or benefit or on the common account of such parishes, in the like proportions as on the said annual average of the said three years such relief had cost each such parish separately, until such average shall be varied or altered as hereinafter provided;

(a) When the parish is managed by guardians under a local act, and contains more than 20,000 persons, the commissioners cannot unite it to another parish, without the consent of two-thirds of such guardians, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 65.

(b) An overseer wilfully neglecting to collect such money as the guardians require, whereby any relief is delayed for forty days, is guilty of a misdemeanor, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 63.

Mandamus (semble) will be granted to compel the payment of the parish quota; and it is no answer to say "that the guardians were not duly elected." Reg. v. St. Andrew's, 10 A. & E. 736.

provided always, and the said commissioners are hereby authorised, if they shall so think fit, but not otherwise, from time to time, either upon the application of the guardians of such union or of the overseers of any parish forming part of the same, or without such application, to cause a like inquiry and calculation to be made and average ascertained for the three years ending on the twenty-fifth day of March next preceding such inquiry; and from and after the ascertaining of any such average, or of any succeeding average, the respective parishes of such union shall contribute and be assessed to the common fund thereof, for the purposes aforesaid, in the proportions which the expense of such parishes shall be found to have borne to each other during such period upon the average which shall have been so last ascertained, until a like inquiry shall be again made, and a new average and proportion ascertained for the future assessment of such parishes. (a)

Power for taking future averages.

29. And whereas in divers unions formed under the said recited act made and passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," or under local acts of incorporation, the whole of the expense, as well of upholding the united workhouses therein, as of maintaining and relieving the poor of the respective parishes of such unions, is assessed upon such parishes in the respective proportions fixed at the period when such unions were formed, and in others a part of such expenses is so levied, and a part subjected to variations at stated periods: and whereas some of the parishes of such unions have contributed and still continue to contribute, as their fixed proportion of the general fund, a sum much larger, and others a sum much less, than the actual expense incurred for the relief of the poor belonging to them respectively; for remedy thereof be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, as soon as conveniently may be after the passing of this act, to cause an inquiry to be made and an account rendered, as it may be practicable to render the same, by the visitors, directors, acting guardians, or other officers of such parishes or unions respectively, of the expense incurred for the relief of the poor belonging to each parish within any such union, whether such poor shall have been relieved in or out of such parish respectively, or in or out of any united workhouse, and whether such expense has been paid by the general fund of such union or the parochial funds of any of the parishes thereof, or by any private rate, or general subscription in lieu of a rate among the rate-payers of any such parish, and whether passed through the books or paid under the control of the managers or officers of such union, or not, for the period of three years ending on the twenty-fifth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, including therein a due proportion of the expense of maintaining the united workhouses and establishment of such union, calculated according to the actual expense otherwise incurred for the relief of the poor belonging to each such parish; and the average annual amount of such expense shall be deemed and taken to have been the annual expense incurred by such parish on account of its poor, notwithstanding such parish may have contributed a greater or smaller sum than such annual average to the general funds of the union during such period; and such annual average, so ascertained as aforesaid, shall, if the said commissioners shall see fit, and to such extent only as they may direct, be deemed and taken as the fixed proportion to be contributed and paid by each such parish respectively towards a common fund for the future hiring, maintaining, and upholding, repairing, altering, or enlarging of any workhouse, and the renting of any land used by such union at the passing of this act, and for the purchasing, building, hiring, maintaining, upholding, repairing, altering, or enlarging of any new workhouse or workhouses, or other place for the reception and relief of the poor belonging to the parishes of such union, and for the renting or purchase of any lands or tenements under or by virtue of the provisions of this act, and the payment or allowance of any officers of such union, and the providing of utensils or materials for setting the poor on work therein, and for any other expense to be in future incurred for the common use or benefit of such parishes, and in addition to the cost or proportion of cost of the poor of such parishes who shall be maintained or relieved in or out of any workhouse of such union, for which each such parish shall in future be charged separately; any provision or enactment in the said recited act or in any such local acts to the contrary notwithstanding; provided always, and the said commissioners are hereby authorised, if they see fit, but not otherwise, upon the application of the

The like provision in unions effected under local acts of incorporation. 22 Geo. III. c. 83.

Power for taking future averages.

(a) For the power to compel payment, post, 2 & 3 Vic. c. 84.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

guardians of any such last-mentioned union, or of the overseers of any parish forming part of the same, or without such application, from time to time to cause an inquiry and calculation to be made, and average ascertained for the three years ending on the twenty-fifth day of March next preceding such inquiry, of the expense incurred by each such parish, as well in respect of its contribution to such common fund as of the cost or proportion of cost of its poor which shall have been maintained or relieved in or out of any workhouse of such union during such period of three years; and from and after the ascertaining of such average or of any succeeding average, the respective parishes of such union shall contribute and be assessed to the common fund thereof, for the purposes of which such common fund is hereinbefore declared to be applicable, in the proportions which the expense of such parishes shall be found to have borne to each other during such period, upon the average which shall have been so last ascertained, until a like inquiry shall be again made, and a new average and proportion ascertained for the future assessment of such parishes to such common fund; provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to any parishes already formed or hereafter to be formed into a union for the purposes of settlement or rating, or where the annual assessment is directed to be indifferently proportioned between the several parishes composing such union.

Parliamentary returns to be evidence of actual expense of poor to each parish.

30. And for facilitating the inquiries directed by this act, be it enacted, that unless and until they shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said commissioners to be incorrect, the returns made to parliament of the sums expended for the relief of the poor of any parish for the last three years previous to the passing of this act, shall be deemed to be the actual expense incurred by each such parish respectively during that period for the purposes aforesaid, and on account of the poor belonging to such parish respectively, and shall be taken as the ground on which such averages shall be calculated and ascertained.

Repeal of 22 Geo. III. c. 83, s. 5, and 56 Geo. III. c. 129, part of s. 1, restraining parishes from contributing to workhouse at a greater distance than ten miles; and of 22 Geo. III. c. 83, s. 29, limiting class of persons to be sent to workhouses.

31. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, so much of the said recited act made and passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," as provides that no parish, township, hamlet, or place which shall be situate more than ten miles from any poorhouse or workhouse to be provided under the authority of that act shall be permitted to be united for the purposes therein mentioned with the parishes, townships, hamlets, and places which shall establish such poorhouse or workhouse as therein mentioned, and as limits the class or description of persons who shall be sent to such poorhouse or workhouse; and so much of a certain act made and passed in the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to repeal certain provisions in Local Acts for the Maintenance and Management of the Poor," as repeals all enactments and provisions contained in any act or acts of parliament since the commencement of the reign of his late Majesty King George the First, whereby any parish, township, or hamlet, at a greater distance than ten miles from any house of industry or workhouse, shall hereafter be empowered or authorised to become contributors to or to take the benefit of such house of industry or workhouse, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

Power to dissolve, add to, or take from any union;

32. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, from time to time, as they may see fit, by order under their hands and seal, to declare any union, whether formed before or after the passing of this act (except when united for the purposes of settlement or rating), to be dissolved, or any parish or parishes, specifying the same, to be separated from or added to any such union, and, as the case may be, such union shall thereupon be dissolved, or such parish or parishes shall thereupon be separated from or added to such union accordingly; and the said commissioners shall in every such case frame and make such rules, orders, and regulations as they may think fit for adapting the constitution, management, and board of guardians of every such union, from or to which there shall be such separation or addition as aforesaid, to the altered state of the same, and every such union shall after any such alteration be constituted, managed, and governed as if the same had been originally formed in such altered state; and in case any union shall be wholly or partially dissolved as aforesaid, then the parishes constituting, or, in case of a partial dissolution, separated from any such union, shall thenceforth be subject to be re-united, or united with other parishes or unions, or otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of this act as the said commissioners shall think fit: provided always, that in every such case the said commissioners shall and thereupon to make such rules as may be adapted to its altered state.

Rights and in-

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

and they are hereby required to ascertain the proportionate value to every parish of such union of the workhouses or other property held or enjoyed by such union for the use of the poor or benefit of the rate-payers therein, and also the proportionate amount chargeable on every parish in respect of all the liabilities of such union existing at the time of such dissolution or alteration of the same, and the said commissioners shall thereupon fix the amount to be received, or paid or secured to be paid, by every parish affected by such alteration; and the sum to be received, if any, by such parish, shall be paid, or as the said commissioners shall direct, be secured to be paid to the overseers or guardians of the same, for the benefit of such parish, and in diminution of the rates thereof and of the expense attending such alteration; and the sum to be so paid or secured to be paid by every such parish shall be raised under the direction of the said commissioners, by the overseers or guardians of such parish, or charged on the poor-rates of such parish, as the said commissioners may see fit, and shall be paid or secured for the use and benefit of the union from which the same parish shall have been so separated, or of the persons or parishes otherwise entitled thereto, as the case may be: provided always, that no such dissolution or alteration of the parishes constituting any such union, nor any addition thereto as aforesaid, shall in any manner prejudice, vary, or affect the rights or interests of third persons, unless such third persons, by themselves or their agents, shall consent in writing to such dissolution or proposed alteration or addition; and that no such dissolution, alteration, or addition shall take place or be made, unless a majority of not less than two-thirds of the guardians of such union shall also occur therein (a); and in every such case, when the said majority of the guardians of such union shall so concur in such proposed alteration, the terms on which such concurrence shall have been given, if approved by the said commissioners, shall be binding and conclusive on the several parishes of such union. P. 48.

terests of parishes, and claims on them, to be ascertained and secured.

Dissolution or alteration not to affect rights of third parties.

33. And be it further enacted, that in any union already formed or which may hereafter be formed in pursuance of or under the provisions of this act, it shall and may be lawful for the guardians elected by the parishes forming such union, by any writing under the hands of all such guardians, to agree, subject to the approbation of the said commissioners, for or on behalf of the respective parishes forming such union, that for the purposes of settlement such parishes shall be considered as one parish; and in such case such agreement, having been first signed by the said guardians, shall be signed and sealed by the said commissioners, and one part thereof shall be deposited with the said commissioners and a counterpart or counterparts thereof, signed by the said guardians, and signed and sealed by the said commissioners, deposited with the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, division, district, or liberty, in which the parishes of such union shall be respectively situate; and the said clerk of the peace shall and is hereby required, upon the receipt of such agreement, or counterpart or counterparts thereof, to file the same with the records of such county, riding, division, district, or liberty; and from and after the depositing of the same as aforesaid the said agreement shall for ever thereafter be binding on each of such parishes, and shall not be revoked or annulled; and the settlement of a poor person in any one of the parishes of such union, shall be considered, as between such parishes, a settlement in such union; and the expense of maintaining, supporting, and relieving every such poor person, and all other expenses of maintaining, supporting, and relieving the poor to which any one of such parishes shall be liable after the depositing of such agreement, part or counterpart aforesaid, or of ascertaining, litigating, or adjudging the settlement of any poor person in any of such parishes, shall form part of the general expenses and be paid out of the common funds of such union: provided always, that wherever such agreement is entered into as aforesaid, the rate or proportion of contribution to such common funds to be thereafter paid by each of the parishes of such union, shall be ascertained and fixed in like manner as in and by this act is provided for in cases where any union of parishes is made or proposed to be made under the provisions thereof, and shall not be subject to further variation.

United parishes may be one parish for purposes of settlement.

34. And be it further enacted, that where the parishes of any union shall be situate within the same county, riding, division, district, or liberty, under the Union may be one parish for purpose of rating with (a) This is repealed, and the commissioners may separate or add a parish without the consent of the guardians, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 66.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

jurisdiction of the same justices of the peace, it shall and may be lawful for the guardians elected by the parishes forming such union, by any writing under the hands of all such guardians, to agree, with the approbation of the said commissioners, for or on behalf of the respective parishes for which they shall so act as guardians, that for the purposes of raising in common the necessary funds for the relief of the poor of such union, such parishes shall be considered one parish; and in such case such agreement, having been first signed by the said guardians, shall be signed and sealed by the said commissioners, and one part thereof deposited with the said commissioners, and a counterpart or counterparts thereof, signed by the said guardians, and signed and sealed by the said commissioners, deposited with the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, division, district, or liberty, counties, district, or districts, in which the said parishes of such union shall be situate; and the said clerk or clerks of the peace shall and is and are hereby required, upon the receipt of such agreement, part, or counterpart, to file the same with the records of such county, riding, division, district, or liberty, or counties, district, or districts, and from and after the depositing and filing of such last-mentioned agreement or counterpart, the same shall be for ever binding upon such parishes, and shall not be revoked or annulled.

consent of guardians. (a)

Agreement or counterpart for such rating to be deposited with clerk of the peace.

Guardians to ascertain and assess value of property.

35. And be it further enacted, that from and after such depositing and filing of the said agreement, part, or counterpart, the said guardians shall, under such regulations as the said commissioners shall in that respect prescribe, proceed to ascertain and assess the value of the property in the several parishes of such union rateable to the relief of the poor, and to cause to be made such surveys and valuations of the said property, or any part thereof, as may be necessary, from time to time, to make a fair and just assessment upon the said united parishes in respect of such property so rateable as aforesaid; and all rates grounded on every such valuation or assessment shall be made, allowed, published, and recovered in such and the same manner as rates for the relief of the poor are now by law made, allowed, published and recovered; and the rate-payers shall have the like power of appeal against such last-mentioned rates as any persons now have against rates made for the relief of the poor.

Rates grounded on such assessment to be allowed as poor rates.

In such cases all expenditure for the poor to be in common.

36. And be it further enacted, that from and after any such common rate shall have come into operation, the proportions or contribution fixed at the period of uniting such parishes, or existing at the time of such last-mentioned agreement for a common rate, shall wholly cease; and all expenditure in respect of the poor of such union, or chargeable in any way on the poor rates of the respective parishes thereof, shall be deemed and be the common expenditure of such union, and be chargeable upon and paid out of the common or general fund to be raised upon such parishes under such common rate, according to the valuation or assessment of the rateable property in such parishes so ascertained, confirmed, and allowed by the said justices from time to time in manner hereinbefore provided: provided always, that the expense of every such valuation shall at all times be a charge on the common rate of such parishes: provided always, that in case any parish of any union, at the period of entering into such agreement for the purposes of settlement or a common rate, shall not be represented by a guardian elected solely by such parish, such parish shall not be bound by any such agreement, unless a majority of the owners of property and rate-payers in such parish, entitled to vote in the manner provided by this act, shall, by their votes in writing, testify their assent to such agreement, in such form as the said commissioners shall prescribe; and in case such assent shall not be so given, such parish shall be wholly omitted from such agreement, and be liable to pay such proportion only of the common assessment as it was bound to pay upon the forming of the union of such parishes.

Expense of valuation.

Proviso for consent of parishes not represented by guardian.

No union to be so formed without consent of commissioners.

37. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, no union or incorporation of parishes shall be formed under the provisions of the said act made and passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, without the previous consent of the said commissioners testified under their hands and seal.

(a) The commissioners are also empowered to form parishes into school districts (7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, sect. 40, et seq.) and asylums for the houseless poor within the metropolitan district, sect. 41. Persons returning after removal to the district deemed to be vagrants, s. 55.

38. And be it further enacted, that where any parishes shall be united by order or with the concurrence of the said commissioners for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, a board of guardians of the poor for such union shall be constituted and chosen, and the workhouse or workhouses of such union shall be governed, and the relief of the poor in such union shall be administered, by such board of guardians (b); and the said guardians shall be elected by the rate-payers, and by such owners of property in the parishes forming such union as shall in manner hereinafter mentioned require to have their names entered as entitled to vote as owners in the books of such parishes respectively; and the said commissioners shall determine the number and prescribe the duties of the guardians to be elected in each union, and also fix a qualification, without which no person shall be eligible as such guardian, such qualification to consist in being rated to the poor rate of some parish or parishes in such union, but not so as to require a qualification exceeding the annual rental of forty pounds, and shall also determine the number of guardians which shall be elected for any one or more parishes, having due regard to the circumstances of each such parish (c): provided always, that one or more guardians shall be elected for each parish included in such union; and such guardians, when so elected, shall continue in office until the twenty-fifth day of March next following their appointment, or until others are appointed in their stead, and on such twenty-fifth day of March, or if that day should fall on a Sunday or a Good Friday, then on the day next following, or within fourteen days (d) next after the said twenty-fifth day of March in every year, such guardians shall go out of office, and the guardians for the ensuing year shall be chosen; and in the event of any vacancy occurring in such board, by the death, removal or resignation, or refusal or disqualification to act of any elected guardian between the periods of such first and the next and any subsequent annual election, or in case the full number of guardians shall not be duly elected at such subsequent election of guardians for the time being, the other or remaining members of the said board shall continue to act until the next election, or until the completion of the said board, as if no such vacancy had occurred, and as if the number of such board were complete; and every justice of the peace residing in any such parish (e), and acting for the county, riding, or division in which the same may be situated, shall be an ex officio guardian of such united or common workhouses, and shall, until such board of guardians shall be duly elected and constituted as aforesaid, and also, in case of any irregularity or delay in any subsequent election of guardians, receive and carry into effect the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners; and after such board shall be elected and constituted as aforesaid, every such justice shall ex officio be and be entitled, if he think fit, to act as a member of such board, in addition to and in like manner as such elected guardians: provided always, that, except where otherwise ordered by the said commissioners, and also except for the purpose of consenting to the dissolution or alteration of any union or any addition thereto, or to the formation of any union for the purposes of settlement or rating, no ex officio or other guardian of any such board as aforesaid shall have power to act in virtue of such office, except as a member and at a meeting of such board; and no act of any such meeting shall be valid unless three members shall be present and concur therein: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall prevent such owners and rate-payers from re-electing the same persons or any or either of them to be guardians for the year next ensuing, nor from electing as a guardian any person who may already have been chosen as a guardian of any other parish.

Constitution and election of board of guardians for unions. (a) P. 48.

(d) "40 days," 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 17.

No guardian to have power except at a local board, unless otherwise directed by the commissioners.

Guardians may be re-elected.

39. And be it further enacted, that if the said commissioners shall, by any order under their hands and seal, direct that the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor of any single parish should be governed and administered by a board of guardians, then such board shall be elected and constituted, and

The like for single parishes.

(a) Guardians under local acts must conduct their proceedings according to this act, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 61.

(b) If a parish is more than four miles from the place of meeting of guardians, a relief district may be formed, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, s. 7. See many alterations as to the election of guardians, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, sections of the same act.

(c) The commissioners may alter the number of guardians for any parish, without the consent required by this act, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 18.

(e) Justices resident in an extra-parochial place to be guardians of that union which includes or adjoins the boundary of the place, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 24.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

authorised and entitled to act, for such single parish, in like manner and in all respects as is hereinbefore enacted and provided in respect to a board of guardians for united parishes; and every justice of the peace resident therein, and acting for the county, riding, or division in which the same is situated, shall be and may act as an ex officio member of such board.

At elections of guardians votes to be taken in writing, and owners (a) as well as occupiers to vote.

40. And be it enacted, that in all cases of the election of guardians under this act, or wherever the consent of the owners of property or rate-payers in any parish or union shall be required for any of the purposes of this act, except when otherwise expressly provided for in this act, the votes of such owners and rate-payers shall be given or taken in writing, collected, and returned, in such manner as the said commissioners shall direct; and in every such case the owner, as well as the rate-payer, in respect of any property in such parish or union, shall be entitled to vote, and the owner shall have the same number and proportion of votes respectively as is provided for inhabitants and other persons in and by an act made and passed in the fifty-eighth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for the Regulation of Parish Vestries," and in and by an act to amend the same, made and passed in the fifty-ninth year of his said late Majesty; and the rate-payers under two hundred pounds shall each have a single vote: and the rate-payers rated at two hundred pounds or more, but under four hundred pounds, shall each have two votes; and the rate-payers rated at four hundred pounds or more, shall each have three votes; and the majority of the votes of such owners and rate-payers which shall be actually collected and returned shall in every such case be binding on such parish: and for the purpose of ascertaining the number of votes to which each such owner shall be entitled, the aggregate amount of the assessment for the time being of any property belonging to such owner in such parish, or on any person or persons in respect of the same, to the poor-rate shall be deemed to be and be taken as the annual value of such property to such owner; and where any such owner shall be the bonâ fide occupier of any such property, he shall be entitled to vote as well in respect of his occupation as of his being such owner: provided always, that it shall be lawful for any owner from time to time, by writing under his hand, to appoint any person to vote as his proxy; and every such appointment shall remain in force until revoked or recalled by such owner; but no owner shall be entitled to vote, either in person or proxy, unless he shall, previous to the day (c) on which he shall claim to vote, have given a statement in writing of his name and address, and the description of the property in the parish as owner whereof, or proxy for the owner whereof, he claims to vote, and if such proxy, the original or an attested copy of the writing appointing him such proxy, to the overseers of such parish; and the said overseers are hereby required to enter in the rate books of such parish, or in some other book to be from time to time provided for that purpose, the names and addresses of the owners and proxies who shall send such statements, and the assessment of the rate for the relief of the poor of the property in respect whereof they respectively claim to vote: provided also, that every person who shall not vote, or who shall not comply with the directions to be made by the said commissioners for the giving, taking, or returning of votes, shall be omitted in the calculation of votes, and considered as having had no vote on the question whereon he might have voted: provided also, that no person shall be deemed a rate-payer, or be entitled to vote, or do any other act, matter, or thing as such, under the provisions of this act, unless he shall have been rated to the relief of the poor for the whole year immediately preceding his so voting or otherwise acting as such rate-payer, and shall

58 Geo. III. c. 69.

Scale of voting.

Votes may be given by proxy. (b)

Fourteen days.

No rate-payer to vote unless rated one year.

(a) The parts of this section printed in italics are repealed, and the following provisions substituted for them, by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 14, which enacts, "That every owner and rate-payer of property rated upon a rateable value of less than 50*l.* shall have one vote, if 50*l.* and less than 100*l.* two votes, of 100*l.* and less than 150*l.* three votes, if 150*l.* and less than 200*l.* four votes, if 200*l.* and less than 250*l.* five votes, if it exceed 250*l.* six votes.

(b) No owner can vote by person or proxy during the year following the 25th March, unless before the 1st of February he gives the required statement, nor until fourteen days after he has made his claim. The statement must contain the nature of his interest, and all rentservice, and to whom payable. Proxies may be appointed. Persons claiming to vote may be objected to; the clerk to the guardians to hear the objections.

(c) Applicable to the poor-rates only, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 16.

have paid the parochial rates and assessments made and assessed upon him for the period of one whole year, as well as those due from him at the time of so voting or acting, except such as shall have been made or become due within the six months immediately preceding such voting or acting: provided always, that in cases of property belonging to any corporation aggregate, or to any joint-stock or other company, no member of such corporation, or proprietor of or interested in such joint-stock or other company, shall be entitled to vote as such owner in respect thereof; but any officer of such corporation, joint-stock, or other company, whose name shall be entered by the direction of the governing body of such corporation or company in the books of the parish, in the manner hereinbefore directed with respect to the owner of property, shall be entitled to vote in respect of such property in the same manner as if he were the owner thereof. (a)

Elections of guardians, visitors, and other officers under the act 22 Geo. III. c. 83, or any local act to be made according to the provisions of this act. (b)

41. And be it further enacted, that all elections of guardians, visitors, and other officers for the execution of any of the powers or purposes of the said recited act made and passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," or of any local act of parliament relating to poorhouses, workhouses, or the relief of the poor, or any act to alter or amend the same respectively, shall hereafter, so far as the said commissioners shall direct, be made and conducted according to the provisions of this act: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, if they shall so think fit, from time to time, with the consent of the majority of the owners of property and rate-payers of any parish, or of any union now existing or to be formed under the provisions of this act, to alter the period for which the guardians to be appointed under the provisions of this act for such parish or union, or any of them, would under the provisions of this act hold office, for such other period or periods as to the said commissioners, with such consent as aforesaid, shall seem expedient, and also to make such alterations in the number, mode of appointment, removal, and period of service of the guardians, or any of them, of any parish, or of any union now existing or to be formed under the provisions of this act, as to the said commissioners, with such consent as aforesaid, shall deem expedient.

Commissioners may make rules, &c. for present or future workhouses, and vary bye-laws already in force or to be made hereafter.

42. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners may and are hereby authorised, by writing under their hands and seal, to make rules, orders, and regulations, to be observed and enforced at every workhouse already established by virtue of the said recited act made and passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," or any general or local act of parliament, or hereafter to be established by virtue of such acts, or of any of them, or of this or any other act of parliament relating to the relief of the poor, for the government thereof, and the nature and amount of the relief to be given to and the labour to be exacted from the persons relieved, and the preservation therein of good order, and from time to time to suspend, alter, vary, amend, or rescind the same, and make any new or other rules, orders, and regulations, to be observed and enforced as aforesaid, as they from time to time shall think fit, and to alter at their discretion, any of the rules, orders, and regulations contained in the schedule to the said recited act, and also to alter or rescind any rules, orders, and regulations heretofore made in pursuance of the said recited act, or any local act of parliament relating to workhouses or the relief of the poor: and that all rules, orders, and regulations to be from time to time made by the said commissioners under the authority of this act shall be valid and binding, and shall be obeyed and observed as if the same were specifically made by and embodied in this act; subject, nevertheless, to the said power of the said commissioners from time to time to rescind, amend, suspend, or alter the same: provided always, that if any such rule, order, or regulation shall be, at the time of issuing the same, directed to and affect more than one union, the same shall

Rules, &c. affecting more than one union to be deemed general rules. (c)

(a) Large parishes may be divided into wards, for the election of guardians, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, sects. 19, 20, 21.

(b) The commissioners may appoint districts for the auditors. The mode of appointment, and the power of the auditors, are pointed out by the 32nd and following sections of 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101. The guardians may appoint collectors to do the duties of assistant overseers (s. 61), and parishes with a population exceeding 20,000, managed under local acts, may elect permanent paid auditors, s. 65.

(c) A general rule cannot be altered by a particular rule, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, s. 3.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

be considered as a general rule, and subject and liable to all the provisions in this act contained respecting general rules.

Justices empowered to see bye-laws enforced, and to visit workhouses, pursuant to 30 Geo. III. c. 49.

43. And be it further enacted, that where any rules, orders, or regulations, or any bye-laws, shall be made or directed by the said commissioners to be observed or enforced in any workhouse, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace acting in and for the county, place, or jurisdiction in which such workhouse shall be situate, to visit, inspect, and examine such workhouse at such times as he shall think proper, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such rules, orders, regulations, or bye-laws, are or have been duly observed and obeyed in such workhouse, as well as for such other purposes, as justices are now authorised to visit workhouses under and by virtue of a certain act made and passed in the thirtieth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act to empower Justices and other Persons to visit Parish Workhouses or Poorhouses, and examine and certify the State and Condition of the Poor therein to the Quarter Sessions;" and if in the opinion of such justice such rules, orders, regulations, or bye-laws, or any of them, have not been duly observed and obeyed in such workhouse, it shall be lawful for such justice to summon the party offending in such respect to appear before any two justices of the peace, to answer any complaint touching the non-observance of such rules, orders, regulations, and bye-laws, or any of them, and upon conviction before such two justices of the party so offending, such party shall forfeit and be liable to such penalties and punishments as are hereinafter prescribed and provided against parties wilfully neglecting or disobeying the rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners: provided always, that where no such rules, orders, regulations, or bye-laws, shall have been directed by the said commissioners to be enforced and observed in the workhouse of any parish, nothing in this act contained shall be construed to restrain or prevent any justice of the peace, physician, surgeon, or apothecary, or the officiating clergyman of any parish, from visiting such workhouse, and examining and certifying the state and condition of the same, and of the poor therein, in such manner as they or any of them are authorised to do in and by the said last-recited act.

The power given to justices, &c. to visit workhouses reserved where commissioners' rules, &c. are not in force.

Buildings taken for workhouses to be within the jurisdiction of the place to which they belong, though situated without. (a)

44. Whereas the jurisdiction of certain cities, boroughs, and corporate towns, is not always co-extensive with the parish in which it exists; be it therefore enacted, that every house or building which shall be erected, purchased, or hired as and for a workhouse, together with all premises and appurtenances thereto belonging, and the land or lands occupied therewith, shall be deemed and held to be within and subject to the local jurisdiction of such incorporated city, borough, or town to which they may respectively belong, though the same may be situated in such part of the respective parishes as may not be within the chartered boundaries thereof.

No lunatic, insane person, or dangerous idiot, to be detained in a workhouse more than fourteen days.

45. And be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall authorise the detention in any workhouse of any dangerous lunatic, insane person, or idiot, for any longer period than fourteen days; and every person wilfully detaining in any workhouse any such lunatic, insane person, or idiot, for more than fourteen days, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to any place duly licensed for the reception of lunatics and other insane persons, or to any workhouse being also a county lunatic asylum.

Commissioners may direct overseers and guardians to appoint paid officers for parishes or unions; (b)

46. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, as and when they shall see fit, by order under their hands and seal, to direct the overseers or guardians of any parish or union, or of so many parishes or unions as the said commissioners may in such order specify and declare to be united for the purpose only of appointing and paying officers, to appoint such paid officers with such qualifications as the said commissioners shall think necessary for superintending or assisting in the administration of the relief and employment of the poor, and for the examining and auditing, allowing or disallowing of accounts in such parish or union, or united parishes, and otherwise carrying the provisions of this act into execution; and the said commissioners may and they are hereby empowered to define and specify and direct the execution of the respective duties of such officers, and the places or limits within which the same shall be performed, and direct the mode of the appointment and and fix their duties, and the mode of appointment and dismissal, and the security;

(a) For the purposes of relief, settlement, removal, and burial of the poor, the workhouse and district school shall be considered as situated in the parish to which the pauper is chargeable, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 56.

(b) As to the power of the commissioners under this act, see pp. 38, 43.

determine the continuance in office or dismissal of such officers, and the amount and nature of the security to be given by such of the said officers as the said commissioners shall think ought to give security, and, when the said commissioners may see occasion, to regulate the amount of salaries payable to such officers respectively, and the time and mode of payment thereof, and the proportions in which such respective parishes or unions shall contribute to such payment; and such salaries shall be chargeable upon and payable out of the poor-rates of such parish or union, or respective parishes, in the manner and proportions fixed by the said commissioners, and shall be recoverable against the overseers or guardians of such parish or union, or parishes, by all such ways and means as the salaries of assistant overseers or other paid officers of any parish or union are recoverable by law; and all such payments shall be valid, and shall be allowed in the accounts of the overseers or guardians paying the same.

and regulate their salaries.

Overseers, &c. to pass accounts quarterly. (a)

47. And be it further enacted, that every overseer, treasurer, or other person having the collection, receipt, or distribution of the moneys assessed for the relief of the poor in any parish or union, or holding or accountable for any balance or sum of money, or any books, deeds, papers, goods, or chattels relating to the relief of the poor, or the collection or distribution of the poor-rate of any parish or union, shall once in every quarter, in addition to the annual account now by law required, and where the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners shall have come in force, then as often as the said rules, orders, and regulations shall direct, but not less than once in every quarter, make and render to the guardians, auditors, or such other persons as by virtue of any statute or custom, or of the said rules, orders, or regulations, may be appointed to examine, audit, allow, or disallow such accounts, or in default of any such guardian, auditor, or other person being so appointed as aforesaid, then to the justices of the peace at their petty sessions for the division in which such parish or union shall be situate, a full and distinct account in writing of all moneys, matters, and things committed to their charge, or received, held, or expended by them on behalf of any such parish or union, and if thereunto required by the justices, guardians, auditors, or other persons authorised in that behalf, shall verify on oath the truth of all such accounts and statements, from time to time respectively, or subscribe a declaration to the truth thereof, in manner and under the penalties in this act provided for parties giving false evidence or refusing to give evidence under the provisions of this act; and all balances due from any guardian, treasurer, overseer, or assistant overseer, or other person having the control and distribution of the poor-rate, or accountable for such balances, may be recovered in the same manner as any penalties and forfeitures are recoverable under this act: provided, nevertheless, that no such proceeding, shall exonerate or discharge the liability of the surety of any such treasurer, overseer, assistant overseer, or other person as aforesaid.

Recovery of balances.

Surety not to be discharged.

Masters of workhouses and parish officers to be under order of board, and removable by them.

48. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners may and they are hereby authorised and empowered, as and when they shall think proper, by order under their hands and seal, either upon or without any suggestion or complaint in that behalf from the overseers or guardians of any parish or union, to remove any master of any workhouse, or assistant overseer, or other paid officer of any parish or union whom they shall deem unfit for or incompetent to discharge the duties of any such office, or who shall at any time refuse or wilfully neglect to obey and carry into effect any of the rules, orders, regulations, or bye-laws of the said commissioners, whether such union shall have been made or such officer appointed before or after the passing of this act, and to require from time to time the persons competent in that behalf to appoint a fit and proper person in his room; and that any person so removed shall not be competent to be appointed to or to fill any paid office connected with the relief of the poor in any such parish or union, except with the consent of the said commissioners under their hands and seal: provided always, that no person shall be eligible to hold any parish office, or have the management of the poor in any way whatever, who shall have been convicted of felony, fraud, or perjury.

(a) This clause did not supersede the annual account required by the 50 G. III. c. 49, but the 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 37, enacts, "That where a district auditor has been appointed, the power of the justices to allow or disallow accounts shall cease."

The accounts must be passed as often as the commissioners shall direct, but not less than half-yearly, Ib. s. 36.

For an indictment under this section see p. 366.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

Contracts not to be valid unless conformable to the rules of commissioners. (a)

49. And be it further enacted, that any contract which shall be entered into by or on behalf of any parish or union, for or relating to the maintenance, clothing, lodging, employment, or relief of the poor, or for any other purpose relating to or connected with the general management of the poor, which shall not be made and entered into in conformity with the rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners in that behalf in force at thetime of making and entering into the same, or otherwise sanctioned by them, shall be voidable, and, if the said commissioners shall so direct, shall be null and void; and all payments made under or in pursuance of any contract not made and entered into in conformity with such rules, orders, or regulations at any period after the said commissioners shall have declared the same to be null and void as aforesaid, shall be disallowed in passing the accounts of the overseer, guardian, or other officer by whom such payments shall have been made.

Repeal of 45 Geo. III. c. 54, as to contracts.

50. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, a certain act made and passed in the forty-fifth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act to amend an Act made in the ninth year of King George the First, for amending the Laws relating to the Settlement, Employment, and Relief of the Poor, so far as the same respects Contracts to be entered into for the Maintenance and Employment of the Poor," shall be and the same is hereby repealed: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to affect or make void any bond or other security which shall have been entered into or given before the passing of this act, under or in pursuance of the provisions of the said act hereby repealed.

The penalty imposed by 55 Geo. III. c. 137, on persons having the management of the poor being concerned in any contract extended to persons appointed under this act.

51. And be it further enacted, that so much of a certain act made and passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to prevent poor Persons in Workhouses from embezzling certain Property provided for their Use; to alter and amend so much of an Act of the thirty-sixth year of his present Majesty as restrains Justices of the Peace from ordering Relief to poor Persons in certain cases for a longer period than one Month at a time; and for other purposes therein mentioned, relating to the Poor," as inflicts a penalty on persons having the management of the poor if concerned in providing or in any contract for the supply of any goods, materials, or provisions for the use of any workhouse or workhouses, or otherwise for the support or maintenance of the poor for their own profit, and all remedies for the recovery of such penalties, shall apply, and the same are hereby extended and made applicable to every commissioner, assistant commissioner, guardian, treasurer, master of a workhouse, or other officer to be appointed under the provisions of this act.

Commissioners to regulate the relief to able-bodied paupers and their families out of the workhouse.

52. And whereas a practice has obtained of giving relief to persons or their families, who at the time of applying for or receiving such relief were wholly or partially in the employment of individuals, and the relief of the able-bodied and their families is in many places administered in modes productive of evil in other respects; and whereas difficulty may arise in case any immediate and universal remedy is attempted to be applied in the matters aforesaid; be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by such rules, orders, or regulations as they may think fit, to declare to what extent and for what period the relief to be given to able-bodied persons or to their families in any particular parish or union may be administered out of the workhouse of such parish or union, by payments in money, or with food or clothing in kind, or partly in kind and partly in money, and in what proportions, to what persons or class of persons, at what times and places, on what conditions, and in what manner such out-door relief may be afforded; and all relief which shall be given by any overseer, guardian, or other person having the control or distribution of the funds of such parish or union, contrary to such orders or regulations, shall be, and same is hereby declared to be unlawful, and shall be disallowed in the accounts of the person giving the same, subject to the exceptions hereinafter mentioned: provided always, that in case the overseers or guardians of any parish or union to which such orders or regulations shall be addressed or directed shall, upon consideration of the special circumstances of such parish or union, or of any person or class of persons therein, be of opinion that the application and enforcing of such Relief contrary to their regulations to be disallowed.

But overseers may delay the operation of such regulations under special circumstances, and make report thereof to commissioners.

(a) The notices of contracts required by 55 Geo. III. c. 137, s. 7, is repealed, by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 67.

orders or regulations, or of any part thereof, at the time or in the manner prescribed by the said commissioners, would be inexpedient, it shall be lawful for such overseers or guardians to delay the operation of such orders or regulations, or of any part thereof, for any period not exceeding the space of thirty days, to be reckoned from the day of the receipt of such orders or regulations; and such overseers or guardians shall, twenty days at the least before the expiration of such thirty days, make a statement and report of such special circumstances to the said commissioners; and all relief which shall be given by such overseers or guardians, before an answer to such report shall have been returned by the said commissioners, if otherwise lawful, shall not be deemed unlawful, although the same shall have been given contrary to such orders or regulations, or any of them; but in case the said commissioners shall disapprove of such delay, or think that for the future such orders or regulations ought to come into operation, notwithstanding the special circumstances alleged by such overseer or guardian, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by a peremptory order, to direct that from and after a day to be fixed thereby such orders and regulations, or such parts or modifications thereof as they may think expedient and proper, shall be enforced and observed by such overseers and guardians; and if any allowance be made or relief given by such overseers or guardians after the said last-mentioned period, contrary to any such last-mentioned order, the amount of the relief or allowance so given shall be disallowed in the accounts of the party giving the same: provided also, that a quarterly report of all such cases as shall occur in any quarter shall, at the end of every such quarter, be laid by the said commissioners before one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state: provided also, that in case the overseers or guardians of any parish or union in which such orders or regulations shall be in force shall depart from them or any of them in any particular instance or instances of emergency, and shall within fifteen days after every such departure report the same and the grounds thereof to the said commissioners, and the said commissioners shall approve of such departure, or if the relief so given shall have been given in food, temporary lodging, or medicine, and shall have been so reported as aforesaid, then and in either of such cases the relief granted by such overseers or guardians, if otherwise lawful, shall not be unlawful or subject to be disallowed.

If commissioners disapprove of delay, they may fix a day from which all such relief shall be disallowed.

Cases of emergency.

53. And be it further enacted, that an act passed in the thirty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to amend so much of an Act made in the ninth year of the reign of King George the First, intituled 'An Act for amending the Laws relating to the Settlement, Employment, and Relief of the Poor,' as prevents the distributing occasional Relief to poor Persons in their own Houses, under certain circumstances and in certain cases;" and so much of an act made and passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to prevent poor Persons in Workhouses from embezzling certain Property provided for their use, to alter and amend so much of an act of the thirty-sixth year of his present Majesty as restrains Justices of the Peace from ordering Relief to poor Persons in certain cases for a longer period than one Month at a time, and for other purposes therein mentioned relating to the Poor," as extends the period for which occasional relief may be ordered by any justice, or justices to poor persons at their own homes; and so much of the said act made and passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws for the Relief of the Poor," as empowers any justice or justices to order relief in certain cases for a limited time, or in cases of urgent necessity, or in cases where parishes are under the management of guardians, governors, or directors appointed by special or local acts, or in cases where parishes have not a select vestry, shall be and the same are hereby repealed.

Repeal of 36 Geo. III. c. 23; 55 Geo. III. c. 137, ss. 3 & 4; and 59 Geo. III. c. 12, ss. 2 & 5, enabling justices, guardians, vestries, &c., ordering relief.

54. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, the ordering, giving and directing of all relief to the poor of any parish, which according to the provisions of any of the said recited acts, or of an act passed in the first and second years of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the better regulating of Vestries, and for the appointment of Auditors of Accounts in certain Parishes in England and Wales," or of this act or of any local acts, shall be under the government and control of any guardians of the poor, or of any select vestry, and whether forming part of any union or incorporation or not, (but subject in all cases to, and saving and excepting the powers of, the said commissioners appointed under this act,) shall appertain and belong

No relief to be in future given, except by board of guardians, &c. P. 971, n.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

exclusively to such guardians of the poor, or select vestry, according to the respective provisions of the acts under which such guardians or select vestry may have been or shall be appointed; and it shall not be lawful for any overseer of the poor to give any further or other relief or allowance from the poor-rate than such as shall be ordered by such guardians or select vestry, except in cases of sudden and urgent necessity, in which cases he is hereby required to give such temporary relief as each case shall require, in articles of absolute necessity, but not in money, and whether the applicant for relief be settled in the parish where he shall apply for relief or not: provided always, that in case such overseer shall refuse or neglect to give such necessary relief in any case of necessity to poor persons not settled nor usually residing in the parish to which such overseer belongs, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace to order the said overseer, by writing under his hand and seal, to give such temporary relief in articles of absolute necessity, as the case shall require, but not in money; and in case such overseer shall disobey such order, he shall, on conviction before two justices, forfeit any sum not exceeding five pounds which such justices shall order: provided always, that any justice of the peace shall be empowered to give a similar order for medical relief (only) to any parishioner, as well as out-parishioner, where any case of sudden and dangerous illness may require it; and any overseer shall be liable to the same penalties as aforesaid for disobeying such order; but it shall not be lawful for any justice or justices to order relief to any person or persons from the poor-rates of any such parish, except as hereinbefore provided.

Except in sudden and urgent necessity.

Any justice may give order for medical relief in dangerous illness.

Masters of workhouses and overseers to keep registers.

55. And be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the master of every workhouse, or such other paid officer of the parish or union as the said commissioners may direct, shall, on such day and in such form as the said commissioners shall appoint, take an account of, and register in a book to be provided at the expense of the parish or union to which such workhouse shall belong, and to be kept specially for that purpose, the name of every poor person who shall on such days be in the receipt of relief at or in such workhouse, together with such particulars respecting the families and settlement of every such poor person, and his and their relief and employment, as the said commissioners shall think fit; and in like manner, on such day as the said commissioners shall appoint, the overseer of the poor of every such parish shall register in a book, to be provided and kept as aforesaid, the name of every poor person then in the receipt of relief in such parish out of the workhouse, together with such particulars respecting the family and settlement of every such poor person, and his and her relief and employments, as the said commissioners shall think fit; and after such account shall have been so taken and registered as aforesaid a similar register and account shall be kept by the like persons respectively of all persons who shall receive relief at or in or out of a workhouse, when and as often as such relief shall be granted.

Poor persons liable for relief to wife or children.

56. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act that all relief given to or on account of the wife, or to or on account of any child or children under the age of sixteen, not being blind or deaf and dumb, shall be considered as given to the husband of such wife, or to the father of such child or children, as the case may be, and any relief given to or on account of any child or children under the age of sixteen of any widow, shall be considered as given to such widow: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall discharge the father and grandfather, mother and grandmother, of any poor child, from their liability to relieve and maintain such poor child in pursuance of the provisions of a certain act of parliament passed in the forty-third year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Elizabeth, intituled "An Act for the Relief of the Poor."

43 Eliz. c. 2.

Husband liable to maintain children of wife born before marriage. (a)

57. And be it further enacted, that every man who from and after the passing of this act shall marry a woman having a child or children at the time of such marriage, whether such child or children be legitimate or illegitimate, shall be liable to maintain such child or children as a part of his family, and shall be chargeable with all relief, or the cost price thereof, granted to or on account of such child or children, until such child or children shall respectively attain the age of sixteen, or until the death of the mother of such child or children; and such child or children shall, for the purposes of this act, be deemed a part of such husband's family accordingly.

(a) Not so by the common law. Tubb v. Harrison, 4 T. R. 118; Cooper v. Martin, 4 East, 76. The children are not removable to the husband's settlement, (ante, p. 429); but may be removed to their own (pp. 429, 430), if the removal does not effect the separation of parent and child, p. 432.

Such relief as commissioners may direct to be considered as loan. (a)

58. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, any relief, or the cost price thereof, which shall be given to or on account of any poor person above the age of twenty-one, or to his wife, or any part of his family under the age of sixteen, and which the said commissioners shall by any rule, order, or regulation declare or direct to be given or considered as given by way of loan, and whether any receipt for such relief, or engagement to repay the same, or the cost price thereof, or any part thereof, shall have been given or not by the person to or on account of whom the same shall have been so given, shall be considered and the same is hereby declared to be a loan to such poor person.

Power to justices to attach wages in hands of master or employer.

59. And be it further enacted, that in all cases where any relief shall have been given by way of loan, or where any relief, or the cost price thereof, shall be treated as a loan, under the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners, or the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for any justice, upon the application of the overseers or guardians of the parish or union providing such relief, and upon proof of the same having been given to or on account of any such person, his wife or family, as aforesaid, and of the same, or any part thereof, still remaining due, to issue a summons, requiring such person, as well as the master or employer of such person, or some person on his behalf, to appear before any two justices, at a time and place to be named in such summons, to show cause why any wages due, or which may from time to time become due, from such master or employer, should not be paid over, in whole or in part, to such overseers or guardians; and if no sufficient cause be shown to the contrary, or if such person, or some one on his behalf, shall not appear on the return of such summons, then the said justices shall, by order under their hands, direct the master or employer for the time being, from whom any wages shall be due or from time to time become due or payable to such poor person, to pay, either in one sum, or by such weekly or other instalments as the said justices shall in their discretion think fit, taking into consideration the circumstances of such poor person and his family, out of such wages, to such overseers or guardians, the amount of such relief, or so much thereof as shall from time to time be due or unpaid; and the payment to and receipt of any such overseer or guardian shall be a good discharge to such master or employer for so much of any such wages as shall be so paid by virtue of any such order; and if any such master or employer shall refuse or neglect to pay to the overseer or guardian producing any such order the money thereby directed to be paid, according to the terms of such order, and at the periods thereby fixed for such payment, the same may be levied and recovered, and the payment thereof from time to time enforced against such master or employer, in such and the like manner as penalties and forfeitures are recoverable under this act.

Mode of proceeding against masters for recovery thereof.

Repeal of so much of 43 Geo. III. c. 47, as requires relief to be given to wives and families of substitutes, hired men, or volunteers of militia.

60. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act so much of an act passed in the forty-third year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for consolidating and amending the several Laws for providing Relief for the Families of Militiamen in England when called out into actual Service," as directs overseers of the poor, by order of some one justice of the peace, to pay to the family of any person serving or enrolled as a balloted man, substitute, hired man, or volunteer in the militia of England, a weekly allowance, or as authorises any justice or justices to order such allowance to be paid under the rules and conditions in the said recited act provided, or as in any way discharges such balloted man, substitute, hired man, or volunteer from the liability to maintain or repay the costs of maintenance of his family or any part thereof, or as prevents such families or any part thereof from being removable to their place of legal settlement, or sent to any workhouse, by reason of their receiving any allowance or being chargeable, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

Justices to certify that rules of commissioners have been complied with in binding poor children apprentices. (b)

61. And be it further enacted, that from and after the period at which any

(a) Relief given to the wife of a person beyond the seas, or in prison, or confined in a lunatic asylum, subject to the same rules as if she was a widow, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 25; and by s. 26, widows in certain cases may be relieved, although they are not resident in the union.

(b) The commissioners may prescribe the duties of masters of apprentices, and the terms and conditions of the indenture, and a penalty of 20*l.* is attached to the wilful neglect of them, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 12. All statutes compelling persons to receive apprentices are repealed, s. 13.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners shall come into operation for the binding of poor children apprentices, in addition to such assent or consent, order or allowance of justices, as are now required by law, such justices or any one justice are and is hereby authorised and required to examine and ascertain whether the rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners then in force for the binding of poor children apprentices have been complied with, and to certify the same at the foot of every such contract or indenture, and of the counterpart thereof, in such form and manner as the said commissioners by such rules, orders, or regulations may direct, and until so certified no such contract or indenture of apprenticeship shall be valid: provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act, or in any rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners, shall affect the jurisdiction of any justices of the peace over any master or apprentice during the period of apprenticeship.

Justice's power reserved as between master and apprentice.

Power to owners and rate-payers to raise money on security of rates for purposes of emigration. (a)

62. And be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the rate-payers in any parish, and such of the owners of property therein as shall in manner hereinbefore mentioned have required their names to be entered in the rate books of such parishes respectively as entitled to vote as owners, assembled at a meeting to be duly convened and held for the purpose, after public notice of the time and place of holding such meeting, and the purpose for which the same is intended to be held, shall have been given in like manner as notices of vestry meetings are published and given, to direct that such sum or sums of money, not exceeding half the average yearly rate for the three preceding years, as the said owners and rate-payers so assembled at such meeting may think proper, shall be raised or borrowed as a fund, or in aid of any fund or contribution for defraying the expenses of the emigration of poor persons having settlements in such parish, and willing to emigrate, to be paid out of or charged upon the rates raised or to be raised for the relief of the poor in such parish, and to be applied under and according to such rules, orders, and regulations as the said commissioners shall in that behalf direct: provided always, that no such direction for raising money for such purpose as aforesaid shall have any force or effect unless and until confirmed by the said commissioners, and that the time to be limited for the repayment of any sum so charged on such rates as aforesaid shall in no case exceed the period of five years from the time of borrowing the same: provided also, that all sums of money so raised as last hereinbefore mentioned, and advanced by way of loan, for the purposes of emigration, or such proportion thereof as the said commissioners shall by any rule, order, or regulation from time to time direct, shall be recoverable against any such person, being above the age of twenty-one years, who or whose family, or any part thereof, having consented to emigrate, shall refuse to emigrate after such expenses shall have been so incurred, or having emigrated shall return, in such and the like manner as is hereinbefore provided with respect to relief, or the cost price of relief, given or considered to be given by way of loan to any person, his wife or family.

Overseers may apply to commissioners of exchequer bills under act 57 Geo. III. c. 34, for advance of money.

63. And be it further enacted, that where it shall be lawful, under the provisions of any of the herein recited acts, or of any local act, or of this act, to raise or borrow any sum or sums of money for the purpose of purchasing, building, altering, or enlarging any workhouse or workhouses in any parish or union, or for purchasing land whereon to build the same, or for defraying the expenses of the emigration of poor persons having settlements in any parish, and being willing to emigrate, it shall be lawful for the overseers or guardians of such parish or union, with the consent of the said commissioners, to be testified under their hands and seal, to make application for an advance of any sum necessary for any such purposes to the commissioners appointed under an act made and passed in the fifty-seventh year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to authorise the Issue of Exchequer Bills, and the Advance of Money out of the Consolidated Fund, to a limited Amount, for the carrying on of Public Works and Fisheries in the United Kingdom, and Employment of the Poor in Great Britain, in manner therein mentioned," and of any act or acts passed for amending or continuing the same; and the said Exchequer Bill Loan Commissioners are hereby empowered to make such advances, upon any such application as aforesaid, upon the security of the rates for the relief of the poor in such parish or union, and without requiring any further or other security than a charge on such rates.

(a) The guardians shall apply all money raised or borrowed for the purposes of emigration, subject to the conditions of this act, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 29.

64. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no settlement shall be acquired by hiring and service, or by residence under the same, or by serving an office.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

65. And be it further enacted, that no person under any contract of hiring and service not completed at the time of the passing of this act shall acquire, or be deemed or adjudged to have acquired, any settlement by reason of such hiring and service, or of any residence under the same, (p. 476).

Repeal of settlement by hiring and service.

No settlement incomplete under hiring and service to be completed.

66. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no settlement shall be acquired or completed by occupying a tenement, unless the person occupying the same shall have been assessed to the poor-rate, and shall have paid the same, in respect of such tenement, for one year.

No settlement acquired without paying poor-rate;

67. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no settlement shall be acquired by being apprenticed in the sea service, or to a householder exercising the trade of the seas as a fisherman or otherwise, nor by any person now being such an apprentice in respect of such apprenticeship.

nor by being apprenticed in the sea service;

68. And be it further enacted, that no person shall be deemed, adjudged, or taken to retain any settlement, gained by virtue of any possession of any estate or interest in any parish, for any longer or further time than such person shall inhabit within ten miles thereof; and in case such person shall cease to inhabit within such distance, and thereafter become chargeable, such person shall be liable to be removed to the parish wherein, previously to such inhabitancy, he may have been legally settled, or in case he may have subsequently to such inhabitancy gained a legal settlement in some other parish, then to such other parish.

nor by possession longer than the person shall inhabit within ten miles thereof.

69. And be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act so much of any act or acts of parliament as enables any single woman to charge any person with having gotten her with any child of which she shall then be pregnant, or as renders any person so charged liable to be apprehended or committed, or required to give security, on any such charge, or as enables the mother of any bastard child or children to charge or affiliate any such child or children on any person as the reputed or putative father thereof, or as enables any overseer or guardian to charge or make complaint against any person as

Repeal of acts relating to liability and punishment of putative father, and punishment of mother of illegitimate children. (a)

(a) By the 2 & 3 Vic. c. 85, no application can be made to the quarter sessions, but when any bastard born since 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, shall be chargeable, the guardians, and if there are none, the overseers, may apply to the justices of petty sessions for an order on putative father to reimburse the parish the expense of maintenance; and such justices have all the powers given by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 7. By s. 3, If the person charged as the putative father declares that he wishes the case to be heard at the quarter sessions, he may do so, on entering into recognizances to pay the costs, and then the justices of petty sessions can proceed no further. But no appeal is given by this act; the order, therefore, at the petty sessions will be final. Reg. v. J. W. York, 1 Q. B. 325.

Where the overseers made an application for an order, which the putative father removed to the quarter sessions, but the recorder was of opinion that they were not the proper parties to apply for it, yet they are liable for the costs of the application, and it is incumbent on their part to pay them. Reg. v. Recorder of Exeter, 13 L. J. 7, M. C.

The petty sessions have no power to give costs.

But now by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, all powers for obtaining an order on the putative father shall cease, except as therein provided; and by the 2nd section the putative father may be summoned to the petty sessions on application by the mother; and by the 3rd section the justices may make an order, the evidence of the mother being corroborated, for the payment of a sum not exceeding 5*s.* a-week for six weeks after the birth of the child, and 2*s.* 6*d.* afterwards, with a power of distress and commitment. An appeal is given by the 4th section. The money is to be paid to the mother, unless she is in gaol, &c., or chargeable to the parish. The order ceases when the child is thirteen years of age, and after the marriage of the mother or death of the child, sec. 5. The mother is punishable as a vagrant for neglect of her child, sec. 6. The order may be obtained, although the mother dies, sec. 7. Any officer of a union or parish, by threat or promise, endeavouring to induce any person to contract a marriage, is guilty of a misdemeanor, sec. 8. Existing orders to continue in force till 1st January, 1849, sec. 9. A justice of the peace for two counties may act in one county for that part of the union which is in the other, sec. 10. Returns of applications and orders to be made, sec. 11.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

such reputed or putative father, and to require him to be charged with or contribute to the expenses attending the birth, sustentation, or maintenance of any such child or children, or to be imprisoned or otherwise punished for not contributing thereto, or as in any way renders such reputed or putative father liable to punishment or contribution as such, or as enables churchwardens and overseers, by the order of any two justices of the peace, confirmed by the sessions, to take, seize, and dispose of the goods and chattels, or to receive the annual rents or profits of the lands of any putative father of bastard children, and so much of any such act or acts as renders an unmarried woman with child liable as such to be summoned, examined, or removed, or as renders the mother of any bastard liable as such to be imprisoned or otherwise punished, shall, so far as respects any child which shall be likely to be born, or shall be born a bastard, after the passing of this act, or the mother or putative father of such child, be and the same is hereby repealed.

Securities and recognizances for indemnity of parishes against children likely to be born bastards to be null and void.

70. And be it further enacted, that every security given or recognizance entered into by any person or persons, or his or their surety, before the passing of this act, to indemnify any parish or place as to any child or children likely to be born a bastard or bastards, whereof any single woman shall be pregnant at the time of the passing of this act, or to abide and perform such order or orders as might have been made touching such child or children, pursuant to an act made and passed in the eighteenth year of the reign of her said late Majesty Queen Elizabeth, concerning bastards begotten and born out of lawful matrimony, shall be and the same are hereby declared null and void; and every person who shall at the time of the passing of this act be in custody upon the commitment of any justice or justices for not having given such security or entered into such recognizance, shall be discharged upon the application of such person by any one of the visiting justices of the gaol in which such person shall be in custody under any such commitment.

Persons in custody for not giving indemnity to be discharged.

Mother of illegitimate children bound to maintain the same.

71. And be it further enacted that every child, which shall be born a bastard after the passing of this act, shall have and follow the settlement of the mother of such child, until such child shall attain the age of sixteen, or shall acquire a settlement in its own right; and such mother, so long as she shall be unmarried or a widow, shall be bound to maintain such child as a part of her family, until such child shall attain the age of sixteen; and all relief granted to such child while under the age of sixteen shall be considered as granted to such mother; provided always, that such liability of such mother as aforesaid shall cease on the marriage of such child, if a female.

Court of quarter sessions, on application of overseers, &c. may make an order on putative father of child for its support. See p. 1261, n.

72. And be it enacted, that when any child shall hereafter be born a bastard, and shall, by reason of the inability of the mother of such child to provide for its maintenance, become chargeable to any parish, the overseers or guardians of such parish, or the guardians of any union in which such parish may be situate, may, if they think proper, after diligent inquiry as to the father of such child, apply to the next general quarter sessions of the peace within the jurisdiction of which such parish or union shall be situate, after such child shall have become chargeable, for an order upon the person whom they shall charge with being the putative father of such child, to reimburse such parish or union for its maintenance and support; and the court, to which such application shall be made shall proceed to hear evidence thereon, and if it shall be satisfied, after hearing both parties, that the person so charged is really and in truth the father of such child, it shall make such order upon such person in that respect as to such court shall appear to be just and reasonable under all the circumstances of the case: provided always, that no such order shall be made unless the evidence of the mother of such bastard child shall be corroborated in some material particular (a) by other testimony to the satisfaction of such court; provided also, that such order shall in no case exceed the actual expense incurred or to be incurred for the maintenance and support of such bastard child while so chargeable, and shall continue in force only until such child shall attain the age of seven years, if he shall so long live: provided also, that no part of the moneys paid by such putative father, in pursuance of such order, shall at any time be paid to the mother of such bastard child, nor in any way be applied to the maintenance and support of such mother.

Moneys paid not applicable to support of mother.

No application to be heard without fourteen days' previous notice.

73. And be it enacted, that no such application shall be heard at such sessions unless fourteen days' notice shall have been given under the hands of such overseers or guardians to the person intended to be charged with being the father of such child of such intended application; and in case there shall not, previously to such sessions, have been sufficient time to give such notice, the hearing of such application shall be deferred to the next ensuing general quarter sessions: provided always, that whenever such application shall be heard, the costs of the maintenance of such bastard child shall, in case the court shall think fit to make an order thereon, be calculated from the birth of such bastard child, if such birth shall have taken place within six calendar months previous to such application being heard; but if such birth shall have taken place more than six calendar months previously to such application being heard, then from the day of the commencement of six calendar months next preceding the hearing of such application: provided also, that if upon the hearing of such application the court shall not think fit to make any order thereon, it shall order and direct that the full costs (a) and charges incurred by the person so intended to be charged in resisting such application shall be paid by such overseers or guardians.

(a) This must appear on the order. Reg. v. Read, 9 A. & E. 619.

If application be heard, costs may be calculated from birth of bastard child, if within six months.

74. And be it enacted, that if such person so intended to be charged shall not appear by himself or his attorney at the time when such application shall come on to be heard before such court, according to such notice, such court shall nevertheless proceed to hear the same, unless such overseers or guardians shall produce an agreement under the hand of such person to abide by such order as such court shall make thereon, without the hearing of evidence by such court: provided always, that such court may, notwithstanding such agreement, require that evidence shall be given in support of such application, if it thinks fit, before such order is made.

In the event of party charged not appearing, court may nevertheless enter into the case.

75. And be it enacted, that whenever such overseers or guardians shall have determined to make such application as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for one justice of the peace, at the request of such overseers or guardians, to summon the person so intended to be charged with being the father of such bastard child to appear before him; and if such justice shall be satisfied that such person has any intention to abscond or keep out of the way, in order to avoid the consequences of such application, such justice may require such person to enter into a recognizance to appear and answer thereto, and in case such person shall refuse or neglect to enter into such recognizance, may commit such person to the gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or division, within which such parish shall be situate, until he shall enter into such recognizance, or until such application shall be heard.

Party summoned, if suspected of intending to abscond, may be required to enter into a recognizance for his appearance.

76. And be it enacted, that if at any time after the expiration of one calendar month after an order shall have been made in pursuance of such application it shall appear to one justice, upon the oath of any one of such overseers or guardians, that the payments directed to be made by such order have not been made according thereto, and are in arrear, it shall be lawful for such justice or any other justice, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause such putative father of such bastard child to be brought before two justices of the peace; and in case such putative father shall refuse or neglect to make payment of such sum of money as shall appear to such justices to be due from him under such order, together with the costs of apprehension, it shall be lawful for such or any two justices to proceed to recover such sum and costs by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such putative father, or by attaching the wages of such putative father for the recovery of such sum and costs, in the same manner as wages may be attached under the provisions of this act.

When payments get into arrear, putative father may be proceeded against by distress or attachment of wages.

77. And be it further enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any person hereafter to be appointed in any parish or union to any office concerned in the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, or for any person who after the twenty-fifth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, shall fill any such office, to furnish or supply, for his own profit or on his own account, any goods, materials, or provisions ordered to be given in parochial relief, or to furnish or supply any goods, materials, or provisions for or in respect of the money ordered to be given in parochial relief, to any person in such parish or union; and every person holding such office shall, on conviction before any two justices of the peace, be subject to a penalty of five pounds for such offence, one-half of which penalty shall be paid to the informer, and the other half in aid of the poor-rates of such parish or union.

No person employed in administration of poor laws to furnish, for his own profit, goods or provisions given in parochial relief, p. 399.

(a) This is still imperative on the court in those cases where the putative father elects to have the case heard at the quarter sessions. Reg. v. Recorder of Exeter, p. 1202 n.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

Sums payable under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 7, by relations of poor persons, how recoverable.

78. And be it further enacted, that all sums of money which shall be assessed by any justices of the peace on the father, grandfather, mother, grandmother, child, or children of any poor person, for the relief or maintenance of such poor person, under or by virtue of the provisions of a certain act passed in the forty-third year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Elizabeth, intituled "An Act for the Relief of the Poor," or of any act to amend the same, or of this act, and all penalties and forfeitures to which any person so assessed by such justices for such relief or maintenance, shall be liable for any default in paying the same by virtue of the provisions of any of the said recited acts or of this act, shall be recoverable against every person so assessed or charged, in like manner as penalties and forfeitures are recoverable under the provisions of this act.

No person to be removed till after notice of his being chargeable has been sent to the parish to which order of removal is directed.

Such person may be removed if order submitted to;

but not in case of appeal.

79. And be it further enacted, that from and after the first day of November, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, no poor person shall be removed or removable, under any order of removal from any parish or workhouse, by reason of his being chargeable to or relieved therein, until twenty-one days after a notice in writing of his being so chargeable or relieved, accompanied by a copy or counterpart of the order of removal of such person, and by a copy of the examination upon which such order was made, shall have been sent, by post or otherwise, by the overseers or guardians of the parish obtaining such order, or any three or more of such guardians, to the overseers of the parish to whom such order shall be directed: provided always, that if such overseers or guardians as last aforesaid, or any three or more of such guardians, shall by writing under their hands agree to submit to such order, and to receive such poor person, it shall be lawful to remove such poor person according to the tenor of such order, although the said period of twenty-one days may not have elapsed: provided also, that if notice of appeal against such order of removal shall be received by the overseers or guardians of the parish from which such poor person is directed in such order to be removed within the said period of twenty-one days, it shall not be lawful to remove such poor person until after the time for prosecuting such appeal shall have expired, or, in case such appeal shall be duly prosecuted, until after the final determination of such appeal.

In case of appeal the overseers to have access to such poor person touching his settlement.

80. And be it enacted, that the overseers or guardians of the parish giving such notice of appeal, or their attorney, or any other person authorised by them, shall, until such appeal shall have been heard and decided, at all proper times have free access to such poor person for the purpose of examining him touching his settlement; and in case it shall be necessary for the more effectual examination of such person that he should be taken out of the removing parish, such overseers or guardians shall be permitted to remove him therefrom for the time which may be necessary for that purpose: provided always, that the expense of such removal, and of his maintenance during the same, shall be defrayed by the appellant parish.

Grounds of appeal to be stated in notice.

81. And be it further enacted, that after the first day of November, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, in every case where notice of appeal against such order shall be given, the overseers or guardians of the parish appealing against such order, or any three or more of such guardians, shall with such notice, or (a) fourteen days at least before the first day of the sessions at which such appeal is intended to be tried, send or deliver to the overseers of the respondent parish a statement in writing under their hands of the grounds of such appeal; and it shall not be lawful for the overseers of such appellant parish to be heard in support of such appeal, unless such notice and statement shall have been so given as aforesaid: provided always, that it shall not be lawful for the respondent or appellant parish, on the hearing of any appeal, to go into or give evidence of any other grounds of removal, or of appeal against any order of removal, than those set forth in such respective order, examination, or statement as aforesaid.

Parish losing appeal to pay such costs as court may direct.

82. And be it further enacted, that upon every such appeal the court before whom the same shall be brought shall and may, if they think fit, order and direct the parish against which the same shall be decided to pay to the other such costs and charges as may to such court appear just and reasonable, and shall certify the amount thereof; and in case the overseers of the poor of the parish liable to pay the same, shall upon demand, and upon the production of such certificate, refuse or neglect to pay the same, the amount thereof may be recovered from such overseer in the same manner as any penalties or forfeitures are by this act recoverable.

(a) Exclusive of the day of service and the first day of the sessions, p. 1148.

Party making frivolous or vexatious statement to pay costs.

83. And be it further enacted, that if either of the parties shall have included in the order or statement sent as hereinbefore directed any grounds of removal or of appeal, which shall in the opinion of the justices determining the appeal be frivolous and vexatious, such party shall be liable, at the discretion of the said justices, to pay the whole or any part of the costs incurred by the other party in disputing any such grounds, such costs to be recovered in the manner hereinbefore directed as to the other costs incurred by reason of such appeal.

Costs of relief to be paid by parish to which poor persons belong.

84. And be it further enacted, that the parish to which any poor person whose settlement shall be in question at the time of granting relief shall be admitted or finally adjudged to belong, shall be chargeable with and liable to pay the cost and expense of the relief and maintenance of such poor person, and such cost and expense may be recovered against such parish in the same manner as any penalties or forfeitures are by this act recoverable: provided always, that such parish, if not the parish granting such relief, shall pay to the parish by which such relief shall be granted the cost and expense of such relief and maintenance from such time only as notice of such poor person having become chargeable shall have been sent by such relieving parish to the parish to which such poor person shall be so admitted or finally adjudged to belong: provided always, that no charges or expenses of relief or maintenance shall be recoverable under a suspended order of removal, unless notice of such order of removal, with a copy of the same, and of the examination upon which such order was made, shall have been given within ten days of such order being made to the overseers of the poor of the parish to whom such order is directed.

Relief under suspended order not to be recoverable unless notice sent of such order.

Power to call for and publish accounts of trust and charity estates.

85. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, and they are hereby empowered from time to time, as they may think fit, to require from all persons in whom any freehold, copyhold, or leasehold estates, or any other property or funds belonging to any parish, and held in trust for or applicable to the relief of the poor, or which may be applied in diminution of the poor-rate of such parish, shall be vested, or who shall be in the receipt of the rents, profits, or income of any such estate, property, or funds, a true and detailed account in writing of the place where such estate may be situate, or in what mode or on what security such other property or funds may be invested, with such details of the rents, profits, and income thereof, and of the appropriation of the same, and of all such other particulars relating thereto, as the said commissioners may direct and require; and such statement or a true copy thereof shall, under the regulations of the said commissioners, be open for the inspection of the owners of property and rate-payers in such parish: provided always, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall apply to any funds raised from time to time by the voluntary contributions of the inhabitants of any parish.

Advertisements, &c., not liable to stamp duty.

86. And be it further enacted, that no advertisement inserted by or under the direction of the said commissioners in the London Gazette or any newspaper, for the purpose of carrying into effect any provisions of this act, nor any mortgage, bond, instrument, or any assignment thereof, given by way of security in pursuance of the rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners, and conformable thereto, nor any contract or agreement, or appointment of any officer, made or entered into in pursuance of such rules, orders, or regulations, and conformable thereto, nor any other instrument made in pursuance of this act, nor the appointment of any paid officer engaged in the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, or in the management or collection of the poor-rate, shall be charged or chargeable with any stamp duty whatever.

Bonds and securities made pursuant to 22 Geo. III. c. 83, and assignments thereof, exempted from stamp duty.

87. And whereas by an act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," the visitor and guardian of the poor of any parish, township, or place, which shall adopt the provisions of the said recited act, are authorised thereby to borrow money at interest for the purposes mentioned in the said act, and to secure such money by a charge upon the poor's rates of such parish, township, or place, in sums not exceeding fifty pounds each, in a certain form contained in the schedule to the said act, or to that or to the like effect, and which security is directed and allowed to be assigned by indorsement on the back thereof in a certain form also contained in the said schedule, or to that or the like effect: and whereas doubts have arisen touching the liability of such securites as aforesaid, and the assignments or transfers thereof to stamp duty, and it is expedient to remove the same; be it therefore enacted and declared, that no bond or other security at any time heretofore or to be at any time hereafter made or entered into in pursuance of the said recited act, nor any assignment or transfer thereof, shall be charged or chargeable with, or be deemed to be or to have been subject or liable to any stamp duty whatsoever; anything in any act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

Letters to and from board of commissioners to be free of postage, if sent conformable hereto.

88. And be it further enacted, that the said commissioners shall and may receive and send by the general post from and to places within the United Kingdom, all letters and packets relating solely and exclusively to the execution of this act free from the duty of postage, provided that such letters and packets as shall be sent to the said commissioners be directed to the "Poor Law Commissioners," at their office in London, and that all such letters and packets as shall be sent by the said commissioners shall be in covers, with the words "Office of Poor Law Commissioners, pursuant to Act of Parliament passed in the fifth year of the reign of his Majesty King William the Fourth," printed on the same, and be signed on the outside thereof, under such words, with the name of such person as the said commissioners, with the consent of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, or any three or more of them, shall authorise and appoint, in his own handwriting, (such name to be from time to time transmitted to the secretaries of the General Post-office in London and Dublin,) and be sealed with the seal of the said commissioners, and under such other regulations and restrictions as the said Lords Commissioners, or any three or more of them, shall think proper and direct: and the person so to be authorised is hereby strictly forbidden so to subscribe or seal any letter or packet whatever, except such only concerning which he shall receive the special direction of his superior officer, or which he shall himself know to relate solely and exclusively to the execution of this act; and if the person so to be authorised, or any other person, shall send or cause or permit to be sent under any such cover, any letter, paper, or writing, or any inclosure, other than what shall relate to the execution of this act, every person so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds, and be dismissed from his office; one moiety of the said penalty to the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of the person who shall inform or sue for the same, to be sued for and recovered in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster for offences committed in England, and in any of his Majesty's courts of record in Dublin for offences committed in Ireland, and before the sheriff or stewartry court of the shire or stewartry within which the party offending shall reside, or the offence shall be committed, for offences committed in Scotland; and if any letter, paper, or writing, or other inclosure, shall be sent under cover to the said commissioners, the same not relating solely and exclusively to the execution of this act, they are hereby strictly required and enjoined to transmit the same forthwith to the secretary of the Post-office in London, with the covers under which the same shall be sent, in order that the contents thereof may be charged with the full rates of postage.

Letters sent under cover not relating solely to the business of the act to be transmitted to post office to be charged.

Payments contrary to this act to be disallowed. (a)

89. And be it further enacted, that all payments, charges, and allowances made by any overseer or guardian, and charged upon the rates for the relief of the poor, contrary to the provisions of this act, or at variance with any rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners made under the authority of this act, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be illegal, any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding; and every justice of the peace is hereby required to disallow as illegal and unfounded all payments, charges, or allowances contrary to the provisions of this act, or to any such rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners, which shall be contained in any account of any overseer of the poor or guardian which shall be presented for the purpose of being passed or allowed: provided always, that no allowance by any justice shall exonerate or discharge such overseer or guardian from any penalty or legal proceeding to which he may have rendered himself liable by having acted contrary to the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners, or to the provisions of this act.

Service of summons.

90. And be it further enacted, that the leaving of any summons authorised to be issued by any commissioner, assistant commissioner, or justice of the peace, under this act, at the usual or last known place of abode of the party to whom such summons shall be directed, shall in every case be deemed good and sufficient service of such summons.

(a) The costs of certain civil and criminal proceedings may be paid out of the poor rates (7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 5), as well as the expenses of the jury lists and perambulating boundaries, s. 60.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

91. And be it further enacted, that so much of an act made and passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to repeal the Duties payable in respect of the Spirits distilled in England, and of Licences for distilling, rectifying, or compounding such Spirits, and for the Sale of Spirits, and to impose other Duties in lieu thereof, and to provide other Regulations for the Collection of the said Duties, and for the Sale of Spirits, and for the Warehousing of such Spirits without payment of Duty for Exportation," as provides that if any master or officer of any workhouse shall sell, use, lend, or give away, or knowingly permit or suffer any spirits to be sold, used, lent, or given away, in any such workhouse, or brought into the same, other than and except such spirits as shall be prescribed or given by the prescription and direction of a physician, surgeon, or apothecary, and to be supplied in pursuance of such prescriptions from the shop of some apothecary, every such master or such other officer shall for every such offence forfeit one hundred pounds, and for the second like offence lose his office; and so much of the said last-mentioned act as provides that no person shall carry or bring, or attempt to endeavour to carry or bring, any spirits, except to be used in the way of medicine, into any workhouse, under the pain of being imprisoned for every such offence for any time not exceeding three months; and also so much of the said last-mentioned act as provides that every master and chief officer of every workhouse shall procure one or more copy or copies of the clauses in the said act mentioned to be printed or fairly written and hung up in one of the most public places in the workhouse, and renew the same from time to time, so that it may be always kept fair and legible, on pain of forfeiting the sum of ten pounds for every wilful default; or as enables any justice of the peace to demand a sight of such copy so hung up in some public place, to convict such master or officer of such default; shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

Repeal of so much of 6 Geo. IV. c. 80, as relates to prohibition of spirituous liquors in workhouses.

92. And be it further enacted, that if any person shall carry, bring, or introduce, or attempt or endeavour to carry, bring, or introduce, into any workhouse now or hereafter to be established, any spirituous or fermented liquors, without the order in writing of the master of such workhouse, it shall be lawful for the master of such workhouse, or any officer of the same acting under his direction, to apprehend or cause to be apprehended such offender, and to carry him or her before a justice of the peace, who is hereby empowered to hear and determine such offence in a summary way; and upon conviction thereof the party so offending shall forfeit and pay any sum of money not exceeding ten pounds for every such offence, as such justice may direct; and in default of payment of the penalty hereby imposed such justice may and is hereby required to commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the district in which such workhouse shall be situate, for any space of time not exceeding two calendar months, unless such penalty shall be sooner paid.

Penalty on persons introducing spirituous liquors into workhouses.

93. And be it further enacted, that if any master of a workhouse shall order any spirituous or fermented liquor to be carried, brought, or introduced into any workhouse, except for the domestic use of himself or of any officer of the said workhouse, or their respective families, or except by and under the written authority of the surgeon of such workhouse, or of any justice visiting the same, or of the guardians of such workhouse, or in conformity with any rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners; or if any such master or any other officer of any workhouse shall carry, bring, or introduce into such workhouse, or sell, use, lend, or give away therein, or knowingly permit or suffer to be carried, brought, or introduced, or sold, used, lent, or given away therein, any spirituous or fermented liquor, contrary to the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners; or shall punish with any corporal punishment any adult person in such workhouse, or confine any such person for any offence or misbehaviour for any longer space of time than twenty-four hours, or such further space of time as may be necessary in order to have such person carried before a justice of the peace; or shall in any way abuse or ill-treat, or be guilty of any other misbehaviour, or otherwise misconduct himself towards or with respect to any poor person in such workhouse; every such master or officer of a workhouse so offending shall for every such offence, upon the complaint of the overseers or guardians of the parish or union to which such workhouse shall belong, or of any such poor person, and upon conviction

Penalty on masters of workhouses allowing use of spirituous liquors, or ill-treating poor persons, or misconducting himself.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

of such offence before any two justices, forfeit and pay such sum of money, not being more than twenty pounds, as such justices may direct; and in default of payment of the penalty hereby imposed, such justices may and are hereby required to commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the district in which such parish shall be situate for any space of time not exceeding six calendar months, unless such penalty shall be sooner paid: provided always, that if at the time when any such master or officer of a workhouse shall be so convicted of any such offence, there shall be due to him any sum of money or salary in respect of his employment as such master or officer of such workhouse, or upon any balance of account from the overseers or guardians of the parish or union to which such workhouse shall belong, it shall be lawful for such justices, upon the application of such overseers or guardians, by order in writing under their hand, to direct that such* of money, salary, or balance, so far as the same shall extend, or a sufficient part thereof, shall be retained and applied for the use of such parish or union by such overseer or guardians, in payment or part payment of any such penalty, and such order shall be a good and valid discharge to such overseers or guardians for so much money as may by such order be directed to be so retained and applied against the claim or demand of the master or other officer of such workhouse in respect of any such sum of money, salary, or balance.

Power for justices to order salaries, &c. to be stopped, and applied towards payment of penalties.

* sic.

Masters to hang up copies of two preceding clauses in workhouse.

94. And be it further enacted, that the master of every workhouse shall cause one or more copy or copies of the two preceding clauses to be printed or fairly written, and hung up in one of the most public places in such workhouse, and renew the same from time to time, so that it always be kept fair and legible, on pain of forfeiting the sum of ten pounds for every wilful default.

Penalties on overseers and other officers disobeying guardians.

95. And be it further enacted, that in case any overseer, assistant overseer, master of a workhouse, or other officer of any parish or union, shall wilfully disobey the legal and reasonable order of such justices and guardians in carrying the rules, orders, and regulations of the said commissioners or assistant commissioners, or the provisions of this act, into execution, every such offender shall, upon conviction before any two justices, forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding five pounds.

No overseer to be prosecuted for not executing illegal orders of justices.

96. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that no overseer shall from henceforth be liable to any prosecution or penalty for not carrying into execution any illegal order of such justices or guardians, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding.

Penalty on overseers, &c. purloining, &c. goods, &c. 20*l.* and treble the value of goods purloined. p. 397.

97. And be it further enacted, that if any overseer, assistant overseer, master of a workhouse, or other paid officer, or any other person employed by or under the authority of the said guardians, shall purloin, embezzle, or wilfully waste or misapply any of the moneys, goods, or chattels belonging to any parish or union, every such offender shall, besides and in addition to such pains and penalties as such person so offending shall, independently of this act, be liable to, upon conviction before any two justices, forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, and also treble the amount or value of such money, goods, or chattels so purloined, embezzled, wasted, or misapplied; and every person so convicted shall be for ever thereafter incapable of serving any office under the provisions of this or any other act in relation to the relief of the poor.

Penalty on persons wilfully disobeying rules, orders, and regulations.

98. And be it further enacted, that in case any person shall wilfully neglect or disobey any of the rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners or assistant commissioners, or be guilty of any contempt of the said commissioners sitting as a board, such person shall, upon conviction before any two justices, forfeit and pay for the first offence any sum not exceeding five pounds, for the second offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds nor less than five pounds, and in the event of such person being convicted a third time, such third and every subsequent offence shall be deemed a misdemeanour, and such offender shall be liable to be indicted for the same offence, and shall on conviction pay such fine, not being less than twenty pounds, and suffer such imprisonment, with or without hard labour, as may be awarded against him by the court, by or before which he shall be tried and convicted.

Forfeitures, costs, and charges may be levied by distress and sale.

99. And be it further enacted, that all penalties and forfeitures by this act inflicted or authorised to be imposed for any offence against the same, shall, upon proof and conviction of the offences respectively before any two justices, either by the confession of the party offending, or by the oath of any credible witness or witnesses, (which oath such justices are in every case hereby fully authorised to administer,) or upon order made as aforesaid, be levied, together with the costs attending the information, summons, and conviction, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or person liable or ordered to pay the same respectively, by warrant under the hands of the justices before whom the party may have been convicted, or, on proof of such conviction, by a warrant under the hands of any two justices acting for the county, riding, or division (which warrant such justices are hereby empowered and required to grant); and the overplus (if any), after such penalties and forfeitures, and the charges of such distress and sale, are deducted, shall be returned, upon demand, unto the owner or owners of such goods and chattels; and in case such fines, penalties, and forfeitures shall not be forthwith paid upon conviction, then it shall be lawful for such justices as aforesaid to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be detained and kept in safe custody until return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress, unless the offender or offenders shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justices as aforesaid, for his or their appearance before such justices on such day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress, such day or days not being more than seven days from the time of taking any such security, and which security the said justices as aforesaid are hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise; but if upon the return of such warrant it shall appear that no sufficient distress can be had thereupon, then it shall be lawful for any such justices as aforesaid, as the case may be, and they are hereby authorised and required, by warrant or warrants under their hands, to cause such offender or offenders to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, or place where the offender shall be or reside, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless such penalties and forfeitures, and all reasonable charges attending the same, shall be sooner paid and satisfied; and the penalties and forfeitures, when so levied, shall be paid to or for the use of the parish or union where such offence shall have been committed, to be applied in aid of the poor-rate of such parish or union.

In what manner to be applied.

100. And be it further enacted, that no owner of property, rate-payer, or inhabitant of any parish or union shall be deemed an incompetent witness in any proceeding for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture inflicted or imposed for any offence against this act, notwithstanding such penalty or forfeiture, when recovered, shall be applicable in aid of the poor-rate of such parish or union.

Owners, rate-payers, &c. may be competent witnesses.

101. And be it further enacted, that in all cases in which any penalty or forfeiture is recoverable before the justices of the peace under this act it shall and may be lawful for any commissioner or assistant commissioner, or any justice, to whom complaint in writing shall be made of any such offence, to summon the party complained against to appear before any two justices, and on such summons the said two justices may hear and determine the matter of such complaint, and on proof of the offence convict the offender, and adjudge him to pay the penalty or forfeiture incurred, and proceed to recover the same.

Justices may proceed by summons for the recovery of penalties. (a)

102. And be it further enacted, that where any distress shall be made for any sum of money to be levied by virtue of this act the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any default or want of form in any proceedings relating thereto, nor shall the party distraining be deemed a trespasser ab initio on account of any irregularity which shall afterwards happen in making the distress, but the person aggrieved by such irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage in an action on the case: provided always, that no plaintiff shall recover in any action for any irregularity, trespass, or wrongful proceedings, if tender of sufficient amends shall be made by or on behalf of the party who shall have committed or caused to be committed any such irregularity, trespass, or wrongful proceedings, before such action shall have been brought; and in case no such tender shall have been made it shall and may be lawful for the defendant in any such action, by leave of the court where such action shall depend, at any time before issue joined, to pay into court such sum of money as he shall see fit, whereupon such proceedings, or orders and judgment, shall be had, made, and given in and by such court as in other actions where the defendant is allowed to pay money into court.

Satisfaction recoverable for special damage, but distress not unlawful for want of form in the proceedings.

Plaintiff not to recover for irregularity, if tender of amends be made.

(a) Clerks of the board may conduct certain proceedings before justices, although they are not attornies, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 65.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

Appeal to the quarter sessions against order of justices within four calendar months after cause of complaint, &c.

103. Provided also, and be it further enacted, that if any person or persons shall find himself, herself, or themselves aggrieved by any order or conviction of any justice or justices, where such person or persons shall be convicted in any penalty or penalties exceeding five pounds, or if any person shall find himself aggrieved by any order made under the provisions of this act on such person as the putative father of any bastard child, it shall be lawful for such person or persons to appeal to any general or quarter sessions of the peace to be held in and for the county, riding, or division in which such order shall have been made or conviction taken place within four calendar months next after the cause of complaint shall have arisen, or if such session shall be held before the expiration of one calendar month next after such cause of complaint, then such appeal shall be made to the next following sessions, either of which court of sessions is hereby empowered to hear and finally determine the matter of the said appeal, and to make such order therein as to them shall seem meet; which order shall be final and conclusive to and upon all parties: provided that the person or persons so appealing shall give or cause to be given at least fourteen days' notice in writing of his, her, or their intention of appealing as aforesaid, and of the matter or cause thereof, to the respondent or respondents, and within five days after such notice shall enter into a recognizance before some justice of the peace, with sufficient securities, conditioned to try such appeal at the then next general sessions or quarter sessions of the peace which shall first happen, and to abide the order of and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof; and such justices, upon hearing and finally determining such matter of appeal, shall and may, according to their discretion, award such costs to the party appealing or appealed against as they shall think proper; and their determination in or concerning the premises shall be conclusive and binding on all parties to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

Fourteen days' notice in writing to be given, &c. and recognizance to be entered into.

Limitation of actions. (a)

104. And be it further enacted, that no action or suit shall be commenced against any commissioner, assistant commissioner, or any other person, for anything done in pursuance of or under the authority of this act, until twenty-one days' notice has been given thereof in writing to the party or person against whom such action is intended to be brought, nor after sufficient satisfaction or tender thereof shall have been made to the party aggrieved, nor after three calendar months next after the act committed for which such action or suit shall be so brought; and every such action shall be brought, laid, and tried where the cause of action shall have arisen, and not in any other county or place; and the defendant in such action or suit may plead the general issue, and give this act and any special matter in evidence, at any trial which shall be had thereupon; and if the matter or thing shall appear to have been done under or by virtue of this act, or if it shall appear that such action or suit was brought before twenty-one days' notice thereof given as aforesaid, or that sufficient satisfaction was made or tendered as aforesaid, or if any action or suit shall not be commenced within the time before limited, or shall be laid in any other county than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant therein; and if a verdict shall be found for such defendant, or if the plaintiff in such action or suit shall become nonsuit, or suffer a discontinuance of such action, or if, upon any demurrer in such action, judgment shall be given for the defendant therein, then and in any of the cases aforesaid, such defendant shall have costs, charges, and expenses as between attorney and client, and shall have such remedy for recovering the same as any defendant may have for his or her costs, in any other case by law.

Defendant may plead the general issue.

Costs. (b)

Rules, &c. to be removable by certiorari to Court of King's Bench.

Rules, &c. so removed to continue in force until declared illegal.

105. And be it further enacted, that no rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners or assistant commissioners, or any of them, shall be removed or removable by writ of certiorari into any court of record, except his Majesty's Court of King's Bench at Westminster; and that every rule, order, or regulation which shall be removed by writ of certiorari into the said Court of King's Bench, shall, nevertheless, unless and until the same shall be declared illegal by that court, continue in full force and virtue, and be obeyed, performed, and enforced, in such and the same manner, and by such and the same ways and means, as if the same had not been so removed.

Notice to be given to commissioners of application for writ of certiorari, &c. (c)

106. And be it further enacted, that no application shall be made for any writ of certiorari for the removal of any such rule, order, or regulation except

(a) See Carter v. Filleter, 1 C. & Marsh. 498.

(b) See now 5 & 6 Vic. c. 97, p. 394, n.

(c) As to the title of the affidavits, 12 A. & E. 130.

to the judges when sitting in the said court, nor unless notice in writing shall have been left at the office of the said commissioners at least ten days previous to such application being made, and in which notice shall be set forth the name and description of the party by or on behalf of whom and the day on which it is intended to make such application, together with a statement of the grounds thereof; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to show cause in the first instance against such application, and the court may, if it shall so think fit, forthwith proceed to hear and determine the same upon the grounds set forth in such notice.

Commissioners may show cause, in the first instance.

107. And be it further enacted, that previous to any writ of certiorari being issued, the party or parties applying for the same shall enter into a recognizance, with sufficient sureties, before one of his Majesty's justices of the Court of King's Bench, or before a justice of the peace of the county or place in which such person shall reside, in the sum of fifty pounds, with condition to prosecute the same, at his or their costs and charges, with effect, without any wilful or affected delay, and in default thereof, or in the event of such rule, order, or regulation being deemed legal, to pay the said commissioners their full costs, charges, and expenses, to be taxed according to the course of the said Court of King's Bench; and if the said rule, order, or regulation, so removed by the said writ of certiorari into the said Court of King's Bench, shall be declared legal by the said court, the commissioners entitled to such costs, within ten days after demand made of the person or persons who ought to pay the said costs, upon oath made of the making such demand and refusal of payment thereof, may recover the same in the same manner as any penalties and forfeitures are recoverable under this act.

Recognizances to be entered into.

If rule be declared legal, commissioners to be entitled to costs.

108. And be it further enacted, that if upon the hearing of the application the court shall order a writ of certiorari to issue for bringing up any such rule, order, or regulation, and the same, being brought into court, shall be quashed as illegal, the said commissioners shall forthwith notify the judgment of the court to all unions, parishes, or places to which such rule, order, or regulation shall have been directed, and the same shall from the time of receiving such notice respectively be deemed and taken to be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever: provided, that such judgment shall not have the effect of annulling any contracts made in pursuance or upon the authority of any such rule, order, or regulation, which at the receipt of such notice respectively shall have been executed by either of the contracting parties: provided also, that no person shall be liable to be prosecuted, either by indictment or by civil action, for or in respect of any act done by him before the receipt of such notice, under the authority and in pursuance of such rule, order, or regulation.

If rules are quashed, the same to be notified to parishes to which such rules have been directed.

Proviso for existing contracts.

No person to be answerable until receipt of notice.

109. And be it further enacted, that in the construction of this act the word "auditor" shall be construed to mean and include every person, other than justices of the peace acting in virtue of their office, appointed or empowered to audit, control, examine, allow, or disallow the accounts of any guardian, overseer, or vestrymen, relating to the receipt or expenditure of the poor-rate; the words "general rule" shall be construed to mean any rule relating to the management of the poor or to the execution of this act which shall at the time of issuing the same be addressed by the said commissioners to more than one union, or to more parishes or places than one not forming a union, or not to be formed into or added to a union under or by virtue of such rule; the word "guardian" shall be construed to mean and include any visitor, governor, director, manager, acting guardian, vestryman, or other officer in a parish or union, appointed or entitled to act as a manager of the poor, and in the distribution or ordering of the relief to the poor from the poor-rate, under any general or local act of parliament; the words "justice or justices of the peace" shall be construed to include justices of the peace of any county, division of a county, riding, borough, liberty, division of a liberty, precinct, county of a city, county of a town, cinque port, or town corporate, unless where otherwise provided by this act; the word "oath" shall be construed to include the affirmation of a Quaker, Separatist, or Moravian; the words "orders and regulations" shall be construed to mean and include any rule, order, regulation, or bye-law relating to the management or relief of the poor, or the execution of this act, which at the time of issuing the same shall be addressed, directed, or applied to any one parish or union, or to any number of parishes which have been or by Interpretation clause.

Auditor.

General rule.

Guardian.

Justice. (a)

Oath.

Orders.

(a) "Clerk of the Peace," to include clerks of the county, riding, borough, city, town corporate, &c. &c., 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 70.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

virtue of any order shall be constituted a union or added to a union; the word "officer" shall be construed to extend to any clergyman, schoolmaster, person duly licensed to practise as a medical man, vestry clerk, treasurer, collector, assistant overseer, governor, master or mistress of a workhouse, or any other person who shall be employed in any parish or union in carrying this act or the laws for the relief of the poor into execution, and whether performing one or more of the above-mentioned functions; the word "overseer" shall be construed to mean and include overseers of the poor, churchwardens, so far as they are authorised or required by law to act in the management or relief of the poor, or in the collection or distribution of the poor-rate, assistant overseer, or any other subordinate officer, whether paid or unpaid, in any parish or union, who shall be employed therein in carrying this act or the laws for the relief of the poor into execution; the word "owner" shall be construed to include any person for the time being in the actual occupation of any property rateable to the relief of the poor, and not let to him at rack rent, or any person receiving the rack rent of any such property, either on his own account or as mortgagee or other incumbrancer in possession; and the words "rack rent" shall be construed to mean any rent which shall not be less than two-thirds of the full improved net annual value of any property; the word "parish" shall be construed to include any parish, city, borough, town, township, liberty, precinct, vill, village, hamlet, tithing, chapelry, or any other place, or division or district of a place, maintaining its own poor, whether parochial or extra-parochial; the word "person" shall be construed to include any body politic, corporate, or collegiate, aggregate or sole, as well as any individual; the word "poor" shall be construed to include any pauper or poor or indigent person applying for or receiving relief from the poor-rate in England or Wales, or chargeable thereto; the words "poor law," or "laws for the relief of the poor," shall be construed to include every act of parliament for the time being in force for the relief or management of the poor, or relating to the execution of the same, or the administration of such relief; the words "poor rate" shall be construed to include any rate, rate in aid, mulct, cess, assessment, collection, levy, subscription, or contribution raised, assessed, imposed, levied, collected, or disbursed for the relief of the poor in any parish or union; that the words "general quarter sessions" shall extend to and be construed to include general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, for any county, division of a county, riding, borough, liberty, division of a liberty, precinct, county of a city, city, county of a town, cinque port, or town corporate, unless where otherwise provided by this act; the word "union" shall be construed to include any number of parishes united for any purpose whatever under the provisions of this act, or incorporated under the said act made and passed in the twenty-second year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," or incorporated for the relief or maintenance of the poor under any local act; the words "united workhouse" shall be construed to mean and include any workhouse of a union; the word "vestry" shall be construed to mean any open, customary, or select vestry, or any meeting of inhabitants convened by any notice such as would have been required for the assembling of a meeting in vestry, at which meeting any business relating to the poor or the poor-rate shall be transacted or taken into consideration, so far as such business is concerned; the word "workhouse" shall be construed to include any house in which the poor of any parish or union shall be lodged and maintained, or any house or building purchased, erected, hired, or used at the expense of the poor-rate, by any parish, vestry, guardian, or overseer, for the reception, employment, classification, or relief of any poor person therein at the expense of such parish; and wherever in this act, in describing any person or party, matter or thing, the word importing the singular number or the masculine gender only is used, the same shall be understood to include and shall be applied to several persons or parties as well as one person or party, and females as well as males, and several matters or things as well as one matter or thing, respectively, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction.

Officer.

Overseer.

Owner.

Rack rent.

Parish.

Person.

Poor.

Poor laws.

Poor rate.

Sessions.

nion.

22 Geo. III. c. 83.

United workhouse.

Vestry.

Workhouse. (a)

Singular number.

Masculine.

Act may be amended this session.

110. And be it further enacted, that this act may be altered, amended, or repealed in this present session of parliament.

(a) A house built from money supplied by the poor-rate, and let to labourers at a rent, is not within the definition. Cantrell v. Windsor, 4 N. C. 348.

5 & 6 Will. IV. Cap. 69.

An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes in England and Wales. (a) [9th September, 1835.]

Whereas there are certain legal difficulties attending the title, purchase, sale, and disposal of property, which, with respect to workhouses and other property belonging to parishes, incorporations, or unions, it is expedient to remove; and it is also expedient to simplify the assurances for the conveyance, exchange, or transfer of such property: be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent Majesty by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of the King's Majesty's woods, forests, and land revenues, by and with the consent in writing of the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury, or any three or more of them, and for his Majesty, by any grant signed by the chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and for the Duke of Cornwall, by any grant signed by the chancellor of that duchy, to grant, and for the guardians and overseers of the poor of any parish or union of parishes, under the direction and with the approbation of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales (to be testified by order under their hands and seal), and for any lay or ecclesiastical corporation aggregate or sole, and for any feoffees or trustees to charitable or other uses, and for any person beneficially seised or entitled in possession as tenant in fee-simple, or in fee-tail, general or special, or for his own life, or for years determinable on his own life, (such estate for life or years not being subject to any rent,) or for any term of years in gross whereof not less than four hundred shall be unexpired, and subject to no equity of redemption or rent, except a nominal rent, and for any married woman entitled or interested as aforesaid to her separate use, and for the guardian, trustee, husband, or committee of any person so seised or entitled who shall be an infant, married woman (not separately entitled), idiot, lunatic, or under any other disability, to dispose of, by way of absolute sale, or in exchange for any messuages, lands, or other hereditaments, any lands or buildings for the purpose of the same being used as or converted into a workhouse, or of being used as the site of a workhouse, or of being occupied with a workhouse, or for any other purpose relating to the relief of the poor which the said poor law commissioners may approve of, with the rights and appurtenances, and to convey the same and the fee-simple and inheritance thereof unto the guardians or overseers of any union or parish and their successors, or in such other manner as the said poor law commissioners may direct, and to accept from and give to such guardians or overseers any moneys by way of equality of exchange.

Powers for corporations and persons under disability to convey lands, &c. for the purposes of this act.

2. And with regard to the application of money paid for the purchase or on the exchange of hereditaments of persons under disability: be it enacted, that all sums of money which shall be agreed to be paid to any corporation, or to any trustee, guardian, or committee for or on behalf of any infant, ward, lunatic, idiot, married woman, or other person under disability, or to any person whose lands shall be limited in settlement, for the purchase or exchange of hereditaments as aforesaid, shall, in case the same shall exceed the sum of fifty pounds, and there shall be no person capable of giving a sufficient discharge for the same, be paid by the said guardians and overseers into the Bank of England in the name and with the privity of the accountant general of the Court of Exchequer, to be placed in his account to the credit of the party who shall be so interested in the said hereditaments, describing them, subject to the order of the said Court of Exchequer; which said court, on the petition of or motion on behalf of any corporation or person making claim to any such money, is hereby empowered to order summarily the investment of such money in the purchase of real estates, to be settled to the same uses and upon the same trusts as the lands so sold were previously subject to, or in the public funds, and the distribution of the rents and dividends thereof respectively, according to the respective interests of the claimants thereof, and to make such other order in the premises as to the court shall deem reasonable; and the cashier of the Bank of England who shall receive such money shall give a receipt to the party

Investment of purchase money to the same uses as the estates sold were subject to.

(a) This act is explained by 5 & 6 Vic. c. 18, p. 1281. It is not necessary to enrol the deeds, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 73.

5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 69.

paying the same, specifying for what the same is received, which receipt shall be to all intents and purposes a sufficient discharge; and upon such receipt being given it shall be lawful for the said poor law commissioners, by order under their hands and seals, to direct that the said hereditaments so purchased by such guardians or overseers shall be appropriated for the purposes of this act; and in case of doubts or questions of title to any money paid into the Bank of England by virtue of this act, or the securities on which the same may be invested, or the dividends or interest thereof, the corporation or person who shall have been in the possession of such hereditaments, interests, or incumbrances at the time of such purchase, and persons claiming under them, shall be deemed and taken to be lawfully entitled to such hereditaments, interests, or incumbrances until the contrary shall be shown to the satisfaction of the said Court of Exchequer; and the securities and principal and interest moneys shall be applied and disposed of accordingly; and in case of such purchase, payment into the Bank of England, and application to the Court of Exchequer as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said court to order the expenses attending such purchase, payment, or application, or any part thereof, to be paid by such guardians or overseers, who shall accordingly pay the same as and when the said court shall direct, and the money so paid shall be a charge on the poor-rates of such parish or such union, as the case may be.

Parties in possession to be deemed entitled.

Court of Exchequer may order payment of expenses.

Sect. 3 gives power to overseers and guardians of the poor to sell, purchase, and dispose of workhouses, see p. 390. See s. 21 of 4 Will. IV. c. 76; and Cantwell v. Windsor, 4 N. & E. 348; and 5 & 6 Vic. c. 18, p. 1281.

Power to overseers to take waste or forest lands extended to guardians, &c.

4. And be it further enacted, that all the powers and authorities in and by an act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," given to guardians of the poor for or relating to the inclosing of any part or portion of waste or common land as therein mentioned; and all powers and authorities in and by an act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the same reign, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws for the Relief of the Poor," given to churchwardens and overseers of the poor for taking land or ground into their hands, and for purchasing, hiring, and taking on lease any land; and all the powers and authorities contained in an act passed in the first and second years of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled "An Act to amend an Act of the fifty-ninth year of His Majesty King George the Third, for the Relief and Employment of the Poor;" and in a certain other act passed in the first and second years of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled "An Act to enable Churchwardens and Overseers to inclose Land belonging to the Crown for the benefit of poor Persons residing in the Parish in which such Crown Land shall be situate;" and in a certain other act passed in the second year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled "An Act to authorise (in parishes inclosed under any Act of Parliament) the letting of the Poor Allotments in small portions to industrious Cottagers;" shall in future be exercised (under the control, and subject to the rules, orders, and regulations of the poor law commissioners,) by the overseers of the poor in any parish not under the management of a board of guardians, and by the guardians of the poor of any union or parish formed or established by virtue of any statute or local act; and all the aforesaid powers and authorities relating to the inclosing, purchasing, hiring, or taking any waste, common, or other land, for the purpose or purposes in the said acts mentioned, shall extend and apply to and may be so exercised as aforesaid by the said overseers and guardians for the purpose of being used in the site of a workhouse, or of being occupied with a workhouse, or for any other of the purposes of the said recited act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his present Majesty.

22 Geo. III. c. 83.

59 Geo. III. c. 12.

1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 42.

1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 59.

2 Will. IV. c. 42.

Powers given to justices to deliver possession of parish houses, &c. to churchwardens and overseers, extended to property of unions, &c.

5. And be it further enacted, that the powers and authorities given by the said act of the fifty-ninth year of King George the Third, and by the said act of the second year of the present reign, to justices of the peace to cause possession of parish houses and lands and portions of land to be delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and any other auxiliary powers or provisions in the said acts or other acts contained in relation thereto, shall extend to and shall be exercised by such justices in respect of any houses and lands and portions of land which are or may be vested in or under the management or control of the guardians of the poor of any union or parish, in the same manner as if the name of those officers had been inserted in the said acts instead of the names of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor.

Mode of conveyance.

6. And, for simplifying the instruments of assurance of property under this act, be it enacted, that every conveyance, exchange, security, or assignment of security, under the authority of this act, may be made according to the forms set forth in the schedule annexed, or in such other forms as the said poor law commissioners shall direct, or as near thereto as the number of parties, the nature of the interests, and the circumstances of the case will admit, and shall, when executed by the conveying parties, be valid and effectual in the law, without livery of seisin being made, or any bargain and sale to vest possession being executed; and that every conveyance, exchange, security, transfer of security, or instrument made under the authority of this act, shall, when signed by the conveying parties thereto, be transmitted to the said poor law commissioners, who shall, if they shall approve thereof, signify such approval by sealing or stamping the same with their seal; and for preserving evidence of such instruments the said commissioners shall keep a register, properly indexed, in which they shall insert copies or memorials of such deeds or instruments of which they shall so approve, and of such orders of appropriation of property as are hereinbefore mentioned; and all such copies or memorials, or copies thereof, purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the said commissioners, shall be received as evidence of the instruments respectively of which they purport to be copies or memorials.

Approval of the poor law commissioners.

7. And, for the more easy execution of the purposes of this act, and of the laws relating to the poor, be it enacted, that the guardians of the poor of every union already formed or which hereafter shall be formed by virtue of the aforesaid act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his present Majesty, and of every parish placed under the control of a board of guardians by virtue of the said act, shall respectively from the day of their first meeting as a board become or be deemed to have become, and they and their successors in office shall for ever continue to be, for all the purposes of this act, a corporation, by the name of the Guardians of the Poor of the Union (or of the Parish of) in the County of ; and as such corporation the said guardians are hereby empowered to accept, take, and hold, for the benefit of such union or parish, any buildings, lands, or hereditaments, goods, effects, or other property, and may use a common seal; and they are further empowered by that name to bring actions, to prefer indictments, and to sue and be sued, and to take or resist all other proceedings for or in relation to any such property, or any bonds, contracts, securities, or instruments given or to be given to them in virtue of their office; and in every such action and indictment relating to any such property it shall be sufficient to lay or state the property to be that of the guardians of the union, or of the parish of ; and in case of any addition to or separation of any parishes from any such union, under the authority of the said act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his present Majesty, the board of guardians for the time being shall (notwithstanding such alteration) have and enjoy the same corporate existence, property, and privileges as the board of guardians of the original union would have had and enjoyed had it remained unaltered.

Guardians incorporated.

See 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57, s. 16.

8. And be it enacted, that all buildings, lands, or hereditaments, goods, effects, or other property, which, before the passing of this act, may have been conveyed, with the consent or under the directions of the said poor law commissioners, to any persons in trust for and for the use of any union or parishes, shall, without any further act, vest in the guardians thereof as such corporation in the same manner as if the same respectively had been conveyed to or vested in them under the provisions of this act.

Previous sales made with the consent of the commissioners to be valid.

9. And in the interpretation of this act, be it enacted, that wherever in this act, in describing any person or party, matter or thing, the word importing the singular number or the masculine gender only is used, the same shall be understood to include and shall be applied to several persons or parties as well as one person or party, and females as well as males, and several matters or things as well as one matter or thing respectively, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction; and the words and expressions "general rule," "guardian," "justice or justices of the peace," "orders and regulations," "overseers," "owners of property," "parish," "person," "poor," "poor rate," "union," "vestry," and "workhouse," shall bear and be construed to have the same signification as the same words and expressions are declared to have in the said act of the fourth and fifth years of the present reign, for the amendment and better administration of the laws relating to the poor in England and Wales.

Interpretation clause.

5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 69.

SCHEDULE TO WHICH THIS ACT REFERS.

Form of Conveyance.

This deed, made the day of in the year , by virtue of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled [the title of this act], and under the direction [or "with the approbation"] of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, testified by their seal being hereunto affixed, witnesseth, That A. B. of in consideration of the sum of paid to him [or "into the Bank of England"] by C. D. of doth grant and convey [or "demise or assign," proper words of conveyance to be used,] all, &c. [the property to be aptly described], and all the right, title, and interest of the said A. B. in and to the same and every part thereof, unto and to be holden by the said C. D., his heirs and assigns. In witness whereof the said A. B. and C. D. have hereunto set their hands and seals.

Witness E. F.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

The seal of the Poor Law Commissioners.

Approved and registered the day of

Form of Exchange.

This deed, made the day of by virtue of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled [the title of the act], and under the direction [or "with the approbation"] of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, testified by their seal being hereunto affixed, witnesseth, That A. B. of doth grant and convey unto C. D. of all [the property to be aptly described], in exchange for the hereditaments hereinafter conveyed, to the intent that the said hereditaments above conveyed may be held and enjoyed by the said C. D., and the person or persons who for the time being would have been entitled to the hereditaments hereinafter conveyed, if this present exchange had not been made, and shall be and become subject to such and the same uses, trusts, powers, conditions, limitations, restrictions, charges, and incumbrances as the same hereditaments hereinafter conveyed now are or may, or but for this present exchange would have been subject or liable to; And this deed further witnesseth, That in pursuance of the said act, and under the said direction [or "approbation"], the said C. D. doth grant and convey unto the said A. B. all [the property to be aptly described], in lieu of and in exchange for the hereditaments firstly hereinbefore conveyed, to the intent that the hereditaments lastly hereinbefore conveyed may be held and enjoyed by the said A. B., and the person or persons who for the time being would have been entitled to the hereditaments firstly hereinbefore conveyed if this present exchange had not been made, and shall be and become subject to such and the same uses, trusts, powers, conditions, limitations, restrictions, charges, and incumbrances as the same hereditaments now or may be, or but for this present exchange would have been subject or liable to. In witness whereof the said A. B. and C. D. have hereunto set their hands and seals.

Witness E. F.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

The seal of the Poor Law Commissioners.

Approved and registered the day of

5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 69.

Form of Security.

THIS deed, made the day of by virtue of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled [the title of this act], and under the direction [or " with the approbation"] of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, (testified by their seal being hereunto affixed,) witnesseth, That A. B., C. D., E. F., and G. H., being the majority of the guardians of the poor for the union [or " the parish of "], in consideration of the sum of to them in hand paid by Y. Z. of for the purpose of purchasing, building, erecting, repairing, fitting up, or furnishing a workhouse for the union [or " parish"], and for providing suitable stock and utensils for that purpose [or " in consideration of the conveyance or assurance of," &c., as the case may be,] do hereby charge the poor rates of the parishes of the said union [or " parish"] with the payment of the principal sum of pounds, by the instalments following [naming them], together with interest on the principal which shall from time to time remain due, after the rate of per centum, to be payable half yearly to the said Y. Z., his executors, administrators, and assigns.

Witness L. M.

A. B.
C. D.
E. F.
G. H.

The seal of the Poor Law Commissioners.

Approved and registered the day of

Form of Transfer of Security.

THIS deed, made the day of by virtue of the act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled [the title of this act,] and [if the guardians or overseers of any parish or union are the parties transferring or accepting the security, then add] under the direction [or " with the approbation"] of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales (testified by their seal being hereunto affixed), witnesseth, That Y. Z. of doth transfer the security [describing it], with all right and title to the principal money thereby secured, and to all the interest now due or hereafter to be due thereon, unto V. W. of his executors, administrators, and assigns.

Witness E. F.

Y. Z.
V. W.

The seal of the Poor Law Commissioners.

Approved and registered the day of

6 & 7 WILL. IV. CAP. 96. (a)

An Act to regulate Parochial Assessments.

[19*th August*, 1836.]

WHEREAS it is desirable to establish one uniform mode of rating for the relief of the poor throughout England and Wales, and to lessen the cost of appeal against an unfair rate: Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after such period, not being earlier than the twenty-first day of March next after the passing of this Act, as the Poor Law Commissioners shall

All rates to be made on the net annual value of the property.

(a) This act has been continued from time to time.

6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 96.

by any order under their seal of office direct, no rate for the relief of the poor in England and Wales shall be allowed by any justices, or be of any force, which shall not be made upon an estimate of the net annual value of the several hereditaments rated thereunto; that is to say, of the rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rent-charge, if any, and deducting therefrom the probable average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain them in a state to command such rent: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or affect the principles or different relative liabilities (if any) according to which different kinds of hereditaments are now by law rateable. See p. 141.

Proviso.

Rates to be made in a given form.

2. And be it further enacted, that every such rate made after the said period shall, in addition to any other particular which the form of making out such rate shall require to be set forth, contain an account of every particular set forth at the head of the respective columns in the forms given in the schedule to this Act annexed, so far as the same can be ascertained; and the churchwardens and overseers, or other officers whose duty it may be to make and levy the said rate, or such a number of the said churchwardens and overseers or other officers as are competent to the making and levying of the same, shall, before the rate is allowed by the justices, sign the declaration given at the foot of the said form; and otherwise the said rate shall be of no force or validity: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the owners of tenements from compounding for the rates to be assessed on the same, in such manner as they were by any statute or statutes enabled to do before the passing of this act, so that the gross estimated rental of the hereditaments compounded for be entered on the rate in the proper column.

Nothing herein to prevent owners from compounding for rates.

Power to order new survey and valuation.

3. And be it enacted, that when it shall be made to appear to the Poor Law Commissioners by representation in writing from the board of guardians of any union or parish under their common seal, or from the majority of the churchwardens and overseers or other officers competent as aforesaid to the making and levying the rate, that a fair and correct estimate for the aforesaid purposes cannot be made without a new valuation, it shall be lawful for the Poor Law Commissioners, where they shall see fit, to order a survey, with or without a map or plan, on such scale as they shall think fit, to be made and taken of the messuages, lands, and other hereditaments liable to poor rates in such parish, or in all or any one or more parishes of such a union, and a valuation to be made of the said messuages, lands, and other hereditaments according to their annual value, and to direct such guardians to appoint a fit person or persons to make and take every such survey, map or plan, and valuation, and to make provision for paying the costs of every such survey, map or plan, and valuation, either by a separate rate or by a charge on the poor rates, as they may see fit; but in case of such charge being made, then provisions shall be made for paying off not less than one-fifth of the sum charged on the rates, and such interest as may from time to time be payable in respect of such charge or any part thereof, in each succeeding year, till the whole is repaid.

Power for surveyors to enter and examine lands, &c. for purposes of survey and plans.

4. And be it further enacted, that for the purpose of making every such survey, map or plan, and valuation, it shall be lawful for the person or persons so to be appointed for making the same respectively, together with their and every of their assistants and servants, at all reasonable times, until the same respectively shall be completed, to enter, view, and examine, survey and admeasure, all and every part of the messuages, lands, and other hereditaments aforesaid, and to do or cause to be done any act or thing necessary for making such survey, map or plan, and valuation: provided always, that any map, survey, plan, or valuation made previously to the appointment of such person or persons which shall be tendered to him or them, and which shall be in his or their judgment and to his or their satisfaction a just and true map or survey, proper for the purposes aforesaid, may be used for such purposes.

Power to take copies or extracts of rates gratis.

Penalty for refusal to permit.

5. And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any person or persons rated to the relief of the poor of the parish in respect of which any rate shall be made, at all seasonable times, to take copies thereof or extracts therefrom without paying any thing for the same, any thing in any act of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding; and in case the person or persons having the custody of such rate shall refuse to permit, or shall not permit such person or persons so rated as aforesaid to take copies thereof or extracts therefrom, the person or persons so refusing or not permitting such copy or extract to be made shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, to be recovered in a summary way before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the parish or place.

Justices acting in petty sessions to hold four special sessions in the year to hear appeals. (a)

6. And be it enacted, that the justices acting in and for every petty sessions division shall four times at least in every year hold a special sessions for hearing appeals against the rates of the several parishes within their respective divisions, and shall cause public notice of the time and place when and where such special sessions will be holden to be affixed to or near to the door of the parish church of the said parishes, twenty-eight days at the least before the holding of the same; and such special sessions shall and may be adjourned from time to time by the justices there present, as they may think fit; and at such special or adjourned sessions the justices there present shall hear and determine all objections to any such rate on the ground of inequality, unfairness, or incorrectness in the valuation of any hereditaments included therein, which decision shall be binding and conclusive on the parties, unless the person or persons impugning such decision shall within fourteen days, after the same shall have been made, cause notice to be given in writing of his, her, or their intention of appealing against such decision, and of the matter or cause of such appeal (a), to the person or persons in whose favour such decision shall have been made, and within five days after giving such notice shall enter into a recognizance before some justice of the peace, with sufficient securities, conditioned to try such appeal at the then next general sessions or quarter sessions of the peace which shall first happen, and to abide the order of and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof; and such justices, upon hearing and finally determining such matter of appeal, shall and may, according to their discretion, award such costs to the party or parties appealing or appealed against as they shall think proper, and their determination in or concerning the premises shall be conclusive and binding on all parties, to all intents and purposes whatsoever: provided always, that no such objection shall be inquired into by the said justices in special sessions unless notice of such objection in writing under the hand of the complainant shall have been given, seven days at least before the day appointed for such special session, to the collector, overseers, or other persons by whom such rate was made; provided also, that the said justices in special session shall not be authorised to inquire into the liability of any hereditaments to be rated, but only into the true value thereof and into the fairness of the amount at which the same shall have been rated.

Seven days' notice to be given of objections.

Proviso.

Justices may act with all the powers of justices in quarter sessions.

7. And be it enacted, that the justices present at any such special or adjourned session shall for the aforesaid purpose have all the powers of amending or quashing any such rate so objected to of any parish or other district within their division, and likewise of awarding costs to be paid by or to any of the parties, and of recovering such costs, which any court of quarter sessions of the peace has upon appeals from any such rate, except as herein excepted: provided always, that no order of the said justices shall be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster: provided also, that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to deprive any person or persons of the right to appeal against any rate to any court of general or quarter sessions: provided also, that no order of the said justices in special session shall be of any force pending any appeal touching the same subject matter to the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace having jurisdiction to try such appeal, or in opposition to the order of any such court upon such appeal.

Act confined to England and Wales.

8. And be it enacted, that this act shall extend only to England and Wales.

Act may be repealedt hi session.

9. And be it further enacted, that this act may be repealed or amended by any act which shall be passed in this session.

(a) See context, p. 214, note (a). And see notice of appeal, post, Appendix of Forms.

SCHEDULE TO WHICH THIS ACT REFERS.

Form of Rate.

An Assessment for the relief of the Poor of the parish of Merton in the county of Surrey, and for other purposes chargeable thereon according to law, made this thirtieth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven, after the rate of sixpence in the pound.

No.	Arrears due, or if excused.	Name of Occupier.	Name of Owner.	Description of Property rated.	Name or situation of Property.	Estimated Extent.	Gross estimated Rental.	Rateable Value.	Rate at 6*d.* in the Pound.
	£ s. d.					A. R. P.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
1	. . .	James Smith	John Green	Land and Buildings	Whiteacre Farm . .	40 0 0	60 0 0	55 0 0	1 7 6
2	. . .	Ditto	Ditto	House and Garden .	In West Street	0 1 0	30 0 0	25 0 0	0 12 6
3	. . 7½ Excused	John Poor .	Ditto	House . .	In Brick Lane	. . .	1 10 0	1 5 0	0 0 7½
&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.	&c.

5 & 6 VICT. CAP. 18.

An Act to explain and amend the Acts regulating the Sale of Parish Property; and to make further Provision for the Discharge of Debts, Liabilities and Engagements incurred by or on behalf of Parishes. [13*th May*, 1842.]

WHEREAS by an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses, and other Property of Parishes, and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes, in England and Wales," it was among other things enacted, that it should be lawful for the guardians and overseers of the poor of any parish or union of parishes, under the direction and with the approbation of the poor law commissioners for England and Wales, to dispose of, by way of absolute sale, or in exchange for any messuages, lands, or other hereditaments, any lands or buildings, for the purpose of the same being used as the site of a workhouse, or of being occupied with a workhouse, or for any other purpose relating to the relief of the poor which the said poor law commissioners might approve of; and doubts have been raised as to the meaning in certain cases of this provision: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that all sales, lettings, exchanges, or dispositions of lands, buildings, or other property belonging to any parish or union not formed by the poor law commissioners, which shall have been or shall be made for any of the said recited purposes by virtue of the said act, and of the statute amending the same passed in the first year of the reign of her Majesty, under the order of the said commissioners, by a majority of the overseers of such parish or of the last acting guardians of such union respectively, to the guardians of any union formed by the said commissioners, shall be and be taken to have been valid.

5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 69, s. 1.

All sales and dispositions of lands, buildings, &c. by overseers and acting guardians of dissolved incorporations to unions formed under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, and 7 Will. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 50, deemed valid.

2. And whereas by the said act it was further enacted, that it should be lawful for the guardians of any parish or union, and for the overseers of any parish not under the management of a board of guardians, and for the guardians or trustees, guardian or trustee of any dissolved union, or the person or persons who were the guardians or trustees, guardian or trustee of any dissolved union at the time of its dissolution, or a majority of such guardians, trustees, or persons, if more than one, with the approbation and subject to the rules, orders, and regulations of the poor law commissioners, to sell, exchange, let, or otherwise dispose of any workhouse, tenements, buildings, land, effects, or other property belonging to any such parish or union, or vested in trustees or feoffees in trust for such parish or union, or for the parishioners, rate-payers, or inhabitants thereof, or which belong or did belong to any dissolved union, and every or any part of such property, and to convey, assign, or transfer the same accordingly to the purchasers or parties exchanging, as they should direct; which said provisions have been extended by the said act passed in the first year of the reign of her present Majesty, and doubts have arisen as to the meaning and extent of such provisions; be it therefore declared and enacted, that the said provisions shall be deemed to have authorised and to authorise the sale, exchange, letting, and disposal, by the guardians of a union formed or to be formed by the said commissioners, of any workhouse, tenements, buildings, land, effects, or other property belonging to any parish which shall be comprised in the said union, and in cases of the sale, exchange, letting, and disposal of workhouses, tenements, buildings, land, effects, and other property belonging to a dissolved union to have applied and to apply to a majority of the persons who were the last acting guardians previous to the dissolution of such union: provided always, that nothing in this act shall be deemed to render valid or to authorise the sale, exchange, letting, or other disposition of any property whatsoever which shall have been given or bequeathed by way of charitable donation, or shall have been allotted in right of some charitable donation or otherwise, for the poor persons of any parish, and not for the general benefit of the rate-payers, parishioners, or inhabitants of such parish, nor to dispense with the consent of the rate-payers and owners of property required by the said last recited act to all sales, exchanges, lettings, or other dispositions of property belonging to any parish, except in the case next herein-after provided.

Explanation of the meaning of 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 69, s. 3.

Proviso for charitable donations; and for consent of rate-payers, &c. to certain sales, &c.

3. And be it enacted, that where several parishes shall have been or shall be jointly interested in any workhouse, tenements, buildings, lands, whether of

For sale of property belonging to several parishes.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 18.

freehold, copyhold, or customary tenure, effects or other property, it shall be deemed to have been and shall be lawful for the said commissioners, upon the application of the overseers of the major part of such parishes, and with the consent of the rate-payers and owners of property in the major part of such parishes, to be ascertained in the manner directed by the said act, to order the same to be sold, let, exchanged, or disposed of by the guardians of the union in which such parishes or the greater part thereof shall be situate, in such manner, and subject to such rules, orders, and regulations, as the said commissioners shall deem fit; and it shall be deemed to have been and to be lawful for the said commissioners to direct the application of the produce arising from such sale, letting, or disposition in the same manner and to and for the same purposes as the produce arising from the sales of property belonging to other parishes may be applied to: provided always, that where any conveyance, by way of sale, lease, exchange, disposition, or otherwise, of any property, belonging to a parish or union, whether dissolved or not, shall have been or shall hereafter be made by the guardians of any existing union, or a majority of the last acting guardians of any dissolved union, under the order of the said commissioners, the same shall be deemed to have been and to be valid for all the purposes of such conveyance, although the legal estate in such property shall be or shall be presumed to be outstanding in some trustee or trustees who shall not have joined in such conveyance; and in cases of copyhold or customary lands the surrender of the tenant on the roll, being a trustee for any parish or union, shall not be required, but the admission of the party to whom the guardians or overseers shall, under the authority of the said recited acts or this act, have conveyed the same, shall take place, upon the production to the steward of the manor of which such lands shall be held of the conveyance from such guardians or overseers duly executed, and upon payment of such fines, dues, or services to the lord of the manor of which the said lands shall be holden, and his steward, as they respectively would be entitled to upon the admission of such party after a surrender by a tenant on the roll.

Proviso that no trustee shall be required to join in any conveyance of parochial property.

Provisions of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 25, for the payment of debts out of the produce of the sale of parochial property extended to any recognised bonâ fide debts.

4. And whereas by an act passed in the first year of the reign of her present Majesty, to explain and amend an act of the seventh year of his late Majesty, for extending the period for the payment of loans made under an act passed in the fifth year of his said late Majesty, for the amendment and better administration of the laws relating to the poor in England and Wales, provision was made for payments in certain cases, out of the produce arising from sales of parish property, in liquidation of the debts, liabilities, or engagements of such parish, and it is expedient to extend the operation of the said act: be it enacted, that the powers and provisions of the said recited act shall extend and apply to the payment of any debts, liabilities, or engagements which heretofore have been bonâ fide entered into by the parish officers or other person or persons on behalf of any parish, and which shall be proved to the poor law commissioners to have been recognised, within one year before the passing of the said act of the fifth year of his late Majesty, as existing parish debts, liabilities, or engagements, by the inhabitants of such parish in vestry assembled, or by payment and allowance of interest thereon out of the funds applicable to the relief of the poor of such parish.

Poor law commissioners may, upon receipt of a parochial request, order payment of the aforesaid debts out of the poor rates.

5. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the poor law commissioners, by an order under their hands and seal, upon the receipt of a copy under the hands of the overseers of the poor of any parish of a resolution passed at a meeting of rate-payers and owners of property entitled to vote according to the provisions of the said act of the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty, duly convened and held for the purpose, after public notice of the time and place and purpose of holding such meeting shall have been given in like manner as notices of vestry meetings are published and given, consenting to the issue of such order, to direct the said overseers, by equal annual instalments, not exceeding ten, to pay or discharge, out of the poor rates, or other monies in their hands applicable in aid of the poor rates of the said parish, any such debt, liability, or engagement as aforesaid, together with all interest due or hereafter to accrue in respect of such debt, liability or engagement; provided that the said commissioners shall be satisfied, before they issue any such order, that such debt, liability, or engagement constitutes a fair and just claim against the said parish, and shall approve of and sanction the discharge thereof.

Overseers may borrow money, and charge the same on the poor

6. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said overseers, and they are hereby required, if so directed by such order and resolution as aforesaid, to borrow any sum that may be requisite to enable them to pay and discharge any such debt, liability, or engagement as aforesaid, or any part thereof, and to charge the poor rates of the said parish with the repayment of the sum borrowed for such purpose, and the interest thereof, so nevertheless that the sum so borrowed shall be repaid by equal annual instalments, not exceeding ten; and every instrument by which the rates shall be charged under the provisions of this act shall be approved of by the poor law commissioners, and registered in their office.

rates, for the payment of such debts.

7. And whereas various sums of money have been borrowed under the authority of an act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor," and securities authorised by that statute have been given in respect of such sums of money, and are now outstanding against the parishes on whose behalf the said sums were advanced, and the provisions of the several statutes in this behalf do not afford a satisfactory mode of liquidating such debts; be it therefore enacted, that where any parish is now or at any time hereafter shall be comprised in any union formed or to be formed under the said act of the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty, or shall be under the management of a board of guardians, and the poor rates thereof shall be liable to the payment of any debt duly borrowed and secured under the authority of the said act of the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, the guardians of such union or parish respectively shall be required to make such provision for the liquidation of the said debt in full, or by equal annual instalments, not exceeding ten, as the said commissioners shall by order under their hands and seal direct; and for such purpose such guardians are hereby empowered to make any order or orders upon the oversers of such parish as the said guardians may find necessary, and shall have all the same powers for enforcing such order or orders as they now have by law in regard to the contributions required by such guardians.

Provision for the discharge of bonds under 22 Geo. III c. 83.

8. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be deemed or taken to render any debt, liability, or engagement a valid charge upon the poor rates of any parish which is not at the time of the passing hereof a subsisting legal charge thereon, except where such resolution shall have been passed and such order shall have been made as aforesaid: and provided always, that every payment out of the poor rates, either of principal or interest, in respect of any such debt, liability, or engagement, without such order of the said commissioners, shall be unlawful, and as such disallowed in the accounts of the officer or officers or other person paying the same.

Payments in respect of debts not legally charged on the rates or provided for under this act, illegal, and to be disallowed.

9. And be it enacted, that every word used in this act shall, where the context shall not be at variance with such interpretation, be deemed to express the meaning assigned thereto in the said recited act of the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty; and every order, regulation, mortgage, security, charge, or other instrument made and executed under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the same incidents, exemptions, provisions, or regulations as it would have been subject to if made under the powers contained in the said last-recited act.

Interpretation of act.

---

5 & 6 Vict. Cap. 57.

An Act to continue until the thirty-first day of July one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, and to the end of the then next Session of Parliament, the Poor Law Commission; and for the further Amendment of the Laws relating to the Poor in England. [30*th July* 1842.]

Whereas by an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," provision was made for the appointment of poor law commissioners, assistant commissioners, secretaries, and other officers, and for their continuance in office until the end of the session of parliament held next after the 14th day of August in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-nine, and by other acts passed respectively in the third and the fourth and the fifth years of the reign of her present Majesty provision was made for their further continuance in office until the thirty-first day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-two, and it is expedient to extend such provisions: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.
2 & 3 Vict. c. 83.
3 & 4 Vict. c. 42.
5 Vict. c. 10.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 57.

Poor Law Commissioners, &c. continued assembled, and by the authority of the same, that every poor law commissioner appointed by his late Majesty, or appointed or to be appointed by her Majesty the Queen, her heirs and successors, and every assistant commissioner, secretary, and other officer and person duly appointed by the poor law commissioners, shall be empowered (unless he shall previously resign or be removed) to hold his office, and exercise the powers thereof, until the thirty-first day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, and thenceforth until the end of the then next session of parliament; and until the expiration of the said period it shall be lawful for her Majesty, her heirs and successors, from time to time, at pleasure, to remove any of the said commissioners for the time being, and upon every or any vacancy in the number of commissioners, either by removal or by death or otherwise, to appoint by warrant under the royal sign-manual some other fit person to the said office, and until such appointment it shall be lawful for the surviving or continuing commissioner or commissioners to act as if no such vacancy had occurred.

Not more than nine assistant commissioners to act in England.

2. And whereas by the said first-recited act it is provided, that it shall not be lawful for the poor law commissioners to appoint more than nine assistant commissioners to act at any one time, unless the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, for the time being, or any three or more of them, shall consent to the appointment of a greater number; be it enacted and provided, that after the thirty-first day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-two it shall not be lawful in any case for the poor law commissioners to appoint or continue in office more than nine assistant commissioners to act in England and Wales: provided always, that after the passing of this act, whenever it may seem fitting to the said commissioners, or whenever they may be thereunto required by her Majesty's principal secretary of state for the home department, the said commissioners, with the consent of the lord high treasurer or the commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury for the time being, or any three of them, shall appoint some person, being a doctor in medicine, a barrister at law, a member of the royal college of surgeons of London or Dublin, an architect or surveyor, and not being one of the assistant commissioners as aforesaid, or some two or more of such persons, to act either in England or Ireland as an assistant commissioner or assistant commissioners, for the purpose of conducting any special inquiry, for a period not exceeding thirty days; and the said commissioners shall delegate to every person so appointed for the purpose of conducting such inquiry all such of the powers of the said commissioners as they may deem necessary or expedient, for summoning witnesses and conducting such inquiry; and every such appointment shall be subject to the approval of one of her Majesty's principal secretaries of state; and every person so appointed as aforesaid to conduct any special inquiry shall, before he enter on the execution of his duties, take the following oath before one of the judges of her Majesty's court of Queen's Bench or Common Pleas, or one of the barons of the Exchequer in England or Ireland, as the case may be:

Professional persons, not being assistant commissioners, may be appointed to make special inquiries.

Such persons, previously to acting, to take the following oath.

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will faithfully and honestly, according to the best of my skill and judgment, inquire into all matters and things which I may be lawfully directed to examine into, and will truly and impartially report thereon."

And it shall not be necessary to notify the appointment of any such person, or the taking of the oath aforesaid, otherwise than by publishing a notification of the same in the London Gazette, and by signifying the same, under the seal of the said commissioners, to the clerk of the peace of the county or counties within which the inquiry in question is to be made: provided always, that if any person be charged with any misconduct in any matter relating to the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, and if any such special inquiry as aforesaid be directed to be made into such charge, the person bringing such charge shall be entitled to make the same at such inquiry by his counsel or attorney, and the person charged with such misconduct shall be entitled to make his defence at such inquiry by counsel or attorney; but nothing herein contained shall release any person charged with any misconduct, or bringing any charge of misconduct, from the liability to be himself examined at any such inquiry in respect of the matter of such charge, in the same manner and subject to the same penalties as under the said firstly-recited act.

In special inquiries on charges of misconduct, the persons may be heard by counsel.

General rules not to be altered by particular rules, without the consent of secretary of state.

3. And be it enacted, that whenever any general rule of the said commissioners shall be in force, it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners to issue any particular rule, order, or regulation, addressed to any single parish or union, by which such general rule or any part thereof would be rescinded or suspended, unless one of her Majesty's principal secretaries of state have first signified to the said commissioners his approval of such particular rule in writing.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 57.

Time of operation of certain rules and orders in cases of urgency.

4. And be it enacted, that every order of the said commissioners suspending or dismissing any paid officer from the exercise of his office, in which the said commissioners shall declare that the urgency of the case requires that such order should take effect within the period of fourteen days, shall come into force at such time as the said commissioners shall in such order direct, notwithstanding that fourteen days shall not have expired since a written or printed copy of the same shall have been sent by the said commissioners, as required by the first-recited act.

Guardians, &c. may set occasional poor to work.

5. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the guardians of any parish or union, subject always to the powers of the poor law commissioners, to prescribe a task of work to be done by any person relieved in any workhouse, in return for the food and lodging afforded to such person; but it shall not be lawful to detain any person against his will for the performance of such task of work for any time exceeding four hours from the hour of breakfast in the morning succeeding the admission of such person into the workhouse; and if any such person, while in such workhouse, refuse or neglect to perform such task of work suited to his age, strength, and capacity, or wilfully destroy or injure his own clothes, or damage any of the property of the board of guardians, he shall be deemed an idle and disorderly person within the meaning of an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the Punishment of idle and disorderly Persons, and Rogues and Vagabonds, in that part of Great Britain called England."

Penalty for not doing work.

5 Geo. IV. c. 38, s. 3.

Guardians to have the like powers as overseers with regard to Lunatics. See also 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 28.

6. And be it enacted, that every board of guardians appointed under the provisions of the said first-recited act, or acting under the regulations of the said commissioners for the relief of the poor, and the relieving officers of such guardians, shall have the like powers as overseers have with respect to insane persons under the provisions of an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws for the erection and regulation of County Lunatic Asylums, and more effectually to provide for the care and maintenance of Pauper and Criminal Lunatics in England," or of any act or acts passed to amend the same; and every such board of guardians shall from time to time pay or cause to be duly paid to the treasurer, managers, or keepers of any county lunatic asylum, public hospital, or licensed house respectively, all costs lawfully due in respect of any poor person maintained in such county lunatic asylum, public hospital, or licensed house, and if such costs shall not be duly paid by such board of guardians or overseers of the parish to which such poor person may have been chargeable according to the provisions of the said recited acts, then and in such case it shall be lawful for any two justices to proceed to the recovery of the said costs, by making and enforcing an order for the same on the overseers of the aforesaid parish, according to the provisions of the said recited acts; and it shall be lawful for any such board of guardians to contract with any person duly licensed to practise as a medical man to certify as to the state and condition of insane persons under the provisions of the last-recited act; and whenever any insane person is relieved by any such board of guardians or any of their officers, the relieving officer within whose district the parish is situate to which such person may be chargeable, or in which such person may be found destitute, shall give the like information to some justice of the peace acting for the division of the county within which such parish is situated as is required by the said act of the reign of King George the Fourth of overseers, and subject to the like penalties for neglect; and the clerk to every such board of guardians shall on the fifteenth day of August in every year, or as soon after as may be, make out and sign two true and faithful lists of all insane persons chargeable to the parish or union in the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, and shall on or before the first day of September next succeeding transmit one copy of such list to the clerk of the peace acting in and for the county within which the parish to which each such insane person is chargeable is situated, or to his deputy, to be by him laid before the justices acting for such county at their next general quarter sessions, and the other copy of such list to the said commissioners; and from and after the passing of this act the overseers of any such parish, or of any parish within any such union, shall not be required to make the annual return required of them by the said act of the reign of King George the Fourth.

9 Geo. IV. c. 40.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 57.

Where parish more than four miles from place of meeting of guardians it may be formed into a district for purposes of relief.

7. And be it enacted, that whenever the whole of any parish or parishes is situated at a greater distance than four miles from the place of meeting of the board of guardians of the union of which such parish or parishes may form part, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, on the application of the board of guardians, to form such parish or parishes into a district, and to direct the said guardians from time to time to appoint a committee of their members to receive applications of poor persons requiring relief in such district, to examine into the cases of such poor persons, and to report to the said guardians thereon.

Determination of disputes as to the election, &c. of guardians.

8. And be it enacted, that in case any question shall arise as to the right of any person to act as an elective guardian it shall be lawful for the commissioners, if they shall see fit, to inquire into the circumstances of the case, and to issue such order or orders therein, under their hands and seal, as they may deem requisite for determining the question; and no such order shall be liable to be removed by writ of certiorari into the court of Queen's Bench unless the application for such writ shall be made during the term next after the issuing of such order.

Resignation of candidates.

9. And be it enacted, that if any person put in nomination for the office of guardian tender to the officer conducting the election of guardians his refusal in writing to serve such office, the election of guardians, so far as regards such person, shall be no further proceeded with.

Continuance of guardians in office.

10. And be it enacted, that in every case in which no person shall be elected for the office of guardian in any parish at any annual election of guardians, the persons elected for the previous year may continue to act as guardians until the next annual election.

Commissioners may accept resignation of any guardian, and may order new election.

11. And be it declared and enacted, that the said commissioners may accept the resignation of any person elected as a guardian tendered for any cause which the commissioners may deem reasonable; and in every case of omission to elect, or of vacancy in any board of guardians, by death, resignation, or disqualification, the said commissioners shall be and shall be deemed to have been empowered to order a new election for the completion of such board.

In case of vacancy, remaining guardians to act.

12. And be it declared and enacted, that in case the full number of guardians shall not be or shall not have been elected at any election of guardians, or in case of any vacancy in any board of guardians by the death, removal, resignation, refusal, or disqualification to act of any elected guardian, the other or remaining members of the said board, being not less than three, shall be and be deemed to have been competent to act until the next election, or until the completion of the said board, as if the number of such board were complete, and that no acts or proceedings shall be liable to be questioned on account of any failure to elect any guardian or guardians, or on account of any vacancy as aforesaid.

De facto guardians.

13. And be it declared and enacted, that no defect in the qualification or election of any person acting as a guardian at a board of guardians, the majority of persons assembled at which shall be entitled to act as guardians, shall be deemed to vitiate or make void any proceedings of such board in which he may have taken part.

Paid officers and others incapable of serving as guardians.

14. And be it enacted, that no person, during the time for which he may serve or hold the office of assistant overseer of any parish, nor any paid officer engaged in the administration of the laws for relief of the poor, nor any person who, having been a paid officer, shall have been dismissed within five years previously, from such office, under the provisions of the said first-recited act, shall be capable of serving as a guardian; and no person receiving any fixed salary or emolument from the poor rates in any parish or union shall be capable of serving as a guardian in such parish or union.

Ex officio guardians not incompetent to act as justices.

15. And whereas doubts have been entertained whether justices of the peace who are ex officio members of boards of guardians of parishes or unions under the provisions of the first-recited act can lawfully act as justices of the peace in cases in which the guardians of such parishes or unions are complainants, or are otherwise interested or concerned, and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed; be it therefore enacted, that no justice of the peace shall be disabled from acting as such justice at any petty or special or general or quarter sessions in any matter merely on the ground that such justice of the peace is an ex officio member of any board of guardians complaining, interested, or concerned in such matter, or has acted as such at any meeting of such board of guardians.

Corporate powers of board of guardians.

16. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for every board of guardians constituted under the said first-recited act to accept, take, and hold, on behalf of the union or parish respectively for which they may act, any lands, buildings, goods, effects, or other property as a corporation, and in all cases to sue and be sued in their corporate name.

Mode of application to justices, &c. by boards of guardians.

17. And be it enacted, that wherever a board of guardians is empowered to make any order, or to prefer any complaint, claim, or application, before justices or otherwise, if any such board resolve to make such order, or to prefer such complaint, claim, or application, a copy of the minute of such resolution, signed by the presiding chairman of such board, and sealed with their seal, and countersigned by their clerk or person acting as their clerk, shall be doemed and taken to be sufficient proof of the making of such order, or of the preferring of such complaint, claim, application, or otherwise, as the case may be; and that whenever, either for the purpose of making an order for the removal of a pauper, or on the trial of an appeal against such order, or for any other purpose, it shall be necessary to prove to what parish a pauper has become chargeable, (if in such parish the laws for the relief of the poor shall be administered by a board of guardians or a district board,) a certificate of such pauper having so become chargeable, signed, sealed, and countersigned as aforesaid, shall be sufficient proof to what parish and at what time such pauper became and was chargeable, unless the contrary shall be proved by other legal evidence; and that in all cases in which the guardians of any parish or union are or may hereafter be empowered to make any application or complaint, or to take any proceedings before any justices at petty or special or general or quarter sessions, it shall be lawful for any officer of such guardians empowered by any board of such guardians, by an order in writing, under the hand of the presiding chairman of such board, and sealed with the common seal of such guardians, to make such application or complaint, or to take such proceedings on behalf of such guardians, as effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same were made or taken by such guardians, or any of them, in person.

Certificate of chargeability. (a)

Guardians may authorise their officers to take legal proceedings.

Construction.

18. And be it enacted, that the said act of the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty, and the act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his said Majesty, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations of Parishes in England and Wales," and the act passed in the seventh year of the reign of his said Majesty, intituled "An Act to regulate Parochial Assessments," and so much of an act passed in the second year of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the more effectual Relief of the destitute Poor in Ireland," as relates to the style of the Poor Law Commissioners, their appointment, the delegation of powers to one of their number, the sittings of their board, their common seal, and the residence of one of their number in Ireland, and all acts to amend or extend any of the said acts, or the said provisions of the act last recited, and the present act, shall (except so far as the provisions of any former act shall be expressly altered or amended by the provisions of any subsequent act,) be construed as one act; and that in each and every such act (except the said act for the more effectual relief for the destitute poor in Ireland) the words "auditor," "guardian," "justice or justices of the peace," "oath," "officer," "overseer," "owner," "rack rent," "parish," "person," "poor," "poor laws," "laws for relief of the poor," "poor rate," "general quarter sessions," "union," "united workhouse," "vestry," "workhouse," and words importing the singular number or the masculine gender only, shall be interpreted as is provided in the first-recited act; and that the provisions of the said first-recited act shall extend to every rule, order or regulation directed or authorised to be made by the said commissioners under the provisions of an act passed in the seventh year of his said late Majesty, intituled "An Act for registering Births, Deaths, and Marriages in England," or by an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to extend the Practice of Vaccination."

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.
5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 69.
6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 96.
1 & 2 Vict. c. 56, ss. 118 to 122.
1 & 2 Vict. c. 25, s. 2.
7 Will. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 50.
2 & 3 Vict. c. 84.
6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 86, s. 10.
3 & 4 Vict. c. 29.

Act limited to England and Wales.

19. And be enacted, that, except so far as is hereinbefore expressly excepted, and so far as the continuance in office or appointment of the said commissioners, their assistant commissioners, secretary, assistant secretaries, and other officers and persons appointed by them, and their removal, no part of this act shall extend to Ireland.

Act may be amended this session.

20. And be enacted, that this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this present session of parliament.

(a) As to the proof, see 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 69, p. 1310.

SCHEDULE.

Form :—Annual Return.

A true List of all Insane Persons, Lunatics, and Idiots, chargeable to the Parishes comprised within [such Part of] the Union [as is situate] in the County of ; specifying the Names, Sex, and Age of each, and whether dangerous or otherwise, and for what Length of Time they have been supposed to be of unsound Mind, and where confined, or how otherwise disposed of.

Name.	Age.	Sex.	Parish to which chargeable.	Where Maintained.					Weekly Cost of Maintenance and Clothing.	Whether Lunatic or Idiot.	Dangerous to himself or others.	Of Dirty Habits.	For what Length of Time supposed to be of unsound Mind.	Observations.
				In a County Asylum, and what Asylum, and when sent thither.	In a licensed House, and where and when sent thither.	In the Union Workhouse.	In Lodgings, or boarded out, and where.	Residing with Friends, and where.

Signed by me, this 15th day of August, 18 ,

A. B.,

Clerk to the Board of Guardians of the said Union.

7 & 8 Vict. Cap. 101.

An Act for the further Amendment of the Laws relating to the Poor in England. [9th August, 1844.]

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend an act passed in the session held in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," and certain other acts relating to the relief of the poor in England: be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this act, all powers for obtaining or making an order upon any putative father for the maintenance of a bastard child shall cease and determine, except as herein-after provided.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

Powers of making order on putative father to cease.

2. And be it enacted, that any single woman who may be with child, or who may be delivered of a bastard child, after the passing of this act, or who has been delivered of a bastard child within the period of six calendar months before the passing of this act, may either before the birth, or at any time within twelve months from the birth of such child, or at any time thereafter, upon proof that the man alleged to be the father of such child has within the twelve months next after the birth of such child paid money for its maintenance, make application to an one justice of the peace acting for the petty sessional division of the county, or for the city, borough, or place in which she may reside, for a summons to be served on the man alleged by her to be the father of such child; and if such application be made before the birth of the child, the woman shall make a deposition upon oath stating who is the father of such child, and such justice of the peace shall thereupon issue his summons to the person alleged to be father of such child to appear at a petty session, to be holden after the expiration of six days at least for the petty sessional division, city, borough, or other place in which such justice usually acts.

The putative father to be summoned to petty sessions, on application of mother of bastard.

3. And be it enacted, that after the birth of such bastard child, on the appearance of the person so summoned, or on proof that the summons was duly served on such person, or left at his last place of abode six days at least before the petty session, the justices in such petty session shall hear the evidence of such woman, and such other evidence as she may produce, and shall also hear any evidence tendered by or on behalf of the person alleged to be the father; and if the evidence of the mother be corroborated in some material particular by other testimony, to the satisfaction of the said justices, they may adjudge the man to be the putative father of such bastard child; and they may also, if they see fit, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, proceed to make an order on the putative father for the payment to the mother of the bastard child, or to any person who may be appointed to have the custody of such child under the provisions of this act, of a sum of money weekly, and of such costs as may have been incurred in the obtaining of such order, including, if they think proper, ten shillings for the midwife, and ten shillings towards the funeral expenses of the child, provided it have died before the making of such order; and if the application be made before the birth of the child, or within two calendar months after the birth of the child, such weekly sum may, if the said justices think fit, be calculated from the birth of the child, at a rate not exceeding five shillings per week for the first six weeks after the birth of such child; and in other cases such sum shall not exceed two shillings and sixpence per week from the time of the making of the application; and if at any time after the expiration of one calendar month from the making of such order as aforesaid it be made to appear to any one justice, upon oath or affirmation, that any sum to be paid in pursuance of such order has not been paid, such justice may, by warrant under his hand and seal, cause such putative father to be brought before any two justices; and in case such putative father neglect or refuse to make payment of the sums due from him under such order, or since any commitment for disobedience to such order as herein-after provided, together with the costs attending such warrant, apprehension, and bringing up of such putative father, such two justices may, by warrant under their hands and seals, direct the sum so appearing to be due, together with such costs, to be recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such putative father, and may order such putative father to be detained and kept in safe custody until return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress, unless he

Justices in petty sessions may make an order on the putative father for maintenance and costs, and enforce the same by distress and commitment give sufficient security, by way of recognizance or otherwise, to the satisfaction of such justices, for his appearance before two justices on the day which may be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress, such day not being more than seven days from the time of taking any such security; but if upon the return of such warrant, or if by the admission of such putative father, it appear that no sufficient distress can be had, then any such two justices may, if they see fit, by warrant under their hands and seals, cause such putative father to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, city, borough, or place where they have jurisdiction, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless such sum and costs, and all reasonable charges attending the said distress, together with the costs and charges attending the commitment and conveying to gaol or to the house of correction, and of the persons employed to convey him thither, be sooner paid and satisfied: provided always, that if the woman have allowed the weekly payment to be in arrear for more than thirteen successive weeks, without application to a justice, the man shall not be called upon to pay more than the amount due for thirteen weeks in discharge of the whole debt, and no warrant of distress shall be issued for more than the amount of arrears for thirteen weeks' payment in discharge of the whole arrears or debt.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

Proviso, when payment for thirteen weeks is in arrear.

Applications to be made within forty days.

4. And be it enacted, that the justices in petty session as aforesaid may adjourn the hearing of the case as often as to them may seem fit; but no such order shall be made unless applied for at such petty sessions within the space of forty days from the service of the summons after the birth of the bastard child on the person alleged to be the father of such bastard child; and if within twenty-four hours after the adjudication and making of any order on the putative father as aforesaid, such putative father give notice of appeal to the mother of the bastard child, and also within seven days give sufficient security, by recognizance or otherwise, for the payment of costs, to the satisfaction of some one justice of the peace, it shall be lawful for such putative father to appeal to the general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden after the period of fourteen days next after the making of the said order for the county, city, borough, or place for which such petty sessions may have been held; and the justices in such quarter sessions assembled, or the recorder, as the case may be, shall thereupon hear and determine such appeal, and shall order such costs to be paid by either party as to them or him may seem fit.

Appeal to quarter sessions for the putative father.

Money under the order to be paid to the mother or to a person appointed by the justices.

5. And be it enacted, that all money payable under any order as aforesaid shall be due and payable to the mother of the bastard child in respect of such time and so long as she lives and is of sound mind, and is not in any gaol or prison, or under sentence of transportation; and after the death of the mother of such bastard child, or whilst such mother is of unsound mind, or confined in any gaol or prison, or under sentence of transportation, any two justices may, if they see fit, by order under their hands and seals, from time to time appoint some person who, with his own consent, shall have the custody of such bastard child, so long as such bastard child is not chargeable to any parish or union, and any two such justices may revoke the appointment of such person, and may appoint another person in his stead; and every person so appointed to have the custody of a bastard child shall, so long as such child is not chargeable to any parish or union, be empowered to make application for the recovering of all payments becoming due under the order of the court of petty session as aforesaid, in the same manner as the mother of such bastard child might have done; and the clerk to the justices making any order on the putative father of a bastard child, or appointing any person to have the custody of such child, as herein-before provided, shall as soon as may be send by post or otherwise a duplicate of such order or appointment, signed by such clerk, to the clerk to the guardians of the union or parish in which the mother of such bastard child resided at the time of making such order or appointment: provided always, that no order for the maintenance or support of any such bastard child made in pursuance of this act shall, except for the purpose of recovering money previously due under such order, be of any force or validity after the child in respect of whom it was made has attained the age of thirteen years, or after the marriage of the mother of such child, or after the death of such child.

Time of cessation of order.

Mother punishable for neglect or desertion of her bastard child.

6. And be it declared and enacted, that every woman neglecting to maintain her bastard child, being able wholly or in part so to do, whereby such child becomes chargeable to any parish or union, shall be punishable as an idle and disorderly person, under the provisions of an act made and passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the Punishment of idle and disorderly Persons, and Rogues and Vagabonds, in that part of the United Kingdom called England;" and every woman so neglecting to maintain her bastard child, after having been once before convicted of such offence, and every woman deserting her bastard child, whereby such bastard child becomes chargeable to any parish or union, shall be punishable as a rogue and vagabond, under the provisions of the said last-recited act.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

5 Geo. IV. c. 83.

Officers of parishes or unions not to receive money under the order, or to interfere in any respect.

7. And be it enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any justice of the peace to appoint any officer of any parish or union to have the custody of any bastard child as herein-before provided, or for any officer of any parish or union, clerk of justices, or constable, to receive any money in respect of any bastard child under an order of petty session as aforesaid, or as such officer to conduct any application to make or enforce such order, or in any way to interfere as such officer in causing such application to be made, or in procuring evidence in support of such application, under a penalty of forty shillings, to be levied on conviction before any two justices, as penalties and forfeitures under the said first-recited act: provided always, that after the death of such mother, or if such mother be incapacitated as aforesaid, so often as any bastard child for whose maintenance such order of petty sessions has been made, becomes chargeable to any parish or union by the neglect of the putative father to make the payments due under the orders of justices, then and in such case it shall be lawful for any board of guardians of a union or parish, or if there be no such board of guardians for the overseers of any parish or place, to make such application for the enforcement of the order as might have been made by the mother of such bastard child if alive; but all payments for the maintenance of such child made in pursuance of such application shall be made to some person to be from time to time appointed by the justices as herein-before provided, and on condition that such bastard child shall cease to be chargeable to such parish or union.

Proceedings against putative father in case of death or incapacity of mother.

Penalties for promoting marriage of a mother of a bastard improperly, misapplying monies, or maltreating a bastard child.

8. And be it enacted, that if any officer of a union, parish, or place, endeavour to induce any person to contract a marriage by threat or promise respecting any application to be made or any order to be enforced with respect to the maintenance of any bastard child, such officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; and every person having the custody of any bastard child under any order of justices, as herein-before provided, who may misapply monies paid by the putative father for the support of such child, or may withhold proper nourishment from such child, or otherwise abuse and maltreat such child, shall, on conviction before any two justices, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding ten pounds.

Existing orders, &c. not to be affected.

Orders made before 14th of August, 1834, to cease on 1st January, 1849.

9. And be it enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall affect the validity of any orders for the maintenance of a bastard child made by justices in quarter or petty sessions before the passing of this act; but no such order made before the fourteenth day of August, one thousand eight hundred and thirty four, shall be in force after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and forty nine, and that all proceedings actually pending before justices in quarter sessions or petty sessions at the time of the passing of this act may be continued, and orders made therein in the same manner as if this act had not been passed.

Orders made by justices acting in two adjoining counties to be valid, although not made in the county in which the parish is situate.

10. And whereas various unions established under the authority of the said recited act are situate partly in one county, riding, or division, and partly in an adjoining county, riding, or division; and whereas doubts have been entertained whether any justice of the peace acting under two commissions for different counties, ridings, or divisions, can legally make orders in bastardy when acting in petty sessions within the limits of one of such commissions, for such parts of such unions as are situate within the limits of the other of such commissions; and whereas it is expedient to remove all such doubts with regard to orders which have before the passing of this act been made under such circumstances; be it therefore enacted, that all orders in bastardy which have been made by any justices of the peace acting as such under two commissions for any two adjoining counties, ridings, or divisions, shall, although not made within the county, riding, or division in which the parish interested in the order, or any part thereof, is situate, be as valid, good, and effectual in the law, to all intents and purposes as if they had been made within such county, riding, or division.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

Clerks to justices annually to make a return of summonses, orders, &c. to the clerks of the peace; who shall transmit copies thereof to the Secretary of State, with lists of appeals.

11. And be it enacted, that every clerk to the justices shall once in each year, (that is to say,) as soon as may be after the first day of January, make up, in the form in the Schedule (A.) annexed to this act, and forward to the clerk of the peace, a complete list of summonses issued, applications heard, and orders made as aforesaid since the first day of January of the year preceding, by the justices to whom he acts as clerk; and every clerk of the peace shall receive such lists, and shall, on demand of the clerk to the justices, acknowledge under his hand the receipt of any such list, and shall preserve the said lists, and shall, as soon as may be after the receipt of such lists, transmit copies thereof, duly certified, to her Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, and shall also transmit a list of all the cases in which appeals have been made to the court of quarter sessions during the same period, with the result of every such appeal; and it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace, at their respective general quarter sessions of the peace, to make and settle a fee or fees to be paid to every such clerk to the justices for every such list; and on production by any such clerk to the justices of the acknowledgment by the clerk of the peace of the receipt of such list the treasurer of the county shall pay the fee so made and settled, and due in respect of any such list, out of the county stock in the hands of such treasurer.

Poor law commissioners to prescribe the duties of poor apprentices, and masters neglecting to fulfil them liable to penalty.

Guardians to bind poor children apprentices instead of overseers.

Assent of justices not required.

12. And be it enacted, that the poor law commissioners may, by order under their hands and seal, prescribe the duties of the masters to whom poor children may be apprenticed, and the terms and conditions to be inserted in the indentures by which such children may be so bound as apprentices; and every master of such apprentice who wilfully refuses or neglects to perform any of such terms or conditions so inserted in any such indenture shall be liable, upon conviction thereof before any two justices, to forfeit any sum not exceeding twenty pounds; and that after the first day of October next, no poor child shall be bound apprentice by the overseers of any parish included in any such union or subject to a board of guardians under the provisions of the first-recited act, but it shall be lawful for the guardians of such union or parish respectively to bind any such poor child to be an apprentice, and in such case the indentures of apprenticeship shall be executed by the said guardians and shall not need to be allowed, assented to, or executed by any justice or justices of the peace, and the guardians shall have all the powers for binding or assigning any such apprentice which are now possessed by overseers, and shall cause all apprentices so bound or assigned by them to be registered by their clerk according to the form prescribed by the statute of the forty-second year of the reign of King George the Third relating to the registration of parish apprentices, so far as the same may be applicable to such binding or assignment: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall directly or indirectly interfere with the provisions of any act of parliament relating to apprentices to be bound to the sea service.

Compulsory apprenticeship abolished.

Repeal of 43 Eliz. c. 2.

8 & 9 Will. III. c. 111.

13. And be it enacted, that after the passing of this act so much of an act passed in the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled "An Act for the Relief of the Poor," and so much of an act passed in the session held in the eighth and ninth years of the reign of King William the Third, intituled "An Act for supplying some Defects in the Laws for the Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom," or of any other act of parliament, whether general or local, as compels any person to receive any poor child as an apprentice, shall be and is hereby repealed.

Repeal of so much of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, as relates to number of votes of owners and rate-payers.

58 Geo. III. c. 69.

Votes of owners and rate-payers assimilated.

14. And whereas by the said first-recited act it is provided, that in every case of an election of guardians under the said act, or whenever the consent of owners of property or rate-payers in any parish or union may be required for any of the purposes of the said act, the owner, as well as the rate-payer in respect of any property in such parish or union, shall be entitled to vote, and the owner shall have the same number and proportion of votes respectively as is provided for inhabitants and other persons in and by an act made and passed in the fifty-eighth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the Regulation of Parish Vestries," and in and by an act to amend the same, made and passed in the fifty-ninth year of his said late Majesty; and the rate-payers under two hundred pounds shall each have a single vote; and the rate-payers rated at two hundred pounds or more, but under four hundred pounds, shall each have two votes; and the rate-payers rated at four hundred pounds or more shall each have three votes: And whereas it is expedient that the number and proportion of votes of owners of property and of rate-payers respectively should be assimilated, be it enacted, that so much of the said act as is above recited relating to the number and proportion of votes of owners of property and of rate-payers respectively shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that in all cases in which by the said act, or by any act amending or extending the same, owners of property and rate-payers are entitled to vote, every owner of property and rate-payer shall have respectively the same number and proportion of votes, according to the scale following (that is to say,) if the property in respect of which he is entitled to vote be rated upon a rateable value of less than fifty pounds, he shall have one vote, if such rateable value amount to fifty pounds and be less than one hundred pounds, he shall have two votes if it amount to one hundred pounds and be less than one hundred and fifty pounds he shall have three votes; if it amount to one hundred and fifty pounds and be less than two hundred pounds, he shall have four votes; if it amount to two hundred pounds and be less than two hundred and fifty pounds, he shall have five votes; and if it amount to or exceed two hundred and fifty pounds, he shall have six votes

Owners of property and rate payers to vote according to the scale herein set forth

15. And be it enacted, that no owner of property shall be entitled to vote as such, under the provisions of the said recited act, either in person or proxy, during the year following the twenty fifth day of March in any year, unless before the first day of February next preceding such twenty-fifth day of March he had given to the overseers the statement required by the said act, signed by him, nor unless such statement contain a description of the nature of the interest or estate he may have in such property, and a statement of the amount of all rent service (if any) which he may receive or pay in respect thereof, and of the persons from whom he may receive or to whom he may pay such rent service; and no person shall be entitled to vote as proxy until fourteen days after he have made his claim so to vote in the manner required by the said act, and no person shall be entitled to vote as proxy for more than four owners of property in any one parish (except he be a steward, bailiff, or land agent, or collector of rents for the owners of property for whom he may be appointed to vote), and no appointment of proxy shall remain in force for a longer period than two years from the making thereof, excepting only in the case in which an owner appoints his tenant, bailiff, steward, land agent, or collector of rents to be his proxy, in which case such appointment shall remain in force so long as the proxy may continue to be such tenant, bailiff, steward, land agent, or collector, and such appointment remains unrevoked, and the overseers of every parish containing a population exceeding two thousand persons, according to the last enumeration of the population published by the authority of Parliament, shall, on or before the fifth day of the month of February in every year, enter in the book to be from time to time provided for the purpose the names and addresses of all persons who before the first day of the said month of February have given such statement or made such claims as owners or proxies as aforesaid; and such overseers shall allow any person to peruse such book, without payment of any fee, at all reasonable hours between the said fifth day and the tenth day of February; and any person who has given such statement, or made such claim, or any rate-payer of such parish, may, on or before the fifteenth day of the said month of February, object to any other person as not being entitled to vote as such owner, by delivering to the clerk of the board of guardians of the said parish, or of the union in which it may be comprised, and at the address of the person objected to, notice in writing of the grounds of such objection, and on or before the twentieth day of such month of February such clerk shall send to the overseers of such parish notice of some day, between the twenty-fourth of the said month and the first of March then next, on which he or some person duly appointed for the purpose will hear evidence in relation to such objections, and of the place within the parish or union at which he or such other person will attend to hear such evidence; and such overseers shall forthwith cause a copy of such notice to be fixed on or near the doors of all churches or chapels within such parish, and at all the usual places of affixing notices of parochial business; and such clerk shall attend on the day and at the place so appointed, and shall, in the presence of all persons who may think fit to be present, hear any matter adduced in support of such grounds of objection, or in opposition thereto, but none other; and the overseers of the said parish shall then and there attend, and produce to such clerk the rate-books of the parish for the whole year preceding, and shall answer all such questions as such clerk may put to them or any of them touching the matter of any such objection; and such clerk shall retain in the said book the name of all persons to whom Regulations as to votes of owners and of proxies.

Objection.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

no objection has been duly made, and of all persons objected to, unless the party objecting have appeared in support of his objection, and established such objection, and when the name of any person has been duly objected to, such clerk shall require proof of the right of such person to vote as owner; and in case any matter be adduced in support of the objection, and the right of the person objected to be not proved to the satisfaction of such clerk, he shall expunge the name of such person from such book; and such clerk shall have power to adjourn from time to time, and administer an oath to the overseers of any parish, and to all persons attending before him claiming a right to vote as owners or objecting to such right, and to all witnesses who may be tendered or examined on either side; and such clerk shall write his initials against every name struck out, and sign his name to every page of the said book; and the persons whose names as owners are retained by such clerk in such book shall be the only persons entitled to vote in such parish as owners of property for the year following the twenty-fifth of March next ensuing: provided always, that the said commissioners may, if they see fit, by order under their hands and seal, direct the guardians of such parish or union to appoint some person, other than the clerk to such guardians, as a paid officer, to hear and decide the matter of such objections as aforesaid, who shall have all such powers as are hereinbefore given to the clerk, and perform all such duties as are hereinbefore imposed on the clerk in that behalf: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall affect any election in which proceedings have been commenced before the passing of this act.

So much of 4 & 5 Will. IV. as relates to not voting only to extend to poor's rates.

16. And whereas by the said first-recited act it is provided that no person shall be deemed a rate-payer, or be entitled to vote, or do any other act, matter, or thing as such, under the provisions of that act, unless he shall have been rated to the relief of the poor for the whole year immediately preceding his so voting or otherwise acting as such rate-payer, and shall have paid the parochial rates and assessments made and assessed upon him for the period of one whole year, as well as those due from him at the time of so voting or acting, except such as shall have been made or become due within six months immediately preceding such voting or acting; be it enacted, that such parochial rates and assessments shall be deemed to extend only to rates made for the relief of the poor.

Annual election of guardians to take place within forty days after the 25th of March.

17. And whereas in the said first-recited act it is provided, that guardians of the poor elected under the provisions of that act shall go out of office, and guardians for the ensuing year shall be chosen within fourteen days next after the twenty-fifth day of March in every year: and whereas such period hath been found to be too short, and it is expedient to extend the same; be it therefore enacted, that the period within which the annual election of guardians shall take place shall be extended to the period of forty days next after the said twenty-fifth day of March, and that the guardians of the preceding year shall continue in office for the said period of forty days, or until the election of guardians for the succeeding year have taken place.

Number of guardians may be altered with reference to population, &c.

18. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, having due regard to the relative population or circumstances of any parish included in a union, to alter the number of guardians to be elected for such parish, without such consent as is required by the said first-recited act.

Parishes may be divided into wards.

19. And be it enacted, that in every case in which a parish in which guardians are to be elected under the provisions of the said first-recited act, contains more than twenty thousand persons, according to the enumeration of the population then last published by authority of Parliament, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by order under their hands and seal, for the purpose of conducting the election of guardians, to divide such parish into such and so many wards as they may deem expedient, so that no such ward shall contain a number of rated houses less than four hundred, and to determine the number of guardians to be elected for every such ward, having due regard to the value of the rateable property therein; and each such ward shall, for the purpose of every election of guardians, so far as the said commissioners may direct, be considered as a separate parish.

Qualifications of guardians in wards.

20. And be it enacted, that in every case in which a parish is divided into wards for the purpose of electing guardians, every person qualified to be elected as a guardian in the parish shall be qualified to be elected in any ward within the same parish; but no person shall at any election of guardians be elected for more than one ward within the same parish; and if at any such election a person be nominated in two or more wards, the returning officer at such election shall, if such person reside within the parish, give such person notice thereof in writing, to be left at his place of residence on the day following the last day fixed for the nomination of candidates, and such person, whether he reside in the parish or not, may at any time, until two days proceding the issuing of the voting papers, elect by notice in writing delivered to the returning officer any one ward for which he will stand an election; and if he do not so elect some one ward the returning officer shall place his name on the list of candidates for that ward only for which he was first duly nominated.

Voting in wards.

21. And be it enacted, that no person entitled to vote shall give in the whole of the wards into which a parish may be divided a greater number of votes than he would be entitled to have given if the parish had not been divided into wards, nor in any one ward a greater number of votes than he is entitled to in respect of property in that ward; but, subject to the foregoing limitations, any ratepayer, owner of property, or proxy entitled to vote may, by notice in writing delivered to the overseers of the parish before the day appointed for the annual nomination of candidates, elect in what ward or wards he will vote for the ensuing year, and determine the proportion of votes which he will give in any one or more of such wards; and if he do not give such notice he shall not be entitled to vote for any ward in which he does not reside.

Restriction as to separate overseers for townships.

22. And be it enacted, that after the passing of this act it shall not be lawful to appoint separate overseers for any township or village or other place for which before the passing of this act separate overseers had not been lawfully appointed.

Orders of poor law commissioners valid, notwithstanding separate appointment of overseers.

23. And it is hereby declared and enacted, that in all cases in which overseers have for the first time been separately appointed for any township or village since the fourteenth day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four all orders of the poor law commissioners, determining the number of guardians, or ascertaining the averages of any such township or village, or of any portion of the parish from which such township or village had been separated, shall be and be deemed to be good and valid in law, notwithstanding such separate appointment of overseers.

Justices who reside in extra-parochial places or parishes within unions to be ex-officio guardians.

24. And be it enacted, that when any union has been formed under the provisions of the said first-recited act, or where the said commissioners have under the provisions of the said act directed that the laws for the relief of the poor of any single parish shall be administered by a board of guardians, every justice of the peace acting for the county, riding, or division in which such union or parish, or any part thereof, is situated, and residing in any extra-parochial place the boundary line of which, or the greater part of the boundary line of which, is included within or coincident with the boundary line of such union or parish, shall be ex officio a guardian of such union or parish; and every justice of the peace residing in any parish within such a union, and acting for any county, riding, or division in which any part of such union is situated, shall be ex officio a guardian of such union.

Relief of married women in certain cases to be subject to the same conditions as if they were widows.

25. And be it enacted, that so long as it may appear that the husband of any woman is beyond the seas, or in custody of the law, or in confinement in a licensed house or asylum as a lunatic or idiot, all relief given to such woman, or to her child or children, shall, notwithstanding her coverture, be given to such woman in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if she was a widow; but nothing herein contained shall diminish or affect the obligations or liabilities of such husband in respect of such relief.

Relief to widows in certain cases.

26. And be it enacted, that in the case of any person being a widow having a legitimate child dependent on her for support, and no illegitimate child born after the commencement of her widowhood, and who at the time of her husband's death was resident with him in some place other than the parish of her legal settlement, and not situated in any union in which such parish is comprised, it shall be lawful for the guardians of such parish or union, if they see fit, to grant relief to such widow, although not residing in such parish or union: provided always, that, notwithstanding any thing herein contained, the guardians of any union or parish, and the overseers of any parish, in which such widow may be resident or may require relief, shall be and remain liable to relieve such widow in the same manner as any other person requiring relief in such union or parish.

Proviso.

Expenses incurred for insane paupers may be levied off their estates.

27. And be it enacted, that if it be made to appear to any two justices that any insane person, lunatic, or idiot chargeable to any parish hath an estate more than sufficient to maintain his family, they shall by order under their hands and seals direct the overseers of the parish to which such person is chargeable to seize so much of any money, to seize and sell so much of any goods and chattels, or to receive so much of the rent of the lands or tenements of such person who is proved to such justices to be insane, necessary to pay any charges incurred in providing for the removal, maintenance, clothing, medicine, and care of such person; and if any trustee or other person having the possession, custody, or charge of any property of an insane person, lunatic, or idiot, or if the governor and company of the Bank of England, or any other person or persons, having in his or their hands any stock, interest, dividend, or annuity due to any such insane person, lunatic, or idiot, pay any money to any overseer or to any guardians of the poor to defray the charges incurred by any parish in the removal, maintenance, clothing, medicine, or care of such insane person, lunatic, or idiot, the receipt of such overseer or of the clerk of such guardians shall be a good discharge to such trustee or other person aforesaid.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

Guardians under local acts to have powers with respect to insane poor.

28. And be it enacted, that the guardians of every parish or union appointed under any local act, and their officers appointed to act in the relief of the poor, and their clerks shall, from and after the passing of this act, have the like powers and shall be liable to perform the same duties with respect to insane persons as are provided in the case of guardians appointed under the provisions of the said first-recited act, their relieving officers and their clerks respectively.

Guardians to apply money raised for emigration.

29. And be it enacted, that the guardians of any parish or union constituted by the said commissioners shall apply all money raised or borrowed for the purpose of defraying the expenses of emigration in such parish or in any parish within such union, subject to the conditions and restrictions imposed by the said first-recited act.

Cost of obtaining site of workhouses in the metropolitan police district, &c.

30. And be it enacted, that in addition to the principal sum or sums of money which guardians are empowered by the said first-recited act to raise or borrow for the purpose of purchasing, hiring, building, enlarging, or altering workhouses, or buildings to be converted into workhouses, the guardians of any parish or union any part of which is situated within the metropolitan police district, or the city of London, or the select vestry of the parish of Liverpool, may, with the consent of the poor law commissioners, also raise or borrow and charge the future poor rates of such parish or union with such further or other sum or sums of money as may be or may have been necessary for the purchase of any land, or interest in land, required as the site of such workhouse, or of any additions to any such workhouse.

Burials of paupers.

31. And be it declared and enacted, that it shall be lawful for guardians, or where there are no guardians for the overseers, to bury the body of any poor person which may be within their parish or union respectively, and to charge the expense thereof to any parish under their control to which such person may have been chargeable, or in which he may have died, or otherwise in which such body may be; and unless the guardians, in compliance with the desire expressed by such person in his lifetime, or by any of his relations, or for any other cause, direct the body of such poor person to be buried in the churchyard or burial ground of the parish to which such person has been chargeable (which they are hereby authorised to do), every dead body which the guardians or any of their officers duly authorised shall direct to be buried at the expense of the poor rates shall (unless the deceased person, or the husband or wife or next of kin of such deceased person, have otherwise desired,) be buried in the churchyard or other consecrated burial ground in or belonging to the parish, division of parish, chapelry, or place in which the death may have occurred; and in all cases of burial, under the direction of the guardians or overseers as aforesaid the fee or fees payable by the custom of the place in which the burial may take place, or under the provisions of an act of Parliament, shall be paid out of the poor rates, for the burial of each such body, to the person or persons who by such custom or under such act may be entitled to receive any fee; provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any officer connected with the relief of the poor to receive any money for the burial of the body of any poor person which may be within the parish, division of parish, chapelry, or place in which the death may have occurred, or to act as undertaker for personal gain or reward in the burial of any such body, or to receive any money from any dissecting school or school of anatomy, or hospital, or from any person or persons to whom any such body may be delivered, or to derive any personal emolument whatever for or in respect of the burial or disposal of any such body; and any such officer offending as aforesaid shall, on conviction thereof before any two justices, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding five pounds.

Commissioners may combine parishes and unions into districts for audit of accounts.

Election of district auditors.

32. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners from time to time, by order under their hands and seal, to combine the parishes and unions in England and Wales into districts for the audit of accounts, and from time to time to add any parish or union to any such district, or separate any parish or union therefrom; and the chairman and vice chairman of each board of guardians constituted under the said first-recited act or any other act, or if there be no chairman or vice chairman of any guardians constituted under any other act, then some two of their number to be selected by such last-mentioned guardians, or if there be no such body then some two of the overseers to be selected by the overseers respectively acting within the district, shall elect, at the time and in the manner to be prescribed by the said commissioners, a person to be the auditor of the district; but in any case in which there are two vice chairmen appointed in any board of guardians such board of guardians shall select one of the vice chairmen, who shall vote in the election of such auditor; and the said commissioners shall have all the powers with regard to the salaries of the said auditors to be charged on the poor rates, and to all other matters relating to auditors for such districts, as they have under the said first-recited act with regard to paid officers; and every auditor appointed for such a district shall have full powers to examine, audit, allow, or disallow of accounts, and of items therein, relating to monies assessed for and applicable to the relief of the poor of all parishes and unions within his district, and to all other money applicable to such relief; and such auditor shall charge in every account audited by him the amount of any deficiency or loss incurred by the negligence or misconduct of any person accounting, or of any sum for which any such person is accountable, but not brought by him into account against such person, and shall certify on the face of every account audited by him any money, books, deeds, papers, goods or chattels, found by him to be due from any person; and when any such auditor has so certified any money, books, deeds, papers, goods or chattels, to be due from any person, he shall forthwith report the same to the said commissioners; and the person from whom any money is so certified to be due shall within seven days pay or cause to be paid such money to the treasurer of the guardians of the union or parish, if there be any such treasurer; and in the case of a union such money shall be applied by the guardians to the use of all or any of the parishes included in such union, according as all or any of such parishes may be interested in the sum so paid; and all books, deeds, papers, goods and chattels, and in the case where there is no treasurer as aforesaid all monies so certified to be due, shall be delivered over or paid, within seven days of the same being certified, to the person or persons authorised to receive the same; and if any such money, books, deeds, papers, goods or chattels, be not duly paid or delivered over as herein-before directed, the said auditor, or any auditor subsequently appointed, shall proceed, as soon as may be, to enforce the payment or delivering over of the same; and all monies so certified to be due by such auditor shall be recoverable as so certified from all or any of the persons making or authorising the illegal payment, or otherwise answerable for such monies, and shall be recovered on the application of such auditor, or of any such auditor subsequently appointed, or by any person for the time being entitled or authorised to receive the same, in the same manner as penalties and forfeitures may be recovered under the provisions of the said first-recited act; and the expences attending such proceeding or recovery shall (except so far as the same may be paid by the person against whom the proceedings have been taken) be repaid to such auditor by the guardians of the parish or union, or by the district board of the district to which the proceedings may respectively relate, and shall be charged in their accounts in such manner and in such proportions as the said commissioners may direct; and if any person from whom any such books, deeds, papers, goods or chattels, may be due, neglect or refuse to deliver over the same to the person for the time being entitled or authorised to receive the same, the person so neglecting or refusing shall be liable, on the complaint of any such auditor for the time being, or of the person entitled or authorised to receive the same, to the penalties and proceedings provided in the case of overseers refusing or neglecting to pay and deliver over to their successors any sum or sums of money, goods, chattels, and other things, in their hands; and any churchwarden, surveyor of the highways, overseer or other officer of a parish or union, who shall wilfully authorise or make an illegal or fraudulent payment from the church rate, highway rate, or other public fund of a parish or union, or shall unlawfully make any entry in his accounts for the purpose of defraying or making up to himself or any other person the whole or any part of any sum of money unlawfully expended from the poor rate, or disallowed or surcharged in the accounts of any parish or union by such auditor, shall, upon conviction thereof before any two justices, forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, and also treble the amount of such payment or of the sum so entered in his accounts.

Their powers and duties.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

Rate books, &c. to be made up seven days before the audit day.

33. And be it enacted, that seven clear days at least before the day fixed for the audit of accounts the overseers or other officers employed in any parish in carrying the laws for the relief of the poor into execution, and every collector or assistant overseer acting for such parish, shall cause their rate-books and other accounts to be made up and balanced; and the books so made up shall forthwith be deposited at the house within the parish of some one of such overseers or other officers, or of such collector or assistant overseer, or at some other house within the parish; and notice shall forthwith be affixed at the usual place or places of giving parish notices, stating the time and place of audit, as notified by the auditor, and the place where the books are deposited; and such books shall on each of such days be open between the hours of eleven and three, for the inspection of every person liable to be rated to the relief of the poor; and such auditor shall give or send by post or otherwise to the said overseers or other officers fourteen days' notice of the said audit; but it shall not be necessary for the auditor to give or send separate notices to each of such overseers or other officers, and it shall be sufficient if it be proved that any one of them had notice; and if any such overseer or other officer, collector, or assistant overseer neglect to make up such account, or alter such account, or allow it to be altered when so made up, or refuse to allow such inspection thereof, he shall be liable, on conviction thereof, to forfeit forty shillings; and if any such overseer or other officer, collector, or assistant overseer, refuse or wilfully neglect to affix such notice of audit, and of the time and place for the inspection of such accounts, as above provided, he shall be liable, on conviction thereof, to forfeit forty shillings; and it shall be lawful for every rate-payer in any parish or union to be present at the audit of the accounts relating to such parish or union, and to make any objection to any such accounts before such auditor; and it shall be lawful for any such auditor to require any person holding or accountable for any money, books, deeds, papers, goods or chattels, relating to the poor's rate or the relief of the poor, to produce to such auditor his accounts and vouchers, and to make or sign a declaration with respect to such accounts; and so often as such person neglects or refuses to attend, either at the audit or any adjournment thereof, when so required by such auditor, or to produce to him such accounts or vouchers, or any of them, or to make or sign a declaration with respect to his accounts, if thereunto required by such auditor, he shall be liable for every such refusal or neglect to forfeit forty shillings, to be recovered as penalties and forfeitures under the said first-recited act, or if he wilfully make or sign a false declaration in respect of such accounts he shall be liable to the penalties of perjury.

Notice of time and place of audit.

Inspection of books.

Balances found before the passing of this act may be discharged.

34. And be it enacted, that in every case in which before the passing of this act any balance has been struck by any auditor in the account of any officer of any parish or union, and such balance has not been paid nor any proceedings commenced before the passing of this act for the recovery thereof, it shall be lawful, on the application of the officers of any parish or of any board of guardians of any union, and in all other cases of disputed accounts relating to the expenditure and management of the fund for the relief of the poor previous to the passing of this act upon the application of the board of guardians to the said commissioners, and with the consent of the said commissioners, for the auditor to discharge the officers for the time being from the payment of such balance; and all balances struck against any person, and not so discharged, shall be recoverable, after the passing of this act, as if the same had been struck and the amount thereof certified by an auditor appointed in pursuance of the provisions of this act.

Certiorari for auditors' allowances or disallowances.

35. And be it enacted, that if any person aggrieved by any allowance, disallowance, or surcharge by any such auditor require such auditor to state the reasons for the said allowance, disallowance, or surcharge, the auditor shall state such reasons in writing in the book of account in which the allowance, disallowance, or surcharge may be made; and it shall be lawful for every person aggrieved by such allowance, and for every person aggrieved by such disallowance or surcharge, if such last-mentioned person have first paid or delivered over to any person authorised to receive the same all such money, goods, and chattels as are admitted by his account to be due from him or remaining in his hands, to apply to the court of Queen's Bench for a writ of certiorari to remove into the said court the said allowance, disallowance, or surcharge, in the like manner and subject to the like conditions as are provided in respect of persons suing forth writs of certiorari for the removal of orders of justices of the peace, except that the condition of such recognizance shall be, to prosecute such certiorari, at the costs and charges of such person, without any wilful or affected delay, and if such allowance, disallowance, or surcharge be confirmed, to pay to such auditor or his successor, within one month after the same may be confirmed, his full costs and charges, to be taxed according to the course of the said court, and except that the notice of the intended application, which shall contain a statement of the matter complained of, shall be given to such auditor or his successor, who shall in return to such writ return a copy under his hand of the entry or entries in such book of account to which such notice shall refer, and shall appear before the said court, and defend the allowance, disallowance, or surcharge so impeached in the said court, and shall be reimbursed all such costs and charges as he may incur in such defence out of the poor rates of the union or parish respectively interested in the decision of the question, unless the said court make any order to the contrary; and that on the removal of such allowance, disallowance, or surcharge the said court shall decide the particular matter of complaint set forth in such statement, and no other; and if it appear to such court that the decision of the said auditor was erroneous, they shall, by rule of the court, order such sum of money as may have been improperly allowed, disallowed, or surcharged to be paid to the party entitled thereto by the party who ought to repay or discharge the same; and they may also, if they see fit, by rule of the court, order the costs of the person prosecuting such certiorari to be paid by the parish or union to which such accounts relate, as to such court may seem fit; which rules of court respectively shall be enforced in like manner as other rules of the said court are enforceable.

Persons aggrieved may apply to commissioners, who may issue orders thereupon.

36. Provided always, and be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any person aggrieved as aforesaid by any allowance, disallowance, or surcharge, in lieu of making application to the court of Queen's Bench for a writ of certiorari, to apply to the said commissioners to inquire into and to decide upon the lawfulness of the reasons stated by the auditor for such allowance, disallowance, or surcharge, and it shall thereupon be lawful for the said commissioners to issue such order therein, under their hands and seal, as they may deem requisite for determining the question.

Cessation of powers of justices to audit.

37. And be it enacted, that in every district for which an auditor may be appointed under the provisions of this act the powers of justices of the peace and of all other persons to examine, audit, allow, or disallow accounts shall, so far as relates to any accounts which such auditor is authorised to examine and audit, cease, and the same are hereby repealed: provided always, that where any union or unions and parishes have been already combined by the said commissioners under the provisions of the said first-recited act for the appointment of an auditor, and such an auditor has been appointed, or where any person has been appointed auditor for more than one union, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to continue such auditor in office, and such district shall be deemed to have been formed, and such unions to have been formed into a district, and such auditor to have been appointed respectively under this act: provided also, that if the said commissioners subsequently add any parish or union to any district now formed or to be formed after the passing of this act, or which is to be deemed to be formed under this act, or separate any parish or union therefrom, such addition or separation shall not vacate the appointment of any auditor appointed previously to such addition or separation, but it shall be lawful for the commissioners to continue such auditor in office for such increased or diminished district without any re-election of such auditor.

Existing district auditors may be retained.

Proviso.

Accounts may be rendered half-yearly.

38. And be it enacted, that so much of the said first-recited act as provides that accounts shall be made and rendered not less frequently than once in every quarter shall be and is hereby repealed; and such accounts shall be made and rendered at such times and as often as the said commissioners may direct, but not less often than once in every half year.

Taxation and allowance of law bills.

39. And be it enacted, that on application of any overseer, or of any board of guardians, or of any attorney at law, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the peace of the county or place, or his deputy, if thereunto required, to tax any

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

bill due to any solicitor or attorney in respect of business performed on behalf of any parish or union situate wholly or in part within such county or place; and the allowance of any sum on such taxation shall be primâ facie evidence of the reasonableness of the amount, but not of the legality of the charge; and the clerk of the peace shall be allowed for such taxation after the rate to be fixed from time to time by the Master of the Crown Office, and declared by an order of the said commissioners; and if any such bill be not taxed before it is presented to the auditor, the auditor's decision on the reasonableness as well as the legality of the charges shall be final.

Parishes and unions may, within certain limits, be combined into school districts.

40. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, as and when they may see fit, by order under their hands and seal, to combine unions, or parishes not in union, or such parishes and unions, into school districts, for the management of any class or classes of infant poor not above the age of sixteen years, being chargeable to any such parish or union, who are orphans, or are deserted by their parents, or whose parents or surviving parent or guardians are consenting to the placing of such children in the school of such district; but the said commissioners shall not include in any such district any parish any part of which would be more than fifteen miles from any other part of such district: provided always, that when the relief of the poor has been hitherto administered in any parish or united parishes by guardians appointed under a local act, and not by overseers of the poor, if such parish or united parishes, according to the last enumeration of the population published by authority of Parliament, contain more than twenty thousand persons, it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners, without the consent in writing of the majority of such guardians, to include such parish or united parishes in a school district.

Districts for providing asylums for houseless poor may be formed in the towns specified in schedule (B.)

41. And whereas it is expedient that more effectual means should be provided for the temporary relief of poor persons found destitute and without lodging within the district of the metropolitan police, or the city of London, and the city, towns, and boroughs named in the schedule annexed to this act, and for avoiding the introduction of infectious disease, by the reception of such poor persons into the workhouses established for the ordinary relief of the poor within such districts and places; be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, as and when they may see fit, by order under their hands and seal, to declare so many parishes or unions, or parishes and unions, any part of which may be within the district of the metropolitan police, or the city of London, or within the limits respectively of the city, towns, or boroughs named in the schedule marked (B.) annexed to this act, as such limits are described in an act passed in the third year of the reign of King William the Fourth, "to settle and describe the Division of Counties, and the Limits of Cities and Boroughs, in England and Wales, so far as respects the Election of Members to serve in Parliament," to be combined into districts for the purpose of providing and managing asylums for the temporary relief and setting to work therein of destitute houseless poor who are not charged with any offence, and who may apply for relief, or become chargeable to the poor's rates within any such parish or union.

Constitution of the district boards for schools and asylums.

42. And be it enacted, that a board shall be constituted for every district formed under this act for the maintenance of a school or of an asylum; and every district board so constituted shall respectively consist of members to be elected from amongst the persons rated within the district to the relief of the poor; and the said commissioners shall fix the qualification of such members, such qualification to consist in being rated within the district to the relief of the poor, but not so as to require a qualification exceeding the net annual value of forty pounds; and such members shall be elected at such periods, not exceeding three years, and in such proportions and in such manner, as the said commissioners may from time to time direct, by the guardians of every parish or union governed by a board of guardians under the provisions of the said first-recited act or of any local act, and if there be no such guardians then by the overseers of a parish not governed by such guardians; and the chairman of every board of guardians constituted under the provisions of the said first-recited act shall, if he consent thereto, be ex officio a member of any district board constituted under the provisions of this act.

Powers and duties of district boards.

43. And be it enacted, that every such district board shall have such of the powers of guardians for the relief and management of the poor within any school or asylum, and for the appointment, payment, and control of paid officers, as the said commissioners may direct; and the legal and reasonable orders of such district board shall be obeyed and obedience thereto enforced in the same manner and by the same remedies and penalties as the legal and reasonable orders of guardians; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, with the consent in writing of a majority of any district board, to direct such district board to purchase or hire or build, and to fit up and furnish, a building or buildings, of such size and description, and according to such plan, and in such manner as the said commissioners may deem most proper, for the purpose of being used or rendered suitable for the relief and management of the poor to be received into such school or asylum; and the said commissioners may, with the like consent, alter the district for which such district board was originally constituted, by adding thereto or taking therefrom any parish or parishes, union or unions, as aforesaid; and the said commissioners shall have the same powers for regulating the proceedings of any district board or of any committee thereof, and for directing and regulating the appointment, duties, remuneration, and removal of paid officers to be appointed by any district board, as they have with respect to the proceedings of boards of guardians, or with respect to paid officers to be appointed by any board of guardians; and every such board for a school district shall appoint, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, at least one chaplain of the Established Church as one of the paid officers aforesaid, who shall be empowered to superintend the religious instruction of all the infant poor being under the control of such district board; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to issue rules and regulations for the government of any such school or asylum, and the inmates thereof, as if such school or asylum were a workhouse; and any orders or regulations of the said commissioners made in pursuance of this act shall be enforced in the same manner and by the same penalties as if the same were an order or regulation made in pursuance of the said first-recited act: provided always, that no rules, orders, or regulations of the said commissioners, nor any regulations made by such district board, shall oblige any inmate of any such school or asylum to attend any religious service which may be celebrated in a mode contrary to the religious principles of such inmate, nor shall authorise the education of any child in any religious creed other than that professed by the parents or surviving parent of such child, and to which such parents or surviving parent may object, or, in the case of an orphan or deserted child, to which his next of kin may object: provided also, that it shall be lawful at all reasonable times of the day, according to rules and regulations to be made for this purpose by the said board, for any minister of the religious persuasion professed by an adult inmate, or of the religious persuasion in which any child has been brought up, or in which the parents, or surviving parent, or next of kin, as the case may be, may desire such child to be instructed, to visit the school or asylum, at the request of such adult inmate, for the purpose of affording to him religious assistance, or to visit such child for the purpose of instructing such child in the principles of his religion: provided also, that it shall be lawful at all times for any inspector of schools appointed by her Majesty in Council to visit such schools, and to examine into the proficiency of the scholars therein.

Chaplain to be appointed.

Religious education of inmates.

School inspectors.

44. And be it enacted, that for the purpose of providing a building for such school or asylum it shall be lawful for such district board, subject to the order of the said commissioners, to exercise the powers given to boards of guardians by the said first-recited act or any other act or acts for the purchase and hire of lands and buildings, and to borrow, in like manner as is provided in the said first-recited act or in any other act or acts, such sum or sums of money as may be necessary for the purpose of purchasing any site, or purchasing, hiring, or building, and of fitting up and furnishing such building or buildings as aforesaid, and to charge the future poor rates of the parishes or unions, or parishes and unions, so combined as aforesaid, with the payment of such sum or sums of money, and interest thereon: provided always, that the consent of any ratepayers or owners of property of any parish shall not be necessary to any sale, exchange, lease, or other disposal by guardians or overseers to or with any such district board of any workhouse, tenement, building, or land: provided also, that the principal sum or sums to be raised for the purpose of providing any such building or buildings as aforesaid, and charged on any union, or on any parish not included in a union, shall in no case exceed one-fifth of the average annual amount of the aggregate expenditure, relating to the relief of the poor within any such union, or of the like expenditure within any such parish, for Powers of district board for purchasing and hire of land, &c.

Sums to be raised for providing schools or asylums not to exceed one-fifth part of the average annual rates.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

three years ending the twenty-fifth day of March next preceding the raising of such money; provided also, that the principal sum or sums required for the purpose of providing any such building or buildings shall, if the same be borrowed, be repaid, with all interest thereon, within a period not exceeding twenty years.

District board to hold property of the district as a corporation.

45. And be it enacted, that every such district board shall be enabled to accept, take, and hold, on behalf of the district for which they act, any lands, buildings, goods, effects, or other property, as a corporation, and in all cases to sue and be sued as a corporation, by the name of the board of management of the district school or asylum, as the case may be.

Payment of contributions to district boards.

46. And be it enacted, that every district board for the management of any school or asylum shall from time to time call on the parishes and unions included in such district for such contributions as they may deem requisite for the purposes of this act; and notice in writing of the amount of such contributions, purporting to be signed by the clerk or other officer of such district board, in any form prescribed by the said commissioners, shall fourteen days at least before such contribution becomes due, be forwarded, by post or otherwise, to the clerk to the board of guardians of any union, and to two at least of the overseers or other officers authorised to make and levy rates for the relief of the poor in every parish from whom such contributions or any part thereof will become due; and if such contributions are not duly paid to the treasurer of such district board, such district board shall, in addition to any other remedy which now is or hereafter may be given to any persons against any board of guardians, have the like remedy for recovery of the same from the overseers or other officers authorised to make and levy the rates for relief of the poor of the several parishes, whether comprised in an union or otherwise, and which may form part of the district for which such district board may act, as are given to guardians for the recovery from overseers of the contributions of parishes; and in case of any addition or separation of parishes or unions, the said commissioners shall ascertain the proportionate value of property and amount of obligations of every parish or union affected by the change, and shall fix the amount to be received or paid, or secured to be paid, by every such parish or union.

Distribution of charges for schools.

47. And be it enacted, that the expences incurred by any district board in the purchase or hire of any building or buildings to be used as a school, or in erecting, repairing, adding to, or fitting up any building, and in the purchase of utensils and materials for the employment of the inmates of such school, or of books and other objects and things necessary for the instruction of such inmates, and the salaries of the officers and servants of the establishment, and all other expences incurred on the common account of the parishes or unions, or parishes and unions, so united for the management of any class of infant poor, or incidental to the discharge of the duties of such district board, shall be paid by such unions in the proportion of the averages last declared for every such union, and by such parishes in the proportion of the average expenditure of every such parish for the like period and purposes as those to which the declared averages of such unions shall relate; and the said commisioners shall from time to time, by order under their hands and seal, ascertain and declare the proportion and rates of contribution in the above respects of every such parish and union; and that all other expences incurred in the relief of the children under the management of such district board shall be separately charged by such district board to the parish or union from which each such child may be sent.

Distribution of charges for asylums.

48. And be it enacted, that the expences incurred by every such district board in the purchase or hire of any building or buildings, or in erecting, repairing, adding to, or fitting up any building as an asylum, and in the purchase of utensils and materials for the employment of the inmates of such asylum, and other objects and things necessary for the relief of such inmates, and the salaries of the officers and servants of the establishment, and all other expences incurred by such district board in the relief of the poor, or in the management of such asylum, or incidental to the discharge of the duties of such district board, shall be charged by such district board upon the parishes or unions, or parishes and unions, comprised in such district, in proportion to the annual value of messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments upon which such parishes and the parishes combined in such unions are respectively assessed to the county or borough rate, or other rate in the nature of a county or borough rate; and where any parish or place comprised in such district does not contribute in respect of the whole thereof to any county or borough rate, the said expences shall be paid by such parish or place in proportion to the net annual value of all the property therein assessed to the rates for the relief of the poor; and any information necessary for the distribution of such charge shall be furnished, on demand of such district board or of the said commisioners, by every parish officer, and by every clerk of the peace, town clerk, or other like officer of any county, city, town, or borough or other place raising rates in the nature of county or borough rates.

Appointment of auditors for district boards.

49. And be it enacted, that the poor law commissioners shall appoint some person, being at the time the auditor of some parish or union situated within the district for which any district board for any school or asylum may be appointed, who shall be the auditor of such district, and shall be empowered and required to audit the accounts of each district board, and of the officers of such district board; and the salary of every such auditor of a district shall be paid by the district board thereof; and the said commissioners shall have the same powers for regulating the duties and remuneration of such auditors as they have with respect to paid officers appointed by any board of guardians; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, as they may see fit, to remove any auditor of such district, and in case of vacancy to appoint another person as aforesaid to the office; and every district board constituted under this act, and every officer of such district board, shall, twice in the year at least, at such a time and in such manner and form as may be prescribed by the poor law commissioners, account to the auditor appointed as aforesaid; and such auditor shall have all the powers of allowing and disallowing any charges in such accounts as are or may hereafter be given to auditors under the provisions of the said first-recited act or any other act for the audit of accounts relating to rates for the relief of the poor; and all sums disallowed or reduced or charged as balances against any person by such auditor, shall be recovered on the application of such auditor (which application he is hereby empowered to make), in the same way as penalties and forfeitures under the said first-recited act, from the person making or authorising such illegal payment; and within thirty days of such audit each district board shall cause to be printed, and shall forward by post or otherwise to each board of guardians, and to the officers of every parish within their district, an abstract of the accounts of their district so audited, in such form as the poor law commissioners may direct.

Guardians may visit and inspect asylums.

50. And be it enacted, that every guardian of every union or parish included in any such district formed for the maintenance of an asylum shall at all reasonable times be entitled to enter the asylum of such district, and inspect any part thereof, and enter his remarks thereon in a book to be kept for that purpose.

Children may be sent to district schools from parishes and unions not combined, but not distant more than twenty miles.

51. And be it enacted, that in any case where a parish or union is not combined in a school district, and where any part of such parish or union is not more than twenty miles from a district school, the board of guardians of such parish or union may, with the consent of the board of such district, send to such district school any infant poor not above the age of sixteen years, being chargeable to any such parish or union, who are orphans, or are deserted by their parents, or whose parents or surviving parent or guardians are consenting thereto; and the costs of the maintenance, employment, and instruction of such infant poor in such district schools shall be paid by such board of guardians to such district board, according to such rates and at such times and in such manner as may be agreed upon by the said boards, with the approbation of the said commissioners; and such infant poor while at such district school shall be subject to the control and management of such district board and their officers, in like manner as if the said parish or union were combined in such school district by virtue of this act.

Repeal of the acts 7 Geo. III. c. 39, and 2 Geo. III. c. 22.

52. And be it enacted, that the provisions of the act passed in the seventh year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An Act for the better Regulation of the Parish poor Children of the several Parishes therein mentioned within the Bills of Mortality, and of an act passed in the second year of the reign of his said late Majesty, intituled An Act for the keeping regular, uniform, and annual Registers of all Parish poor Infants under a certain Age within the Bills of Mortality, shall be and are hereby repealed.

Class of destitute poor to be relieved in such asylum.

53. And be it enacted, that every district board for the management of any asylum under this act shall make provision for the temporary relief and setting to work therein of any poor person found destitute within any such district, not professing to be settled in any parish included therein, and not known to have any place of abode there, and not being charged with any offence under the provisions of an act passed in the fifth year of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled An Act for the Punishment of idle and disorderly Persons, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

and Rogues and Vagabonds, in that Part of Great Britain called England, or of any other act; and, subject to any regulations of the said commissioners, every such district board or any committee thereof may direct the mode of admission of such poor persons to the asylum of such district; and it shall be lawful for any constable of the metropolitan police, or of the police of the city of London, or any constable of the police acting under the chief constable of any county, district, or division, or any constable of the city, towns, or boroughs respectively named in the Schedule marked (B.) annexed to this act, personally to conduct any such poor person found wandering abroad within any district to any asylum established in such district in pursuance of this act, and such poor person shall, if there be room in such asylum, be temporarily relieved therein; and the serjeant of police or constable conducting such poor person shall sign his name in a column, headed to the following effect, in a book to be kept, in such form and manner as the said commissioners may from time to time direct, by some officer of every such asylum, in which shall be entered the alleged names of all poor persons admitted:

Mode of admission into asylums.

"WE, the undersigned constables of the metropolitan police [or of the police of the city of London, or constable, &c., as the case may be], do severally declare, so far as each of us is concerned therein, that we have conducted the poor persons (whose alleged names are set opposite our respective signatures) to the asylum of . district, the said poor persons having been by us found wandering abroad, and apparently destitute, and not having committed or being charged with any offence punishable by law, within our knowledge."

And every such book, purporting to be signed and to be certified at the foot of the page by the officer keeping the same, shall be received in all courts of justice as sufficient evidence of the fact that the poor persons described therein were chargeable to the said district at the time of their admission, and, if not contradicted by other evidence, of such other particulars as are therein duly recorded; and all poor persons admitted into any such asylum shall, if they desire it, be relieved with food and lodging for the night succeeding such admission; but no such poor person shall be detained against his will for any longer space of time than until the ordinary hour of breakfast of the day next succeeding his admission, and four hours afterwards, unless such poor person, since his admission, have become lawfully punishable for misbehaviour within such asylum, in which case it shall be lawful to detain such poor person for a space of time sufficient for such punishment; but no poor person shall be punished for any offence or misbehaviour in any asylum by confinement for any longer space of time than twenty-four hours, and such longer space of time as may be necessary in order to have such person before a justice of the peace; and if any poor person so admitted as aforesaid shall be disabled by sickness, or shall be unwilling to depart from such asylum, he may receive relief therein, if he consent to remain, and conform to the rules of the house, until the next meeting of the district board or of some committee (which such district board, subject to the rules of the said commissioners, is hereby authorised to appoint), who shall give such directions respecting such poor person as they may deem right, by discharging him from such asylum, with a direction to apply for relief in the district where he has dwelt, or otherwise as to them may seem fit: provided always, that, except under a medical certificate of sickness, it shall not be lawful for the officers of any such asylum to relieve any poor person for a longer period continuously in such asylum than is sufficient to enable his case to be decided by the district board or committee as aforesaid: provided also, that if any person received into such asylum shall wilfully give a false name, or make a false statement, or shall be proved to have given two or more different names on two or more different occasions, when so received into any such asylum, such person not having lawfully changed her name in consequence of marriage, such person shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the meaning of the said act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled An Act for the Punishment of idle and disorderly Persons, and Rogues and Vagabonds, in that Part of the United Kingdom called England.

Regulations with respect to poor persons admitted into such asylums.

5 Geo. IV. c. 83.

Liabilities of persons relieved in such asylums.

54. And be it enacted, that every poor person relieved in any asylum under the management of any district board shall be liable to the same obligations in respect of the relief afforded to him as if the same were afforded in any workhouse, and shall be subject to the same punishment and penalties as are provided by an act passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled An Act to prevent poor Persons in Workhouses from embezzling certain Property provided for their Use; to alter and amend so much of an Act of the Thirty-sixth Year of His present Majesty as restrains Justices of the Peace from ordering Relief to poor Persons, in certain Cases, for a longer Period than One Month at a Time; and for other Purposes therein mentioned relating to the Poor, or under any other act or acts, for refusal or neglect to work, in pursuance of any regulations or directions prescribing a task of work, or for wilfully destroying or injuring his own clothes or any property, or for absconding with any clothes or other articles provided by such district board, or for damaging any of the property of such district board, or for any misbehaviour in such asylum, by disobedience of the rules and regulations in force therein, or otherwise, as if he were relieved or set to work in any workhouse under the control of a board of guardians acting under the orders and regulations of the said commissioners in pursuance of the said first-recited act: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall relieve any guardian, overseer, relieving officer, or master of a workhouse from any obligation now imposed upon him by law with regard to the relief of cases of sudden and urgent necessity, or shall prevent the reception into a workhouse of any person labouring under dangerous illness, or shall authorise the transfer to an asylum of any person received into such workhouse in a case of dangerous illness, unless with the certificate in writing of a medical man duly licensed to practise, to the effect that such person is then in a fit state to be removed, and stating the manner in which such person, in the opinion of such medical man, may be safely removed.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

55 Geo. III. c. 137.

Penalty for returning after removal.

55. And be it enacted, that if any poor person return and become chargeable in the asylum of any district after removal from any parish in such district, he shall be deemed to have returned and become chargeable, without any certificate, to the parish whence he has been legally removed by order of two justices of the peace, within the meaning of the said act made and passed in the fifth year of King George the Fourth, intituled An Act for the Punishment of idle and disorderly Persons, and Rogues and Vagabonds, in that part of Great Britain called England.

5 Geo. IV. c. 83.

Workhouse to be deemed to be situate in every parish of an union, &c.

56. And be it enacted, that, for the purposes of relief, settlement, and removal of poor persons, and the burial of the poor, the workhouse of any union or parish, and every such district school, shall be considered as situated in the parish to which each poor person respectively to be relieved, removed, or buried, or otherwise concerned in any such purpose, is or has been chargeable: provided always, that every birth and death within any such workhouse or building shall be registered in the parish or place in which such workhouse or building is locally situated; and all fees for registering births and deaths in any such workhouse or building shall be charged by the guardians to the parish or union to which the person dying or the mother of the child respectively is chargeable.

Committal of offenders in workhouses to the gaol of the place to which the offenders belong.

57. And be it enacted, that if any person be convicted before any justice or justices of any offence committed in any workhouse, while maintained therein, or of absconding from any workhouse, and carrying away clothes or other property therefrom, and be liable to be committed for such offence to any gaol or house of correction, it shall be lawful for the justice or justices before whom such person is convicted to commit such person to the common gaol or house of correction of the county or place in which the parish is situated, to which such person at the time of the commission of the offence was chargeable, notwithstanding that such workhouse may not be situated in such county or place, and notwithstanding that such justices may not be justices of such county or place; and if such person have not goods or money within such county or place sufficient to bear the charges of himself and those who convey him, then such charges shall be defrayed at the expence of the county, place, or parish, according to the provisions of an act passed in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Second, intituled An Act for the better securing to Constables and others the Expences of conveying Offenders to Gaol; and for allowing the Charges of poor Persons bound to give Evidence against Felons; provided that in cases of such conviction and committal as aforesaid all further proceedings in respect thereof may be taken; and the costs and charges of such proceedings, and for the maintenance of such offender in such gaol or house of correction, shall be payable in like manner and under the like authority as such proceedings would have been taken, or as such costs and charges would have been payable, in case the 27 Geo. II. c. 3.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

offence had been committed within the parish or place to which such offender was chargeable at the time when he committed such offence.

Punishment of persons in workhouses for misconduct.

58. And whereas by the said Act passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of King George the Third, it is enacted, that if any person or persons shall desert or run away from any workhouse or workhouses, and carry away with him, her, or them any clothes, linen, or other goods as aforesaid, such person or persons, being thereof lawfully convicted, either by the confession of such party or parties, or by the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before any justice or justices of the peace, shall by such justice or justices of the peace be forthwith committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain without bail or mainprize for the space of three calendar months; and it is further enacted, that in case any person or persons maintained in any public workhouse or workhouses established for the relief, maintenance, and employment of the poor shall refuse to work at any work, occupation, or employment suited to his, her, or their age, strength, and capacity, or shall be guilty of drunkenness or other misbehaviour, every such person or persons, being thereof lawfully convicted before any justice or justices of the peace, shall thereupon by such justice or justices of the peace be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any period of time not exceeding twenty-one days, and during such time to be kept to hard labour; and whereas it is desirable that justices of the peace should have a power to commit such persons as are first mentioned for a period less than three months, and such persons as are last mentioned for a period greater than twenty-one days, in cases of repeated offences; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for any justice or justices to commit any such person as is first mentioned to the common gaol or house of correction, to be kept there in the manner provided by the said recited act for any period not less than seven days nor greater than three months, and to commit any such persons as are last mentioned, in case such persons have been before convicted of a like offence, to the common gaol or house of correction, in manner provided by the said act, for any period not exceeding forty-two days.

Costs of certain civil and criminal proceedings to be paid out of poor rates.

59. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any board of guardians or district board to pay out of the funds in their hands the reasonable costs of the apprehension and of the prosecution of any person who, according to the laws in force at the time being, is charged with refusing or neglecting to maintain himself or his family, or with running away and leaving his family chargeable, or whereby such family has become chargeable, or with wilfully neglecting or disobeying the rules, orders, and regulations of the poor law commissioners, or with any offence or misbehaviour in any workhouse, or with deserting or running away from any workhouse, and carrying away clothes, linen, or other goods or things belonging to any workhouse, or given or procured or provided as or for relief, or with neglect or disobedience of the reasonable and lawful orders of justices or guardians, or of any district board, in the administration of the laws relating to the relief of the poor, or with obstructing or assaulting any officer engaged in the administration of the laws for relief of the poor, or with fraudulently obtaining, stealing, purloining, embezzling, wasting, or injuring, or wilfully misapplying, any property applicable to or connected with the relief of the poor, or with any offence directly affecting the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, and the reasonable costs of apprehending and prosecuting any officer who may have been employed in the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, for any neglect or breach of any duty of his office, or for any maltreatment or abuse of any poor person; and, subject to the approval of the said commissioners, every board of guardians or district board shall pay the costs of all legal proceedings taken by any auditor, or under his direction, for the protection of the poor rates or property of any parish, union, or district, or taken by any other person whom the board of guardians or district board have authorized or directed to institute such prosecution or legal proceedings; and to the extent to which any such costs may not be repaid by the offending or other party, or from the county, liberty, or borough rates, the guardians of any union then may, in any of the cases aforesaid, having due regard to the circumstances of the case, and subject to the approval of the poor law commissioners, charge such expenses, either to the common funds of the union, or to any parish or parishes comprised therein; and the district board of any district may, having like regard to the circumstances of the case, and subject to the like approval of the poor law commissioners, charge such expences, either to the funds of the whole of such district, or on any one or more of the unions and parishes comprised therein. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

60. And be it enacted, that the costs, charges and expences properly incurred by the officers of the parish in making out, preparing, printing, and collecting the lists of persons qualified to serve on juries, according to the provisions of the act in the sixth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relative to Jurors and Juries, and relating thereto, shall be paid and allowed to them out of the poor rates of the parish, together also with all expences properly incurred by the same officers on the perambulation of the parish, and in setting up and keeping in proper repair the boundary stones of the parish, provided that such perambulations do not arise more than once in every three years.

Expences of jury lists and boundaries of parishes may be paid out of poor rates. 6 Geo. IV. c. 50.

61. And whereas by an act passed in the third year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Assessment and Collection of Rates for the Relief of the Poor, it was amongst other things enacted, "that all orders heretofore made and issued under the hands and seals of the poor law commissioners, and not rescinded by them or quashed before the sixth day of May in the present year, by which the said commissioners may have directed the overseers or guardians of any parish or union to appoint any person to collect the rates for the relief of the poor in any parish or parishes, or shall have defined or specified or directed the execution of the duties of such person, or the places or limits within which the same shall be performed, or shall have directed the mode of appointment, or determined the continuance in office or dismissal of any such person from his office, or the amount or nature of the security to be given by any such person, or shall have regulated the amount of salary payable to any such person, or the time or mode or the proportions of payment thereof, shall be deemed and the same are hereby declared to have the same force and validity as if the same had been warranted by an act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws for the Relief of the Poor; and the commissioners shall have the same powers and authorities with respect to all such orders, and to the persons appointed in pursuance thereof, as they have with respect to orders made and issued, and the paid officers appointed, under the provisions of the said act; and that every person appointed by guardians of the poor under any such order of the said commissioners shall have the like powers, authorities, privileges, immunities, protections, and remedies, in and for the performance of his duty under such order, as are by law given to overseers of the poor in the performance of the like duty;" and it is expedient that such collectors should in certain cases be invested with other of the duties of overseers of the poor; be it enacted, that the inhabitants in vestry assembled of any parish situated within the district for which any collector or assistant overseer appointed under any order of the said commissioners now acts may appoint such collector or assistant overseer to discharge all the duties of an overseer of the poor, in addition to those of collector of poor rates for such parish, and in the same manner as if he were appointed thereto as an assistant overseer under the provisions of an act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An Act to amend the Laws for the Relief of the Poor; and wherever any such collector or assistant overseer has been or may be appointed under any order of the said commissioners, and whilst the said order remains in force, the powers of any vestry or parish officers, or of any other persons, other than the board of guardians of such parish or union (if a board of guardians have been constituted), to appoint any collector or assistant overseer, and (if so directed by the said commissioners) every appointment under such powers shall cease; provided always, that where the appointment of such assistant overseer shall have been made under the powers of any local act of parliament of a parish containing more than twenty thousand persons such appointment shall continue, and the powers of such local act, as to any future appointment of an assistant overseer, shall be exercised, but subject always to the powers of the poor law commissioners, notwithstanding the provisions of this act: provided always, that no overseer shall be discharged by the appointment of any such collector or assistant overseer from his responsibility for the provision and supply of monies necessary for the relief of the poor, or for any of the purposes to which the rates made for the relief of the poor may be by law applicable; and every collector appointed or to be hereafter appointed as aforesaid, and every assistant overseer appointed or hereafter

Collectors appointed by guardians may be appointed to perform the duties of assistant overseer. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84.

4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

59 Geo. III. c. 12.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

to be appointed, in pursuance of the said act of the fifty-ninth year of the reign of King George the Third, or of the orders of the said commissioners, shall, subject to the rules of the poor law commissioners, obey, in all matters relating to the duties of overseer, all directions of the majority of the overseers of the parish for which he acts; and the said commissioners shall have the same powers with respect to all collectors or assistant overseers as are given to them by the said first recited act with respect to paid officers; and every collector or assistant overseer appointed as aforesaid shall be bound to give to the board of guardians of the parish or union, or if there be no such board of guardians then to the overseers of the parish for which such collector or assistant overseer may act, sufficient security for the due performance of his duties; and no bond or any other security entered into in pursuance of this act, or of the said act of the fifty-ninth year of the reign of King George the Third, shall be charged or chargeable with, or be deemed to be or to have been subject or liable to, any stamp duty whatsoever; and wherever any parish for which such collector or assistant overseer may be appointed is situated in an union, or is governed by a board of guardians, every bond or security given by any officer, in pursuance of this act, or of the said act of the fifty-ninth year of the reign of King George the Third, or of the said first-recited act, and not contrary to the rules of the said commissioners, shall, if the guardians shall see fit, be put in suit by the board of guardians of the union in which the parish or district for which the officer acts or has acted may be situated, notwithstanding that such bond or security may have been originally given to the overseers of a parish, or to any other persons; and every bond or security given by or on account of any officer appointed by any board of guardians, for the due performance of the office to which he is so appointed, shall remain in full force and effect, notwithstanding any change in district for which such officer may have been appointed or required to act at the time when such bond or security was given, or the addition of any parish to or the separation of any parish from such union since the giving of such security.

Security to be given.

No stamp.

Poor law commissioners, on application of board of guardians, may direct appointment of paid collector of poor rates.

62. And be it enacted, that if the board of guardians of any parish or union make application to the said commissioners to direct the appointment of a paid collector of the poor rates in such parish or union, or in any parish or parishes of such union, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by order under their hands and seal, to direct the said board of guardians to appoint such a collector; and the said commissioners shall have the same powers with respect to such collectors as are given to them by the said first-recited act with respect to paid officers; and all powers of the inhabitants of any parish in vestry assembled, or of justices of the peace, or of any persons, other than the board of guardians of such parish or union, to appoint any collector for any such parish as aforesaid, and (except when otherwise directed by the said commissioners) all appointments under such powers shall cease.

Penalty on overseers neglecting to obtain a supply of funds for the relief of the poor.

63. And be it enacted, that if the overseers of any parish wilfully neglect to make or collect sufficient rates for the relief of the poor, or to pay such monies to the guardians of any parish or union as such guardians may require, and if by reason of such neglect any relief directed by the board of guardians to be given to any poor person be delayed or withheld during a period of seven days, every such overseer shall upon conviction thereof forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds.

In what manner guardians under local acts shall conduct their proceedings.

64. And be it enacted, that the guardians of every parish or union acting under any local act for the relief of the poor shall hold their meetings once in every fortnight, or oftener, and in all matters concerning the relief of the poor shall act as a board at a meeting, and not individually; and whenever under any such local act there is no person particularly designated or authorised to act as chairman, such guardians shall elect and appoint annually, and from time to time as vacancies may occur, a chairman and vice chairman of such board, and shall at any meeting at which no chairman or vice chairman is present elect a temporary chairman to preside at that meeting: provided always, that when the relief of the poor has been hitherto administered in any parish by guardians appointed under a local act, and not by overseers of the poor, if such parish, according to the last enumeration of the population published by authority of parliament, contain more than twenty thousand persons, it shall not be lawful for the said commissioners, after the passing of this act, without the consent in writing of two-thirds at least of such guardians, to declare such parish to be united with any other parish for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, any thing in the said first-recited act to the contrary notwithstanding; provided, however, that nothing herein contained

Parishes under local acts, with a population exceeding 20,000, not to be united without consent of guardians.

Exception as to shall prevent the said commissioners from including any such last-mentioned parish in a district for providing and managing an asylum for the temporary relief of and setting to work of destitute houseless poor, or from including such parish in a district for the audit of accounts, under the provisions of this act, except as hereinafter enacted.

vagrant and audit districts.

65. Provided always, and be it enacted, that where any parish which is not governed by a board of guardians constituted under the said first-recited act, or comprised in any union, but is governed by guardians or directors under a local act, and contains a population exceeding twenty thousand persons, according to the last enumeration of the population published by the authority of parliament, have before the first day of January in this present year adopted and acted upon the provisions of an act passed in the second year of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled An Act for the better Regulation of Vestries, and for the Appointment of Auditors of Accounts, in certain Parishes of England and Wales, and that where any two or more parishes situated within the district of the metropolitan police, containing together a population exceeding twenty thousand, according to the last enumeration of the population published by the authority of parliament, have been united for the purposes of rating or settlement under the provisions of any local act, and are governed by guardians or directors under such local act, and have not been comprised in any union formed under the provisions of the said first-recited act, and have an auditor or auditors appointed and acting under any provisions of such local act relating to the audit of accounts in such parishes, it shall not be lawful to include such parish or such two or more parishes respectively in any such district for the audit of accounts: provided always, that it shall be lawful for any assistant poor law commissioner to be present at any audit as if the same were a meeting of a board of guardians or vestry, and to inspect, examine, and take copies or extracts from any books, accounts, or vouchers produced at such audit.

Parishes, with a population exceeding 20,000, under local acts, having adopted the provisions of 1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 60, and parishes in the metropolitan district having auditors, not to be included in any district for audit of accounts.

Proviso.

66. And whereas it is provided by the said first-recited act that the said commissioners may, from time to time as they may see fit, by order under their hands and seal, declare any union not united for the purposes of settlement or rating to be dissolved, or any parish or parishes to be separated from or added to any such union, and that such union shall thereupon be dissolved, or such parish or parishes shall thereupon be separated from or added to such union accordingly; and it is thereby further provided that no such dissolution, alteration, or addition shall take place or be made unless a majority of not less than two thirds of the guardians of such union concur therein; and it is expedient to enable the said commissioners to separate any parish or parishes from any union, or to add any parish or parishes to any union, without the concurrence of the guardians of such union respectively; be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to exercise the powers given to them by the said act for the separating of any parish or parishes from any union formed under the provisions of the said act, or for the addition of any parish or parishes to any such union, without the concurrence of the guardians of such union respectively in such separation or addition; and the said commissioners may, if they see fit, cause a board of guardians to be elected under the provisions of the said act for any single parish separated from any union in pursuance hereof, notwithstanding the provisions of any local act in force in such parish.

Commissioners may separate parishes from unions, or add parishes to unions, without the consent of the guardians of the union.

67. And be it enacted, that so much of an act passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An Act to prevent poor Persons in Workhouses from embezzling certain Property provided for their Use; to alter and amend so much of an Act of the Thirty-sixth Year of His present Majesty as restrains Justices of the Peace from ordering Relief to poor Persons in certain cases for a longer Period than one Month at a time; and for other Purposes therein mentioned relating to the Poor, as relates to the giving of notice of the intention to enter into contracts relating to the relief of the poor, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

Repeal of 55 Geo. III. c. 137, s. 7, as to notices of contracts for supplying workhouses.

68. And be it enacted, that, notwithstanding any thing contained in an act passed in the seventh year of the reign of her Majesty, intituled An Act for consolidating and amending several of the Laws relating to Attornies and Solicitors practising in England and Wales, it shall be lawful for any clerk or other officer to any board of guardians constituted under the said first-recited act or under any local act, or to any district board, if duly empowered by such board, to make or resist any application, claim, or complaint, or to take and conduct any proceedings on behalf of such board before any justice or justices of the peace at petty or special sessions or out of sessions, although such clerk

Clerks and officers may conduct proceedings before justices at petty sessions on behalf of boards of guardians, although not certified attornies.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

or officer be not an attorney or solicitor, or have not obtained a stamped certificate in pursuance of the provisions of the said act.

Guardians, &c. may make a certain certificate, which may be received in evidence, &c.

69. And be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any board of guardians or district board, at any meeting thereof, to make a certificate in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule of this act marked (C.), and that every such certificate, and every copy of a minute of any order, complaint, claim, application, or authority of any such board of guardians or district board, purporting respectively to be signed by the presiding chairman of such guardians or district board, and to be sealed with their seal, and to be countersigned by their clerk, shall, unless the contrary be shown, be taken to be sufficient proof of the truth of all the statements contained in such certificate, and of the directions respecting such order, complaint, claim, or application having been given as alleged in the copy of such minute, and shall be received in evidence accordingly by and before all courts of justice and all justices, without any proof of the signatures or of the official characters of the persons signing the same, or of such seal, or of such meeting; and that for the purpose of making any order of removal or other order no further or other evidence of chargeability than such certificate shall be required, provided that every such order bear date within twenty-one days next after the day of the date of such certificate.

Justices at petty sessions, or out of sessions, may summon witnesses, and compel them to attend and give evidence.

70. And be it enacted, that in any proceedings to be had before justices in petty or special sessions, or out of sessions, under the provisions of this act or of any of the acts required to be construed as one act herewith, if any party to such proceedings request that any person be summoned to appear as a witness in such proceedings, it shall be lawful for any justice to summon such person to appear and give evidence upon the matter of such proceedings; and if any person so summoned neglect or refuse to appear to give evidence at the time and place appointed in such summons, and if proof upon oath be given of personal service of the summons upon such person, and that the reasonable expences of attendance were paid or tendered to such person, it shall be lawful for such justice, by warrant under his hand and seal, to require such person to be brought before him, or any justices before whom such proceedings are to be had; and if any person coming or brought before any such justices in any such proceedings refuse to give evidence thereon, it shall be lawful for such justices to commit such person to any house of correction within their jurisdiction, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding fourteen days, or until such person shall sooner submit himself to be examined, and in case of such submission the order of any such justice shall be a sufficient warrant for the discharge of such person.

Rules, &c. printed by the printer authorised by her Majesty to be received in evidence.

71. And whereas it is provided by the said first-recited act that all rules, orders, and regulations made by the said commissioners under the authority of the said act shall be as valid and binding, and shall be obeyed and observed, as if the same were specifically made by and embodied in the said act; but no sufficient provision is made for bringing such orders to the knowledge of courts of justice; be it therefore enacted, that any copy of any such rule, order, or regulation, printed by the printer duly authorised by her Majesty or any of her royal predecessors or successors, shall, after the lapse of fourteen days from the date thereof, be received in evidence, and judicially taken notice of, and shall, until the contrary be shown, be deemed sufficient proof that such order was duly made, and is in force.

Evidence in legal proceedings of the transmission of the commissioners' rules, &c.

72. And whereas it is provided by the said first-recited act that a written or printed copy of every rule, order, or regulation of the said commissioners shall, before the same shall come into operation in any parish or union, be sent by the said commissioners by the post, or in such manner as the commissioners shall think fit, sealed or stamped with their seal, addressed to the overseers of such parish, the guardians of such union, or their clerk, and to the clerk to the justices of the petty sessions held for the division in which such parish or union shall be situate: and whereas the proof of such sending is often attended with great expence and difficulty; be it enacted, that it shall not in any civil or criminal proceeding be necessary to prove such sending, except to the clerk to the guardians of the union or of the parish, or, where there shall be no guardians, to the overseers of the parish within which such rule, order, or regulation is intended to have effect; and that it shall in no case be necessary to prove such sending, unless reasonable notice in writing be given, by the party requiring such proof, to the party upon whom such proof would lie, that such proof will be required; and whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that the said rule, order, or regulation was sent, and that the party was cognizant thereof, such court shall order the reasonable expences of the witness or witnesses proving the same to be paid by the party who has given such notice, and such expences shall be recoverable as penalties and forfeitures under the first-recited act. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

Conveyances, &c. for workhouses to be good, although not enrolled.

73. And be it enacted, that in all cases where any messuages, lands, or hereditaments, or any estates or interest therein, have or hath been conveyed or assured, or purported to be conveyed or assured, either gratuitously or for valuable consideration, to or in trust for the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or the overseers only, or the guardians of any parish [or parishes respectively, or otherwise for the benefit of any parish or parishes respectively, or to or in trust for the guardians of any union, for the purpose of providing a workhouse or asylum, or workhouses or asylums, for the accommodation of the poor of such parish or parishes or union respectively, every such conveyance or assurance shall be deemed good and valid for all purposes whatsoever, notwithstanding that such conveyance or conveyances have not been enrolled pursuant to the statute passed in the ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled An Act to restrain the Disposition of Lands whereby the same became inalienable. 9 Geo. II. c. 36.

Construction of act.

74. And be it enacted, that this act shall be construed in the same manner as the act passed in the sixth year of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled An Act to continue until the Thirty-first Day of July One thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, and to the End of the then next Session of Parliament, the Poor Law Commission; and for the further Amendment of the Laws relating to the Poor in England, and as one act with the same, and with the acts and provisions thereby required to be construed as one act; and the word "month" shall be taken to mean calendar month; and the words "clerk of the peace" shall be taken to mean the clerk of the peace or other officer discharging any of the duties of clerk of the peace for any county, division of a county, riding, borough, liberty, division of a liberty, precinct, county of a city, city, county of a town, town, cinque port, or town corporate; and the words "licensed minister" in the said first-recited act, and "minister" in this act, shall be construed to mean and include every person in holy orders, and also every person teaching or preaching in any congregation for religious worship whose place of meeting is certified and recorded according to law; and, except where it is otherwise expressly provided, all provisions in any act now passed or hereafter to be passed, relating to the officers of boards of guardians constituted under the provisions of the said first-recited act, or to the workhouses under the management of such guardians, shall apply to all officers appointed by any district board, and to all workhouses under the management of any district board. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57.

Act limited to England and Wales.

75. And be it enacted, that this act shall extend only to England and Wales.

When act to operate.

76. And be it enacted, that this act shall come into operation on the day next after that on which her Majesty gives her assent thereto.

Act may be amended this session.

77. And be it enacted, that this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this present session of parliament.

SCHEDULES REFERRED TO IN THE FOREGOING ACT.

SCHEDULE (A.)

County
Division

Name of Mother of Bastard applying.	Date of Issue of Summons.	Date of Petty Sessions.	Result of the Application.	Name of the putative Father in all Cases in which Orders are made.
			[Here state if the Summons was never served, or if the alleged Father absconded, or the Complaint was abandoned or heard, and the Order refused, or, if made, the Amount of the Order.]

I certify the above List to be correct in all Particulars.

(Signed) A. B., Clerk to the Justices.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101.

SCHEDULE (B.)

City, Towns, and Boroughs.

Liverpool.	Leeds.
Manchester.	Birmingham.
Bristol.

SCHEDULE (C.)

The board of guardians of the poor of the union [or parish of] do hereby certify, that on the day of A. B. and his wife C. B., and his child E. B., became chargeable to the parish of in the said union [or to the said union].

In testimony whereof the common seal of the said guardians is hereunto affixed at a meeting of their board this day of 18 .

(L. S.) (Signed) W. J., Presiding Chairman of the said Board.
(Countersigned) C. D., Clerk [or acting as Clerk] to the Board of Guardians of

II. OF FORMS.

Circular stating Duties of Parochial Officers.

Poor Law Commission Office, Somerset House,
1*st March*, 1836.

To the Churchwardens, Overseers, and other Officers required to account for the Expenditure of the Poor Rates.

1. By the order for keeping, examining, and auditing accounts, issued by the commissioners under the authority of the Poor Law Amendment Act, it is required that the accounts of each separate parish, and also the accounts of every union, shall be made up quarterly and duly audited.

2. Under the late mode of administration, much money was unequally collected, or was altogether omitted to be collected, and much was improperly expended. Either from ignorance or neglect, many illegal practices have crept into the administration of relief, which, from their notoriety and general prevalence, have been supposed to be legal, and have frequently been continued in perfect confidence of their correctness. The commissioners are aware that many of the charges thus illegally defrayed out of the poor rates were incurred for useful public purposes, but all such illegal charges they are bound to disallow; and they have accordingly issued directions to the auditors to disallow them in the quarterly audit of the accounts. The commissioners have directed the following instructions to be issued to prevent you from incurring such charges unwittingly, and to save you from the consequences of their disallowance. Some of these instructions may not be strictly applicable to individual parishes governed under the provisions of local acts. The nature of such modifications as may be necessary in each case cannot be here specified, but will readily suggest themselves to persons acquainted with the provisions of the acts in question.

3. Under the law as it stood previously to the passing of the Poor Law Amendment Act, the churchwardens and overseers were alone answerable for the whole of the expenditure for the relief of the paupers; and the accounts of masters of workhouses, and other subordinate officers, were necessarily included in the accounts of the churchwardens and overseers. Under the Poor Law Amendment Act, the obligation to account is extended to every officer or other person to whom money, or any goods, stock, or other property is intrusted; and the account must be regularly rendered for goods or stock as well as for money.

4. Formerly it was generally understood that the order of a magistrate or other superior authority, to any parish officer, was to be implicitly obeyed without any examination of its validity, and that the order of itself exonerated the officer to whom it was directed from all legal responsibility: but, by the 96th section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, it is enacted that thenceforth, from the passing of the statute, "no overseer shall be liable to any prosecution or penalty for not carrying into execution any illegal order of such justices or guardians; any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding." As the accounts of every officer may be disallowed, so every officer, whilst he is bound to obey all orders which are legal, is equally bound to disobey all orders which are illegal, and will be personally answerable in either case.

Duties of Parochial Officers.

5. On entering upon your office, you must obtain from your predecessors the balances of rates and other monies in their hands, and also ascertain whether there are any charges relating to the past year unliquidated. You must bear in mind that the law protects the present rate-payers from being charged with expenses incurred by former officers; and that, as a general rule, no items which relate to a past year can properly be brought into the account for the current year. The exceptions to this rule are, where the preceding officers have, from unavoidable circumstances and not from neglect, been unable to collect the rates, in which case they may be reimbursed for any advances made by them to the extent of the arrears of rates to be collected. Another admissible exception is, where the preceding overseers may have advanced sums of money during a time when no rate could have been enforced; as where an appeal has been depending, by which the whole of the rate was affected, in which case the succeeding overseers may reimburse their predecessors in office. So, again, where a legal charge has accrued so late as to render it impossible to make and collect a rate of which the former overseers might have been reimbursed, in which case it is lawful for the succeeding overseers to pay the charge.

6. It should be observed that, by the 47th section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, "all balances due from any guardian, treasurer, overseer, or assistant overseer, or other person having the control and distribution of the poor-rate, or accountable for such balances, may be recovered in the same manner as any penalties and forfeitures are recoverable under this act; provided, nevertheless, that no such proceeding shall discharge the liability of the surety of any such treasurer, overseer, or other person as aforesaid."

7. All penalties and forfeitures under this act may be levied by distress and sale of goods and chattels, by warrant under the hand of two justices; and in case such forfeitures be not forthwith paid, the justices may order the offender to be kept in custody until return can conveniently be made to the distress warrant, unless the offender shall give sufficient security for his appearance on the return-day of the warrant; but if, upon the return of the warrant, there appears that no sufficient distress can be had, the offender may be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, to remain without bail or mainprise, unless such penalties and all reasonable charges be sooner paid.

8. By the act 43 of Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, the churchwardens and overseers are directed to raise, weekly or otherwise, competent sums of money for the relief of the poor. By the 4th section, the same officers are armed with powers to enforce the payment of such money and "of all arrearages." But the parish officers having been allowed a discretion, in point of time, for the collection of rates, abusive practices have crept in, under which the collections have been made at much longer intervals than those intended by the legislature. By neglecting to make frequent collections, large amounts have been required at each contribution from the rate-payer, and many persons who would have had no difficulty in paying smaller sums at more frequent intervals, have become defaulters. Through the length of these intervals, payment has also been frequently avoided by the removal of the rate-payers out of the parish. It has also been a mal-practice of churchwardens and overseers to favour some rate-payers by allowing them to continue in arrear for former rates, while more recent rates were in course of collection. By these neglects and mal-practices, the persons who pay the rates regularly have been unduly burthened, and much money has often been lost to the parish. It has, moreover, been a practice to harass particular individuals with collections, before the regular collection is made from the rate-payers generally.

9. To abate the evils which have thus grown up, and to limit the discretionary power under which they have been generated, it is now provided that the accounts shall be audited quarterly, and it will hereafter be requisite that you should regularly and impartially collect the rates, and pay all expenses incurred, and as far as practicable confine the quarterly accounts to the charges of the quarter.

10. It is proper to caution you that the quarterly audit now directed does not dispense with the usual yearly audit, and that any illegal charges which may escape the notice of, or be allowed by the auditors, at the quarterly audit, may nevertheless be disallowed or reduced by the justices at the yearly audit. The jurisdiction of the court of quarter sessions, on appeals from the allowances or disallowances of the yearly accounts of overseers by the justices remains in force, and the penalties to which overseers neglecting to account, or to deliver over balances or parish property, were made liable by former acts, may still be imposed by justices of the peace.

Duties of Parochial Officers.

11. By the statute 43 of Elizabeth, the overseers or collectors of rates are bound to collect equally the rates from all persons. It is only upon the authority of justices that any individual occupier can be excused from the payment of rates. If, therefore, you find any person occupying a tenement, who from poverty is incapable of paying his rates, the only course which you can legally take is to submit the case to the magistrates, with evidence of the fact of inability —such as his being only in partial employment—his having suffered from calamities—and his living in a state of privation of the ordinary comforts or conveniences. Proof must be given of a state approaching to pauperism on the part of any occupier, to exempt him from the payment of the rates. Having upon such evidence, and not upon the mere assertion of the party, received the magistrates' order to excuse the party from the payment of the rate assessed upon him, you must preserve such order; for unless you are enabled to produce it as a voucher, you may be compelled to pay the amount which you would otherwise have been called upon to collect.

12 The only other deductions allowed to be made in the collection of the rates are, where property, not subject to the rate, has been assessed by mistake, as where property is exempted, or where it is unoccupied; also where persons have removed within the interval reasonably allowed for the collection of the rate, and have thus escaped payment in the regular course; but in every such case you are bound to collect the arrear thus accruing, and if necessary to resort to legal means for recovering the amount. You must be prepared with evidence to establish the grounds for these deductions from the full amount of the rate allowed; and, until the rate already allowed has been thus fully collected, no new rate must be applied for; and if applied for in any case, the justices are bound to withhold their sanction, and to require that the whole of the old rate should be first collected and accounted for.

13. Besides the poor-rates, you are bound to collect and bring to account the monies derivable to the parish from other sources, namely—

All rents, dividends, or other funds arising from bequests vested in the parish officers for the relief of the poor.

All payments by the natural relations of paupers, or by the parents of bastard children.

All repayments of relief given by way of loan, under the 59th Geo. III. c. 12, or under the Poor Law Amendment Act, &c.

All repayments, by other parishes, of the cost of relief to paupers under order of removal, or otherwise.

All earnings by paupers maintained by the parish in or out of the house.

All penalties, fines, and forfeitures, wholly, or in part, for the use of the poor;

As well as all other monies applicable to the same use.

14. Your attention will next be required to your duties in the expenditure of the rates and other monies so collected; and herein you must bear in mind, that usage is of no legal authority in the construction of the statute of Elizabeth, by which the poor-rates are established. The law has not given to the parish officers or even to the vestry any power of charging or of taxing their fellow-parishioners, even for useful purposes, at their own mere discretion; and no charge upon the poor-rates is legal, unless it is in plain words sanctioned or directed by some statute.

15. The following is a list of the statutes, under the authority of which the poor-rates are chiefly levied and expended:—

Authority.	Charges on Rates.
43 Eliz. c. 2	Setting to work the able. Relieving the impotent.
4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, (P. L. Amendment Act)	Maintenance of the poor in workhouses. Out-door relief to the aged and infirm. Out-door relief to the able-bodied. Out-door relief in cases of emergency. Casual relief to the poor. Medical relief. Relief to bastards.
9 Geo. IV. c. 40, s. 38 . . .	Charges of conveying and maintaining pauper lunatics.
5 Eliz. c. 4, and subsequent acts	Putting out apprentices.
2 & 3 Anne, c. 6, and 4 Anne, c. 19	Apprenticeship to sea service.
2 Geo. III. c. 22	Register and regulation of parish poor infants within the bills of mortality.
4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 58 (P. L. Amendment Act) . . .	Loans to poor persons.
59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 30 . .	Loans to Greenwich and Chelsea pensioners. (The advances are recoverable quarterly, and an arrear of one quarter is not therefore allowable.)
59 Geo. III. c. 12.	Providing lands, &c. for the poor. (The authority must have been exercised under the direction of the Poor Law Commissioners.)
4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, (P. L. Amendment Act) . . .	Emigration.
52 Geo. III. c. 16	Charges for relief to paupers during their confinement in gaols which are not county gaols.
5 Geo. IV. c. 85	Allowances to discharged prisoners. (These are recoverable from the treasurer of the county on application by the overseer.)
3 Geo. II. c. 29	Reimbursed charges to parish officers for maintaining and removing certificated persons.
4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 84, (P. L. Amendment Act) . . .	Costs of relief to persons under orders of removal.
9 Geo. I. c. 7; 22 Geo. III. c. 83; 59 Geo. III. c. 12; 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 21—25, (P. L. Amendment Act) . . .	Building, altering, enlarging, purchasing, hiring, and fitting up of workhouses.
4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 14, (P. L. Amendment Act.) . . .	Expenses of witnesses before Poor Law Commissioners, where allowed by them.
4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 82 .	Costs of appeals.
59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 7 . . .	Salary to assistant overseer.
12 Geo. II. c. 29, &c. . . .	County rate.
5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 92, (Corporation Reform Act) . .	Borough rate in the nature of a county rate.
7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 15 . .	Compensation by the hundred in places not contributing to the county rate.
7 Geo. IV. c. 64	Costs and compensations in the prosecution of felony in such places.
25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5; 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 7 & 8 . . .	Costs of prosecuting persons keeping disorderly houses.
18 Geo. III. c. 19, &c. . . .	Sums expended by constables in doing actual business of the parish, in the relief or removal of vagrants, &c.
11 Geo. IV.; 1 Will. IV. c. 30, s. 10	Making population returns.
6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 9 . . .	Printing a sufficient number of jury lists.

16. This list is not to be deemed complete, as by clauses inserted in various general acts as well as by many local acts, charges are in certain cases made payable out of the poor-rates for objects not connected with the original intention of the poor-laws. In no case, however, except in relief of destitution, will it be safe to make any payments out of the poor-rates, unless sanctioned by the express direction of some statute. In doubtful cases therefore the proper inquiry will always be "Under what statute, or by what regulation is the proposed charge warranted?" and, unless the authority can be found in the words of the statute, or in some lawful order or regulation of the Poor Law Commissioners, it must be presumed that the charge would be illegal.

Duties of Parochial Officers.

17. By the 50th Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1, the justices (and by the Poor Law Amendment Act, auditors) are authorised to strike out of the overseers' accounts "all such charges and payments as they shall deem to be unfounded, and to reduce such as they shall deem to be exorbitant, specifying on the foot of such account every such charge or payment, and its amount, so far as such justices shall disallow or reduce the same, and the cause for which the same was disallowed or reduced."

18. With relation to the unfounded charges, the primary general rule has already been stated: namely, that all charges on the poor-rates are unfounded which are not authorised by some statute. With relation to the exorbitant charges, the general rule is, that all charges are exorbitant, on which the overseers have paid any person for goods or services at a higher rate than such goods or services were offered by any other competent person, or than they might be obtained for by a private individual resident within the same district.

19. The charges which must be struck out as unfounded, are those for relief given to persons who are not legally entitled to it, as not being in a state of necessity from destitution, and with relation to whom the securities prescribed by statute, or by the regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners, under the Poor Law Amendment Act, have not been complied with. By the 9th Geo. I. c. 7, s. 2, it is provided that "no officers of any parish shall (except upon sudden and emergent occasions) bring to the account of the parish any monies he shall give to any poor person of the same parish, who is not registered in such book or books to be kept by the said parish, as a person entitled to receive collection; and as monies for the relief of such persons are directed not to be brought to the account, they must, if entered, be struck out. In unions, the "Pauper Description Book," the "Weekly Relief Book" for out-door paupers, and the "Admission Book," for in-door paupers, prescribed by the Poor Law Commissioners, will supersede the collection book required by the 9th Geo. I.

20. The cases of emergency which may legally be relieved, are generally cases of sudden and calamitous accident; and it is provided by the Poor Law Amendment Act, s. 54, that in parishes included in any union all such relief shall be given in kind, but not in money. The relief to be given will therefore be medicine, food, or clothing, as the nature of the case may be. No case can be considered a case of emergency, when there is time for the parish officers to put the pauper requiring relief upon the collection book as provided, and in general two or three days will be found to be the utmost limits of a case of emergency.

21. Those charges must be deemed unfounded and be disallowed in cases where, although it may have been lawful to give some relief, the relief actually given differs from that directed by the Poor Law Amendment Act, or by other statutes, or by the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners. By the 89th section of the Poor Law Amendment Act it is provided: "That all payments, charges, and allowances made by any overseer or guardian, and charged upon the rates for the relief of the poor, contrary to the provisions of this act, or at variance with any rule, order, or regulation of the said Commissioners, made under the authority of this act, shall be and the same are thereby declared to be illegal; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding. And every justice of the peace is thereby required to disallow, as illegal and unfounded, all payments, charges, or allowances, contrary to the provisions of this act, or to any such rule, order, or regulation of the said Commissioners, which shall be contained in any account of any overseer of the poor or guardian, which shall be presented for the purpose of being passed or allowed. Provided always, that no allowance by any justice shall exonerate or discharge such overseer or guardian from any penalty or legal proceeding to which he may have rendered himself liable by having acted contrary to the rules, orders, and regulations of the said Commissioners, or to the provisions of the act." It will therefore be necessary to bear carefully in mind the rules and orders of the Commissioners as to the mode in which relief is to be given.

22. Those charges must also be disallowed, as unfounded, which are incurred independently of, or against the directions of the board of guardians, if your parish is included in a union, or of a select vestry, or other persons exclusively authorised to give direction in the matter to which the payment relates, or to order relief under the 54th section of the Poor Law Amendment Act; since the only foundation for the charge in such case is the order of an officer so authorised, the payment must be in obedience to that order, or the charge must be disallowed at the audit.

23. With respect to the charges more commonly found in overseers' accounts, but not authorised by any statute, they are such as follow, namely—

Charges for the performance of services for which the law has not sanctioned any payment:—The duties of overseers are compulsory, and are required to be performed gratuitously. Those upon whom the office is imposed are legally bound to perform the whole of the duties themselves, and are not entitled to charge for assistance. Any of the following charges are therefore entered illegally where treated as payments for the services of constables, vestry clerks, &c.

Charges for coroners' inquests, and charges properly payable out of the church-rates, must be disallowed, as unfounded charges upon the poor-rates; so also

Charges for salaries to overseers, under the title of "permanent overseers."

Charges for the trouble of the overseer or other person in paying county-rates.

Charges for filling up parliamentary returns (except such charges as are allowed by the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 30, s. 10, for making the population returns.

Charges for loss of time in attending justices or revising barristers.

Charges for dinners, or other illegal charges usually concealed under the head of "expenses of attendance."

Charges for dinners and the entertainments of parish officers, often concealed under the item, "expenses of meetings, or otherwise."

Charges for the extirpation of vermin; for killing birds and badgers.

Charges for marrying paupers, also fees for churching women, and christening children, when not receiving relief within a workhouse; likewise excessive charges for tolling bells at paupers' funerals.

Charges for the prosecution of public offences: such prosecutions being in no way incidental to the office of overseer, unless made so by the express provision of some statute.

24. The parish officers who are bound to account for the expenditure of the parish monies are also bound to account in a proper form. The accounts of any officer which are not made out conformably to the rules of the Poor Law Commissioners, declaring the manner in which accounts are to be kept, cannot be received.

25. Where a general balance sheet is prepared, without the requisite detail of dates and expenditure, or where gross items are inserted which may conceal the nature of the individual charges and payments, and thus place impediments in the way of determining whether the receipts be completely accounted for, or whether any of the charges are unfounded or exorbitant, the accounts must be disallowed—and no items named "sundries," "miscellaneous," or "incidental expenses," can be admitted, without the whole of the details included under those heads being first fully explained on the face of the account.

26. You must also be prepared to prove that the regulations of the Commissioners for giving notice to the rate-payers have been observed, and that proper opportunities have been afforded to all who choose to examine the accounts; and you must also be prepared to verify upon oath the accuracy of all your charges, if required to do so.

You are requested to transfer this communication to your successors in office.

By order of the Board of Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales,

EDWIN CHADWICK,
Secretary.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

FORMS OF POOR RATE ISSUED BY THE POOR LAW COMMISSIONERS.

FORM G.—Rate Book.

Name of Occupier.	No. of Votes.	Name of Owner.	No. of Votes.	Description of Property for which rated.	Name of the House, Lands, or Premises, or situation thereof.	Rental or Annual Value of Property. £. s. d.	Amount at which the Property is Assessed. £. s. d.	Amount of Poor Rate to be collected at ——— in the £. £. s. d.	Amount of Arrears of former Rate, if any. £. s. d.	Total Amount to be collected. £. s. d.	Amount actually collected £. s. d.	Date when so collected.

FORM H.—Certificate of Auditor.

I have examined all the items in this account, and compared them with the vouchers, and I do hereby certify and declare that every entry allowed by me is correct, and in strict conformity with the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners, and the provisions of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

——— ——— Auditor.

FORM K.

——— ——— Union.

To A. B. and C. D. Churchwardens and Overseers [or "Overseers," as the case may be,] of the Parish [or "Township," as the case may be.]

You are hereby authorised and directed to pay to F. G. of on the day of at the sum of pound shillings and pence, from the poor rates of the said parish [or "township," as the case may be], towards the relief of the poor thereof, and towards defraying such proportion of the general expenses of the union as is lawfully chargeable on the said parish [or

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

"township," as the case may be,] and you shall take the receipt of the said F. G. for the said sum of £

Given under our hands, at the meeting of the guardians of the said union, held on the day of 18 .

(Signed) X. Y. Presiding Chairman.
W. Z. } Guardians.
U. V. }

(Countersigned)
R. S. Clerk to the Board of Guardians of the said Union,

FORM A.—Requisition for an Extraordinary Meeting of Guardians.

To the Clerk of the Guardians of the Union.

Sir,

We the undersigned, being two of the guardians of the poor of the union, do hereby require and direct you to summon an Extraordinary Meeting of the Guardians of the said Union, to be holden at on the day of 184 , at o'clock in the forenoon, to take into consideration [set out the motion].

FORM B.—Notice of First Weekly Meeting.

To A. B.
Guardian of the Poor of the Union.

Sir,

You are hereby informed that the First Weekly Meeting of the Board of Guardians of the Union, will take place at on the day of 183 , at o'clock in the forenoon, for the transaction of business; and that meetings of the said board will henceforth be held at the same place, on in every week, at the same hour of in the forenoon.

Clerk to the Board of Guardians of the Union.

FORM C.—Notice of an Adjourned Meeting of Guardians.

Sir,

This is to give you notice that an Adjourned Meeting of the Guardians of the poor of the Union, will be held at on the day of 183 , to take into consideration [set out the motion]; which meeting you are hereby requested to attend.

Clerk to the Guardians of the Poor of the Union.

FORM D.—Notice of Extraordinary Meeting of Guardians.

To A. B.

Sir,

I am directed by C. D. and E. F. two of the guardians of the poor of the Union, to summon an Extraordinary Meeting of the Guardians of the said Union at on the day of 183 , at o'clock in the forenoon, to take into consideration [set out the motion]; which meeting you are hereby requested to attend.

Clerk to the Guardians of the Union.

THE FORMS ABOVE REFERRED TO.

N. B.—The following Forms, A. and B. 1 and 2, may be followed by owners of Property in making their claims to vote, or in appointing Proxies and by such Proxies making their claims, but any other Form to the same effect will be sufficient.

FORM A.—Owner's Claim to Vote.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Parish of

This day of 183 .

I, of claim to be entitled to vote according to the provisions of the 4th and 5th Will. IV. c. 76, as owner of the property herein described, the whole of which is situate within the parish of viz.

["One House," or "Farm," &c. situate at].

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Form B. 1.—Appointment of Proxy.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Parish of

This day of 183 .

I, of being owner of the property hereinafter described, the whole of which is situate in the parish of do hereby appoint of to vote, until the present appointment is revoked, as my proxy, in all cases wherein he may lawfully do so, under the provisions of the 4th and 5th Will. IV. c. 76. And the property of which I am owner, and in respect of which I appoint the said to vote as my proxy, is as follows, viz. :—

[" One House," or " Farm," &c. situate at].

Form B. 2.—Application of Proxy.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the parish of

This day of 183 .

I, of having been appointed by of to vote as his proxy under the provisions of the 4th and 5th Will. IV. c. 76, do hereby claim to vote as such proxy. I herewith transmit to you such my appointment, in the handwriting of, [or " signed by"] the said [or " an attested copy of my appointment, the original of which is in the handwriting of, [or " signed by"] the said "] And the property situate in the parish of in respect of which the said is entitled to vote as owner, and in respect of which I do hereby claim to vote as his proxy, is as follows, viz. :—

[" One House," or " Farm," &c. situate at].

And I do hereby require you to enter my name and address as above, and the assessment of the rate for the relief of the poor, on the property above described, in the book or books directed by the said act to be provided for the purpose.

Form C.—Book for Registry of Owners of Property and Proxies.

Parish of

No.	Name of Owner.	Address.	Property in respect whereof right to vote is claimed.	No. of reference to Rate Book.	Aggregate amount of Assessment.	Name of Proxy.	Address of Proxy.	No.	Date on which Claim received.

We do certify that the above is a full and correct register and entry of the claims to vote of owners of property and proxies in the said parish, and we do declare that all the entries of reference to the rate book, amount of assessment, number of votes, and dates on which claims were received, are true.

(Signed) } Churchwardens. } Overseers.

Form D.—Notice of the First Election.

Union.

Election of Guardians of the Poor for the of

We, the undersigned, being the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the of do hereby give notice, that on the day of we shall, in pursuance of an order and declaration of the Poor Law Commissioners of England and Wales, proceed to the election of guardians of the poor for this to act as members of the board of guardians, to be elected for the union, which has been declared by the said Commissioners to take place from the day of in this present year.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Qualification of a Guardian.

[Here insert a copy or correct abstract of Section III. of the Order.]

Qualification of Voters.

[Here insert a copy or correct abstract of Section IV. of the Order, Art. 1, 3 & 5.]

Time for proposing Guardians.

Any person entitled to vote may propose a guardian; but he must send his proposal to one of the churchwardens or overseers, in writing, on or before the day of in the following form:—

[Here insert the form of Nomination Paper, F.]

No person can be elected guardian who has not been proposed in the manner above mentioned.

Mode of Voting.

In case more candidates shall be duly proposed than the number of guardians to be elected, a voting paper will be left on the day of at the house of every person residing in the who at that time shall be entitled to vote. The votes must be given in writing in such voting papers, which will be called for again on the day of election.

All other persons who on the day of election shall be entitled to vote, must on that day apply for voting papers to one of the churchwardens and overseers, and must return them filled up before noon of the same day.

Signed by us, this day of 183 .

} Churchwardens.

} Overseers.

FORM E.—Notice of the Annual Election of Guardians of the Poor.

Union.

The churchwardens and overseers of the several parishes comprised in the above union, and hereinafter named, will, in pursuance of the order of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, proceed on the day of to the election of the number of the guardians of the poor set opposite the names of such parishes for the year ending.

Parish A. . . . 10 guardians.
B. . . . 5 guardians.
C. . . . 3 guardians, &c. as the case may be.

Any person entitled to vote in any of the said parishes may propose as the guardian or guardians thereof any number (not exceeding the number to be there elected) of persons who are severally rated to the poor rate of any parish in the union in respect of property of the annual value or rental of £ . The proposal must be written, and must state the names, residences, and callings, of the persons proposed, and the name of the proposer, and must be delivered to one of the churchwardens and overseers of such parish on or before the day of .

Owners of rateable property in such parish, as well as rate-payers, are entitled to vote, provided their names are on the register of owners, or if they send in to the churchwardens and overseers before the day of election their claims to vote, with a statement of their names and address and a description of their property.

Owners may also vote by proxy; but proxies must make the statements above mentioned for their principals, and transmit to the churchwardens and overseers the originals or attested copies of their appointments.

In case of a contest for the office of guardian in any of the said parishes the votes will be given in papers to be left by the churchwardens and overseers two days at least before the day fixed for the election, at the houses of those residents of the parish who are then entitled to vote. All residents out of the parish, and all persons who become entitled after that day, must apply to one of the churchwardens and overseers for voting papers on the day of election.

The forms of nomination papers, statements of owners, and appointment of proxy, may be seen and copied by voters at the board room in the .

A. B. Clerk to the board of guardians.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Form F.—Nomination Paper.

To the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of

Name of the Person or Persons proposed as Guardian or Guardians.	Residence and Quality or Calling of the Person or Persons proposed.

I nominate the above to be guardian [or "guardians"] for the said parish, for the year ending

Signature and address of proposer.

This paper must be delivered to one of the churchwardens or overseers at least six whole days before the day of election.

Form G.—Voting Paper.

Voting Paper for the Parish of

Names of the Persons proposed as Guardians.	Residences and Qualities or Callings of the Persons proposed.	Names of the Proposers.

[Hereunder the voter or proxy must insert in his own handwriting* the name or names of such of the above candidates as he votes for.]

I vote for

Signature of voter or proxy.†

* If the voter cannot write, his mark must be attested by a witness, and the name or names of the parties for whom he votes must be inserted in his presence by the attesting witness.

† If the proxy votes, he should sign his name, and add for whom he is proxy, thus :—M. N. proxy for P. Q.

Take notice, this paper must be carefully preserved by the voter, as no second paper will be given. When it is filled up, it must be kept ready for delivery to and the collecting officers, who will call for the same on the day of

No other person can be allowed to receive the voting paper; if it be not ready for the collectors when they call the votes will be lost. They will also be lost if more than names be returned as voted for.

Form H.—Letter to Guardians Elected.

Union.

day of 184 .

Sir,

We, the undersigned, being churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of do hereby give you notice and declare that on the day of you were duly proposed as a guardian of the poor of the parish of and that on the day of you were elected such guardian.

(Signed) } Churchwardens.
} Overseers.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

FORM I.—Notice of the Guardians Elected.

Union.

day of 184 .

We, the undersigned, being churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of do hereby give notice that resident at were proposed as guardians of the poor of the said parish, and that on the day of were elected [" without opposition," or " by a majority of the number of votes for the several candidates being as follows," &c. as the case may be.]

(Signed) } Churchwardens.
} Overseers.

FORM J.—Return to the Board of Guardians of the Guardians Elected.

Union.

day of 184 .

We, the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of do hereby certify that on the day of we affixed a notice for the election of guardians on the principal door of the church in the said parish, and that on the day of , were proposed by , and that on the day of , were elected [" without opposition," or " by a majority of the number of votes for the several candidates being as follows," &c., as the case may be], and that on the day of notice of such election was duly given to the guardians elected, and affixed on the church door.

(Signed) } Churchwardens.
} Overseers.

G. FORM OF BOND OF A RELIEVING OFFICER.

G. Form of Bond of a Relieving Officer.

KNOW ALL MEN by these presents, that we, C. D. of, &c. E. F. of, &c. and G. H. of, &c. are jointly and severally held and firmly bound to the guardians of the poor of the union, in the county of , in the sum of pounds of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be paid to the said guardians, or their certain attorney, successors, or assigns, for which payment to be well and faithfully made, we bind ourselves jointly, and each of us bindeth himself severally, our and each and every of our heirs, executors and administrators, and every of them, firmly by these presents, sealed with our seals. Dated this day of in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven, in the year of the reign of his Majesty King William the Fourth.

WHEREAS by an order, bearing date the day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty- , under the hands and seals of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, acting under the powers and authorities of an act passed in the 4th and 5th years of the reign of his present Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled " An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," it was declared that the several parishes of [enumerate the parishes carefully] in the county of should be united for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, by the name of the union, and that a board of guardians should be elected for such union; and such board of guardians hath been duly elected accordingly; and in and by the rules, orders, and regulations, prescribed by the said Poor Law Commissioners for the direction of such board, it was, amongst other things, directed, that the said board should, in manner therein mentioned, appoint such and so many competent person or persons as the said board of guardians should think fit, to be a relieving officer or relieving officers of the said union, and should likewise determine the parishes or places for which each such relieving officer should act, and that no person should be chosen as such relieving officer unless he would undertake to reside in one of the parishes for which he might be appointed to act, and devote his whole time to the employment, not following any other trade or profession whatsoever.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

And whereas at a meeting of the said board of guardians, held on the day of last, was duly appointed a relieving officer for the parishes of [repeat their names] within the said union, and he hath been required to enter into a bond with two sureties to the said guardians in the above-mentioned penalties to be conditioned as hereinafter is mentioned, and he hath requested the above-bounden C. D., E. F., and G. H. to join with him as such sureties in the above-written bond, subject to the condition hereunder written, to which they have assented, and the said guardians have agreed to accept of them as such sureties accordingly.

NOW THE CONDITION of the above written obligation is such, that if the above bounden shall continue to reside in one of the said parishes for which he shall act as such relieving officer, during the whole period of his continuance in office, and shall during such period devote his whole time to the employment and duties of such office, and shall not follow any trade or profession whatsoever, and shall during the time that he shall hold such office well and truly, and in all respects and particulars observe, fulfil and keep all the lawful orders and directions of the said board of guardians, and likewise all and every the rules, orders and regulations of the said Poor Law Commissioners, which are now or shall from time to time be in force in any of the said several parishes during such his continuance in the said office, so far as the same shall apply or extend to such office, or to any of the duties thereof, and particularly shall at all times provide and keep such books and accounts as shall be required by the said orders and directions of the said guardians, or by the rules, orders and regulations of the said Poor Law Commissioners, or by the superior officer or officers of him the said during his continuance in office, or on his resigning, or being dismissed from the same, or if his executors or administrators after his decease, shall when so required produce and hand over to the said guardians, or such person or persons as they may authorise to receive the same, or to the successor in office of the said such books, accounts and vouchers, and hand over, pay or distribute to and amongst such parties as may be entitled to the same, all and every the balances, moneys, matters and things, being the property of any of the said parishes, or of the said guardians in such parishes, or of the said union in respect of the same, and which shall be entrusted from time to time to his care, or be in his custody or possession, in virtue of his said office, and also shall and will well and truly discharge such of the duties of an overseer of the poor as may be incidental to the said office, and pass his accounts before the auditor or auditors of the said union, or other the person or persons before whom such accounts are required to be passed under and by virtue of the said recited act, or of any other act or acts concerning overseers of the poor, or their accounts, and in all respects well and truly conform thereto, and shall also when required verify such books and accounts and every part thereof on oath, or subscribe a declaration to the truth thereof, in manner provided by the said act, then this obligation shall be void.

Sealed and delivered by the above bounden in the presence of

---

7. Form of Bond of Collector of Rates, and his Sureties.

7. Form of Bond of Collector of Rates, and his Sureties.

KNOW ALL MEN by these presents, that we, C. D. of the parish of in the county of , E. F. of , and G. H. of , are jointly and severally held and firmly bound to the guardians of the poor of the union, in the county of in the sum of pounds of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be paid to the said or their certain attorney, successors or assigns, for which payment to be well and faithfully made, we bind ourselves jointly, and each of us bindeth himself severally, our and each and every of our heirs, executors and administrators, and every of them, firmly by these presents, sealed with our several and respective seals. Dated this day of in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty and in the year of the reign of his Majesty King William the Fourth.

WHEREAS, under and by virtue of an order, bearing date the day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty- under the seal of the Poor Law

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Commissioners for England and Wales, acting under the powers and authorities of an act passed in the 4th and 5th years of the reign of his present Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," it was declared that the several parishes of in the county of should be united for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, by the name of the union, and that a board of guardians should be elected for such union, and whereas such board of guardians hath been duly elected accordingly. And whereas, by an order under the seal of the said Poor Law Commissioners, bearing date the day of last, it was ordered and directed that the said guardians should appoint a fit and proper person to be the collector of the rates for the relief of the poor of the parishes and places comprised in the said union; and it was by the said order declared that the following should be the duties of such collector, that is to say:—

1. To assist the churchwardens and overseers of the several parishes in making the assessments, and in keeping all books, and in making all returns which relate to the collection of rates or rents, or of any monies whatsoever payable on account of the poor rates.
2. To collect all moneys payable on account of the poor rates, or as rents, or arising from any of the sources of income set forth in the order of the said Poor Law Commissioners for keeping the books of receipts and payments.
3. To pay weekly into the hands of the treasurer of the union all moneys received on account of the several parishes, as often as he, the collector, should have more than fifty pounds in his hands, but to make no other payment or disbursement whatever on account of the union, or of any parish comprised therein.
4. To institute and to attend to all proceedings against all persons who make default in the payment of moneys due by them to any of the parishes in the union, either in respect of poor rates or otherwise.
5. To attend the weekly meetings of the board of guardians, and generally to observe and fulfil all lawful orders and directions of the said board of guardians, and likewise the rules, orders, and regulations relating to the said union already or to be hereafter issued by the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales.

And it was thereby further ordered and directed, that the person so to be appointed as aforesaid should, before he entered on the performance of the duties of his office, give such security for the due and proper discharge of the same as should appear to the said guardians to be necessary and fitting. And whereas, at a meeting of the said guardians, held on the day of , was duly appointed a collector for the said union, and he was required by the said guardians to enter into a bond with two proper sureties for the proper discharge of the duties of his office, and he hath requested the above-bounden and to join with him as sureties in the above-written bond, subject to the condition hereunder written, to which they have assented, and the said guardians have agreed to accept of them as such sureties for the said accordingly.

NOW THE CONDITION of the above-written obligation is such, that if the above-bounden shall, during his continuance in the said office of collector, well and truly fulfil the several duties set forth and enjoined in the said order and hereinbefore recited, and also shall, when thereunto required by the said guardians, or by the said Poor Law Commissioners, or as the said guardians or Poor Law Commissioners may direct, render a full, just, and true account of the moneys from time to time received and paid by the said as such collector, so that the exact amount collected by him, and the balance, if any, remaining in his hands may clearly appear; and also shall from time to time, and at all times during his continuance in the said office of collector, in all respects and particulars, well and truly observe, fulfil and keep, all the lawful orders and directions of the said board of guardians, and likewise all and every the rules, orders, and regulations of the said Poor Law Commissioners, which are now, or shall from time to time be in force, in any of the said several parishes, so far as the same shall apply or extend to his said office, or to any of the duties thereof, and particularly shall provide and keep such books and accounts as are or shall be required by the said orders and directions of the said guardians, or by the rules, orders, and regulations of the said Poor Law Commissioners, or by the superior officer or officers of him the said and also, when required by the said guardians, or by the said Poor Law Commissioners, during his continuance in office, or on his resigning, or being dismissed from the same, produce and hand over to the said guardians, or to such person or persons as they may appoint, or to the successor in office of the said such books, accounts, and vouchers and hand over, pay, or distribute, to and amongst such parties as may be entitled to the same, all and every the balances, moneys, matters, and things being the property of any of the said parishes, or of the said guardians in respect of such parishes, or of the respective churchwardens or overseers, or other officers of such parishes, or of the said union, which shall be in his custody or possession, or power, in virtue of his said office, or otherwise howsoever, and also shall when required verify such books and accounts, and every part thereof on oath, or subscribe a declaration to the truth thereof in manner provided by the said act, and generally do and shall in all things well and faithfully execute and discharge the duties of his said office; then and in such case the above-written bond or obligation shall be void.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Signed, sealed, and delivered by the above-bounden

in the presence of

---

8. Forms relating to Sale of Parish Property.

8. Forms relating to Sale of Parish Property.

Form No. 1.—Request to the Guardians to apply to the Poor Law Commissioners to Consent to Sale.

Parish of Union,
County of

WE, the undersigned majority of the parish officers, and we the undersigned inhabitants of the parish of request you to apply to the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales for their consent to the sale of the undermentioned premises, belonging to the said parish, and for their directions as to such sale, and for the application of the produce thereof to the permanent advantage of the said parish.

[Here describe the premises, stating whether the tenure is freehold, customary freehold, copyhold, or leasehold, and whether subject to the payment of any quit rent, also when and how the parish became possessed of the property, and if any trusts exist which affect the same; if property built upon waste land, state whether so built with the consent of the lord of the manor, and the date of such consent.]

The said premises cannot conveniently be used for the purposes of the said union, and we are of opinion that the sale thereof will be of permanent advantage to the said parish, for the following reasons:—

[Here describe their condition, whether in a state of good repair, or dilapidated; also in whose occupation, whether in that of paupers or not, or empty; and any other circumstances that may enable the guardians to judge of the desirableness of selling the property.]

The said premises are estimated to be of the value of and yield an annual rent of

We are also of opinion that it will be advisable to apply the proceeds of the sale, after deducting the expenses thereof, in the following manner, to the permanent advantage of the parish.

[Say whether as contribution to the Union Workhouse, or to what other purpose; if to pay a debt state when it was contracted, by whom, for what purpose, and how such debt is secured; if to discharge a mortgage, state by whom and when created, the name of the mortgagee, and to what objects the money was applied.]

Dated this day of 183 .

Churchwardens.
Overseers.
Inhabitants.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

FORM No. 2.—Request to the Poor Law Commissioners for Consent to Sale.

Parish of } Union,
County of }

[Here describe the Premises.]

WE, the undersigned, majority of the guardians of the poor of the said union, having received the annexed application from the majority of the parish officers and from some of the inhabitants of the above parish, whereby we are requested to apply to the Poor Law Commissioners for their consent to the sale of the premises belonging to the said parish, described in the margin hereof, and for their directions as to the application of the produce thereof, and being fully satisfied that the sale thereof will be of permanent advantage to the said parish, do hereby request the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales to consent that we make sale of the said premises, under the provisions of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of his present Majesty King William IV., intituled "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes in England and Wales;" and that they will issue such rules, orders, or regulations, touching such sale, and the conveyance of the said premises, and the application of the produce thereof, for the permanent advantage of the said parish, as they may see fit in that behalf.

Dated this day of 183 .

Witness,
Clerk to the Board of Guardians.

Guardians' Signatures.	Parishes.

FORM No. 3.—Order for Convening Meeting.

Parish of } Union,
County of }

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the above Parish.

WE, the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, in pursuance of a request from the guardians of the poor of the above union, made in pursuance of an application in that behalf from a majority of the parish officers and some of the inhabitants of the above parish, do hereby order you, within twenty-one days from the receipt hereof, duly to give notice of and convene a meeting of the rate-payers of the said parish, and owners of property therein entitled to vote, pursuant to the provisions of an act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his present Majesty King William IV. intituled "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," for the purpose of obtaining the consent of such meeting to the guardians of the poor of the said union selling the premises described in the margin hereof, under the provisions of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of his said Majesty, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes in England and Wales."

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Given under our hands and seal of office this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-

(L. S.)

Form No. 1.—Letters to the Parish Officers, accompanying the Order for convening Meeting, &c.

Poor Law Commission Office,
183 .

Parish of Union,
County of

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the said Parish.

Gentlemen,

By the direction of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, I transmit to you the following papers relating to the sale of certain premises, the property of your parish, and to which your attention is particularly directed.

They consist of—

Copy of a request for such sale from the Guardians of the Poor of the above Union.

Order to you for convening a Meeting of the Rate-payers and Owners of Property in your Parish to consent to such sale.

A Form of Notice of Meeting, to be used by you, and to be given and affixed in like manner as Vestry Meetings are generally called in your Parish.

A Form of Resolution to be put to the Meeting giving such consent.

And, lastly, A Form of Certificate of the Meeting having been duly held, and the Resolution duly passed, to be signed by the Minister and yourselves, and returned to the Poor Law Commissioners accompanied by attested copies of the Notice of Meeting and Resolution.

With reference to the taking of votes at the Meeting, you will be careful that the names of the rate-payers and owners of property, present in person, or (as respects owners) by proxy at such meeting, are duly entered in the vestry book. After the entry of the resolution, in the form herewith sent, you will divide the page into two parts (or take two pages), one for the entry of votes for the resolution, the other of votes against it; and the votes will be entered thus:—

For the above Resolution.			Against the above Resolution.
Name.	No. of Votes as Owner.	No. of Votes as Rate-payer.	Name.	No. of Votes as Owner.	No of Votes as Rate-payer.
A. B.	3	. .	G. H.	4	. .
C. D.	. .	1	I. J.	5	. .
E. F.	3	2	K. L.	. .	4
&c.			&c.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

The amount of the two columns on each side being found, you will ascertain the majority by subtracting the one from the other in the usual way, the chairman having a casting vote in case of equality.

With reference to the owners of property who are entitled to vote, I have to call your attention to the Poor Law Amendment Act, section 40. And you are particularly enjoined to provide a book for the registry of the names of owners of the property, as required by that clause, or you will take care to add the names in the Rate Books, so as to enable the chairman of the meeting to ascertain, by a reference to the register, what owners are entitled to attend in person or by proxy and vote at the meeting.

I have the honour to be,

Gentlemen,

Your obedient Servant,

Secretary.

FORM No. 5.—A.—Notice of Meeting to Consent to Sale of Workhouses, &c.

Parish of } Union, } County of .

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that a meeting of the rate-payers in this parish, and of the owners of property therein entitled to vote in person, or (as respects owners) by proxy, pursuant to the provisions of an act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his present Majesty King William IV., intituled, "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," will be held at in this parish, on (a) the day of at in the forenoon, for the purpose of giving the consent of such meeting to the guardians of the poor of the said Union selling the following premises, that is to say—under the provision of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of his said Majesty, intituled, "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes in England and Wales," in such manner, and subject to such rules, orders, and regulations, touching such sale, and the conveyance of such property, and the application of the produce arising therefrom, for the permanent advantage of the said parish, as the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales shall in that behalf direct.

Dated this day of , 184 .

Minister.

} Churchwardens.

} Overseers.

FORM No. 6.—B.—Resolution entered in Vestry Book.

Parish of } Union, } County of .

Here describe the premises.] AT a meeting of the rate-payers of the said parish, and owners of property therein entitled to vote pursuant to the provisions of an act passed in the 4th and 5th years of the reign of his present Majesty King William IV., intituled, "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," held at in the said parish, on the day of , 184 , pursuant to notice of such meeting duly given:

Chairman.

(a) Three clear days' notice is requisite.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

It was resolved, by a majority of such rate-payers and owners, present in person or (as respects owners) by proxy at such meeting.—

That this meeting do consent to the Guardians of the Poor of the said Union selling the premises described in the margin hereof, under the provisions of an act passed in the 5th and 6th years of the reign of his present Majesty King William IV., intituled, "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes in England and Wales," in such manner, and subject to such rules, orders, and regulations, touching such sale, the conveyance of such property, and the application of the produce arising therefrom, for the permanent advantage of this parish, as the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales shall in that behalf direct.

Minister.
Churchwardens.
Overseers.

FORM No. 7.—Certificate of Minister, Churchwardens, and Overseers, of the Forms of Act having been complied with.

Parish of Union,
County of .

WE, the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the said parish, do hereby certify, that at a meeting of the rate-payers of the said parish, and owners of property therein whose claims to be entitled to vote have been duly registered in the books of the said parish, held at in the said parish, on the day of , the resolution, of which a true copy is hereunto annexed, was duly passed. And we do further certify and declare, that such meeting was duly convened and held for the purpose expressed in such resolution after public notice of the time and place of holding such meeting, and the purpose for which the same was intended to be held had been given in like manner as notices of vestry meetings are given in the said parish. And we do further certify, that the paper marked (A.) (a) hereto annexed, and signed by us, is a true copy of the notice of such meeting, and that such notice was given in the church of the said parish on the day of , and that a copy of such notice fairly written (or printed) was affixed on the day of on the principal door of the church (or chapel) of the said parish, and that the paper hereto annexed, marked (B.) (b) and signed by us, is a true extract from the vestry books of the said parish.

Witness our hands, this day of , 184 .

Minister.
Churchwardens.
Overseers.

FORM No. 8.—Directions for Sale, &c.

Parish of Union,
County of .

Poor Law Commission Office,
184 .

To the Guardians of the Poor of the above Union.

Gentlemen,

IN reply to your application dated the day of , touching the sale of certain property of the above parish, I now transmit to you by the direction of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, the requisite consent of the rate-payers and owners of property in the said parish; and also an order directing you to proceed in such sale in such manner as you may deem most expedient, subject, however, to the conditions of sale therein referred to, among such others as the circumstances of the case may require.

---

(a) No. 5. (b) No. 6.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Such additional terms should, of course, protect the parish and yourselves from the burden of legal difficulties and costs, and ensure the benefit of the simplified modes of conveyance suggested by the recent act. On receipt of the draft conveyance, you will forward it to the Poor Law Commissioners for their approbation; but if, on its perusal, or on considering any other papers you may find necessary to submit to them, any professional expenses be incurred, they must be borne by the parish on whose behalf they will be incurred.

With reference to the application of any purchase money, in this or any other instance, or the disposal of any property taken in exchange, such further order for the permanent advantage of the parish or union entitled thereto, shall be hereafter made as the Commissioners may see fit: and until such order be issued, the amount must be paid into the hands of the treasurer, and be placed by him to an account intituled "The Guardians of the Poor of the Union, in the matter of the sale of certain Property belonging to the Parish of ."

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servant,

Secretary.

Form No. 9.—Order for Sale.

Parish of }
Union, }
County of . }

To the Guardians of the Poor of the above Union.

WE, the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales, having received a resolution duly passed at a meeting duly convened of rate-payers and owners of property in the above-named parish, entitled to vote, pursuant to the provisions of an act passed in the fourth and fifth years of the reign of his present Majesty King William IV. intituled "An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," do hereby order you the Guardians of the Union, in the county of , within thirty days from the receipt hereof, to proceed to the sale of the premises described in the margin hereof, under the provisions of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of his said Majesty, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Conveyance of Workhouses and other Property of Parishes and of Incorporations or Unions of Parishes in England and Wales," in such manner as you the said Guardians may deem expedient, subject nevertheless to the conditions of sale hereunto annexed and to such other conditions as the circumstance of the case may appear to you to require. And we do hereby further order that the purchase monies to arise from such sale shall, after the payment of the expenses incidental thereto, such expenses to be allowed by you, be paid into the hands of the treasurer of the said union, and be placed to the credit of the guardians of the said union, to an account to be intituled "the Guardians of the Union, in the matter of the sale of certain Premises belonging to the Parish of ;" and that the said purchase monies shall be applied to such purposes, and in such manner as we shall by any order under our hands and seal of office direct.

Forms issued by the Poor Law Commissioners.

Given under our hands and seal of office, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty.

(L. S.)

FORM No. 10.—Conditions of Sale.

1. In case any purchaser shall be desirous of investigating the title, an abstract shall be prepared and furnished at his cost, and all expenses attending such investigation, or arising out of the same, or of completing the title, and the costs of procuring or making all official and other copies, or extracts, counterparts or duplicates of deeds, wills, or other documents, and of preparing, perusing, and approving deeds of covenant, and the like, shall be paid by the purchaser to the vendors previously to or as the same shall be incurred, and the purchaser shall not be entitled to require any further investigation or evidence, while any previous expenses of or connected with the investigation of the title or the evidence shall remain unsatisfied; nor shall the purchaser have any claim whatever for reimbursement, or be entitled to refuse or delay payment in respect of any expenses incurred in case the purchase shall not be completed; and the vendors shall not be required to do any act for completing the sale beyond obtaining the approbation by the Poor Law Commissioners and Guardians of the draft of conveyance, and the affixing of their respective seals to the conveyance when approved. But unless the purchaser shall, by writing under his hand or the hand of his solicitor, call for such abstract and state his intention of investigating the title within seven days from the day of sale, he shall be deemed to have waived his right to do so; and notwithstanding such abstract being called for, the purchaser shall be deemed to be satisfied with the title of the vendors, unless he shall have delivered to the vendors his objections to the title or requisition for completing the same, in writing, within fourteen days from the delivery of such abstract.

2. The purchase money shall be paid to the treasurer of the union, and the conveyance executed on or before the day of , and the purchaser, on the payment of the purchase money and the execution of such conveyance, shall be let into possession or become entitled to the receipt of the rents and profits, and the purchaser shall accept the receipt of such treasurer as a sufficient discharge.

3. In case the completion of the purchase shall from any reason whatever be delayed beyond the day of , the purchaser shall pay to the vendors interest after the rate of 5l. per cent. per annum on the amount of his purchase money unpaid, and shall not be entitled to any compensation on any pretext for his purchase money, or any part thereof, having been unproductive.

4. The seal of office of the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales affixed to any document shall be conclusive evidence as to all the facts therein stated or noticed, and as to the powers of the vendors as guardians of the union.

5. In case of sale or exchange, no other covenant shall be required of the conveying parties, except one, that they have done no act to incumber the property disposed of.

6. If the purchaser shall neglect or fail to comply with the above stipulations, or any of them, or any part thereof, the deposit paid by him and all other payments previously made by or due from the purchaser, under or in respect of the sale or of these conditions, shall be absolutely forfeited to the vendors, and they shall be at full liberty to resell the property either by public auction or private contract, on such conditions of sale and in such manner as they shall think fit; and the deficiency (if any) occasioned by such second sale, together with all expenses attending the same, shall immediately after the same sale be made good to the vendors, by the said purchaser at this sale, and in case of the non-payment of the same, the whole thereof shall be recoverable by the vendors as and for liquidated damages, and it shall not be necessary to previously tender a conveyance to the purchaser.

I. Forms relating to Overseers, &c. &c.

1. Forms relating to Overseers, &c. &c.

[See Context, ante, page 29.]

1. Warrant for returning lists of overseers, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, and 54 Geo. III. c. 91

County of Middlesex, to wit. } To E. F., gentleman, High Constable of the hundred of within the said county [or "within the division of in the said county].

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of Middlesex, one whereof is of the quorum, do hereby require you forthwith, upon your receipt hereof, to issue your warrants to all the petty constables within your said hundred, [or, "division,"] in the form or to the effect, according as upon this our warrant is indorsed [or, "hereunder written."]

Given under our hands and seals the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

[See Context, ante, page 29.]

The high constable's warrant to to the petty constable.

County of Middlesex, Hundred of } To the Constable of the parish of in the county of Middlesex.

By virtue of a precept from A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of (one whereof was and is of the quorum) to me directed, you are hereby required, immediately upon sight hereof, to give notice to all and every the overseers of the poor within your constablewick, that they make out a list in writing of a competent number of substantial householders within their respective districts, and deliver in the same to the said justices, and others her said Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, at a special sessions to be holden at in in the said county, on the day of (a), at the hour of in the forenoon of the same day, to the end that out of the said list the said justices may appoint other overseers of the poor for the year then next ensuing. And you are hereby also required to give notice to all justices of the peace for the said county, residing in your constablewick, of the time and place appointed for holding the said special sessions. And be you then and there to certify what you shall have done in the premises. Herein fail you not.

Given under my hand the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

E. F., High Constable.

---

3. Notice of holding a vestry for nomination of overseers.

The inhabitants of this parish [or township] are requested to meet in public vestry, at the vestry-room on the day of next, at o'clock in the noon, to make out a list of persons fit and proper to serve the office of overseers of the poor for the year ensuing, to be returned to the justices of the peace for the division of [or as the case may be.]

---

4. The return or nomination to be made by the vestry to the magistrates.

At a public vestry, duly held in and for the parish of in the county of pursuant to notice on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, the following persons, whose names are subscribed, are returned to her Majesty's justices of the peace, acting in and for the hundred [or division] of in the said county of as substantial householders within the said parish, and meet and proper persons to serve the office of overseers of the poor of the said parish [or township, or hamlet,] of in the said county of for the year ensuing.

A. B. } Churchwardens.
C. D.
E. F. G. H. } Overseers.
I. K. L. M.
N. O. P. Q., } Inhabitants.
&c.

Names of persons above referred to.
R. S.
T. U., &c. &c.

(a) By 54 Geo. III. c. 91, this must be within fourteen days after 25th March in each year, ante.

1. Forms relating to Overseers, &c. &c.

5. The nomination by the vestry to the magistrates of non-resident persons to be overseers, under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. ante, p. 26.

At a public vestry, duly held in and for the parish of in the county of pursuant to notice on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, the following persons are nominated and returned to her Majesty's justices of the peace, acting in and for the hundred [or division] of in the said county, as being assessed to the relief of the poor of the said parish, and being resident in the parish of in the said county, within two miles from the church of the said parish of [or where there is no church or chapel "resident within one mile from the boundary of the said parish"] and as being meet, fit, and proper persons to serve the office of overseers of the poor of the said parish for the present year, and who have respectively consented to be appointed to serve as such overseers.

A. B.
C. D. } Churchwardens.
E. F. G. H.
I. K. L. M. } Overseers.
N. O. P. Q.
&c. } Inhabitants.

Names of persons above referred to.
R. S., resident as above.
T. U., resident as above.

Ante, p. 29.

6. Usual appointment of overseers for a parish, township, &c., p. 29.

County of } We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of (one whereof is of the quorum) do hereby nominate and appoint E. F. and G. H., being substantial householders of and in the parish [township, or precinct] of in the said county, to be overseers of the poor of the said parish,* [township, or precinct,] together with the churchwardens thereof, for the present year, according to the directions of the statute [or if a township, "the statutes,"] in that case made and provided.
to wit. }

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.
A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

This appointment must be signed, sealed, and delivered, either on, or within fourteen days after, the twenty-fifth day of March.

Ante, p. 26.

7. Appointment, where one of the overseers is a non-resident, under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, ss. 6, 7, ante. (a)

If one is resident, and one non-resident, then follow the former precedent to "overseer of the poor," and continue :—

We, the said justices being duly assembled at a special sessions for the appointment of the overseers of the poor, do also, upon the nomination and at the request of the inhabitants of the said parish in vestry duly assembled, appoint G. H. duly assessed to the relief of the poor of the said parish, and who is a householder resident in the parish of within two miles from the church (b) of the said parish of and who hath consented to this appointment, to be one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish of together with the said E. F. and the churchwardens thereof for the present year, according to the statutes in that case made and provided.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.
A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

Ante, p. 36.

8. Form of nomination, by vestry, of an assistant overseer, under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 7.

Suffolk, } To Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace acting in and for the said county of Suffolk, and to each and every of them.
to wit. }

We, the undersigned inhabitants of the parish of in the said county of Suffolk, in vestry assembled in the said parish, pursuant to legal notice for that purpose given, do hereby declare that we have this day nominated and elected E. F

(a) The 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 6, declares that it shall suffice to describe the person appointed by his name and residence, ante, p. 26, so that it is not absolutely necessary to state that he is assessed, &c.

(b) If there is no church, then, "within one mile of the boundary of the said parish."

of in the said county a discreet person, in our opinion, to be assistant overseer of the poor of the said parish, and did determine and specify that he should execute and perform the following duties relating to the office of overseer, (that is to say,) [specify duties fixed by vestry; if he is to discharge all the duties of an overseer, say "all the duties."] And that we have fixed the yearly sum of as and for the yearly salary of the said for the execution of his said office, to be paid quarterly out of the money to be raised for the relief of the poor of the said parish of Given under our hands, this day of A. D. 18

A. B.
C. D. &c.

1. Forms relating to Overseers, &c. &c.

Ante, p. 37.

Know all men by these presents, that we, A. B., of in the county of yeomen, and C. D., of the same place, yeomen, are jointly and severally held and firmly bound to G. H., and I. K., the churchwardens, and L. M. and N. O., the overseers of the poor of the said parish of in the sum of of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be paid to the said churchwardens and overseers, and their successors for the time being: for which payment to be well and faithfully made we bind ourselves and each of us, our heirs, executors, and administrators, and each and every of them, and for ever by these presents sealed with our seals. Dated the day of in the year of the reign, &c.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

9. Bond from assistant overseer, under the 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 7. See form by the Poor Law Commissioners, ante.

Whereas the above-bounden A. B. hath been duly nominated, elected, and appointed assistant overseer of the parish of under and by virtue of the powers of an act of parliament passed in the 59 Geo. III. intituled "An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Poor:" and the above-bounden C. D. hath agreed to be bound with him for the due execution of the said office, in manner as hereinafter mentioned. Now, therefore, the condition of the above-written obligation is such, that if the above-bounden A. B. shall, from time to time, and at all times during the continuance of his said appointment, or of any future appointment or appointments, [reciting the words of the appointment,] well and faithfully collect, and get in all such rates and other sums of money as he may be directed to demand and obtain, by virtue of his said office, and expend the same under the direction of the select vestry, when received by him, for and towards the relief of the poor of the said parish, according to the direction of the said act, or of any other act or acts of parliament therein referred to, and do from time to time, and at all times when required by the said select vestry, render a just and true account or accounts of all monies received or expended by him to the person or persons duly authorised to receive the same: and do also faithfully and diligently execute his said office of assistant overseer in every other respect, according to the several directions, provisoes, and regulations of the said recited act, or any other law or laws relating to the poor therein referred to, or since passed or enacted; [insert any other conditions required by the select vestry;] then the within written obligation shall be void, or else shall be and remain absolute. (a)

Condition thereof.

Ante, p. 36.

County of to wit. Whereas the inhabitants of the parish of in the county of in vestry assembled, in the said parish, on the day of last part, did nominate and elect of [his addition] to be an assistant overseer of the poor of the said parish, and did determine and specify that he should [recite the substance of the appointment by the inhabitants; if he is to perform the general duties of an overseer, say,] and did fix the yearly sum of as and for the yearly salary of the said for the execution of his said office: now we, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, do hereby appoint the said to be an assistant overseer of the poor of the said parish; and we do hereby authorise and empower him to execute and perform the said duties until he shall resign his said office, or until his appointment shall be revoked by the inhabi- tants of the said parish in vestry assembled, and to receive the said salary so as aforesaid fixed by the said inhabitants in their said vestry.

10. Form of the appointment of assistant overseer, by two justices.

(a) It is optional with the parish to require a security.

1. Forms relating to Overseers, &c. &c.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

Ante, p. 33.

11. Mandamus to justices to appoint overseers of the poor.

Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith.

To the Keepers of our Peace, and our Justices assigned to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed within our county of and to every of them, greeting.

Whereas we have been informed in our court before us, upon the complaint of divers of the inhabitants of the parish of in our said county of that for divers years last past there have been, or ought to have been, and still, of right, ought to be, four, three, or two substantial householders (inhabiting within the parish aforesaid) nominated and appointed, yearly, and every year, under the hands and seals of two or more of you, the said keepers of our peace and justices, one whereof being of the quorum, to be overseers of the poor for the whole parish of And whereas we have further been given to understand in our court before us, that application hath been made to you, the said keepers of our peace, and justices assigned, as aforesaid, to nominate and appoint four, three, or two, substantial householders of the parish aforesaid, to be overseers of the poor for the whole parish aforesaid, for the present year; but that you, the said keepers of our peace, and justices assigned, as aforesaid, have wholly neglected and refused to nominate and appoint such overseers of the poor as aforesaid, for the whole parish aforesaid, and that no such nomination and appointment of overseers of the poor, for the whole parish aforesaid, for this present year, hath been at any time made, in contempt of us, and to the great damage and prejudice of the inhabitants of the parish aforesaid, and to the oppression of the poor thereof; we, therefore, being willing that due and speedy justice should be done in this behalf, as it is reasonable, do command you, the said keepers of our peace, and justices assigned, as aforesaid, and every of you, firmly enjoining you, that you, immediately after the receipt of this our writ, you, or two of you, one whereof to be of the quorum, do, without delay, nominate and appoint four, three, or two substantial householders, inhabiting within the parish aforesaid, to be overseers of the poor for the whole parish of aforesaid, for the remainder of the present year, or that you show us cause to the contrary thereof, lest, by your default, the same complaint should be repeated to us; and how you shall have executed this our writ make known to us at Westminster, on Tuesday next after the morrow of All Souls, then returning to us this our said Writ, and this you are not to omit. Witness, Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, the twenty-eighth day of June, in the sixth year of our reign.

By the Court,

By Rule of Court.

LUSHINGTON.

Ante, p. 32.

12. Notice of appeal to the sessions against an appointment of an overseer. (a)

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of and to A. B. and C. D., Esquires, acting as (b) Justices of the Peace in and for the said county.

I do hereby give you notice that I intend to and shall appeal at the next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden at in and for the county of against a certain nomination and appointment made by you, the said A. B. and C. D., on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, of me, the undersigned E. F., to be one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish for the present year: and

(a) See 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 6; 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 4. It is advisable to serve each of the magistrates and each of the parish officers with a copy of this notice. (See 15 East, 207; 1 B. & Ald. 210.)

(b) If described as being justices, that precludes the appellant from disputing their authority.

I further give you, and each and every of you, notice, that the grounds of my said appeal are as follow, that is to say, that, &c. [here state the grounds of appeal.] (a)

1. Forms relating to Overseers, &c. &c.

Dated this day of in the year above mentioned.

E. F.

II. Forms of Proceedings to recover Possession of Parish Houses or Lands, on stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 12, ss. 24, 25. (b)

Ante, p. 388.

To A. O. of the Parish of in the County of

13. Notice to quit, to be given by overseers of the poor, in order to recover possession of parish houses or lands; "to be delivered to the person in possession, or, in his absence, affixed on some notorious part of the premises."

Under and by virtue of the provisions of an act passed in the 59th year of King George the Third, intituled "An Act to amend the Laws for the Relief of the Poor," we hereby give you notice to quit the house [or other tenement or dwelling,] belonging to [or provided by or at the charge of] the parish of in the county of for the habitation of the poor thereof, which you now occupy by permission of the said parish, [or as the case may be, as, into which you have unlawfully intruded yourself,] and which is situated at in the said parish, [or parish of in the county of as the case may be,] and we hereby require you to deliver up the possession thereof to us, the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of within one month after this notice and demand in writing.

Dated on day, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

A. B. } Churchwardens.
C. D. }
E. F. } Overseers of the Poor.
G. H. }

or the major part of them.

[A duplicate or copy of this notice should be made and kept by the person who is to prove the service of it.]

14. Information of an overseer of the poor against a person for refusing to quit possession within one month after the foregoing notice and demand.

County of } The information and complaint of O. P., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, made on oath before me, J. P., esquire, one (c) [or J. P. and K. P. esquires, two] of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and who says that A. O., a poor person residing in the parish of in the said county, having been permitted to occupy [or, having unlawfully intruded himself into] a house [or tenement, or dwelling] belonging to [or provided by, or at the charge of] the said parish of situated at in the said parish, [or in the parish of in the county of as the case may be,] has refused [or neglected] to quit the same and deliver up the possession thereof to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of within one month after notice and demand in writing for that purpose signed by the said [or major part of the] churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and delivered to him personally: [or, in his absence affixed on the door, or some other notorious part of the said premises:] The said complainant therefore prays such redress in the premises as to law does appertain.

O. P. Overseer of the Poor.

Sworn before me, [or us.]

(a) The 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 6, does not require the notice of appeal to state the grounds; and the 41 Geo. III. c. 23, s. 4, (ante,) does not (semble) extend to notices of appeal against an appointment of an overseer, although it uses the comprehensive words "any act done by the justices." As the law therefore is doubtful, it would be discreet in an appellant to state the grounds of his appeal.

(b) In some former editions of this work, these forms are described as forms "prescribed in a schedule to the act," but that was a mistake.

(c) By 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2, one justice is competent to receive the information, and issue the summons. See title, "Conviction," Vol. I.

2. Forms relating to recover possession of Parish Houses, &c.

Ante, p. 392.

(C.) Summons thereupon.

[" To be delivered to the party, or in his absence to be affixed on the premises seven days at the least before the time appointed for hearing of the complaint."]

15 Summons thereon.

County of } To A. O., of the parish of in the said county of [or, as the case may be.]

Whereas O. P., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, has this day preferred an information and complaint upon oath against you, before me, J. P., esquire, one [or us, J. P. and K. P. esquires, two] of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, for that you the said A. O., being a poor person residing in the aforesaid parish of and having been permitted to occupy [or, having unlawfully intruded yourself into] a house [or tenement, or dwelling,] belonging to [or provided by, or at the charge of] the said parish of situated at in the said parish, [or in the parish of in the county of as the case may be,] have refused [or neglected] to quit the same and deliver up the possession thereof to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of within one month after notice and demand in writing for that purpose, signed by the said [or, major part of the] churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and delivered to you personally: [or, in your absence affixed on the door, or some other notorious part of the said premises:]

These are therefore to require you personally to appear before me [or us] and such others of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county as shall be present at the in in the said county of on the day of next, at o'clock in the forenoon, then and there to answer the said complaint. Herein fail not. Given under my hand and seal [or our hands and seals] the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

N.B.—A copy should be taken of the summons, or, what is better, a duplicate granted, so that a proper return of service may be made and regularly proved on oath.

Ante, p. 392.

(D.) Warrant thereon, to cause possession to be given.

16. Warrant thereon.

County of } To the chief constable of the hundred of to the petty constables of the parish of in the said hundred and county, and to each and every of them.

Whereas O. P., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, did, on the day of last, prefer an information and complaint upon oath before us, J. P. and K. P. esquires, two [or me, J. P. esquire, one, according to stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2,] of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, against A. O., a poor person residing in the said parish of for that he the said A. O. having been permitted to occupy [or having unlawfully intruded himself into] a house [or tenement, or dwelling] belonging to [or provided by, or at the charge of,] the said parish of situated at in the said parish of [or in the parish of in the county of as the case may be,] had refused [or neglected] to quit the same and deliver up the possession thereof to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of within one month after notice and demand in writing for that purpose, signed by the said [or, major part of the] churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and delivered to him the said A. O. personally: [or, in the absence of the said A. O., affixed on the door, or some other notorious part of the said premises]: And whereas, upon the appearance of the said A. O. this day before us, in pursuance of a summons for that purpose, [or, And whereas on the day of last, a summons was duly issued to require the said A. O. to appear before us this day at in the said county, to answer unto the said complaint, and it appears to us, J. P. and K. P. esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, upon the oath of A. C. constable of the parish of aforesaid, that he the said A. C. did duly deliver the said summons to the said A. O., on the day of instant: or that he the said A. C. did use his best endeavours to deliver the said summons to the said A. O., and that in the absence of the said

A. O. he the said A. C. did affix, or cause to be affixed, the said summons on the door of the said house or premises (as the case may be), seven days at the least before the time appointed for hearing the said complaint, but that he the said A. O. has neglected to appear according to the said summons;] we the said justices have proceeded to hear and determine the matter of the said complaint, and do find and adjudge the same to be true: we do therefore charge and command you that you without delay go to and cause possession of the premises in question to be delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of or some or one of them, pursuant to and in compliance with the directions of an act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, "An Act to amend the Laws for the Relief of the Poor." Herein fail not. Given under our hands and seals at in the said county of the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

J. P.
K. P.

2. Forms relating to recover possession of Parish Houses, &c.

N.B. These forms, with a little variation, may be adapted to the 25th sect. of the same act, which empowers the overseers to recover lands taken for the employment of the poor, and let to them, on which any person unlawfully may enter thereon.

They may also be adapted to the 5th sect. of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, substituting the "guardians" for "the churchwardens and overseers," and the words "houses and land vested in, or under the management or control," of the guardians for the "parish" property.

III. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

The form of the rate is prescribed by the Parochial Assessment Act, to which the commissioners have added some columns, see p. 319.

17. Certificate of guardians of the poor to magistrates of Bury, under local act, of the rate necessary to be made for the use of the poor of the parish of Bury St. Edmund's. (a)

To the Worshipful the Aldermen and Justices of the Peace of the burgh of Bury St. Edmund's, in the county of Suffolk.

Whereas by virtue of an act of parliament, made in the twenty-first year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George the Second, intituled, "An Act for erecting Workhouses, for the better employing and maintaining the Poor, within the Burgh of Bury Saint Edmund's, in the County of Suffolk, and for the better repairing and paving the Streets and Highways there," the corporation and guardians of the poor, of the said burgh of Bury Saint Edmund's, have, at their court or assembly, this day held at the Guildhall of the said burgh, set down and ascertained the sum of pounds needful for the maintenance and employment of the poor within the care of the said corporation, for three calendar months from the date hereof; we, the guardians of the poor of the said burgh, pursuant to the power given us by the said act, and by authority of the same, do hereby certify unto you, the said aldermen and justices of the peace for the said burgh, that the sum needful for the maintenance and employment of the poor, within the care of the said corporation, for three calendar months from the date hereof, is so set down and ascertained by us, at pounds; and that we have ordered and directed that the same shall be raised and paid, without delay, by the respective parishes of Saint Mary and Saint James, within the said burgh, in such proportions, parts and shares, as are hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, the sum of pounds by the said parish of Saint Mary and the sum of pounds by the said parish of Saint James.

And also that we have appointed the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of Saint Mary, to be assessors and collectors of the said sum of pounds for the said parish of Saint Mary.

And also have appointed the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of Saint James, to be assessors and collectors of the said sum of pounds for the said parish of Saint James.

In witness whereof we have hereunto affixed our common seal, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

(a) These forms are founded on a local act of parliament. In general the churchwardens and overseers make the rate without the intervention of any third person, either guardian of the poor, &c., or magistrates.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

18. Justices' order thereupon to the churchwardens and overseers to make rate accordingly.

Borough of Bury St. Edmund's in the county of Suffolk. } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of Saint James, in the said borough; and to collector, &c.

Whereas, in pursuance of an act of parliament made in the twenty-first year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George the Second, intituled, "An Act for erecting Workhouses, for the better employing and maintaining the Poor, within the Burgh of Bury Saint Edmund's, in the County of Suffolk, and for the better repairing and paving the Streets and Highways there," the guardians of the poor of the said borough of Bury Saint Edmund's have, upon the day of by writing under their common seal, certified to the aldermen and justices of the peace for the said borough, that they the said guardians have set down and ascertained the sum needful for the maintenance and employment of the poor within their care, for three calendar months from the date thereof, at the sum of and have ordered and directed that the same shall be raised and paid without delay, by the respective parishes of Saint Mary and Saint James, within the said borough, in such proportions, parts and shares, as are therein mentioned; and that the sum of is the proportion, part, and share, set on your said parish of Saint James. We, therefore, whose hands and seals are hereunto set, being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace of and for the said borough, according to the power and authority given us in and by the said act, do hereby authorise and require you, the said churchwardens and overseers, to rate and assess the said sum of on all and every the inhabitants and occupiers of lands, houses, tenements, tithes impropriate, appropriation of tithes and hereditaments within your said parish of Saint James; and the money so rated and assessed, to demand, gather, and receive, and for non-payment thereof, being first lawfully demanded, to apply to us, the said justices, to issue our warrant to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods of such person and persons who are so assessed and rated, and ought to pay the same sums, and refuse or neglect to pay the same; and all such monies, as you shall receive as aforesaid, you are to pay unto the treasurer for the time being, appointed to receive the same by virtue of the said act.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

---

19. Public notice in church of intention to make a poor rate. (a)

The churchwardens and overseers of the poor of this parish of do hereby give this public notice that they will meet in the vestry-room [or "committee-room"] of this parish, at o'clock in the afternoon of the day of next, to make a rate for the relief of the poor of the said parish.

TITLE OF RATE.

Ante, p. 318.

20. Title of a rate for the relief of poor. (b) Declaration of overseer to be signed, p. 320.

"An assessment for the relief of the poor of the parish of in the county of and for other purposes relating to the poor chargeable thereon according to law, made this day of one thousand eight hundred and after the rate of sixpence in the pound."

Ante, p. 324.

21. Notice of publication of a rate in the parish church, according to 17 Geo. II. c. 3, s. 1. (c)

Notice is hereby given, that a rate of [sixpence] in the pound, was, on last, the day of instant, made by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of for the relief of the poor of the said parish, and for other purposes chargeable thereon, and the said rate was, on the day of duly allowed (d) by A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace of, and acting in and for the division [county or hundred] of in the said county of pursuant to the statute in that case made and provided.

L. M.
N. O. } Churchwardens.

(a) This notice is not absolutely essential, but it is usual.

(b) This is the title given in the Schedule to the Parochial Assessment Act.

(c) See the act and cases, ante. This notice must be affixed on the church doors on the Sunday next following the allowance of the rate by the justices.

(d) Form of allowance, p. 321. It need not state that the rate has been allowed, p. 325. See next form.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

Ante, p. 326.

22. Demand of inspection of rate, and of a copy thereof, under stat. 17 Geo. II. c. 3, s. 2.

Whereas a rate or assessment for the relief of the poor in and for the parish of in the county of was made [or "published"] on the day of last past: And whereas I am [or "A. B. of is"] an inhabitant of the said parish: Now, therefore, I do hereby demand and require of you, the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, and each and every of you, permission to inspect the said rate at the hour of on next, or at any other seasonable time you may appoint, within days from the date hereof; and I hereby tender and offer to pay you one shilling for the same: And I hereby demand and require you forthwith to give me, so being such inhabitant as aforesaid, a copy of the said rate, and I am ready and willing, and hereby tender and offer, to pay for such copy at the rate of sixpence for every twenty-four names contained therein. Dated this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B.
An inhabitant of the said parish.

To the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, and all other persons authorised in the said parish, according to the statute 17 Geo. II. c. 3.

[See the precedents, Chitty on Pleading.]

23. Declaration for the twenty pounds' penalty for not permitting inspection or giving copy of a rate.

---

24. Notice of appeal against poor rates made under local acts, and directed to churchwardens and overseers, and several private individuals.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor and Vestrymen of the parishes of Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist; and to Messrs. A. B and C. D., Messrs. John Elliott, Esq., and Company, J. Goding, &c. [Here a great many persons were named.]

I do hereby, on the part and behalf of the Gas Light and Coke Company, and as their attorney, give you notice, that they intend at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden at the Guildhall, in and for the city of Westminster and liberties thereof, on Thursday the twenty-first day of October, instant, to enter and prosecute an appeal against a rate or assessment, purporting to be made on the twenty-fifth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, pursuant to the directions of an act of parliament, made and passed in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty George the Second, intituled "An Act for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor in the Parishes of Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, in the City of Westminster; and for cleansing the Streets and repairing the Highways within the said parishes," and purporting to be an equal pound rate or assessment, for the relief of the poor, repair of the highways, and cleansing the streets in the said parishes of Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, in the city of Westminster, upon all and every the person and persons who inhabit, hold, occupy, or enjoy any land, house, shop, wharf, warehouse, or other building within the said parishes, or either of them, or any other person or persons who by law are chargeable and assessable for and towards the relief of the poor within the said parishes, pursuant to the before-mentioned act. And whereas the said Gas Light and Coke Company, in and by the said rate or assessment, are rated as occupiers in the following form:—

The Gas Light and Coke Company for land, house, warehouses, and buildings, situate in the Horseferry Road, in the said parish of Saint John the Evangelist, and the mains or pipes and other apparatus for the conveyance of gas belonging to the said company, situate, being and fixed in the ground in the said parishes of Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, at the annual value of five hundred pounds, each instalment two hundred and fifty pounds.

And whereas the said Gas Light and Coke Company, in pursuance of the provisions of the above-mentioned statute, paid the said rate or assessment of twenty-five pounds, on the twenty-first day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, to the person duly authorised to receive the same: I, as the attorney of the said Gas Light and Coke Company, do further give you and each of you notice on their behalf, that they find themselves aggrieved by the said rate or assessment, and that the grounds and causes of their appeal are,—

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

1*st. That there is no* SEPARATE assessment upon the land, house, warehouses, and buildings, situate in the Horseferry Road, distinct from the assessment on the said mains or pipes and other apparatus, so that they are unable to ascertain on what sum they are assessed for the said land, house, warehouses, and buildings, and on what sums they are assessed for the said mains or pipes, and other apparatus.

2*nd. That they are not liable to be rated or assessed for the said mains or pipes and other apparatus, as being fixed in the ground in the said parishes of* Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, inasmuch as they have no title or interest to, or in the said ground, otherwise than the privilege of laying their mains or pipes and other apparatus under the surface thereof.

3*rd. That they are not liable to be rated or assessed for the said mains or pipes and other apparatus in the conveyance of gas, inasmuch as the said mains or pipes and other apparatus form part of their stock in trade, and the said* Gas Light and Coke Company are not resident inhabitants of the said parishes of Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, or either of them.

4*th. That they are not liable to be rated or assessed for the said mains or pipes and other apparatus, inasmuch as the said mains or pipes and other apparatus forming part of their stock in trade, they are rated for their stock in trade, and not for the profits arising therefrom.*

5*th. And further, that if the said rate or assessment of five thousand pounds is meant to be an assessment upon the value of the said land, house, warehouses, and buildings, and upon the* profits arising from the said mains or pipes, and other apparatus for the conveyance of Gas, the said sum of five thousand pounds greatly exceeds the fair annual value of the same.

6*th. And further, that if the said rate or assessment of five thousand pounds is meant to be an assessment upon the value of the said land, house, warehouses, and buildings, and in respect of the occupation of land by the said* Company, by their said mains, pipes, and other apparatus for the conveyance of Gas, and also from the profits arising from the said mains, pipes, and other apparatus for the conveyance of Gas, the said sum of five thousand pounds greatly exceeds the fair annual value of the said house, land, warehouses, and buildings, and the occupation of the said land by the said company, by the said mains, pipes, and other apparatus for the conveyance of Gas, and the annual amount of the said profits added together.

7*th. And further, that the said rate or assessment of five thousand pounds greatly exceeds the annual value of the said land, house, warehouses, and buildings, and of the said mains or pipes, and other apparatus.*

8*th. And further, that the inhabitants of the said several parishes of* Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, exercising trades, businesses and other concerns, in the said parishes, and having stock in trade in the said parishes, and who derive a profit from such their several trades, businesses, and concerns, these are not rated and assessed in the said rate for and in respect of the profits of such their said trades, businesses, and concerns, and upon their several stocks in trade there.

9*th. And further, that the following inhabitants of the said parishes of* Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, are not rated and assessed in the said rate, for the profits of their trades, businesses, and concerns, carried on in the said parishes, and upon their several stocks in trade there, [that is to say] Messrs. Seager, Evans and Stafford, distillers, are rated in the said rate for their house and distillery, in the said parish of Saint John the Evangelist, of two hundred and fifty pounds, but are not rated in the said rate for and in respect of the profits made in their business or concerns of distillers, nor for their machinery, utensils, and other apparatus, nor for their stock in trade of their distillery, in the said parishes. J. Elliot, Esq. & Company, brewers, are rated in the said rate for their house, &c., [here the same description was repeated as to Seager & Co.] and as to a great many other firms and individuals, in the terms stated respecting Messrs. Seager & Co., showing in substance that they were rated in respect of their buildings, but not in respect of their profits in trade.

Then followed a numerous list of tradesmen and manufacturers, who alleged as objections to the rate, they were not rated in respect of their implements of trade, &c. viz.—G. Boys, coal-merchant, &c. Also that the said Gas Light and Coke Company are in the said rate or assessment over-rated, in respect of the yearly value of the said land, house, warehouses, and buildings, mains or pipes, and other apparatus, according to the principle of rating adopted in the said parishes of Saint Margaret and Saint John the Evangelist, by assessing a certain proportion only of the real annual value of rateable property in those parishes. Also, that the said rate is in other respects partial, unjust, and illegal. And further take notice, that you are to produce at the time of hearing this appeal, the said rate, purporting to have been made on the 25th day of May, 1830, as aforesaid. And also, all the rates or assessments made for the relief of the poor, repair of the highways, and cleansing the streets of the said several parishes, since the year 1828. Dated the 6th day of October, 1830.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

Yours, &c. A. B. C. D. &c.
Attorneys for the appellants, the Gas Light and Gas Company.

N. B. On hearing the appeal, the sessions confirmed the rate.

---

25. Petition of appeal against a poor's rate. (a)

To the Worshipful Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the county of in their general quarter sessions of the peace assembled.

The Petition and Appeal of A. B., an inhabitant, assessed to the poor's rate of the parish of in the said county.

Sheweth,

That a rate or assessment was made on or about the day of last past, and published [or said to be published] in the church of the said parish on or about Sunday, the day of last past, by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, and for other the purposes therein mentioned, by virtue whereof your petitioner and other inhabitants of the said parish are charged and assessed in divers large sums of money for the purposes aforesaid.

That your petitioner is in and by the said rate assessed for the rateable property occupied by him in the said parish, at a larger sum of money than he ought to be assessed at, in respect of the annual value of the same; and also that your petitioner [state the other causes of appeal, as in the notice].

That the names of E. F. and G. H., persons occupying rateable property in the said parish, are omitted in the said rate or assessment, and are not charged or assessed in the said rate for two messuages, tenements, or dwelling-houses, which they respectively occupy within the said parish of

Your petitioner, therefore, conceiving himself to be aggrieved by the said rate or assessment, doth hereby appeal to your worships against the same, and requests that a day may be appointed, in this present session, for the hearing and determining the said appeal, and that you will thereupon quash the said rate, or alter and amend the same in such manner, and grant to your petitioner such relief in the premises, as to you shall seem meet.

And your petitioner will pray, &c.

E. F., Solicitor to the Petitioner.

---

26. Order for hearing appeal, appointing time, &c.

to wit. } At the general quarter sessions of the peace of our lady the Queen, holden in and for the county of at the sessions-house for the said county, on the day of in the year of the reign of our sovereign lady Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

It is ordered by this court, that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in this county have notice of the within appeal, and that they and all persons concerned do attend this court at the sessions-house aforesaid, on next, the day of instant, at the hour of nine in the forenoon of the same day, to hear and abide the judgment and determination of the said court, touching the said appeal.

By the Court,
S——.

(a) This petition and the following order are required on an appeal in the county of Middlesex. In most counties the petition is dispensed with, the entry of the appeal with the clerk of the peace being deemed sufficient; and semble, that as an appeal is matter of right, there can be no ground, in any case, to require a petition.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

27. Form of notice of trial of an appeal against a poor-rate.

Ante, p. 333.

To J. M., Churchwarden, and to H. A., and W. P., Overseers of the Poor of the parish of C., in the county of N., and to each and every of them. To A. B. C. D.

I do hereby give you notice, that I, being a person aggrieved by the rate hereinafter mentioned, do intend at the next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden in and for the county of N., at N., on Thursday, the thirtieth day of April, instant, to enter and try an appeal [or to try an appeal entered at the last general quarter sessions of the peace holden at N. aforesaid, in the county aforesaid,] against a certain rate or assessment, intituled [copy the title of the rate,] for the following, amongst other reasons:—

Grounds of appeal, p. 342.

1*st. Because the said rate or assessment has not been made, published and allowed, in due course of law.*

2*nd. Because the rate is made for an illegal purpose*, p. 138.

3*rd. Because I am assessed at too large a sum, and in an unfair proportion in comparison with the sum and proportion assessed on* A. B. C. D., or one of them.

4*th. Because I am assessed at a greater sum than I ought to be assessed at.*

5*th. Because the persons hereinbefore named, or some of them, are assessed at less sums than they ought to be assessed at.*

6*th. Because the said persons are not assessed at all for lands and houses which were in their occupation when the said rate was made.*

7*th. Because the said persons, or some of them, are not assessed to the full value of their local visible property within the said parish.*

8*th. Because I am assessed for property which was not in my occupation at the time of making the said rate, and for other property which is not liable to be assessed to the relief of the poor, and for property not in your parish*, p. 355.

9*th. Because it does not sufficiently appear on the said rate what persons thereby assessed are charged.*

10*th. Because certain persons are assessed for parts of certain farms, houses, and lands, but such part is altogether uncertain and indefinite.*

11*th. Because it does not appear, whether the persons assessed are charged as occupiers of lands, &c. or as inhabitants.*

12*th. Because the profits of the property for which I am assessed are devoted to public purposes, and I am not a beneficial occupier.*

13*th. Because the property in respect of which I am rated is by law exempted from such rate*, pp. 142, 252.

14*th. Because I was an occupier of a house at the time the rate was made, and am not rated thereby*, p. 334.

15*th. Because the said rate is not made on the estimate of value prescribed by the "Act to regulate Parochial Assessments,"* p. 270.

16*th. Because the rate does not contain the declaration required by that statute.*

And, lastly, because the rate and assessment is, in other respects, illegal, unequal, partial, oppressive, and unjust.

And I do hereby give you, the said churchwarden and overseers, notice to produce, at the hearing of the said appeal, the said pretended rate or assessment, and all other rates and assessments made for the relief of the poor of the said parish, for the twenty years last preceding the date hereof: likewise certain valuations made by J. L., J. C., J. C., and T. B., some or one of them, and every other valuation made by the direction of any vestry, or any churchwardens and overseers of the said parish, of all or any other rateable property in the said parish; and that you, A. B. C. D. respectively produce all deeds, leases, agreements, admissions, and other documents, respecting or concerning the premises for which you, and each of you, are jointly or severally rated or assessed, or appear so to be, in and by the said rate or assessment, or omitted to be therein rated or assessed. Given under my hand, this tenth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

T. M., (a)
Of in the said Parish.

(a) The notice may be signed by the attorney on behalf of the appellant. The notice then should begin: "I as the attorney for and on behalf of A. B., who is a party grieved by a certain rate," &c., and the reasons will be "Because he," &c.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

In the matter of } Sir R. B. B., Bart., appellant; and the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of C., in the county of N., respondents.

30. Entry of proceeding on an appeal at sessions against a rate and order thereon, subject to a case for opinion of court of Queen's Bench.

Northampton, to wit. } Whereas, on or about the seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, an assessment or rate was made and assessed for the relief of the poor, and for other purposes relating to the poor of the parish of C., in the county of N., aforesaid, for the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, entitled, "An assessment for the relief of the poor of the parish of C., in the county of N., and for other purposes chargeable therein according to law, made the seventh day of November, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, after the rate of one shilling in the pound." And whereas the said Sir R. B. B., Bart, did, at the general quarter sessions of the peace, holden in and for the said county of N., on the day of aforesaid, by leave of that court, enter his appeal against the above rate or assessment, when, upon a full hearing of the said appeal, and what was alleged by counsel on both sides, the said court of the general quarter sessions of the peace did order that the said rate or assessment should be quashed and set aside, subject, nevertheless, to the opinion of the honourable the justices of her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, at Westminster, on the following case:— See form of case, post, as to orders of removal.

---

31. Information by overseer against several persons for not paying poor's rate, made before two justices.

Borough of Bury Saint Edmund's, in the county of Suffolk. } The information and complaint of one of the Overseers of the Poor of the parish of Saint within the said borough, taken on oath before us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said borough [one whereof is of the quorum], this day of one thousand eight hundred and

This informant, upon his oath saith, that the several persons hereunder named have refused to pay to him the several sums of money assessed upon them respectively, in and by a certain rate or assessment, made for the relief of the poor of the said parish of Saint upon the day of last past, the same having been lawfully demanded of them respectively. He therefore prays redress against the said several persons hereunder named, so refusing to pay as aforesaid as the law requires.

E. F.

G. H.

Taken upon oath, before us, } A. B. C. D.

Names of Defaulters.	Residence.	Amount of Rate.
		£ s. d.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates

32. The like information against several persons in a printed form for non payment of several rates. (a)

Be it remembered, that on this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and at in the parish of in the said county of to wit. one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, cometh before me one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and giveth to understand and be informed, that the persons hereinafter named, being inhabitants and occupiers of houses and lands in the said parish, were severally and respectively duly assessed for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of the said parish, by a rate or assessment made, assessed, allowed, and published, according to the statutes in that case made and provided, on the respective times inserted at the top of the several and respective money columns hereinafter following, in the several and respective sums of money set in figures in the several and respective money columns following, opposite to their several and respective names following; and that he hath demanded of and from the said several persons respectively, the said several and respective sums of money, and that they have severally and respectively refused and neglected, and still do refuse to pay the same. Wherefore the said informant humbly prays that the said several persons may be summoned to appear before two of her Majesty's justices of the peace, in and for the said county, to show cause why they severally and respectively refuse to pay the several and respective sums so demanded from them as aforesaid; and (if they can) to show cause why a warrant should not be granted to make distress for the same.

Exhibited before the day and year first above written.

Rate made the Day of			Rate made the Day of			Rate made the Day of			Total.

(a) N.B. The paper on which this form is printed, usually contains three or more sides ruled in like manner.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

33. Information against one person for non-payment of a poor's rate, made before one justice, to summon before two others. (a)

Ante, p. 354.

to wit. } The information and complaint of G. H., overseer of the poor of the parish of in the said county, made on his oath, before me, A. B., esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, who says, that in and by a rate and assessment made, assessed, and allowed and published, according to the statutes in that case made and provided, E. F., an inhabitant and occupier [or occupier only, if such is the case], of premises [or as the case may be], in the said parish of was duly rated and assessed for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of the said parish for this present year [or the last year, as the case may be,] in the sum of and that the said sum hath been lawfully demanded of the said E. F. who hath refused and doth refuse to pay the same: Whereupon he, the said G. H., prayeth that he, the said E. F., may be summoned to answer the said complaint before two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county.

Before me, A. B.

Ante, p. 354.

34. Precept from the justices to summon several defaulters.

County of } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of and to the Constables of the said to wit. } parish.

Whereas complaint hath been made unto us, whose names and seals are hereunto set, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, that the several persons hereunder named, inhabitants of the said parish, (being duly rated and assessed, the several sums of money to their respective names set, for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of the said parish,) have neglected or refused to pay the said several sums, notwithstanding the same have been duly and respectively demanded of them.

These are, therefore, to charge and command you, that you, or some of you, do forthwith summon and warn the said several persons, hereunder named, to be and appear before us, and other her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, on the day of at o'clock in the noon, to show cause why they refuse to pay the said several sums so assessed on them as aforesaid, otherwise warrants of distress for levying the same, as the law directs, will be made out against them.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of one thousand eight hundred and

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

Ante, p. 354.

35. Constable's summons thereon.

County of } To the parish of in the county of
to wit. }

By virtue of a warrant to me directed, under the hands and seals of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of I do hereby summon you personally to be and appear before the said justices, and such other of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county as shall be assembled on the day of at by o'clock in the noon, to show cause why you refuse to pay the rate or assessment made for the relief of the poor of the said parish of for the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one [or as it may be] being the sum of otherwise a warrant of distress for levying the same, as the law directs, will be made out against you. Dated this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

G. H.,
Constable of the said parish.

(a) See 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4; 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 7; 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 12; 3 Geo. IV. c. 233.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

Ante, p. 352.

36. Warrant of distress against one person after the foregoing summons. (a)

County of } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of to wit. } in the said county, and to the Constables of the said parish aiding and assisting therein.

Whereas, in and by a rate and assessment, dated the day of made, assessed, allowed, and published according to the statutes in that case made and provided, E. F., an inhabitant and occupier of a house in the said parish of was duly rated and assessed for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of this said parish for the present year, in the sum of : And whereas it duly appeareth unto us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county [one whereof is of the quorum], as well upon the oath of G. H., overseer of the poor of the said parish, as otherwise, that the said sum of pounds hath been lawfully demanded of the said E. F., by the said G. H., and that he, the said E. F., hath refused, and doth refuse, to pay the same : And whereas the said E. F., having appeared before us [or me,] in pursuance of our summons for that purpose, hath not showed to us any sufficient cause why the same should not be paid [or " Whereas it hath been duly proved to us, upon the oath of one of the constables of the said parish, that the said E. F was personally served with the said summons requiring him to appear before us [or me,] the said justices, to show cause why the same should not be paid, but he, the said E. F., hath neglected to appear according to such summons, and hath not showed to us [or me,] any sufficient cause why the same should not be paid."] * These are therefore to require you forthwith to make distress of the goods and chattels of him, the said E. F. ; And if, within the space of [five] days next after such distress, by you taken, the said sum, and also the further sum of being the costs incurred in the premises, making in the whole the sum of together with reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels, so by you distrained, and, out of the money arising by such sale, that you detain the said sum of and also your reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress, rendering to him, the said E. F., the overplus on demand ; and if no such distress can be made, that then you certify the same unto us to the end that such further proceedings may be had therein as to the law doth appertain.

After appearance of party.

After summons and non-appearance.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

37. Usual form of a warrant of distress against several persons.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the said to wit. } Whereas, in and by a rate or assessment, dated the made, assessed, allowed, and published according to the statutes in that case made and provided, the several persons whose names are hereunder written, inhabitants and occupiers of lands and tenements in the parish of aforesaid, were duly rated and assessed for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of the said parish, in the several sums of money set against their respective names : And whereas, it duly appeareth unto us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said [one of us being of the quorum] upon the oath of one of the constables of the said parish, that the said several persons have been duly summoned to appear before us, by virtue of a warrant or summons under our hands and seals, directed to the constables of the said parish, to show cause respectively why the same should not be paid ; And whereas it also duly appeareth unto us, upon the oath of one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish, that the said several sums of money have been lawfully demanded of them respectively, and that they have severally refused to pay the same, and that the said several sums of money are still due and unpaid.

These are, therefore, to require you forthwith to make distress of the respective goods and chattels of the said several persons under-named, and if within the space of four days next after such respective distress by you taken, the said several sums of money, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distresses respectively shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you respectively distrained, and out of the money arising by such respective sales, that you detain the said respective sums of money, and also your reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said respective distresses, rendering to them respectively the overplus on demand; and where no such respective distress can be made, that then you certify the same to us, to the end that such further proceedings may be had therein as to the law doth appertain.

---

(a) One justice may receive the complaint, and issue a summons returnable before two, 3 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 2.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of one thousand eight hundred and

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

[Then is subscribed a list of defaulters, with sums assessed in arrears.]

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

---

38. Distress warrant for poor's rate in London.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the city of London,* and to all Constables of the said city whom these may concern.

London to wit. } Whereas, in and by certain rates or assessments, made, assessed, allowed, and published, according to the statutes in that case made and provided, being inhabitants and occupiers of in the said parish of in the said city, rated and assessed for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of the said parish, in the sum following, that is to say, the

And whereas it appeareth unto me, Lord Mayor of the said city, that the said sum of money became so due at last; and as well upon oath as otherwise, that the said sum of money ha been demanded of and that ha refused, and do refuse to pay the same: And whereas it hath been proved to me, that the said ha been summoned to show cause why the same should not be paid; but ha not showed sufficient cause why the same should not be paid: These are therefore to require you, the said churchwardens, with the assistance of a constable of the said city, to make distress of the goods and chattels of the said and if, within the space of five days next after such distress by you taken, the said sum of together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels, so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale of the goods and chattels of the said that you detain the said sums of money so due as aforesaid; and also your reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress, rendering to the overplus on demand; and if no such distress can be made, that then you certify the same unto me, to the end that such further proceedings may be had therein as to law doth appertain. Given under my hand and seal, the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.) (a)

---

39. Justices' warrant to distrain for poor's rate, made by the guardians of the poor in Bury.

Borough of Bury St. Edmund's, in the County of Suffolk. } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of Saint in the said borough.

Whereas, in and by a rate or assessment made on the day of last past, by the aforesaid churchwardens and overseers (by virtue of a warrant to them directed, under the hands and seals of two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said borough,) upon all and every the inhabitants and occupiers of lands, houses, tenements, tithes impropriate, appropriation of tithes, and hereditaments, within the said parish, for raising the sum of set on the said parish, by the guardians of the poor of the said

(a) One alderman in London may act in cases where, out of it, two justices must concur, 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 8, ante, 12.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

borough, towards the maintenance and employment of the poor within the care of the said guardians, for three calendar months from the day of last past; and allowed and published according to the several statutes in that case made and provided; being an inhabitant and occupier of within the said parish, was duly rated and assessed at the sum of to be by h paid for the purposes aforesaid. And whereas, it duly appeareth unto us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace, in and for the said borough, as well upon the oath of one of the said overseers of the poor of the parish aforesaid, as otherwise, that the said sum of hath been lawfully demanded of the said and that the said hath refused and doth refuse to pay the same. And whereas, it hath been duly proved to us, upon oath, that the said hath been duly summoned to appear before us the said justices to show cause why the same should not be paid.

These are, therefore, to require you the said churchwardens and overseers, that you, some or one of you, do forthwith make distress of the goods and chattels of h the said And if within the space of four days next after such distress by you taken, the said sum, together with reasonable charges of the said summons, and of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, that then you, some or one of you, do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale, that you, some or one of you, do detain the said sum of and also the charges aforesaid, and of selling the said distress; rendering to h the said the overplus, if any, on demand. And if no such distress can be made, that then you, some or one of you, do certify the same unto us, to the end that such further proceedings may be had therein, as to law doth appertain.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and

---

p. 352.

40. The indorsement to be written on the warrant of distress, if it is to be executed in another county.

County of Devon to wit. } I, being one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of Devon, do hereby certify that A. B., one of the persons to whom the written warrant is directed, came before me this day, and duly made oath, that sufficient goods of and belonging to C. D., the within named [party rated], could not be found in the within-named county of Somerset, on which a sufficient distress for the sum within named could be levied, and having further made oath before me that goods and chattels of the said C. D. can be found within the county of Devon, I do hereby authorise the said A. B. who bringeth to me the within warrant, and all other persons to whom the said warrant is directed, to execute the same within the county of Devon.

Given under my hand and seal, the day of one thousand eight hundred and

J. P.

---

41. The form of the overseers' return, where no sufficient distress is found, to be indorsed on the back of the warrant, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1.

County of to wit. } G. H., one of the overseers of the poor of the within-named parish of T. maketh oath, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and that he has used his best endeavours to levy the sum named in the within-mentioned warrant, on the goods and chattels of the said but that no sufficient distress can be found whereon to levy the same.

Sworn before us, two [or me, one] of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of

---

p. 352.

42. Commitment thereon under 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4; 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 1.

County of to wit. } To the Constable of the parish of and to the Keeper of the Common Gaol, at in the said county.

Whereas, &c. [same as Form 36, ante, to the asterisk, and then], and, whereas, on the said day of last, we [or they] did issue our [or their] warrant to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of to levy the said sum of by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of him, the said E. F., and to apply the same, according to law; and, whereas, it duly appears unto us [or me] as well upon the oath of G. H., overseer of the poor of the parish of T. aforesaid, as otherwise, that he, the said overseer of the poor, has used his best endeavours to levy the said sum on the goods and chattels of him, the said E. F. as aforesaid, but that no sufficient distress can be had whereon to levy the same. These are, therefore, to command you, the said constable of the parish of T., aforesaid, to apprehend the body of the said E. F., and him safely to convey to the common gaol at in the said county, and there deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this precept: And we [or I, as it may be] do hereby command you, the said keeper of the said common gaol, to receive into your custody, in the said common gaol, the said E. F., there to remain, without bail or mainprize, until payment of the said sum.

3. Forms relating to Poor Rates.

Given under our hands and seals, [or, my hand and seal,] the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

IV. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

p. 98.

To Mr. in the county of 43. Notice from overseers of poor to father of pauper, of intended application to petty sessions, for order of maintenance, under 59 Geo. III. c 12, s. 26, or 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

Take notice, that the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of do intend to make application to the next petty sessions of the peace to be holden on the day of at in and for the said county, for an order of on you to pay such weekly sum for and towards the relief of G. H. your son, a poor person of the said parish of T. and unable to work, and now chargeable to the said parish, as the said petty sessions shall think fit.

Dated, &c.

A. B.
One of the overseers of the parish of T. in the county of

---

44. Overseers' complaint thereupon.

County of } At a petty sessions of the peace of our lady the Queen, held at in the said county, the day of to wit. } in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and before the undersigned justices of our said lady the Queen, in and for the county aforesaid. An application is made to us the said justices, by the undersigned E. F., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of on behalf of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, to have an order on [dwelling in the parish of in the county of for him to maintain his who is poor, impotent, and not able to work, and chargeable to the said parish of T., he the said being a person of sufficient ability to provide for his said son [or, daughter, or, grandson].

E. F.
One of the overseers of the poor of the parish of T. aforesaid.

Exhibited before us,
A. B.
C. D.

---

p. 103.

45. Order on a parent or child to give relief, &c.

County of Kent } The order of A. B. and C. D. esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, one whereof is of the quorum, to wit. } made at a petty sessions held at in the said county, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and Upon an application to us the said justices, at the said petty sessions, by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of T., in the county of to have an order made on [or,] dwelling at the parish of

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

in the said county of (a) for him to maintain his son [or, daughter, or, grandson] who is poor (impotent, and not able) to work so as to maintain and support himself, and chargeable to the said parish of T., he the said [or,] being a person of sufficient ability to maintain and provide for his said son, &c. And the said [or,] having been duly summoned to appear before us the said justices, at the said petty sessions, to the end that we might examine into the cause and circumstance of the premises, and now appearing before us in pursuance of the said summons, but he has not shown any sufficient cause why such order should not be made, and we having heard the parties so complaining, and duly considered the circumstances of the said complaint, as well as the want of any adequate defence on the part of the said [or,], do adjudge and determine, that the said is poor, impotent, and unable to work so as to maintain and support himself, and actually chargeable to the said parish of T., and that the said dwelling in the said parish of in the said county of Kent [or,] is a person of sufficient ability to maintain and provide for his said son, &c. And therefore we do order that the said [or,] shall and do forthwith, upon notice of this our order, pay or cause to be paid to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of T. for the time being, or to some or one of them, weekly and every week from this present time, the sum of for and towards the sustentation, relief, maintenance, and support of the said for and during so long time as the said shall continue poor, impotent, and not able to work, and shall be chargeable to the parish of T., or until the said shall be legally directed to the contrary.

Given under our hands and seals, at aforesaid, the day and year first above written.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

p. 98.

46. Information of an overseer of the poor against a parent or child, for disobeying an order of maintenance, &c. (b)

County of } The information and complaint of E. F., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of T., in the county of made on oath before us, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of at a petty sessions held at in the said county of the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and who on his oath aforesaid saith, that by an order under the hands and seals of us A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of one whereof is of the quorum, made at a petty sessions held at in the said county of the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and upon an application to the said last-mentioned petty sessions by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of T. to have an order made on dwelling in the parish of in the said county of for him to maintain his who is poor and unable to work so as to maintain and support himself, and chargeable to the said parish of the said being a person of sufficient ability to provide for his said he the said was ordered, upon due notice thereof, to pay, or cause to be paid, to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of T., for the time being, or to some or one of them, weekly and every week, from the date of the said order, the sum of for and towards the sustentation, relief, maintenance, and support of the said for and during so long time as the said shall be poor, impotent, and unable to work, and shall be chargeable to the said parish of T. or until the said shall be legally directed to the contrary; but that notwithstanding he, the said on the day of in the year of our Lord had due notice of the said order, and was then and there duly requested by the said E. F. to pay, &c. [following the terms of the order] yet he has not observed nor performed the said order for and during months; that is to say, from the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and to the day of

(a) The county to which the justices belong, and where the party on whom it is made dwells, p. 98.

(b) One order for the maintenance of three children is bad. There should be an order for each, and so long as the child is unable to work and is chargeable. Reg. v. Morten, p. 1219.

following, and hath, during all that time, refused to pay, &c., [following the terms of the order,] whereby the said has subjected himself to the penalty and forfeiture of twenty shillings for each month, to go and be employed to the use of the poor of the said parish of T., and towards a stock and habitation for them, and other necessary uses and relief. (a) And thereupon he, the said prays us, the said justices first before named, that the said penalty be levied by some or one of the churchwardens or overseers of the aforesaid parish of by warrant of distress, and that justice may be done in the premises.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

Before us, A. B.
C. D.

E. F.

---

p. 98.

County of } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of to wit. } T. in the county of .

47. Warrant of distress on a parent or child for disobeying an order of maintenance, &c.

Whereas, by an order under the hands and seals of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of one whereof is of the quorum, made at a petty sessions held at in the said county of the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty upon an application to the said petty sessions by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of T. in the county of to have an order made on dwelling in the parish of in the county of for him to maintain his who is poor and unable to work, so as to maintain and support himself, and chargeable to the said parish of T., the said being a person of sufficient ability to provide for his said he, the said was ordered, upon due notice thereof, to pay, or cause to be paid, to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of T., for the time being, or to some one of them, weekly and every week, from the date of the said order, the sum of for and towards the sustentation, relief, maintenance, and support of the said for and during so long time as the said shall be poor, impotent, unable to work, and shall be chargeable to the said parish of T., or until the said shall be legally directed to the contrary. And whereas it appears unto us, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of at a petty sessions held at in and for the aforesaid county of this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty on the oath of one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of T. aforesaid, that notwithstanding he, the said has had due notice of the said order, yet he has not observed nor performed the said order for and during months; that is to say, from the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty to the day of following, whereby he, the said has subjected himself to the penalty and forfeiture of twenty shillings for each month. And whereas the said has been duly summoned to appear before us, at this present petty sessions, to answer unto the said complaint, but has not shown to us any sufficient cause why the said order has not been complied with, and why the said penalty of twenty shillings a month should not be levied by warrant of distress from us, or in default thereof, why he, the said should not be committed to the common gaol, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, till the said forfeitures shall be paid: These are, therefore, to require you forthwith to make distress of the goods and chattels of him, the said . And if, within the space of four days next after such distress by you taken, the said penalty, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale, that you detain the amount of the said penalty (being the sum of), to go and be employed to the use of the poor of your said parish of T., and also that you detain your reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress, rendering to him the said the overplus on demand. And if no such distress can be made, that then you certify the same unto us, to the end that such further proceedings be had therein as to law doth appertain.

Given under our hands and seals at aforesaid, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

(a) The party is liable to be indicted for disobedience of the order, p. 101.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

48. Committment of a parent or child for disobeying an order of maintenance.

p. 98.

County of } To the Constable of the parish of in the said county, and to to wit. } the Keeper of the Common Gaol of the said county of at

Whereas by an order under the hands and seals of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of one whereof is of the quorum, made at a petty sessions held at in the said county of the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty upon an application to the said petty sessions by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of T., in the county of to have an order made on dwelling in the parish of in the said county of for him to maintain his who is poor and unable to work so as to maintain and support himself, and chargeable to the said parish of T., the said being a person of sufficient ability to provide for his said : He the said was ordered, upon due notice thereof, to pay or cause to be paid to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of T. for the time being, or to some or one of them, weekly and every week, from the date of the said order, the sum of for and towards the sustentation, relief, maintenance, and support of the said for and during so long a time as the said shall be poor, impotent and unable to work, and shall be chargeable to the said parish of T., or until the said shall be legally directed to the contrary: which said order having been disobeyed and complaint thereof made to A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, at a petty sessions then held at in the said county of by and upon the oath of one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish of T., they the said last-mentioned justices did then and there issue their warrant to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of T., to levy the said penalty (being the sum of) by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of him the said and to apply the same according to law. And whereas it duly appears unto us, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of at a petty sessions held at in the said county of this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty as well upon the oath of E. F., one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish of as otherwise, that he the said overseer of the poor has used his best endeavours to levy the said sum on the goods of him the said as aforesaid, but that no sufficient distress can be had whereon to levy the same: These are therefore to command you, the said constable of aforesaid, to apprehend the body of the said and him safely to convey to the common gaol of the said county of at in the said county last-mentioned, and there deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this precept. And we do hereby command you, the said keeper of the said common gaol, to receive into your custody, in the said common gaol, the said and him there safely to keep without bail or mainprize, till the said forfeitures shall be paid: and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

Given under our hands and seals at T. aforesaid, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

Pensions

Form of minute of guardian to obtain pension, 86.

Of voluntary assignment, 88.

Form of order by two justices for the payment of the pension of "a Pensioner at Chelsea Hospital," in relief of his wife and family, p. 110.

Similar order as to a Greenwich out-pensioner, 110.

Similar order where any person is entitled to any naval pension or allowance, such person not being a Chelsea or Greenwich out-pensioner, 110.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

p. 109.

To the Commissioners of her Majesty's Navy.

56 Certificate by justices for the payment of the wages of a seaman, convicted of smuggling, for the relief of his wife.

County of } Whereas complaint on oath hath been made to us, two justices of the peace acting in and for the county of by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of aforesaid, that C. B., the wife of A. B., and their two children [name and age] have become chargeable to the said parish of . And whereas it hath been made to appear before us that the said A. B. is a seaman now serving in her Majesty's naval service, under and by virtue of the several acts made for the prevention of smuggling, and that the wages at which such seaman is rated in the ship's books are . We do therefore certify, that we deem it necessary that out of the wages of the said A. B. one-third [or one-half] of the same, amounting to shall be paid to the churchwardens and overseers of the said parish for the relief of the same.

Given under our hands at in the said county, on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty

L. M.
N. O.

---

p. 108.

To the acting Owner, Ship's Husband, or Agent of the Ship [or Vessel, as it may be].

57. Order by justices to overseers, &c. to receive seamen's wages for the indemnity of parishes.

County of } Whereas complaint on oath hath been made before us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the county of by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of T., in the county of aforesaid, that C. B., the wife of A. B., and their two children, to wit, [naming the children] have become chargeable to the said parish of T. And whereas it hath been made appear to us, that the said A. B. is now employed in the merchants service, to wit in the actual service of N. O., on board the Ranger, on a voyage to the East Indies, and not in her Majesty's service, and that, during his absence on such employment, the overseers of the said parish of T. have necessarily laid out and expended, in the maintenance and relief of the wife and family of the said A. B., the sum of We do, therefore, order and direct you, the said N. O. being the acting owner [as it may be] and person liable to pay the wages of the said A. B. as such seaman [as it may be,] forthwith, on receipt hereof, to pay unto the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of T. aforesaid, or to such one of them as shall demand the same, the said sum of out of the wages which are, or shall become due to the said A. B., in discharge of the said money so expended in the maintenance and support of the said C. B., his said wife, and their said family; and the receipt of such churchwarden or overseer shall be to you a good and sufficient discharge for the said sum of hereby directed to be paid for the purpose aforesaid.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty

W. R. (L. S.)
E. R. M. (L. S)

---

p. 103.

To all Constables, and others her Majesty's Officers of the Peace for the county of 58. Warrant to apprehend a person as a rogue and vagabond, having deserted his family.

County of } Forasmuch as A. B., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, hath this day made information and complaint upon oath before me one [or us and two] of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, that C. D., late of in the said county, shoemaker, hath run away and left his wife and children, whereby they are become chargeable to the said parish of and thereby committed an act of vagrancy: These are, therefore, to command you, in her said Majesty's name, forthwith to apprehend and bring before me the body of the said C. D., to answer unto the said complaint, and to be further dealt withal according to law. Herein fail you not.

Given under my hand and seal [or our hands and seals], the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty

A. B. (L. S.)

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

p. 104.

59. Conviction and commitment of a person as a rogue and vagabond, for having deserted his family.

County of } Be it remembered, that on the day of in the year of the reign of our sovereign lady Queen Victoria, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, queen, defender of the faith, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and to wit.

A. B., constable of the parish of in the county of bringeth before me W. R., esquire, one of the justices of our said lady the queen, assigned to keep the peace of our said lady the queen, in and for the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county, the body of C. D., and chargeth and accuseth him, the said C. D., before me, the said justice, of being a rogue and vagabond, within the intent and meaning of the several statutes made, relating to rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and disorderly persons, for that he, the said C. D., hath run away and left his wife and children, whereby they have become chargeable to the parish of in the county aforesaid, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and thereupon he, the said A. B., prayeth of me, the said justice, that the said C. D. may be dealt with according to the law for his said offence; whereupon the said C. D. is now asked by me, the said justice, if he can say any thing for himself, why he, the said C. D., should not be convicted of the offence above charged upon him, in form aforesaid, who pleadeth that he is not guilty thereof: Whereupon I, the said justice, do now proceed to examine into the truth of the complaint so brought by the said A. B. against the said C. D., and thereupon, on the day and year first aforesaid, at the parish of in the county aforesaid, E. F., churchwarden of the parish of aforesaid, and G. H., one of the overseers of the poor of the said parish of credible witnesses in that behalf, on their corporal oath upon the holy Evangelists of God, now here duly administered to them respectively by me, the said justice, in the presence and hearing of the said C. D., depose and say, that the said C. D. hath run away and left his wife and children, whereby they have become chargeable to the parish of aforesaid, and he, the said C. D., having heard the said evidence, and being asked by me, the said justice, if he can say any thing for himself, or show any cause before me why he should not be convicted of the offence so charged upon him as aforesaid, doth not say any thing for himself, or offer any evidence to gainsay the same; therefore it manifestly appeareth to me, the said justice, that the said C. D. is guilty of the offence above charged upon him, in manner and form as in and by the said complaint is alleged, and that he is thereby a rogue and vagabond, within the true intent and meaning of the said statute. It is, therefore, adjudged by me, the said justice, that the said C. D. be convicted of the said offence, and he is hereby by me accordingly convicted of the said offence so charged upon him in and by the said complaint, and adjudged to be a rogue and vagabond within the intent and meaning of the statute aforesaid. And I do order the said C. D. to be sent, and the said C. D. is by me accordingly committed to the house of correction at in the said county, there to remain until the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held in and for the said county, then and there to be further dealt with according to law, unless he be sooner discharged by due course of law, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. In testimony whereof, I, the said justice, to this record of conviction have put my hand and seal, at in the county aforesaid, on the day and year first above written.

W. R. (L. S.)

---

60. Commitment of a person as an incorrigible rogue for having deserted his family a second time.

To the Governor or Keeper of the House of Correction at County of } Receive into your custody the body of A. B. of in the county of herewith sent you, brought before me W. R., esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and charged before me by C. D., overseer of the poor of the parish of upon oath with being an incorrigible rogue, for that he the said A. B. being adjudged a rogue and vagabond, and thereof convicted by me the said W. R., and committed to the house of correction for having deserted his wife and children, and leaving them chargeable to the said parish of hath since the said conviction and commitment again deserted his said wife and children, and left them chargeable to the said parish of by reason whereof he the said A. B. hath become an incorrigible rogue, within the intent and meaning of the statutes passed relating to rogues and vagabonds, and to other idle and disorderly persons, and to houses of correction, of which offence he the said A. B. hath been convicted by me the said to wit.

justice, and him the said A. B. safely keep in your custody until he shall be discharged by due course of law, and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

Given under my hand and seal, this day of one thousand eight hundred and W. R. (L. S.)

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

To all Constables, and others her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said county of whom these may concern.

61. Warrant to apprehend a person for not applying a proportion of his earnings towards the maintenance of his family.

County of } These are in her Majesty's name to command you and every of you, upon sight hereof, to take and bring before me, or some other of her to wit. } Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, city, and liberty, the body of A. B., to answer to all such matters and things as on her Majesty's behalf are on oath objected against him by E. B., his wife, and also by C. D., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of for permitting, by his wilful default and neglect, his said wife and children to become chargeable to the said parish, spending his money in ale-houses, and not employing a proper proportion of the money earned by him towards the maintenance of his said wife and children, against the statute in that case made and provided. Herein fail not at your peril.

Given under my hand and seal at in the county aforesaid, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

W. R. (L. S.)

---

p. 103.

62. Order to seize the goods and receive the rents of houses or lands, of persons deserting their families. (a)

County of } Whereas it appears unto us whose names are hereunto set and seals affixed, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, as to wit. } well upon the complaint and application of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county as otherwise, that C. D., late of the parish of aforesaid, yeoman, hath run away from his place of abode at in the parish aforesaid, into some other county or place, and hath left his wife S. and his two children, M., aged three years, and P., aged two years or thereabouts, chargeable to the said parish of the place of their last legal settlement [or where the said children were born] ; and that the said C. D. hath [good and chattels, or lands and tenements, as the fact may be] situate and being at consisting of two freehold dwellings [or as it may be] : whereby to ease the said parish of the said charge, in whole or in part, we do hereby authorise and command you, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of to take and seize [describe the property] of his goods and chattels, and to receive so much of the sum of £ of the annual rents and profits of the lands and tenements of him the said C. D. at aforesaid, [if the order is to receive the rents of land, say until further order made], for and towards the discharge of the said parish for the providing for and bringing up of his said wife and children; and with this warrant you are to appear at the next quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the said county, that this order may be then and there confirmed, according to the directions of the statute in that case made and provided.

Given under our hands and seals at in the said county, the day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty

W. R. (L. S.)
E. R. M. (L. S.)

An Order by two Justices for out-door Relief, to a Person unable to work, under sec. 27 of 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76.

63. Order by two justices under sect. 27, p. 1246.

Whereas A. B., a poor person, an adult, and from old age [or "infirmity of body"] wholly unable to work, and unable to maintain himself, and whereas the said A. B. is lawfully entitled to relief from, and is now chargeable to, the parish of Bampton, in the Tiverton Union, in the county of Devon, and whereas the said A. B. is desirous of receiving relief out of the workhouse of the said union, and hath applied to us to make an order for the same, we J. B. and J. H., being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of Devon, and usually acting for the district within which the said union is situate, having duly investigated the above matters, do find and adjudge the same to be true, and we do hereby order and direct you the said guardians to provide proper and necessary relief henceforth for the said A. B., so long as he shall continue poor and wholly unable to work as aforesaid, and so long as he shall continue chargeable to the said parish, without requiring the said A. B. to reside in the workhouse. And I the said J. B. do hereby certify of my own knowledge, that the said A. B. is wholly unable to work, from old age as aforesaid.

(a) Where the party is a lunatic. See Reg. v. Pixley, p. 131.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

J. B. (L. S.)
J. H. (L. S.)

To the guardians of the Tiverton union officer.

---

p. 1258, s. 54.

64. Order of one justice, in case of urgent necessity, for temporary relief.

County of } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of to wit. } T., in the County of

Whereas complaint hath been this day made unto me, A. B., esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, upon oath by G. H. a poor impotent person in your parish, not settled [or usually residing] there, and who is labouring under an urgent and sudden necessity, and that he has under such circumstances applied to you for temporary relief, which you have neglected to give. I the undersigned having duly examined into the premises, do find and adjudge them to be true. And these are therefore to order and require you to grant to him the said G. H. temporary relief, not in money, but in articles of such absolute necessity as his case may require.

Given under my hand and seal, this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)

---

p. 1258, s. 54.

65. Order for medical relief only, in a case of sudden and dangerous illness.

County of } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Parish of A., in the to wit. } County of

Whereas complaint hath been made to me A. B., one of the justices of the peace in and for the county of aforesaid, that G. H., of your parish [or whose place of settlement is in your parish, but who is dwelling now in the parish of M.] a poor and impotent man, and unable to provide for himself, is afflicted with a sudden and dangerous illness: These are therefore, this being a case of urgent necessity, to order and require you to provide proper and necessary medical relief for the said G. H.

Given under my hand and seal, this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S)

---

66. Common order of two justices on two overseers, to give relief to a poor person, where there is no select vestry under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 5.

County of } To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of to wit. } T., in the County of

Whereas A. B. made oath before us, L. M. and N. O., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, that he [or she] the said A. B., together with C. and D., his [or her] children, are inhabitants of Orchard Street, in the said parish, and that he is [or they are] poor and impotent and unable to work, and in distress and in need of relief, and that he [or she] applied to E. F. and G. H., two of the overseers of the said parish of T., and was by them refused to be relieved: And whereas the said E. F. and G. H., overseers of the said parish, having been duly summoned to appear before us at at of the clock, this day of to show cause why the said A. B., together with the said should not be relieved, as by law is provided, no where duly appear before us: and whereas we the said L. M. and N. O., two of his Majesty's said justices of the peace for the said county, having duly heard the said parties, do adjudge, as well upon the oath of the said A. B. as otherwise, that the said A. B., together with his [or her] said children, ought to be relieved by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, and that there is special cause for granting relief to the said A. B. and the said children, to wit, that he, the said A. B, is very poor and impotent and not able to work or provide for himself or his said family, and has been refused adequate relief by the said E. F. and G. H.; and also that he, the said A. B., together with his [or her] children, are in such distress for want of other means of subsistence as to require relief from the said parish, we, the said L. M. and N. O., having also taken into consideration the character and conduct of the said A. B., do hereby order the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, or some of them, to pay or cause to be paid, unto the said for and towards his [or her] support and maintenance, the weekly sum of for the space of weeks, now next ensuing, the first payment to be made forthwith on the service of this order, and the second payment on the first day of the said second week, unless you shall be ordered according to law to forbear such second weekly allowance.

Given under our hands and seals at this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

L. M. (L. S.)
N. O. (L. S.)

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

---

p. 78.

County of } To the Constable of in the said County, and to every of them.
to wit. }

Whereas complaint hath been made to me, one of the justices of the peace for the county of by the guardians of Tiverton union, of which the parish of Bampton, in the county aforesaid, forms a part, and it hath been duly proved before me that C. B., a poor person, in the service and employment of F. G., has received the sum of £ as relief, by way of loan from the said guardians, and that £ of the same remains due; these are to require you in her Majesty's name to cause the said G. B. and F. G. to appear before me and one other of her Majesty's justices of the said county, on the next, at the house of in in the said county, at the hour of forenoon of the same day, to show cause why the wages now due, or which may become due from the said F. G. to the said C. B. should not be paid to such guardians in satisfaction of the said sum so remaining due.

Given under my hand, this day of Justice.

67. Summons for master and servant, for repayment of loan, under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 58.

---

p. 78.

County of } To C. D. [the pauper] and E. F. [the master] of the parish of
to wit. }

Whereas the guardians of the poor of Tiverton union, of which the parish of Bampton, in the county aforesaid, forms a part, on the day of last, appeared before one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and complained and duly proved that you C. D. had received the sum of £ as relief by way of loan, from the said guardians, and that the sum of £ the same still remains due: that the said C. D. was in the employment of E. F. at certain weekly wages: and whereas the said C. D. and E. F. have been duly summoned, in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, to appear before us at o'clock this day, to show cause why the wages now due, or which may become due from the said E. F. to the said C. D., should not be paid to such guardian, in satisfaction of the said sum of £ so remaining due: and whereas we the being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, having duly heard the said parties, in the presence and hearing of each other [or in the presence and hearing of the said E. F., the said C. D., although duly summoned, not appearing, or any one on his behalf], and it having now been duly proved to our satisfaction that the sum of £ was on the day of 1844, provided by the said guardians of to the said C. D. as relief by way of loan, and that the sum of £ now remains due and owing, and that the sum of £ is now due to the said C. D. from the said E. F. as wages [or that C. D. is in the employment of E. F., and entitled to the weekly sum of £ as wages], and having considered the circumstances of the said C. D., do, in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, adjudge, order, and direct that the said E. F. shall, out of the wages so due to the said C. D. pay unto 68. Order for the repayment of loan.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

the said guardians the sum of £ and shall hereafter, on the Saturday in every week, out of the wages becoming due to the said C. D., pay the sum of shillings, to the said guardians so long as the said C. D. shall be in the employ of the said E. F., and until the said sum of £ aforesaid, now due from the said C. D., shall be paid.

Given under our hands this day of

L. M.
N. O.

---

p. 44.

69. Appointment of select vestry, under 59 Geo. III. c. 12.

to wit. } Whereas in and by the statute made and passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act to amend the Laws for the relief of the Poor," it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for the inhabitants of any parish, in vestry assembled, to establish a select vestry for the concerns of the poor of such parish, and to that end to nominate and elect in any vestry such and so many inhabitant householders or occupiers within such parish, not exceeding the number of twenty nor less than five, as shall in any such vestry be thought fit to be members of the select vestry (such inhabitants being first thereto appointed by writing under the hand and seal of one of her Majesty's justices of the peace, which appointment he is thereby authorised and required to make): And whereas information is made and given on this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty unto us, J. C. and S. P., esquires, whose hands and seals are hereunto subscribed and set, being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of that the inhabitants of the parish of in the said county, have nominated and elected, in manner aforesaid, twenty substantial householders and occupiers within the said parish, whose names are hereinafter mentioned, to be members of a select vestry for the concerns of the poor of the said parish, we therefore, by virtue and in pursuance of the authority and requisition aforesaid, do hereby appoint the following substantial householders and occupiers, that is to say,

A. B. Minister.
C. D. } Churchwardens,
E. F. }
G. H. } Overseers of the Poor.
I. K. }
L. M.
N. O. &c. [not exceeding twenty-five] to be and constitute a select vestry for the care and management of the concerns of the poor of the said parish of in the said county, to continue and be empowered to act therein from the time of this appointment until fourteen days after the next annual appointment of overseers of the poor of the said parish shall take place.

Given under our hands and seals at in the said county, the day and year above written.

J. C. (L. S.)
S. P. (L. S.)

---

p. 9, n.

70. Form given by statute.

Form of Agreement at a Public Meeting, for a single Parish or Township to adopt the Provisions, Rules, and Regulations, of an Act, made in the twenty-second year of King George the Third, for the better Relief and Employment of the Poor.

It is agreed, at a public meeting duly holden this day of at in the county of pursuant to the directions of an Act made in the twenty-second year of King George the Third, for the better relief and employment of the poor, that the parish [or township] of [as the case shall be] shall from henceforth adopt, in all respects, the provisions, rules, orders, and regulations, and comply with all the requisites, prescribed by the said Act; and that our workhouse [if there is one] shall be immediately fitted up and accommodated for the purposes mentioned in the said act. [If there is none.] We will forthwith provide a proper workhouse, either by erecting a new one, or hiring, altering, and fitting up buildings suitable to the purpose, at some convenient place, within our parish, et cetera. And we recommend to the consideration of the justices and as fit and proper persons for guardians of the poor; and and as fit and proper persons for governors of the poor-house, for the said parish, township, et cetera [as the case shall be].

Given under our hands, et cetera. (Schedule No. I.)

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

---

71. Form of consent and approbation of the justices. By statute.

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of considering the parish of within the said county, to be of magnitude sufficient to have a workhouse provided within it for the reception and employment of the poor, and to adopt the provisions of the act "for the better relief and employment of the poor," passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, do hereby give our approbation and consent thereto, pursuant to the directions of the said act, and we do also agree to the salaries fixed by the said agreement to be paid to the guardian and governor.

Given under our hands this day of one thousand eight hundred and (Schedule No. II.)

A. B.
C. D.

---

p. 82.

72. Contract for maintenance, under 9 Geo. I. c. 7, s. 4.

At a public meeting of the inhabitants of the parish of T. in the county of for that purpose assembled, upon usual notice thereof first given, it is contracted by and with the consent of the major part of the said inhabitants so assembled as aforesaid, between and churchwardens and and overseers of the poor of the parish of the one part, and of in the said parish, yeoman, of the other part, That he the said shall and will, during the space of one whole year, to commence from next ensuing, at his own proper costs and charges, in the house in which he now dwelleth, find, provide, and allow unto all such poor people as shall be lawfully entitled to relief and maintenance from the said parish, and shall be brought unto him by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor aforesaid, or any of them, or by their or any of their successors for the time being, sufficient lodging, meat, drink, clothing, employment, and other things necessary for their keeping and maintenance, and that, in consideration thereof, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor and their successors respectively, shall pay or cause to be paid to the said the sum of in equal proportions, the said to have moreover and take unto himself the benefit of the said poor people's work, labour, and service during the said term.

In witness whereof the parties to these presents have hereunto set their hands the day of

[If two parishes or townships joined in the contract, under 43d Geo. III. c. 54, it was necessary to insert in the contract the consent of the two justices, thus—"by and with the consent of the major part of the said inhabitants so assembled as aforesaid respectively, and also by and with the consent of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, dwelling in the said parish of [or near to the said parishes or townships of "]]

Justices' assent (a)

[The assent of the justices may be indorsed thereon as follows—"We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the within mentioned county of and dwelling in the within mentioned parish of [or near to the within mentioned parishes or townships of] do consent unto, allow, and approve of the within written contract."

Given under our hands and seals, the day of A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

p. 9.

73. Agreement for two or more parishes, to unite in adopting Gilbert's Act. By statute.

It is agreed at a public meeting duly held this day of at in the county of pursuant to the directions of the said act, That the parish [or township] of [as the case may be] shall, from henceforth, in conjunction with the parishes or townships of and [as it may be] adopt, in all respects, the provisions, rules, orders, and regulations, and comply with all the requisites prescribed by the said act, for parishes uniting for those purposes, and

(a) The approbation of two justices is required, and all such contracts must be made according to the rules of the commissioners.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

that a convenient workhouse and other buildings and necessary conveniences shall be immediately provided at or near and properly fitted up and accommodated for the purposes mentioned in the said act. And we recommend to the consideration of the justices of the limit wherein such workhouse will be situate as fit and proper persons qualified for guardians of the poor, and as fit persons to be governors of the poor-house for the said parish [or township, as the case shall be] and do agree to allow the person who shall be appointed guardian, a salary of per annum, for his trouble in executing that office, and to the person who shall be appointed governor of the workhouse, a salary of per annum, for his trouble in executing that office. (Schedule, No. III.)

---

74. Agreement for uniting the parishes [or townships, as the case may be] of and for the purpose of providing a house or houses, and for the better maintaining and employing their poor, pursuant to Gilbert's Act, 22 Geo. III. c. 83.

Given in schedule No. 4 & 5 of the same statute.

It is agreed this day of by and between the guardians of the poor of the parish of and and of the townships of and in the county of (which maintain their own poor separate and distinct from the other parts of their respective parishes), whose names are hereunto subscribed, pursuant to the opinion of two-thirds in number and value of the owners or occupiers of lands, tenements, and hereditaments assessed to the poor's rates within such respective parishes and townships, at meetings duly held for that purpose, qualified according to the directions of the act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, and with the approbation of W. R. and E. R. M., two of her Majesty's justices of the peace, according to the directions of the said act, That the said respective parishes and townships shall be united for the better maintaining and employing their poor, and that a convenient house or houses, with proper buildings and accommodations thereto, and with land fit for gardens, orchards, and the keeping of a cow or cows, shall be built ["purchased or hired," as shall be found most suitable,] at or near for the reception and accommodation of the poor, as soon as conveniently may be, and if hired, the same shall be rented upon such terms as shall be agreed upon between the guardians of the poor of the said several parishes and townships, or the major part of them, and the person or persons owning or being authorized to let such building, lands, and premises, but no such agreement shall be made for any longer lease than twenty-one years, unless the guardian or guardians shall have an option to vacate it at the end of that term on giving twelve months' notice in writing of his or their intentions so to do, nor for a shorter term than three years; and such houses shall be fitted up and made convenient for the purposes aforesaid, at the expense of the landlords [or tenants, as shall be agreed to by them]. That the rents of the said houses, the expenses of fitting up, making additions or alterations [where they shall be agreed to be paid by the tenants], and of the furniture thereof, and also the utensils and materials to be used for the purpose of employing the poor, and the wages and allowances to be paid to the governor of the house, shall be paid by the said several guardians in their due proportions, according to the amount of the money raised by the poor's rate for their several parishes and townships, in respect of their poor, on a medium of three years preceding such agreement; and that such proportions shall be ascertained by and whom we have nominated for that purpose, and shall be paid by the guardians of the poor of the said respective parishes and townships to the persons who shall be authorized to receive the same, within seven days after the same shall be so ascertained, and that the money earned by the labour shall be brought to the credit of that account at the end of every year. That the expenses of victuals, beer, and firing for the poor, and the governor [and for the assistants, when any shall be found necessary] in every such house or houses, with all other small incidental expenses, shall be proportioned, at the end of every month, according to the number of poor which shall be sent from each of the said respective parishes, townships, and places, and for the term they shall have resided there within such month, that the guardians of the poor of any of the said parishes, townships or places, shall be at liberty to withdraw from this agreement at the end of the first three years, or any succeeding three years, on giving twelve months' notice of such their intentions, if it shall be so determined by [three fourth parts] of the owners or occupiers of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, assessed to the poor's rates, and qualified as aforesaid, at a public meeting summoned by due notice as aforesaid, specifying the occasion of such meeting; and in such case they shall receive one-half of their due proportion, to be ascertained by the persons last above-named, or such other persons as the parties shall agree upon for that purpose, of the value of the furniture, stock, utensils and implements, then remaining at such poor-house after paying their proportion of the rent, and of the salaries to the governor and other officers, to the end of the then growing year. And that the guardian of the poor of such parish, township, and place, shall provide suitable and convenient clothing for the poor, to be sent to the said house or houses from their respective parishes, townships, or places, and charge the expenses thereof in their accounts. And we recommend to the justices of the limit where such house is to be situated, as persons duly qualified for the office of visitors of the said poor-house, and as persons duly qualified for the office of governors of the said poor-house.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

We, A. B. and C. D., the justices of the peace mentioned in the within written agreement, do hereby give our approbation to the parishes and places herein-named being united for the purposes of the act within-mentioned.

Witness our hands, this day of A.D. 1831.

A. B.
C. D.

Be it remembered that on the day of A. B. deposited in my hands a copy of the agreement made between the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, of the parishes or townships of and [as the case shall be] in the county, &c. [as the case may be] of for uniting in hiring, purchasing, or building houses at or near in the same county of and providing for the maintenance and employment of a certain description of poor persons belonging to the said parishes, townships, and places, pursuant to the statute made in the twenty-second year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third.

75. The entry to be made by the clerk of the peace or town clerk. By statute.

Notice is hereby given, that a public meeting to consult the owners or occupiers of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, assessed after the rate of five pounds per annum, about providing for the maintenance and employment of the poor, pursuant to the statute of the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, will be held in the vestry-room of this parish, on the day of at o'clock in the afternoon.

76. Notice of the meeting to consult as to providing for the poor, under Gilbert's Act, No. 6. By statute.

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of acting for the hundred of in the said county, do hereby appoint to execute the office of guardian of the poor, for the parish of in the said county, within the said hundred, for one year, to be computed from to which he has been recommended at a public meeting, holden on the day of pursuant to the directions of the act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, "for the better relief and employment of the poor."

77. Appointment of a guardian of the poor, No. 7. By statute.

Given under our hands this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty one.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of acting in the hundred of in the said county, do hereby appoint of to execute the office of visitor of the poor for the parish of in the said county, within the said hundred, for one year, to be computed from to which he has been recommended, at a public meeting holden on the day of pursuant to the directions of the act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, "for the better relief and employment of the poor."

78. Appointmen of a visitor of the poor, No. 7. By statute.

Given under our hands this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B.
C. D.

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of acting in the hundred of in the said county, do hereby appoint of to execute the office of governor of the poor, for the parish of

79. Appointment of a governor of the poor, No. 7. By statute.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

in the said county, within the said hundred, for one year, to be computed from to which he has been recommended at a public meeting, holden on the day of pursuant to the directions of the act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, "for the better relief and employment of the poor."

Given under our hands this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B.
C. D.

---

80. Appointment of a treasurer of the poor, No. 7. By statute.

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of acting in the hundred of in the said county, do hereby appoint of to execute the office of treasurer of the poor for the parish of in the said county, within the said hundred, for one year, to be computed from to which he has been recommended by the guardians, pursuant to the directions of the act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, "for the better relief and employment of the poor."

Given under our hands this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one

A. B.
C. D.

---

81. Draft by the guardian, on the churchwardens and overseers appointed to collect the poor's rates, No. 8. By statute.

To A. B., Collector of the poor's rates for the parish of in the county of

You are hereby authorized and directed to pay C. D. [describe what for] and take his receipt for the same, which will be your discharge for such payment.

Dated this day of

E. F. { Guardian of the poor for the parish aforesaid.

---

82. Appointment of a deputy visitor, No. 9. By statute.

I, A. B. Visitor of the poor and poorhouse for the parish of in the county of do hereby nominate and appoint C. D. of to be my deputy-visitor and assistant during my will and pleasure, pursuant to the power given to me by an act passed in the twenty-second year of King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better relief and employment of the poor," and authorize him to discharge the duty required of him by the said act.

Witness my hand this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B.

---

83. Certificate of serving the office of visitor of the poor, No. 10. By statute.

I, A. B., one of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county, &c., [as the case may be], of do hereby certify that of in the said county, hath been appointed to and is now serving the office of visitor of the poor for the parish or township of [or, for the parishes and townships of] in the said county, [as the case may be], pursuant to directions of the act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third.

Dated this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B.

---

84. Security for money borrowed for purchasing lands, &c., for the employment of the poor, No. 11. By statute.

By virtue of an act made in the twenty-second year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the better relief and employment of the poor," we visitor and guardian of the poor for the parish [or township, as the case may be], of in the county, city, &c., of in consideration of the sum of to us in hand paid by of for the purpose of purchasing lands, buildings, erecting, repairing, fitting up or furnishing, &c., [as the case may be], a convenient house or building and offices for the reception, accommodation and employment of the poor of the said parish or township, and for providing suitable stock and utensils for that purpose, do hereby charge the poor's rates to be hereafter made, and the several sums of money to be raised thereupon within the said parish [or township, as the case shall be], with the payment of the said principal sum and interest, after the rate of per cent. per annum, half-yearly as the same shall become due.

Witness our hands this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

I do transfer this security, with all my right and title to the principal money hereby secured, and to all interest now due, or hereafter to be due, unto his executors, administrators, and assigns. Dated this day of Witness, A. B.

E. F.

85. Transfer of security for the money advanced, No. 14. By statute.

County of } At a special session, held at in the county of this day of one thousand eight hundred and by justices to wit. } of the peace for the said county, acting for the hundred of within the said county.

86. Workhouse governor's appointment.

Upon the application of the major part of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county and hundred, to us whose hands and seals are hereunto affixed, being justices of the peace acting in and for the aforesaid county and hundred, we do hereby appoint keeper of the workhouse of the said parish of to be governor thereof; and so long as the said shall continue keeper of the said workhouse, until the justices, in any special sessions, shall revoke this appointment, he is hereby authorized to use and exercise the powers and perform the duties vested in and imposed upon governors of the poor, by an act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, according to an act passed in the fiftieth year of the reign of the same king.

Given under our hands and seals, the day and year above written.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

To the Governor of the Poorhouse at in the county of

You are hereby ordered and required to receive aged [state whether married or single] a poor person belonging to the parish of in the county of into the poorhouse of and to accommodate and provide for such person in a proper manner, according to the rules and establishment of the said house.

87. Order for the admission of a pauper into the poorhouse. 22 Geo. III. c. 83, No. 12. By statute.

Given under my hand this day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty one.

A. B. Visitor, [or Guardian, as the case may be].

I, A. B., a justice of the peace for the county [riding, division, &c., as the case shall be,] of having received proof upon oath before me, that a poor person receiving weekly relief from the parish, &c. [as the case shall be,] of is a person of very decent and orderly behaviour, do hereby direct the guardian [or, overseer, if no guardian,] of the said parish, &c. to omit putting the badge upon the coat, [or, gown, if a female] of the said and to excuse his [or, her] wearing the same as long as he [or, she] shall continue to behave orderly and decently.

88. Justice's direction to excuse a poor person wearing the badge. Gilbert's Act, 22 Geo. III. c. 83, sched No. 13. (a) By statute.

Dated this day of

A. B.

[See also 15 and 16, printed in schedule, 22 Geo. III. c. 83, and Chitty's Col. Stat. 815, directing the modes of adjusting the parish accounts, and the orders and by-laws to be observed in poor-houses.]

(a) A subsequent act prohibits a badge in any case.

4. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of Poor.

89. Commitment of a pauper, maintained in a workhouse, for disorderly conduct, under 55 Geo. III. c. 137, s. 5.

County of } To the Governor or Keeper of the House of Correction at in to wit. } the County of , or to his Deputy.

Receive into your custody the body of G. H., herewith sent you, brought before me, A. B., esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, charged and convicted before me, the said justice, upon the oath of C. D., master or governor of the workhouse of the parish of of having been guilty of an offence against a certain act of parliament made and passed in the fifty-fifth year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act to prevent Poor Persons in Workhouses from embezzling certain Property provided for their Use," to alter and amend so much of an act of the thirty-sixth year of his present Majesty as restrains justices of the peace from ordering relief to poor persons in certain cases for a longer period than one month at a time, and for other purposes therein mentioned relating to the poor; that is to say, for that he, the said A. B., being a person maintained in a certain public workhouse established for the relief, maintenance, and employment of the poor, to wit, the workhouse of the parish of in the said county, did on the day of refuse to work at a certain work, occupation, or employment, suited to his age, strength, and capacity, to wit [state the particular facts, or that the said G. H. was on the day of guilty of drunkenness], against the statute in that case made and provided, and him therefore safely keep in your safe custody, without bail or mainprize, to hard labour for the space of [any time not exceeding twenty-one days], and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

Given under my hand and seal, at in the county aforesaid, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)

---

90. Commitment of a person for misbehaviour in a workhouse, under 50 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 5.

County of } To the Governor of the House of Correction, Cold Bath Fields, to wit. } or to his Deputy.

Receive into your custody the body of G. H., herewith sent you, brought before me, A. B., esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, by and charged and convicted before me, the said justice, upon the oath of for that he the said G. H., being a person maintained in a public workhouse, to wit, the workhouse of and in the parish of in the said county of established for the relief, maintenance, and employment of the poor, was on the day of guilty of [drunkenness] and other misbehaviour in the said workhouse, against the statute, &c.: And the said G. H. having been thereof lawfully convicted before me, the said justice, of the said offence: Therefore the said G. H. safely keep in your said custody, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for the space of [any time not exceeding twenty-one days], and during such time to be kept to hard labour, and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

Given under my hand and seal, this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)

---

5. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

91. Account book of workhouse poor.

V. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

An Account of all Paupers admitted into Workhouse.

Names.	Age.	When admitted.	Reason why.	By whose Order.	Discharged.	Why.	Discharged by whose Order.	Remarks.
Adkins, John.	51	21 Feb. 1836	Suddenly dangerously ill.	Overseer A. B.	17 Oct. 1836	Recovered	Overseer A. B.	Still weak and requires relief as an out-door pauper.
Armstrong, T.	44	8 Mar. 1836	Broke a leg by fall from horse.	Overseer C. D.	25 Sep. 1836	Recovered	Overseer C. D.

5. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

92. Workhouse book.

Another Book called "Workhouse Book," kept in London.

Ward, No. 1.	Names of Paupers.	1830. Times of being in the house are denoted by the |
		Jan. 1.	Jan. 2.	Jan. 3.	Jan. 4.	&c. &c.
	Adams, James	|	|	|	|
	Alderson, Jno.	|	|	|
	Annesley, Thos.	|	|
	&c. &c. &c.

Clerks' Hall, Wood-street, December, 1830.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor, or Vestry Clerks.

93. Notice requiring churchwardens, &c. in London, to return lists of poor children, &c.

Whereas by an act of parliament passed in the second year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for the keeping regular, uniform, and annual registers of all parish poor infants under a certain age within the bills of mortality;" and also by another act, passed in the seventh year of his late Majesty, intituled, "An Act for the better regulation of the parish poor children of the several parishes therein mentioned, within the bills of mortality," it is enacted, That the respective churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parishes shall keep a register book ruled and headed on each page, agreeable to the schedules annexed to the said acts, of all infants under their care, from their birth or time of admission into the workhouses or parish houses, until apprenticed out or otherwise discharged; and that, at the expiration of each year, the names of all such children as are then remaining under their care shall be transferred to the register of the next year, under their proper dates and description in which they stand in the preceding register, previous to any further entry; so that the register of each year shall contain a full and distinct account of the whole number of parish poor children under their care in the course of the year, without being intermixed with the deaths or discharges of any of the preceding years. And also, that exact copies of such registers, ending the thirty-first of December in every year, shall be transmitted to the master and wardens of the company of parish clerks, on or before the fifteenth day of February following.

In order that such registers and copies of registers may be correctly made, the master, wardens, and court of assistants have directed that proper forms be printed agreeable to the schedules of the said acts, and sold only at their hall, in Wood-street, Cheapside, (a) and that attendance be there given for such purpose, and for receipt of the returns on Tuesday afternoons from three to five o'clock, and on Thursday mornings till one o'clock.

And whereas several parishes have neglected to make their returns within the time limited; and others have made returns not agreeable to the act, which has occasioned much delay in making up the general abstract, notice is hereby given, that the master and wardens of the said company are determined to put the penalties in force against such churchwardens and vestry clerks, who do not in future make their returns correctly by the fifteenth of February, as required by the said acts. The penalty for neglecting is five pounds.

J. F., Clerk.

[N.B.—By an order of a committee of the House of Commons, it is required that returns of parish apprentices be in future correctly made agreeable to schedule E. of the before-mentioned act of the seventh George the Third.]

(a) See the form.

5. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

94. Overseers' account of infant poor accordingly.

Annual Register of the Parish Poor Children until they are apprenticed out, from the 1st day of January to the 31st day of December, of the Parish of St. Dunstan in the West, London (where there is a Workhouse or Parish-house), according to the Acts of Parliament of the Second and Seventh of his Majesty King George the Third.

Year, 18 .

	Name of the Child. If a Foundling, mark . F. If a Bastard . . . . B. If a Casualty . . . . C. If the same child is taken in a second time, mark the second entry of the name . . . 2 If a third time . . 3, &c.
Y. M. D.	Age real or reputed at the time when received. Years . Y. Months . M. Days . . D.
	If born in the workhouse, when.
	If not born in the workhouse, when admitted.
£. s. d.	If money be received with any child, what sum, such sum not to be transferred from year to year.
	When died in the workhouse.
	When sent from the workhouse, and by whom nursed till sent.
	What work children past six years of age are employed in. If can read r If can say his or her prayers p If both r p
	When sent to the hospital for exposed and deserted young children.
	If discharged from the parish, to whom delivered and where living. If removed or passed, to what place.
	Nurse's name to whom delivered to be nursed. If a wet nurse, mark . W. If a dry nurse . . . D. If the nurse dies or is changed, write the name of the new nurse under the former. If nursed by the mother, mark M.
	Place where the nurse lives. In what place, or near what sign, so as to be found.
	Price of nursing each week.
£. s. d.	Reward given to nurses.
	If died at nurse, when.
	If past six years of age, and brought to the workhouse, mark W. If discharged, mention to whom, and where living. If apprenticed, mention folio of the register of apprentices.

N.B. These columns occupy a folio sheet under the titles as above. See form prescribed in schedule, 7 Geo. III.

[Name of Parish.]

A General Account or Balance Sheet kept and delivered by the Parochial Officers of a Parish in London.

An Account of the Receipts and Expenditure of Messrs. A. B. and C. D., Overseers of the Poor, from Lady-day, 1829, to Lady-day, 1830.

MESSRS. E. F. AND G. H'S. ARREARS.

	Assessments uncollected.	Serjeants' Inn uncollected.	Other Inhabitants uncollected.	Collected.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
Ending at Midsummer, 1822	126 0 9	89 12 11	36 7 10	20 0 0
Michaelmas . .	150 9 2	89 12 11	60 16 3	13 13 7
Christmas . . .	149 4 0	82 15 0	66 9 0	32 12 0
Lady-day, 1832 .	247 3 0	82 15 0	164 8 0	128 16 0
£	672 16 11	344 15 10	328 1 1	195 1 7

The Amount collected, viz. £195 1s. 7*d.* paid to Mr. A., to Balance his Account.

MESSRS. A. B. AND C. D.'S RATES AND RECEIPTS.

	Assessments.	Serjeant's Inn uncollected.	Other inhabitants uncollected.	Collected.	Totals.
	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
1 Quarter to Midsummer, 1823	843 0 0	82 15 0	27 2 0	733 3 0
1 ditto to Michaelmas . . .	843 0 0	82 15 0	48 16 0	711 9 0
1 ditto to Christmas	841 14 0	82 15 0	60 9 0	698 10 0
1 ditto to Lady-day, 1824 . .	838 9 0	82 15 0	80 4 0	675 10 0
£	3366 3 0	331 0 0	216 11 0	2818 12 0	2818 12 0
To cash received for Illegitimate Children					41 4 0
for Maintenance of Paupers					42 13 11 of E. F. late Overseer, his Balance					0 15 1
of G. H.					7 17 9
from Guildhall, (a Fine)					0 8 0
£					2911 10 9

DISBURSEMENTS.

	£. s. d.	£. s. d.
To Mr. N. O., Maintenance of Poor in House, 12 Months		1100 13 9
The Out Door Poor (paid every Fortnight) .		798 1 3
Children at Nurse, at Whetstone		197 2 10
——— with their Friends		44 10 0
Insane Poor		146 2 10
Clothing for Out Door Poor .	63 15 1	85 12 9
Mr. N. O.	21 17 8
Undertaker		5 12 6
Repairs: Bricklayer, Carpenter, Plumber, &c.		48 1 8
Apothecary, in London, 1½ years	47 5 0	52 10 0
——— in Country, 1 year .	5 5 0
Law Expenses, Appeals		16 0 2
Salaries, Vestry Clerk		175 0 0
——— Collector		48 0 0
——— Beadle		26 10 0
Insurance, Rent, Rates, Water, Gas Company, &c.		22 14 6
Visitation to Whetstone		14 11 2
Printing, Stationery, Grocery, Coals, Candles, &c.		30 1 2
London Workhouse		27 5 0
		2838 9 7
Balance in hands of Mr. A. B.	25 19 8	73 1 2
" " Mr. C. D.	47 1 6
Since paid to present Overseer
		£2911 10 9

The foregoing Accounts were Audited the 30*th day of June,* 1824, and allowed at a Vestry held on the 8*th day of July following.*

Y. Z. Vestry Clerk.

5. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

96. The allowance of overseer's account, under 50 Geo. III. c. 49. (a)

p. 368.

County of } Perused, allowed, and approved of, the above account, (the same having been first signed and verified on oath by A. B. and C. D. churchwardens, and E. F. and G. H., overseers of the poor of the
to wit. }
said parish of) by and before us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of the day of one thousand eight hundred and (a)

L. M.
N. O.

---

p. 367.

97. Summons to overseers of the poor to verify and pass their accounts before two justices, under the 17 Geo. II. c. 38.

To A. B. and C. D., late Overseers of the Poor of the parish of Barking, in the county of Essex, for the year commencing one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and ending one thousand eight hundred and forty-five.

County of Essex, to wit. } We, G. H. and I. K., esquires, whose hands and seals are hereunto set and subscribed, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace, (one whereof is of the quorum) inhabiting in [or near] the said parish of Barking, in pursuance of the statutes made for the relief of the poor, and for obliging the overseers to pass their accounts, do will and require you forthwith, on sight hereof, to make up and perfect your annual accounts in writing of all sums of money received and disbursed in execution of your said offices as overseers of the poor aforesaid, for and towards the relief and maintenance of the poor of the said parish of Barking: and, being so perfected, that you do bring the same to us, the said justices, at on the day of next, at eleven of the clock in the fore [or after] noon of the same day, and verify the same on oath; and that, in the meantime, you present your said accounts to the inhabitants of your said parish hereunder named, whom, or any three of whom, we desire to meet together and examine the said accounts, and report their opinion thereof to us in writing at the time and place aforesaid.

Given under our hands and seals the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

G. H. (L. S.)
I. K. (L. S.)

Inhabitants above referred to.
O. P., Q. R., S. T., U. V., W. X., &c.

---

p. 367.

98. Information against an overseer for refusing to account, &c. under 17 Geo. II. c. 38.

County of Essex, to wit. } The information and complaint of A. B., overseer of the poor of the parish of Barking, in the county of Essex, made on oath before us, C. D. and E. F., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, who saith that L. M., now [or late] of the parish of Barking aforesaid, yeoman, was on the twenty-fifth of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, at the parish aforesaid, duly appointed one of the overseers of the poor for the said parish of Barking, and duly accepted and acted in the execution of his office, and that on the day of last past, he the said A. B., and one G. H., of the said parish of Barking, yeoman, were duly appointed to succeed the said L. M., and one other person, as overseers of the poor of the said parish of Barking, and that he, the said L. M., duly took upon himself and acted in pursuance of his said appointment; and that after the passing of the statute in that case made and provided, and after the said L. M. ceased to be an overseer of the poor of the said parish, and within fourteen days after he the said A. B. and G. H. were so nominated and appointed overseers to succeed the said L. M. and the said other person as overseer of the poor of the said parish, that is to say, on the day of (A. D. the said A. B. and G. H. requested the said L. M. (who then and there had notice of the premises) according to the statute in that case made and provided, to deliver in to the said A. B. and G. H. as such succeeding overseers, a just, true, and perfect account in writing, fairly entered in a book or books kept or to be kept for that purpose, and signed by the said L. M. under his hand, of all sums of money by him received, or rated and assessed, and not received, and also of all goods, chattels, stock and materials, that had been in the hands of the said L. M. or in the hands of any of the poor, in order to be wrought, and of all monies paid by the said L. M. as such overseer, and of all things concerning his said office, during the year, and also to pay, &c. [pursuing the duties in the 2d section]. Yet the said L. M. then and there and from thence hitherto wholly refused and neglected to deliver unto the said G. H. his said successor, or to make or yield up to his said successors, or either of them, such account verified as aforesaid, within the time limited or appointed by the said statute; contrary to the statute in that case made and provided. And therefore he, the said A. B., prays that justice may be done in the premises.

(a) This allowance must be at the foot of the account.

5. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

A. B.

Before us, C. D.
E. F.

---

p. 367.

99. Commitment of an overseer for neglecting to account, founded on the foregoing information, and on 50 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1.

To the Constables of the parish of Barking, in the said county, and to the Keeper of the Common Gaol at Chelmsford, in the said county of Essex.

County of Essex, to wit. } Whereas information and complaint upon oath have been made before us, C. D. and E. F., esquires two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of Essex, by A. B., one of the overseers of the poor in the said parish of Barking, in the said county [insert the whole of the information, and proceed as suprà, inserting the words, "contrary to the statute in such case made and provided" and then conclude thus:] These are therefore to charge and command you, the said constable, forthwith to apprehend the said and him safely to convey to the common gaol of the said county of Essex, at Chelmsford, in the said county, and there deliver him to the keeper thereof, together with this precept; and we do hereby also command you, the said keeper of the said common gaol, to receive and him there safely keep until he shall have given such account, and shall have paid or yielded up such money, goods, chattels, and other things in his hands as aforesaid.

Given under our hands and seals, at in the said county of Essex, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

C. D. (L. S.)
E. F. (L. S.)

---

p. 368.

100. Warrant of distress for balance found due from late overseers.

To L. M. and N. O., Churchwardens, and P. Q. and R. S., Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of Devon.

County of Devon, to wit. } Whereas at a special sessions holden at the parish of in the county of Devon, before M. B. and J. B., two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and usually dwelling near the parish of in the said county, which said special sessions were holden for the purpose of enabling the churchwardens and overseers of the said parish of to submit their annual accounts to the said justices there assembled, and which said sessions were duly held within fourteen days after other overseers had been appointed to succeed R. P. the churchwardens, and J. H. and J. P. the late overseers of the said parish of they the said R. P., J. H., and J. B. did then and there produce and submit to the said justices their annual accounts, and the same were then duly allowed; and by the said accounts it appeared that there is a balance in their hands due to the said parish of . Now we the undersigned, being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace, acting in and for the said county having examined the said accounts, do adjudge, that there is still remaining in the hands of the said R. P., J. H., and J. B., on balance of their said accounts of money by them received for and towards the necessary relief of the poor of the said parish for the year ending over and above all the sums of money by them paid, the sum of which they, the said R. P., J. H., and J. P. have not, nor hath either of them, delivered or paid over to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish for the present year, although more than ten days have elapsed since the same was so submitted and allowed, and that the sum of is due from them upon their said accounts: These are, therefore, in her Majesty's name, and by virtue of the statute in that case made and provided, to will and require you, the said L. M. and N. O., the present churchwardens, and P. Q. and R. S., the pre- sent overseers of the poor of the said parish of or some or one of you, to levy the said sum of so due from the said R. P., J. H., and J. P., upon their said accounts, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said R. P., J. H. and J. P., or either of them, rendering to them the overplus; and for want of such distress, that you, or some or one of you, do certify the same unto us, to the end there may be such further proceedings therein as by law is required.

5. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, &c.

Given under our hands and seals, at in the said county of Devon, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

p. 385.

101. Notice of appeal against allowance of overseers' accounts(a).

To A. B. and C. D., Churchwardens [or "late Churchwardens"], and E. F. and G. H., Overseers [or, "late Overseers"] of the Poor of the parish of in the county of and to I. K. and L. M., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county.

I, N. O, an inhabitant of the said parish of in the said county of and rated and assessed in and by a rate or assessment, towards the relief of the poor of the said parish, for the year during which the said A. B. and C. D. and E. F. and G. H. acted as overseers of the poor of the said parish, do hereby give you, and each and every of you, notice that I intend to appeal, and shall appeal at the next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden at in and for the said county of against a certain account of you the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, and alleged to have been allowed by you the said I. K. and L. M. as such justices as aforesaid, on the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one last past; and my causes and grounds of appeal, &c. against the said accounts and the said supposed allowance thereof are, first, that, &c. [here state the objections to the accounts. See form as to Rate, p. 1344, and as to order of removal, post.]

Dated this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

N. O.

After the usual recital (see post, Order of Removal.)

102. Order of sessions disallowing the accounts of overseers.

On hearing the appeal of T. S., an inhabitant of Bradford, in the county of W., rated and assessed to the relief of the poor of the said parish, during the year ending on 26th day of March last, against the annual accounts of C. S., late one of the churchwardens, E., D., F., three of the late overseers of the said parish, which said accounts had been delivered to the succeeding overseers, pursuant to 17 Geo. II. c. 38, and submitted to L., M., and M., three of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, at a special sessions held for that purpose, on the fifth day of April last, pursuant to the 50 Geo. III. c. 49, and on hearing the witnesses for the appellants and counsel on both sides, the respondents calling no witnesses, this court doth order that the following charges, entered by the said churchwardens and overseers in their said accounts, or payments by them, be wholly disallowed; that is to say—

By W. T.'s bill of costs as by order of sessions - - -	£87	6*s.*	0
By J. B., as per bill of costs for defending an appeal -	103	16	10 which said charges amount together to the sum of 191*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.* And this court doth order the said C. S. and E. D. and F. forthwith on notice of this order to pay the said sum of 191*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.* to the present churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, or some or one of them, to be by them carried to the account of the rate for the relief of the poor of the said parish, and paid, applied, and accounted for, according to law; and this court does further order the sum of 74*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.* shall be paid by the said respondents to the said appellant, for and towards his costs incurred in this appeal. By the Court.

(a) See 41 Geo. III. c. 23, s 4, ante, 256.

VI. Forms relating to Apprentices.

6. Forms relating to Apprentices.

See forms prescribed by 28 Geo. III. c. 48, schedule, ante, 608.

103. Form of indenture of binding apprentice to a chimney-sweeper, and of approbation thereof by justices.

See form prescribed by 32 Geo. III. c. 57, schedule B., ante, 611.

104. Form, in parish indenture, of order of two justices, directing a parish apprentice to continue with widow of master.

See form prescribed by 32 Geo. III. c. 57, schedule C., ante, 611.

105. Form of like order by a separate instrument.

See form prescribed by 32 Geo. III. c. 57, schedule D., ante, 612.

106. Form of assignment of a parish apprentice with the consent of two justices by indorsement on the indenture or counterpart.

Idem, schedule E., ante, 612.

107. Form of like assignment by a separate instrument.

FORM FOR REGISTERING APPRENTICES, GIVEN BY STATUTE, ante, p. 612.

108. Form of register of every apprentice to be kept by overseers.

Number.	Date of Indenture.	Name of the Apprentice.	Sex.	Age.	His or her Parent's name.	Their residence.	Name of persons to whom bound or assigned, as the case may be.	His or her Trade.	His or her Residence.	Term of the Apprenticeship or Assignment	Apprentice or Assignment Fee.	Overseers, Parties to the Indenture or Assignment.	Magistrates assenting.
													(To be signed by themselves.)

p. 617.

109. Assignment of apprentice on removal of the master from the county, or forty miles from the parish.

County of Devon, to wit. } Whereas the master of the apprentice in the within indenture mentioned, is about to quit his present residence at in the county of Devon, and to remove out of the same county of [or, forty miles from the place of residence] where the said was bound apprentice, and has given fourteen days' previous notice, in writing, to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of (a) And whereas the said the apprentice, as also the said and the overseers of the poor of the said parish of did on the day of the date hereof appear before us, the justices aforesaid, and upon inquiry we

(a) The parish in which the apprentice resides at the time of removal.

6. Forms relating to Apprentices.

do find (a) And we, the said justices, do hereby order that the said the apprentice aforesaid, may (b) And we do further order that the said the former master of the said do pay to the intended new master of the said the sum of as and for the expense of assigning or binding of the said apprentice to the said as aforesaid, being, in our judgment, a reasonable part and proportion of the original apprentice fee, paid to the said on h being bound an apprentice to the said

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six.

[To be signed by the churchwardens, overseers, and parties.]

---

p. 616.

110. Justices' order to bind a poor apprentice within forty miles, under 56 Geo. III. c. 139.

County of to wit. } Whereas G. H. and I. K., the overseers of the poor of the parish of L. in the county of have, on this day of in the sixth year of the reign of our sovereign Lady Queen Victoria, at the parish of in the said county, brought before us, A. B. and C. D., two of her Majesty's justices assigned to keep the peace in, and acting in and for the said county of O. P., a poor child of the age of (c) ten years and upwards, belonging to the said parish of in the said county, and whose parents, M. P. and N. P., are not able to maintain such child: and the said G. H. and I. K., as such overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, have proposed to us, the said justices, to bind such child to be an apprentice to one Y. Z., of the parish of in the county of and residing within the distance of (d) miles from the parish and place to which the said child belongs, and as an apprentice with him the said Y. Z. to dwell and serve until the said O. P. shall attain the age of years (e) according to the statutes in such case made and provided: And whereas we, the said justices, having inquired into the propriety of binding such child apprentice to the said Y. Z., and having particularly inquired and considered whether such person doth reside or have his place of business within a reasonable distance from the place to which such child doth so belong as aforesaid, having regard to the means of communication between such places, and whether any circumstances make it fit in the judgment of us, the said justices, that such child should be placed apprentice at a greater distance. (f) And whereas the parents of the said O. P. reside at near to the parish of L., we have particularly inquired of them as to the distance of the residence and place of business of the said Y. Z. from the parish of L., and having also inquired into the circumstances and character of the said Y. Z., we, the said justices, upon such examination and inquiry, do think it proper that such child should be bound apprentice to the said Y. Z. Now therefore we, the said justices, do declare that the said Y. Z. is a fit person to whom the said O. P. may be properly bound apprentice as aforesaid; and we do, therefore, hereby order that the said G. H. and I. K., the overseers of the parish of aforesaid, are at liberty to bind such child apprentice accordingly.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

p. 616.

111. Allowance of the indenture by justices (g.)

We, A. B. and C. D., esquires, whose names are hereunder written, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of (whereof one is of the quo-

(a) Here insert whether the apprentice is to continue with his master in another parish, or whether to be assigned or discharged.

(b) Here insert as above.

(c) The child's age must exceed nine years.

(d) If in another county, insert forty.

(e) Or, if a female, add, or until the time of her marriage, which shall first happen.

(f) If the father and mother be examined, state so; if dead, omit all that part which relates to the examination of the parents as to the distance of the intended master's residence.

(g) The clause within the brackets is necessary whenever the binding parish is different from that in which the apprentice is to be bound.

rum), do consent to the putting forth O. P., of as an apprentice, according to the intent and meaning of this indenture; [it having been proved upon oath before us, that due notice, in writing, has been given by the overseers of the poor of the parish of (the parish binding such apprentice), to the overseers of the poor of the parish of (the parish in which such apprentice is to serve), of such binding being intended] [or it having been admitted by A. B., present before us, and one of the overseers of the parish of that he had received due notice, in writing, of the intended binding,] and do sign this our allowance of such apprenticeship before the same hath been executed by any of the other parties thereto, in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided. 6. Forms relating to Apprentices.

Dated this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

Signed, sealed, and delivered, in the presence of } I. K. L M.

A. B.
C. D.

---

112. Indenture of apprenticeship.

This indenture, made the day of in the first year of the reign of our sovereign lord William the Fourth, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, defender of the faith, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, Witnesseth, that R. S. and T. V., churchwardens of the parish of in the county of and W. X. and Y. Z., overseers of the poor of the said parish (by and with the consent of two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of whose names are in the margin of this indenture subscribed, and also by and with the consent of and two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of whose names are also in the margin of this indenture subscribed, and by virtue and in pursuance of an order in writing hereon indorsed, made by and under the hands and seals of the said and justices of the peace of the said county of in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided, bearing date the day of instant, (a) have put and placed, and by these presents do put and place aged fourteen years, or thereabouts, a poor child of the said parish of apprentice to of the parish of in the county of with him to dwell and serve, from the day of the date of these presents, until the said apprentice shall accomplish his full age of twenty-one years, (b) according to the statute in that case made and provided: During all which term the said apprentice his said master faithfully shall serve, in all lawful businesses, according to his power, wit, and ability, and honestly, orderly, and obediently, in all things demean himself towards his said master, and all his, during the said term; And the said for himself, his executors, and administrators, doth covenant and grant, to and with the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor, and every of them, their and every of their executors and administrators, and their and every of their successors for the time being, by these presents, that he the said the said apprentice in shall and will teach and instruct, or cause to be taught and instructed, in the best way and manner that he can; And shall and will, during all the term aforesaid, find, provide, and allow unto the said apprentice, competent and sufficient meat, drink, and apparel, lodging, washing, and all other things necessary and fit for an apprentice: Provided always, (c) that the said last-mentioned covenant on the part of the said h executors and administrators, to be done and performed, shall continue and be in force for no longer time than three calendar months next after the death of the said in case he the said shall happen to die during the apprenticeship, according to the provision of an act passed in the thirty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for the further regulation of Parish Apprentices," and also of another act passed in the fifty-sixth year of his late Majesty, intituled, "An Act to regulate the Binding of Parish Apprentices:" And also shall and will so provide for the said apprentice, that he be not any way a charge to the said or parishioners

(a) An indenture in which the date of the order is omitted is void, p. 677.

(b) If the pauper intended to be bound be a female, the alternative of marriage must be inserted, in pursuance of 18 Geo. III. c. 47, viz. or until she shall marry, as shall first happen.

(c) This provision is prescribed by the schedule, p. 611.

6. Forms relating to Apprentices.

of the same; but of and from all charge shall and will save the parish of harmless and indemnified during the said term.

In witness whereof the parties abovesaid to the present indenture interchangeably have set their hands and seals the day and year above-written.

(L. S.)
(L. S.)
(L. S.)
(L. S.)

---

113. Justices' order for binding apprentice at upwards of forty miles distance.

County of } Whereas G. H. and I. K., the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of have, on this day of in the
to wit. } first year of the reign of our sovereign lord the now King William the Fourth, at the parish of in the said county, brought before us, A. B. and C. D., two of his Majesty's justices assigned to keep the peace, acting in and for the said county of and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed in the said county, O. P. a poor child of the age of ten (a) years and upwards, belonging to the said parish of in the said county, and whose parents M. P. and N. P. are not able to maintain such child; and the said G. H. and I. K. as such overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, have proposed to us the said justices, to bind such child to be an apprentice to one Y. Z. of the parish of in the county of he the said Y. Z. residing (b) out of the same county of aforesaid, at a greater distance than forty miles from the parish of aforesaid, to which such child so belongs as aforesaid; and the said parish of to which such child so belongs as aforesaid, being also more than forty miles from the city of London, and as an apprentice with him the said Y. Z. to dwell and serve until the said O. P. shall come to the age of years (c) according to the statutes in such case made and provided: And whereas we, the said justices, having now here inquired into the propriety of binding such child apprentice to the said Y. Z., and having particularly inquired and considered whether the place of business [or residence] of the said Y. Z. is within a reasonable distance from the place to which such child doth so belong as aforesaid, (having regard to the means of communication between such places.) (d) And having particularly inquired of G. H. and I. K., the parents of the said child, as to the said distance of the residence [or place of business] of the said Y. Z., and the means of communication therewith; having also now here inquired into the circumstances and character of the said Y. Z. And whereas also we, the said justices, have now here particularly inquired into and considered the grounds for allowing of the apprenticing of such child to the said Y. Z, so residing and having an establishment in trade, at a greater distance than forty miles from the said parish and place to which such child so belongs as aforesaid, we do hereby find the grounds following; that is to say, (e) And whereas also, on such examination and inquiry, we, the said justices, think it proper that such child should be bound apprentice to the said Y. Z., notwithstanding he the said Y. Z. resides (f) Now, therefore, we the said justices do declare, that the said Y. Z. is a fit person to whom the said child may be properly bound as apprentice as aforesaid; and we do therefore hereby order and direct that the said G. H. and I. K, the overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, being the place to which such child doth belong, shall be and are at liberty to bind such child apprentice accordingly.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

(a) The child's age must exceed nine years.

(b) Or according to the facts, having an establishment in trade at which it is intended such child should be employed.

(c) Or, if a female, add, or until the time of her marriage, which shall first happen.

(d) If father and mother examined, state this, or if dead, say so; if not examined, omit the passage.

(e) Here set out the reasons, according to the fact, thus: because it appears to us, that there is no person within the said distance of forty miles, to whom such child may be properly bound apprentice, &c.

(f) Or, according to the facts, has an establishment in trade at a greater distance than forty miles from the said parish and place to which the said child belongs as aforesaid.

This form it seems must be prescribed by the commissioners, and the following might be adopted :—

6. Forms relating to Apprentices.

Whereas, before the making of the above indenture, the Poor Law Commissioners for England and Wales have ordered the following rules to be observed in apprenticing the children of poor persons, that is to say [here set out the rules, &c.] and which said rules are now in force; we the said A. B. and C. D., justices as aforesaid, [or one justice] having duly inquired, do hereby certify that the said rules have been in all respects duly complied with.

114. Form of certificate by justices that the rules of the commissioners have been complied with.

Signed,

VII. Forms relating to Removals.

Page 121.

114a. Form of order of removal of Irishmen, &c. By Statute.

To the constable of the parish of in the county of to wit. } Whereas complaint hath been made by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, [township, &c., as the case may be,] in the said county of unto us, whose names are hereunto set and seals affixed, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said county (one being of the quorum), that a person born in Scotland [or Ireland, or the Isle of Man, or Scilly], hath become and is now actually chargeable to the said parish, [township, &c., as the case may be] : and whereas upon examination of the said taken upon oath before us (which examination is hereto annexed), it doth appear and we do adjudge, that the said hath not gained a settlement in England, and that he hath a wife named and children, videlicet, neither of which children have gained any settlement in England.

These are therefore to require you the said constable of the aforesaid, in the county of aforesaid, to convey said his wife and family aforesaid, to Scotland [or Ireland, or the Isle of Man, or Scilly], in the manner directed by the justices of the said county of in pursuance of the provisions of a certain act made and passed in the fourth year of the reign of king William the Fourth, intituled [here set out the title of the act].

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-

[Here copy the regulations, &c., of the justices at sessions, as applicable to the removal of the party.]

---

115. Form of examination of Irish, &c. By Statute.

to wit. } The examination of taken on oath before us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the county, [riding, city, borough, town corporate, division, or liberty] aforesaid, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty- who on oath said, that according to the best of his [or her] knowledge and belief he [or she] was born in in that part of the united kingdom called Scotland, [or Ireland, or in the Isle of Man, or Scilly,] which he [or she] left about years ago, and hath done no act whereby to gain a settlement in that part of the united kingdom called England, and hath actually become and is now chargeable to the [parish] of in the county, [township, &c., as the same may be] of [and that he hath a wife named and children, neither of which children have gained a settlement in England.]

Sworn the day and year first above written, before us, }

---

116. Information of overseers in order to remove a pauper.

County of } The information and complaint of G. H. and I. K. churchwardens, and L. M. and O. P. overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of unto us, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of one being of the quorum, who say that E. F., late of the parish of in the county of labourer, hath lately come into their said parish of not having obtained any legal settlement there, and hath become chargeable thereto. And that the last legal settlement of the said E. F. is in the said parish of in the said county of and that he ought by law to be sent thereunto, and they pray that justice may be done in the premises.

to wit. }

Dated this day of

L. M.
O. P.

7. Forms relating to Removals.

117. Summons to the overseers of the parish to which it is intended to remove a pauper, to show cause against the order of removal. (a)

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the parish of and to each and every of them.

County of } You are hereby required to appear (if you shall think fit) before such of her Majesty's justices of the peace, for the said county of to wit. } as shall be at the house of in in the said county of known by the sign of the Red Lion, at the hour of in the noon of the same day, to show cause why E. F., a pauper, actually chargeable to the parish of in the said county, should not be removed from the said parish of to your said parish of in the county of

Given under my hand and seal this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-

A. B., Justice of the said County.

---

118. Warrant of two justices to bring a pauper before them, and be examined as to his settlement. (b)

To the Constable of the parish of to wit. } Forasmuch as complaint hath been made before us, A. B. and C. D., two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of in the county aforesaid, that E. F., now resident in the said parish of hath come to inhabit in the said parish, not having gained any legal settlement therein, nor produced any certificate owning him [or her] to be settled elsewhere, and that the said E. F. hath become chargeable to the said parish of and that his [or her] last legal settlement is the parish of in the said county.

These are therefore to require you to bring the said E. F. before us to be examined concerning the place of his [or her] last legal settlement, and to be dealt with according to law. Herein fail you not.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

119. Summons to the pauper, to show cause against his removal.

To in the parish of in the county of County of } This is to summon you to appear (if you think proper) before us and such other of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of to wit. } as shall be present at on the day of at the hour of in the noon of the same day, to show cause why you, the said who have come to inhabit in the parish of and have become chargeable to the same without having gained a legal settlement therein, or producing a certificate acknowledging yourself to be settled elsewhere, should not be removed from the said parish of in the said county, to your said parish of as the place of your last legal settlement.

Given under our hands this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

A. B.
C. D.

VIII. Forms of Examinations.

120. The heading of each examination.

Devonshire, } The examination of J. S., labourer, taken before the undersigned A. G. and L. T., two of her majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said to wit. } county of upon the complaint of the overseers of B., in the said county of Devon, touching the chargeability and settlement of M. N. and his family, who on his oath saith—

J. S.

(Signed) A. G.
L. T.

(a) This summons is not necessary, but it is recommended in cases where the settlement is doubtful, by which the expense attending an appeal may be very often saved.

(b) This may be issued by one justice to bring the pauper before two.

8. Forms of Examinations.

CHARGEABILITY.

121. Examination of the relieving officer.

I am the relieving officer of the Union. I know the pauper. He has lately come to inhabit and settle in the parish of within the said union, on the day of . He applied to me as relieving officer of the parish to give him relief. I found that he was destitute, and I gave him four loaves of bread (a) for himself, his wife, and four children, viz., Anne, James, William and Mary. Since that time they have continued to receive the same weekly, at the expense of and chargeable to the said parish.

122. Examination of the master of the workhouse.

The parish of A. is one of the united parishes within the T. Union. I am master of the workhouse of that union. I know the paupers. They are now supported by the parish of A. in the workhouse, and have been since the day of The said parish of A. is charged with and defrays the expenses of the relief so given to them.

123. Certificate of chargeability, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, s. 7. P. 1287.

This is to certify, that on the day of became chargeable to the parish of Bampton, in the Tiverton Union, in the county of Devon. In token whereof I, the presiding chairman of the board of guardians of the said union, by which board the laws for the relief of the poor were, and still are, administered in the said parish, have signed, and I the clerk of the said board, have countersigned this certificate, and we have affixed the common seal of the said board hereunto, at a meeting held this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty

A. B. Chairman.

Clerk to the Guardians (b).

Witness.

124. Certificate of chargeability. By Statute. P. 1310.

The board of guardians of the poor of the union [or parish of] do hereby certify, that on the day of A. B. and his wife C. B., and his child E. B., became chargeable to the parish of in the said union [or to the said union].

In testimony whereof the common seal of the said guardians is hereunto affixed at a meeting of their board this day of , 18

Signed, W. J., Presiding Chairman of the said board.

Countersigned, C. D., Clerk [or, acting as Clerk] to the board of guardians of

(L. S.)

125. Form of examination when the settlement relied on is that of Birth.

I produce a copy of the register of births for the parish of A. in the county of . I have examined the same with the original which I saw in the custody of the Rev. W. B. officiating minister of that parish. It is a true copy. [Set it out verbatim.] I know the pauper. He was the lawful son of John and Mary , who lived together as man and wife, and were always reported to be so. At the time stated in the register, John and Mary were resident in the said parish. They had been so for some time before and after, and I have no doubt, therefore, the pauper was born in the said parish.

I am the father of the pauper. He was born in the parish of about twenty three years ago. I cannot tell where I was born. I have never received any parish pay except when resident in the parish that gave it to me. I never did any act to gain a settlement, and I do not know where my settlement is. I do not know where my wife was born.

126. Settlement by Marriage.

I know the pauper. She is the wife of John . They lived together as man and wife, and were reputed to be such. John was legally settled in the parish of A. [Then state his settlement].

[If the wife is deserted, and is about to be removed to her maiden settlement, after stating as above]

(a) Reg. v. Bickington, p. 1054.

(b) By 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, s. 66, no proof of the signature or seal is required, nor of the official character of the persons signing.

8. Forms of Examinations.

"The pauper previous to her marriage was called Mary . She was born in the parish of A." [Then the evidence as before of a birth or other settlement.]

127. Examination of the wife.

I am the wife of John . When I was a single woman I was married to him on or about the day of at the parish church of . I have by him children, viz. M. aged ten, &c. My husband left me about a year ago, and I have not heard of him since, nor do I know where he is. I am unable to support myself or my children. I do not know where my husband was born, nor do I know where his place of settlement is, nor if he has any. I received from the relieving officer on the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four loaves of bread for myself, having applied to him for the same.

128. Derivative settlement, stating pauper not to have been emancipated.

I am the son of John and Mary Thomas. My father occupied a farm in the parish of M., in the county of D. It was called Combe, and he rented it under M. B. for three years. His last year ended on Lady-day, 1844. He resided in the parish all the time. [This must be proved strictly. See Precedents, "Settlement," and "Tenement."]

When I was sixteen years of age, I hired myself as a servant to Wm. Viccing, of B., in the said county. I lived with him ten months, and then went back to my father, and staid there for one year. I then went as a servant to Mrs. H., of T., in the same county, and lived with her about eleven months. I worked about for other people for some time, and on the 1st January 1844, I went again to my father, and lived with him in the house until 1st May 1844, when I became of age. I was not, nor had ever been, married at that time. I have done no act to gain a settlement for myself. I am not aware of my father having at that time any other settlement. (a)

129. Hiring and Service.

I am now years of age. When I was about twenty years old, I went to live as a servant with R. A., a farmer living in the parish of in the county of I offered myself to him as a servant in husbandry, and he agreed to take me and give me seven shillings a-week, either party to be at liberty to quit on giving a month's notice. I went into his service on the day of and continued in the same for one whole year.

* When I was so hired, I was unmarried [or widower], without child or children. I served him, and resided in the parish of [all the time, according to the fact], and my year of service was completed before the 14th August, 1834. (b)

General hiring.

I was hired for a year and served the year. At the time of the hiring nothing was said about Sundays, nor the hours I was to work. I was to work for my master generally, and without any exception.

Hiring on trial.

On the day after Christmas, I asked farmer John Hunter, who resided at Gunner's farm, in the parish of A., in this county, if he wanted a servant; he said he wanted a carter, and inquired if I was accustomed to horses. I told him I was. He said I was young, but that I might come on trial for a month, and if he liked me, he would keep me for the year, and give me 6*l.* wages, meat, and board and lodging in his house. I agreed to this, and went into his service the same day, and remained with him till Christmas-day following, when he paid me my wages and I left. Nothing more passed between us, and at the end of the month nothing was said, and I went on. I resided in his house all the time.

I went to live as a servant with J. B., of at Christmas, 1820. I agreed to serve him till Lady-day following for 2*l.*, as a general servant. I lived with him till Lady-day. At Lady-day nothing was said between us, and I continued to live with him as a servant for two years, and he paid me wages, 8*l.* for each year.

*I lived with him as a weekly servant for twenty weeks; at the end of that time, I agreed to serve him as before for a year from that time. I continued with him for thirty-two weeks under that hiring.

130. As to the service. Absence for any time explained.

During the year I was absent from my master for many weeks. I became ill,

(a) As no settlement can now be acquired by service, if the child returns to his parents' home before he is twenty-one he follows the father's settlement, though having lived any length of time in service during his minority, but since August, 1834.

(b) This contract is made in such various ways, that it is impossible to furnish specimens adapted to all cases. But the form from the * must be used in every instance. It must be remembered, that whatever is essential to the settlement must appear on the examination.

and unable to work, and my master sent me to my father's house, in the parish of H. He paid for my board and lodging there. I remained there [nearly two months]. When I was well, I went back to my master's house, in the parish of I., and did not leave him again till my year was up. I slept in my master's house for the last month [or day] of my year, [or, till my year was up]. I slept at my father's said house for more than forty days during my illness. 8. Forms of Examinations.

I served him the whole year, except the three last days. My master gave me leave to go and see my friends, before I went into another service. He paid me all my wages.

---

131. Apprenticeship.

When I was ten years of age, I was living with my father, in the parish of A. My father was a poor man, and unable to maintain his family. About that time I went with him to the overseers of the said parish, and they informed me that I should be bound out as an apprentice. After this, I went before the magistrates at The overseers of the parish were there, and a paper was drawn out and signed. Shortly after this, I was sent by the overseers to Thomas Ley, who resided in that parish, and occupied a farm there called Benbow. I served him as his apprentice from that time until I was twenty-one years of age. I was always treated by him as his apprentice, and he often called me so. I received no wages, and never made any agreement with him for service. He found me in clothes, &c. I resided in his house almost the whole time, and I slept there on the last day before I came of age. I left him without any notice. My master and I talked on the subject, and he told me several times that I should be out of my time on the day I left him. I never, during my apprenticeship, slept for forty days in any other parish. I never had possession of the indenture of apprenticeship. The other farmers of the parish often spoke to me as Farmer Ley's apprentice.

Settlement by apprenticeship.

If the deed is not produced, the examination must show the search made for it. If a parish apprenticeship :—

I am the overseer of the parish of Bampton. I know [pauper]. I was present when he was bound out by an indenture by our parish as an apprentice to J. L., of our parish. I have searched the parish chest, and cannot find the indenture. All the parish deeds, books, and other papers, are kept in that chest. None of the churchwardens and overseers keep any of the parish books or papers. I have inquired of all my brother officers, and I can find no such indenture. I have not got it, though I have searched for it. The indenture was allowed by two justices of the peace.

Search for Indenture.

The wife or executor of master to show a search for the indenture.

I am the wife of L. J., of the parish of My husband died six years since. I have all his papers. I have searched among them for the indenture of [pauper]. I cannot find it; and if he ever had any, I believe it is lost. The pauper lived with my husband as an apprentice for many years, and always slept in our house at .

Examination of the attesting witness.

The relation of master and apprentice must be created by DEED.

If the deed is produced, then the examination will be :—

I am the attesting witness to this indenture of apprenticeship, now produced, and bearing date the day of 1844. On that day I saw A., B., C., and D., the churchwardens and overseers of Bampton, sign and deliver that deed; at the same time I also saw E. and F., two justices of the peace, allow the same under their hands and seals, as now appears in the indenture. The indenture is as follows: [Set it out at length.]

His absence accounted for.

If the attesting witness is absent :—

I have made inquiry for A. B., *attesting witness to the indenture now produced. I have inquired at his late residence in and I hear that he has left this kingdom. I have made other inquiries for him, and I believe he is not within this county, and I am wholly unable to procure his attendance. * I am well acquainted with his writing, and I believe the words* 'John Souter,' in the said indenture, to be his handwriting.

If he is dead,

I knew A. C., the attesting witness to the indenture now produced. He died on the 1st May last. [Then state the signature.]*

8. Forms of Examinations.

132. In cases where the service has been with another master.

Before my time was out, when I was about fifteen years of age, my master agreed, in my presence, with M., that I should serve him as an apprentice for the remainder of my time, and I did so; and during all that time I resided with M. in the parish of N., as his apprentice; and never returned to my former master, and slept in the parish of A. till after I was out of my time.

133. If a parish apprentice serves with another master.

I was again taken before the justices at on The overseer of the parish of A., my master, and M., were present, and my indentures, as I understood, were produced, and they all signed them, and I went and lived with M. as his apprentice from that time.

134. By renting or occupying a tenement under 13 & 14 Car. II.

In the year 1818 I took a house, No. 1, Waterloo Place, of J. T. It was in the parish of A., and of the yearly value of 10*l.* I occupied it for more than forty days. I resided in the said parish during all that time. In 1818 I took several tenements, and occupied them together; they were worth 10*l. a year. One of them was situate on* Bampton Downs, and belonged to J. G, value 4*l.* At the same time I occupied some potato ground of J. G. on his farm, which was of the yearly value of 3*l.* This was in the parish of S. I also agreed with him that he should find me a cow, which was to be fed exclusively on pasture land on his farm in the said parish, and that was of the yearly value of 8*l.* All these I occupied and held together, and for more than six months, and during that time I resided in the said parish. All this was before the year 1819. I have never lived since more than ten miles from the said tenements, or from the said parishes, or either of them.

135. Coming to settle on a tenement under 59 Geo. III.

At Lady-day, 1840, I bonâ fide rented of James Thomas of Bampton, in this county, a house and five acres of land, situated in the village of Morebath, in the said county.

The house was a separate and distinct house.

I agreed to give the sum of 10*l.* a year for the same, and to pay all rates and taxes. (a)

I took it for the term of one whole year.

I held the house, and occupied the land for the said year.

On the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, I paid my landlord the whole rent of 10*l.* for the year.

I resided during all the time in the house in the parish.

(b) I paid the poor rates assessed on me, in respect of the house and land, for one year.

I have never lived more than ten miles from the said house or land, or from the said parish since.

136. Renting a tenement under 6 Geo. IV. & 1 Will IV.

At Lady-day, 1840, I bonâ fide rented of J. T. of B., in the county of D., a house and three acres of land, situated in the village of M., in the said county.

The house was a separate and distinct dwelling-house [or building].

The rent I agreed (c) to give was 15*l.* a year, and I took it for one whole year [actually occupied].

Under such yearly renting I occupied (1 Will. IV.) the house and land for a whole year.

On the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, I paid the amount of 10*l.* of the said yearly rent.

I resided during all the time in the house in the parish.

I paid the poor rates assessed on me, in respect of the said house and land, for the whole year.

I have never since ceased to inhabit within ten miles from the said house or land, or from the said parish.

137. Settlement by estate, not by purchase. By heir at law.

My father, H. B., lived on an estate of his own in Morebath parish, in this county. It was a house and land called Surridge. I have seen him vote as a

(a) This is not essential.

(b) This is required by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 66, and although that section is not applicable to a settlement by rating, in every settlement, by occupying a tenement, since that statute, it will be necessary to prove some rating: see, therefore, that head, post.

(c) If there is an agreement in writing, it must be produced, or its absence accounted for. See form, "Settlement by Apprenticeship."

freeholder for the county in respect thereof. He never paid any rent. Whilst still in possession thereof, on the day of 1844, he died, and left no will. [I was his eldest son, and as such took possession of the said estate, and resided thereon for forty days, and for more than a year,] and I then sold it [or, within a month after I became possessed, I agreed to sell it] to A. B., but the conveyance was not executed till more than forty-one days after it was dated. 8. Forms of Examinations.

I have never since ceased to inhabit within ten miles from the said house and land, or from the said parish.

I was one of his three daughters, his only children, and I and my husband, and one of my sisters, continued to reside on the estate for more than forty-days, even for five years. I claimed one-third of it as my own. By a co-heiress.

In January 1844, my father died, possessed of a house and land as his own, in called He never paid any rent. He made his will, and gave the same to myself and two sisters, equally between us, and we continued to reside in the same for more than forty days after his death, even for several years. We then joined together and sold it, and each of us had one-third of the money. We never paid any rent. 138. By devisee.

I have never since ceased to inhabit, within 10th July, from the said house and land, or from the said parish of .

If it is a devise of a freehold interest, not merely of a term of years, the original will must be produced, and execution proved. If it is a term of years, the probate is good evidence of that.

This is a most expensive process. It may be possibly obviated by giving the parish notice to produce the rate-book, and if the party is there rated as owner, this will be good evidence thereof against such parish. The form then might be :

I am overseer of the parish of Morebath. I produce the poor rate-book of 1814. There is this entry in it :—

Owner.	Occupier.	Name of Farm.
A. B.	C. D.	——

[Set out the rate as to him within the column, showing the payment.]

If the rate-book is not produced, proceed as follows :—

On the day of 1844, I served J. C., one of the overseers of Morebath, with a copy of this notice.

[Notice to produce the rate.]

Then call some one who has seen the rate :—

I have seen the poor-rate for the parish of M., and J. C. is there described as the owner of S. estate for several years.

The precedents respectively relating to the devisee or heir of a freehold may be used, with this addition :— 139. By devisee or heir of copyhold.

I am the steward of the manor of Chard, in the county of Somerset. I produce the court rolls of the manor. In 1820 S. L. was admitted to a copyhold on the manor. The following is the entry [copy it]. In 1840 S. L. was admitted as son and customary heir, and the following is the entry as to his admission. The parish of Winsham is parcel of the said manor.

I [the pauper] am the person alluded to in that entry. I was present at the court, and admitted, and have since attended the manor courts in respect thereof, and served on the jury there. I resided for more than forty days, i. e. about ten years, in the parish of Winsham, in the said manor.

G. T., who was a distant relative of mine, was possessed of some land in the parish of M., in the county of at the time of his death in 1844. He made a will, and gave all his lands to L. M., in trust. The trust was, to pay the rents and profits of the land to me and my two sisters, until it was sold. I resided in the same parish after his death for more than forty days, i. e. for two years. At the end of the two years the trustee sold the land, and I received my share of the money, viz. £ . A. B. purchased it. 140. By cestui que trust.

I am the attesting witness of the deed now produced. It is a release in fee by L. M., as trustee under the will of G. F. It recites [here recite the particulars relating to the trust], and then conveys the whole in fee to A. B. I saw a portion of the money paid to the pauper in 1844, when the deed was executed.

8. Forms of Examinations.

141. By a schoolmaster in respect of land attached to his office.

My father was for many years the schoolmaster of the parish of M. in the county of D. As such he was entitled to 10*l. a year for his life, charged upon and payable out of the lands called* Ashton Farm, in that parish. He received the same every year whilst living in the parish. M. B is now the owner of the said farm, and I have inquired of him for the deed settling the money on the schoolmaster, and he informs me that it is a very old transaction, and that he has no papers relating to it. In the church is a painted board, fastened against the wall, signed by J. K., churchwarden, 1824, which is in these words [ ]. (a)

142. By executor of a tenant for years.

My uncle, James Brown, rented an estate from year to year of L. B., in the parish of in the county of . It was called West Park. His tenancy began and ended at Lady-day. On the 12th August 1844, he died, still in possession of the farm as such tenant. He made a will, and I was one of his executors; as such I took possession of the farm, the stock, and went to reside in the house, and continued there for more than forty days, viz. for four years. I paid the rent out of the funds left by my uncle.

I have never ceased to inhabit within ten miles of the said house and land, or of the said parish of .

143. By marriage with the tenant from year to year.

I knew Ann Lovelace. She was a tenant from year to year of a farm called West Park, in the parish of in the county of belonging to W. C., esq. I remember her marriage with L. G., the father of the pauper. They were married in 1840, whilst she was the tenant and occupier of the farm. He went to reside at the farm with her, and continued there more than forty days after the marriage, viz. for six years.

144. Mortgagor.

A mortgagor, before he mortgaged his estate, must have acquired it by descent or purchase.

If by descent, state his title as heir or devisee, and if by purchase (in its legal sense) state the will, ante. If by purchase (in its ordinary sense) then as 150.

145. Mortgagee.

[He is a purchaser, and the consideration, therefore, must be more than 30*l.* State the purchase, as 150, post.]

Then add,

By the same deed it was covenanted that the money should be paid on the day of .

The money was not paid on that day, or since.

On the day of 1844, I entered into possession of the said house, and resided in it more than forty days, that is, for three years, when I sold it again.

I have not since ceased to inhabit within ten miles of the said tenement, or of the said parish of

146. By marriage with a purchaser under 30*l.*

In August 1844, I married my present wife, Mary Ley. She was then called Mary Barber. Before our marriage, she purchased a small tenement in the parish of M., in the county of D. I produce the conveyance thereof. It was called by the name of and was No. 7, in Vere-street, in that parish.

The attesting witness.

I am the attesting witness to the deed. I saw it executed by the pauper, his wife, and [the purchaser]. It recited the purchase by N. B. for fifteen pounds, the marriage with the pauper, and then they both convey in fee simple to C. D. I saw the consideration money, ten pounds, paid at the same time to the pauper, and he signed the receipt on the back.

147. Guardian or ward's estate.

My father, J. L., was possessed of a freehold tenement, in the parish of M., in the county of at the time of his death, which happened in 1844. My mother as his widow continued to reside in it and occupy it for more than forty days after my father's death My father left six children besides myself, and my father left no will. My mother acted as guardian for me. She is now dead. My eldest brother was under fourteen years of age, i. e. he was about ten, when my father died.

(a) Such a recognition of the gift is often found in the church, and would be secondary evidence.

8. Forms of Examinations.

---

148. By twenty years' possession.

In the year 1820, I inclosed a piece of waste land on the common in the parish of in the county of I built a small cottage on it in 1821, and resided in it till last year, when I became very poor, and sold it for ten pounds to A. B. I have never paid any rent for the same, nor made any acknowledgment thereof. It was my own until I sold it.

I have never ceased since to inhabit within ten miles of the said tenement and of the said parish.

---

149. An equitable estate.

On the day of 1844, I made an agreement with J. T., of for the purchase of a tenement, consisting of a cottage and three acres of land, in the parish of in the said county. The agreement was in writing. This is it. [Copy.]

I took possession of it soon after the agreement, and paid him all the money. I kept it for several years, and always resided in it, until I sold it last year.

---

150. By purchase for pecuniary consideration.

In 1830 I purchased a cottage and one acre of land of J. T. It is near the church. [Local situation.]

I paid him thirty pounds as the consideration of such purchase [or, I paid him ten pounds for it, and agreed to pay twenty pounds, for which the premises were at that time mortgaged. I have not paid the mortgage money, but I have paid the interest on the same every year.]

This is the deed by which it was conveyed to me.

[Then call the attesting witness; if there is no deed, the payment and possession may be relied on.]

There were no papers between us, but after I paid the ten pounds, I took possession of the cottage, and resided in it for more than forty days afterwards. Indeed I resided in it till I sold it to J. H. on the day of 1844, when I left it, and he took possession, and since paid all the interest on the mortgage.

---

151. Examination as to relief given.

I am now resident in T., in the county of Somerset, within the W. Union. I have always considered I belonged to the parish of M., in the county of Devon, and about four years since I applied to them for some support. I understood they consented to the same, and for a long time, whilst resident in T., I have received relief, in provisions and money, from A. B., the relieving officer of the parish of T.

Relieving officer.

I am one of the relieving officers of the W. Union. M. is within that union and my district. About four years since, the pauper requested some relief. I inquired into his settlement, and reported the application and statement to the board of guardians. About a fortnight after, I was ordered by the board to give the pauper four shillings a week, and three loaves of bread, as long as he was ill, and to charge the same to the parish of M. I did this for several years. At the end of every quarter, I sent the account to A., the relieving-officer of the T. Union, and he remitted the amount to me.

I am one of the relieving officers of the T. union, and M. is within the union and my district. I produce the accounts sent to me by R. O. I paid them, and charged the same regularly to the parish of M., and the same has been duly paid by the said parish.

---

152. Settlement by office.

On the day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty, I lived in the parish of M. in the county of D. In that year I was duly appointed assistant overseer of the said parish. I produce the appointment. The signatures are those of the rate payers of that parish, and the names of A. B. and C. D., signed thereto, are two signatures of the justices of the peace in and for the said county.

I did for myself, and on my own account, execute the duties of such assistant overseer, in the said parish, during a whole year, from the day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty, to the day of one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

For forty days of that year, and after my said appointment, I resided in the said parish.

8. Forms of Examinations.

At the manor court, held in and for the manor and parish of M. in the county of D., I was appointed as constable of the manor and parish, by the steward of the said court, and the residents of the manor attending the said court. This is the only book in which the appointment is entered. [Set out the entry].

[Then state the execution of the office and residence as above.]

153. Examination as to a former order of removal.

In 1840 I was the overseer of the parish of M. in the county of D. The pauper J. E. was then an inhabitant of our parish, and received relief therefrom in bread and money. Whilst he was so chargeable, I complained to the magistrates thereof, and obtained an order of removal. This is a duplicate original of the same. The signatures are those of A. and C., two justices of the peace for the county of D. Two days after it was signed I took the pauper, his wife Mary, his six children, viz. John, aged six, &c., and delivered them to L., one of the then overseers of the parish of T. At the same time I delivered them an original order of removal, signed by the said justices.

There never was any appeal against the said order.

154. Examination of pauper.

I have heard what the overseer has said. I was the person removed, as he has stated. The overseer of T. received me, and put me into a house for a short time. The relieving officer of the parish then came to me, and, for three months, gave me weekly relief in money and provisions. I then got well, and after having staid in T. two years, I returned to my old place at M. to work, where I have resided ever since, and am now unable again to maintain myself, and have applied to the parish for relief.

155. Settlement by being rated.

In the year 1844 I occupied a house and acres of land, in the parish of A. in the county of B. Mr. B. was my landlord. It is near the turnpike road. During that time I was several times called on by the overseers of the parish for the payment of poor rates in respect of the tenement, and I paid them. At each collection I paid 13*s.* 7*d. At the time I paid it, the overseer told me it was for the poor rate made on me as the occupier. He had what I supposed was the rate-book in his hand. I did not examine it, but took his word for it.*

I resided in the parish more than forty days after each of the said payments.

The above applies when the rate is not produced. Here add :—

I am the overseer of D. On the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, I called on L. the overseer of A. I told him we were about to apply for an order of removal of the pauper to his parish. I asked him if he would allow me to look at the poor rate, and he said he could not. I asked him if he would produce it before the magistrates on this day; he said he could give me no answer to it.

[Then set out a copy of a notice to produce the rate.]

I also produce the overseer's accounts of our parish for the same year. The signature to them is that of the parish officers for that year. The total sum which they charge themselves as having received is 300*l.*, and this includes the sum charged to the pauper, and entered in the book as received.

The overseer who collected this rate is dead.

If the rate is produced :—

I am one of the parish officers of A. This is the poor rate of that parish for the year 1844. In it is the following entry.

[Set out]

The word "PAID" shows it was paid at the date mentioned.

There is a declaration at the foot of the rate signed A., B., C., D., who were the parish overseers in that year. It is as follows :—

The names H. and G., allowing the said rate, are the names and signatures of two justices acting in and for the county of Devon. (a)

156. Notice of chargeability.

This is required to be in writing, and must be signed by a majority of the parish officers ; and the fact of such persons being a majority ought, perhaps, to appear on the face of the notice. Reg. v. Westbury, 1 C. H. & A. 33.

(a) The formalities as to the rate are not material, as the payment of a rate, irregularly made, is sufficient. Some evidence must be given of the payment. If the overseer who received it is dead, the rate may be sufficient.

8. Forms of Examinations.

To the overseers of W. in the county of W. We the undersigned, being the majority of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of M. in the county of D., do hereby give you notice, that R. H. &c. has become chargeable to our parish, and relieved by us, and that an order of two justices of peace for the said county of D. has been duly obtained on our complaint, for their removal to your parish, as the place of their settlement. A duplicate original of the said order, a copy of the examination on which the same was made, and a certificate of their chargeability, are herewith sent. Dated this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-

E. M.
R. W. } Churchwardens,
J. B.
L. M. } Overseers, } of M. aforesaid.
C. N.

157. Lunatic order.

The following was an order made in Reg. v. Holdsworth, ante, 133, 1127.

W. R. of Yorkshire, to wit. } Whereas on 16*th* September, A.D. 1837, Mary Frances Heaton, spinster, a poor person chargeable to the township of Doncaster in the West Riding of the County of York, was deemed to be insane; and whereas the overseers of the said township of Doncaster did bring the said M. F. Heaton before Edmund Denison and William Battie Wrightson, Esqs., two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said West Riding, and the said E. Denison and W. B. Wrightson, so being such justices as aforesaid, did thereupon then and there call to their assistance Edward Scholefield, Esq., Doctor of Medicine, and, upon due examination of the said M. F. Heaton, the said E. Denison and W. B. Wrightson, so being such justices as aforesaid, were then and there satisfied that the said M. F. Heaton was insane, but the place of the legal settlement of the said M. F. Heaton could not be then and there ascertained: And whereas the said E. Denison and W. B. Wrightson, so being such justices as aforesaid, by an order under their hands and seals bearing date the said 16*th* September, A. D. 1837, directed to the overseers of the poor of the said township of Doncaster, did direct the said overseers to cause the said M. F. Heaton to be conveyed to the Riding Lunatic Asylum established in the township of Stanley-cum-Wrenthorpe, in the parish of Wakefield, in the said riding, the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum being a house duly licensed for the reception of insane persons; and the treasurer of the said West Riding was thereby ordered to pay to the treasurer of the said Asylum such weekly sum for the maintenance and care of the said M. F. Heaton, according to the 9 George IV. c. 40, as should from time to time be fixed upon by the visiting justices of the said Asylum: And whereas the said M. F. Heaton was under and by virtue of the said last-mentioned order conveyed by the overseers of the poor of the said township of Doncaster to and placed in the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum, established at the township of Stanley-cum-Wrenthorpe aforesaid, on the said 16*th* September, A.D. 1837, and from thenceforth has been and now is confined therein under the said last-mentioned order; and a certificate from the said E. Scholefield, bearing date 16*th* September 1837, that he had personally examined the said M. F. Heaton, and that she appeared to be of insane mind, was duly delivered by the overseers of the said township of Doncaster to Charles Cæsar Corsellis, the superintendant of the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum, at the time the said M. F. Heaton was placed therein: And whereas we, Joseph Holdsworth and Francis Maude, Esqs., two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said West Riding, did upon the 5*th* December, instant, duly inquire into the last legal settlement of the said M. F. Heaton, and satisfactory evidence was obtained as to such settlement: And whereas the visiting justices of the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum did on the 8*th* January 1838, fix upon the weekly sum of six shillings for the maintenance, clothing, medicine, and care of the said M. F. Heaton, and the same has been paid by the treasurer of the said West Riding: We, the said J. Holdsworth and F. Maude, Esqs., so being such justices as aforesaid, do therefore, upon due proof made before us upon oath, and upon due consideration had of the premises, adjudge that the last legal settlement of the said M. F. Heaton is in the township, parish or place of Doncaster aforesaid: And we do order and direct that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the township, parish and place of Doncaster aforesaid, shall and do, upon notice of this our order, repay unto Ellis Hodgson, the treasurer of the said West Riding, the sum of 19*l.* 4*s. for the maintenance, medicine, clothing and care of the said* M. F. Heaton, in the said Pauper

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Lunatic Asylum, from 16*th* September 1837, to the date hereof, at and after the said rate of six shillings for each and every week: And we do further order and direct that the churchwardens and overseers of the said township, parish or place of Doncaster aforesaid, shall and do pay to C. C. Corsellis, the treasurer of the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum, from the date of this our order, the weekly sum of six shillings for the future maintenance, medicine, clothing and care of the said M. F. Heaton, during her continuance in the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum, or until otherwise ordered according to law.

Given under our hands and seals this 6*th of* December 1838.

J. Holdsworth, (L. S.)
Fran. Maude, (L. S.)

W. R. of Yorkshire. } To the Overseers of the Poor of the Township of Doncaster, in the said Riding.

Whereas it appears to us, Edmund Denison and William Battie Wrightson, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said riding, having called to our assistance Edward Scholefield, Esq. M.D., a physician or surgeon, that Mary Frances Heaton, chargeable to the township of Doncaster, in the said riding, is a lunatic insane or a dangerous idiot, you are hereby directed to cause the said M. F. Heaton to be conveyed to the Riding Lunatic Asylum, established in the township of Stanley-cum-Wrenthorpe, in the parish of Wakefield, in the said riding, the said Pauper Lunatic Asylum being a house duly licensed for the reception of insane persons, and you are hereby ordered to pay to the treasurer of the said Asylum such weekly sum for the maintenance and care of the said M. F. Heaton as shall from time to time be fixed upon by the visiting justices of the said Asylum.

Given under our hands and seals this 16*th day of* September, A.D. 1837.

Edward Denison, (L. S.)
W. B. Wrightson, (L. S.)

The expenses to be charged to the Riding in consequence of Miss Heaton's settlement being unknown.

E. Denison,
W. B. Wrightson.

---

158. General order of removal under 13 & 14 Car. 2 (a).

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of and to the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of and to each and every of them.

County of } Upon the complaint of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, in the said county of unto us to wit. } whose names are hereunto set, and seals affixed, being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of and one of us of the quorum, that his wife their son, aged eight years, and their daughter, aged four years, have come to inhabit in the said parish of not having gained a legal settlement there, and that the said his wife, and and their children, are actually chargeable to the said parish of [or that the said (viz. the pauper) hath been convicted of larceny, or other felony, or is a rogue, vagabond, &c. as it may be]: We, the said justices, upon due proof made thereof, as well upon examination of the said upon oath, as otherwise upon due consideration had of the premises, do adjudge the same to be true; and we do likewise adjudge that the lawful settlement of them the said his wife, and and their children, is in the said parish of in the county of . We do, therefore, require you, the churchwardens and overseers of the said parish of or some one of you, to convey the said his wife, and and their children, from and out of the said parish of to the said parish of and them to deliver to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor there, or to some or one of them, together with this our order, or a true copy thereof, at the same time showing to them the original; and we do also hereby require you, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of to receive and provide for them according to law.

(a) For the form of an order of removal of a certificated person, see post, 1390, form 163.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Victoria.

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

9. Forms relating to Removals.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of in the City of London, and the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of and to every of them.

159. The like in another form in London.

London, } Whereas complaint hath been made unto us, two of her Majesty's jus- to wit. } tices of the peace in and for the city of London and liberties thereof (one being of the quorum), by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of in the city of London, that E. F., of the parish of in the county of and there legally settled, hath lately come to reside in their said parish, not having obtained any legal settlement there, and hath become chargeable thereto, which complaint we, the said justices, upon due proof made thereof, as well upon the oath of the said E. F. as otherwise, do adjudge to be true; and we do also adjudge the last legal settlement of the said E. F. to be in the said parish of in the county of and that thitherto he ought by law to be sent.

These are therefore in her Majesty's name to will and require you, the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of in the city of London, forthwith to remove and convey the said E. F. from and out of your said parish of unto the said parish of in the said county of and him deliver unto the churchwardens and overseers of the poor there, or to some or one of them, together with this our order, who is and are hereby required to receive and provide for him according to law.

Given under our hands and seals, this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-

A. B. (L. S.)
C. D. (L. S.)

---

p. 1084.

Whereas it doth appear unto us and the justices within named, that the pauper [or the husband, or wife, or children] within ordered to be removed, is at present unable to travel by reason of sickness and infirmity [or that it would be dangerous for him so to do, as the facts may be]: We do therefore hereby suspend the execution of the within order of removal, until it shall be made appear unto us that the same may safely be executed without danger.

161. Indorsement suspending an order of removal, to be indorsed on the back thereof, as in ordinary cases.

Given under our hands, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-

A. B.
C. D.

---

p. 1084.

Whereas it hath been now made appear unto us A. B. and C. D. the justices aforesaid, and we are fully satisfied that the within order of removal may be executed without danger: We do therefore hereby order the same to be forthwith put in execution accordingly: And whereas it is duly proved to us upon oath [if the parties have died, say, that the said the pauper above mentioned is dead, and] that the sum of hath been necessarily incurred by the suspension of the within order of removal, we do therefore order and direct the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish of to which parish the said is [was, if the pauper is dead] ordered to be removed, to pay the said sum of to N. P. upon demand.

162. Form of a subsequent permission to execute the order of removal, to be indorsed thereon, and order of payment of the expenses incurred by such suspension. (a)

Given under our hands, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-

A. B.
C. D.

(a) This is the same form that received the approbation of Le Blanc, J., ante, 1086.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the poor of the Parish of in the County of and to the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of in the County of

163. Order of removal of a certificated person back to the certifying parish, he having become chargeable, and to pay costs of removal back.

County of } Whereas complai made by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, in the said county of
to wit. } unto us whose names are hereunto set and seals affixed, being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of (and one of us of the quorum), that A. B., C. B. his wife, E. B. their son, aged eight years, and G. B. their daughter, aged four years, having for some time last past dwelt in the parish of aforesaid, being allowed so to do by reason of a certificate bearing date the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and under the hands and seals of and churchwardens and and overseers of the poor of the said parish of attested by I. K. and L. M., two credible witnesses, and allowed by N. O. and P. Q., esquires, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of according to the directions of the several acts of parliament in such case made and provided, are become chargeable to the said parish: And whereas it appears to us, as well upon the oath of the said A. B. as otherwise, that neither they the said A. B., C. B. his wife, E. B. and G. B. their children, nor any of them, have gained any legal settlement since the date of the said certificate; whereby and upon due consideration had of the premises it appears to us, and we do hereby adjudge, that the said A. B., C. B. his wife, and E. B. and G. B. their children, are become chargeable to the parish of and that the place of the last legal settlement of them, and every of them, is in the said parish of in the said county of : These are therefore to require you, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of or some or one of you, to convey the said A. B., C. B. his wife, and E. B. and G. B. their children, from and out of your said parish of to the said parish of and them to deliver to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor there, or to some or one of them, together with this our order, or a true copy thereof, at the same time showing to them the original: And we do also hereby require you, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of to receive and provide for them as inhabitants of your parish: And we do also hereby order and direct you, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of to reimburse and pay unto the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of the sum of being the amount of the reasonable charges that they, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of have been put unto, in maintaining and removing the said ascertained and allowed by us, the said justices.

Given under our hands and seals, at and in the county aforesaid, this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

R. S. (L. S.)
T. U. (L. S.)

Ante, p. 1093.

164. Record of an order of removal to be filed at the quarter sessions (a).

to wit. } Be it remembered, that on the day of in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord George the Fourth, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, at in the county of R. T., overseer of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, cometh before us, J. C. and S. P., esquires, two of the justices of our said lord the king, assigned to keep the peace of our said lord the king within the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, and of the quorum, and complaineth to us, the said justices, and giveth us to understand and be informed that S. C., son of A. C., aged years, hath come to inhabit and doth inhabit in the said parish of in the county aforesaid, and is become chargeable to the said parish; and that the said S. C. hath not gained any legal settlement within the parish, nor hath produced any certificate owning him the said S. C. to be settled elsewhere, and thereupon he, the said R. T., prayeth our warrant to remove and convey the said S. C. to the parish or place where he, the said S. C., was last legally settled.

And on the said day of in the year aforesaid, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, M. C., grandmother of the said S. C., cometh before us, the justices aforesaid, and upon oath on the holy gospel to her then and there by us the said justices aforesaid administered, deposeth and sweareth, that she the said M. C. had a daughter whose name was A. C., which A. C. was never married, and is now dead, and that she the said A. C. did bear the said S., her son, at the parish of in the county aforesaid, and that the said S. hath been carried and gone about the country ever since in a state of vagrancy, that is to say, wandering and begging, and doth now inhabit in the said parish of with W. C., grandfather of him the said S.

(a) See the law and observations, ante, 1093.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Whereupon, and on due consideration had of the premises, we the justices aforesaid, on the said day of in the year aforesaid, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, do make our warrant under our hands and seals, in the form and words following, that is to say [here set forth the warrant of removal]. And, afterwards, on the day of in the year aforesaid, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the said R. T., overseer of the poor aforesaid, cometh before us, the justices aforesaid, and upon his oath on the holy gospel, to him by the said justices administered, deposeth and sweareth, that on the day of in the year aforesaid, he, the said R. T., did remove and convey the said S. C. from and out of the said parish of to the said parish of and him the said S. C., together with a true copy of our warrant aforesaid, did deliver to O. P., overseer of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, at the parish of aforesaid, in the county aforesaid.

In witness whereof we, the said justices, at aforesaid, in this county aforesaid, the day of in the year aforesaid, to this present record do set our hands and seals.

J. C.
S. P.

[To this record should be annexed the order of removal, confirmed at the sessions, on appeal or not appealed against. And it may be proper to have duplicates, one filed at the sessions, and the other kept by the parish.]

To Y. Z. Constable (or state the occupation of the person appointed) of the parish of in the said county.

165. Deputation of a person to remove a pauper

County of } Whereas, by an order under the hands and seals of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, bearing date the day of instant, the following persons, viz. E. F., Mary his wife, Thomas their son, aged eight years, and Agnes their daughter, aged four years, are ordered to be removed from the parish of in the county of as the place of their last legal settlement. Now we, the undersigned churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of do hereby depute you, the said Y. Z., to convey the persons so ordered to be removed as aforesaid, to the said parish of and them to deliver to some one of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor there, together with the accompanying order of removal.
to wit. }

Given under our hands at aforesaid, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-

N. O. } Churchwardens.
P. Q. }
G. H. }
I. K. } Overseers.
L. M. }

} To the Constable of the parish of in the county of and to wit. } to the Treasurer of the said county.

166. A justice's order to constable to remove a vagrant to his place of settlement in days, and that he be allowed only

Whereas by a pass under the hands and seals of two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of E. F. was ordered to be removed from the parish above-named to as the place of his last legal settlement.

I do therefore hereby order and direct the said person to be conveyed in days' time from the parish of aforesaid, in the county of to the town of in the county of in the way to aforesaid, for which the constable is to be allowed the sum of pounds shillings, and pence, and no more.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Given under my hand this day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-

A. B.

---

167. Receipt of the vagrant by the constable of the parish to which removed, and statement of amount of expenses.

Received of the constable of the parish of in the county of the within mentioned E. F. with his examination and pass, the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-

By me, G. H., Constable of the parish of Conveyance of E. F. in a cart miles at per mile . .

Subsistence days, at per day . . . . . .
Lodging nights, at per night . . . . . .
Constable going before a justice for certificate . . . . . .
Certificate . . . . . .
Toll . . . . . .

Total expense . . . . £

---

168 Information of an overseer of the poor, that the expenses directed to be paid, on taking off the suspension from an order of removal, have been refused, or neglected to be discharged, under 35 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 2.

County of } The information and complaint of G. H., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, made on oath before to wit. } me, A. B., esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty- ;

Who says that by an order under the hands and seals of A. B., and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of and bearing date the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty- E. F., a pauper then actually chargeable to the said parish of was ordered to be removed from the said parish of to the parish of in the county of as the place of his last legal settlement, but the execution of which order of removal was by the said two justices, by indorsement on the said order, suspended for the reason therein expressed; and further, that by a subsequent indorsement on the said order of removal, under the hands of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of bearing date the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty- the said suspension was removed with a permission to execute the said order, and also that it appeared unto them, the said last-mentioned justices, that the sum of had been incurred by the suspension of the said order of removal, and that they, the said last mentioned justices, did therefore order and direct the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of to which parish the said was ordered to be removed, to pay the said sum of to upon demand, which said order of removal has since been carried into execution, and the original order hath been duly served on the said and the said sum demanded of and from him the said one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, by him the said on the day of last, but which was then refused, and has been and still is neglected to be paid, and that no notice of appeal has been given against the said order within three days from the time of making such demand as aforesaid, nor at any time since. The said complainant therefore prays such redress in the premises as to law doth appertain.

Before me, A. B.

---

169. Summons on the foregoing information.

To the Constable of County of } Whereas information and complaint hath been made before me, A. B, esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, on to wit. } the oath of of one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, that by an order [set forth as in the information]. These are therefore to require you forthwith to summon the said to appear before me, A. B., esquire, at in the said county, on the day of at the hour of in the noon of the same day, to answer to the said information and complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. And be you then there to certify what you shall have done in the premises: Herein fail you not.

Given, &c. A. B.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

170. Warrant of distress thereupon.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the said county of County of } Whereas it has been duly made appear unto me, J. P. esquire, one of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of as well upon the oath of O. P., overseer of the poor of the said parish of as otherwise, that by an order under the hands and seals of J. P. and K. P., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of and bearing date the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and A. P., a pauper, then actually chargeable to the said parish of was ordered to be removed from the said parish of to the parish of in the county of as the place of his last legal settlement, but the execution of which order of removal was by the said justices by indorsement on the said order, suspended for the reason therein expressed: And further, that by a subsequent indorsement on the said order of removal under the hands of J. P. and K. P., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of bearing date the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and the said suspension was removed with permission to execute the said order: and also that it appeared unto them, the said last-mentioned justices, that the sum of had been necessarily incurred by the suspension of the said order of removal, and that they, the said last-mentioned justices, did therefore order and direct the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of to which parish the said A. P. was ordered to be removed, to pay the sum of to O. P., upon demand, which said order of removal has since been carried into execution, and the said sum duly demanded of and from N. O., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of aforesaid, by him the said O. P., on the day of last, but which was then refused, and has been and still is neglected to be paid, and that no notice of appeal has been given against the said order within three days from the time of making such demand as aforesaid, nor at any time since: I do therefore hereby require you to levy the money mentioned in the said order, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said N. O., the person refusing or neglecting payment of the same, and also the further sum of [this sum not to exceed forty shillings, according to stat. 35 Geo. III. c. 101, s. 2,] being the costs attending the same. And if within the space of four days next after such distress by you taken, the said respective sums of and shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale that you detain the said respective sums, rendering to the said N. O. the overplus on demand.

Given under my hand and seal the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

---

171. Notice of appeal with notice to produce rate-books, &c.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of and to each and every of them.

We whose names are hereto subscribed, being the majority of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of do hereby give notice to you and every of you, that we do intend at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden at in and for the said county of on the day of instant, to commence and prosecute an appeal against a certain order of A. B. and C. D., two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said county of bearing date on the day of instant, for and concerning the removal of his wife and their son, aged from the parish of aforesaid, to the said parish of

And the following are the grounds of our appeal.

[It may be advisable, where the question of settlement arises from a renting in the respondent's parish, to have the poor's rate book produced to the court: if so, after the words "parish of " add, And we hereby further give you notice to produce, at the hearing of the said appeal at the time aforesaid, all and every the rate book or books belonging to the said parish of wherein are entered and kept the rates paid or payable for the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty up to and including the year one thousand eight hun- dred and thirty and all other papers and writings, relating to or concerning the said rates, during the above years, or any of them, and also the overseer's accounts of the same year.]

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Notice and Grounds of Appeal.

The objections may be classed under five heads:

1. Those arising on the making and service of the order.
2. Those arising from the examination.
3. A pauper may be settled in the appellant parish and not removable.
4. A subsequent settlement.
5. Former order.

Objections arising on the making and service of the order:—

Because no notice in writing of the pauper having been chargeable to or relieved by you, and no copy of the order or examinations upon which such order was made have been sent by you to us, or any of us.

Because the pauper was not chargeable to your parish at the time of your complaint to the justice who made the said order, nor at the time that it was made, nor was any proof given thereof before the said justices.

Because A. B., who is now alive, and is the mother of ten children named in the order, was married to me, M. B., on the day of 1844, and he is now chargeable with the same, and able to relieve them, and such children at the time of making the order, were under the age of sixteen, and were therefore not chargeable to your parish.

Because there is no such parish as that of W., as described in your said order.

Because the said place mentioned in the said order is extra-parochial.

Because the persons named in the said order as the churchwardens and overseers of your parish were not, nor was either of them, duly appointed churchwarden and overseer respectively.

Because the churchwardens and overseers of your parish have no power to interfere in the removal of persons chargeable to your parish.

Because L. H., one of the justices who signed the said order, was one of the churchwardens or overseers of your parish at the time of the said complaint, and could not legally, therefore, make the said order.

Because the said justices had no jurisdiction to make the said order.

Because the justices who signed the said order were not together at the time of making the same, but acted separately therein.

Because the order of removal was not served on our parish within a reasonable time after it was made.

Objections arising from the examination:—

Because the examinations on which the order was made are bad and defective, inasmuch as it does not appear from them that the pauper acquired a settlement in our parish.

Because evidence was given before the justices who made the said order, which is not set out in the copy of the examinations sent to us.

[Because it is not stated in the examinations, or is it true in fact. (a)]

Because it appears by the examination, and was so in fact, that the order was made upon evidence which was not legally admissible for that purpose, inasmuch as A. B., one of the witnesses, was at the time a convicted felon, and that fact was known to the justices; also, that parol evidence was received of a lease [a poor-rate, an indenture, &c.] and the non-production of the written instrument not properly accounted for.

Because the said lease was received in evidence without calling the attesting witness, or accounting for his absence, and without legal proof that it was signed by any of the parties.

Because it does not appear on the face of the said examinations that they were taken or sworn before the two justices who signed the order of removal.

Because the said A. B. was not born in our parish, nor was any legal evidence given thereof before the justices, or set out in the examination.

(a) Many objections to the examination will be similar to those taken to the facts, and, therefore, as to those statements which are imperfect in the examination, and are not true in fact, this general form may be used.

Because, shortly before the birth of the pauper in our parish, her mother had been removed by an order of justices to our parish, which order was afterwards and after the birth of the pauper, quashed on appeal. 9. Forms relating to Removals.

Because the pauper was the child of a person born in Ireland, &c., and who had acquired no settlement in England.

Because the children named in the order are not the lawful children of the said C. and D.

Because the pauper was the lawful child of C. and his wife Sarah, and the said C. was born in the parish of L., in or about the year 1820, and the said Sarah was born in the parish of M., in the county of in or about the year 1830, and because both the said father is lawfully settled in the parish of in the county of whilst the said pauper continued one of his family, and the mother's maiden settlement is in the parish of

Because the said pauper was the illegitimate child of A. B., whose place of settlement is in the parish of and such pauper was born about the 14th August, 1834, and was at the time of making the order, under the age of sixteen, and had acquired no settlement for himself.

Because the pauper had ceased to be a part of his father's family, at the time when his father acquired the settlement stated in his examination.

Because the pauper was not bound as an apprentice by an indenture duly executed by all the parties, nor by any legal instrument. (a) 172. Apprenticeship.

Because no legal evidence was given of the execution of any indenture before the justices who made the said order.

Because, at the time the indenture was made, the pauper was an infant, and before he became of age; and before he resided in our parish for forty days, he elected to abandon the said indenture, the same being for his benefit. (b)

Because the said pauper did not reside in our parish for forty days as an apprentice.

Because the master to whom the pauper was so bound as stated in the examination was resident [has his establishment of business] at the time in the parish of B., and not in the parish of M., in the county of and in a different jurisdiction from that in which the parish of L. [the binding parish] is situate, and the allowance of such indenture was not signed by two justices of the said other jurisdiction, nor was any notice given to the overseers of the said parish of B. of the intention to bind such apprentice, and no proof was given before the justices who signed such indenture of any such notice, nor did any overseer of B. attend such justices and admit such notice.

Because the said master was engaged in the business of a manufacturer of cloth, and A. B., one of the justices who signed the indenture, was at the time engaged in the same business.

Because, before the said justices signed the indenture, they did not inquire into the place of residence, and the circumstances and the character of the said master, nor did they make any order for the binding of such apprentice, nor is such order referred to in the indenture by its real date, or the names of the justices, p. 616.

Because the said child was at the time of making the indenture and the said order under the age of nine years.

Because the said master was a seaman (c) [a fisherman, p. 621, a chimney-sweeper, and such child was under the age of sixteen, p. 620] was a collector of turnpike tolls, 619.

Because part of the expenses of making the said indenture were incurred out of the public parochial funds, and the indenture was not under the seal of any justices, p. 669, 675.

Because the same was not executed by a majority of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of B

Because the said pauper did not serve the said L. M. with the consent of B., his original master.

Because the service of the said pauper with A. B. was without the consent of two justices, p. 617, 718—720.

(a) This will embrace the objection arising on the stamp, as the indenture cannot be received as evidence on the appeal, unless it is duly stamped.

(b) This objection would probably be well sustained by the next ground of appeal, which embraces most of the objections of the service.

(c) These will not apply unless it appear that the indenture to the seaman was made after August, 1834, and that of the chimney-sweeper after August, 1840.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Because, in fact, the pauper did not acquire a settlement in our parish by the hiring and service stated in the examination, or in any other way, as he was not hired for a year (a), nor did he reside in the same service a year.

Because at the time of the alleged hiring, the pauper was not a person unmarried and without a child.

172 a. Hiring and service.

Because, at the time of the alleged hiring, the pauper was not capable of making a contract for service, inasmuch as he was then an apprentice (p. 478) to J. B., of M., in the county of and [a soldier in her Majesty's service, p. 478] [or, liable to serve in the militia [local or general] p. 480, and did not communicate his liability to his said master.]

Because the pauper was not hired as a servant. (b)

Because in fact he was not hired by A. B. as his servant. (c)

Because the hiring was retrospective.

Because he did not reside as such servant in our parish on the last day of the year, nor for forty days during his service.

Because the said pauper did not reside in our parish for forty days as such servant, and within the compass of any one year mentioned in the examination.

173. Marriage.

Because the said A. B. is not the lawful wife of C. D.

Because, at the time the said A. B. rented the tenement as stated in the examination, she was the lawful wife of C. D., and could acquire no settlement for herself.

174. Children.

Because none of the said children are settled in our parish, as they are not the lawful children of A. B. and C. D, and have acquired no settlement for themselves in our parish, nor is any such settlement disclosed in the examination.

Because the said pauper, at the time that his father acquired the settlement, stated in the examination, had ceased to be a part of his father's family, and was then emancipated.

175. Tenement (d).

Because the said A. B. did not hire the tenement in the examination mentioned for the term mentioned in the examination, nor for any term of one whole year.

Because he did not hold the house or occupy the land for one year.

Because he did not pay the rent for the said tenement, nor did he pay to the amount of 10*l.* of the said rent.

Because the whole of the said tenement was not situated in our parish.

Because the said tenement did not consist of a separate and distinct house or building, or land, or of both.

Because he did not reside in our parish for forty days during his tenancy.

Because he was not assessed to the poor-rates of the said parish, nor did he pay poor-rates in respect thereof for any one year that he occupied the tenement.

176. Estate.

Because the said A. B. did not reside in our parish, having at the time any legal or equitable interest in any estate therein, which would confer a settlement.

Because the said A. B. was not the next of kin, or the sole next of kin, of C. D., who died possessed of the said estate in 1844, and to whom the said A. B. succeeds.

Because the said A. B. had in 1842 mortgaged the estate in fee to one C. D., who took possession of the same and rents thereof in 1844; and before the said A. B. had resided forty days in the said parish.

Because the said A. B. did not possess the said estate for twenty years in his own right, but he paid rent for the same to C. D., the lord of the manor of B., and did in 1844 sign a written acknowledgment that he was a tenant of the same.

Because the said A. B., after he had acquired a settlement in our parish, as stated in the examination, ceased to reside within ten miles thereof, inasmuch as in 1844 and subsequent years he resided in the parish of L., in the county of D.

Because the pauper acquired the estate mentioned in the examination by a purchase, and for which he did not bonâ fide pay the price of 30*l.* p. 901.

177. Office.

Because the office mentioned in the examination was not a public annual office.

Because the said A. B. did not serve the office for himself, but as a deputy.

Because the said A. B. did not serve the office for one whole year.

Because he did not reside for forty days in our parish during his year of office.

Because he was not duly appointed to the said office.

178. Rates.

Because the said A. B. was not charged with, nor did he pay, any public taxes in our parish.

(a) This will embrace an exceptive hearing.

(b) This will embrace an agreement for cohabitation, an employment by a person out of charity, &c., as a relative, an agreement to learn rather than to serve.

(c) This refers to a hiring by a gaoler. R. v. Sparsholt, p. 490.

(d) These remarks will generally apply to the settlement by payment of rates since 1819.

Because he was not charged with any taxes in respect of any tenement above the value of 10*l.*

Because the said A. B. was rated and charged to the said rates since the passing of the 59 Geo. III. c. 50, and was not rated in respect of a house and land of the value of 10*l. &c. &c.* (See Forms under TENEMENT.)

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Objections arising to the removal, independent of the settlement.

Because the pauper ought not to have been removed, as we gave you due notice of appeal against the said order, within twenty-one days after notice in writing of such order, and the chargeability of the pauper, were sent to us.

Because the pauper was removed by you to our parish within twenty-one days after such notice in writing had been sent to us, and without any agreement in writing under our hands to submit to such order.

Because, at the time of making the said order, the pauper had not come to settle in your parish, but had met with an accident therein in his passage through the same, and ought not to have been removed.

Because, at the time of making the said order, the pauper was resident in a cottage situated in the village and your parish, and which the said pauper bonâ fide claimed as his own, and to which in fact he was entitled in law or equity.

Because, at the time of making the said order, he was the bonâ fide tenant of a farm called Hayre, in your parish, and was resident therein, and such tenancy still continues. [Qy. Any objection Reg. v. Ampthill, p. 1016.]

Because, at the time of making the said order, the pauper resided with A. B. of Hayne Farm, in your parish, as his hired servant, and which contract of service had not then expired, nor had it been dissolved by the mutual consent of the master and servant.

Because, at the time of making the said order, the pauper was a child of tender years, viz. under the age of seven, and was then resident with her mother in your parish, and ought not to have been removed from her.

Because, at the time of making the said order, the pauper was a married woman, and her husband at that time resident in your parish, and such removal was made without their mutual consent; and because the consent of the wife to be removed without her husband does not appear on the examination.

Because the pauper is the wife of A. B. who was born in Ireland [Scotland, Isle of Man, Jersey, &c.] who has acquired no settlement in our parish, nor in England, nor has the said wife, or any of the children mentioned in the said order gained any settlement in England.

Because at the time of the said order the paupers were not, nor were either of them liable by law to be removed.

A settlement acquired subsequent to that disclosed in the examination.

Because the said pauper after he had acquired a settlement in our parish in the manner stated in the examination, acquired a subsequent settlement in the parish of in the county of inasmuch as the said pauper did on the day f bonâ fide rent a house, &c.

[Whatever be the settlement relied, it must be stated with the same precision and accuracy as is required in the examination. See therefore the precedents, (ante), on the respective heads.]

Because the said pauper since he acquired a settlement in respect of an interest in an estate in our parish as stated in the examination, did cease to reside within ten miles of the same, inasmuch as he went to reside in the parish of in the county in the month of June, one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and resided there for many weeks.

Because the said pauper served the last forty days of his apprenticeship in the parish of B , and thereby acquired a settlement.

Because the said pauper, in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and after his service as an apprentice in our parish, by the consent of his master served H. Y., of the parish of B., in the county of for more than forty days, and did not afterwards and during his apprenticeship reside in our parish.

Because the said pauper A. B. was by virtue of an order [of two justices on the day of one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, removed to your parish as the place of his last settlement, such order was not appealed against, nor has the said A. B. or any of the said paupers acquired a settlement in our parish since the said order.]

9. Forms relating to Removals.

Because the said paupers are the children of A. B. who by virtue of an order, &c. as above [ ] and at the time of the said order the said paupers were, and each of them was, part of the said A. B.'s family.

Former order.

---

179. Notice of trial of a respited appeal against an order of removal.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of the county of and to each and every of them.

Whereas at the last general quarter sessions of the peace holden at [if by adjournment state so] in and for the said county of on the day of last, we whose names are hereto subscribed, being the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of did enter an appeal against a certain order of and two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the said county of bearing date on the day of for the removal of from the parish of aforesaid, to the said parish of and the hearing of such appeal was by the said court of quarter sessions respited until the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden at aforesaid, on the day of instant. Now we, the said churchwardens and overseers of aforesaid, do hereby give you notice that we do intend to prosecute and try the said appeal at the said next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden at aforesaid, for the said county of on the said day of instant.

And the following are the grounds of our appeal. [State the grounds of appeal as in the above precedent.]

A. B.
C. D. } Churchwardens.
E. F.
G. H. } Overseers.

Or any Three Guardians.

---

180. Countermand of notice of appeal.

To the Churchwardens &c.

Gentlemen,

I do hereby, as the attorney of and for the churchwardens and overseers, of the poor of the parish of in the county of countermand the notice of appeal lately given to you, against an order of removal of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of for and concerning the removal of E. F. to the parish of in the county of

Dated this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one.

L. M., Attorney, &c.

---

81. Petition of appeal against removal.

To the Worshipful her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the county of in their general quarter sessions of the peace assembled.

The humble Petition and Appeal of the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of in the county of

Sheweth,

That, by virtue of an order or pass warrant under the hands and seals of A. B. and C. D., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of bearing date, &c., E. B, and her four children, named, &c. [follow the words of the order] were removed from the parish of in the said county of to the parish of in the county aforesaid, alleging the said parish of to be the place of the legal settlement of the said E. B. and her said children.

That your petitioners conceive themselves to be aggrieved by the said order or pass warrant, and do appeal to your worships therefrom.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your worships will be pleased to hear them in the premises, and to order that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of may appear before your worships at a certain day, to be appointed for that purpose, to hear and abide by your judgment and determination touching the said appeal. 9. Forms relating to Removals.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

A. B. } Churchwardens of the
C. D. } said parish of
E. F. } Overseers of, &c.
G. H. }

---

182. Order for hearing thereupon.

to wit. } At the general quarter sessions of the peace of our Lady the Queen, holden in and for the county of at the sessions house for the said county, on the day of in the year, &c.

It is ordered that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of have notice of the within appeal, and that they and all persons concerned do attend the court at the sessions house aforesaid, on next the day of instant, at nine of the clock in the forenoon, to hear and abide the judgment and determination of the said court touching the said appeal.

183. Notice to produce pauper (a).

The Churchwardens, &c. } Appellants.
and
The Churchwardens, &c. } Respondents.

Gentlemen,

I hereby give you notice to produce the pauper, E F., at the hearing of the appeal, that he may be examined by the court touching his settlement.

Dated the day of in the year of our Lord

X. Y.,
Solicitor for the Respondents.

To the Churchwardens, &c.

---

184. Notice of abandonment of order after removal of pauper.

To the Churchwardens and Overseers of the Poor of the parish of to wit. } Whereas, under and by virtue of an order of removal under the hands and seals of J. C. and S. P., esquires, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of bearing date the day of eighteen hundred and A. B. and her child E., aged years, were removed from the parish of in the said county of to the parish of in the county of as the place of their last legal settlement And whereas, since the said removal, we have discovered and are satisfied that the said parish of is not the place of the last legal settlement of the said paupers, and we have accordingly consented to take back the said paupers, and abandon the said order of removal. Now we, the undersigned, being the major part of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of do hereby give you notice that we have abandoned, and do hereby abandon, the said order of removal, and do agree to take back the said paupers, and do also consent and agree to pay the said parish of and the churchwardens and overseers thereof, all costs, charges, and expenses attending the said removal and order, or incident thereto.

Dated the day of in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and

A. B. } Churchwardens.
C. D. }
E. F. } Overseers, &c.
G. H. }

[This notice may be given before appeal preferred, but if appeal entered, it is advisable to get it allowed by consent at the sessions.]

(a) It is a common, but we apprehend a useless, practice, to serve this notice. The appellants are not bound under such notice to produce the pauper, as they have only the maintenance and not the custody of him. The proper mode is to serve the pauper with a subpœna.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

185. Supersedeas of the order of removal.

to wit. } Whereas, in and by order of removal or pass warrant under the hands and seals of us J. C. and S. P., esquires, whose names are hereunto set, and seals affixed, being two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county of bearing date the day of now last past, made upon the complaint of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, that A. B., single woman, had then lately come to inhabit in the said parish, not having gained a legal settlement there, nor produced any certificate owning herself to be settled elsewhere, and that the said A. B. was actually chargeable to the said parish: We, the said justices, upon proof then made thereof before us, and upon the examination of the said A. B. upon oath and due consideration had of the premises, did adjudge that the lawful settlement of the said A. B. was in the parish of in the county of and therefore we required the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of or some or one of them, to convey the said A. B. from and out of their said parish to the said parish of and her to deliver to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor there, or to some or one of them, together with our said order, or a true copy thereof, who were thereby required to receive and provide for her as an inhabitant of their said parish. And whereas the said A. B. was accordingly removed and conveyed from the said parish of to the parish of and delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor there, together with a copy of our said order, pursuant to the directions therein contained. And whereas, it has been since represented, and duly made to appear unto us, the said justices, by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of that the examinations taken upon the making of the said order as aforesaid, are insufficient and informal. Therefore we, the said justices, upon the application, and at the request of the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of do hereby supersede, annul, vacate and set aside the said order, and do command the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parishes respectively, to give up and return the said order, and the copy thereof, to us, that the same may be cancelled and made void to all intents and purposes whatsoever. And we do also require the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of to receive back the said A. B., and maintain and provide for her until they can free themselves from the charge thereof by due course of law.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and

J. L.
S. P.

---

187. Order that the appeal be allowed, and justices' order vacated.

to wit. } At the general sessions of the peace of our Lady the Queen, holden in and for the county of at the sessions house for the said county, on the day of in the year of the reign of our sovereign Lady Victoria, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, defender of the faith, before A. B., C. D., &c. esquires, and others their fellows, justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to keep the peace in the county aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed in the same county.

Whereas, the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of in the county of did at the last general quarter sessions of the peace held in and for this county, exhibit their petition and appeal, setting forth, that by virtue of a warrant or order of removal, under the hands and seals of J. C. esquire, and the Rev. J. B., Doctor in Divinity, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the county of one whereof being of the quorum, bearing date the day of 18 A. B., single woman, big with child, was removed from the parish of in the county of to the said parish of as the place of the last legal settlement of the said A. B, whereby the petitioners conceived themselves aggrieved, which said appeal stood duly adjourned until this sessions. Now upon hearing the said appeal, in the presence and hearing of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of and they consenting by their counsel to the allowing the said appeal, it is ordered that the said appeal be and the same is hereby allowed, and the said order of the said two justices is hereby vacated and set aside. And it is further ordered, that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of do forthwith convey and deliver back the said A. B, single woman, (together with a copy of this order), unto the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of who are hereby required to receive and provide for the said A. B., single woman, until they can free themselves from the charge hereof by due course of law. And it is further ordered that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of do forthwith pay or cause to be paid unto the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of the sum of for their charges and expenses in relieving and maintaining the said A. B, single woman, since her said removal.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

By the Court,
S.

Victoria, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, defender of the faith, to the Keeper of our Peace, and our justices assigned to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed within our county of Hereford, and to every of them greeting:

188. Certiorari to remove an order of removal, &c., into Queen's Bench.

We being willing, for certain reasons, that all and singular orders made by you or some of you, between the inhabitants of St. Peter in our city of Hereford, appellants, and the inhabitants of Kington, in our said county of Hereford, respondents, touching the settlement of Charlotte Stephens, single woman, be sent by you before us, do command you and every of you, that you, or one of you, do send under your seals, or the seal of one of you, before us on the morrow of All Souls, wheresoever we shall then be in England, all and singular the said orders, with all things touching the same, as fully and perfectly as they have been taken or made by and before you or some of you, and now remain in your custody or power, together with this our writ, that we may cause further to be done thereon, what of right and according to the law and custom of England we shall see fit to be done. Witness, Thomas Lord Denman, at Westminster, the 30*th day of June, in the* 1*st year of our reign.*

By the Court,
ROBINSON.

Herefordshire, Easter sessions, 1840.

189. Case stated for opinion of court of Queen's Bench. (a)

Saint Peter in the city of Hereford, and Kington in the county of Hereford.

This was an appeal against an order of two magistrates of the county of Hereford, dated the 1*st of March,* 1830, for the removal of Charlotte Stephens, single woman, from the parish of Kington, in the county of Hereford, to the parish of Saint Peter in the city of Hereford. The order was confirmed, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, on the following case:

The pauper, Charlotte Stephens [here state the facts of the case]. It was contended by the appellant parish, that the indenture was void for want of the consent of two magistrates, part of the premium having been paid out of the parochial funds, but the court confirmed the order, considering that the indenture was not a binding by any overseer or overseers, but by Doctor Lye, who was not overseer of either of the parishes. The court also considered that the payments by the several parishes were voluntary, and not paid under any legal obligation; and though charged to the parish account, no evidence being produced that the pauper belonged to either parish, there was no occasion to have the consent of magistrates, under 56 Geo. III. c. 139, to the binding.

The question for the opinion of the court is, Whether the indenture was valid without the consent of the magistrates? If it was not so, the pauper is improperly removed to the parish of Saint Peter.

J. T. Justice.
R. J. Powell.

Edward Poole, Chairman.
Thos. Bird, Clerk of the Peace for the County of Hereford.

(a) The sessions should find the facts, and not detail the evidence; as specimens of cases neatly drawn, and worthy of imitation, we would refer on a question of apprenticeship to R. v. St. Paul's, Exeter, p. 521.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

In the Queen's Bench. } The Queen against the Inhabitants of Y.
Hilary Term, 9 Victoria.

190. Entry of quashing order of justices after special case.

Northamptonshire. } Be it remembered, that at the general quarter sessions of the peace of our said sovereign Lady the Queen, holden at N., in and for the said county of N., on Thursday in the first week next after the feast of the Epiphany of our Lord Christ, (to wit) the fifteenth day of January, in the ninth year of the reign of our sovereign Lady Victoria, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, defender of the faith, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine, before J. C. Viscount, A. Chairman, the Rev. H. B. H., doctor in divinity. W. R. C., esquire, T. C., esquire, T. S., W. S., esquires, the Rev. J. Clerk, and others their fellow justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to keep the peace in the county aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdeeds done and committed within the same county. It was ordered by the court in manner following [that is to say], Whereas the Rev. W. L. M, clerk, and the Rev. H. K. B., doctor in divinity, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of N., and one of them of the quorum, did make their order, under their hands and seals, bearing date the twenty-sixth day of July, now last past, for the removal of T. J., S. his wife, and their two children, E. aged nineteen, and G. aged fourteen years, from and out of the said parish of Y. in the said county of N., to the parish of S. in the county of H., in which said parish of S. the said justices did adjudge the lawful settlement of them, the said T. J. S. his wife, and their said two children, to be; which said order was in all things duly executed, according to the commands thereof. And whereas the inhabitants of the said parish of S. did, at the last general quarter sessions of the peace for our said Lady the Queen, holden in and for the said county of N., by leave of the court, enter their appeal against the above-recited order to the judgment of this court, to be tried at the then next and now present general quarter sessions of the peace, holden for the said county. Now, upon a full hearing of the said appeal, and what was alleged by counsel on both sides, this court doth order that the said recited order be quashed, set aside, and discharged; subject nevertheless to the opinion of the honourable the justices of her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster, on a special case now stated and agreed upon between the parties appellant and respondent, and their counsel, if the respondents shall think proper to remove the same by writ of certiorari into that court; but if the said respondents shall not remove the same, then the said order to remain quashed, and which case is as follows; [here state the case as agreed on between the parties.]

---

191. Order of sessions on hearing appeal against an order of removal quashing same with costs.

County of } At the court of general quarter sessions of the peace of our sovereign Lady the Queen, holden at in and for the said county of in the first week after the Epiphany, to wit, on Thursday, the fourteenth day of January, in the year of the reign of our sovereign Lady Victoria, Queen over the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and so forth, and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty, before F. R. P., esquire, chairman, J. D., esquire, and others, justices of our said Lady the Queen, assigned to keep the peace in the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, and of the quorum, and so forth, Whereas an appeal against an order for the removal of S. W. B., his wife, and their children, namely, J., aged about years, E., aged about years, and D, aged about months, from the parish of in the county of aforesaid, to the parish of L., in the county of D, stands adjourned to the present quarter sessions. It is now ordered that the said order be and the same is hereby quashed with costs, and also the costs of maintaining the paupers.

Certificate of taxing the costs.

And we said justices do hereby certify that the appellants are entitled for their costs in this appeal to the sum of pounds, shillings, and pence, and the further sum of pounds, shillings, and pence, for the maintenance of the paupers, making together the sum of pounds, shillings, and pence.

By the Court.

[When the sessions quash or confirm the order, they have the power to award costs to the respondents or appellants, if they think any of the grounds of appeal, or the grounds of removal, are frivolous and vexatious. We do further adjudge, that the several following grounds of appeal stated in the notice of the appellants, that is to say, [here recite the particular ones,] are frivolous and vexatious, and we do order that the appellant shall pay all such costs as the respondent hath incurred in disputing such grounds. And we do adjudge and certify that the same amount to the sum of pounds, and all other the costs of the said appeal, as well as the costs of maintaining the paupers, be paid by the respondents; and we certify and adjudge that the costs of the said appeal amount to pounds, and the costs of maintenance to pounds.

By the Court.

9. Forms relating to Removals.

192 The like that the grounds of appeal were frivolous and vexatious and appellant to pay all costs.

N. to wit. } To the Constable of D., and to all other constables in the said county duly to execute, and T. J., our Special Constable, duly sworn to execute this our warrant.

193. Warrant to levy by distress on goods of overseers the costs of appeal against order of removal adjudged at the quarter sessions.

Whereas it hath this day been duly made to appear unto us, J. W., clerk, and W. R., esquire, two of her Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of N., as well upon the oath of W. P., one of the churchwardens of the parish of K., in the said county of N., as otherwise, that upon a certain appeal against our order for the removal of W. M. and H. his wife, and W. their child, from the parish of D. in the said county of N., to the said parish of K. in the said county—the court of quarter sessions for the county aforesaid, by the order dated the seventh day of January now last past, did amongst other things order that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of D., should, upon notice to them, or any of them, given of the said order, pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of K., or to some one of them, the sum of pounds for their just and reasonable costs and charges upon the determination of the said appeal by the said court. And that the said sum of pounds so ordered to be paid as aforesaid, was on the day of instant, duly demanded of and from E. L., esquire, and R. B., esquire, the overseers of the poor of the said parish of D., by the said W. P., and that the said order was at the same time shown to the said E. L., and R. B., who respectively looked at the same, but they did not, nor did either of them, then or at any time since pay the said sum of pounds, or any part thereof, to the said W. P., but therein hath made default; whereby and by virtue of the said statute in such case made and provided, the said sum of pounds may be levied of the said goods and chattels of the said E. L. and R. B., as overseers of the parish of D. aforesaid. These are, therefore, to command you to make distress of the goods and chattels of the said E. L. and R. B., and if within the space of eight days next after the making of such distress the said sums, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the monies arising by such sale you do pay the sum of pounds to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of K. aforesaid, or to one of them, rendering the overplus, if any, on demand, unto the said E. L. or R. B., the reasonable charges of making and keeping and selling the said distress being first deducted; and if no such distress can be made, that then you certify the same unto us, to the end that such further proceedings may be had therein as to the law doth appertain.

Given under our hands and seals this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five.

J. W.
W. R.

INDEX.

[N. B. When a reference is made to another title, and a figure annexed, the figure denotes the division of that title in which the subject matter will be found; e. g. under the title "DIRECTION," there is a reference to "CERTIFICATE, (3.)" By looking to title "CERTIFICATE," the Index refers to the third division of the subject "CERTIFICATE."]

A.

ACCIDENT.
In a parish, makes a pauper casual poor there, 113. See CASUAL POOR.
Master not liable in case of accident for his servant's support, 121
Pauper meeting with, irremovable during illness, 113, 115
Does not dissolve a contract of hiring, 565

ACCOUNTS.
Of overseers, 365. See OVERSEERS' ACCOUNTS.
Of guardians, under Gilbert's act, 364

ACKNOWLEDGMENT of Settlement.
By certificate, 961. See CERTIFICATE.
By relief, 1004.
By non-appeal against order of removal, 1009

ACTION.
None for a poor-rate, 352. See DISTRESS.
Nor for balance in overseers' hands, 374, n.
Justices and overseers may plead general issue, 394
Limitation of, for anything done under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 1270
Defendant may plead general issue, 1270
If matter done in pursuance of the act, the defendant to have verdict and costs, 1270

ADJOURNMENT.
Of sessions, 1116 } See REMOVAL.
Of appeal, 1115 }
Appeals cannot in general be lodged at an adjourned sessions, 1109
Secus on appeal against a rate, 346. See 1109

ADJUDICATION.
Of chargeability, 1078
Of the settlement, 1082

ADMINISTRATION, Letters of.
Residence by person having sole right to, when it will confer a settlement, 865. See ESTATE, (4.)
Consent may be given to service of apprentice, by administrator, 763
So also by widow entitled to, 703

ADMISSION.
By a rated inhabitant against his interest, admissible evidence, 1154

AFFIDAVITS.
Received by Q. B. on question of vill or not a vill, 15. See TOWNSHIP.
Q. B. will not try overseers' accounts on affidavit, 379
Nor the judgment on an appeal against a removal, 1175

AFTERMATH.
Let out, is rateable, 206. See RATE.

AGISTMENT.
The persons who take in cattle are rateable, 187
The agistor is not, 208

AID. See TAXING IN AID, 361

AIRE AND CALDER NAVIGATION.
Proprietors rateable for it, 203
For a dam erected for the navigation, 203

ALDERMAN.
Of London may do within his ward all two justices may do, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, 28
Exempt from office of overseer, 24

ALETASTER.
Serving office of, gives a settlement, 927

ALICE Holt Forest, in Binsted Parish.
No settlement can be gained by residence there in any house, or by hiring and service, for preservation of woods or game, 52 Geo. III. c. 72, s. 8.

ALLOWANCE by Justices.
Of rate, 321, 2
Form of, 321
Of overseers' accounts, 384
Not required, where an auditor has been appointed under 7 & 8 V. c. 101, 1299
Of parish indentures to be under hand, 669 See APPRENTICE, (9.)
Of other indentures, where any expense incurred by parochial funds, under hand and seal, 669, 674, 5
Of certificate, 975. See CERTIFICATE, (5.)

ALMSHOUSES.
Are rateable, if there is a beneficial occupier, 173, 175. See RATE.

AMBASSADOR.
Goods of a servant, not residing with his master, may be distrained for poor-rate, 360

AMENDMENT.
Defects of form in orders of justices may be amended by sessions on appeal, 1042
As of township for parish, 1042
Of rates, 341

ANNUAL VALUE.
The profit of one year not the criterion of rateability, 275
But profit communibus annis, 276
Principle applicable to underwood, 247
Value of tenement calculated on an annual, not a weekly letting, 809

ANNUITIES, Bank.
Not rateable, as money out at interest under a local act, 268

ANNUITANT.
Residence by, on the estate on which annuity charged, gives no settlement, 857

APPEAL.
Not lie, unless given by statute, 333
Against any neglect or act of overseers or justices, 380
Not necessary against nullity, 32
Appeal to the next practicable sessions, 382
Against any act of justices under Gilbert's act, 76
Against any order or conviction of justice under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 1270
Necessary recognizances, 1270
From towns corporate not having six justices must be to the county sessions, 337. See RATE.
Must be adjourned, if sufficient notice not given, 334

APPEAL—continued.
May be entered, though order abandoned, 927
Against appointment of overseers, 32. See OVERSEERS.
Against accounts of overseers, persons having material objections may, 380
Stranger not to be heard, 387
Notice in writing and the grounds required to be stated, 385
By overseers against disallowance of accounts, 384
Not allowed against order of maintenance, 92. See RELIEF.
Nor when made on a relation, 98
Allowed against rate, 333. See RATE, (14.)
Before justices at petty sessions, 1279
So also against distress for rate, 352
Allowed against order of removal, 1097
In appeal against a removal overseers to have access to the pauper, 1264
Sessions on, may amend defects in orders, 1012
Allowed against suspended order, 1098
The time for, to be computed from the service of the order, and not the removal, 1087
May be made, although the time for the distress has elapsed, 1098
Notice and grounds of appeal required in appeals against rates, 342
At some sessions the appellant begins, 345, 6, 7
Practice not unreasonable, 347
Notice and statement of the grounds required in appeal against removal, 1117. See NOTICE.
Appeals may be adjourned, 1115

APPREHENSION.
Of parties cannot vary legal effect of contract, 501

APPRENTICE.
Commissioners may prescribe the duties of the master, 1292
To be inserted in indenture, 1292
Penalty for disobedience, 1292
All statutes compelling a person to receive, repealed, 1292

APPRENTICESHIP, Settlement by.
Division of the subject, 603
1. Statutes chronologically arranged, 603—620
Form of indentures and allowance by justices, App.
Compulsory apprenticeship abolished, 1292
Justices must see that the rules of commissioners are complied with, 4, 620
A settlement by residence of forty days as an apprentice inferred from 13 & 14 Car. II. 604
Binding and inhabitation substituted for notice, 605

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
43 Eliz. gave parish officers power to bind apprentices, 604
Not the guardians under 20 Geo. III. 10, n., 667
The binding of parish apprentices is regulated by 56 Geo. III. c. 130, 615
Justices to inquire and may examine parents before the binding, 616
To make an order for it, 616
Justices must consent, when any sum paid by the parish, 616
Also where apprentices placed away, 618
Notice to be given when binding out of the county, 616
Distance limited, 616
No settlement to be gained unless directions complied with, 617
Penalty for binding contrary to the statute, 617
Apprentice may be assigned, or discharged, where the master removes out of the county, or to a distance of forty miles, 617
See post 9.

2. The Instrument of Binding, 621
The binding must be by deed, 608, 621
Required by 3 W. & M. c. 11, 621
Indenture not necessary, 608, 621, 654

3. The Parties, 621
No settlement can be acquired by apprentice to a seaman or fisherman, 603, 621
Such apprentice retains a settlement acquired before the statute, 621
An infant may bind himself, 622
And at seven years of age, 622
But the deed is voidable, 622, n.
No child can be bound an apprentice by the parish till he is nine years of age, 617
Age of fitness, question for discretion of justices, 623
Any deed by which an infant under sixteen is bound to a chimney-sweeper is void, 620
And no settlement can be acquired under it, 623
So also for a child under ten to work within a mine or colliery, 620
Or longer than for eight years, 620
Watermen cannot take more than two apprentices, 632
An infant may be master, 624
Master's condition immaterial, 624
So also his right to have an apprentice, 624
Any person now may take apprentice, 613, 625
Not to affect customs of London, 613
It is immaterial that the master was fraudulently imposed on the justices, 626
Apprentice of a certificated person acquires no settlement, 607
So also of a collector of turnpike tolls, 619
Master bound to take a parish apprentice, 605
Secus now, 1292
Not military officers, 620

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
The apprentice may be bound to two masters consecutively by the same deed, 627
The apprentice must be a party to the deed, though an infant, 627
Secus a parish apprentice, 628, 629
An apprenticeship made in Newfoundland by an adult is good, 625
Adoption is not tantamount to execution, 628, 630, n.
A father, at common law, has no authority to bind his son without his consent, 628

4. The Date and Execution of Instrument, 632
Indenture ante-dated to contravene a statute is void, 632
Secus if the statute does not require it, although the statutory form contains it, 634
Master need not execute if apprentice bound, 634
He must assent, 635
Where apprentice put out by trustees under a will, they need not execute, 667
Nor guardians of the poor, 667
Guardians executing by corporate seal, sufficient, 619
The proper corporate name must be used, 631

5. Time, 635
No child to be a parish apprentice till nine years of age, 617
Males till 24, by 43 Eliz., 604; till 21 by 18 Geo. III., 604
Women till 21, or marriage, 635
If for less than seven years, voidable only, 635, 650
So also for unlimited time, 636
So also for a term which may extend beyond her age of twenty-one, 636

6. Premium and Stamp thereon, 636
Statutes relating to, 605
One duty only payable now under 55 Geo. III. c. 184, 614
Premium to be inserted in the Indenture, by 8 Anne, 606
Indenture within Bills of Mortality stamped within a month of its date, 606
Others within three or six months, 606
Schedule of stamps, 614
8 Anne still in force as to time, 638
A duty is payable by 8 Anne on every sum given or contracted for in relation to apprentice, 607
And where anything, not money, is given or contracted for, a duty is chargeable on its value, 607
No duty is payable where the consideration is 6*d.*, 637
Nor when no sum is paid, 607, n.
Duty paid on sum inserted, which was greater than the sum paid, is sufficient, 646
Meat, clothes, &c., found for the apprentice is not "a thing given for benefit of master," 642, 644

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
It means a horse or valuable thing of that kind, 643
And not where father or apprentice covenants to find certain necessaries, and the master to allow an equivalent, 643, 646
Nor a stipulation for part of apprentice's earnings, 645
Duty of maintenance not incidental to the relation of master and apprentice, 644
No stamp required when the indenture or agreement is at the sole charge of parish or public charity, 615, 639
This includes money given by parish officers, though the binding is voluntary, 642
A public annual subscription is a public charity, 639
So also a bequest to bind out apprentices, 641
A charity may be public, although a class is contemplated, 640
Not necessary for the trustees to execute, 667
But an assignment of an apprentice bound out by a charity requires a stamp if the second master receives part of the premium, 639
An assignment was not within statute of Anne, and requiring a stamp, 641
It now requires only 1*l.*, though it extends the apprenticeship, 641, n.
A mother secretly agreed to pay 4*l.* in addition to the premium given by a public charity, this is valid, and a stamp necessary, 647
So also by grandfather, 648
Secus where the mother, a feme covert, made such promise, 646
If the duty is not paid, the indenture is void, and no settlement can be gained under it, 637
The premium must be written and inserted in words at length, 606
If the full sum is not inserted, the deed is void, 606
A greater sum in deed than paid, is good, 667
Where no duty payable, insertion unnecessary, 639
As in parish bindings, 639
Indentures signed within Bills of Mortality to be stamped within one month of date, and elsewhere within two months, 606
Indenture executed before 44 Geo. III. and not stamped within time, is void, 637
Quære if lost before time for stamping expired, 638, n.
When the time is not limited, the court will not inquire when the stamp was affixed, 638
Parol evidence admissible to show the consideration was paid by the parish, 670

7. Stamp Duty without regard to Premium, 649
Both regulated now by 55 Geo. III. c. 184, 615
Schedule relating to, 615

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
"Hiring" in a stamp act not applicable to apprentices, 741
If nothing given, &c. it was liable to an additional stamp, 649
Secus now, 649
Indenture unstamped is inadmissible in evidence, 649
Assignments formerly required no stamps, 706
Secus now when required in original indenture, 615
Stamp of improper denomination and equal value sufficient, unless specifically appropriated, 649
Indenture to serve one master four and another three years, in two trades, requires only one stamp, 649
Agreement for residue of term for a consideration under 20*l.* requires no stamp, 706
Stamp for apprenticeship to serve at sea, 619
Overseers cannot be compelled to produce indenture to be stamped, 651

8. Imperfect Apprenticeships, 651
What is a hiring, and not an imperfect apprenticeship, 545. See also HIRING AND SERVICE, 13
Question for Sessions, 663
Q. B. not disturb their decision, 658, 663, 1195
An imperfect apprenticeship cannot enure as a hiring, 651
As where no indenture, or indenture not executed or unstamped, 651
Or is incomplete, for fraudulent reasons, 652
The intention to create apprenticeship, may be inferred though the word "apprentice" not used, 652, 654
Inferred from a premium being given, 652, n., 662
Though it may be inferred where no premium is given, 654
No technical words necessary to create this relation, 654
Covenant for secrecy, evidence of apprenticeship, 660
It is enough if the purport of the contract be that one should teach and the other learn a trade, 655
Though the scholar does not contract to learn, 655
If the contract be not reciprocal, no settlement will be gained, 655
Yet from a contract to learn, a contract to teach may be implied, 656
An agreement to learn to weave flannels is, though the apprentice was entitled to half his earnings, 657
So also to learn sawing, and to have part of the earnings, 655
To learn the trade of a carpenter, and to do any other work, 656
To learn the trade of a tailor, master refusing to take an apprentice, 658

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
To be taught the art of weaving, 660
A pauper "hired" by uncle "to learn his trade," to do any other work—indentures prepared but not executed—an imperfect apprenticeship, 659
So, to serve as "an articled servant," to learn a trade, to do any work, and be an out apprentice, 661
So also where father gave a guinea to have his son taught a trade—master treated and spoke of him as an apprentice, 661
(A subsequent agreement for a year at 3*d.* per pair of shoes is a hiring, 662)
So also where mother accepted the offer to teach her son a trade and no deed executed, because of mother's poverty, 662
9. Of Parish Apprenticeships, 665
The Statutes, 608—620
Majority of churchwardens and overseers may bind, 665
Even where guardians appointed, 667
Secus after Oct. 1, 1844, within any union, 1292
Duties may be prescribed by commissioners, and inserted in the indenture, 1292
Power given by 43 Eliz., 604
Indenture signed by one churchwarden only and one overseer, before 51 Geo. III. c. 8, rendered valid, 612, 618
This extends to parishes where there are three officers only, one of whom acts in both characters, 665
Indenture executed by one churchwarden and one overseer may be sufficient, 666
Indentures rendered valid, though churchwarden of township had been sworn into the office of churchwarden of the parish only, 613
Indentures executed before 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 32, by one churchwarden, where two formerly appointed, are valid, 618
If a majority of the whole body execute, execution by a churchwarden unnecessary, 666. See CERTIFICATE.
A defective parish apprenticeship may be good as a binding by the parties, 668
The parish may bind a child not resident in the parish, 630
Can an apprentice be bound to a person resident abroad? 719
A parish indenture within the first ten sections of 56 Geo. III. must be signed, but need not be sealed, by two justices, 669
When guardians of a union bind, assent of justices not required, 1292
I is a judicial act, and justices must be together when they sign, 667
Or if one justice signs alone, he must be present when the other signs, 667
If they act when separate, no settlement is gained under it, 667
Commissioners may issue rules, and justices must certify a compliance with them, 620, 1292

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
Where any expense is incurred by the parish, and the parish officers are not parties, the justices must seal as well as sign, 669, 675
Secus, when the person bound is of age, 670
Intention of the act to provide against clandestine appropriation of parish money, 673
Payment by the overseers is primâ facie out of parish funds, 669
Private charity, though vested in the churchwardens or overseers, is not "a parochial fund," 671, 672
A "public parochial fund" is one applicable to the general purposes of the poor, 672
Supply of clothes by overseers where the charity binds is not an "expense" within the statute, 673
11th section of 56 Geo. III. applies only where the overseers directly or indirectly procure the indenture, 669, 674
And are not parties, 669
Money collected from individuals and from the overseers of three parishes, is charity, 675
Omission of seal renders indenture void, 675
And no settlement can be gained under it, 675
As to corporate seal, 619
No settlement, where order for binding not referred to in indenture by the date, 677
If the justices who allow have no jurisdiction in the place where the master lives, notice of the intended binding must be given to the overseers of that place before allowance, 678
Notice also must be given where the binding is from one parish to another, 678
Secus when apprentice is assigned, 681
Justices of the county cannot allow a binding to a master resident in an exclusive jurisdiction, 678
Secus if not exclusive, 680
Notices will be presumed, 680
Where the binding is into another county, four justices must sign, 668
Remedied by 3 & 4 W. 4, 619, 668, n.
Justices "of county aforesaid" sufficient, if those words can apply to one county only, 681
Where two counties named, the context may show to which "said" refers, 682
No child can be bound a parish apprentice till he is nine years old, 617
Nor beyond twenty-one, 604
10. Enrolment of Indenture of Apprentices to sea-faring Persons, 683
No person deemed an apprentice to the master of a ship or fisherman till the indenture is enrolled, 683
The neglect to enroll does not prevent a settlement, 683
No settlement now by apprentice in sea service, 683

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
The apprentice of a certificated person can acquire no settlement, 998

11. Service and Residence, 683
Apprentice may gain a settlement by binding and inhabitation, 605
Secus if the binding (not by the parish) is without the intervention of the pauper, 627
The settlement is where he inhabits, not where he serves, 683, 684
As an apprentice for the last forty days, 685
See as to certificates, 998
The forty days' residence required by 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, 604
Residence for forty days in A. and then forty days in B. and then one day in A. the settlement is in A. 685
Forty successive days not required, 684
Nor within the compass of one year, ib.
Master's residence and settlement are immaterial, 684, 695
The inhabitation must be in the character of an apprentice, 685
It must be in pursuance of his contract, 687, 689, 711
What is a sufficient connection, 712
Residence with a relative on account of illness, with consent of master, once held to give no settlement, 685
A settlement will be acquired where apprentice became a cripple, returned to his master, and was by him placed with the mother in the same parish, 685, 690
Or where put by his master, and at his expense, in the workhouse, 686
Or where residing in one parish on account of illness, he did some work for his master in another, 688, 689
Although the employment be illegal, 690
Actual service is not essential, 686, 687
Inhabitation by indulgence is not sufficient, 690, 691
An apprentice went home on Saturdays, and absconded on a Monday, the service ceased on the Saturday, 693
Where the master and apprentice worked in one parish, and both returned to master's house on Saturdays and Sundays in another parish, this last residence is under the indentures, 692
Residence by parish apprentice with his master, both being on duty in the militia, sufficient, 694
So also, though never employed in the trade, 687
Returning to school, and not at master's expense, is not sufficient, 691
Apprentice sleeping on board of a ship lying within a parish, and in the course of trade, gains a settlement there, 695
Where ship was laid up in winter, and apprentice resided with his parents, without working for his master, who

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
paid a compensation, he gains no settlement, 696
Sleeping in master's parish without his knowledge is not sufficient, ib.
But if with the knowledge of a second master it is sufficient, 697

12. Service with different Masters, 698
An apprentice serving one master with consent of his first acquires a settlement, 698
Modern rule, "an express consent of the first master, and an employment by the latter in the capacity of apprentice," ib.
The necessity of the privity of the second master to the permission by the first, has been denied, ib.
Several previous cases inconsistent with this principle, ib.
The second master may be ignorant of the fact of the pauper's being an apprentice, 710, 714

The Assent must be express.
As by a recommendation, 699
Mere knowledge does not imply consent, ib.
Indiscriminate leave is not sufficient, 700, 722
Permission to work where apprentice pleased is not sufficient, 699, 701
Though his master knows where he works, 701
And though he occasionally worked for his master, and regularly paid his master 2*s.* a week, 699. See 724
"You may go to B." sufficient assent, 700
The mistress said, "She was not against it." This is not sufficient, 708
Consent may be given after the apprentice has entered the second service, 700
He resided forty days after his consent, ib.
Subsequent consent does not relate back to the commencement of the service, 708
Giving a character is an assent, 701
Consent given by delivery of indenture, 704, 723
By providing a loom, 728
By receiving payments from the apprentice, 724. See 699
Where the second told the first master he had got the pauper, and the first master said "I am glad of it," the assent is not sufficient, 702
Where there is consent, the service is constructively under the indenture, 713
In a parish apprentice, the assent and service must be complete before 56 G. III. c. 139, 709
It must be given before the indentures are given up, 700, 721
Service with the partner of his master, after his master's death, is not sufficient, 702

Consent, by whom to be given, 703
A widow without letters of administration may consent, 703

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
So also an executor, 703
Without probate, 706
So also the second master, 704—705
By the appointee under 32 Geo. III. c. 57, 734
The Consent may be given by Parol or Assignment of Indenture, 704
Justices have power to assign by indorsement on indenture, 610
An apprentice cannot at common law be assigned; secus by statute, 703
The assignee may assign over, 681
An invalid assignment is evidence of consent, 703, 705
Mistake in sirname of apprentice does not invalidate it, 681
Any assignment or putting away of parish apprentice since 56 Geo. III. c. 139, must be by consent of justices, or no settlement can be gained, 705
The steward of the master cannot make the assignment, 719
As to stamps on assignment, ante, 7
The second Master may be privy to the Consent, 706
Particular consent insufficient, if the apprentice is hired as a servant, and the second master is ignorant of the apprenticeship, 707. See 710
The Apprentice must be employed in furtherance of his Indenture, 711, 715
Where the second master knew not of the apprenticeship, but with the consent of the first master agreed to "take him for two years," and in the same trade, this is sufficient, 710
If the apprentice is hired, the service is not referable to the indenture, but to the hiring, 716
Where a second indenture is executed after express consent, the service is not referable to the original indenture, 716, 717
Secus, where second indenture void, 717

13. Of the Service by Parish Apprentices with second Master.
By 32 G. III. c. 57, a parish apprentice might be assigned with consent of justices, 610
An assignment without such consent was evidence of express assent, 705
By 56 G. III. c. 139, no settlement can be acquired by an apprentice placed out, put away, or transferred, without the consent of justices, &c., 617
An apprentice put to work on the farm of the master's sister, he superintending it, is so placed out, 718
So also when put by his master to another person in the same trade, the master receiving the wages, 720

14. Of Vacating the Apprenticeship, 721
The justices have power to discharge an apprentice, if the master cannot employ or maintain him, 610

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
(For ill usage, 608)
Confined to cases where the premium did not exceed 5*l.*, 611
A relation created by deed cannot be discharged by parol, 693, 726
Bankruptcy of the master was no discharge of the indenture till 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, 619, 733
Consent of the first master is necessary, 728
Exchanging indentures is a virtual cancelling, 730
They are not vacated by being given up but not cancelled, 723
Agreement to discharge indenture on certain payments does not vacate indenture till payment, 693, 700, 724
Nor even then, so as to make the settlement in the parish where the apprentice lodged the night before the payment, 692
If money is paid, the indentures are discharged from the time of payment, though not given up, 725, 732
The apprenticeship continues where master tells apprentice to shift for himself, and if he cannot to return to him, 726, 727
Consent to give up the apprentice, but indentures not given up, is not sufficient, 730
Yearly payments made by apprentice to his master prove that the indentures continue, 724
Entering the king's service with master's consent does not vacate, 727
Infant cannot consent to discharge, 730
Unless it is manifestly for his benefit, as where his master ran away, ib.
An infant bound by his father may be discharged by consent of all parties, 727
A father and son cannot determine a parish apprenticeship, 725
Nor can an infant consent, 728
Parish apprentice of full age, and bound till twenty-four, may be discharged without consent of parish officers, 729
Such an apprentice, when of age, is not discharged by permission to shift for himself, 726
Delivery of indentures to parish apprentice, an infant, does not cancel them, 728
Apprenticeship is a personal trust, and determines by death of either party, 733
But a parish apprentice continues till three months after the death of master, if the apprentice is then living with the family, 608, 610
And in certain cases the justices have power to order such apprentice to serve the residue of his term, 609
Form, 611

15. Evidence, 734
Secondary evidence of lost indenture, admissible, 735
Parish register the best secondary evidence of parish indentures, 612, 734

APPRENTICESHIP—continued.
Parish chest proper depository of parish indentures, 738
Indenture executed thirty years ago, presumed to have been stamped, though no entry in stamp office, 735
Parol evidence inadmissible, till both parts of indenture proved to have been lost, 736
What is sufficient evidence thereof, 740
What is not, 736, 738
The person into whose hands it has been traced, must be called, 684
Declaration of the master, that he delivered it to the overseers, is not sufficient, master being alive, 736
Declaration of pauper, not living, that he burnt it, and of master's executrix that she could not find it, without search among papers, is sufficient evidence, 738
Declaration of deceased apprentice, respecting the loss, inadmissible, indenture not having been in his possession, 737
Execution must be proved by party calling for it, though it comes from the adverse party, 738
Character of, after twenty years, presumed from being treated as such, all papers having been burnt, 739
Assignment by indorsement, inadmissible unless stamped, 740
Recital of premium by law, out of charitable fund, no evidence, if payment of premium proved aliundè, 730, 741
Parol evidence inadmissible till the existence and essential preliminaries are proved, 738
Admissible to shew that it was a contract for cohabitation, 670

ARBITRATION.
Poor rate cannot be referred, 341

ARREST.
Residence under, in the parish in which tenement lies, sufficient, 846; but see 406.
For bastardy, does not dissolve a contract of hiring, 592.

ASSIGNMENT. See APPRENTICE (12.)
A person is not strictly assignable, 703
But it may be evidence of master's consent to apprentice serving assignee, ib.
Of parish apprentice, must be with consent of justices, 610
Form of, given by statute, 612
It must be stamped, if the original indenture require it, 614

ASSISTANT Commissioners.
Commissioners may appoint nine, 6
Have the power of commissioners, ib.
Except making general rules, ib.
May be appointed for special purpose, ib.
May summon and examine persons on oath, 1241

ASSISTANT Overseer.
May be appointed with salary, 36
A collector may do the duty, 1307
A minute of vestry that A. was elected assistant overseer will justify the justices in appointing, 357
Liable to the penalties of 17 G. II. c. 3, as a person authorized to take care of the poor, 6
If he has the custody of books, he is bound to allow inspection, 8
May demand poor rate, 357
Form of appointment by parish, 1334
By justices, 1335
To give security, 36
Bond by, 1335
His duties are prescribed by the appointment, 329
An appeal lies against his accounts, 37, 382
Cannot for his own profit provide goods, &c. for the poor, 398, n.
May be removed by commissioners, 1258
Cannot be a guardian, 36

ASYLUMS.
May be formed for houseless poor, 1300
In Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, 1312
In the metropolitan district and London, 1300
The poor to be destitute, chargeable, to apply for relief, and not charged with any offence, 1300
Not professing to be settled in any parish therein, 1303
Board of guardians to be constituted, 1300
Their power, ib.
Any minister may visit, 1301
Board may provide building and borrow money, ib.
Sum not to exceed one-fifth of poor rate for the year, ib.
May hold as a corporation, 1302
Contributions how paid, ib.
Distribution of charges, ib.
Auditors to be appointed, 1303
Guardians may inspect, ib.
Form of admission, 1304
Not to be detained without consent more than four hours after breakfast, ib.
Unlesss punishable for misbehaviour, ib.
Then for twenty-four hours, ib.
Such persons how dealt with, ib.
False names or statements punishable, ib.
May be put to work, 1305
Returning after removal, ib.

ATTAINTED Person.
May acquire or communicate a settlement, 408

ATTORNEY.
Exempt from office of overseer, 24
His bill for parish business may be taxed by clerk of peace, 1300
If no application, the auditor's decision final, ib.

AUDITOR.
His duties, 65
Commissioners may order appointment of in each union, 63
Commissioners may combine unions and parishes for audit of accounts, 1297
Certain parishes excepted, 1309
Such auditors to be elected by the chairmen, and vice chairmen of the boards, 1297
If none, by two selected overseers, 1297
The powers and duties of such auditor, 1297
To charge all deficiency arising from misconduct, 1297
Money due to be paid over in seven days, 1297
Books, &c., to be handed over, 1297
Penalties for neglect, and how enforced, 1297
Churchwarden, surveyor of highways, overseer or other officer making illegal payment, or any entry of unlawful expenditure, liable to 20*l.*, and treble the sum, 1298
To give notice of time of audit to overseers, 1298
May require vouchers, and a declaration, 1298
As to former balance, 1298
Auditor to state the reason for disallowance, 1298
Party aggrieved may review in Q. B. 1299
Necessary recognizance, 1299
Proceedings thereon, 1299
The Commissioners may determine it, 1299
To be appointed for district schools and asylums, 1303
Instructions to them by the commissioners, 65
To audit quarterly accounts, 65
Form of certificate, 1318
Under Gilbert's Act, 63

AVON NAVIGATION.
Proprietors of, not rateable for the river, 199
Secus for cuts and towing-paths, 200

AXIOMS.
Effect of fraud prevented, when the interference does not infringe a higher principle, 456

B.

BAILIFF.
Office of, in a borough, is within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 10, s. 6, 927

BANKRUPTCY.
Of master does not dissolve a contract of hiring, 566
Of master, discharges apprenticeship, since 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, 619, 733
Of overseer, with a certificate, is a discharge of balance in his hands, 375
Proof where overseer becomes bankrupt, 371

BARNBY DUN RIVER.
Proprietors of, not rateable, except in Doncaster and Sheffield, 259

BARRACKS.
Soldiers in, are not rateable if they have only necessary accommodation, 167
Soldiers inhabiting, may rent tenement, and acquire settlement, 843

BASTARD.
Liabilities of putative father by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 1261
Guardians might apply for the order, 8
Now repealed, 1289
Liability by 2 & 3 Vic. c. 85, 1261, n.
Now repealed, 1289
No appeal given by the latter statute, 1261, n.
Overseers liable for costs, although not the proper parties to apply, 1261, n.
Applications now regulated by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, 1289
The statute at length, 1289—1312
Putative father to be summoned to petty sessions, on application of mother, 1289
No parish officer, clerk of justices, or constable to interfere in procuring an order, 1291
Or procuring evidence, 1291
Justices may make an order, 1289
Acting in two adjoining counties, 1291
Enforced by distress and commitment, 1289
Arrears for more than thirteen weeks not to be so enforced, 1290
Application within forty days from service of summons, 1290
Putative father may appeal, 1290
Recognizance and notice required, 1290
The money to be paid to the mother, 1290
If not of unsound mind, 1290
Or in prison, 1290
Or under sentence of transportation, 1290
In either of such cases the justices may appoint a guardian, 1290
Not to be the officer of a union or parish, 1291
Penalty for misappropriating money, or ill-using child, 1291
Order on the father to cease when child thirteen years old, 1290
Or the mother married, 1290
Or the child dead, 1290
Existing orders not affected, 1291
To cease 1st Jan. 1849
Mother neglecting child punishable as vagrant, 1290
Money not to be received by any parish officers, clerk of justices, or constable, 1291
Overseers may enforce the order if the mother is dead and the child chargeable, 1291
Parish officers endeavouring to procure the marriage of mother guilty of misdemeanor, 1291
Clerks of justices to make returns of applications and appeals, 1292
Form thereof, 1311
Settlement of.
Child of a woman, whose husband is in England, may be, 424

BASTARD, Settlement of—continued.
Born since 14th August, 183
Follows the settlement of the mother till the age of sixteen, 410
Otherwise settled where born, 411
They follow the settlement acquired by the mother's second marriage, 432
Second husband bound to maintain step-children, 410
Born before 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 76, may be removed to the place of birth, though within the age of nurture, being previously separated from mother, 430
Can have no derivative settlement, 411
Born in an extra-parochial place, has no settlement, 411
Born in a parish to which the mother has been removed by collusion, is settled in the colluding parish, 411
The collusion must be that of the parish officers, 411
And such collusion must be found by the sessions as a fact, 412
A person accidentally in a parish, and persuaded to go into another, this is not collusion, 413
Born after order of removal made, and before removal, is settled in the mother's parish, 413
So also where the order is suspended, 413
So where the mother is in transitu under it, 413
Born after removal, if the order is quashed, is settled in the removing parish, 413
Though it is not the mother's parish, 413
And though the order was quashed for misdirection, 414
Cannot be removed to her mother's settlement, 413
If the woman return of her own accord to the removing parish, and the child is born there, it is settled there, 414
Born in house of industry, county lunatic asylum, belongs to the parish of the mother, 415, 417
Born in lying-in hospital, gains no settlement thereby, 416
A room in a parish workhouse is not such an hospital, 416
Born whilst mother was residing under friendly society act, follows mother's settlement, [now repealed,] 415
In the workhouse of any union, 417
Born of a vagrant, followed mother's settlement till 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, 417
Born under a certificate, settled where born, 415, 417
"Family," in the certificate, does not include, 415, 418
Nor "woman and her child," 418
But a certificate describing the woman as spinster, and the child she now goeth with, includes her bastard, 418
"All other children she may have," does not include bastard born eight years after, 419
Nurse child not removable from mother, though maintained by his own parish, 419

BASTARD, Settlement of—continued.
Removal to his settlement if deserted by his mother, 419, 436
Women, pregnant with, formerly removable, 838j
Servants, pregnant with, may be discharged, 590, l
Parents may prove criminal intercourse, but not non-access, 421, 2
Nor any facts from which non-access is to be inferred, 423
Notorious adultery not of itself proof of bastardy, 424

BENEFICIAL Occupany.
No rate can be imposed unless there is a beneficial occupation, 154. See RATE.

BILL of Exceptions.
Does not lie to the sessions, 1191

BINDING. See APPRENTICE, (2) (9).

BINSTEAD, Parish of. See ALICE HOLT.

BIRTH, Settlement by.
Of Bastards, 410. See BASTARD.
Of Legitimate Children, 409
Place of birth, primâ facie place of settlement, 409
Though the evidence is slight, 409
Though the pauper is a widow, or married woman, 409
Though the mother was a vagrant, 410
Superseded by proof of either paternal or maternal settlement, 409
Fact of person found in a parish no evidence of his birth there, 409, 1006. See CASUAL POOR.
Residence of forty days not necessary, 411
The children of Irish parents may be sent to Ireland, 843
Evidence, 420
Legitimacy presumed after proof of marriage of parents, 420
Though separated by deed, 420
Or divorced à mensa et thoro, 420
Declaration of dead parents of the time of birth is admissible, 420
As to place of birth, not admissible, 420
Register of baptism, per se, not alone sufficient evidence of place of birth, 420
If the child then very young, register may be so, 421
Register not evidence of time of birth, ib.
As to the new Register Act, see 421, n.
Parents may prove they were never married, though they have cohabited as such, 422
May prove criminal intercourse, but not non-access, 422

BIRTHS and Burials.
Collector of duties on, an office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, 929

BOND.
Form of by relieving officer, 1323
by collector of rates, 1324
by assistant overseer, 1335

BOOKS.
Parish, to be kept in such place and manner as inhabitants in vestry shall direct, 96
Exception of register of marriage, baptism, and burials, 96
Penalty on persons injuring them, 96
Penalty on persons refusing to deposit them in the place selected, 96
Inspection of, enforced by mandamus, though time for appeal elapsed, 332
Copies to be granted, 326

BOROUGH.
Warden of, is an office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, 938
If a borough had not six justices, the appeal against the rate was to the county, 337
If the number sufficient, but some interested, the appeal must have been to the borough sessions, 337
Where no grant of quarter sessions, the appeal is to the county, 338. See RATE, 14

BORROWING Money.
Power of, given by statute, 373

BRIDGE.
Being charged with and paying rates for county, gives no settlement, 954
Tolls of a bridge a tenement, 751. See TENEMENT.
In two parishes, may be rated in each, though the tolls are collected only in one, 313

BURIALS.
Office of collector of duties on, within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, 929
Of paupers, not necessarily a duty of overseers, but of the person in whose house death ensues, 34, 35
Guardians may bury pauper, 1296
Expense payable by parish to which he was chargeable, 1296
Or where he died, 1296
Or where the body was, 1296
To be buried in consecrated ground, in the place where he dies, 1296
If no contrary wish expressed in lifetime by pauper, or his relatives, 1296
No officer connected with the poor to receive any money for burial, 1296
Or act as undertaker for reward, 1296
Or receive any money for dissection, 1296
Or derive any emolument from the burial or disposal of body, 1296
Penalty of 5*l.*, 1296

C.

CANALS.
Rate for, 19. See RATE.

CANCELLING.
What amounts to a cancellation of indenture of apprenticeship, 723, 730. See APPRENTICESHIP, (13.)

CASE, Special. See REMOVAL, X. 2.
Sessions not bound to grant it, 1191, 2
Former practice of referring to the judge assize, 873, n., 1190
Form of, on a rate, 1345
Should refuse, if they have no doubt, 1189
Facts, and not evidence, should be found, 1193
"It appeared to" sessions sufficient finding, 735
Should find the meaning of "local term," 1194
Sessions proper judges of fraud, 1194
Their judgment as a conclusion of law, often reversed, 1194
Q. B. not disposed to interfere with sessions, 1195
Instances where their judgment reversed, 1196
Not if ultimate decision right, but founded on wrong grounds, 1197
If case insufficiently stated, Q. B. will remit it by consent of both parties, 1197
The proper conclusion of case, 1197
Case sent back to be heard on the merits, the sessions being wrong in point of law, 1197
When not sent back, 885
A formal objection not allowed, which is not stated in the case, 1197, n.
Sending a case back is like granting a new trial, 1198
The whole case must be reheard, 1198
Not necessary to hear fresh evidence when sent back to cure informality, 1198
It must be removed within six months after the sessions, 1199
An order of sessions subject to a case which is abandoned, is no order, (semble) 1184, 1189

CASUAL Resident.
Is not rateable, 143

CASUAL Poor, 111, 115
Cases of sudden emergency or urgent distress to be relieved in the parish where it happens, 111
Duty of overseer, 111
of relieving officer, 111
How provided for where guardians or select vestry are appointed, 111, 112
Persons found in a parish to be treated as, 112, 1030
A child left at the door of the Foundling Hospital is, 112
So also bastards born in an extra parochial place, 119
A pauper passing through a parish and meeting with an accident is, 113
No order of removal can be made and suspended till recovery, 113, 115, 1029

CASUAL Poor—continued.
Secus, if such pauper an inhabitant, 114
A pauper meeting with an accident in one parish, and carried without fraud into another, is casual poor in the latter, 116
Are entitled to medical aid from the parish where the accident happens, 117
If the pauper is a servant the master is not liable for the expenses, 121
Nor the place of pauper's settlement, 119
As to liability of overseer or stranger for medical attendance generally, 120
As to poor persons born in Ireland, Scotland, Isles of Man, Guernsey, and Jersey, 121. See REMOVAL, 1034

CATHEDRAL.
Area of, may be, but is not necessarily, a vill, 14. See TOWNSHIP.

CATTLEGATE.
Is a tenement, 749. See TENEMENT, (2.)

CERTIFICATE OF CHARGEABILITY.
See CHARGEABILITY, (1312.)

CERTIFICATE, Acknowledgment of Settlement by, 961
Virtually put an end to, as paupers are not removable till chargeable, 962
Useful to obviate reluctance of parishioners to employ paupers, ib.
Secus, from abolition of settlement by hiring, 473
Parish not compellable to grant them, 974
1. Statutes relating to, 962—965
Persons removing into a parish with a certificate were not removable till actually chargeable before 35 Geo. III., 962, 965
It is an acknowledgment of a person as a parishioner, 962
It is in the nature of a power, 973
The party cannot gain a settlement in the certified parish except by taking a lease at 10*l.*, 964
Or executing an annual office after a legal appointment, ib.
Neither the servant nor apprentice to the certificated person can gain a settlement in that parish, ib.
The certificate to be under the hands and seals of overseers and allowed by two justices, 965
2. Form of, and Allowance, 965
Acknowledging pauper as inhabitant, without saying legally settled, sufficient, 965, n.
3. Direction of, 965
Need not be directed to the parish, ib.
To parish of A. and any other parish in the city and county, sufficient, 966
A particular parish must be in contemplation, 965

CERTIFICATE—continued.
It is not transferable from one parish to another, 965
4. Of the Signature and Seals, 965, 966
Statute of William requires hands and seals of the majority of churchwardens and overseers, 966
If not, it is void, 966
A majority is sufficient, 966
One overseer only appointed, signature by him is void, 966
Less than two overseers cannot be appointed, 967
The death of one may be presumed in favour of an old certificate, 967
A certificate, sixty-three years old, signed by one churchwarden and one overseer, presumed to be good, 966
After seventy years, and recognition of the certificate by the parish, it may be presumed that a churchwarden was sworn in before he executed it, 970
Five officers were appointed and two signed, validity not presumed, 971
There must be a distinct seal for each signature, 973
Persons described as officers of the parish may be shown to be officers of a hamlet, 974
As to validity of certificates signed by defective number of parish officers, see APPRENTICE, (9.)
5. Of Allowance and Attestation.
It must be allowed and subscribed by two justices, 975
Otherwise it is null, 975
Justices are not bound to allow it, 975
If the parish is in two counties, the justices of either may allow, 975
It must be attested by two witnesses before allowance, 963
Where an order stated that a certificate was duly allowed, attestation will be presumed, 975
The justices may be the witnesses, 975
Attestation how proved, 975
6. Proof of Certificate, 975.
A certificate allowed and execution certified by the justices is admissible without further proof, 964
The production of a certificate thirty years old is sufficient, without giving any account of it, 977
If any account required, the overseer who produces it may be examined for that purpose, 976
But an entry made by a parish officer in an old book of having received a certificate is not evidence for them, 976
Connected with an order for granting it, it may be, 976
7. Of the Delivery, 977
A certificate of the master must be delivered to prevent his apprentice's settlement, ib.

CERTIFICATE—continued.
So also a certificate given by a friendly society, 977
It is evidence, although not delivered, ib.
Delivery will not be presumed, 977

8. Persons protected by.
A person who resides in a poor house, situate without, but belonging to the certificated parish, 977

9. To whom it extends, 978. See EMANCIPATION.
To an individual includes his family, 978
"Family," includes unborn child, 978
"Family," restrained to those who constitute part of the existing household, 979
"Wife and family," includes second wife, 979
"A. C., spinster, and the child she goeth with," comprehends the child, though a bastard, 978
Secus, "all the children she might have," 978
Children who have become heads of families are not included, 978, 994
Grandchildren are included only when the parent is named in the certificate, 979
It extends to those only who come to reside, and actually reside under it, 980
An emancipated son ceases to be part of "the family" under the certificate, 980, 981
So also a child living away from his parents when of age, 450
A child named in the certificate follows his father's settlement, for he does not inhabit suo jure, but as part of the family, 982
If two children are mentioned by name, an elder child is not included, 984
No distinction between children named and not named, 983
A certificate of friendly society to the father will include an unemancipated daughter, 984

10. Effect of, 985.
It is evidence as an admission, although not delivered, 977, 985
It is not evidence, even as an admission, unless properly signed, 985
It is conclusive only between the original parties, 986
Conclusive between them, though not delivered till after removal, 986
It is a kind of estoppel, and not to be favoured, 986
The certifying parish may inquire into the truth of the certificate in a question with a third parish, 986
As between the original parishes the parish granting a certificate of persons as man and wife cannot deny the marriage, 985
Though the man had a wife living, 985
Or the husband a wife, 985
If it certifies a child, it cannot deny its legitimacy, 985

CERTIFICATE—continued.
It is not conclusive against subsequent settlement, 987
It extends no farther than the parish to which it is first delivered, 987

11. How determined, 988
1. By Settlement in a Third Parish, 988
The onus probandi of a fresh settlement lies on the certifying parish, 988
It is discharged by certificated person being hired and serving for a year in third parish, 987
A certificated person gaining a fresh settlement in a third parish might afterwards acquire one in the certifying parish by hiring and service, 987

2. By Settlement in the Certified Parish.
By taking a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.*, 988
The certificated person coming into a parish on a tenement of the value of 10*l.* never resides under the certificate, 763
Residence by permission is not sufficient, 774
Tenement under 13 & 14 Car. II. is a tenement under this statute, 988
Taking before certificate and completing residence after gives settlement, 988
By appointment to execute annual office. See OFFICE, 923.
By estate, 959. See that title.
Twenty years' possession gives him such an estate as by residence for forty days he gains a settlement, 990
So also an estate devised, 989
Or voluntarily given, 903
A certificated person cannot gain a settlement by a purchase in its ordinary sense, 991

3. By Abandonment of Certificate, 993
Temporary absence for particular purposes does not discharge certificate, 994, 996
But an absence for six years without intention of returning does, 996
What is a temporary removal, ib.
It is discharged by an absence of seventeen years, and dying without returning, 993
But not by hiring and service in another parish, which does not give a settlement, 995
Secus, if he acquires a settlement, 995

4. By Order of Removal, 996
It is discharged by an order of removal, 996

5. By a Certificate to another Parish.
A certificate to another parish discharges prior one, 997

12. Removal of Certificated Persons, 997
Only those who are chargeable can be removed, 997

CERTIFICATE—continued.
May be removed to a settlement gained before certificate granted, 998
13. Of Apprentices and Servants to Certificated Persons, 998
No apprentice to, or hired servant of, certificated person shall gain a settlement as such in the parish, 964
Secus, if the master comes at once on a tenement of 10*l.*, 989
Being assigned to a master in another parish, he may acquire a settlement there, 987
But not serving another person in the same parish, 999
Apprentice may gain a settlement between the granting and delivering of certificate, 1002
The settlement must be complete before the delivery, 1002
If the master's certificate is discharged, apprentices bound before such discharge gain no settlement by subsequent service, 1000
A child emancipated cannot gain a settlement by apprenticeship in the certificated parish, unless both the binding and inhabitation take place after emancipation, 1001
Residence on the last day of apprenticeship in the certified parish neutralizes previous settlement in a third parish, 1003

CERTIORARI.
Must be applied for within six months after sessions, whatever the cause of delay, 1199
Appointment of overseers, may be removed by, 33
A rate cannot be removed by, 351
Nor an appeal by overseers against disallowance of accounts, 385
Secus, if appeal by any other person, 385
Case cannot be removed where certiorari taken away, 1200
A return to, ought not to embrace the grounds of appeal, 1189
Nor any facts, where no case granted, 1189
Rules of commissioners to be removed into Q. B. by, 988
Ten days' notice to commissioners, 988
Will not remove an order made subsequent to its issue, 1199

CESTUI QUE TRUST,
Residence by, sufficient to give a settlement by estate, 872. See ESTATE.

CHAPELS.
Formerly rateable when profit made of them, 153
Secus, now, 252, n.

CHARGEABILITY.
Actual chargeability essential before removal, 1013

CHARGEABILITY—continued.
There must be a complaint of, 1078
And adjudication of, 1078
The examination must show chargeability, 1054
"They are chargeable" insufficient, 1054
Relief to children under sixteen, 429
Relief to children by a former husband, 100
Unmarried woman with child deemed chargeable, by 35 G. III., 1014 Secus 3 & 4 W. IV. c. 76, 1014, n.
Though certificated, 1029
So also a married person pregnant with bastard, unless she is a person of substance, 1028
Upon removal, justice must adjudge such person to be chargeable, 1078
This constructive chargeability not within 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 33, 126
Poor persons born in Scotland, &c. being chargeable, removed to their native land, 123
Persons may be chargeable and not removable: e. g. Nurse child, 1024
Servant pregnant with bastard, 1027
Wife deserted resident on husband's estate, 1017
Resident on an estate purchased for less than 30*l*, 1016
Quære, since 35 Geo. III., 1017
Notice of chargeability must be sent, 1055, 1079
Omission thereof, good ground of appeal, 1055
A convicted vagrant is actually chargeable, 1015
May be proved by a certificate, 1310
Form thereof given by statute, 1312
Must be sealed with the seal of Board, 1236
Receivable in evidence without proof of signature or seal, 1310

CHARITY.
Commissioners may call for account of, 1265
Lands appropriated to charitable purposes are rateable, if beneficially occupied, 157, 173
Objects of the charity, as lunatics, not rateable, 155, 160
No settlement can be gained by residence, or hiring and service in certain charitable institutions, 406
Employment from charitable motive is not a hiring, 493
Where premium supplied by public charity, no stamp requisite, 615, 639
What is a public, 639. See APPRENTICE, (6.)
Residence in a tenement as a matter of charity conferred a settlement before 59 Geo. III., 791

CHATTEL.
The value of a chattel cannot be added to make the tenement of annual value of 10*l.* 807
Secus, of a fixture, 808. See TENEMENT, (2.)

CHELMER AND BLACKWATER NAVIGATION.
Company have only an easement in the ancient river, 258
Rateable for canal as the adjoining land, 257

CHILDREN.
As to their settlement. See BASTARD and BIRTH.
Orphan children may be sent by guardians under Gilbert's act to workhouse, 69, n.
Infants of tender years becoming chargeable from accident or misfortune, 69
Or they may be placed with a reputable person in and near the parish with weekly allowance, 69
To be delivered to their parents on request, 69
Under seven not to be separated from parents without consent, 70
Nor with consent, 1024
Presumed to be removed as children within the age of nurture, 1081
May bind themselves apprentices, 622
Or be bound by the parish without their assent, 665
Who are comprehended by this word in a certificate, 978. See CERTIFICATE, (9.)
Children means legitimate children only, 103, 978
Nurse to be removed with their parents, whether legitimate or not, 1024
But to be maintained by the parish in which the child is settled, 1026
Legitimate children within the age of nurture not removable to second husband's settlement, 429
Secus, bastards born since Poor Law Act, 432
Infant bastards born before that act, and already separated from mother, removable to place of birth, 430
Legitimate children above seven, and under sixteen, removable to their settlement, 432
Of sufficient ability bound to maintain their parents, 99. See RELIEF, (1.)
How bastards maintained. See BASTARD, vol. i.
How they cease to be part of the family. See EMANCIPATION.

CHIMNEY Sweepers.
Form of indenture of apprenticeship, given by 28 Geo. III. c. 48, 608
Children under sixteen cannot be bound apprentice to, 620
Not to have more than six, 28 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 7.

CHURCH.
Rate, is within 3 Will. III. c. 11, s. 6, 954
Notice to be affixed to the door of, 324

CHURCHWARDENS. See also OVERSEERS.
Are overseers without appointment, 21
There must be two overseers exclusive of, 20
Of a tithing, are also for the parish, 21

CHURCHWARDENS—continued.
By custom, it seems, there may be only one churchwarden, 966
A custom to have none is bad, 967, n.
With the overseers are for certain purposes a body corporate, 59, 388
In such cases churchwardens alone cannot act, 388
Nor two overseers, one of whom is churchwarden, 388
Majority of parish officers bind the rest, 83
Cannot sue overseer for refusing copy of rate, 332
May be distrained on by majority of overseers, 357
May be punished as overseers, but must be described as such, 370
They are overseers of the whole parish, although divided into townships, 21, 1039
Cannot be one of the justices who make an order of removal, 1043
Their signature to indentures of apprenticeship. See APPRENTICE, (9.)
To certificates. See CERTIFICATE, (4.)
May act, though not sworn, 613, 614, 970

CLERGYMEN.
May visit workhouse, 66
Any minister of religion may visit inmate, 66, n.

CLERK of the Peace.
Appointment of commissioners and assistants to be sent to, 1241
Notification to be published and preserved, 1241
Counterparts of agreement for union for settlement to be deposited with, 1250
May tax bill of attorney for parochial business, 1300

CLERK of Union.
Commissioners may order guardians under Gilbert's Act to appoint one, 63
If the order directs that the clerk shall collect statistical information, it is bad, 63
May conduct certain legal proceedings without being an attorney, 1309

COAL Mines. See RATE.
Are rateable by express enactment, 232
Are rateable if profitable to any one, 232
Expense of sinking not to be deducted in estimate of profit, 276

COHABITATION.
Marriage presumed from, 422

COLLECTORS of Rates.
Commissioners cannot order an appointment of, 39
They may direct the guardians to do so, 1308
Bond by, 1324
Hold an office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11 s. 6, 929

COLLECTORS—continued.
May be appointed to do the duties of assistant overseer, 1307

COLLEGE.
Officers of, are rateable for their apartments, 162
Site of, not necessarily a vill, 13, 14

COLLIERY.
No apprentice allowed in, under ten years of age, or for more than eight years, 620

COLLUSION.
A bastard born while mother removed by collusion is settled in the colluding parish, 411
Of parish officers in procuring a marriage does not prevent the wife from following her husband's settlement, 455
Effect of fraud prevented when the interference does not break in upon a higher principle, 456

COLOURABLE Transaction.
When a contract is really for a year, but an evasion of or false colouring is given to it, it is fraudulent, 522. See HIRING TO AVOID SETTLEMENT.

"COMING TO SETTLE."
Its meaning, 113

COMMISSION, Poor Law, 4
Report, 4

COMMISSIONERS, Poor Law.
Duties and powers, 4
Have a common seal, 1240
Must record their proceedings, 1240
Must make a general report to Secretary of State, 1240
May appoint nine assistant commissioners, and delegate their powers to them, 1284
Special commissioners, 1284
If misconduct imputed, the party may be heard by counsel, 1284
Not to sit in parliament, 1241
Oath of office, 1241
Administration of relief to be under their control, 4
May order workhouses to be built, 5
May prohibit the enlargement of a local workhouse, 1244, n.
May order guardians to elect a chaplain, 41
May constitute a new board of guardians, but not in a parish having guardians under a local act, 48
Secus if one only of such parishes is under a local act, 50
Not if population exceeds 20,000, without consent, 1308
They may appoint, if the old "Union" was ecclesiastical only, 53
May order guardians under Gilbert's Act to appoint a clerk and auditor, 63

COMMISSIONERS—continued.
Their order bad in part, bad altogether, 63
May issue rules for the government of workhouses, &c. and education of children, 5
May issue rules for apprenticing children, 5
May issue rules to guardians, and rescind them, 5
May issue rules relating to the accounts, 5
May issue rules for contracts, 5
May attend the board of guardians and parochial meetings, 5
Cannot interfere in any individual case, 5, 77
Nature of a general rule, 5. See RULES.
Its validity determinable by Q. B., 5
Have the authority of a statute, 1230
May require an account of property held in trust for any parish, 6
Disobedience and contempt of, how punishable, 6, 1268
They cannot appoint paid officers, 6, 38; but may dismiss them, 43
The chancellor will restrain an excess of authority, 6
They cannot order a collector to be appointed in St. Paul's Covent Garden, 39
Nor for any parish, not of a union for rating, 39
All such orders made before May 6, 1839, confirmed by statute, 41
Q. B. will not examine the propriety of their order, 1219

COMMITMENT.
Of overseer for not accounting may be till he accounts, 369
For not delivering up a particular book till he delivers it, but not till he delivers all books, 375
For returning after removal must be for a definite period, 1095

COMMON.
Mere right of, not rateable, 205. See RATE.
Right of, in gross, is ademenement, 749, 756
Guardians may inclose for use of workhouse, 57

COMPLAINT.
Foundation of justices' jurisdiction for making an order of removal, 1043
Must be stated in the order, 1043

CONDITIONAL Hiring, 522
A contract for a year to be determined on a given event is, 522
If condition not acted on the contract becomes absolute, 522
Distinguished from exceptive contract, which cannot endure for the year without some fresh agreement, 523
Instances of conditional hiring. See HIRING, (10.)

CONSENT.
General, by master to his apprentice, not sufficient, 702, 722. See APPRENTICE (12.)
Particular, may be inferred, 701

CONSIDERATION.
Must amount to 30*l.* to enable purchaser to gain settlement by it, 901
Paid or contracted for in relation to apprentice, must be inserted in the deed, 606
If it is 6*d.* not necessary, 639
It must be money, or something valuable to the master, 643
Food for apprentice is not, 642, 644. See APPRENTICE, (6.)

CONSTABLE.
A place having a constable is a vill, 13
Costs of indictment for assaulting, not payable out of the poor's rate, 373
Serving the office of, gains a settlement, 938
Is in office before he is sworn, 935

CONTRACT.
Action on, for supply of bread, 2 M. & W., 13
May be made for the maintenance and clothing of poor, 82
But not for employment, 71
Contractors to conform to the rules of commissioners, 83, 1256
Persons having the management of the poor cannot be concerned in, for provisions for the poor, 398. See OVERSEERS.
Penalties of 55 Geo. III. extended to the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 398
55 Geo. III. c. 137, s. 7, as to notices, repealed 109
For a hiring, though made on a Sunday, is legal, 492
Repeal of 45 Geo. III. c. 54, respecting, 1256

CONVEYANCE of Parish Property.
Forms prescribed by statute, 127

CONVICTION.
Introducing spirituous liquors into the workhouse, 55 Geo. III. c. 137, s. 8, 76
Ill treatment by masters, 76
Or other misconduct, 76
Form of, 76

COPY.
Of private documents after proof of loss of original, 735
Of parish books or papers to be given on demand to persons rated, or liable to be, 326
Attested, and no other, of soldiers' examination admissible, 1072

COPYHOLD.
Devisee of, before admittance gains a settlement, 879
Guardian of, may gain a settlement by residence, 889. See ESTATE.
Fines for renewal of, are not rateable, 226
Record of fines for surrender is secondary evidence of surrender, 879

CORPORAL Punishment.
To adult not allowed in workhouse, 73

CORPORATE Towns.
Ancient separations of town from parish confirmed, 20
Time of such separation, 20

CORPORATION.
Occupation of a tenement, under a, without deed, gives a settlement, 748
Churchwardens and overseers are for certain purposes a corporate body, 59, 388. See CHURCHWARDENS.
Rateable to the poor, 152
When the corporate body, and not the burgesses, are considered as occupiers, 207, 213. See RATE.
Indentures under corporate seal rendered valid, 619

COSTS. See REMOVAL, X. 3.
In actions against persons acting under the authority of the Poor Law Act, 1270
The sessions may give costs upon an appeal against any neglect, act, or thing done or omitted by overseers, or by justices, 380
May be awarded on appeal against appointment of overseers, 380
So also upon an appeal against a rate, 350
And against overseers' accounts, 380
On appeal by overseers against disallowance of accounts, the sessions may award costs out of poor's rate, 384
Awarded on suspension of order of removal, to be paid by the parish to whom the order is directed, 1014
Appeal against an order for such costs, if exceeding 20*l.*, 1014
May be given upon appeal concerning any settlement, 1117
And against any party making frivolous grounds, 1117, 1202
So also after notice of appeal, 1204.
So although the order was quashed for form, 1174
Where given upon an appeal determined, it must be entered, 350
What is an entry and determination, 350
It may be entered for the purpose, 351
Upon removing a case by certiorari, 1201
Must be ascertained at the sessions, 1203.
Double, given to justices, overseers, &c. in actions against them for tort, or acts done, where plaintiff is nonsuited, or defendant has a verdict, repealed, 394, n.
Payable by statute out of poor rate, 1306
Apprehension and prosecution of persons neglecting or deserting their family, 1306
Disobeying rules of commissioners, misbehaviour in workhouse, carrying away clothes, &c., 1306

COUNTY.
Justices of said county, refers to county last mentioned, 682, 1049
Rate, payment of, gives no settlement, 954

COWS.
Renting cows, to be pasture fed, is a tenement, 749

CHAPLAIN.
Commissioners may order the election of, in a union, 41
Is an "officer" within the Poor Law Act, 41

CROWN PROPERTY.
Occupied by royal family not rateable, 162
Nor when occupied by a regiment, 167
But secus, occupied by gift or for wages, 162, 167

CURATE.
Not an officer within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 1, s. 6, 925

CUSTODY.
Parish chest the proper, for parish indentures, 739
Of appointment of overseer belon s to the individual, 29

CUSTOM.
Of hiring for less than a year, does not aid the settlement, 505, n.
A general hiring may be presumed to be a customary hiring, 500

CUSTOMS.
Officers of, rated to and paying land tax, gain settlement though reimbursed by collector, 959

D.

DAIRY. See Cows.

DAY.
No fraction of, in law, 507.

DEATH.
Of master determines apprenticeship, 733
If parish apprentice is then living with family, the service to continue for three months, 608, 610
Of master does not dissolve a contract of hiring, 567, 574
Of tenant, before year expired, prevents a settlement by renting, under 59 Geo. III., 827

DEAN, Forest of.
Divided into two townships, 407

DEBT.
How persons confined under mesne process for, not in county gaols, to be relieved, 88. See Prisoners.
Action of, does not lie for balance of overseers' accounts, 376, n.
Nor for poor rate, 359
Due from the parish, how liquidated, 1282

DECLARATION.
Of parents dead, that child was born before marriage, admissible, 420
Secus, as to place of birth, 420
Of rated inhabitants admissible against their own interest, 1154. See Evidence.

DEED.
Apprenticeship must be created by, 608, 62, Secondary evidence of, admissible after proof of loss, or possession by opposite party, 735
Execution must be proved by attesting witness, 738

DEFEASIBLE.
A tenancy for a year, defeasible on a month's notice, may give a settlement, 798
So also a hiring for a year defeasible on notice, 528

DELIVERY.
Of certificate, essential to prevent apprentice to certificated person conferring a settlement, 977
Of suspended order of removal must be, within a reasonable time, 1087
Within ten days, or the charges not payable, 1086

DEMAND,
Express, of surplus after distress for poor rate, necessary to enable person to sue for it, 395

DEPUTY.
Can gain no settlement by serving an office, 923

DESERTER.
Can gain no settlement by hiring and service 478
Nor by residence for concealment on a tenement taken by his wife, 791

DESERTION.
Of wife and children, by running away and leaving them chargeable, is an act of vagrancy, 103. See Relief.
Upon, of wife or children, the overseers may seize the goods and receive the rents of party deserting, 103
Actual, essential—mere refusal to maintain, not equivalent to, 106
A bastard, not a child within vagrant act, 104

DEVISE.
In trust for A., enables A., by residence, to gain a settlement, 874

DIRECTION.
Not an essential part of a certificate, 965. See Certificate, (3.)

DIRECTION—continued.
Essential in order of removal, 1083. See REMOVAL, 111, (5).

DISPENSATION.
Is where the service is constructive, the relation of master and servant continuing, but actual service dispensed with, 562
Doctrine of, not to be extended, 562. See HIRING and SERVICE, (2, 3.)

DISSOLUTION.
Must be by mutual consent, or by act of law, 575

DISTRESS FOR RATE, 351
Demand at corporate meeting or on premises sufficient, where an act required previous demand, 153, 386
No action sustainable for a rate, 352, 359
Mandamus to pay granted in one case, 352
Disabilities from non-payment, 352
Overseers may distrain, and if no goods, party may be committed, 352, 353
Majority of overseers may distrain on churchwarden, 357
May be on occupier, where owner is rated by a local act, 360
May distrain, where party removing is liable to a proportion, 352
Goods may be sold, 352
Form of commitment, 1350
Goods may be levied elsewhere, if not sufficient in parish, 352
Party may appeal against such distress, 352
If not sufficient in the county, then in any other county, 352
Form, 1350
Where there is appeal, the distress may be for the amount of the last effective rate, 353
If a rate is quashed, proceedings for recovering it must be stayed, 353
Rate to be recovered, as altered by sessions, 353
The warrant must be special, not general, 354
The precise sum should be demanded, 356
Assistant overseer may demand rate, 357
One overseer may demand it, 357
May be granted before the time for which the rate made is expired, 353
Summons must precede the warrant, 354
Form of summons, 1347
One justice may issue it, 3 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 2
Distress after tender by landlord improper, 354
The refusal to pay must be proved on oath, 354
Granting a warrant is a judicial act, 357
Q. B. will not compel a warrant by mandamus, whereby the justice might be liable to an action, 355 and n.
No warrant should be granted when the rate is void, 355

DISTRESS FOR RATE—continued.
The justices cannot refuse, if Q. B. has decided the rate to be valid, 355
One writ of mandamus may order two warrants for two rates, 355
Mandamus may be against all the justices who refuse, 355
The overseer may apply to other justices, 355
The application for a mandamus should be prompt, 355
Granted, where the objection to the rate can be taken on appeal only, 355
An inhabitant cannot dispute the rate in an action or on a distress, on the ground that he makes no profit, 356
Nor an occupier, because his occupation was not beneficial, 239
But an occupier may show that he is assessed for some houses not in his occupation, 355
Or for some not in the parish, 355
Insufficiency of description of property no answer to distress, 356
Non-publication good answer to distress, 356
Goods of offending party only can be taken, 359
In executors' hands, 359
Averia carucæ, and working tools may be distrained, 359
Money, it seems, 359
House cannot be broken into to levy a distress, 358
Goods of ambassador's servant, residing by himself, not privileged, 360
If one warrant of distress for two rates, and one illegal, it is void, 356
If several warrants, the distress may be excessive, but the seizure legal, 356
Award of costs not vitiate warrant, 357
Demand of warrant unnecessary, where parties trespassers, 358
Want of form does not render distress unlawful, 358
Notice of action not required where one warrant for highway and poor rate, 356
Overseer may plead not guilty, 361
May be made on overseer for neglect of duty, 397
May be made for arrear of past year, 365
For charges incurred by suspension of removal, 1013
To be indorsed by justice of county in which parish lies, 1014; who cannot refuse, 1202
Replevin lies, or an action where distress is wholly illegal, 361

DISTRESS.
Whether equivalent to payment of rent, 820, n. 823

DIVISION,
Justices of, explained, 28

DOWER.
Residence in right of, gives no settlement, 882.
Secus, in right of quarantine, 882

E.

EARNEST.
Contract of hiring completed by, 1231
Evidence of a new contract, 500

EASEMENT.
Not rateable, 196
But with exclusive possession of ground, is rateable, 199

EMANCIPATION, 433
Loose term, borrowed from the civil law, 991
General rule for children under age, 433
General rule for adults, 433
Not during minority, unless the child marries, or contracts some relation which wholly and permanently excludes parental controul, 433
Not presumed, 434
An idiot is always a minor, and never emancipated, 434
So also a child of physical incapacity, 434
Acquisition of a settlement not properly an emancipation, 446
Marriage is, without separation from father, 434, 5
Enlisting as a soldier and returning after twenty-one is, 435
Secus, if he returns before twenty-one, 438
Militiaman, returning after twenty-one, emancipated, 436, 7, and the emancipation relates back to the time of enlistment, 438
Secus, it seems, if serving in the militia with his father, 436
Infant gaining a settlement in own right, even in father's parish, is emancipated, 439
A minor residing with an uncle, and occasionally visiting his father, is not, 439
A minor, living away from his father from four till twenty-one supported by his grandfather, and at his death by his will, is not, at eighteen, 440
Nor an adult carrying on a distinct trade, but living with his mother, 442
Absent, and returning before twenty-one, is not, 443
A minor, working about the country for himself and returning to his father at his pleasure, is not, 442
(Secus, if he is hired and serves for a year in an extra-parochial place, and returns before twenty-one, 445)
Or is an apprentice to a certificated man and returning before twenty-one, 443, 4
Or if the indenture is void, 446
A minor working for relatives who maintain him, is not, 444
It is, where an adult goes into service, 447
Even for the harvest, 448
So also where an infant daughter placed with an uncle continued to be with him when she came of age, 448
So also a child included in a certificate as part of the family, was, when an adult, hired and served for a year, in the certificated parish, 451. FAMILY, its meaning. See CERTIFICATE.
So also a minor who went to sea, and continued there till he became twenty-one, is emancipated at twenty-one, and settled where his father then settled, 452
He follows father's settlement acquired before he became twenty-one, 453
Emancipation by settlement dates from the completion of the settlement, 453
Where a settlement of father is obtained by twenty years' adverse possession, a son emancipated before they are completed, follows it, 897
Emancipated child does not lose his settlement by ceasing to reside within ten miles of the parish where his father was settled by estate, 856

EMBEZZLEMENT,
Of goods provided for the use of the poor, is indictable, or punishable upon summary conviction, 73

EMIGRATION.
Money may be raised on the rates for purposes of, 1260.
Must be applied to that purpose, 1296
May be recovered as a loan, when party does not emigrate or returns, 1260

EMPLOYMENT.
By guardians, 70
Overseers must endeavour to find, for the poor, 34, 81
Of poor, may be in a trade, 81
Of poor, may be in or on land rented or purchased for the purpose, 80

ENLISTMENT AS A SOLDIER.
Emancipation by, 436, 7, 8

ENTIRETY.
Tenement need not be entire for the purpose of settlement, 771. See TENEMENT (4.)

EQUITABLE.
It must be an estate, and not a mere interest, to give a settlement, 875

ESTATE, Settlement by, 853
General statement of the law, ib.
Division of subject, 853
Statutes relating to, 854

I. Of Estates not acquired by Purchase, 854
No settlement can be gained by purchase, unless the consideration paid is 30*l.*, 854
Such settlement not to be retained longer than the person resides within ten miles thereof, 854
The settlement is thereby extinguished, and not suspended, 855
It applies to one gained under 13 & 14 Car. II., 855
A lunatic removing to an asylum loses his settlement, 855

ESTATE, Settlement by—continued.
An emancipated child does not lose such settlement, 856
Ten miles how calculated, 855, n.

1. Nature of the Thing or Property, 856
It must be part of the reality, 857
Therefore residence on leasehold or freehold estate upon which the resident has a rent charge, is not sufficient, 857
Nor where a schoolmaster receives an annuity charged for him on real property, 857. See 877
Nor when he acts for the vicar who was the cestui que trust, 930
Secus, if the schoolmaster is the cestui que trust, 858, n.
A burgess receiving rent from estates, belonging to, and let by, the corporation, is removable, 860
A right of common or turbary never used, is a mere franchise, 860
An allotment made to a shepherd of a common flock, and who was hired for a year, gives him no estate, 858

2. Tenure and Duration of Interest, 862
The nature of the tenure immaterial, 862
Any interest not arising by purchase, is sufficient, 853

3. Of the Annual Value, 862
It need not be worth 10*l.* a-year, 862

4. The Interest in the Estate, and who may acquire this Settlement, 863
Personal beneficial interest not necessary, 888
A person who comes to an estate by inheritance, or as executor, or administrator, however small the value, is irremovable, 865
And if he resides as such forty days he gains a settlement, 865

Infants.
An infant may, 863
A convicted felon may, 902

Executors, &c. 863
The executor of lessee for years, acquires a settlement, 863
Or of tenant from year to year, 864
Though under 10*l*, 863
And the will not proved, 863
So the sole next of kin without administration, 869
When administration is essential, 865
One of two sons cannot, without administration, 865
Although he agreed to take the lease as his portion, 865
A widow with children is not properly sole next of kin, 866, n.
Widow and children, living thirty years on the estate without administration, gain no settlement, 870

ESTATE, Settlement by—continued.
Nor a daughter living with a widow who is administratrix, 866
Nor the taking out of administration after the order of removal made, 865
Nor after expiration of the term, 865
Nor after assignment of the term, 866
Administration had no retrospective effect, 869
The sessions should decide whether the party continued in possession as administrator, or as tenant, 867, 886
The widow by administering would gain a settlement, though the parish had paid the expenses of the administration, and the sessions found fraud, 867

Trustee and Cestui que Trust, 872
Residence by one child on an estate decreed to be sold for the benefit of several children, confers no settlement, 872
Secus, if one of the devisees take it by agreement, 872. But see 865
Devisee of equity of redemption has a sufficient estate, 874
Solvency of estate immaterial, 874, 895
Devise, after payment of debts to trustees for the benefit of A. B. and C. all or any, as trustees thought proper. Residence by A. gives no settlement, the debts of devisor not being paid before A.'s death, 876
If A. had taken any interest, it would have passed to his assignees, as he was a bankrupt, 876
Devise to A. with liberty for B. to live there, residence by B. gives a settlement, 877
So also residence by an appointed schoolmaster on estates held in trust for the school, 877. And see 658, n.
What is not sufficient, 930
The rent must be appropriated to the master, and not to the school, 878
An appointment inconsistent with the trust is not fraudulent, 878
Residence by a child on an estate devised to be let, and profits to be paid to her, gives a settlement, 879
Either a legal or equitable estate is sufficient, 879, 884
An equitable right is not sufficient, 875, 918
Distinction between equitable right and estate, 890, 918
Residence by a freeholder after an agreement to sell, is sufficient, 894, 5. See 890
Devisee of a copyhold before admittance has a sufficient estate, 879

Estate in Remainder or Reversion, 880
A remainder man during the tenancy for life, hath not a sufficient estate, 880
Neither has a reversioner, 881
The interest must be present, 881

ESTATE, Settlement by—continued.
Residence by the reversioner by leave of lessee to superintend repairs is sufficient, 882

Widow's Right of Dower, 882
A widow before assignment of dower cannot gain a settlement, unless in right of her quarantine, 882, 883

By Wife's Estate in Trust, 883
Residence by husband on estate settled to the separate use of wife, gives him a settlement, 883
So also by the husband of an administratrix of the trust of a term, 884
So also by the husband of one who before marriage had made a purchase under 30*l.* 884
So also by the husband of the executrix of a yearly tenant, 885
So also since 59 Geo. III. 885
The sessions should find whether a widow of a yearly tenant, who married again, paid rent as administratrix, or became the tenant, 886
But residence on an estate which the wife had never reduced into possession, is not sufficient, 887
Her heir is entitled to it, 887

Guardian by Ward's Estate, 887
Guardian in socage residing on ward's estate, gains a settlement, 887
He has an interest in the estate, 888
If the ward is under fourteen years of age, 889
So also a mother as guardian of copyhold estate, there being no custom, 889
There can be no guardian in socage of an equitable estate, 889
But a natural guardian has no interest in the land, 889

Estate in Mortgage, 890
Mortgagor or mortgagee in possession, may acquire a settlement, 891
Residence by mortgagor to superintend repairs, is not sufficient, 891. See 882
Residence on estate after conveyance to trustees for sale, gives no settlement, 890
After a contract to sell, is sufficient, 894
So also where there was a covenant to surrender a copyhold, but no surrender for forty days, 895
Residence by mortgagee after an agreement to sell his interest, is insufficient, 893
So by mortgagor after agreeing to sell his equity of redemption, 894, n.
Husband purchased an estate and conveyed it to trustees to pay purchase-money, with remainder to the sole use of his wife. He resided on it afterwards, but gained no settlement, 893
Settlement gained by marriage with mortgagee in possession, 891

ESTATE, Settlement by—continued.
By Estate acquired by Possession, 896
Peaceable possession for twenty years is a sufficient estate, 896
Although not altogether adverse, 897
When not, 870
Strict title not required as in ejectment, 897
Possession for eighteen years has been considered sufficient, 897
But it seems nothing less than twenty years' adverse possession by tenant at will, will do, 898
Residence by son of mortgagee, upon a claim of right, on an estate mortgaged to the parish by the father, is sufficient, 899
Title to waste by twenty years' possession is not defeated by parochial perambulation, 899
There is no adverse possession when a party claims to hold under a lease, though it has expired, 900
The settlement by twenty years' possession dates from the beginning of that time, 897
Justices not to try titles, 896

II. Of Estates by Purchase for Pecuniary Considerations, 901

1. What is a purchase.
The statute 9 Geo. I. c. 7, 901
If a father gains no settlement by purchase, neither does a son by residence with him, 903
"Purchase" confined to cases where the consideration is pecuniary, 903
A conveyance from father to daughter for natural affection, is not a purchase, 903
Nor where the consideration was natural affection and 10*l.*, the value exceeding 10*l.*, 904, 905
But a grant of waste with nominal fine heriot, and quit rent, is a purchase, 904, 905. See 906, n.
If such a grant is made on the surrender of former lease, by a relation, it is not, 904
Grant of licence to inclose, does not pass any interest in the land, 906
Nor the vendee for 30*l.* of the grantee of such licence, 907
Voluntary conveyance not a purchase, 909
A purchaser under 30*l.* is not removable, 908
Grant of copyhold without custom is not sufficient, 906

2. Of the consideration paid, 908
The sum of 30*l.* must be bonâ fide paid, 901, 908
The parish officers may prove that nothing was paid, 909
Proof of a sum paid greater than the consideration stated, is good, 908

ESTATE, Settlement by—continued.
Part payment by parish officers sufficient, 911
Expenses of a surrender of copyhold form no part of the "sum paid," 911
Secus, the fine to the lord, 911
Where money was borrowed on mortgage of the premises, and paid to vendee, it is sufficient, 911
Secus, if the consideration money is not paid, but remains upon the security of the premises, 913
A purchase of premises, previously mortgaged and not paid off, for less than 30*l.* is not sufficient, 912
Mortgagee entering as creditor for more than 30*l.* gains a settlement, 914

3. Money laid out after Purchase, 914
Money laid out in the erection of a shop after purchase, cannot be reckoned, 914

4. Equitable Interest in Purchased Lands, 915
Possession given after payment of one instalment, second was not paid, and contract rescinded, this is not an equitable interest as to give settlement, 915
Payment of deposit does not give an equitable interest, 915, 917
A father advanced money to his son to buy house, and the father to occupy it for his life, the father has no estate, 918
The relation of trustee and cestui que trust must be created, 916
A constructive trust is not equivalent, 916
Equitable right only is not sufficient, 918
It must be an equitable estate, 918
Payment of the residue of purchase-money, after pauper had sold the estate, does not relate back to the commencement of his possession, 917
Payment of the whole of the consideration gives an equitable estate, 918
Possession in conformity to a bond given, gives an equitable estate, 919

Of the Residence, 919
Residence within ten miles necessary for retaining the settlement acquired by estate, 920
Forty days' residence is necessary, 920
And after the interest is complete, 913
In the parish, it need not be on the estate, 860, 920
The forty days need not be successive, 921
Residence by a wife on her own estate confers no settlement, 920
Residence by leave of tenant for the purpose of making repairs, is sufficient, 882

ESTOPPEL.
Parish officers are not estopped from proving that no money was paid for an estate, 909
Certificate is not, except between certifying and certified parishes, 986
By order of removal unappealed against, 1155. See REMOVAL, VII. (1.)

EVIDENCE.
Copy of a resolution of a board of guardians, when sufficient evidence, 57
On removal of wife, evidence of her maiden settlement is a primâ facie case, 457, 8
But is rebutted by proof that the husband has a settlement though the place is uncertain, 459
Rules of commissioners stamped with seal to be received as evidence, 1240
Certificate of chargeability evidence, per se, 1310
Rules printed by Queen's printer receivable, 1310
Record in a manor book evidence of surrender, 879
Parol evidence admissible to show that the premium for apprentice was paid by the parish, 670
Rated inhabitants competent witnesses, 1152, 1269
So also the parish officers, 1153
But cannot be compelled to give evidence against their own parish, 1155
Their declarations however are admissible, 1154
Though weak evidence, 1154
And although the party is alive, 1155
Mortgagee of lands in appellant parish may refuse to produce his deeds for the respondents, 1154
The pauper is a competent witness, 1153
Evidence admissible to show the ground of the judgment of the sessions, 1168
Session-book good evidence, 1168

EXAMINATION.
Of persons born in Scotland, Ireland, &c., 1032. See REMOVAL III. (4.)
Must contain all the ingredients of a settlement, 1052
Must contain all facts necessary to show jurisdiction, 1052
Construed like the grounds of appeal, 1055. See post.
Sessions should hear an appeal, although the examination discloses another settlement, 1234
Must show how the pauper is chargeable, 1054, 1079
Saying "that they are chargeable" is insufficient, 1054, 1233
The residence must be stated, 1055
Instances of insufficient statement thereof, 1055, 1056, 1057, 1058
It must state that the servant had no child, 1057, 1058
That he was hired for a year, 1058

EXAMINATION—continued.
That he was unmarried at the time of hiring, 1233
"Spenser's Hotel" is not a sufficient description of master, 1233
Statements from which a hiring could not be inferred, 1233
Hearsay evidence of place of birth insufficient, 1059, 1061, 1063
That the pauper lived with his father, as one of the family, sufficient statement that he was not then emancipated, 1128
That a deed was produced and proved, 1067
Or its absence accounted for, 1067
A covenant indenture sufficient, 1062
The consent of the master must be disclosed, 1063
It must describe the tenement,
Omission of landlord's name fatal, 1142
So also not stating it was hired for a year, 1065, 1141
Or occupied for a year, 1065
Or the whole rent paid, 1066
Statement of relief given, when sufficient, 1066
The wife's consent to a separation must be stated, 1234
"Diligent inquiry for husband's settlement" sufficient, 1234
It must be stated that a former order was acted on, 1067
And pauper removed, 1212
The order must be produced, 1067
The order must be founded on legal evidence, 1060, 1062
Some illegal evidence does not vitiate the examination, 1064, 1067
e. g. as of a felon, the fact being unknown to the justices, 1067
Not necessary to negative birth in Ireland, &c., 1235
It is evidence against the parish obtaining it, 1069
Copies of all the examinations must be sent, 1068
Omission good ground of appeal, 1068
It must be taken before two justices, 1080
This must appear on the face of it, 1081
What is insufficient, 1081
What is a sufficient heading of, 1234

As to variance between Examination and Proof.
The sessions are the proper judges of its materiality, 1125
The examination stating a hiring in 1813 not satisfied by proof of a hiring in 1810, 1122
A hiring by D. is not proved by a hiring by D., as his father's agent, 1122
Referred to, although no part of the case, 1045
To ascertain soldier's settlement, 1072
Of persons in custody, 1075. See REMOVAL, III. (4.)

EXECUTION.
Of indenture of apprenticeship, 632. See APPRENTICE, (4, 9.)

EXECUTION—continued.
No proof required, if not denied in grounds of appeal, 1136
Of certificates, 965. See CERTIFICATES, (4.)

EXECUTOR.
Service with, of master, is a continuance in the same service, 567, 574
Of master of parish apprentices not bound by the covenant for maintenance for more than three months, 608, 610
May give consent, 703
Of lessee for years by residence for forty days gains settlement, 863, 865

EXEMPTION.
List of persons exempted from serving office of overseer, 24, 25, 26
Exemptions from poor-rate, 252. See RATE.

EXPENSES.
What may be charged in overseers' accounts, 372. See OVERSEERS' ACCOUNTS.

EXTRA-PAROCHIAL PLACE.
A township may be, by statute, 15
And have overseers, 15
May be taxed in aid, 362
Bastard born in, has no settlement, 411
Removal to and from, without overseers, is bad, 1034
Overseers should first be appointed for, 1034
A hiring may be made in, 492, 598

F.

FAMILY.
In certificate, those who form part of the existing household or fire-side, 978
Does not include a bastard, 104
A child continues a member of, till emancipation, 433. See EMANCIPATION.
Order of removal of, suspended, when removal of some is suspended, 1084

FARMER.
Is not rateable for his stock, 145

FATHER.
Legal power of, over child, ceases at twenty-one, 454
May hire his son as a servant, 486
Has no authority at common law to bind minor without his consent, 628
Child follows settlement of, 433. See PARENTAGE.

FELON.
Convicted, may obtain a settlement by estate, 902
When his evidence receivable on an examination, 1067

FEME Coverte. See WIFE.

FERRY.
Lessee of, not rateable, 221, 222

FIRS.
Planted to shelter and cut out to encourage oaks and not for sale, are not rateable, 248

FISHERY.
Tithes of, are rateable, 231
Held under a parol-agreement is a tenement within 13 & 14 Car. II., 748

FIXTURES.
Landlord's, parcel of the freehold, may be considered part of the tenement, 808
If tenant's, secus, 807, 8

FOREIGN LAW.
Proof not required that an adult may bind himself apprentice, 625

FOREIGNER.
May acquire a settlement, 408
By hiring and service, 408
By renting a tenement, 842
Wife may by his consent be removed to her maiden settlement, 1022

FORFEITURES.
Levied by distress, 1268

FORM.
Matters of, may be corrected by sessions, 1186
Want of, in rate, does not prevent a person paying from gaining settlement, 954
Nor render distress illegal, 358

FORMS. See title PRECEDENTS.

FORTY Days,
Residence of, required by 13 & 14 Car. II., 844

FOUNDLINGS.
No child, nurse, or servant received in hospital for, shall, by virtue thereof, gain a settlement, 410

FOWLNESS, Island of,
Is a parish for the purpose of 43 Eliz., 12

FRANCHISE. See BOROUGH.

FRAUD.
Effect of, prevented when it does not interfere with a higher principle, 456
In procuring the removal of a pregnant woman, must be by the parish officers, 412
Hiring to prevent a settlement is no, 510, 521
Where a contract is such in reality as would give a settlement, and an evasion of, or false colouring is to give it, it is a, 522
In procuring a marriage, does not prevent the wife from following the husband's settlement, 456
An appointment of a schoolmaster inconsistent with the duty of a trustee is no, though so found by the sessions, 878
What is, in taking a tenement, 851. See TENEMENT, (23.)
Residence under a claim of right without fraud is sufficient, 899
Possession by mortgagor gained by fraud gives no settlement, 891

FRAUD—continued.
Payment of rent by churchwardens is no, though sessions find fraud generally, 824
Secus, if paid to perfect a settlement, 851
Procuring letters of administration for a widow is no fraud, though done to avoid her settlement, 867
Sessions are judges of, 912, 412
Queen's Bench will never presume it, 851, 911
When sessions find, Queen's Bench has rejected it as not invalidating contract, 869, 878
Sent back to the sessions to find it, 412
Q. B. has corrected the inference of fraud drawn by sessions, 1194

FREEHOLD.
Office is within the 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, 925
Nothing is a tenement that is not part and parcel of, 807

FRIENDLY Society.
Act, section relating to settlements repealed, 415
A certificate granted by, has no effect as to settlement unless delivered, 977. See CERTIFICATE.
Bastard born where mother residing under certificate from, followed mother's settlement, now repealed, 415
This applies where mother is residing as part of the family, if certificated person, 415

FUNDS.
Bank Annuities are not rateable, though the local act renders money at interest liable, 268

FURNITURE.
Household, is not rateable, 150
Value of, cannot be included in the value of a tenement, 807

G.

GAOLS. See PRISON.

GAS Pipes.
Fixed in the soil make the land rateable upon its improved value, 302
What deductions allowed, 302
To be rated on the rent, 302
Secus, that part of rent derived from gas in extra-parochial places, 302

GATE-Keeper.
Of turnpike-road, or navigation, can gain no settlement as such, 744
He may by renting land in same parish, 752
Not rateable, 253

GENERAL Hiring.
Is for a year, 500, 502
So of a renting, 800
It may be presumed to be according to a custom, 532

GIFT.
Though a purchase, in a legal sense, is not a purchase within 9 Geo. I. c. 7, 903

GILBERT'S Act, 56 et seq.
Statute 22 Geo. III. c. 83, so termed, 9

GOAL.
Persons committed to, for offence in workhouse, to be at the expense of the parish, 1305

GOVERNORS,
Of workhouses, may be appointed, 61
Not an office to give a settlement, 932, 3

GRANDFATHER and Grandmother.
Of ability, are bound to maintain grandchildren, 100
Inability of father not mentioned in the order, 100
Settlement of paternal grandmother preferred to that of the mother, 426. See PARENTAGE.

GRASS.
Renting after, gives settlement, 749
Grant of profits, is a grant of the land, 750

GROUNDS of Appeal. See EXAMINATION.
Construed with the same strictness as the examination, 1123, 1141
Construed strictly, 1122
With legal certainty, 1140
The parties cannot be heard, on objections not stated, 1117
Though apparent on the order, 1131
Signed by majority of parish officers good, 1117, 1137
Service on one, without fraud, sufficient, 1117
Service on the attorney, insufficient, 1118
Guardian of an union cannot sign the notice, 1119
Nor any one, as a deputy of churchwarden, without express authority, 1119, 1178
Not estopped by notice, as to the number of parish officers, 1119
As to maintenance of lunatics, notice must be given to the clerk of the peace, 1147
No proof required of facts not denied in the notice, 1127, 1135
May avail themselves of a variance between proof and examination, 1122, 1125
What is such a variance, 1121. See EXAMINATION.
Sessions proper judges of its materiality, 1125, 1182
Its deficiency not aided by reference to examination, unless expressly referred to therein, 1144
General objection defeats the object of the statute, 1130
Different rule prevailed at first, 1138, n.
Ground of appeal,
That examination is bad on the face of it, entitles appellant to show that no residence is stated, 1057

GROUNDS of Appeal—continued.
That the tenement was not stated to be rented for a year, 1127
Secus, where other objections are particularized, 1128
An objection to the settlement by hiring enables appellant to show that the relief also mentioned was given under a mistake, 1132
It is not sufficient to say that a statute has not been complied with, 1135
Sufficient that a certificate of chargeability was not sealed as required by the statute, 1236
Under an objection of no notice to overseers, execution of indenture is admitted, 1136
That the paupers were irremovable, as within nurture, cannot be heard under an objection to the second husband's liability for their maintenance, 1136
That the contract was exceptive as to one holiday, and proof as to another, 1137
Where a new settlement is relied on, it must be stated as perfectly as in an examination,
Stating a hiring and service, without any particulars, is bad, 1137, 1139, 1141
So also not stating the party to be unmarried and without children, 1137
So also omitting the landlord's name in a settlement by rating, 1142
Or the residence of the parties, 1140, 1141
(Occupation not equivalent, 1140)
Or that the cows were to be pasture-fed, 1143
Not saying that the pauper was charged with the rate is bad, 1236
Stating that the party received relief for several years, especially in 1839 and 1840, is sufficient, 1145
Mistake in quoting the initials of the names of justices who signed the order, immaterial, 1145
Not necessary to state their names, 1146
Legality of the appointment of overseers, who sign the notice, cannot be tried on appeal, 1237
Fresh grounds may be served where appeal adjourned, because there was not time to hear it, 1146
Secus, where justices divided, 1146
Want of chargeability good ground of appeal, 1054
Application for an order for a lunatic may estop them from denying it, 1127
Notice must be served fourteen days before the sessions, 1148
Exclusive of the days of delivery, and first day of sessions, 1148

GUARDIAN.
In socage, residing on ward's estates, gains a settlement, 887. See ESTATE.
Secus, a natural guardian, 889
There can be no, of an equitable estate, 889
A mother may be, of a copyhold estate, if no custom, 889

GUARDIANS. See also WORKHOUSE.
Their appointment under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 6
Commissioners may direct them to be appointed, 6
When not, see COMMISSIONERS.
In a single parish, 6
Or union, 6
Paid officers cannot be, 8
Nor the sheriff of the county be an ex officio, 8
To be elected by rate-payers and owners, 6
Their number determinable by commissioners, 6
May be altered without consent, 1294
Within forty days after 25th March, 1294
Except on an election on a vacancy, 8
Election of. See VESTRY.
Their qualification, 4
To continue till successor appointed, 7
Justices of the county are, ex officio, 6
But not borough justices, 8
Justices resident in extra-parochial place to be guardians of union adjoining or surrounding, 1295
Incorporated by statute, 1275, 1276
Quo warranto will not lie, 7
Q. B. will regard the guardians de facto, 7
A person may decline the office, 7
Or resign, 8
Overseers, semble, may be, 8
Form of notices of occasional meetings, 1319
Administer the relief of the poor, 8
Provide and regulate workhouses, 8
Consent not required for enlarging workhouses, 1245
Can act only at a board, 8
Their proceedings thereat, 8
Mode of application to justices, 1287
Their clerk may act though not an attorney, 1287
An efficient board may exist, though each parish has not elected a guardian, 7, 8
Non-election of a guardian no answer to demand of proportion of expences, 55
Three may act, 8
Defective election or qualification does not vitiate proceedings, 8
Punishment of officers disobeying guardians, 1268
Must preserve all rules, and allow inspection of them, 1243
Union may be dissolved without the consent of two-thirds, 1249, n.
May bind apprentices, 1292
Power to take waste and forest lands extended to guardians, 1274
Parish property does not vest in them, 391. See 1274

Appointment of, under 22 Geo. III. c. 83, 9
Statutes relating to, 9, n.
Practical utility diminished, 9, n.
Not extended to parishes who do not agree to adopt them, 9, n.
Two-thirds of the persons rated, and attending meeting, to signify their adoption of the provisions, 9
Form of approbation, App.
Three persons to be selected as guardians and three as governors, 9, n.
Salaries to be fixed, 9, n.
Justices to approve, 9, n.
To continue in office till Easter week, 10
They are a body corporate, 57, 391
Form of agreement and consent, 1360
Justices may appoint two out of three, or more, if necessary, and so desired by the parish, 9, n.
Casual poor therein to be relieved conjointly, 111, n.
Notice of meetings, and who may vote, 9
Must attend monthly meeting, 10
Vacancies, how supplied, 10
To be the overseers, 10
Except in making and collecting the rate, 10
Not to put out the apprentices, 10, n.
The binding may be by overseers, 10, n.
Notice to be given to overseers given to guardians, 10
Service by mistake on overseer valid, 10
Commissioners may prohibit the enlargement of workhouse, 1244, n.
Rate for building, 58, 59
Guardians to order churchwardens, &c. to pay them the necessary money, 59
May levy it by distress, 59
To receive all money and pay all expences, 59
Any rated inhabitant may inspect accounts, though time for appeal has elapsed, 371
Guardians, visitors, and other officers under Gilbert's or local act to be elected according to P. L. Act, 1253
Visitor to be appointed by justice out of three persons nominated by guardians, 60
In single parishes, 61
Subject to regulation of the commissioners, 61
Form of appointment, 1363
Visitor shall settle accounts, 60
And doubts as to persons who ought to be sent to workhouse, 60
Visitor may appoint a deputy, 60
S. Form of, 1364
His duties, 60
Is exempted from all parish offices, 60
Certificate thereof, 60
S. Form of, 1364
Treasurer, how appointed, 61
S. Form of, 1364
Security to be given, 61
His duty and salary, 61
Governor may be appointed with salary.
S. Form of, 1363
Is removable for misbehaviour, 61
Commissioners may direct guardians to appoint a clerk and auditor, 63
Guardian, visitor, treasurer, and governor,

GUARDIANS—continued.
to hold office till the Easter week next after appointment, 62
Poor-house to be provided by guardians, 56
Poor-house to be situate in the parish or union, 56
Or in adjoining parish, 57
Poor-house to be free from taxes, except such and to such amount as the house previously assessed, 57
Visitor and guardian to be a body corporate, 57
Guardian's power of buying and leasing lands, 57, 1274
Guardian's power of borrowing money, 58, 1244
Form of security, 1365
Enclosing common for use of workhouse, 57, 1274
Persons to be admitted into workhouse by an order signed by guardian, 69
Such persons must be indigent by old age, sickness, or infirmity, 69, n.
Also orphan children, and nurse children, with their mothers, 69, n.
Children chargeable, and not of age, to be apprenticed, may be boarded with reputable persons, 68
But under seven not to be separated from parent without consent, 70
Persons able, but unwilling to work, to be prosecuted by guardians as idle persons, 70
Guardians to get employment for unemployed persons, 70
Such persons refusing to or running away from work, to be committed, 70
Farming out the poor to cease where guardians exist, 71
But contracts may be made for diet or clothing, 71
Application for relief to be made first to guardian, then to visitor, and then to justice, 68
A justice may order relief, or send pauper to workhouse, 67
Or order employment, 68
Penalty on guardian for refusal, 67
If the visitor order pauper to go to workhouse, justice cannot order relief, 68
If visitor resides six miles off, and the guardian refuses, justice may order relief, 68
Justice to commit the applicant, if idle, or spends his money in alehouses, 68
Poor in workhouses to be maintained by the respective parishes, 71
Guardians to provide clothing, 70
Penalty for neglect, 71
To meet on first Monday in every month, 10
Penalty on absence, 10
ACCOUNTS to be produced then, 364
Proportions payable by each parish to be adjusted, 364
Default of payment, 364

GUARDIANS—continued.
Treasurer to produce accounts of provisions, 364
A rated inhabitant has a right to inspect them, 365
Pauper embezzling, wilfully wasting, or carrying away goods, without permission, may be committed, 73
Property vested in overseers, 73
Property may be marked, 74
Stealing the same, 74
Visitor, guardian, or governor not to sell victuals or goods to, or work in his trade for, poorhouse, 398, 401
A guardian is liable under 55 Geo. III. c. 15, notwithstanding this penalty, 401
Must relieve paupers retarded by sickness or accident in the parish, 111, n.
To be removed when able, 111, n.
Expences defrayed, by the place of settlement, 112, n.
If pauper dies, expence of burial to be defrayed by pauper's parish, 112, n.
If that unknown, by county, 112, n.
Penalty on causing or conveying children, sick or pregnant persons, to remove without an order, 22 Geo. III. c. 83, s. 41
Rules of workhouse to be printed and fixed up, 66
May be altered by justices, 66
By commissioners, 51, 1244
Penalties under these acts, how recovered, 76
Parties grieved may appeal, 76
Under local acts, their proceeding regulated by 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, 1308s

GUERNSEY.
Persons born in, are, when chargeable, to be removed to, 127, 8. See REMOVAL, (7.)

H.

HALES-OWEN.
Not a township for settlement, till 1834, 407

HALVES, halvendales.
Fishery of, with appurtenances, is rateable, 223

HAYWARD.
Is an office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s 6, 928

HAMLET.
Is synonymous with township and vill, 12, 13, 14. See TOWNSHIP.

HIRING and Service, Settlement by, 473
After 14th August, 1834, no settlement can be acquired by, 473
The settlement must have been complete before that day, 473
Statutes relating to, 473
The Contract.
General principles, 474
The parties must be capable of making a contract, 474

HIRING—continued.
Must be unfettered by any subsisting contract, 474
Must be unmarried, and without children, 474
It must be for a year prospectively, implied or expressed, 475
The relation must exist for the whole time, 474

The Service.
General principles, 474
It must be for a year, 474
The last forty days determine the place of settlement, 595
Of the effect of 4 & 5 W. IV. c. 76, s. 64, 5, 476
The yearly contract must be complete before 14th Aug., 1834, 476
The residence on the completion of the last previous year to be regarded, 476
Not the residence for 40 days prior to 14th August 1834, 476

THE HIRING.
1. Parties to the Contract, 477
"Unmarried without children," a widower may be, 477
Children emancipated, not within the act, 478
Secus, if emancipation incomplete, 478
Must be unmarried when the contract is completed, 477
Married when service began, but unmarried when completed, sufficient, 477
So also unmarried when contract made, and married before service without fraud, 477
Or during service, 478
The forty days' service may be after marriage, 595
An apprentice cannot be, 478
Nor a soldier, even by leave of superior officer, 478
Nor a deserter, 478
Nor a militia-man, who does not disclose his liability to his master, 480
Or a volunteer, 481, 485
Secus, if he informs his master, although he is called out, 483
Cannot be a toll-collector, 474
No nurse or servant employed in hospital for foundlings can thereby acquire a settlement, 410
A foreigner may be hired, 408
An infant may contract, 485
And with his father, 486
Rules for ascertaining the reality of such a contract, 487

As to the Master.
His residence and settlement immaterial, 488, 596
The master may be a minor, 485
The turnkey to a gaol is not, 491
But not a prisoner in Southwark, 743

HIRING and Service—continued.
Must not be a certificated person, 486
May be the parent of servant, 487
A public body, not rated to the poor, may "lawfully hire," 488

2. The Contract itself.
It must be a contract for service, 493
A slave can gain no settlement, 492
Contract for cohabitation insufficient, 493
The pauper himself must contract, 491
A compulsory hiring is not sufficient, 489
A son, by serving, may adopt contract made by father, 548
A hiring out by the overseers is not a lawful hiring, 489
If the pauper hires himself, and overseers assist him with clothes to complete the contract, it is a good hiring, 490
It may be made in an extra-parochial place, 492, 598
And on a Sunday, 492
If the contract is by deed, execution by servant not essential, 488
There must be a contract to hire and serve for a year, mutually binding, 492
Employment out of charity is no hiring, 493
Living with relation as such, and returning to him on same terms, is no hiring, 495

3. Where Contract may be implied, 496
If there is no contract, a hiring cannot be presumed, 493
Memorandum of deceased master not admissible to disprove hiring, 496
Hiring by an innkeeper cannot be implied, where pauper expressly contracts to assist the waiter, 494
Hiring inferred from fact of service, 496, 497
Though the service was less than a year, 505
Though the pauper entered the service under a contract for less than a year, 497, 499
Secus, where first contract an imperfect apprenticeship, 545
Inferred from service from day before New-year's day to two days after Christmas, 505
Hiring presumed at the end of first year, 499
Where the parties are not related, from a continuance in service, a hiring on the same terms may fairly be presumed, 499
If the relation of father and child subsist, that presumption fails, 500
The presumption may be rebutted by the custom of the country, 500
Or by the nature of the payments, 499, n.
Or by the time of quitting, 499, n. when not, 502
Contract for service by a father not in-

HIRING and Service—continued.
ferred, if father had no occupation for a hired servant, 486, 7
The sessions must find the fact of hiring, 504, 5, 507
And Queen's Bench will confirm it, if any premise to warrant it, 501, n

4. Where Contract indefinite, 500
General Rule.
An indefinite hiring, where neither time nor wages are mentioned, is a hiring for a year, 500, 502
Apprehension of parties cannot vary the legal effect, 501
Though their acts may explain it, 506
Where there is a customary period of hiring, a hiring for that period may be presumed, 500
General Hirings are—Hiring "to go into the place of another," who was yearly servant, 501
"To serve in the stable," 502
To come and take care of a child, 502
"To stay on an end in your place," 503
Hiring for eleven months, then one month, and then "on the same terms," the last is a general hiring, 504
Not general hiring when the parties may separate at pleasure, 513
Going away in the middle of the year does not destroy the presumption, 502. But see 499, n. 515, n.

5. What is a Hiring for a Year, 504
It need not be one entire contract, 507. See 509
From Whitsuntide to Whitsuntide is for a year, 505
From a day after a fixed feast till the return of the feast, 506
From a few days after Michaelmas to Michaelmas is not, 503
Though continued for three years, 503, 506
There is no fraction of a day, 507
Hiring on the next day after a feast, till the feast is, 506
An ecclesiastical year is not, 506
Custom cannot aid an imperfect contract, 505, n.

What not a Hiring for a Year, 508
A hiring, which either the master or servant may dissolve at pleasue, is not, 513
Nor a hiring as long as they can agree, 513
Or long as the servant had a mind to stop, 513
Or as long as master had work, and when none, to work for his own benefit, 509
Or as a looker, which occupied part of servant's time only, and the rest he worked for others, or received extra wages from his master, 508
Nor two successive half-yearly hirings, 509. See 507

HIRING and Service—continued.
Though such hirings are customary, 509
Nor from statute fair to statute fair, when interval less than a year, 510
Nor for fifty-two weeks, 510
Nor from three days after Michaelmas to Michaelmas following, in leap year, though the interval is 365 days, 511
Three successive hirings, from a few days after Old Michaelmas to Old Michaelmas, is not, 503
From one Christmas breaking up to another Christmas breaking up, is not, 510
In leap year there must be a contract for 366 days, 511
Sessions ought to decide whether hiring for the year means the current year, 531, 583

6. Wages and Notice, 510.
Where no time is specified, and wages are reserved weekly, it is a weekly hiring, 511, 515
But if there is a hiring for a year, the reservation of weekly wages will not control it, 515
Contract for weekly wages, summer and winter, is a weekly hiring, 512, 516
So also weekly wages, with an increase at harvest, 514
So also where servant asked yearly, and master offered weekly wages, which were accepted, 515
So where wages are weekly, to part on week's notice, 516
Or wages monthly, to part on month's notice, 516
But hiring at weekly wages, and a month's notice, is a general hiring, 517
So also at weekly wages the year round, and a fortnight's notice, 517, 518
So also at 2*s.* a day, there being a custom to give a fortnight's notice, 517, n.

7. Hiring by the Job, 519
Hiring for a year to spin so much per stone, is a yearly hiring, 519
So to make screws per gross, good earn good hire, 519
But a hiring to make a certain number of bricks is not, 519
Nor a general hiring to work by the piece, 520

8. Retrospective Hiring, 520
The contract must be prospective, and not include time past, 520

9. Hirings to avoid Settlement, 521
The hiring may be for less than a year, with the express purpose of preventing settlement, 510, 521
Secus, if the contract is really for a year, but colourably for a shorter time, 522
Hiring for eleven months, to prevent settlement, is valid, 521
But hiring for eleven months, and to

HIRING and Service—continued.
give one month over, is colourable, and in law a hiring for a year, 522
A covenant not to hire servants so as to let them gain settlements, is valid, 521

10. Conditional Hiring, 522
Distinction between conditional and exceptive hirings, 523
Is where there is a contract for a year, and, on a given event, either party may put an end to it, 522
If the condition is not acted on, the contract becomes absolute, 522
An agreement for a year, and the pauper to quit if the master had a sale, which he had, is a yearly contract, 557
A hiring to work, with power for the master to stop the work, is conditional, 523
So also where the wages were regulated by the time of work, 524
A hiring, with liberty to part at a month's wages, or month's notice, is conditional, 528
Such a condition usual in domestic service, but not in husbandry, 528
A hiring with power of dismissal without notice, is conditional, 528
So also a hiring for quarter of a year, and if they liked each other to continue for a year, 528
So also a hiring, the servant to try if he was strong enough for the work, 529
Where settlement complete before condition agreed on, 529
Or acted on, 557

11. Exceptive Hiring, 529
Where the absence forms part of the contract, it is exceptive; where by leave of master, it is a dispensation, 523
Are frequent in manufactories, 526
It is exceptive where the overwork is optional, 541
An exception made after the hiring is complete, does not affect it, 529, n.
Is one where the relation cannot subsist for the year, unless some further arrangement should be made, 523
So also, if by the bargain any day is excluded from the service, 523
Or hours, 557
It is exceptive where servant reserves liberty of absence at sheep-shearing, 529
For the harvest month, 529
A week every year to visit friends, 529
Or two or three days, 530
Or two days to receive a pension, 530
Or for a holiday, but no time specified, 530
Or hours are limited, 531
Reserving liberty of absence at sheep-shearing, during which servant to find

HIRING and Service—continued.
a man at his own expense, and his wages to go on, is exceptive, 531
So where servant agrees to make up the time at the year's end, 531
So where servant was to have the harvest month, if he and his master could not agree, and they did agree, 532
So also where servant to be paid for overwork, and receive no wages in severe weather, during which he might employ himself in any way, 531
So also where the agreement was for working days only, and to do certain quantities on each day, 533
So also a hiring as long as master had work, and when none, servant not to be paid, 535
But where a daughter is hired to do the office of a servant, a permission to earn what she can besides, is not an exception, 536
Stipulation for absence made before earnest given, is an exception, 568
Stipulation for absence in militia, not an exception, 536
Exceptions implied by general use or custom, will not affect the contract, 532, 544
But if such exceptions are part of the contract, they will, 544
And if the contract is silent as to the holiday, and there is a known custom for them, 532
If Sundays are excepted by the contract, the hiring is not for a year, 535, 544
Hiring for a week includes Sundays, 552

12. Hiring with Limitation of Working Hours, 537
A bargain for specific hours, excludes all other hours, 539
Hiring to work for certain hours only, is exceptive, 537, 541
And cannot be qualified by evidence of actual service, 541
Hiring to work shearman's hours only, is exceptive, 538
Secus, hiring to work as bleacher, 544
Hiring to work twelve hours and do as much overwork as servant pleased, is exceptive, 538
So also, though nothing said as to overwork, and the servant could not work for any other master, 539
But to work twelve hours a day, and if more, certain sum per hour, is not, 543
Nor a hiring for two years, with fixed working hours, and to be paid for overtime, and deductions made for deficiency, 524
Nor where there was a penalty for absence, 526
A person hired as clerk in a mercantile

HIRING and Service—continued.
house is hired generally, though he serves only the hours of business, 544
A hiring to work according to the rules of the factory, which were discretionary with the master, is general, 543

13. Imperfect Apprenticeship.
Word "apprentice" formerly necessary for apprenticeship, 545
Not so now, 545, n.
Not a good hiring, 545
It must be a hiring for service, and not an imperfect apprenticeship, 545. See APPRENTICESHIP, IMPERFECT, 651
A verbal agreement to serve, and the master to teach a trade, is a hiring, 545
So also clubbing for three years to be taught a trade and do any work, 546
So a contract in writing to serve for three years, to learn to make hats, 546
Contract of hiring not superseded by imperfect apprenticeship, 547
A contract to teach shoemaking being completed, the parties agreed for a year at so much per shoe, this is a hiring, 662
Contract of hiring presumed if there is no agreement to teach, 548, 549. But see 633, 656
Allowance in wages for instruction consistent with contract of hiring, 547
Agreement to work for two years, to have earnings, to allow for instruction, and use of frame, is a hiring, 548
Agreement to serve as a wheelwright for two years, where the boy had been for three years before an apprentice, is a hiring, 549

II. SERVICE.
The servant shall abide in the same service for one year, 550
The service may be with the widow or son of the original master, 567
Or with another, by consent of first master, 570
Service for 365 days is sufficient, though it is less than the year for which servant hired, 505
Under 13 & 14 Car. II. service for forty days conferred a settlement, 555

1. Of Connecting Services under distinct Hirings, 550
Service under a hiring, for a period less than a year, may be connected with service under a yearly hiring, 550, 551
A short time, as ten days, under yearly hiring, sufficient, 551
And the settlement will be in the place of last agreement, 554
Dissimilar services may connect, 552
Service under void contract will connect, 553
Or for different wages, 551

HIRING and Service—continued.
Secus, if the contract excepts Sundays, 553
Or under a contract which the parties abandon, 557
So under a conditional contract, 557
The whole year's service must be under a contract creating the relation of master and servant, 554
Part of the year's service may be abroad, 556
A settlement can be gained in such parish only as the servant has the character of one hired for a year, 554
Service under hiring for a year, will connect with service under an agreement, in the middle of the year to work by the piece, 559
No service sufficient under hiring made when pauper was married, 559

2. Of Lapse between Services, 560
If the service is discontinued for a day, it cannot be coupled with subsequent service, 560
But if the service continues without any agreement for one day, they will connect, 553, 560
Two days after the year, the pauper made a new agreement, but never left the service, this is no discontinuance, 553
Nor where the first ends and second begins on same day, but pauper leaves only for part of day, 561
Incapacity from sickness does not interrupt the service, 562

3. Of Dispensation, 562
A dispensation is where the service is constructive, as where the relation of master and servant continues, but the master dispenses with actual service, 562
Idea of dispensation not to be carried farther, 562
It has been stretched as far as ingenuity can go, 562
"Purging an absence," 585
Receiving absentee without leave, amounts to dispensation, 562
Whether the absence is in the beginning, 564, 568
Middle, 564
Or end of year, 566, 570
Although wages are deducted, 564, 565
So also where absence is from illness, 562, 602
Or to go to a statute fair to be hired, 563
Or reasonable cause, 563
Where the master refused to take the servant, who did not come, from illness, on the day agreed, the service commences from the actual service, 576
So also where the master, on summons, paid servant his wages, but refused to

HIRING and Service—continued.
take him back; the servant offered to return, and made no other contract, 563
Length of absence immaterial, if master takes him back, although he deducts wages, 564
Going to hospital, and receiving all her wages, is a dispensation, though servant never returned, 565
So also where the accident, which occasions absence, arises from servant being in liquor, and master refuses to take him back, 565
So also where a bankrupt master discharges servant, paying the whole wages, 566
Or the master removed and the servant entered another service, 566
So also where the dismissal is wrongful, full wages paid and accepted by servant, 566
And his clothes taken away, 567
So also where keeper of gaming-house quitted his house, dismissed servants, and paid them full wages, 567
Turning away servant to prevent settlement amounts to dispensation, 568
So also servant, quitting to avoid settlement, 568
From absence at the request of the master, the courts incline to infer dispensation, 569
After the hiring the mistress said, "No time was mentioned, you are hired for fifty-one weeks," this is a dispensation, 568
So also where after the contract, the master told the pauper he should go away a fortnight before the end of the year, 568, 1231
So also where a servant desired to be discharged "to go to see her friends," 568
So also absence with leave, and payment of wages earned to master, 570
So also where servant, in his absence, provided and paid a substitute, 571. See 584
Or the master procured another servant, 570
So also where servant works for others, and returns to his master, 564
So also where servant imprisoned, on complaint of his master, and returned to the service, 571. See 592
So also where a servant was fined for a malicious trespass, and advised by her mistress to go to prison, 573
So also where the year expired before the confinement, and pauper returned only for his clothes, 572

4. Of Change of Master, 574
Living with another, at master's command, is a service to the first master, 574

HIRING and Service—continued.
So also where master let his farm, and pauper continued with the tenant without a new contract, 570, 574
So also where servant continued with master's executor, 567, 574

5. Dissolution, 575
A dissolution must be by mutual consent, or by act of law, 575
The contract may continue, but the service be discontinued, 575
Absence absque animo revertendi, is a dissolution, 587
An order of removal does not determine the contract, 819
Parting by consent three weeks before the end of the year, with abatement of wages, is a dissolution, 575
So also without abatement of wages, 575
Although he returns to the service, 575
Or bound by a covenant to serve a whole year, 575
So also where servant quitted second master on complaint made by former master, 575
So also leaving at mistress's request, because another servant coming, 576
Though illness would not enable one party to dissolve the contract, it might induce both to agree to it, 577, 578
So also when servant was ill, and sent for his wages, and part was deducted, 577
Or all paid, 578
Deduct of wages imports master's dissent to the departure, 573, 577
If the master has not the power of compelling the continuance of the service, it is a dissolution, 579
Or if he could not sue another for harbouring the servant, 579
Servant gave a month's warning, and quitted a week before the end of the year; the mistress said, the week did not signify,—this is a dissolution, 579
A hiring may be dissolved on the same day it is made, by a new agreement, 579
Assent of servant to new contract proved by acceptance of earnest, 580
Going into another service with leave and receipt of full wages, is a dissolution, 585
A hiring during the year to commence immediately, at different wages, is a dissolution of the first hiring, 581
But change of wages does not necessarily import dissolution, 583
The contract is dissolved, when the master, quitting business, discharged his servant, and paid him whole year's wages, and he hired himself again, 583
So also where servant was discharged at his own request, procures a sub-

HIRING and Service—continued.
stitute, and hires himself to another, 584. See 571
So also where master turns servant away, and servant accepts the wages, though he return at master's request, 585
So also where servant absent to get a place, and on his return master refused to let him stay out the year, and wages to that time paid and accepted, 586, 7
So also where wages paid only to the day before the year ended, the servant requesting to go altogether on that day, 587
So also if all the wages paid, 589
So also where servant turned out of doors refuses to return, though master requested it, and receives full wages, 587
So also where servant leaves for ill treatment, receives full wages, though the departure is against the master's will, 589
Consent of servant to dissolution by accepting wages and offering herself as a servant, or taking another place, 588
Discharge by justice a dissolution, 588
The contract may be dissolved by a discharge for pregnancy, 590, 1
Suspicion of guilt does not justify dismissal, 591
Mere apprehension for bastardy is not a dissolution, where master received him back, 592
So also absence to avoid apprehension, 592
Absence from misconduct equivalent to wilful absence, 592
Commitment for is, 592
A fraudulent dissolution will not be inferred by Queen's Bench, 593

III. Place in which Servant gains Settlement, 593
Residence for forty days in the parish essential to a settlement, 593
History of this residence, 593
They need not be continuous, 593
But must be within the compass of one year, 593
Though not under the same hiring, 594
Nor within a year from the yearly hiring, 594
The last forty days may be after marriage, 595, 600
If the service of the last forty days has been in different parishes, the settlement is where the servant lodges the last night, 595
So also in the last parish, where the latter part of service is abroad, 556
Although a forty days' service elsewhere intervene, 596
What considered as place of rest, 602, 3

HIRING and Service—continued.
Some part of the forty days' service must be under a yearly hiring, 554
But not the whole, 550
The master's settlement, 596
And residence is immaterial, 596
So also that his residence is casual, as at a watering place, 596
Or in a port, 695
The service need not be where the hiring was, 599
Service in one parish and residence in another, without master's knowledge, give a settlement in the latter, 600
A groom taking race-horses from place to place is settled where he resides the last forty days, 596
Residence on account of lunacy gives no settlement, 601
It is not necessary that the residence should have relation to the service, 600
Residence with a father in illness sufficient service being dispensed with, 602

HOGRINGER.
Office of, conferred settlement, 928

HOME.
A ship was rateable at her, the owner residing there, 149

HOSPITAL.
Lands of, are rateable, 156
Birth in lying-in, confers no settlement, 416
No child, nurse or servant received or employed in, for exposed or deserted children, by virtue thereof gains a settlement, 410
A room in a work-house appropriated to lying-in women is not, 416

HOUSE of Industry.
Birth in, gives no settlement, 406

HOUSES, PARISH.
Possession of, may be delivered to overseers by justices, 392. See Overseers.

HOUSEHOLDER.
An overseer must be a substantial, 24
Substantial is a relative term, 24. See Overseer.
A person who frequents a place of business but does not inhabit it, is, 23

HUNDRED.
Any place in, may be rated in aid of poor parish, 361. See Taxing in Aid.

HUSBAND.
Is not liable to maintain his wife's mother, 100
He is liable to maintain the children of his wife by a former, till they are sixteen, or the mother dies, 100
But not his wife who has left him and is living in adultery, 100
Cohabitation not conclusive proof of being, 422

HUSBAND—continued.
By his consent his wife may be removed to her maiden settlement, 422
Deserting his wife is a vagrant, 83. See DESERTION AND RELIEF.
Communicates his settlement to his wife, 455. See MARRIAGE, SETTLEMENT BY.
Death of, presumed to legalise second marriage, 467

I.

IDIOT.
Dangerous, not to be detained in workhouse more than fourteen days, 70
Always a minor, 434

ILLEGITIMACY. See BASTARD.

ILLNESS.
Guardians must relieve persons retarded by, 69, n.
Absence from, is dispensation, 562, 602
Though it arises from misconduct, 565
A master is not bound to provide for servant during, 121. See 565
Arising from accident, 111. See CASUAL POOR.
Residence in a parish on account of, is not residence as an apprentice, 685
Unless put there at the master's expense, 690. See APPRENTICE, (11.)

IMPRISONMENT. See PRISONS.
Of servant upon complaint of his master is no interruption of service, 571. See 592

IMPROVED Value.
Criterion of rate, 270, 272
Secus where the act directs that it shall be assessed as other land, 256
Of a tenement at the time of taking may be reckoned, 802

INCORPORATED Parishes.
Two or more parishes may unite. See UNION.

INCORPOREAL Hereditaments.
Are tenements within 13 & 14 Car. II., 748
Is a parol demise sufficient? 751, n.

INDENTURE.
Loss of, 735, 6
Not necessary to constitute apprenticeship, 608, 621

INDORSEMENT.
Apprentices may be assigned by, 610
Suspension of order of removal by, 1084
So also subsequent permission to remove, 1084
Justices of another county to indorse warrant of distress for charges incurred by suspension, 1014
And cannot refuse it, 1202

INFANT.
Contract for his benefit is not void, but voidable only at his election, 485, 622, n.
May engage himself as a servant, 485
And to his father, 486
May bind himself an apprentice, 622

INFANT—continued.
But cannot consent to his discharge, 730
Unless manifestly for his benefit, as where his master ran away, 730
May take apprentice, 624
May acquire a settlement by estate, 863

INFORMALITY. See FORM.

INHABITANT.
Meaning of the word, 23, 143
Competent witnesses, 1152. See EVIDENCE.

INNS OF COURT.
Not necessarily vills, 13, 14
Furnival's Inn is not, 599
Lincoln's Inn liable to be rated.
Gray's Inn not.
[Actions tried and not reported.]

INSANE. See LUNATIC.

INSPECTION. See RATE, 12
All inhabitants of a parish may inspect a rate, 326
So persons rated or liable, the accounts of guardians, 371
And of overseers, 371
So also the final book of retiring overseer, 371
Mandamus lies to compel, though time for appeal has passed, 332
But overseers were not bound to allow extracts to be made, 372
Must give copies, 326
Copies or extracts may now be taken gratis, 1278

INTEREST.
Money out at, not rateable, 268
If rendered so by local act, it will not include bank annuities, 268

IRISHMEN.
May gain settlement, 407
Not having gained one, and being chargeable, to be sent to Ireland, 123. See CASUAL POOR.
Not affected by English Poor Law Act, 1239

IRON MINES.
Are not rateable, 233

IRREMOVABLE.
Persons being, and gaining a settlement, are not convertible expressions, 455
Old dictum to that effect, 862

J.

JERSEY.
Persons born in, and having acquired no settlement here, being chargeable, may be removed to, 127, 8

JOINT TENANCY.
In a tenement of more than annual value of 10*l.* to each tenant, is sufficient for a settlement, 787

JURISDICTION.
Nothing presumed to give, 30
Every reasonable intendment made in favour of it, 102
Must appear on all orders made by justices on appointment of overseers, 30

JUSTICES, their general power as to the poor, 2
Are guardians, 6
Secus corporate justices, 6
Power of, principally transferred to the commissioners and guardians, 2
Still appoint overseers, 2
Penalty for not doing so, 29
And have other powers over them, 23
They are exempt from the office of overseers, 4
May in certain cases order relief, 3, 1246
May in certain cases stop the salary of master of the workhouse, 1268
Must allow and enforce poor rate, 4
See the rules of commissioners complied with, 4
Visit workhouses, 4
Jurisdiction between master and apprentice reserved, 620
Corporate, have the powers of those of county, 28
County justices, their jurisdiction in boroughs, 28
Must allow parish indentures, 4, 616, 669
When not, certificates, 975
Make orders of removal, 1043
Doing judicial act, must confer together, though they may execute apart, 31
Neglect of this renders the order voidable only, 1047
If one signs alone, he must be present when the other signs, 667
Where a parish is in two counties, a justice can act only within the part in his own county, 28
Being churchwardens of removing parish, cannot sign order of removal, 1043
One must be of the quorum, though the order need not state it, 30
May supersede their own order, 1088
In local jurisdiction, may act, though not of the quorum, 1050
May act generally, though rated, 16 Geo. II. c. 18. 338, or a guardian, 4
But cannot act on appeal, 338, 1188
They may when interested only as ex-officio guardians, 4

K.

KIN.
Residence by sole next of, on estate, gives him settlement, 869. See ESTATE, (4)
Great difference between sole and next of kin, 990

KING.
Rateability of property of, 162. See CROWN.

L.

LAND.
Includes every thing under it and over it, 190

LANDLORD.
Not liable to rate generally, 150
Of houses between 6*l.* and 20*l.* rent, may be rated, 187

LAND-TAX.
Collector of, holds an office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6. 929
Being charged with and paying, gives a settlement, 951
Is included in "parochial rates," in 6 Geo. IV. 952

LAST NIGHT.
Of sleeping, determines settlement, where residence in the same year for forty days in different parishes, 595

LEAD MINES.
Are not rateable, 233
But the lessee of lot and cope is, 241. See RATE, v. (7.)

LEAP YEAR.
There are 366 days in, 511
The intercalary day and day preceding are one day, 511
Service in, for 365 days, not a service for a year, 511

LEGITIMACY. See BIRTH.

LESSEE.
Is rateable, if there be profit to himself or lessor, 232
Of king's stables for use of regiment, is not rateable, 167
Of tithes by parol cannot be rated, 227
If by deed, he is liable, 227, 228
Of herbage of towing path, not rateable, 219
Nor of a ferry, 221

LICENCE.
To use fixed machinery, is no tenement, 765

LIFE.
Presumption of, 467

LIGHTHOUSE.
Not rateable according to its tolls, where neither tolls or benefit to ships is received within the parish, 314

LIMEWORKS.
Rateable as land, if not worked as mines, 245

LOAN.
Relief by way of, 78, 90
Wages may be attached for, 78
Summons and order, 1359
Regulation of commissioners concerning, 78
Exchequer Loan Commissioners may lend money for building workhouses, &c., 55
Time for repayment extended to twenty years, 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 107
Not to prejudice securities, 107

LOCAL ACT.
Settlements under, repealed, 406

LOT and Cope.
Lessee of, is rateable, 241. See RATE, (7.)

LUNATIC.
Relief of, entrusted to guardians, 9, 128
Returns to be made by them, 133
Forms of Return, 1288
Pension of, may be obtained, 85
Expenses may be levied on their estates, 1295
To be maintained in county asylum, when settlement not ascertained, 128
Justices may ascertain settlement, 128
Settlement ascertained and repayment ordered by the same justices, 128
If the order as to settlement is quashed for form, other justices may make a new order, 131
Justices of county of G. may make an order on a parish in county of H., 131
Quære, if repayment can be ordered to the treasurer of the county, 131
An order to reimburse overseers is bad, 133
Appeal to the recorder, 133
Notice of appeal must be given to the clerk of the peace, 1147
Not to be detained in workhouse more than fourteen days, 70
Retrospective order for maintenance of invalid, under s. 38, bad, 129
Under s. 42, good, 129
Order for future expenses, 128

LUNATIC ASYLUMS.
No bastard born of any insane person in any county, shall gain a settlement thereby, 417
Restriction since 9 Geo. IV. confined to county, before it was general, 417
Objects of, are not rateable, 155, 160
The trustees are, 155
Secus if no profit, 160
Secus the receiver of rent, 155
Land used for, not to be rated at its improved value, 160, n.

LYING-IN-HOSPITAL. See HOSPITAL.

M.

MAIDEN SETTLEMENT.
Not extinguished by marriage, 456
Revives on the death, or desertion, of her husband, 456
Wife may be removed with, and by the consent of, her husband, 456
Unless he is an Irishman, 457
Proof of, sufficient, on removal of wife or widow, 457, 458
Secus where husband has a settlement, though the place is unknown, 459

MAINTENANCE. See RELIEF.
Under suspended order, 1014
Notice required, 1016
Sessions may enter appeal against order abandoned to compel payment of, 1203

MAINTENANCE—continued.
Incurred between removal and appeal to be repaid, upon order being quashed, 1202
Mandamus lies to compel it, 1202

MAN, ISLE OF.
Persons born in, having no settlement here, and being chargeable, to be sent to, 121. See REMOVAL, (7.)

MANDAMUS.
Lies to appoint overseers, 29, 32
To swear them to their accounts, 369
To make a rate, 137
But not to equalise it, 137
To make a rate in aid, 362
Not to take an examination, 1050
Nor to alter it, 1050
Should be applied for in the term after a refusal, 1152
No answer that a case was offered, 1152. See QUEEN'S BENCH.
Lies to compel sessions to award maintenance, 1202
Protection of persons acting under, 1230

MANOR.
Rents and casual profits of, are not rateable, 226

MARGIN.
County in margin considered as referred to by subsequent words "county aforesaid," 682

MARINES.
Assignment of pensions, 83. See PENSIONS.

MARKET.
Lessee of tolls of, not incident to the soil, are not rateable, 224
Stallage and pickage are, 224
Tolls are a tenement within 13 & 14 Car. II., 753

MARRIAGE.
Presumption of, from cohabitation, may be disproved by the parties, 422

Settlement by—General Rule, 455
Woman marrying follows husband's known settlement, 455
Though she never lived there, 455
And though the marriage was fraudulently obtained, 455
Wife can gain no settlement by her own act during coverture, 455, 791
Nor complete the imperfect settlement of deceased husband, 455
But she may be irremovable, as where she lives on husband's estate, he having deserted her, 455
Her maiden settlement may revive, 456
As on the death of her husband, who has no settlement, 456
Or on his deserting her, 456
Or where husband living with wife, but has no settlement, 456

MARRIAGE—continued.
If husband is living with wife, and is an Irishman, &c., she cannot be removed to her maiden settlement, 122, 127, 457
Secus if he be absent, 457
Acquired by second, is communicated to children by former marriage, till the age of sixteen, or death of mother, 452
Secus before 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, 430
Evidence on removal of wife, 457, 460. See MAIDEN SETTLEMENT.
May be proved by person present, 460
by reputation, 460
by cohabitation, 422
by register and identity, 461
See now the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 75, 461
Particular forms first required by 26 Geo. II. s 33, 460
That statute repealed, 460
Effect of such repeal, 462
Of minors by banns or licence, 460
Knowingly marrying without due publication of banns, void, 460
So also knowing the person has no authority to grant licence, 467
Or person solemnizing not in holy orders, 461
Of minor, by licence or without consent, under 4 Geo. IV., is valid, 461
Secus of a minor without consent, under 26 Geo. II, 463
In foreign countries according to the law of the country is good, 464
So also if according to law of England in the house or chapel of the British ambassador, 464, n.
Semble of an English soldier according to English rites, 464
Performed abroad by a person officiating as priest, presumed to be valid, 465
Letters of orders, how proved, 463
In certain chapels legalised, 468
Banns published in an assumed but not true name, are valid, 468, 469
In maiden name, by a widow, valid, if no fraud, 456, 470
If published bonâ fide in the name found in baptismal register, but by which person never known, marriage void, 471
To render a second marriage void, the existence of the first husband must be strictly proved, 467
The first wife is competent to prove her marriage, 465
Her letters from abroad proof of her existence, 467
As to presumption of life, 467

MARRIED WOMEN.
Pregnant with bastard not now chargeable, 1028

MARSHES.
Drained, and parish unknown, rateable to adjoining parish, 318

MASTER.
Who may be, in hiring and service. See HIRING (1.)
Not liable for servant's medicine, 121
May be ordered to pay wages where servant has had a loan from the parish, 1259

MASTER OF WORKHOUSE.
Holds no office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, 932
Not to punish any adult corporally, or confine him beyond twenty-four hours, 73
Not to chain any sane person, 73
Salary may be stopped, 1268

MEDICAL AID, 90

MEETING HOUSE.
Owner or trustees of, were rateable, if profit made, 153
Now exempted, 252

MILITIA MEN.
Relief to, repealed, 1059
Examination of, as to settlement, 1072

MONEY AT INTEREST.
Not generally rateable, 151
May be rateable by local act, 150
Does not then include bank annuities, 150

MORTGAGES.
When a mortgagor or mortgagee gain settlement, 891. See ESTATE IN MORTGAGE.
Effect in a purchase of part of the money remaining on mortgage, 911. See ESTATE BY PURCHASE (2.)

MOTHER.
When her settlement is communicated to a a child, 428. See PARENTAGE.

N.

NAVIGATION.
Undertakers of, not having any interest in the soil, are not rateable, 197. See RATE.
As to canals, 194. See RATE (11.)

NEXT OF KIN.
Widow with child is not properly, 866, n.
Sole, may gain settlement by residence on intestate's estate without administration, 869, see 865

NON-ACCESS.
Cannot be proved by husband or wife, 421, 422. See BASTARD.

NOTICE.
Effect of, on a general hiring, 517. See HIRING AND SERVICE, (6.)

Notice of coming to settle.
Notice in writing formerly required, 406
Abolished, 473, and see 945, n.
Binding and inhabiting as apprentice equivalent, 605
So also hiring for a year, 473
So also serving an office, 922
Or paying rates, 943

NOTICE OF APPEAL.
The particular grounds must be specified in appeal against any poor-rate, 333, 342, 385. See RATE, APPEAL AGAINST.
So against any account of churchwardens or overseers, 385
Must be in writing, and signed by person giving the same or the attorney on his behalf, 342
Must be delivered or left with two of the overseers, 342
Also to persons interested, 342
No other grounds than those stated in, can be inquired into, 342
But the omission may be waived in open court, 342
Against order of removal. See GROUNDS OF APPEAL.

NURSE CHILDREN. See CHILDREN.
To be removed with their parents, 419
But relieved by their own parish, 1026. See REMOVAL.

O.

OBLATIONS.
Were rateable, 231

OCCUPATION.
Necessary under 59 Geo. III., 6 Geo. IV., and 1 Will. IV., 927. See TENEMENT, (15.)
Beneficial only, rateable, 156. See RATE, (4).
Renders persons liable, wherever residing, 152

OFFICE, Settlement by, 922
1. Statutes.
Execution of an annual office for a year did gain a settlement, 922
Secus by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 922

2. Nature of Office and Appointment.
It must be an annual public office, 922—925
A certificated person must be legally placed therein, 922
A deputy officer gains no settlement, 923
But a principal, serving by deputy, does under 9 & 10 W. & M., 923
Secus under 3 & 4 W. & M., 923

Offices within the Acts, 923
Parish clerk, 923
Has also a settlement by freehold, 925
Must be legally appointed, 924
Service for twelve years with annual salary is not sufficient, 924
It need not be a parish office, 929
Sexton of a churchyard in two parishes, 938
Warden of a borough in several parishes, 938
Constable of a city, embracing several parishes, 938
A town-crier is, 927, 941
So also tithing-man for part of a parish, 927
Bailiff or aletaster for a borough, 927
Hogringer for the parish, 928
A hayward, 928
An assistant overseer, 928

OFFICE—continued.
Collector of land-tax, 929
Collector of duties on births and burials, 929

Offices not within the Acts.
In its nature, not annual, 931
A curate is not, 925
Nor a schoolmaster, 930
An organist with an annual salary, 931
Nor master or governor of a workhouse, 932, 933
Nor a street driver appointed from court leet to court leet, the interval not being a year, 925
Secus a person chosen at a court held 5th Oct. 1824, and his successor chosen at a court held 4th Oct. 1825, 934
Nor a new office, such as a pindar, 927
Nor an office, the duration of which is in the discretion of the justices, 931
Nor a pindar apportioned by the homage of one manor for several, 931
If sessions find the office to be a public annual one, Q. B. are bound by it, 932
A certificate man chosen borsholder must be sworn in, 928
But under 3 & 4 W. & M. execution of an office de facto is sufficient, 935
As of a tithing-man appointed but never sworn in, 934
A defeasible office is sufficient, 929, see 931
If the appointment is in writing, and with a salary, formerly it must have been stamped, 928
But not appointments under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 928, n.

3. Of the Time of Serving.
The office must be served for a whole year, 936
Service for part of a year not sufficient, 936
Or half a year at a time, confers no settlement, 937
A person removed by an order during the execution, gains none, 936
Or one irregularly discharged from the office before his year, 937
Service from court to court, not being a year, confers none, 930
Object of the statute is notoriety, which is attained by the execution and not by the appointment, 937
"When persons hear an organ they do not know who plays it," 934

4. Residence.
Must reside in the parish where the office is executed, 926, 940
In the parish where any part of the duties performed, is sufficient, 939
Residence in one parish and serving an office wholly in another, it seems, is not sufficient, 940

OFFICERS, with Salary, Power to appoint, 36
The commissioners cannot appoint them, 38
Assistant overseers, 36

OFFICERS, with Salary—continued.
Clerk, 63
Auditor, 63
Relieving officer, 37
Power to remove, 1255
Persons removed incapacitated for the future, 1255
Persons ineligible, 1255
Cannot be guardians, 8
Appointment requires no stamp, 37

ORDER OF REMOVAL. Form of, 1099
Good in part, 129, 1235

ORDER OF RELIEF, 91
On a relation, 1351
Must describe party as impotent as well as poor, 91
Weekly relief is due at the beginning of week, 91
Justices cannot order surgeon's bill to be paid, 91
Nor the sessions, 91

ORDERS of Commissioners. See RULES.
Bad in part, bad altogether, 63

ORPHANS. See CHILDREN.
May be sent, by order of guardians and approbation of visitor, to poor-house, 169, n.

OVERSEERS. See ASSISTANT OVERSEER.
Origin of the office, 10
Statutes relating to, 11
Overseer not entitled to any salary, 139
Nor to be paid for any duty of his office, though ordered by vestry, 139

1. For what Place they may be appointed.
For a parish, township, or vill, 11
Not for a precinct, 12
The place may be extra-parochial, 12
A place found by session to be a vill is entitled to separate overseers, 14
Where a parish is in two counties, 28
Cannot be now appointed for any township not having separate overseers, before 10 Aug. 1844, 1295

What is a Parish, Township, or Vill. See PARISH AND TOWNSHIP.

2. Their Number.
Not more than four, nor less than two, exclusive of churchwardens, to be appointed, 20
Less than two cannot be appointed, 967
Appointment of more than four is bad as to all, 20
Four may be appointed, though a local act directs two, 21
Is more than one churchwarden necessary? 666, 966

3. Who may be appointed, 21
Churchwardens are overseers without appointment, 21

OVERSEERS—continued.
Churchwarden of a tithing, 21
Chapelwardens are not necessarily overseers, 21, 22
All "substantial householders" are liable, 24
"Substantial" is a relative term, 24
Persons who do not reside in their place of business are liable, 23
An inhabitant is not eligible unless a householder, 24
A person assessed but not resident may, if he consents, be appointed, 26
Appointment of occasional residents discouraged, 24
Women are eligible, but men more proper, 24
Semble, office of overseer and justice incompatible, 24, n.
The justices to exercise a discretion, 24

Who are not to be appointed.
List of persons exempted, 24, 25, 26
Exemptions of prosecutors of felons abolished, 26
Distinction between exemption and incapacity, 24

4, 5. At what time and by whom to be appointed.
Appointment on Sunday invalid, 27
It should take place on 25th of March, or within fourteen days after, 27
The statute is directory only, 27
The first only of two appointments in one day is good, 27
An appointment can be changed or superseded only on appeal, 27
Justices may make a supplementary appointment, 27
The sessions cannot appoint, 28
Where a parish is part within and part without a peculiar jurisdiction, two should be appointed for each part, and by different justices, 28
Place must appear in the form to be within jurisdiction of the justices, 30
No usage justifies appointment by parishioners, 26, n.

6. Justices neglecting to appoint.
Penalty on, 29
Mandamus lies, 29

7. Mode of Appointment, 29
Justices to issue precepts to high constables to return lists of qualified householders, 29
Form of precept, App. 1333
High constable's warrant to petty constable, form, 1333

Form of Appointment, App. 29
Must be in writing under seal, 29
Defect of, does not make distress for poor rate unlawful, 358
Jurisdiction of justices must appear, 29
Must describe the justices as such, 29
In and for the county, &c., 29.
And the parish to be in the said county, 29

OVERSEERS—continued.
Need not describe the justices as dwelling in or near, 30
Or of quorum, 30
Though one must be of quorum, 30
It is usual, but unnecessary, to appoint all by the same instrument, 30
Sufficient to describe a non-resident overseer by name and abode, 30
His consent should appear, 30
"Principal inhabitant," insufficient description of overseer, 30
Description must be in the body, and not at the foot, 30
Whether for a parish or vill must be accurately stated, 30
The word "overseers" must be used, 30
It is unnecessary to mention churchwardens, 30
Should be "for the present year," 31
This means the overseers' year, 31
It is a judicial act, and the justices must confer, though they may sign apart, 31
The overseer must have personal notice of his appointment, 32, n.
Custody of, belongs to overseer, 29, 737

8. Appointment in case of Death, Insolvency, or Removal of Overseer, 31
Justices to appoint another overseer when one dies, becomes insolvent, or removes from the place, 31
Overseer removing must account and deliver up books, 31
The executor of overseer must account within forty days, 31
The authority of overseers ends with the year, though no successors named, 32

9. Means to enforce or avoid Appointment, and of Appeals, 32
Overseers must accept the office, 32
Refusal subjects them to indictment, 32
Invalidity of appointment good defence, 32
Mandamus lies to justices to appoint, 32
Q. Bench will not confirm the appointment, 32
They may quash it, 32
Any person grieved may appeal against it, 33
To the next practicable sessions, 33
Notice of appeal, App. 1336
No appeal necessary if the appointment is a nullity, 33
A void appointment may be questioned upon an appeal against a removal, 33
The legality of an appointment cannot be questioned on such appeal, 1237
It may be on a certiorari, 33
Or on a distress by the overseers, 33
But not that a majority of the justices did not concur, 32

10. Powers of Overseers.
To act throughout a parish, 28, 34
But may subdivide it, 34
Majority may act and bind the rest, 83

OVERSEERS—continued.
They may act, though no churchwardens, 11
Signature of borough lists by one, insufficient, 396
One cannot sue the other for refusing inspection, 372
But one may be distrained on by the majority for poor rate, 357
One may make the complaint of chargeability, 1132
And appeal against the accounts of another, 381
Covenant by overseers not binding on successors, when, 389
May sue on securities given to predecessors, 388
Personal liability, 397

Power of, where there is a Select Vestry, 36
Can give no relief, but that ordered by vestry, 36

Power of, where there are other Guardians, 36
Instructions of the commissioners, 1312
Circular to them, 1312
Cannot interfere with the poor, 8
Must make and collect rates, 36
Must bind out apprentices, 36
Not in a union, 1292
In cases of sudden necessity, may give relief, but not in money, 36
Liable to a penalty of 20*l.* for not collecting rates, and paying the money to board of guardians, 1308

Power of, where no Select Vestry or Guardians, 34
Must meet once every month at least, 34
Must provide stock to set the poor to work, 34. See RELIEF.
Their bounden duty to try to find work before giving pecuniary relief, 79
To keep a book of the apprentices, 612
No power at common law to borrow money, 374
Surety for overseers' accounting not liable for money borrowed, 374
Must repay money borrowed under a statute, 373
Their liability for medical aid, 117. See CASUAL POOR.

Privileges for support of, 394.
May plead general issue in actions of tort against them, or for acts done as such, 394
Acting under justices' warrant are within 24 Geo. II. c. 44, 395
Not to be prosecuted for disobeying an illegal order, 1268
Demand of surplus of a distress for poor rate, necessary, 395
Not liable for rate, reduced on appeal, paid to guardians, 396

Remedies against, for Abuse of Office, 395
They are indictable for not receiving and providing for a pauper removed, 395

OVERSEERS—continued.
But not for refusing to inoculate paupers, 395
They are not bound to expend money in vaccinating paupers, 34
Nor to bury a pauper dying in a parish, but not a parish house, 34
They are indictable for not accepting the office, 32
Not to be prosecuted when the order is illegal, 1268
Not entitled to receive a gross sum for bastard, 396
Not protected, therefore, by payment to his successor, 396
Indictable for disobedience to guardians, 1268
Liable to penalties for neglect of duty, 396
Liable for wilful misapplication of money, 397
Omission, if wilful, in conviction fatal, 397
Appeal and distress, 397
Penalty on, for purloining goods, 1268
Assumpsit lies for necessaries for the poor, 397

Persons having management of Poor shall not supply Goods or be concerned in Contracts for Provisions for the Poor, 398
Exceptions where no proper person within convenient distance, 398
Penalties extended to all persons appointed under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 399
The statute does not apply to a supply of a single pauper with goods, 399
The statute is applicable only to a general supply, 399
It applies though the goods are furnished at a fair price, 401
Glazier repairing a window is not within the statute, 400
A guardian, under Gilbert's Act, is within the prohibition, 401
Sale of goods to the master of a workhouse is a sale to the poor of a parish there maintained, 401
Though the act under which he is appointed imposes a penalty, 401
He is not liable, unless he sell with a view to profit, 402
An assistant overseer is within the act, 398, n.

Parish Property vested in Overseer, and the Mode of Recovering Possession, 388.
Two justices may order parish premises to be delivered to overseers, 392
A poor man paying rent is not within the statute, 393
Also land appropriated to the poor, 393
Possession may be taken peaceably at common law, 393
Tenements hired or purchased by overseers, under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, vest in them as a body corporate, 389

OVERSEERS—continued.
Parish property not divested by Poor Law Act, 391
To constitute a body corporate, there must be a churchwarden, 388
The churchwardens alone have no title, 388
The act is not confined to tenements held for the benefit of the poor, 389
Nor to parish officers, 389
Property in workhouses vested in them, 73
House leased to a committee for a poor house vests in overseers, 389
Charity lands do not, where there are trustees, 390.
Guardians and overseers may sell, 390
What is evidence of property belonging to them, 389
Sale of exempt from stamp, 390

Forms.
Notice to quit, 1337
Information for not quitting within a month after notice and demand, 1337
Summons, 1338
Warrant to give possession, 1338

OVERSEERS' Accounts, 364
Statutes relating to, 365
Accounts are to be passed by overseers, 365, 366
The account must be by all jointly, though each managed a part of the parish, 374
Two required in a parish lying in two counties, 370
Or partly in a borough, 370
Accounts of all levies on property of persons leaving children, &c. chargeable, 365
Accounts of all levies on property of lunatics, 364
Accounts of constables' accounts, 18 Geo. III. c. 19. See CONSTABLES, vol. i.
Accounts of charities for binding apprentices, 366
When a district auditor is appointed the overseer must make up his books seven days before audit, and submit it to inspection of rate-payers, 1298
To pass accounts in addition to the annual account, 365
Half-yearly, 1299
Authority of justices to cease where a district auditor appointed, 1299
Before the auditor, 365
An indictment for not so accounting must show a proper order, 366
Personal notice of such order not requisite, 366
The final account must be submitted to justices at special sessions within fourteen days after end of their year, and successors named, 366, 367
Form of allowance, 1372
To be verified on oath only by those justices to whom the accounts are first submitted, 369

OVERSEERS' Accounts—continued.
An account in a book and signed, to be delivered to succeeding overseers within fourteen days after their appointment, 367
Persons assessed, or liable, may inspect them, 371
So also guardians' accounts, 371
One overseer cannot sue another for refusal, 372
Monies to be paid over and account verified on oath, 367
Penalty for not accounting, 367
Recovering balance, 365, 366
43 Eliz. and 17 Geo. II. give no distress, 1229
Mandamus lies to justice to swear overseer, 369
The account to overseers is not a substitution for the account to justices, but cumulative, 368
Justices might allow items disallowed by auditor, 1228
Justices no longer audit the accounts, where there is a district auditor, 1299
Delivering a balance-sheet to successors is not sufficient, 371
An overseer may be committed till account given and money paid over, 369
It is discretionary with the justice to commit, 368
The time for making the account must first expire, 369
Commitment should be "till he accounts," 369
Such commitment is good, though there is added "till discharged by course of law," 369
If that is the only period, it is bad, 369
If a churchwarden is committed, he must be described as overseer, 370
Information for refusing to account, 1370
Commitment thereon, 1371
Justices may disallow unfounded or exorbitant charges, specifying such at the foot of the account, 368
They must examine into objected items, 370
Overseer may be exempted under local act from accounting to justices, 370
But an act directing accounts to be adjusted at quarterly meeting of guardians, and giving an appeal therefrom, does not exempt overseer from passing accounts before justices, 370
Mandamus granted to compel a fresh account, where large objectionable items passed without notice, 371
Accounts where overseer dies, or removes, 370
Payment of rates, by executors, 370

What Expenses Overseers may charge, 372.
All payments contrary to the Poor Law Act, or rules of the Commissioners, will be disallowed, 372
For costs of certain civil and criminal proceedings, 1306
For making jury lists, 1307
Perambulating boundaries, 1307

OVERSEERS' Accounts—continued.
Cannot charge for a lawsuit carried on without consulting vestry, 372
Nor for expenses in prosecuting an assault on constable, 373
Nor for salary paid to an overseer, 373
Although directed by a vestry, 373
Secus to assistant overseer, 373
Cannot charge for making or collecting rate, though authorised by the vestry, 373
Cannot charge for costs of appeal against his accounts, 373
When ordered by sessions, 380
May charge for money borrowed and repaid under a statute, 373
Expenses of defending a poor rate may be disallowed, 373
If the order of allowance is good on the face of it, Queen's Bench will not try the merits on affidavit, 379
No preference given, when overseer becomes bankrupt, 371, 375

Overseers, reimbursing, 373
May reimburse themselves during their year for advances legally made, 374
May be reimbursed by successor for payment made where no rate made, or during appeal against it, 374
Surplus of one overseer may be applied to the deficiency of the other, 374, 375
No reimbursement, but by statute, 374

Delivering over Balance, Books and Chattels, 374
All to be delivered over within ten days from signing the accounts, 374
Nothing can be retained, even by order of vestry, 375
May be enforced by indictment, 374
May be enforced by distress, 374
Overseer is discharged by bankruptcy and certificate, 374
Payment of balance may be enforced by distress by two justices where on appeal no order is made, 376
If on appeal an order for payment is made, balance may be distrained for, 374
Distress must precede commitment, 374
The distress may be made on the application of one overseer only, 374
A warrant of distress cannot be issued for a balance against a co-overseer, though he signed the accounts, 376
Semble assumpsit does not lie for the balance, 376
Books should be delivered to successors, 375
A conviction for not delivering up a particular book, and a commitment till he yield up all books, void, 375
Till he accounts, proper, 377

Appeal against Allowance, or Disallowance, 380
Statutes relating to, 360

OVERSEERS' Accounts—continued.
There is no appeal to the sessions against the quarterly accounts, 380
Persons having material objections to accounts may appeal, 380
Mere stranger cannot, 387
One overseer may appeal against the accounts of the other, 381
Appeal lies against the accounts of assistant overseer, 382
A person may appeal against the accounts for the year, although he was not assessed in every rate, 384
Where by local act an appeal is given first to the governors, an appeal at once to the sessions cannot be made, 380
The appeal to be to the next practicable sessions after allowance, 380, 382
Where the allowance was too late to admit of effective notice, the appeal may be to the following sessions, 382
Appeal must be to the next sessions after the accounts are published, 383
Not after allowance, 383
Nor after appellant's knowledge of them, 383
Justices may adjourn the appeal, though respondent object, 384
Accounts must be allowed by two justices before appeal, 384
Such allowance at special sessions not required, 369
Overseers may appeal against the reduction of their accounts, 384
Not in London, 385
Their costs in such cases may be ordered to be paid out of poor rate, 384
Queen's Bench will not review the allowance of accounts on affidavit, 379
Unless illegal on the face of them, 380
The order for disallowing accounts should show it was an annual account, 380
Orders thereon cannot be removed by certiorari, 385
Secus to appeals by other persons, 385
To what sessions, borough or county, 385

Appeal, Notice of, 385
Must be in writing and state the grounds, 385. See RATES, APPEAL AGAINST.
Enumeration of items not sufficient, 385
Where notice defective, agreement by attorney, not in court, to waive it, is not sufficient, 386
The notice need not state that the appellant is aggrieved, 38
If not grieved, the sessions may refuse to hear it, 387
Notice to the overseers whose accounts are questioned is sufficient, without notice to the churchwardens, 387
Form of notice, 1372

OXFORD CANAL COMPANY.
How rated, 311

P.

PACKET BOATS.
Were rateable at home, the owner being resident there, 149

PARENTS.
Of sufficient ability, bound to maintain their children, 99. See RELIEF.

PARENTAGE, Settlements by, 425. See EMANCIPATION.
A child follows his father's settlement, 426
So also a bastard step-child till the age of sixteen, or death of the mother, 429
Secus, before 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 429
Legitimate children cannot be removed to the second husband's settlement, 429
Secus bastards born since August, 1834, 432
A child follows the parents' settlement acquired after birth, if not emancipated, 426
So also if his father has been attainted, 427
Or been discharged under sign manual, 427
Posthumous child follows father's settlement, 426
Father's settlement preferred to the mother's, 426, 427
And the father's mother's to the mother's, 426
Proof of father's or mother's settlement sufficient on removal of a pauper, 427
Or of grandfather's settlement, 1025
Such proof supersedes a settlement by birth, 427
No settlement can be derived from the mother whilst father is living, 428
If his settlement is known, 428
Secus, if unknown, or he is a foreigner, 428
Or mother married to an Irishman, &c. 428
Child follows mother's settlement acquired after the father's death, 428

PARISH.
Definition of, 11
By reputation, before 43 Eliz., 11
Extending into two counties, or liberties, overseers to act throughout, 28
Justices to intermeddle only within their jurisdiction, 28
The poor may be maintained in the separate townships of a, 11
Separate rates, and a chapel before 43 Eliz., without other parochial rights, will not make a, 12
Must have existed, as such, in 43 Eliz. to be within 13 & 14 Car. II., 16
Evidence of inability to have the benefit of 43 Eliz., 16
Several may be united for the purpose of having a workhouse. See GUARDIAN.
Separation of for sixty years, from town corporate confirmed by statute, 20

PARISH BOOKS.
Injury to, how punished, 4.
Every inhabitant is not entitled to inspect them, 97
Right of inspection. See RATE (12.)

PARISH CLERK.
Is an office within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, s. 6, being a freehold, 923. See OFFICE.
But he must be placed therein by some one having authority, 924.

PARISH PROPERTY. See OVERSEERS.
Overseers may regain possession of, by order of justices, 392
Vests in overseers as a body corporate, 388
Forms relating to sale of, 1276
Power of recovery extended to property belonging to union, 1274
Property belonging to several parishes, 1282
——— belonging to union, 1274

PARISH REGISTER.
Per se no evidence of place of birth, 420

PAROCHIAL ASSESSMENT ACT, 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 96., 336, 1277
Gives appeal against rates to justices at petty sessions, 336
Justices to hold four petty sessions to hear appeals against rates, 1279
To have all the powers of justices at quarter sessions, 1279
If rate unequal, unfair, or incorrect in valuation, 336
But not as to liability, 337
Such decision may be impugned by appeal to quarter sessions, 336
Necessary notice and recognizance, 337
Order of petty sessions not to be removed by certiorari, 337
Recognizances verbally acknowledged within time sufficient, 337
Not to affect stock in trade, 141
Applicable to railways, 294

PARTNER.
Frequenting the place of business, liable to the office of overseer, 23
Residence by one, made his share only in the stock in trade rateable, 143
If non-resident, no part liable, 145

PASS.
Abolished, and removal made by order, 123
Of persons born in Scotland, Ireland, Jersey, Guernsey, and Isle of Man, 123

PASTURE.
Exclusive right of, a tenement, under 13 & 14 Car. II., 749
Fed (if this part of the contract), cows are also a tenement, 757

PENALTIES.
How recovered under Gilbert's Act, 76
Recoverable by summons, 1269
By distress, 1268
For disobedience of rules, 1268
For being concerned in contracts, 1263
For supplying goods, 1263
For introducing spirits into workhouse, 75
For overseers disobeying guardians, 1268
Salaries may be stopped to pay them, 75

PENSIONERS.
Any army or naval pension, or any allowance for service in the army, navy, marines, or civil branches thereof, may be obtained BY THE GUARDIANS when the person entitled, or his wife, become chargeable 83
Forms givenby Statute.
As to pensions payable at Chelsea Hospital, 86 ——— payable at Greenwich Hospital, 86
As to all other payments and allowances, 87
If the wife is chargeable, the guardians must require proof that she is the lawful wife, and such proofs must be entered on the minutes, 84
He may assign it voluntarily, 84.
Forms given by Statute.
Pensions payable at Chelsea Hospital, 87
——— at Greenwich, 87
——— by paymaster-general, 88
Certificate of guardians, &c., 87
Insane, 85
When he leaves his wife or family chargeable, justices may order the pension to be paid, 85
Forms given by Statute.
As to Chelsea pensioners, 110
—— Greenwich, 110
—— others, 110
Such order not to be made when the wife is chargeable, if she is profligate, or cohabiting with another man, 108

PERSONAL PROPERTY.
As to former rateability, 142. See RATE, (5.)

PICKAGE.
Lessee of, in market, is rateable, 224

PIPES. See RATE.

PLACE.
Adjudication of a parish as last place of settlement, is bad, 1083

POINTING PLACES.
In a mill are chattels, and not included in value of tenement, 765

POOR Law Amendment Act, 961
Uniformity its object, 51

POOR LAWS.
Origin of, 1
Commission to inquire into, 2
Substance of report, 2

POOR, CASUAL. See CASUAL POOR.

POOR-HOUSE. See WORKHOUSE.
Guardians may build house, or enlarge suitable tenement, and sell insufficient workhouse, 56, 57
They may purchase or hire any house in adjoining parish, 57
If parish too small to do it, two or more may join, 56

POOR-HOUSE—continued.
No settlement gained by residence in such house, 406
Poor refusing to be lodged in such house not entitled to relief, 71
The necessity of the contractor to lodge the poor residing in the parish, and giving security, is repealed, 82
Contractors amenable to justices, as overseers, 83
Notice of all contracts to be given, 82
Person misbehaving or refusing to work, &c. in workhouse, may be committed for twenty-one days, 75
Property in goods, &c. provided for the poor, vested in overseers, 73
In any return or indictment, goods may be described as their property, 74
Such goods, &c. to be marked, 74
Persons receiving, buying, or taking to pawn property or provisions provided for poor, or defacing marks, to forfeit less than 5*l.* and more than 1*l.*, 74
Persons deserting workhouse and carrying away goods, liable to be committed, 74
Mark authenticated, evidence of property, 75
Mark not to be visible on the exterior, 75
Conviction, form of, by statute, 76
Local acts relating to settlements, repealed, 406
Advantages of workhouses explained, 56, n.
Sale or use of spirits therein prohibited, 75

POSSESSION.
Of parish houses, &c., how recovered, 392. See OVERSEERS.
After, for twenty years, a title is inferred from the commencement, 897

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix.
[Those marked with the letter S. are given by statute.]

I. Relating to Overseers, Assistant Overseers, and Guardians.
1. Warrant for returning lists of overseers, 1333
2. The high constable's warrant to the petty constable, 1333
3. Notice of holding a vestry for nomination of overseers, 1333
4. The return or nomination to be made by the vestry to the magistrates, 1333
5. The nomination by the vestry to the magistrates of non-resident persons to be overseers, 1334
6. Usual appointment of overseers for a parish, township, &c. 1334
7. Appointment where one of the overseers is a non-resident, 1334
8. Form of nomination by vestry of an assistant overseer, 1334
9. Bond from assistant overseer when appointed by select vestry, 1335
10. Form of appointment by justices of assistant overseer, 1335

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
11. Mandamus to justices to appoint overseer, 1336
12. Notice of appeal to the sessions against an appointment of an overseer, 1336
13. Notice to be given by overseers to obtain possession of a house, 1337
14. Information of overseer for not quitting pursuant to notice, 1337
15. Summons thereon, 1338
16. Warrant thereon to give possession, 1338

II. Forms relating to Poor Rates, 1338

S. 17. Form of rate given by statute, 318
18. Prescribed by the commissioners, 318
19. Certificate of guardians to magistrates under local act of rate necessary to be made for the use of the poor of the parish, 1339
20. Justices' order thereon to churchwardens and overseers to make rate accordingly, 1340
21. Public notice of intention to make a poor-rate, 1340
S. 22. Title of a rate for the relief of the poor, 1340
23. Notice of publication of a rate, 1340
24. Demand of inspection of rate and of a copy thereof, 1341
25. Declaration for the 20*l.* penalty for refusing inspection, &c. 1341
26. Notice of appeal under local acts, 1341
27. Petition of appeal against a poor's-rate, 1343
28. Order for hearing appeal, appointing time, 1343
29. Notice of appeal, with the grounds thereof, against a poor-rate, 1344
30. Entry of an appeal against a rate, order quashing the same subject to a case, 1345
31. Information by overseer against several persons for not paying poor's rate, 1345
32. Another form for non-payment of several rates, 1346
33. Information against one person for non-payment of a poor's rate, made before one justice to summon before two others, 1347
34. Precept from the justices to summon several defaulters, 1347
35. Constable's summons thereon, 1347
36. Warrant of distress against one person after the foregoing summons, 1348
37. Usual form of a warrant of distress against several persons, 1348
38 Distress warrant for poor's-rates in London, 1349
39. Justice's warrant to distrain for poor's-rate made by the guardians of the poor in Bury, 1349
40. The indorsement to be written on the warrant of distress, if it is to be executed in another county, 1350
41. Overseer's return, where no sufficient

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
distress is found, to be indorsed on the back of the warrant, 1350
42. Commitment thereon, 1350

III. Forms relating to the Relief and Ordering of the Poor, 1351

43. Notice from overseers of poor to father of pauper, of intended application to petty sessions for order of maintenance, 1351
44. Overseer's complaint thereupon, 1351
45. Order on a parent or child to give relief, &c., 1351
46. Information of an overseer of the poor against a parent or child for disobeying an order of maintenance, 1352
47. Warrant of distress on a parent or child for disobeying an order of maintenance, &c., 1353
48. Commitment of a parent or child for disobeying an order of maintenance, 1354
S. 49. Minute of the board of guardians as to Chelsea out-pensioner, 86
S. 50. The same as to a Greenwich out-pensioner, 86
S. 51. Other pensioners, 87
S. 52. The assignment, 87
S. 53. The certificate, 87
S. 54. Where pensioners desert their family, 110
S. 55. Orders of justices, 110
56. Certificate by justices for the payment of the wages of a seaman convicted of smuggling, for the relief of his wife, 1355
57. An order, by justices, to overseers, &c., to receive seaman's wages, 1355
58. Warrant to apprehend a person for deserting family, 1355
59. Conviction and commitment thereon, 1356
60. Commitment as incorrigible, 1356
61. Warrant to apprehend a person for not applying a proportion of his earnings towards the maintenance of his family, 1357
62. Order to seize the goods and receive the rents of houses or lands of persons deserting their families, 1357
63. Order by two justices for out-door relief without residing in the workhouse, 1357
64. Order of one justice, in urgent necessity, for temporary relief, 1358
65. An order by a justice for medical relief only, 1358
66. Common order of two justices on two overseers to give relief to a poor person, where there is no select vestry, under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 5, 1358
67. Summons for repayment of loan, 1359
68. Order for the same, 1359
69. Form of consent to an appointment of select vestry, and approbation of the justices, 1360

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
S. 70. Agreement at a public meeting for a single parish to adopt Gilbert's Act, 1360
S. 71. Justices' approval of the same, 1361
72. Contract for maintenance, 1361
S. 73. Agreement to unite two or more parishes under Gilbert's Act, 1361
S. 74. Agreement for uniting parishes, for providing a house, and for the better maintaining and employing their poor pursuant to Gilbert's Act, 1362
S. 75. The entry to be made by the clerk of the peace or town clerk, 1363
S. 76. Notice of the meeting to consult as to providing for the poor, 1363
S. 77. Appointment of a guardian of the poor, 1363
S. 78. Appointment of a visitor, 1363
S. 79. Appointment of a governor, 1363
80. Appointment of a treasurer, 1364
S. 81. Draft by the guardian on the overseers appointed to collect the poor's rates, 1364
S. 82. Appointment of a deputy visitor and assistant, 1364
S. 83. Certificate of serving the office of visitor, 1364
S. 84. Security for money borrowed for purchasing lands, &c., for the employment of the poor, 1364
S. 85. Transfer of such security, 1365
86. Workhouse governor's appointment, 1365
S. 87. Order for the admission of a pauper into the poorhouse, 1365
88. Justice's direction to excuse poor person wearing the badge, 1365
89. Commitment of a pauper maintained in a workhouse, for disorderly conduct, 1366
90. Commitment of a person for misbehaviour in a workhouse, 1366
91. Conviction for having spirits in workhouse, 76.

IV. Forms relating to Overseers' Accounts, 1366

92. Account book of workhouse poor, 1366
93. Workhouse book, 1367
94. Notice requiring churchwardens, &c., in London, to return lists of poor children, 1367
95. Overseers' account of infant poor, 1368
96. Allowance of overseer's account, 1372
97. Summons to overseers of the poor to verify and pass their accounts, 1370
98. Information against an overseer for refusing to account, 1370
99. Commitment of an overseer for neglecting to account, 1371
100. Warrant of distress for balance found due from late overseers, 1371
101. Notice of appeal against allowance of overseers' accounts, 1372
102. Order of Quarter Sessions, disallowing items in accounts, 1372

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
S. Forms of Conveyance of Parish Property, 1276
S. Form of exchange, 1276
S. —— of security, 1277
S. —— of transfer of security, 1277
V. Forms relating to Apprentices, 1373
S. 103. Indenture of apprentice to a chimney-sweeper, 608
S. 104. Order of two justices, directing a parish apprentice to continue with widow of master, 611
S. 105. Like order by a separate instrument, 611
S. 106. Assignment of a parish apprentice, with consent of justices, by indorsement on the indenture or counterpart, 612
S. 107. Like assignment by separate instrument, 612
S. 108. Register of apprentices to be kept by overseers, 1373
109. Assignment of apprentice by indorsement, 1373
110. Justices' order to bind a poor apprentice within forty miles, 1374
111. Indenture of apprentice, 1375
112. Justices' order for binding apprentice at upwards of forty miles' distance, 1376
113. Certificate that the rules of the commissioners have been complied with, 1377
VI. Forms relating to Removals, 1377
S. 114. Examination of an Irish pauper, in order to his removal, under 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 40, 1377
S. 115. Order of removal for the same, 1377
116. Information of overseers in order to remove a pauper, 1377
117. Summons of one justice to the overseers of the parish to which it is intended to remove a pauper, to show cause against the order of removal, 1377
118. Warrant of two justices to bring a pauper before them, and be examined as to his settlement, 1377
119. Summons to the pauper, to show cause against his removal, 1378
VII. Forms of Examinations.
120. General heading, 1378
121. Examination of the relieving officer, 1379
122. Of master of workhouse, 1379
123. Certificate of chargeability, 5 & 6 Vic. c. 57, 1379
124. Same, 7 & 8 Vic. c. 101, 1379
125. Examination as to settlement.
By birth, 1379
126. By marriage, 1379
127. Of the wife, 1380
128. By derivative settlement, 1380
129. By hiring and service, 1381
130. As to service, 1380
131. By apprenticeship, 1380
Search for indenture, 1381
Evidence of attesting witness, 1381
Absence accounted for, 1381
132. Service with another master, 1382

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
133. Same of parish apprentice, 1382
134. By renting a tenement under stat. of Car., 1382
135. Same, under 59 G. III., 1382
136. Same, under 6 G. IV. &c., 1382
137. By estate.
Heir-at-law, 1382
Co-heiress, 1383
138. By devisee, 1383
139. By devisee of copyhold, 1383
140. By cestui que trust, 1383
141. By a schoolmaster in right of land attached to his office, 1384
142. By executor of tenant for years, 1384
143. By marriage with a yearly tenant, 1384
144. By mortgagor, 1384
145. By mortgagee, 1384
146. By marriage with a purchaser under 30*l.*, 1384
147. By guardian, 1384
148. By possession, 1385
149. By equitable estate, 1385
150. By purchase, 1385
151. By relief, 1385
152. By office, 1385
153. By former order, 1386
154. Pauper's evidence as to same, 1386
155. By being rated, 1386
156. Notice of chargeability, 1386
157. Lunatic order, 1387
157*a.* Forms of examination of a soldier as to his settlement, 1073
158. General order of removal, under 13 & 14 Car. II., 1388
159. The like in another form in London, 1389
161. Indorsement on order suspending removal, on account of illness of pauper, 1389
162. Form of a subsequent permission to execute the order of removal, to be indorsed thereon, and order of payment of the expenses incurred by such suspension, 1389
163. Order of removal of a certificated person back to the certifying parish, he having become chargeable, and to pay costs of removal back, 1390
164. Record of an order of removal to be filed at the quarter sessions, 1390
165. Deputation of a person to remove a pauper, 1391
166. A justice's order to a constable to remove a vagrant to his place of settlement in ——— days, and that he be allowed only ———, 1391
167. Receipt of the vagrant by the constable of parish to which removed, and statement of amount of expenses, 1392
168. Information of an overseer of the poor, that the expenses directed to be paid on taking off the suspension from an order of removal have been refused, or neglected to be discharged, 1392
169. Summons on the foregoing information, 1392

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
170. Warrant of distress thereupon, 1393
171. Notice of appeal against an order of removal, with notice to produce, 1393

VIII. Grounds of Appeal.
1. Arising on the making and service of the order, 1394
2. Arising on the examination, 1394
3. Pauper not removable, 1394
4. Subsequent settlement, 1394
5. Former order, 1394
172. Apprenticeship, 1395
172*a*. Hiring and service, 1396
173. Marriage, 1396
174. Children, 1396
175. Tenement, 1396
176. Estate, 1396
177. Office, 1396
178. Rate, 1396
179. Notice of trial of a respited appeal against an order of removal, 1398
180. Countermand of notice of appeal, 1398
181. Petition of appeal against removal, 1398
182. Order for hearing thereon, 1399
183. Notice to produce pauper, 1399
184. Notice of abandonment of order after removal of pauper, 1399
185. Supersedeas of the order of removal, 1400
187. Order on appeal quashing the order, 1400
188. Certiorari to remove an order of removal, &c. into Queen's Bench, 1401
189. Case stated for opinion of Court of Queen's Bench, 1401
190. Entry of quashing order of justices, after special case, 1402
191. Order of sessions on appeal against an order of removal, quashing same with costs, 1402
192. Order and certificate for costs, where the court adjudge grounds of appeal or removal frivolous, 1402, 1403
193. Warrant to levy cost of appeal on goods of overseer, 1403
Form of conveyance of parish property prescribed by statute, 127
Of exchange, id.
Of security for building, or providing goods, 995
Of transfer of the same.

IX. Precedents framed by the Poor Law Commissioners.
Certificate of auditor, 1318
Order of guardians on a parish for payment of expenses, 1318
Requisition for an extraordinary meeting of guardians, 1319
Notice of first weekly meeting, 1319
——— adjourned meeting, 1319
——— extraordinary meeting, 1319
Owner's claim to vote, 1319
Appointment of proxy, 1320
Application of proxy, 1320

PRECEDENTS in the Appendix—continued.
Registry of voters, 1320
Notice of first election of guardians, 1320
——— annual election, 1321
Nomination paper, 1322
Voting paper, 1322
Letter to guardians elected, 1322
Notice of guardians elected, 1323
Return thereof to the board, 1323
Bond by relieving officer, 1323
——— collector of rates and his sureties, 1324
Sale of parish property, 1326
Request for sale to the guardians, 1326
Request of consent by the commissioners, 1327
Order for convening a meeting, 1327
Letter thereon to overseer, 1328
Notice of meeting to consent, 1329
Resolution of vestry thereon, 1329
Certificate of consent, 1330
Directions for sale, 1330
Order for sale, 1331
Conditions of sale, 1332

PRECINCT.
As such not entitled to overseers, 12

PREMIUM.
Payment of, evidence of intention to create apprenticeship, 652, 662
Absence of, no proof of the contrary intention, 654
Must be stated in indenture where any duty payable, 606. See APPRENTICE, (6.)

PRESUMPTIONS OF LAW.
In favour of certificate, 968, 969, 975
——— order, 969
From age of child, 1025
Contrary to fact not to be made, 972

PRISONERS.
Children born of, gain no settlement thereby, 406
May be examined as to their settlement, 1075. See REMOVAL, III. (4.)
On any civil process, or for contempt, gain no residence in the place of their confinement, 407
Under mesne process for debt, not in county gaols, to be relieved by overseer of the parish where the gaol is, 88
Settlement to be ascertained, 88
If no settlement, out of county rate, 90
Order of removal to be made, 89
And suspended, 89
Copy to be served, 89
Expenses to be repaid, 89
May be levied by distress, 89
Appeal against, 89

PROCEDENDO.
Awarded to parties at sessions, 1218

PROPORTION of Rate, 250. See RATE, (9.)

PUBLICATION.
Of notices, must be fixed to church and chapel doors, 324

PUBLICATION—continued.
Of rate, must be on the Sunday next after allowance, 324

PUBLIC Purposes.
Profits expended for public purpose not rateable, 175, 179
The owners of a public bridge rateable, till the capital is repaid, 181
Corporate property rateable, 184
Secus before 4 & 5 Vic. c. 4, 182, 184

PURCHASE.
No person to gain a settlement by virtue of, whereof the consideration is not 30*l.*, 901
In this act confined to cases where a pecuniary consideration is paid, 903
In its larger sense comprehends all property acquired except by descent, 903
As to settlements by purchase. See ESTATE, (II.)

PUTATIVE Father.
Proceedings against. See BASTARD.

Q.

QUARANTINE.
Residence in right of, gives a settlement, 882, 883

QUASHING.
Rate, what order sessions may make on, 350. See RATE, (II.)
Order of removal, effect of, 1165. See REMOVAL, (VIII.)

QUEEN'S BENCH.
Superintendence over the quarter sessions, 1205
Q. B. will not interfere when an order quashed, although the justices equally divided, 1205
Nor although they adjourn, an interested justice voting, 1206
Nor when judgment entered by mistake, 1207
Nor when mistake corrected during the sessions, but not before the same justices, 1207
Nor where the sessions decided that the grounds of appeal were deficient, 1213, 1214
Or the examination, 1216
Nor when order confirmed subject to a case, 1214
They will order an entry to be erased if sessions have no jurisdiction, 1207
When not, 1210
Not when the entry was made "quashed not on the merits," though wrong, 1211
Affidavits admitted to show a want of jurisdiction, 1215
Granted to prevent fraud, 1217
So where the justices had quashed an order over which they had no jurisdiction, and therefore refused to hear an appeal against a similar order, 1218
Will not inquire into the propriety of an order

QUEEN'S BENCH—continued.
by P. L. C. for building a workhouse, 1219
Not when the sessions acted on the statement of a justice, 1215
Not unless the sessions have not decided, 1216

QUORUM.
Omission of, in order of removal, immaterial, 1049
One justice, however, must be of, 1050

R.

RAILWAY.
To be rated as land increased in value by railway, 291, 1219
Rate not confined to the tolls, 291, 1219
Deductions, what, allowed, 291, 1225
To be rated in each parish in proportion to the actual earnings there, 291

RATE.
The poor-rate is a tax, 141, n.
Its origin, 135
Statutes relating to, 137
Not a charge on the land, but on the occupier in respect thereof, 141, n.
Statute for regulating parochial assessments, 142
To be made on net annual value, 142
To be made in a prescribed form, 319
Form given by statute, 319
New valuation may be made, 1278
Power to enter lands, 1278
Copies may be taken gratis, 1278
Penalty for refusing, 1278
Four special petty sessions to be held for hearing appeals against, 336
Seven days' notice, 336
Recognizance, 336, 337
Their orders not to be removed by certiorari, 337

1. Who are to make it.
The parish officers, 137
Without charge, 137, 139
Concurrence of inhabitants unnecessary, 137
Mandamus lies to make, but not to equalise it, 137
One overseer may apply for a mandamus against the other, 138

2. Purposes for which made.
Title of rate material part, 138, 139
If it imports to be made for two purposes, and one illegal, Queen's Bench will quash it, 139
A rate made for past object will not be quashed, if this does not appear on the rate, 139, n.
It may be made for relief of poor, 138
Binding apprentices, 138
Providing work, 138
Purchasing lands, 138
For emigration, 1260, 1296
Passing vagrants, 138
Building workhouse, 138

RATE—continued.
Cannot be made to repay money borrowed, 139
Except when expressly authorised, 136, n.
For expenses of litigating settlements allowed, 138
But not for indicting a person for assault on constable, 140
For certain civil and criminal proceedings, 138
For valuation of parish property, 138, n.
A rate to reimburse is bad, 138
Except for money expended when no rate, or during an appeal, 139

3. Time for which made, 140
It must be prospective, 140
It must not be a standing rate, 140
The amount, 140
Concurrent rates are bad, 140
Retrospective bad, 138, n.
So if ante-dated, 140, n.

4. On whom it is to be made—stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, 141
43 Eliz. charged every inhabitant, 141
Secus now inhabitants in respect of stock in trade, 142
Statute exempting stock in trade, 142
No prescriptive exemption, 174
It is a tax on the occupation, 957
And on the occupier of certain specified property, 141
Occupier at will of what produces profit to himself or owner is rateable, 162
Occupiers are to pay, and not landlords, 152
Though resident in another parish, 152
Owners of houses, between 6*l.* and 20*l.* rent, may be rated instead of occupiers, 187
Except where right of voting for members of parliament depends on assessment to the rate, 188
Goods of occupier may be distrained, 188
Such occupier paying, may deduct from rent, 188
Receivers to be deemed owners, 188
Owners rated may appeal and vote in vestries, 188
But owners cannot be rated where the tenant has been excused, 188
Corporation may be rated, 152
Owners may be rated in St. Giles's, London, 189
And other local acts, 190

There must be a beneficial Occupant.
Profits devoted to public purposes are not rateable, 175, 179
Justices not rateable as for assize hall, &c., 177
A public bridge, the owners rateable, till their capital paid, 181
Corporate property rateable, 184
Secus before 4 & 5 Vic. c. 4, 182, 184
A profit is made, so to render parties rateable, though all expended for preachers, &c., 154

RATE—continued.
Occupation may be beneficial, though not gainful on balance of loss and profit, 156
Sufficient if a revenue produced, 158
Nor a person dedicating a house to charity, unless he makes a profit, 173
But the occupiers of such house are rateable, 173, 175
The admittees of a charity paid part, the owners rateable, 157
Profit to lessor is sufficient to render lessee rateable, 232
Hospital lands are rateable, 156
The governors are not rateable, 161
The comptroller of Chelsea college is, for his apartments, 162
Not the servants of public hospitals, 161
Treasurer of missionary society not rateable for the office, 172
Servant resident in a lighthouse is not rateble, 314
Trustees of lunatic asylum are rateable, 155
Secus if no profit, 160
The objects of the charity are not, 155, 160
The receiver of the rent is, 155
Governor of, not rateable for the gaol, 178
Nor matrons, nor justices, 178
Rates of lands taken for such asylum not to be increased, 160, n.
Royal Academy, not for the National Gallery, 180
Cemetery Company rateable for their ground, 159
And for vaults sold to others, 159
Schoolmaster having house in lieu of salary is rateable, 174
Palaces occupied by the Queen not rateable, 162
Nor land in her occupation, 174
Rule as to public servants, 167
Occupier of crown lands, by gift, or for wages, is, 167
As the tenants of Hampton Court Palace, 162
And Comptroller of Chelsea College, 162
Lessee of king's stables for use of regiment not, 167
Master gunners stated to be occupiers of king's battery-house are, 167
Commissioners of public drainage are not, 318
The servant of an ambassador occupying a house, and letting part, is liable to be rated, and may be distrained on, 360
Soldiers in barracks are not rateable, 167
Secus if their accommodation is more than strictly necessary, 167
Owner of a mail packet is rateable, 316
Owner of a chapel making profit was rateable, 154
Secus if no profit, 153
Chapels are now exempt, 252
A servant renting a house, and the master paying rent, is rateable, 168
Guardians renting a workhouse in another parish are rateable, 169, 171

RATE—continued.
Surveyor occupying toll-house is not rateable, and the tolls are exempted, 253
Persons empowered to make a river navigable, and taking no interest in the soil, are not rateable, 197, 258
"Beneficial" and "profitable" are not convertible terms, 286
Lands subject to an embankment tax equal to rent, rateable, 286

5. Inhabitants were rateable.
According to their visible personal property within the parish, 142
Secus now, 142

Who were rateable as Inhabitants.
Inhabitant means resiant, 143
Lodgers or stall-keepers are not, 143
Non-resident partner not rateable, 143
The resident partner only for his share 145

In respect of what Property Inhabitants rateable before 3 & 4 Vic. c. 89.
The rating of such property not affected by the Parochial Assessment Act, 141

Stock in Trade and Ships, 145
Stock in trade, of which a profit is made, was rateable, 145
The sessions must adjudge it productive, 147
Usage cannot vary its rateability, 148
A farmer is not rateable for his stock, 145
Bare possession of personal property is evidence of rateability, 147
Difficulties attending rating personalty, 149
Personal estate must be local, and visible in the parish, 148
A ship is rateable in her principal port, though absent when rate made, 149
Goods sent to be worked are not stock, 149
Some personal property not rateable, 149
As stock in public funds, 149
It is not "money out at interest," 150
Salary of a superintendent, 150
Professional fees, 150
Household furniture, 150
Money in specie, 151

6. The Occupier is rateable in respect of Lands, Houses, &c.
"Land" includes everything above it and under it, 190
Used in statute in a limited sense, 191

Who are Occupiers, 152
Non-resident occupiers are rateable, 152
May occupy by pipes, &c., 152
A corporation may be occupiers, 152
Owner of a house occupying part, his servants part, and a pauper part, is rateable for the whole, 153
So also an owner, who, with his family, was absent occasionally, and his assistant had use of shop, 153

RATE—continued.
Whether the corporate body or burgesses are occupiers, 206, 207
The tenant of a farm who lets a dairy, may be rated for the whole, 184
Semble also the dairyman for his part, 184
Owner of a barge-way, herbage only being leased, 220
Lessee of a box in a theatre is rateable as occupier, 265

Distinction between Occupiers of the Soil and Owners of an Easement.
Occupiers of the soil are rateable, 196
Owners of an easement are not, 196
Exclusive right, test of occupation, 199
Power to render a river navigable is an easement, and not rateable, 197, 253
Nor the grant of a "navigation," 197
The owners of such navigation are rateable for their cuts and towing-paths, not for a dam, 200, 203
Mere licence to get stone not rateable, 197, 203

Canals.
Proprietors of "tonnage dues" rateable only for profits earned by the canal in the parish, 191
"Tonnage dues," rate for such, presumed to be limited to such profits, 191
Tonnage dues per se not rateable, 191
If mixed with wharfs, &c., 193, 220
Not rateable for their profits as carriers, 279
Proprietors of a sluice are rateable, 193
Proprietors are rateable in each parish, 194, 306, 312
For the net annual profit, 311
Though the toll was granted as a compensation, 311
The rate is sometimes made according to the value of adjacent lands, post, Partial Exemption.
A dock is rateable, though the shares are personal property. Rex v. Hull Dock Company, 1 T. R. 219
House of surveyor rateable, though tolls exempt, 186

Pipes.
A company is rateable for, as occupiers of land, 194, 195
Though another is rated for the herbage, 195
In each parish, 306
Not for the gas supplied therein, but on a proportional part of rent, 302
Nor on that rent, if part is derived from gas, supplied to extra parochial places, 302

Commons, 204
Mere right of common is not rateable, 205
Land, to which such right belongs, may be rated higher, 205
Aftermath let out, is rateable, 206

RATE—continued.
Burgesses who turn out cattle, and pay to others who do not, are rateable, 206
Secus if the corporation retain the exclusive right of possession, though burgesses' stock, 207, 213
Corporation of Alnwick not rateable for Haydon Forest, 209
Allotments sometimes rateable where the commonable lands lie, 218
Not affect the mines, 218
Where burgesses receive rent, 860
Ranger of a park may be rated for the herbage, 195
Agister not rateable, 187, 208

Way-leaves, 219
With exclusive possession of ground, rateable, 219
But mere easement not, 219
Bargeway rateable, and tolls the criterion of value, 220

Ferry, 220
Lessee of a ferry is not rateable, 221, 222

Lighthouse.
Nor of a lighthouse according to the tolls, 314

Fishery, 223
Lessee of a fishery, with halves due, is territorial and rateable, 223

Market, 224
Lessee of market tolls, not incident to the soil, is not rateable, 224
As to stallage and pickage, see 224

Tolls.
Lessee of tolls of a bridge and toll-house rateable for the toll-house only, 224
Tolls per se are not rateable, 221, 222
Secus where connected with local property, 193, 220
Owner of a bridge is rateable, 224
When tolls not demised by deed, 225
Toll traverse, and toll thorough, distinction, 226
Tolls of turnpikes. See EXEMPTION.

"Tithes," 227
Are rateable, 227
So also the "Rent-Charge," 227
According to stat. 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 96, 288
Other incorporeal hereditaments or easements are not, 227
The parson, who lets his tithes by parol, should be rated, 227
Secus if he leases them by deed, 227, 228
Then the lessee, 228
Though the occupier retains the tithe, 228
If tithes are extinguished, the vicar is rateable for the value, 229
If not extinguished, the occupier of the land, 231
In rating the corn rent, the taxes and dues must be deducted, 287, 288
A corn rent in lieu of all tithes is rateable, 229

RATE—continued.
Unless expressly exempt from taxes, 229
Tithe of fish, 231
Oblations, 231
And other rectorial or vicarial dues are rateable, 231
Are hereditaments within a local act, 268

Manors and their Profits.
Rents and casual profits of a manor are not rateable, 226

"Mines," 223
"Coal mines" only rateable by stat., 232
If productive to any one, 232
Ceasing to be productive are not, 232
Are rateable in each parish, though the shaft is in one only, 305
Lead and iron mines are not, 233
But the lessee of lot and cope of lead mine is rateable, 241
So also the lessee of toll tin and farm dues, 239, 241
And of free share of calamine, 242
And of ore fit for smelting, 240, 243
The lessor of lead mines is not rateable for the rent reserved, 234
(No ore had been raised, 234)
Nor when he receives ore when smelted, for that is in the nature of rent, 235
Nor when the rent received is for each ton of manganese, 237
Nor the lessee of the Duchy of Cornwall, where he has leased all his interest in the mines, and reserved a money rent, 237
A conjoint rate in respect of two things, one of which is not rateable, is bad, 321

Quarries, 245
Limestone mines are not rateable, 245
Nor clay pits worked as mines, 246
Whether a mine or quarry depends on mode of working, 246
Mere licence to dig stone, not rateable, 197

"Saleable Underwoods," 247
Underwood, its legal acceptation, 248
Gros bois, its meaning, 248, n.
Liable to be rated every year, 247
"Saleable" is in contradistinction to estovers for fuel, &c., 247, 248
Whether "saleable" or not a question of fact for sessions, 250
Fir planted to shelter oaks, &c. and not for sale, not rateable, 248

7. Exemption from Rates.

Exemption, 252
Churches and chapels are exempted, 252
Property belonging to societies for science, literature, and fine arts, 252
Supported by subscription, 252
And duly certified, 252
Tolls and toll-houses of turnpikes are exempted, 253
What constitutes turnpike, 253
Given by former statute, by what words incorporated in subsequent, 261, 299

RATE—continued.
Lands cannot be devised free from rates, 262
When tolls are exempt the land is exempt, 253
A company not to be taxed for the canal or profits is exempt, 259
e. g. Barnby Dun exempt in Sheffield and Doncaster, 252
Lands embanked from the Thames, 254
Partial Exemption, 259
By particular statutes canals are to be rated as the adjoining land, 250
Value of tolls must then be excluded, 256
Worcester and Birmingham Canal, 256
Grand Junction Canal, 257
Chelmer and Blackwater, 257
Leeds and Liverpool, 26
London Dock Company, 268
Bristol Dock Company, 268
Oxford Canal Company, 284
Monmouthshire Canal Company, 298
Lands used for lunatic asylum not to be rated higher for the buildings, 160, n.
Poor-houses to be rated at the sum assessed before, 57
Allotments were declared to be where the commonable lands lie, and must be rated there, 218
This not to affect mines under, 218
8. Property rateable by Local Acts, 263
In Hull, non-resident owners of stock in trade and ships were rateable, 264
In Manchester, waterworks not rateable as a "tenement," 264
Nor the lord of a market in a public street, 265
In Shrewsbury, gas-pipes are rateable as an "hereditament," 267
Money vested in the stocks is not rateable as "money out at interest," 268
Merely landing timber does not constitute "a wharf," 268
Import of "building" in a paying act, 267
Lessee of a private box in a theatre is rateable for a tenement in St. Martin's, 265
9. Of the principle of Valuation, 250. See also Canals and Tithes.
Property now to be rated according to the parochial assessment act, 270
Tithes to be so rated, 288
All property to be rated at its actual value, 258
Land to be rated according to its improved value, 270, 272, 274
Whether the improvements are made by landlord or tenant, 281
According to its annual value, communibus annis without reference to the expense of each year, 280, 285
Extra profits to be included in the assessment, 272
As when land is used as a spring, 272
Or reservoir, 273
Or for water-pipes, 312

RATE—continued.
Or gas-pipes, 302
Secus a manufactory for its profits, 279
Profits arising from machinery to be included, 274, 282
Without reference to its being real or personal estate, 284
And from a billiard table, 274
If the principal is exempt, so is the machinery, 275
A canal company, shared, not be rated for their profits as carriers, 277, 279
A railway must be rated as land increased in value by the railway and buildings, 291, 1219
To be rated for what it would let for, and not merely for tolls, which the company would receive, 291, 1219
What deductions allowed, 291, 1225
Buildings in another parish may enhance rateable value, 297 ; see 318
Rent derived from gas supplied in extra-parochial places cannot, 302
Where the expense in one year is greater than the profit, it is rateable if there is a profit communibus annis, 275
The rent a tenant gives or would give is the criterion of the rateable value, 272, 280, 291
But not conclusive, 280, 272
If clearly shown of greater value, 280
Interest on a mortgage is rent, 281
Rent-charges not to be deducted, 309
If the subject is perishable, the further expense of renewing must be deducted, 302
So also if subject to an extraordinary expense, 284
As sewer's rate, 284
An embankment tax ought not to be deducted, 286
Land-tax redeemed, 286, 287
Annual value part only of rent, 271, 282
The rent is the criterion, without deducting the expense of sinking it, 277
In fixing profits of canal, the poor rate, expenses of collection, of repairing locks, and supplying water, must be deducted, 284
Reason of this, 284
So also in rating rector for corn rent, the taxes should be deducted, if the land is rated at the rent, 287
Ecclesiastical dues to be deducted, 288
Where some lands are rated according to the rent, in rating others according to the value, the poor rate must be deducted, 279
Unless a rate is apparently unequal Queen's Bench will not quash it, 270
Different rate on houses and land not an apparent inequality, 270
Nor is an equal rate on them necessarily unfair, 270
Nor two-thirds of net rent of lands and one-half of collieries, 270

RATE—continued.
Unless a local act directs them to be equal, 272
Workhouse under Gilbert's act to be assessed to all taxes at the amount assessed at the time of taking the land, 57
The overseers must sign a declaration, 319
Omission vitiates rate, 320
Secus the omission of other particulars required by the form, 320
A rate for two things, one of which is not rated, is bad, 321
Rate made under a limited authority must show on its face the authority, 321

10. Property, where to be rated, 305
Personal property in the parish which the owner inhabits, 305
Real property in the parish where it is situated, 305
Light-house not rateable in a parish where neither the tolls nor the benefit to the ships is received, 314
Nor where some vessels come into the parish, 314
Coal mines are rateable in each parish, though the shaft is one only, 305
Canals are rateable in each parish for the profits which the land in each parish yields, 306—312, 1227
Railways to be rated on the same principle, 291 ; so also gas-pipes, 302
Canals not to be rated for riverage becoming due in each parish, 309
Bridge situated in two parishes rateable in each, though all the tolls received in one, 313
Drained marshes, where parish unknown, to adjoining parish, 318
A reservoir is not rateable in one parish for profits made to another, 312
Nor lands, used only to drain other land in another parish, 318
A ship was rateable at her home, the owner being resident there, 316
In Hull, though owner not resident, 264
So also a packet-boat, 264

11. Form of Rate, 318
Prescribed by the commissioners, 318
Prescribed by statute, 318
The property rated must be specified, 321
Omission ground of appeal, 321
Its allowance, 321
Must be recorded in the rate book, P. L. C. Rules
Form of, 321
Must be by two justices out of sessions, 322
Or by borough-justices or aldermen, 323
If parish in two counties or liberties, justices to act only within their jurisdiction, 324
But overseers have authority over the whole parish, 324
Not to be altered after allowance, 323
Rate for a borough, part only of a parish, is bad, 324

RATE—continued.
Unless separately assessed for sixty years before 59 Geo. III. c. 95, 324
Rate for a borough not to be allowed by county justice, 324
The allowance is a ministerial act, 322
Even since 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, 322
And cannot be refused, 322
If refused, mandamus lies, 322, 1227
Publication, 324
Publication of rate must be on the next Sunday after allowance, 324
By notice affixed on all the church doors, 324
The church of the township sufficient, 325
But on all the churches, 325
Or it is a nullity, 325
Notice that a rate will be collected is good, 325
See form of publication, 1340

12. Rate, Inspection of, 326
Inhabitants may inspect the rate, 326
And demand copies, 326
Copies or extracts may be taken gratis, 1278
The right is not limited to the existing rate, 330
Though time for appeal have elapsed, 332
Penalty for neglect 20*l.*, recoverable by action by party aggrieved, 326, 330.
The churchwarden cannot sue the overseer for this penalty, 332
The demand must be at a reasonable time and place, 326
At the plaintiff's house not reasonable, 327
Near overseer's house reasonable, 327
By the attorney insufficient, 327
Unless the inhabitant is present, 328
The plaintiff must sustain some injury, 326
Loss of right of appeal not essential, 332
Copy given the morning after the demand sufficient, 327
Demand of "the rate" sufficient, 328
Referring inhabitant to the vestry is a refusal, 328
An assistant overseer is liable to the penalty, if it is part of his duty to produce the rate, 327
What is evidence thereof, 329
To subject the person to the penalty he must not only have the custody of the book but the care of the poor, 330
Mandamus granted for inspection after time for appeal passed, 332
The grounds for desiring inspection must be stated, 332
Mandamus granted to guardians of poor, 332

13. Relief from Rate by Justice, 333
Justices in petty sessions, with consent of overseers, may excuse paupers from payment of rates, 333
In such cases the owner cannot be rated, 333

14. Appeals to Petty and Quarter Sessions.
Remedies under local acts, 333

RATE—continued.
If a local act directs an appeal to the commissioners in the first instance, that course must be pursued, 335
By the local act of St. James's, Westminster, two justices may give relief, 335
By the Norwich Act an appeal is given against the warrant for assessment, 342
The Sudbury Act gives an appeal first to the borough and then to the county sessions, 336
An appeal must be given by statute, 333
In some cases the only remedy, 333
Statutes relating to, 333
By 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 96, justices at petty sessions may hear appeals against rates, 336. See PAROCHIAL ASSESSMENT ACT.
Appeal is given to persons aggrieved, or persons having material objection to the insertion or omission of another, 333
The simple fact of being left out of the rate is not a ground of appeal, 334
Notice of appeal in writing, signed by appellant or attorney, must be left at overseer's abode, 342
The grounds of appeal must be specified, and the sessions can examine into no other, 342
Though an objection appear on the face of the rate, 343
Unless by consent in open court, 342
Omission of description of property rated is a good ground for appeal, 343
It is no ground of appeal for a stranger that the tenant and not his dairyman is rated, 184
Notice must be given to persons interested, 342
Omission fatal to the appeal, 343
Notice to third parties unnecessary, if the ground of appeal is that the appellant is overrated, 343
Unnecessary on respited appeal, if the grounds are stated in the order of respite, 1228
Notice to corporation sufficient, though burgesses stock the land, Rex v. Aberavon, 5 East, 453
Several persons may join in one notice, 334
One appeal against four rates sufficient, 334
Form of Notice, 1344
The appeal must be to the quarter not the general sessions, 335
It is not necessary to enter and adjourn an appeal, if there is not time to give notice of trial, 341
The appeal is to the next practicable sessions after allowance, 334
Not after declaration signed, 1228
One day intervening between publication and sessions, the appeal may be to the following sessions, 334
The appeal may be to the adjourned sessions, 346
The sessions may adjourn it, if reasonable notice not given, 334

RATE—continued.
But they should induce parties to try the appeal at the next sessions, and not enter and adjourn as of course, 345
If they do adjourn it, they must hear it, 345
They may refuse to receive the appeal if no notice is given, 345
Application under 17 Geo. II. for repayment of rate must be made to the sessions who reduce the rate, 346
When appellant objects to his being rated at all, or to the quantum, it is usual for the respondent to begin and prove probable grounds for the amount charged, 346
But the practice of making the appellant begin, is not so unreasonable that the King's Bench will interfere, 347
The appellant is not bound to furnish means for amending rate, 348
Formerly, if a borough had not six justices the appeal might be to county sessions, 337
If an adequate number, but some interested, the appeal must have been to the borough sessions, 337
By the Municipal Act, where no grant of quarter sessions, the appeal is to the county, 338
Where there is such grant, to the recorder of the borough, 338
An inhabitant of that part of Bridgewater which is not in the borough, may appeal to the county sessions, 339
Because it had not six justices, 340
Justices may amend the rate, 341, 343
Queen's Bench cannot, 191, 341
By inserting or striking out names, 341
By altering sums charged, 341
Or in any other manner, 341
Justices may quash it and order a new rate to be made, 350
And the sums charged to be levied, 350
When a rate ought to be amended and not quashed, 348
Rate to be recovered as altered, 353
The overseers cannot refer, 341
Or abandon the rate, 348
They may decline to defend it, 349
Copy of rate to be entered in a book after appeal, 351
All rates now to be in a book, 319
Costs may be awarded to successful party, 350
If appeal is entered and determined, 350
Where appellant abandoned his notice and no appeal entered, no costs can be given, 350
Secus, where entered after notice that respondents would not oppose it, 350
A rate was produced and inspected by the sessions, and appeal adjourned. They have jurisdiction over the rate at the next sessions, though not then produced, 351
Inhabitants competent witnesses, 351

RATE—continued.
Rate not removable by certiorari, 351
Rate, how levied. See DISTRESS.
Rate for TAXING IN AID. See that title.

RATES, Payment of, Settlement by. See TAXES AND LEVIES.

RECOGNIZANCES.
Verbally acknowledged within time sufficient, 337

REGISTER.
To be kept of all persons receiving relief, 1258

REGULATIONS. See RULES.

REIMBURSING OVERSEERS. See OVERSEERS' ACCOUNTS.

RELIEF.
Administration of, under the control of the commissioners, 6, 77
Commissioners cannot grant it in any individual case, 77
Justices may grant out-door, to aged infirm persons, wholly unable to work, 77
Belongs exclusively to guardians, 77
Cases of emergency, 77
Commissioners to regulate relief to able-bodied paupers, 77
When guardians may delay the operation of rules by commissioners, 78
Register to be kept of persons receiving, 1258

By Parents and Children, 98
Not a common law obligation, 98, n.
Statutes relating to 43 Eliz. c. 2, 98
Giving the power to the quarter sessions, 98
59 Geo. III. c. 12, 99
Giving power to two justices in the county where the person charged shall dwell, 99
All relief given to a wife or children (not deaf or dumb or blind) deemed to be given to the husband or father, 1258
Father, grandfather, mother, grandmother, and children, may be charged, 99
The order may be made in petty sessions, 99
Natural relations only liable, 99
Feme covert cannot be charged, 99, n.
A step-father was not liable for his wife's children, 99
Semble, by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 100
A father is not liable for his son's wife, 100
Grandfather is liable, if the father is unable, 100
But it is unnecessary to state the father's inability in the order, 100
A man is not liable for his wife's mother, 100
Husband is not bound to maintain his wife in adultery, 100
Her parents are, 100
The order must adjudge the person to be poor and impotent, 101

RELIEF—continued.
Of a poor destitute "condition" insufficient, 101
And if the order is to relieve several persons, it must be distinct for each, 1219
It must state the person charged to be of sufficient ability, 101
It may be till an order to the contrary is made, 101
But see 103
So long as the said A. B. is chargeable, is bad, 1219
It must be made by two justices of the county in which the person charged dwells, 101
A recital that the party was the parent of A. is sufficient, 101
The poor person is not to be sent to the person charged, 102
The poor person must be chargeable, 101
And not able to work, 101
The order may be retrospective, 102
It may be enforced by indictment, or the penalty may be levied, 103
The order must be served, 103
Sums assessed recoverable as penalties under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 100
Form of the order, 1351

Pension may be obtained for relief of a family, 103. See PENSION.
Void by death before pension due, 103
Form of order, 110
Rule for seamen convicted of smuggling, 109

Persons deserting or absent from their Families.
Statutes 5 Geo. I. c. 8; 59 Geo. III. c. 31, 32; 11 Geo. IV. c. 10, s. 2, 103
Goods and rents of persons leaving wife or child chargeable may be sold, and the profits of lands taken by overseers, 103
Overseers are accountable for the sums, 104
Such persons are vagrants, 104
The order must state what is to be seized, and the quantum of relief, 105
The act applies to runaways only, 83, 106
If the neglect arises from the adultery of the wife, the husband is not liable to the penalty, 107
A bastard is not a child within this act, 104
Pensions of such persons paid to overseers, 107
Money how to be applied, 108
Form of order, 110
So also wages of seamen, 83, 108
So of smugglers sentenced to naval service, 109
Form of order, 1355
Of casual poor, 111. See CASUAL POOR.

Relief of Prisoners. See PRISONERS.
Mode of Relief.
Power of justice to order relief or employment out of workhouse, under 22 Geo. III. c. 83, 67

RELIEF—continued.
Under 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 3
By loan, 78
Poor, how relieved before any statute, 135
What poor to be admitted into workhouse, under 22 Geo. III., 71
Restricted to persons chargeable, 71
Persons refusing to be lodged in poor-house, relief may be refused them, 71
A mother asking relief for her bastard child, is not bound to go to a workhouse, 72
Now liable for all relief given to bastards under sixteen, 72, n.
Poor to be maintained where they live, 91
Except nurse children, 91
Overseers must endeavour to find work, 79
Overseers may set up a trade, 81
Overseers may purchase or rent fifty acres of land, and employ the poor on it, or let it to them, 79
May inclose waste lands of the crown, 81
Allotments for the poor, 81
When trespass lies, 81
Relief by way of loan authorised, 78, 91
Power to attach wages, 78
Medical relief, 90
Money may be advanced by government if required, by majority of parish in number, and three quarters in value, 136
Weekly payments are due at the beginning of the week, 91
No appeal lies against an order of maintenance on a parish, 92
Poor houses. See WORK-HOUSES.
Contracts for the maintenance of the poor, 82
Where guardians exist, 82
Notice of intended contracts to be given, 82
All contracts for the employment illegal, 71
In certain cases paupers may be relieved at their own houses, 1246
Forms, 1357
A nurse child may be relieved, though residing in another parish, 1026
Form of order, 91
Where there is a Special Vestry. See that title.
Where guardians are appointed. See GUARDIANS.
RELIEF, ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF SETTLEMENT BY, 1004
Principle of, 1004
Relief given to a pauper resident in the parish is no evidence of his settlement there, 1004
Nor continued relief, nor the placing out of one of the family as an apprentice, 1005
But relief given to a pauper resident in another parish, is evidence of a settlement in the relieving parish, 1007
Secus, if in a workhouse belonging to the parish, 1232

RELIEF—continued.
Single instance not conclusive, 1008
Sessions to draw the inference, 1008
Not bound to infer an acknowledgment from relief, 1008
For seven years cogent, 1007
Unless given under a mistake as to the settlement, 1008, 1134

RELIGIOUS Service.
No inmate of workhouse to attend, contrary to his principles, 1243
Any licensed minister may attend an inmate at his request, 66, n.
So also in district asylums, 1301

RELIEVING Officer.
His duties, 43
Power to appoint in unions, 43
Form of bond by, 1323

REMOVAL, 1010.
I. Statutes relating to.
A pauper within 40 days after coming to settle in a parish in a tenement removable by 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, 1011
If likely to be chargeable by the same statute, 1011
Must be actually chargeable by 35 G. III., 1013
Certificated pensioners not removable under St. Car., 1011
Penalty on overseers refusing to receive by 3 W. III., 1012

II. Who may be removed, 1016
Authority derived from statute, 1035

1. Of Removal of paupers from their own estate, 1016
Pauper resident on an estate purchased for less than 30*l.* cannot be removed, 1016
So also devised to him, 1016
Residence on a tenement of 10*l.*; but settlement incomplete, the pauper is removable, 1016

2. Of Removal of Wife, 1017
Wife resident with her husband cannot be removed from his estate without his consent, 1019
Secus, with it, 1022
Consent to be stated in examination, 1234
His absence will not be presumed, 1019
The wife of a prisoner confined in the same parish is not removable, 1022
Removal of a wife, eo nomine, is good, without adjudging place to be husband's settlement, 1019
It will be presumed, 1019, 1021
So also if she is removed with her children, not stating her to be married, 1020

REMOVAL—continued.
Wife of an Irishman who resides with her, cannot be removed to her settlement, 1021
Or of a Scotchman, 129
Secus, if the husband deserts her, 127, 1022
Wife of a person without a settlement may, by consent of her husband, be without him removed to her settlement, 1022
Wife deserted is irremovable from her husband's estate, 1017
And from his leasehold tenement, 1018
And her own estate, 1016
Wife of a convict resident on an estate in which she had a joint interest is not removable, 1018
Nor on land demised to her and her husband for life, 1018
Though the husband destroyed the lease, and the parties were ejected, 1019
Married woman pregnant with a bastard, and husband abroad, was removable under 35 Geo. III., 1023
A married woman cannot be removed to her maiden settlement if her husband has a settlement, but in what parish unknown, 458

3. Of Children, 429, 1024
Nurse children may be removed to the settlement of the parents, though the order does not state parent's death, 1025
A nurse child is irremovable from mother, whether legitimate or not, 1024, 1026
Even with the mother's consent, 1024
Presumption as to nurture, 1025
Bastard child, within the age of nurture, already separated from the mother, may be removed to place of birth, 430
If born since Poor Law Act, to the mother's settlement acquired by second marriage, 432
Children above 7, and under 16, may be removed from their mother to their settlement, 432

4. Of Servants, 1026
A servant cannot be removed during service, without consent, 1026
Though pregnant with a bastard, 1027
But if she is discharged for bastardy, she may then be removed, 1027

5. Of Pregnant Women, under 35 Geo. III. c. 101, 1028
Repealed by 4 & 5 Will. IV., 1028
Of servants, 1027
An unmarried woman with child is not necessarily chargeable, the justices must adjudge her to be so, 1028
But order stating that, being pregnant, she was deemed chargeable, is good, 1029
A certificate does not prevent her removal, 1029
Not a sufficient chargeability under 59 Geo. III. c. 12, 126

REMOVAL—continued.
6. Of Casual Poor, 111, 1028. See CASUAL POOR.
A person meeting with an accident in a parish, is not removable, 113 to 118
But a person going backwards and forwards from parish to parish for relief, is removable, 113, n., 1029
A foreigner without a settlement cannot be removed, 1030

7. Of Poor born in Scotland, Ireland, Isles of Man and Scilly, 121, 1030
3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 40, 121
Justices at sessions to direct how they are to be removed, 1030
Overseers to pay, and to be repaid by the county, 1030
Such persons being chargeable, may be removed with their families to their place of birth, 122
The wife and children of a Scotchman cannot be removed to her settlement, 122
Unless deserted, 127
An Irishwoman may be passed, but her infant bastard not, 123
Nor an emancipated legitimate child, 126
Forms of, 1032
Forms of examination, 1032
Removal to be at the expense of the complaining parish, 123
To be repaid out of the county rate, 122
Expenses to remove poor out of London, 1031
Constructive chargeability not within these acts, 126
If a daughter is chargeable, the Irish parent must be passed, 125
Not altered by 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 125

8. Persons born in Guernsey, &c. 127, 1033
May be removed to place of birth, 128
At expense of complaining parish, 128

9. Of Soldiers
Power to set up trades given to certain persons, 1033
Irremovable during their exercise of such trades, 1033
Husbandman not a trade within the statute, 1033
Persons contemplated,—officers, mariners, soldiers, marines, married militia-men, having served five years, and the like in the fencibles, 1033
Provisions now unavailable, 1033

10. Woolcombers not removable, 1033

III. The Order of Removal—Suspension and Execution, 1034
Statute relating to suspension, 1013

1. From whence Removal made.
Not from or to an extra-parochial place without overseers, 1034
Nor to a parish, which has no overseers distinct from those of the township, 1038

REMOVAL—continued.
Nor to a waste, contributing rates to several townships, 1038
The respondent must show that the place has overseers, 1038
Overseers should first be appointed, 1034
Cannot be to a place ceasing to be a township, 1035
Nor to a place created a township after the settlement, 1016, 1035, 1036
It may be to a place created a township, 407, 1036
To a village, part of a parish, is a nullity, 1042
Adjudging the settlement to be in a hamlet in the parish, sufficient, 1034
Though the hamlet is not rated to the poor, 1034
Removal to a township, as a parish, is cured by not appealing, 1034
Though the township is of the same name as the parish, 1039
Order directed to the parish, and pauper delivered to the overseer of a township, 1039, 1040
Removal to parish of P. or town and county of P., sufficient, there being only one parish in the county, 1042
Omission of the name of the tutelary saint immaterial, 1042, 1051
Insufficient description cured by appeal, 1042

2. Complaint, 1043
Complaint of the overseer is the foundation of justices' jurisdiction, 1043
The complaint not the fact, 1043, 1051
It must be so stated in the order, 1043
Those complained of only are removable, 1076
One overseer may complain, 1043

3. Of the Justices—their Style and Jurisdiction, 1043
The churchwarden cannot be one of the removing justices, 1043
Their authority must appear, 1044
One justice may receive complaint, 1044
But both must be present at the examination, 1044, 1046
Order by two justices, but signed separately, voidable only on appeal, 1047
The presumption is that the examination was taken before two, 1045
The justices who examine must remove, 1046
They must be "of the peace," 1048
"In the county," bad, 1048
"Of the town or borough and parish," sufficient, 1048
Statute directory only as to their being of the division, 1048
"Of the said county," refers to county last mentioned, 1048
No order invalid for omission of the words "of the quorum," 1049

REMOVAL—continued.
Sessions may examine into the jurisdiction, 1050
The justices may supersede their own order, 1088
Mandamus will not lie to take an examination, 1050
Nor to alter it, 1050
May be abandoned after service, 1047
And should be when the examination is defective, 1048, 1056

4. The Hearing and the Examination.
As to the particulars of the examination, see EXAMINATION.
Statute directs it to be on oath, 1070
It must appear on the face of it to be taken before two justices, 1080
How construed when equivocal, 1080
"Due examination," "due consideration" implies it, 1070
One justice may take examination where pauper infirm, 1015, 1071
Special facts need not be recited in the order, 1071, 1079
It is not evidence, though the pauper cannot be found, 1071
Nor hearsay statement of a dead pauper, 1072
It is fit, but not necessary, that the pauper should be examined, 1074
Pauper refusing to be examined may be committed till he answers, 1075
Soldier, or militia-man, with wife or child, may be examined where he is billeted, as to his settlement, 1072
Attested copy of examination to be given to the soldier, to be delivered to the commanding officer, 1072
Attested copy, and no other copy, is admissible in evidence, 1072
The original examination is admissible, 1072
Signature of justices must be proved, 1072
Admissible, the soldier absent or dead, 1073
It is not admissible, unless on the face of it it appears that the soldier was billeted within the justices' jurisdiction, 1073
Whether it must be proved aliunde? 1073
Same provisions as to persons in prison, or house of correction, or in custody of peace-officer, 1075
Summons of parties for examination, 1064

5. Form of Order of Removal, 1075
Form of very ancient, App. 1079

1. County and Date, 1075
County in margin, without reference to it, is not sufficient, 1075
Distinction between orders and indictments, 1076

REMOVAL—continued.
2. Description of Paupers, 1076
Must be described by name, 1076
If unknown, as "person unknown," 1076
Can remove those only complained of, 1076
A man "and his family," bad, 1075
Age of children must be stated when they are removed as part of the father's family, 1076
Omission of names and ages not necessarily vitiate it, 1131
If child above seven, the order must adjudge the place to be child's settlement, or that he has gained none in his own right, 1077
Different persons may be removed by same order upon independent settlements, 1077. Contra, 1077
"Endeavour" to intrude, bad, 1077

3. Chargeability, 1077
There must be an adjudication of chargeability to the complaining parish, 1078, 1082
Semble, also of a complaint by the same, id.
The complaint gives the jurisdiction, 1079
Complaint by one overseer sufficient, 1132
Relief to a wife or child may render husband or parent chargeable, 1077
Certificate by the chairman and clerk of the board is sufficient proof of chargeability, 1077
The examination must disclose it, 1079
Notice of, must be given, 1079
Complaint that a single woman pregnant had come, &c. is insufficient, 1023

4. Adjudication, 1080
Of actual chargeability essential, 1078
Order to be removed to a place as his settlement, without adjudging it to be so, is bad, 1080.
"We believe," or "are credibly informed," or "according to our knowledge," insufficient, 1082, 1083
The "last legal place" is no adjudication of settlement, 1083
"Legal" and "last legal settlement," are synonymous, 1083
"Having adjudged," sufficient upon appeal, for that recognises it as an order, 129
An absolute adjudication of the settlement is good, although a bastard, 1081

5. To whom directed, 1083
The order must be to one parish to remove, and the other to receive, 1083

REMOVAL—continued.
If to both to receive and remove, it is bad, 1083
Direction to parish or township, good, 1083
The word "churchwarden" may be omitted, 1083

6. Time and Manner of serving the Order, 1083
The order may be suspended, 1013
Suspended as to the principal, also as to the family, 1015
Service of an order one year after it was made, sufficient, the circumstances of the pauper not being altered in the interval, 1083
If a suspended order, three years after, too late, 1083
The order itself must be delivered, or a copy and the original produced at the same time, 1084
Not necessarily by the overseer himself, 1084
No pauper removable till twenty-one days after service of a copy of the order and examination, 1015, 1083

7. Of Suspending Removal, 1084
Statutes relating to, 1082
Removal of sick or infirm persons may be suspended, 1084
Suspension and permission to remove, to be indorsed, 1084
Sufficient if the case, though not the pauper, be brought before the justices, 1085
Expenses of the interval to be paid by the parish to which the order is directed, 1085
No charges to be paid, unless the order and examination be served within ten days, 1086
Expenses to be paid only where the pauper is removed or dies, 1085
And not where he in the interval succeeded to an estate, and became irremovable, 1085
Appeal if costs exceed 20*l.*, 1098
May be suspended where the husband, wife, or child, is too ill, 1084
Vagrant's order may be suspended, 1014
So also of debtors confined on mesne process, 89
Removal without the suspension being taken off, the order cannot be quashed, 1086
A suspended order of removal must be served within a reasonable time, 1087
A delay of three years unreasonable, 1087
The order, however, is voidable only on appeal, 1087
Such appeal must be to the next sessions after the good service of the order, 1087, 1098
What is valid service, 1098
Power to distrain for the expenses, 1013

REMOVAL—continued.
Justices of a different jurisdiction to indorse the warrant of distress, 1014
And they cannot refuse, 1202
An appeal may be made after the time elapsed for taking a distress, 1098
Appeal is given, though no removal takes place, and the costs are under 20*l.*, 1098

8. The Order may be superseded, 1088
It may be abandoned by the removing parish, 1088, 1114
And another order obtained, 1388
Although the removal has taken place, 1089
Not after entry of appeal at the sessions, 1091
No appeal lies, if costs are paid, 1089
The sessions should strike out the appeal, 1090

9. Orders unappealed against may be filed at the Sessions, 1093

10. Penalty for disobeying Order, 1093
Indictment lies for not obeying the order, 1093
Removal without any order, 1094

IV. Returning after, 1094
By 13 & 14 Car. II. s. 12, persons returning after removal were punishable as vagabonds, 1015, 1094
Has 35 Geo. III. not altered this? 1094
A conviction as disorderly makes party actually chargeable, 1015
Persons returning must be charged upon oath, 1094
Commitment must be for a definite period, 1095
Till discharged "by due course of law," bad, 1095
The commitment must state the place to which he returned, 1095
Returning to a tenement, not in a state of vagrancy, is no offence, 1096
A conviction for returning without a certificate, is a sufficient offence to an action, 1096
Unnecessary to state specific act of vagrancy, 1096

V. Form of Order of Removal of Certificated Person, 1097
Overseers to be reimbursed for conveying certificated persons, 1097

VI. Appeal against Order of Removal, 1097

1. Statutes relating to, 1097

2. Who may appeal, and to what place, 1099
All persons aggrieved, 1099
By overseers de facto, 1117
The inhabitants cannot, independent of the parish officers, 1101
Where only one overseer, 1100

REMOVAL—continued.
The guardians must, in unions under Gilbert's Act, 1099
The removing parish cannot enter the appeal, 1100
The pauper may appeal, 1100
A township may appeal against an order directed to a parish, 1100
The appeal to be to the sessions of the county in which the parish removing doth lie, 1102
The quarter, not the general, sessions, 1104
Since the Corporation Act, the appeal against a removal from a borough and any special sessions, must be to the recorder, 1102, 1103
Before that act, an appeal against an order of a borough must have been to the county sessions, 1104
Secus, where borough justices authorised to do all acts that may be done by quarter sessions, 1104
Overseers to have access to the pauper, 1264

3. Time of the Appeal, 1105
To the next practicable sessions after the removal, 1105, 1107
May be to the sessions after the service of the order, or after the removal, 1109, 1111
Although notice of appeal was given after the service, 1109
If the removal is made too late to give notice of trial for the next sessions, the appeal need not be entered and respited, 1108
An adjourned sessions not in contemplation of statute, 1109
Where appeal is not entered at the next, and parties agreed to abide by an opinion, mandamus refused to enter at the following sessions; 1106
Time not altered by the New Poor Law Act, 1121
Not necessary to give notice within the twenty-one days after service of the order, 1110, 1120

4. Entering Appeal after Order superseded, 1111
Discretionary to enter appeal against an order, abandoned, 1089, 1111
Entered, if necessary, to compel the payment of the maintenance, 1111, 1114

5. Of Adjournment, 1115
Sessions not bound to enter and respite, where notice given, 1115
An appeal may be adjourned, 1115
Not bound to adjourn to cure a defect in grounds of appeal, 1116
But they may on that account respite, 1118
Where the justices are equally divided, an adjournment should be entered, 1115

REMOVAL—continued.
If they quash the order, Q. B. will not interfere, 1206
Record of trial at an adjourned, should show the commencement of the original sessions, 1115
Four sessions only can be held in a year, 1116
If "more need be," they must be adjournments, 1116
If session once dropped, it cannot be resumed, 1115
Confirmation of an order without appeal is coram non judice, 1116

6. Notice of Appeal, 1116
A statement of the grounds of appeal must be given fourteen days before the sessions, 1117
Exclusive of the days of service, and first day of sessions, 1148
(For Grounds, see GROUNDS OF APPEAL)
Reasonable notice required by former statutes, 1116
The reasonableness to be determined by the sessions, 1117, 1149
But Q. B. has a visitatorial power, 1149
The mandamus should be applied for in the term after the refusal, 1152
No answer, that a case had been granted, 1152
Notice not affected by the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 76, 1119
The statute requiring the adjournment applies only to the first sessions, 1150
Appeal to be entered and adjourned, if no notice given, 1148
No notice of trial required, where respondents procure the respite, 1151
Nor where proper notice has been given, and the appeal was adjourned after hearing both parties, 1152
Where there has been reasonable time, and no notice given, the sessions ought not to enter it, 1149
But if they enter it and adjourn, they cannot refuse to hear it, 345
Where sessions required fourteen days' notice of a respited appeal, Q. B. will not interfere, though the attorney was ignorant of the practice, 1150

VII. Effect of an Order unappealed against, 1009, 1155
1. How far final, 1155
Order unappealed from is conclusive, 1155
(Unless made to a place not maintaining its poor, 1156)
So also where the removal is to a township, which is a parish, 1102, 1157
Though the parish and township are of the same name, 1039
And the pauper delivered to the township, 1039

REMOVAL—continued.
Order directed to the parish, and delivery to the overseer of the township, 1039
The township is not concluded when the removal is to the parish, 1157
The paupers cannot be sent back except by another order, 1155
If justices have no jurisdiction, order is void, 1156
This is substance, not form, 1156
Voidable only on appeal, where justices act apart, 1157
Order may be abandoned without appeal, 1157
A fresh order may be made to another parish, 1157

2. Of what facts conclusive, 1159
The principle explained, 1163
Removal "of a man and his wife," conclusive as to the marriage, 1159
Or of a woman as a wife, 1161
Though not described as wife, 1160
And in all derivative settlements, 1159, 1161
Quære, if the pauper appeals, 1162
It is not conclusive as to a son not removed with his parents, 1160
Unless the son claims a derivative settlement, 1160
Even then it is competent to show that the marriage of the parents has since been declared void, 1162
Removal of "a widow" is conclusive as to her and her husband's settlement, 1160
It is not conclusive as to any point collateral to the point decided, 1160
It must be direct on the point, 1166
Settlement of a father determined on an appeal against the removal of a son, is not evidence upon the removal of another son, 1163, 1166
The order is conclusive of the settlement only up to its date, 1164
It is conclusive against all the world, 1164
It is in effect a statutable certificate, 1165
An order of vagrancy is not conclusive, 1161

VIII. Effect of confirming or quashing Order upon Appeal, 1165
Order confirmed or reversed upon appeal is a judgment in law, 1165
An order superseded by the removing justices by consent is not final, 1165
Is receivable in evidence, 1166
Order quashed is conclusive only between the litigant parishes, 1165
But only between them, 1169, 1170
An order for the removal of a widow quashed, is evidence in an appeal relating to her son, that she was not then settled in appellant parish, 1167

REMOVAL—continued.
If quashed for form, it is not conclusive as between the two parishes, 1171
Nor when quashed, because pauper not removable, 1171
Nor because pauper not chargeable, 1184
The special ground may be proved by parol evidence, 1172, 1237
"Quashed for informality" good, although no defect apparent on the order, 1174
Q. B. will not inquire into the informality, 1184
A decision on the settlement is on the merits, 1182
e. g. As where residence was not stated in the examination, 1179
Or the variance is material, 1125, 1180
Or the time of birth imperfectly stated, 1180
Or where no grounds of appeal served, 1183
Or the examination did not show that a former order had been acted on, 1212
An order quashed generally presumed to be on the merits, 1177
So also if no communication of the ground is made to appellants, 1177
Where an order is quashed not on the merits, the sessions should make a special entry, 1178

IX. Of Amendments, 1186.
Sessions may rectify defects of form, 1186
But not omission of complaint, 1186
Or adjudication of chargeability, 1186
Or jurisdiction of justice, 1187
"Parish" may be altered to "vill," or "township" to "parish," 1187
"Churchwarden" may be erased, 1187
Nothing presumed to vitiate the order, 969
Statute a dead letter, 1187

X. Power of Sessions on Orders of Removal, 1188

1. Judgment of Sessions, 1188
Cannot make an original order, 1188
Must quash or affirm, 1188
Justices interested as rate-payers, or having made the order, cannot vote, 1188
Seous, guardians ex officio, 4
They cannot remove the pauper back, 1188
Such an order good for the quashing, 1188
When justices are divided, the appeal should be adjourned, 1188
But if they quash the order, Q. B. will not interfere, 1205
But Q. B. will not compel them to make a special entry, 1177
Nor inquire into the propriety of an entry "not on the merits," 1184, 5
They may be compelled to erase an entry, where they had no jurisdiction, 1207
Not where the judgment is wrong, 1210

REMOVAL—continued.
Nor will Q. B. interfere, if judgment is entered by mistake or by miscalculation of votes, 1205
Or by the interference of an interested justice, 1206
Q. B. will not inquire, by affidavit, into the validity of the judgment of the sessions, 1175
Sessions may alter their order at the same sessions, but not one of a preceding sessions, 1188
Order may be good in part, 1235

2. Special Cases, 1189
A decision subject to a case, which is never drawn up, is not final, (semble), 1184, 1189
When case is refused, neither the facts or grounds of appeal should be returned to a certiorari, 1189
Nor the examination, 1190
Should be drawn by counsel, 1190, n.
Stating a case for Q. B., substituted for reference to judge on circuit, 1190
Not compellable to grant them, 1191, 1192
Or state the reasons of their judgment, 1193
Should refuse it where they have no doubt, 1189
The sessions should find the facts, and not the evidence, 1193
How Q. B. will deal with special cases, 1194
Bill of exceptions does not lie, 1191
On a case sent back, must re-hear the whole, 1197, 1198
Notice must be given again, 1198
May hear fresh evidence, 1199
But where sessions refused to re-examine pauper, Q. B. confirmed it, 1198
It is brought up by certiorari, 1189
The examinations form no part of the order of the court, where no case granted, 1189
If the order is different from that intended, a motion should be made to quash the return, 1189
Form of precedents, No. 189.
Proper conclusion, 1197

3. Of Costs and Maintenance, 1201
Upon appeal against a settlement, reasonable costs may be awarded to the party in whose behalf it is determined, 1117
Or against a party making frivolous statements, 1117, 1202
So also after notice of appeal not prosecuted, 1202
If the party liable lives out of the county, one justice may issue warrant of distress, 1202
In default thereof, may commit for twenty days, 1202
Allowance of costs is discretionary, 1202
None can be awarded on an adjournment, 1201, n., 1202

REMOVAL—continued.
If sessions determine in favour of appellant, they must order repayment of all reasonable relief from the time of notice of chargeability, 1202
Mandamus lies to enforce, 1202
The costs must be ascertained at the sessions, 1203
An appeal may be entered after order superseded, 1203
A practice to give 30*s.* costs unreasonable, 1204
May give costs, when order quashed for informality, 1174
On certiorari, what costs are payable, 1201

RENT.
The criterion, but not conclusive of rateable value, 280
Part only of annual value, 271, 282

RENT-CHARGE.
Owner of cannot acquire a settlement by estate, 857

RENTING, Settlement by. See TENEMENT.

REPLEVIN.
Lies for distress for poor-rate, 359

REPUTATION.
Is evidence of a marriage, 460

RESIDENCE.
Of forty days required by 13 & 14 Car. II., 411
Secus by birth, 411
Must be stated in the examination. See EXAMINATION.
Occupation not equivalent, 1140

RESIDENTS, Casual.
Are not rateable, 143

RETURNING after Removal, 1094. See REMOVAL, (IV.)

RIVER.
Persons authorised to make navigable, and not to occupy any land, are not rateable, 197, 253

RULES.
Commissioners may issue, 5
And rescind them, 5
Nature of a general rule, 5
Not to be altered by a particular rule, 1284
May take effect before the fourteen days, 1285
To be submitted to the Secretary of State, 5
This essential to their validity, 5
Of workhouse, under 22 Geo. III., 62
Justices to see them enforced, 62
Stamped with commissioners' seal are receivable in evidence, 1240
No proof of seal required, 1310

RULES—continued.
Rules printed by Queen's Printer are evidence, 1310
Copy to be sent to overseers and justices, 1243
Proof of sending to the clerk of the guardians only required in civil and criminal proceedings, 1310
Nor even that, without notice, 1310
Party requiring liable to costs, 1310
May be removed by certiorari into Q. B., 5
Necessary notice, 1270
Not judicially noticed, 5

S.

SALARY, as to officers with salary. See that title.

SALARIES.
Are not rateable, 150
May be stopped for payment of certain penalties, 1268

SALE.
Application of proceeds of parish property to parish debts, 1282
Conveyance directed by statute need not be enrolled, 1311
Acts relating to, amended, 1274, 1281
Sales by overseers, legalised, 1281
Powers given by 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, explained and extended, 1281
Trustees not required to join, 1282

SALEABLE Underwoods.
Rateable by 43 Eliz. 247
Contradistinguished from estovers for fuel, 248
Fir planted to shelter, and cut out to encourage growth of oaks, are not, 248

SCHOOL.
Districts may be formed for, 1300
For children under sixteen, 1300
Being orphans, 1300
Being deserted by parents, 1300
Or parent's consenting, 1300
No part to be more than fifteen miles from every other part, 1300
Children may be sent from parishes not combined, but not distant more than twenty miles, 1303
Parishes under a local act, and population exceeding 20,000, not to be included without the consent of a majority of guardians, 1300
A board to be constituted, 1300
To appoint a chaplain of the established church, 1301
No child to be instructed contrary to the principles of the inmate or parents, 1301
Any minister may visit, 1301
May build, and borrow money, 1301
But not to exceed one-fifth of annual poor-rate, 1301

SCHOOL—continued.
May hold as a corporation, 1302
Contributions how paid, 1302
Distribution of charges, 1302
Auditor to be appointed, 1303
Considered in the parish to which the person chargeable, 1305

SCHOOLMASTER.
Charity is rateable, 174
Does not hold an office, but an employment, 930
Occupying lands belonging to a school, though not appointed according to the power, gains a settlement, 796

SCOTCHMAN. See REMOVAL, 121.
May be removed to Scotland, when chargeable by wife or family, 121
As to wife's settlement, see MAIDEN SETTLEMENT.

SEALING.
Requisite to indentures of apprenticeship, to which the overseers are no parties; but by which any expense is incurred out of parochial funds, 669, 675
Separate seals necessary for each overseer that seals certificate, 966

SEAMEN.
Apprentice to, gains no settlement, 603, 621
Service of, in a port within a parish, under a hiring or apprenticeship, is sufficient for a settlement, 695
Wages of, may be paid to overseers, in certain cases, 108. See RELIEF.
Wages of, sent to sea, for smuggling, 109
One half may be paid to the parish where family chargeable, 109
Justices to make an order, 109
Form, 110
To be transmitted to the commissioners of the navy, 109

SELECT VESTRIES, 44. See VESTRIES.

SERVANT.
Any unmarried person, without a child, being hired, and serving for a year, did gain a settlement, 473. See HIRING AND SERVICE.
Secus, since 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 76, 473
As to removal of, during service. See REMOVAL, 1026, 7
For what causes may be discharged, 590, 591. See HIRING AND SERVICE, &c.
Falling sick, cannot on that account be discharged, 577, 578
Who bound to maintain him, 121
Overseers may indemnify another parish against settlement of, 398

SERVICE.
Of an order must be with the original, or a copy producing the original, 1098

SESSIONS, QUARTER.
Appeal against removal lies to the quarter, not the general sessions, 1104
General and quarter, when synonymous, 335
The whole but one day, 1109
Cannot appoint overseers, 28
May amend rate, 341
By inserting or striking out names, 341
By altering sum charged, 341
Proper judges of questions of fact and fraud, 412, 912
Cannot tax in aid, if the place is in the hundred, 361
Secus, if not in the hundred, 363
Cannot make an order of removal, 1188
May amend defects of form, upon appeal against removal, 1186
Not bound to state a case, 1191
Nor make a special entry, 1172
Mandamus not granted, 1172
Cannot alter judgment of former, 1209
May be adjourned, 1115
Once dropped, cannot be resumed, 1115
Practice as to delivering orders to the clerk of the peace on appeals, 1112
How complied with, 1112
Original sessions book, made up by the clerk of the peace, evidence of an order quashed, 1168

SETTLEMENT OF POOR.
Division of the subject, 404
I. Of Settlements in General.
Definition of the term "settlement," 405
Its origin, 405
Is not a property, 405
Not forfeitable, 405
Not affected by attainder, 405, 408
A settlement once obtained cannot be defeated by subsequent matter, 558
A contract is legal though made to prevent a settlement, 510, 521
Statutes not to be construed to favour, 679
"Legal," synonymous with "last legal," 1083
A covenant, by lessee, to indemnify against paupers which lessee may bring into parish, is legal, 6 Bing., 163
Overseers may indemnify another parish against settlement, 398
The place in which it may be acquired, 406, 1034
In every district of known limits contributing to a common poor rate, 406
Parishes may be united for the purposes of settlement, 407
Hales-Owen not a township for this purpose till 1834, 407
By statute certain houses are declared to be the parish using the same, 408
By whom acquirable.
It is not every person who has it, 407
Bastard born in extra-parochial place has none, 44

SETTLEMENT OF POOR—continued.
Foreigners as well as natives may acquire, 407
Attainted persons may, 408
Who cannot acquire it by their own act, 408
Feme coverts, and infants under seven, 408
Deserter, by living on a tenement taken by wife, 409
Soldier, by hiring and service, 409
Secus, by renting, 409
Persons disabled by 54 Geo. III. c. 176, 406
Born in prisons, 406
Confined by civil process, or for contempt, 407
Born in houses licensed for reception of pregnant women, 406
Born in houses of industry or poor houses, 406
Settlement of latter in parish which sent the mother, 406
Lunatic in asylums, 417
Toll keeper, or renter of any tolls of turnpike road or navigation, 407
Persons maintained in charitable institutions, as objects of charity, 407
All local statutes since 1 Geo. I. relating to settlements, repealed, 406
No child, nurse, or servant, received or employed in the hospital for exposed children, 410
Place of Settlement. See REMOVAL, 3
The apprentice of a certificated person can gain no settlement in the certified parish; if he sleeps there the last night, no settlement is acquired in another parish, 1003
So also if a settlement be acquired in a township, which is afterwards extinguished, a prior settlement does not revive, 1035

SEXTON.
Distinct from grave-digger, 938
Within 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, 938

SHIP.
Was rateable at its home, the owner being resident there, 149
Service on board of, within a parish, is sufficient residence, 695

SIGNATURE.
Of certificates, 965. See CERTIFICATE, (4.)
Of deeds of apprenticeship, 632. See APPRENTICE, (3, 9.)

SINGLE WOMAN.
Pregnancy of, with child likely to be born a bastard, and not being of substance, was chargeable, 1014
This constructive chargeability repealed, 1014, n.
Not within the 59 Geo. III. c. 12, 126

SOCAGE.
Guardian in, may gain settlement by residence as such, 887
There can be none of an equitable estate, 889

SOLDIER.
The allowance of all persons entitled to or in receipt of any pay, available for relief of self or family, 8
In barracks, with only necessary accommodation, not rateable, 167
Can gain no settlement by hiring and service, though done by permission of commanding officer, 478. See HIRING AND SERVICE.
He may, by renting a tenement, 843
Becoming a, its effect on emancipation, 435. See EMANCIPATION.
Examination of as to settlement, 1072. See REMOVAL.

SON-IN-LAW.
Not bound to maintain mother-in-law, 100. See RELIEF.

SPECIAL CASE. See CASE.

SPIRITS.
Sale or use of, prohibited in workhouse, 75, 1267

STALLAGE.
Lessee of, in a market, is rateable, 224

STALL.
Butcher's, a permanent building, and with a door, is a tenement, 766

STAMP.
On appointment of assistant overseer, formerly necessary, 36
Not now, 37
When requisite on apprentice-deed, 605
Want of, prevents it being received in evidence, 637
Unless lost before time of stamping expired, 638, n.
If lost, stamp may be presumed, though no notice thereof in the stamp office, 735
Certain advertisements, bonds, and securities exempt, 1265

STATUTES.
Power of local reserved in the Poor Law Act, 49

STOCK IN TRADE.
Not rateable now, 142. See RATE.
Rate on rent of gas-pipes is not a rate on, 302

SUMMONS.
What good service of, by commissioners, 1266

SUNDAY.
A contract for hiring may be made on, 492

SUSPENSION.
Of orders of removal, 1015. See REMOVAL, (7)
Appeal against, 1098

T.

TAXATION.
Bill by attorney for business done for a parish may be taxed by the clerk of the peace, 1300

TAXES OR LEVIES. (Settlement by paying &c., public), 942
Being charged with and paying public taxes of the parish gave a settlement by 3 Will. III. c 11, 942
It must have been in respect of a tenement of the yearly value of 10*l.* by 35 Geo. III c. 101, 942
And such tenement, since 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, must be rented and occupied according to that statute, 942
This settlement is not affected by 59 Geo. III c. 50, 942, 945
Nor by the 1 Will. IV. c. 18, 946
Nor by the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c 76, s. 66, 947

1. Statutes relating to, 943

2. Effect of 35 Geo. III. c. 101, 944
Did not entirely abolish this head of settlement, 944
Servant of the king might thereby gain it, 944
Revived in effect by 59 Geo. III., 945
But extinguished again by 6 Geo. IV., 945
Under which payment of rent to the amount of 10*l.* is sufficient, 948
Revived again by 1 Will IV. c. 18, 946
The person need not have been a tenant, 949
The amount of rate immaterial, if annual value is 10*l.*, 948

3. Of Inhabitancy, 950
The residence must be in the parish in which he is rated, 950
The party must reside forty days after being charged, and having paid, 950
And before 6 Geo. IV, 950

4. What are Parochial Taxes, 951
Not confined to parochial taxes, 951
A tax for a ward is not sufficient, 953
Nor for county rate, 954
Scavenger and highway rates excepted in statute, 943, 954
Land tax, since the redemption acts, within the statute, 951
Land tax included in "parochial rates," 6 Geo. IV., 952
A church rate is, 954
Not the assessed taxes, 950

The person must be charged and pay, 954
Charged by an informal or void rate is sufficient, 954

TAXES—continued.
Secus, if name inserted after payment, 954
Omission of sum assessed immaterial, 954
Person paying must be the person rated, 955
Repayment does not destroy the settlement, 955
There must be such a rating and paying as to show that the parish had notice, 956
Rated as occupier, sufficient, 956
Or by name of the tenement, 956
What is a sufficient assessment, 958
In the name of a deceased tenant, 956
So also if there be a description sufficient to charge the tenant, 956
If it is not on the tenant by name, it must be notorious that the tenant is charged, 956
If the names of landlord and tenant are both inserted, who is rated may be inferred from circumstances, 957
Land tax primâ facie is on the tenant, 957
The rate must be produced, 959
Payment by another may be equivalent to payment by person charged, 959
It is sufficient, though landlord refund it, 959
Or the collector to a tide water, 959
Payment by superior officer, and no deduction from salary, not sufficient, 959
Payment by landlord insufficient, though the tenant pays higher rent, 960
It is not necessary that the person charged should occupy as tenant, 949

TAXING IN AID.
Statute relating to, 361
Another place may be rated in aid of a parish not able to levy sufficient rates, 361
The place shall be in the hundred, if none sufficient, then in the county, 361
If the place is in the hundred, the rate must be made by justices, not in sessions, 361, 363
If not in the hundred, but in the county, by the sessions, 363
The sessions may rate, though two justices have not found that the parishes within the hundred are not able, 363
A vill is within the equity of the statute, 361
The rate must be made by the justices, and not by the parish officers, 361
It may be made on particular persons only, 362
Or upon an extra-parochial place, 362
A parish incorporated with the poor parish may be rated in aid, 361
The place rated must not be within the poor parish, and this should appear in the order, 362
Difference of name imports diversity of place, 362
The order must state that the parish rated is within the hundred, 362

TAXING IN AID—continued.
Or within a liberty, equivalent to an hundred, 362
The parish rated must be within the justices' jurisdiction, 362
The order must be for a time limited, 362
It may be for a year, 362
And for a sum in gross, 362
At 6*d.* in the pound, is bad, 362
Mandamus granted to make it, 362

TENEMENT, Settlement by renting.
Division of subject, 742
1. Statutes relating to, 743
13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, 743
9 & 10 W. III. c. 11, 743
23 G. III. c. 23, 743
52 G. III. c. 78, 743
54 G. III. c. 170, 744
59 G. III. c. 50, 744
3 G. IV. c. 126, 744
4 G. IV. c. 95, 744
6 G. IV. c. 57, 744
1 W. IV. c. 18, 745
4 & 5 W. IV. c. 76, sec. 66, 745
Ceasing to reside within ten miles, settlement is lost, 745
Cases thereon, 855
A settlement under 13 & 14 Car. II. must be complete before 59 Geo. III... 745
The repeal of 59 Geo. III. did not revive the 13 & 14 Car. II.... 747
A taking made before 6 Geo. IV., and consistent with it, is sufficient, 746, 833
Secus, where the occupation was inconsistent with 59 Geo. III.... 746, 832
2. What is a Tenement under 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12.
Coke's definition, 751
An incorporeal hereditament is, 748
So also a coney-warren, 748, 753
A fishery, 748
A dairy, 753
Exclusive right of taking soil, 748
A cattle-gate, 749
Right of common in gross, 749, 756
Water or wind-mill, 749
It is doubtful whether the tolls must be granted by deed, 751
Tolls of a market are, 750
So also of a tenement, though by statute they are personal property, 753
But no settlement can be gained by renting tolls of roads, or of navigation or toll-house, 744
But he might rent land, and gain a settlement, by residing in the toll-house, 752
Renting a toll-house worth more than 10*l.* a year, independent of the tolls, will not confer a settlement, 751, 753
Tolls collected in streets of Durham are within the statute, 752
So also the tolls of a bridge, 751
The prohibition as to tolls of navigation is not repealed by general turnpike act, 753

TENEMENT—continued.
The liberty to take profits of land by the mouths of cattle, is a tenement, 749
If a man grants the profits, he grants the land, 750
Semble, taking a pasture is not a tenement, 749
Taking hay, grass, and aftermath, is, 749
So also two ponds, or the rushes growing therein, 750
So also the fogg or aftergrass, 750
So also taking land for particular purpose, as setting potatoes, 750
So also renting cows to be fed exclusively on certain lands, 755
But the land must be of annual value of 10*l.*, 756
Exclusive of the value of the cows, 756
If the renter has not the exclusive right of pasturage, it may be a tenement, 756
A contract by the master to feed the cows generally is not a tenement, 757
The privilege of milking cows to be depastured on owner's farm is a tenement, 757
A contract for mere milking is insufficient, 758
The person must be tenant or occupier, 764
Mere licence insufficient, 764
The right to agist two cows is a tenement, 777
So also for a pasture-fed cow for the season, 757
It is not a tenement, unless it is part of the contract that the cattle should be pasture-fed, 759
A contract "for 21 ewes going," does not imply pasture-fed, 760, 761
If the sessions so find it, it is sufficient, 762
Pointing places to a mill not fixed in the floor, are not a tenement, 765
Nor runners screwed to the floor, 765
Nor standing place for carding machine, 765
A butcher's stall, which was a permanent building, and had a door to it, is, 766
Licence to use machinery not, 766
The case should state the nature of the tenement, 808
"Land-sale Colliery," a tenement, 808

3. What a Tenement under 59 Geo. III., 6 Geo. IV. and 1 Will. IV., 766

Statutes the same in this respect, 766
It must consist of a dwelling-house or building, or land, or of both, 766
Whether house and tolls taken at an entire rent are within these statutes? 766
The tenement may be two distinct houses, 766, 769
A shop with an internal communication with a neighbour's house is not distinct, 769
Any two of the things sufficient, 767
The house must be separate and distinct as regards persons, 770
Floor of a house is sufficient, 767

TENEMENT—continued.
But a granary approached only by a ladder outside is not, 771

4. The Tenement need not be entire under any of the Statutes, 771
Tenements taken of different persons, and at different times, sufficient, under 13 & 14 Car. II., 767, 768
So also under 59 Geo. III. c. 50, 772

5. Nature and Necessity of a Tenancy, 773
"Coming to settle," means by renting or holding as tenant, 775, 786; but see 773
Not a permanent settlement, 774
Taking a tenement on trial, will do, 774
The relation of landlord and tenant must subsist, 775, 785
Mere licence is not enough, 764
Tenancy at will is sufficient, 791
A purchase of growing oats does not make pauper a tenant, 775
A servant may be a tenant, where the occupation is not an appendage to his service, 776
Secus, where it is necessary for the performance of his service, 778
Agreement for a kiln and cottage is a tenancy, 781
The owner of a mill rented cottages for the convenience of his workmen, the tenant of one gains a settlement, 779
Finding of sessions conclusive, 783
Test of occupation as a tenant, 950
Taking the profits of a pasture-fed cow, in consideration of maintaining owner's servant, is a tenancy, 777
A pauper residing in a cottage to take care of a garden, and have part of its profits, is not tenant of the garden, 780
Residence in a house belonging to the Ordnance, which pauper quits when he leaves that service, is not a tenancy, 781. See 784, n.
Renting the tap of an inn, is not, 780
Residence by a licensed curate in the rectory, is sufficient, 773
A schoolmaster residing in a house rent free, and removable at pleasure, and underletting part, is a tenant, and not servant, 796
Credit need not be given to the pauper, if he is the tenant, 785
Immaterial, that a surety was required for the rent, 785
The whole 10*l.* must be taken as a tenancy, and cannot be coupled with a freehold, 786
The pauper may be removed before his tenancy begins, 792
Secus after, 797
Putting goods in, is not a sufficient commencement of tenancy, 767
No difference between this and the certificate act, 785

6. Joint Tenants, 787
Renting jointly a tenement which will produce 10*l.* a year to each [illegible] settlement, 787
Though the tenants take at diff[illegible] 787
And though one underlet to the [illegible]
So also renting an entire tenem[illegible] jointly part of another, 788
If the premises are demised [illegible] must be worth 20*l.*, though [illegible] a surety, 789, 790
Although the pauper paid 10*l.* [illegible]
Parol evidence admissible to s[illegible] was a surety, 789
Renting a tenement for 11*l.*, [illegible] another jointly to occupy, [illegible] under the statute of Charles, [illegible]

7. Permissive Occupation is a [illegible] settle," 790
An express contract unnecessa[illegible] by landlord's permission su[illegible] 793
Or by that of prior tenant, 79[illegible]
A tenancy at will is sufficient, [illegible]
A deserter concealing himself [illegible] taken by his wife, does no[illegible] settle," 791
Living in a tenement given o[illegible] sufficient, 793
Renting a tenement in one [illegible] living rent free in another, [illegible] ment in the latter, 795

8. Duration of Contract und[illegible] Car. II., 797
Renting for a year first ma[illegible] 59 Geo. III., 797
Taking for eight or five mont[illegible] 797
Contract is not determined b[illegible] pauper, 797. See 792

9. Since 59 Geo. III. the Tenemen[illegible] hired for a year, 798
By "one whole year" is meant [illegible] law a tenancy for a year, 798
A tenancy determinable on notic[illegible] cient, 798
The taking may be of a tenant f[illegible] to year, 799
Renting from six months to six [illegible] giving six calendar months' notic[illegible] a year, 799
A general hiring of land is a h[illegible] year, 800

10. The Tenement must be bond [illegible] since 59 Geo. III., 800
It must be bond fide as betwe[illegible] and tenant, and fraud by the [illegible] not signify, 800
If the pauper hires the tenemen[illegible] vention of a surety canno[illegible] settlement, 800

11. The Value under 13 & 14 C[illegible]
The value being 10*l.* has alw[illegible] same, 801